angewandt. 11) Im Folgenden wird die modische Betheuerung by mine honour, die bei jeder geringfügigen Gelegenheit angewandt wurde, persifliert. 12) Da im Verlaufe des Dramas Celia's Vater Frederick heisst, so hat Theobald die folgende Rede auch der Celia zuertheilt, nicht der Rosalinde, welcher die Fol. sie beilegt. Vielleicht verstand aber Sh. hier unter Frederick den Vater der Rosalinde. 13) Manche Hgg. trennen, im Widerspruch mit der Fol., enough, das prägnant dem ersten enough gegenübergestellt ist, von dem Satze, und interpungiren: to honour him. Enough! speak no more etc. 14) taxation = freies Raisonnement, dreistes Reden, wie to tax = Jemandem mit Reden arg zusetzen, ihn in Reden vornehmen. — Peitschenhiebe waren die gewöhnliche Strafe des Hofnarren für zu dreistes Reden; so in K. Lear (A. 1, Sc. 4) Take heed, sirrah; the whip. 15) Monsieur the Beau in der Fol. 16) Der Hofmann weiss auf eine so seltsame Frage, von welcher Farbe der Spass gewesen sei, nichts zu erwiedern. 17) to lay on with a trowel, gleichsam = mit einer Maurerkelle auflegen, ist sprichwörtlich = Etwas dick oder derb auftragen. — Celia spricht von der gesuchten Wendung, mit welcher der Narr Rosalindens Worte noch überboten hatte. 18) Dasselbe Wortspiel findet sich in Cymbeline (A. 2, Sc. 1) 'Would he had been one of my rank! — To have smelt like a fool. 19) to amaze = in Verwirrung setzen, aus dem Concept bringen. 20) Wie Le Beau's Bericht fängt auch manches alte Märchen an. — Eine ähnliche Episode des Ringkampfes findet sich auch bei Lodge: a lustie Francklin of the country came with two tall men that were his sonnes etc. 21) bill = Axt, und = Zettel, Vorschrift. — Farmer wollte diese Worte im ersteren Sinne dem Le Beau zuertheilen, weil er bei Lodge fand: Ganimede on a day sitting with Aliena, cast up her eye and saw where Rosader came pacing towards them with his forest-bill on his neck. — Rosalinde würde dann bills im zweiten Sinne fassen und scherzhaft den Anfang solcher gerichtlichen Erlasse oder sonstiger Ankündigungen anführen. Aber auch Rosalinde, wenn ihr mit der Fol. der ganze Satz von With bills etc. zuertheilt wird, fasst bills vielleicht doppelsinnig, obgleich sie zunächst an presence anknüpft und das Wort mit by these presents verdreht. 22) broken music = Musik von Saiteninstrumenten im Gegensatz zu der von Blasinstrumenten, hier

Cel. Yonder, sure, they are coming: let us now stay and see it.

Flourish. Enter Duke FREDERICK, Lords, ORLANDO, CHARLES, and Attendants.

Duke F. Come on: since the youth will not be entreated, his own peril on his forwardness.

Ros. Is yonder the man?

Le Beau. Even he, Madam.

Cel. Alas! he is too young: yet he looks successfully.

Duke F. How now, daughter, and cousin! are you crept hither to see the wrestling?

Ros. Ay, my liege, so please you give us leave.

Duke F. You will take little delight in it, I can tell you, there is such odds in the men.²³ In pity of the challenger's youth I would fain dissuade him, but he will not be entreated. Speak to him, ladies; see if you can move him.

Cel. Call him hither, good Monsieur Le Beau.

Duke F. Do so: I'll not be by. [DUKE goes apart.]

Le Beau. Monsieur the challenger, the princess' call²⁴ for you.

Orl. I attend them, with all respect and duty.

Ros. Young man, have you challenged Charles the wrestler?

Orl. No, fair princess; he is the general challenger: I come but in, as others do, to try with him the strength of my youth.

Cel. Young gentleman, your spirits are too bold for your years. You have seen cruel proof of this man's strength: if you saw yourself with your eyes, or knew yourself with your judgment,²⁵ the fear of your adventure would counsel you to a more equal enterprise. We pray you, for your own sake, to embrace your own safety, and give over this attempt.

Ros. Do, young Sir: your reputation shall not therefore be misprised. We will make it our suit to the duke, that the wrestling might not go forward.

Orl. I beseech you, punish me not with your hard thoughts, wherein²⁶ I confess me much guilty, to deny so fair and excellent ladies anything. But let your fair eyes and gentle wishes go with me to my trial: wherein if I be foiled, there is but one shamed that was never gracious;²⁷ if killed, but one dead that is willing to be so. I shall do my friends no wrong, for I have none to lament me; the world no injury, for in it I have nothing; only in the world I fill up a place, which may be better supplied when I have made it empty.

Ros. The little strength that I have, I would it were with you.

Cel. And mine, to eke out hers.

Ros. Fare you well. Pray heaven, I be deceived in you!²⁸

Cel. Your heart's desires be with you.

Cha. Come, where is this young gallant, that is so desirous to lie with his mother earth?²⁹

Orl. Ready, Sir; but his will hath in it a more modest working.

Duke F. You shall try but one fall.

Cha. No, I warrant your grace, you shall not entreat him to a second, that have so mightily persuaded him from a first.

Orl. You mean to mock me after: you should not have mocked me before; but come your ways.

Ros. Now, Hercules be thy speed, young man!

Cel. I would I were invisible, to catch the strong fellow by the leg. [*CHARLES and ORLANDO wrestle.*³⁰]

Ros. O excellent young man!

Cel. If I had a thunderbolt in mine eye, I can tell who should down. [CHARLES is thrown. Shout.]

Duke F. No more, no more.

Orl. Yes, I beseech your grace: I am not yet well breathed.³¹

Duke F. How dost thou, Charles?

Le Beau. He cannot speak, my lord.

Duke F. Bear him away. [CHARLES is borne out.]
What is thy name, young man?

Orl. Orlando, my liege; the youngest son of Sir Rowland de Bois.

Duke F. I would thou hadst been son to some man else.

The world esteem'd thy father honourable,
But I did find him still mine enemy:
Thou shouldst have better pleas'd me with this deed,
Hadst thou descended from another house.
But fare thee well; thou art a gallant youth.
I would thou hadst told me of another father.

[Exeunt Duke FREDERICK, Train, and LE BEAU.]

Cel. Were I my father, coz, would I do this?

Orl. I am more proud to be Sir Rowland's son,
His youngest son; —³² and would not change that calling,³³

To be adopted heir to Frederick.

Ros. My father lov'd Sir Rowland as his soul,
And all the world was of my father's mind.
Had I before known this young man his son, scherzhaft für das Rippenzerbrechen. — Sh. hat denselben Ausdruck in Troilus and Cressida (A. 3, Sc. 1) und in K. Henry V. (A. 5, Sc. 2). 23) men verbessert Hammer das man der Fol., welches letztere die Einen auf Charles, die Andern auf Orlando deuten möchten. 24) So Dyce, der den Plural princess' call aus Tempest (A. 1, Sc. 2) belegt. Andere Hgg. lesen entweder the princesses call oder the princess calls, wie die Fol. the Princess calls hat, letzteres jedoch im Widerspruch mit Orlando's Antwort I attend them. 25) Warburton wollte our eyes und our judgment lesen. Der Sinn ist aber: wenn Ihr Euch nicht über Euch selbst verblendetet, wenn Ihr ein unbefangenes Urtheil über Euch hättet. 26) Die richtige Erklärung von wherein giebt Knight mit in that: Denkt nicht ungünstig von mir in dem, worin ich mich selbst für sehr schuldig bekenne, dass ich Euch eine Bitte verweigere. — Andere Erklärer bezogen hard thoughts auf die ungünstige Meinung, welche Celia und Rosalinde von Orlando's Stärke, dem Ringer gegenüber, hatten. 27) gracious = beliebt bei Gott und den Menschen, daher = geehrt, glücklich. 28) Rosalinde wünscht, dass sie sich in ihrer geringen Meinung von Orlando's Körperkraft durch den Erfolg getäuscht sehe. 29) Zweidentig = bei seiner Mutter Erde schlafen, und = an der Erde liegen. — Orlando fasst den ersten Sinn auf. 30) Ueber den Hergang dieses Ringkampfes bei Lodge vgl. Einleitung pag. 349. 31) Orlando wünscht eine Fortsetzung des Ringens, da er bis dahin noch nicht recht angestrengt worden ist, noch nicht recht in Uebung gekommen ist. 32) Malone supplirt zu more proud aus dem Vorigen than to be descended from another house, als ob Orlando diese Worte dem abgegangenen Herzog nachrufe. — Indess lässt sich more proud auch auf das Folgende beziehen: ich bin stolzer darauf, als wenn ich Adoptiverbe des Herzogs wäre.

I should have given him tears unto entreaties,
Ere he should thus have ventur'd.

Cel. Gentle cousin,
Let us go thank him, and encourage him:
My father's rough and envious disposition
Sticks me at heart. — Sir, you have well deserv'd:
If you do keep your promises in love
But justly, as you have exceeded all promise,³⁴
Your mistress shall be happy.

Ros. Gentleman.

[Giving him a chain from her neck.

Wear this for me, one out of suits with fortune,³⁵
That could give more, but that her hand lacks means. —
Shall we go, coz?

Cel. Ay. — Fare you well, fair gentleman.

Orl. Can I not say, I thank you? My better parts
Are all thrown down, and that which here stands up
Is but a quintain,³⁶ a mere lifeless block.

Ros. He calls us back. My pride fell with my fortunes;
I'll ask him what he would. — Did you call, Sir? —
Sir, you have wrestled well, and overthrown
More than your enemies.

Cel. Will you go, coz?

Ros. Have with you. — Fare you well.

[Exeunt ROSALIND and CELIA.

Orl. What passion hangs these weights upon my tongue?

I cannot speak to her, yet she urg'd conference.

O poor Orlando! thou art overthrown.

Or Charles, or something weaker, masters thee.³⁷

Re-enter LE BEAU.

Le Beau. Good Sir, I do in friendship counsel you
To leave this place. Albeit you have deserv'd
High commendation, true applause, and love,
Yet such is now the duke's condition,³⁸
That he misconstrues³⁹ all that you have done.
The duke is humorous:⁴⁰ what he is, indeed,
More suits you to conceive, than I⁴¹ to speak of.

Orl. I thank you, Sir; and, pray you, tell me this:
Which of the two was daughter of the duke,
That here was at the wrestling?

Le Beau. Neither his daughter, if we judge by manners:

But yet, indeed, the smaller⁴² is his daughter:

The other is daughter to the banish'd duke,

And here detain'd by her usurping uncle,

To keep his daughter company; whose loves

Are dearer than the natural bond of sisters.

But I can tell you, that of late this duke

Hath ta'en displeasure 'gainst his gentle niece,

Grounded upon no other argument,

But that the people praise her for her virtues,

And pity her for her good father's sake;

And, on my life, his malice 'gainst the lady

Will suddenly break forth. — Sir, fare you well:

Hereafter, in a better world than this,

I shall desire more love and knowledge of you.

Orl. I rest much bounden to you: fare you well.

[Exit LE BEAU.

Thus must I from the smoke into the smother;⁴³

From tyrant duke unto a tyrant brother. —

But heavenly Rosalind!

[Exit.

SCENE III.

A Room in the Palace.

Enter CELIA and ROSALIND.

Cel. Why, cousin, why, Rosalind! — Cupid have mercy! — Not a word?

Ros. Not one to throw at a dog.¹

Cel. No, thy words are too precious to be cast away upon curs, throw some of them at me: come, lame me with reasons.

Ros. Then there were two cousins laid up, when the one should be lamed with reasons, and the other mad without any.

Cel. But is all this for your father?

Ros. No, some of it is for my child's father:² O, how full of briars is this working-day world!

Cel. They are but burs, cousin, thrown upon thee in holiday foolery: if we walk not in the trodden paths, our very petticoats will catch them.

33) calling = Name. 34) Wenn Ihr Eure Liebesbetheurungen nur eben so genau haltet, wie Ihr alle Erwartung im Ringkampf übertroffen habt. — Der Gegensatz ist zwischen to keep und to exceed. — Steevens stösst des Verses wegen all aus, und Sidney Walker vermuthete excell'd für exceeded. 35) out of suits with fortune fasst Steevens vielleicht zu speciell: turned out of her service, and stripped of her livery. Es ist vielleicht nur = ausser Verbindung, ausser Zusammenhang mit dem Glück. — Bei Lodge heisst es an der entsprechenden Stelle von der Rosalinde: to make Rosader know she affected him, tooke from her necke a jewel and sent it by a page to the yong gentleman. 36) quintain = eine hölzerne Figur, die bei Wettspielen als Wurfziel oder beim Lanzenreiten als Stechziel diente. — Das folgende a mere lifeless block ist zur Erklärung des Wortes hinzugefügt. 37) Orlando denkt an den eben bestandenen Ringkampf zurück und meint, er sei, wenn nicht damals von Charles, doch jetzt von etwas Schwächerem, d. h. von der Rosalinde, überwältigt worden. 38) condition = Stimmung, Gemüthsart. 39) Die Fol. hat misconsters. 40) humorous = von Launen abhängig, wechselnd in der Stimmung. 41) Manche Hgg. verwischen diese Sh.'sche Eigenthümlichkeit, indem sie me für I setzen. Doch hat auch Ben Jonson in Cynthia's Revels: Make this gentleman and I friends, und zu Anfang dieser Scene steht my father hath no child but I. 42) So emendirte Malone das taller der Fol., das im Widerspruche mit dem steht, was weiterhin über die verschiedene Statur der beiden Prinzessinnen verlautet. — So kommt in Greene's K. James IV. my small son vor. — Andere Hgg. setzen shorter mit Pope oder lower, was Beides indess nicht so leicht mit taller zu verwechseln war. Vielleicht schrieb Sh. selbst taller aus Unachtsamkeit. Vgl. oben Anm. 12. 43) Sprichwörtlich = aus dem Regen in die Traufe kommen.

1) Celia versteht diese von Rosalinde sprichwörtlich gebrauchte Redensart im eigentlichen Wortsinne. 2) Theobald erklärt diese Lesart der Fol., welche durch Rosalindens folgende Worte I would try, if I could cry hem, and have him gesichert wird, ganz richtig mit for him, whom I hope to marry and have children by. Rosalinde bekennt ihre Liebe zu Orlando in versteckter Weise. — Viele Hgg., welche an dieser unbefangenen Aeusserung mit der Delicatesse einer späteren Zeit Anstoss nehmen, setzen dafür mit Pope die von Rowe zuerst vor-

Ros. I could shake them off my coat: these burs are in my heart.

Cel. Hem them away.

Ros. I would try, if I could cry hem, and have him.³

Cel. Come, come; wrestle with thy affections.

Ros. O! they take the part of a better wrestler⁴ than myself.

Cel. O, a good wish upon you! you will try in time, in despite of a fall. — But, turning these jests out of service,⁵ let us talk in good earnest. Is it possible, on such a sudden, you should fall into so strong a liking with old Sir Rowland's youngest son?⁶

Ros. The duke my father lov'd his father dearly.

Cel. Doth it therefore ensue, that you should love his son dearly? By this kind of chase,⁷ I should hate him, for my father hated his father dearly;⁸ yet I hate not Orlando.

Ros. No, 'faith, hate him not, for my sake.

Cel. Why should I not?⁹ doth he not deserve well?

Ros. Let me love him for that;¹⁰ and do you love him, because I do. — Look, here comes the duke.

Cel. With his eyes full of anger.

Enter Duke FREDERICK, with Lords.

Duke F. Mistress, dispatch you with your safest haste,¹¹

And get you from our court.

Ros. Me, uncle?

Duke F. You, cousin: — Within these ten days if that thou be'st found So near our public court as twenty miles, Thou diest for it.

Ros. I do beseech your grace, Let me the knowledge of my fault bear with me. If with myself I hold intelligence, Or have acquaintance with mine own desires, If that I do not dream, or be not frantic (As I do trust I am not), then, dear uncle, Never so much as in a thought unborn Did I offend your highness.

Duke F. Thus do all traitors: If their purgation did consist in words, They are as innocent as grace itself. Let it suffice thee, that I trust thee not.

Ros. Yet your mistrust cannot make me a traitor. Tell me, whereon the likelihood¹² depends.

Duke F. Thou art thy father's daughter; there's enough.

Ros. So was I when your highness took his dukedom; So was I when your highness banish'd him.

Treason is not inherited, my lord;

Or, if we did derive it from our friends,¹³

What's that to me? my father was no traitor.

Then, good my liege, mistake me not so much,

To think my poverty is treacherous.

Cel. Dear sovereign, hear me speak.

Duke F. Ay, Celia: we stay'd her for your sake;

Else had she with her father rang'd along.

Cel. I did not then entreat to have her stay:

It was your pleasure, and your own remorse.¹⁴

I was too young that time to value her;

But now I know her: if she be a traitor,

Why, so am I; we still have slept together,

Rose at an instant, learn'd, play'd, eat together;

And wheresoe'er we went, like Juno's swans,¹⁵

Still we went coupled, and inseparable.

Duke F. She is too subtle for thee; and her smoothness,

Her very silence, and her patience,

Speak to the people, and they pity her.

Thou art a fool: she robs thee of thy name;

And thou wilt show more bright, and seem more virtuous,

When she is gone.¹⁶ Then, open not thy lips:

Firm and irrevocable is my doom

Which I have pass'd upon her. She is banish'd.

Cel. Pronounce that sentence then on me, my liege:

I cannot live out of her company.

Duke F. You are a fool. — You, niece, provide yourself:

If you outstay the time,¹⁷ upon mine honour,

And in the greatness of my word, you die.

[Exeunt Duke FREDERICK and Lords.]

Cel. O my poor Rosalind! whither wilt thou go?

Wilt thou change fathers? I will give thee mine.

I charge thee, be not thou more griev'd than I am.

Ros. I have more cause.

Cel. Thou hast not, cousin.

Pr'ythee, be cheerful: know'st thou not, the duke

Hath banish'd me, his daughter?

Ros. That he hath not.

Cel. No? hath not?¹⁸ Rosalind lacks then the love,

Which teacheth thee¹⁹ that thou and I am one.

Shall we be sunder'd? shall we part, sweet girl?

No: let my father seek another heir.

Therefore, devise with me how we may fly,

Whither to go, and what to bear with us:

geschlagene Aenderung for my father's child, d. h. für Rosalinde selbst. 3) Wortspiel zwischen hem und him. — to cry hem als ein Mittel, das Herz zu erleichtern, kommt auch in Much Ado about Nothing (A. 5, Sc. 1) vor: cry hem, when he should groan. 4) Sie denkt an den Ringkampf Orlando's mit Charles. — Mit derselben Anspielung gebraucht Celia dann doppelsinnig to try und fall. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 20. 5) to turn out of service = verabschieden, aus dem Dienste entlassen. 6) Celia denkt an Orlando's Worte in der vorigen Scene: I am more proud to be Sir Rowland's son, || His youngest son. 7) chase = Verfolgung einer Jagdspur, hier eines Raisonsnements, Schlussfolgerung. 8) dear wird von der Innigkeit der Liebe wie des Hasses gesagt. So in Twelfth-Night (A. 5, Sc. 1) in terms so bloody and so dear. 9) Genau genommen sollte Celia antworten Why should I? scil. hate him. — Sh. verwirrt die Construction sehr häufig in Folge der Negationen. 10) for that bezieht sich auf deserve well. 11) safest haste = die Eile, die für Eure Sicherheit die gerathenste ist. 12) Worauf der Anschein meines Hochverraths beruht, sich gründet. — Die Fol. hat likelihoods. 13) friends = Verwandte, Geschlechtsangehörige. 14) remorse = Gewissensregung, Gefühl. 15) Die beiden Schwäne, welche den Wagen der Juno ziehen. 16) Dein Werth wird sich glänzender zeigen, wenn sie fort ist. — Bei Lodge sagt der König zu seiner Tochter u. A.: Thou, fond girl, measurest all by present affection, and as thy heart loves; thy thoughts censure; but if thou knowest that in liking Rosalind thou hatchest up a bird to peck out thine own eyes, thou wouldst intreat as much for her absence as now thou delightest in her presence. 17) scil. ten days, wie der Herzog vorher sagte. 18) Singer versteht dies No hath not! = Kein »hat nicht«!

And do not seek to take your change upon you,²⁰
To bear your griefs yourself, and leave me out;
For, by this heaven, now at our sorrows pale,
Say what thou canst, I'll go along with thee.

Ros. Why, whither shall we go?

Cel. To seek my uncle in the forest of Arden.

Ros. Alas, what danger will it be to us,
Maids as we are, to travel forth so far!
Beauty provoketh thieves sooner than gold.

Cel. I'll put myself in poor and mean attire,
And with a kind of umber²¹ smirch my face.
The like do you: so shall we pass along,
And never stir assailants.²²

Ros. Were it not better,
Because that I am more than common tall,²³
That I did suit me all points like a man?
A gallant curtlet-axe²⁴ upon my thigh,
A boar-spear in my hand; and, in my heart,
Lie there what hidden woman's fear there will,
We'll have a swashing²⁵ and a martial outside;
As many other mannish cowards have,
That do outface²⁶ it with their semblances.

Cel. What shall I call thee, when thou art a man?

Ros. I'll have no worse a name than Jove's own page,
And therefore look you call me Ganymede.
But what will you be²⁷ call'd?

Cel. Something that hath a reference to my state:
No longer Celia, but Aliena.

Ros. But, cousin, what if we essay'd to steal
The clownish fool²⁸ out of your father's court?
Would he not be a comfort to our travel?

Cel. He'll go along o'er the wide world with me;
Leave me alone to woo him. Let's away,
And get our jewels and our wealth together,
Devise the fittest time, and safest way
To hide us from pursuit that will be made

After my flight. Now go we in content²⁹
To liberty, and not to banishment.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.

The Forest of Arden.

Enter DUKE Senior, AMIENS, and other Lords, like foresters.¹

Duke S. Now, my co-mates, and brothers in exile,²
Hath not old custom made this life more sweet
Than that of painted pomp? Are not these woods
More free from peril than the envious court?
Here feel we but³ the penalty of Adam,
The seasons' difference; as the icy fang,
And churlish chiding of the winter's wind,
Which when it bites, and blows upon my body,
Even till I shrink with cold, I smile, and say,
This is no flattery: these are counsellors
That feelingly persuade me what I am.

Sweet are the uses of adversity,
Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous,
Wears yet a precious jewel in his head;⁴
And this our life, exempt from public haunt,
Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,⁵
Sermons in stones, and good in every thing.

Ami. I would not change it.⁶ Happy is your grace,
That can translate the stubbornness of fortune
Into so quiet and so sweet a style.

Duke S. Come, shall we go and kill us venison?
And yet it irks me, the poor dappled fools,
Being native burghers of this desert city,⁷
Should, in their own confines, with forked heads,⁸
Have their round haunches gor'd.

Sage mir nicht, dass er mich nicht verbannt hat. 19) Warburton wollte me für thee lesen. — which teaches thee ist = die Liebe, welche Dir die Lehre an's Herz legt, welche Dich lehren sollte. 20) Suche nicht Deinen Glückswechsel für Dich allein zu tragen. — Manche Hgg. lesen charge mit der zweiten Folioausg. für change der Fol. 21) umber = Okererde. — In K. Henry V. (A. 4, Chorus) kommt in übertragenem Sinne umber'd face vor. — to smirch = beschmutzen, dunkel färben. 22) So werden wir die Leute nimmer anreizen, dass sie sich an uns machen. 23) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 42. — In demselben Sinne spricht Rosalinde bei Lodge. — Vgl. Einleitung pag. 349. 24) curtlet-axe, entsteht aus cutlance, französisch coute-lance = ein kurzes breites Schwert. 25) swashing = renommistisch. 26) to outface it = seine Rolle mit dreister Miene durchführen. — Das it steht wie in to carry it und ähnlich. 27) Die Fol. liest by für be. 28) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 6. 29) So die Folioausg. von 1632. — Die Fol. hat now go in we content, was Malone nicht geradezu verwerfen möchte, insofern content adjectivisch sich fassen liesse. Indess spricht schon der nicht auf in liegende Ton für die Verbesserung.

1) Dieses Costüm wird schon in der Fol. angegeben. 2) exile betont Sh. bald auf der ersten, bald auf der zweiten Sylbe. 3) but setzt Theobald für not der Fol., welche ältere Lesart dem widerspricht, was der Herzog bald nachher von demselben penalty of Adam sagt: these are counsellors || That feelingly persuade me what I am. — not und but wird in den alten Drucken häufig verwechselt. — Staunton, der not im Texte stehen lässt, schlägt in der Anmerkung yet dafür vor und ebenso At the icy fang — I smile. Erstere Conjectur ist plausibler als die letztere. — Mit as the icy fang etc. wird ein Beispiel von the seasons' difference angeführt. 4) Von diesem fabelhaften Stein heisst es in Fenton's Secrete Wonders of Nature (1569) That there is found in the heades of old and great toades a stone which they call Borax or Stelon: it is most commonly founde in the head of a hee toad, of power to repulse poysons, and that it is a most sovereigne medicine for the stone. 5) Sh. dachte vielleicht an einen Passus in Sidney's Arcadia: Thus both trees and each thing else be the books to a fancy. — Zwischen books und brooks ist ein Gleichklang beabsichtigt. 6) Die Worte I would not change it legt Dyce nach Upton's Vorschlag noch als Schlusswort der Rede dem Herzog bei. Indess enthalten sie die Antwort auf die Frage, welche der Herzog in den ersten Zeilen an seine Genossen richtet, und können daher dem Amiens nicht genommen werden. 7) Einen ähnlichen Ausdruck zur Bezeichnung des Wildes fand Sh. bei Lodge: About her wondring stood || The citizens of the wood; sowie in Sidney's Arcadia: the wild burgesse, of the forest. — Zur Vergleichung mit poor dappled fools citirt Dyce aus Skelton's Don Quixote (1612) Then he stroking once or twice his pretty goat said thus: Lie down, pied fool, by me, for we shall have time enough to return home again. 8) forked heads = die mit Widerhaken versehenen Spitzen der

1. Lord. Indeed, my lord,
The melancholy Jaques grieves at that;
And, in that kind, swears you do more usurp,
Than doth your brother that hath banish'd you.
To-day my lord of Amiens and myself
Did steal behind him, as he lay along
Under an oak, whose antique root peeps out
Upon the brook that brawls along this wood;
To the which place a poor sequester'd stag,
That from the hunter's aim had ta'en a hurt,
Did come to languish: and, indeed, my lord,
The wretched animal heav'd forth such groans,
That their discharge did stretch his leathern coat
Almost to bursting; and the big round tears
Cours'd one another down his innocent nose
In piteous chase: ⁹ and thus the hairy fool,
Much marked of the melancholy Jaques,
Stood on the extremest verge of the swift brook,
Augmenting it with tears.

Duke S. But what said Jaques?
Did he not moralize this spectacle?

1. Lord. O! yes, into a thousand similes.
First, for his weeping into ¹⁰ the needless stream;
»Poor deer,« quoth he, »thou mak'st a testament
As worldlings do, giving thy sum of more
To that which had too much.« ¹¹ Then, being there alone,
Left and abandon'd of his velvet friends; ¹²
»'T is right,« quoth he; »thus misery doth part
The flux of company.« Anon, a careless herd,
Full of the pasture, jumps along by him,
And never stays to greet him: »Ay,« quoth Jaques, »Sweep on, you fat and greasy citizens;
'T is just the fashion: wherefore do you look Upon that poor and broken bankrupt there?«
Thus most invectively he pierceth through
The body of the ¹³ country, city, court,
Yea, and of this our life; swearing, that we
Are mere usurpers, tyrants, and what's worse, ¹⁴
To fright the animals, and to kill them up
In their assign'd and native dwelling-place.

Duke S. And did you leave him in this contemplation?

2. Lord. We did, my lord, weeping and commenting Upon the sobbing deer.

Duke S. Show me the place.
I love to cope him ¹⁵ in these sullen fits,
For then he's full of matter.

2. Lord. I'll bring you to him straight. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A Room in the Palace.

Enter Duke FREDERICK, Lords, and Attendants.

Duke F. Can it be possible that no man saw them?
It cannot be: some villains of my court
Are of consent and sufferance in this. ¹

1. Lord. I cannot hear of any that did see her.
The ladies, her attendants of her chamber,
Saw her a-bed; and, in the morning early,
They found the bed untreasur'd of their mistress.

2. Lord. My lord, the roynish ² clown, at whom so oft
Your grace was wont to laugh, is also missing.
Hesperia, the princess' gentlewoman,
Confesses, that she secretly o'erheard
Your daughter and her cousin much commend
The parts and graces of the wrestler, ³
That did but lately foil the sinewy Charles;
And she believes, wherever they are gone,
That youth is surely in their company.

Duke F. Send to his brother: ⁴ fetch that gallant hither;
If he be absent, bring his brother to me,
I'll make him find him. Do this suddenly,
And let not search and inquisition quail ⁵
To bring again these foolish runaways. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Before OLIVER'S House.

Enter ORLANDO and ADAM, meeting.

Orl. Who's there?

Adam. What! my young master? — O my gentle master!

Jagd Pfeile. — confines wird bald auf der ersten, bald auf der zweiten Sylbe betont. 9) In den Noten zu Drayton's Polyolbion heisst es: the hart weepeth at his dying: his tears are hold to be precious medicine.
10) Für into änderte Pope des Verses wegen in. — needless stream = der Strom, der selbst Wasser genug hat und daher der Thränen nicht bedurfte. — So in *Lover's Complaint: in a river, || Upon whose weeping margent
she was set; || Like usury, applying wet to wet.* 11) must in der Fol., was die zweite Folioausg. von 1632
verbessert. — Denselben Gedanken, fast mit denselben Worten, hat Sh. in K. Henry VI. Third Part (A. 5, Sc. 4)
With tearful eyes add water to the sea, || And give more strength to that which hath too much. 12) velvet friends bezieht sich zugleich auf das sammetweiche Fell der Hirsche, und, in der Metapher, auf die in Sammet gekleideten Freunde, welche in ihrer Pracht und Herrlichkeit von dem Armen nichts mehr wissen wollen. — friends verbesserte Rowe das friend der Fol. 13) the, das in der Fol. fehlt, ergänzt die zweite Folioausg. — Es ist das Land im Gegensatze zur Stadt und zum Hofe gemeint. Auf country bezieht sich Jaques' erste Bemerkung von den worldlings, auf city die letzte von den fat and greasy citizens, und auf court die von den velvet friends. — invectively = anzüglich, mit Invectiven. 14) Und dass wir noch schlimmer als Wüthriche (tyrants) sind, wenn wir die Thiere aufscheuchen und tödten. — Das verstärkende up wie bei kill hat Sh. auch sonst. 15) to cope him = es mit Jemandem aufnehmen, sich mit ihm einlassen.

1) Sind im Einverständniss und haben es geschehen lassen. — Der Herzog spricht von der Flucht seiner Tochter und seiner Nichte (saw them). Bei dem folgenden see her ist nur Celia gemeint. 2) roynish, eigentlich = mit der Krätze behaftet, steht hier als blosser Ausdruck der Geringschätzung. — Staunton vermuthet ziemlich plausibel, dass das Wort hier für roguish verdruckt sei. — Zwei Zeilen weiter hat die Fol. Hesperia, von Warburton verbessert. 3) wrestler ist dreisylbig (wresteler) zu lesen. 4) M. Mason wollte brother's lesen, weil that gallant Orlando, nicht Oliver, ist. Indess ist solche Constructionslicenz Sh. eigenthümlich. 5) to quail = schlaff werden, nachlassen. So in The Choice of Change: Hunger cureth love; for hunger quaileth, when good cheer faileth.

O my sweet master! O you memory!¹
 Of old Sir Rowland! why, what make you here?
 Why are you virtuous? why do people love you?
 And wherefore are you gentle, strong, and valiant?
 Why would you be so fond to overcome
 The boney priser of the humorous duke?²
 Your praise is come too swiftly home before you.
 Know you not, master, to some³ kind of men
 Their graces serve them but as enemies?
 No more do yours:⁴ your virtues, gentle master,
 Are sanctified and holy traitors to you.⁵
 O, what a world is this, when what is comely
 Envenoms him that bears it!

Orl. Why, what's the matter?⁶

Adam. O unhappy youth!
 Come not within these doors: within this roof⁷
 The enemy of all your graces lives.
 Your brother — (no, no brother: yet the son —
 Yet not the son — I will not call him son
 Of him I was about to call his father) —
 Hath heard your praises, and this night he means
 To burn the lodging where you use to lie,
 And you within it: if he fail of that,
 He will have other means to cut you off.
 I overheard him, and his practices.
 This is no place:⁸ this house is but a butchery:
 Abhor it, fear it, do not enter it.

Orl. Why, whither, Adam, wouldst thou have me go?

Adam. No matter whither, so you come not here.

Orl. What! wouldst thou have me go and beg my food,

Or with a base and boisterous sword enforce
 A thievish living on the common road?
 This I must do, or know not what to do;
 Yet this I will not do, do how I can.⁹
 I rather will subject me to the malice
 Of a diverted blood, and bloody brother.¹⁰

Adam. But do not so. I have five hundred crowns,
 The thrifty hire I sav'd under your father,
 Which I did store, to be my foster-nurse,
 When service should in my old limbs lie lame,
 And unregarded age in corners thrown.
 Take that; and He that doth the ravens feed,

Yea, providently caters for the sparrow,
 Be comfort to my age! Here is the gold:
 All this I give you. Let me be your servant:
 Though I look old, yet I am strong and lusty;
 For in my youth I never did apply
 Hot and rebellious¹¹ liquors in my blood;
 Nor did not with unbashful forehead woo
 The means of weakness and debility;
 Therefore my age is as a lusty winter,
 Frosty, but kindly. Let me go with you:
 I'll do the service of a younger man
 In all your business and necessities.

Orl. O good old man! how well in thee appears

The constant service of the antique world,
 When service sweat for duty, not for meed!
 Thou art not for the fashion of these times,
 Where none will sweat but for promotion,
 And having that, do choke their service up¹²
 Even with the having: it is not so with thee.
 But, poor old man, thou prun'st a rotten tree,
 That cannot so much as a blossom yield,
 In lieu of all thy pains and husbandry.
 But come thy ways, we'll go along together,
 And ere we have thy youthful wages spent,
 We'll light upon some settled low content.

Adam. Master, go on, and I will follow thee
 To the last gasp with truth and loyalty.
 From seventeen¹³ years, till now almost fourscore,
 Here lived I, but now live here no more.
 At seventeen years many their fortunes seek;
 But at fourscore it is too late a week:¹⁴
 Yet fortune cannot recompense me better,
 Than to die well, and not my master's debtor. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

The Forest of Arden.

Enter ROSALIND in boy's clothes, CELIA dressed like a shepherdess, and TOUCHSTONE.¹

Ros. O Jupiter! how weary² are my spirits!

Touch. I care not for my spirits, if my legs were not weary.

1) Orlando erinnert in seinem Aeussern wie in seinem Wesen an seinen verstorbenen Vater. 2) Warum waret Ihr so versessen darauf, den starken Preisringer des launenhaften Herzogs zu überwinden? — boney = von starkem Knochenbau, ist Warburton's Emendation für bonny (bonnie) der Fol., was manche Hgg. = stattlich, beibehalten. 3) seeme in der Fol. verbessert schon die zweite Folioausg. zu some. 4) So dienen auch Eure guten Gaben Euch nur als Feinde. — Das vorhergehende them bezieht sich auf to some kind of men. 5) Eure Tugenden, indem sie Euch gefährliche Feindschaften zuziehen, verrathen Euch gleichsam unter einer frommen und heiligen Aussenseite. So in Hamlet (A. 1, Sc. 3) Breathing like sanctified and pious bonds, || The better to beguile. 6) Diese Worte theilt die Fol. irrig dem Adam zu. 7) Wie Dyce bemerkt, steht roof häufig für house; so in Chapman's Odyssey: If time and food and wine enough accrue || Within your roof to us. 8) place = Sitz, Wohnsitz. So in Lover's Complaint: Love lack'd a dwelling, and made him her place. — M. Mason dagegen erklärt: this is no place for you. 9) Möge es mir gehen, wie es mir gehen kann. — to do wird in diesen Versen doppelsinnig gebraucht. 10) diverted blood ist das entartete Blut seines blutsverwandten Bruders und bildet den Uebergang zu bloody brother, wo das Wort in anderer Bedeutung wiederkehrt. So in Macbeth (A. 2, Sc. 3) the near' in blood, the nearer bloody. — to divert = aus der rechten Richtung, vom rechten Wege ableiten. 11) rebellious ist dem Sinne nach auch mit in my blood zu verbinden: Getränke, welche in dem Blute Empörung stiften, welche das Blut erhitzen und aufregen. — Wie hier Unmässigkeit im Trinken, so ist im Folgenden entnervende geschlechtliche Ausschweifung gemeint. 12) Und wenn sie diese Beförderung haben, so vernichtet diese Beförderung selbst den Dienst; so hören sie auf zu dienen, weil sie befördert sind. — to choke up steht in demselben uneigentlichen Sinne wie in Macbeth (A. 1, Sc. 2) As two spent swimmers, that do cling together || And choke their art. 13) seventeen verbesserte Rowe das seventy der Fol. — Das folgende seventeen steht in der Fol. richtig. 14) Um eine Woche zu spät, um Etwas zu spät. — a week steht auch sonst als eine allgemeine Zeitbezeichnung.

Ros. I could find in my heart to disgrace my man's apparel, and to cry like a woman; but I must comfort the weaker vessel, as doublet and hose ought to show itself courageous to petticoat: ³ therefore, courage, good Aliena!

Cel. I pray you, bear with me: I can go no further.

Touch. For my part, I had rather bear with you than bear you: ⁴ yet I should bear no cross, if I did bear you; for I think you have no money in your purse.

Ros. Well, this is the forest of Arden.

Touch. Ay, now am I in Arden; the more fool I: when I was at home, I was in a better place; but travellers must be content.

Ros. Ay, be so, good Touchstone. — Look you; who comes here? a young man, and an old, in solemn talk. ⁵

Enter CORIN and SILVIUS.

Cor. That is the way to make her scorn you still.

Sil. O Corin, that thou knew'st how I do love her!

Cor. I partly guess, for I have lov'd ere now.

Sil. No, Corin; being old, thou canst not guess, Though in thy youth thou wast as true a lover As ever sigh'd upon a midnight pillow: But if thy love were ever like to mine, As sure I think did never man love so, How many actions most ridiculous Hast thou been drawn to by thy fantasy?

Cor. Into a thousand that I have forgotten.

Sil. O! thou didst then ne'er love so heartily.

If thou remember'st not the slightest folly

That ever love did make thee run into,

Thou hast not lov'd:

Or if thou hast not sat, as I do now,

Wearing ⁶ thy hearer in thy mistress' praise,

Thou hast not lov'd:

Or if thou hast not broke from company,

Abruptly, as my passion now makes me,

Thou hast not lov'd. — O Phebe, Phebe, Phebe! [Exit.]

Ros. Alas, poor shepherd! searching of thy wound, ⁷ I have by hard adventure found mine own.

Touch. And I mine. I remember, when I was in love I broke my sword upon a stone, and bid him take that for coming a-night to Jane Smile; and I remember the kissing of her batlet, ⁸ and the cow's dugs that her pretty chopped hands had milked; and I remember the wooing of a peascod instead of her, from whom ⁹ I took two cods, and, giving her them again, said with weeping tears, ¹⁰ »Wear these for my sake.« We, that are true lovers, run into strange capers; but as all is mortal in nature, so is all nature in love mortal ¹¹ in folly.

Ros. Thou speakest wiser than thou art 'ware of.

Touch. Nay, I shall ne'er be 'ware of mine own wit, till I break my shins against it.

Ros. Jove, Jove! this shepherd's passion Is much upon my fashion.

Touch. And mine; but it grows something stale with me.

Cel. I pray you, one of you question yond man, If he for gold will give us any food: I faint almost to death.

Touch. Holla, you clown!

Ros. Peace, fool: he's not thy kinsman. ¹²

Cor. Who calls?

Touch. Your betters, Sir.

Cor. Else are they very wretched.

Ros. Peace, I say. — Good even to you, friend. ¹³

Cor. And to you, gentle Sir; and to you all.

Ros. I pr'ythee, shepherd, if that love, or gold, Can in this desert place buy entertainment, Bring us where we may rest ourselves, and feed. Here's a young maid with travel much oppress'd, And faints for succour.

Cor. Fair Sir, I pity her, And wish, for her sake more than for mine own, My fortunes were more able to relieve her; But I am shepherd to another man, And do not shear the fleeces that I graze; My master is of churlish disposition, And little recks ¹⁴ to find the way to heaven By doing deeds of hospitality.

Besides, his cote, his flocks, and bounds of feed, ¹⁵ Are now on sale: and at our sheepecote now, By reason of his absence, there is nothing That you will feed on; but what is, come see, And in my voice most welcome shall you be.

1) Die Fol. hat Enter Rosaline for Ganimed, Celia for Aliena, and Clown, alias Touchstone. 2) weary, Theobald's Emendation für merry der Fol., wird gerechtfertigt durch Rosalindens folgende Rede, sowie durch die Replik des Narren. 3) petticoat bezeichnet scherzhaft die Celia, wie doublet and hose die als Mann gekleidete Rosalinde. 4) Dasselbe Wortspiel von to bear with = Nachsicht mit Jemandem haben, und to bear = Jemanden tragen, findet sich in K. Richard III. (A. 3, Sc. 1) You mean, to bear me, not to bear with me. — So ist das folgende Wortspiel von cross = Leid, Widerwärtigkeit, und = Münze mit dem Gepräge des Kreuzes, bei Sh. und seinen Zeitgenossen häufig, so in Love's Labour's Lost (A. 1, Sc. 2) crosses love not him. 5) In ernstem Gespräch. 6) Für wearing der Fol. setzt die zweite Folioausg. das mattere wearying. 7) thy wound verbesserte Rowe das their wound der zweiten Folioausg. — Die erste Fol. hat ganz sinnlos they would. 8) batlet = Waschbläuel, Diminutiv von bat. — Die Fol. hat batler. 9) from whom geht auf peascod: Touchstone nahm zwei Erbsen aus der Erbsenschale, mit der er schönthat, und gab sie ihr dann wieder. — Es liegt ein obsöner Doppelsinn darin, da cod zugleich = Hode, ist. 10) weeping tears ist eine tautologische Zusammenstellung, die häufig vorkommt und die Sh. u. A. auch bei Lodge fand. 11) mortal in folly = tödtlich vernarrt, unheilbar närrisch, steht im Gegensatz zu mortal in nature = sterblich von Natur. — all nature in love = alle verliebten Wesen. — Johnson fasst mit einem Provinzialismus mortal in folly als abounding in folly. 12) Touchstone gebraucht clown = Bauerbursche, Rosalinde fasst es = Narr, Rüpel, wie Touchstone diese Bühnenfigur vertritt. — Eben so doppelsinnig ist your betters, welches Touchstone fasst = Leute von höherem Range als Ihr, Eure Vorgesetzten; Corin dagegen = Leute, die besser daran sind. 13) Die Fol. hat to your friend, was die zweite Folioausg. verbessert. 14) to reck = in Anschlag bringen: er macht sich wenig daraus, durch Gastfreundschaft sich den Weg in den Himmel zu bahnen. 15) bounds of feed = Weidebezirk, dasselbe, was nachher pasture heisst. 16) Er ist so mit seiner Liebe beschäftigt, dass es ihm gleichgültig ist, ob er diese Schäferei kauft oder nicht. — Damit wird Rosalindens Gedanke motiviert, dieses Besitzthum für sich und Celia zu erwerben. — Vgl. zu dieser Scene die entsprechende Stelle bei Lodge, Einleitung pag. 350.

Ros. What is he that shall buy his flock and pasture?

Cor. That young swain that you saw here but ere-while,

That little cares for buying anything.¹⁶

Ros. I pray thee, if it stand with honesty,
Buy thou the cottage, pasture, and the flock,
And thou shalt have to pay for it of us.

Cel. And we will mend thy wages. I like this place,
And willingly could waste my time in it.

Cor. Assuredly, the thing is to be sold.

Go with me: if you like, upon report,

The soil, the profit, and this kind of life,

I will your very faithful feeder be,

And buy it with your gold right suddenly. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Another Part of the Forest.

Enter AMIENS, JAQUES, and Others.

SONG.

Ami. Under the greenwood tree,
Who loves to lie with me,
And turn¹ his merry note
Unto the sweet bird's throat,
Come hither, come hither, come hither:
Here shall he see
No enemy,
But winter and rough weather.

Jaq. More, more! I pr'ythee, more.

Ami. It will make you melancholy, Monsieur Jaques.

Jaq. I thank it. More! I pr'ythee, more. I can suck melancholy out of a song, as a weasel sucks eggs. More! I pr'ythee, more.

Ami. My voice is ragged;² I know I cannot please you.

Jaq. I do not desire you to please me; I do desire you to sing. Come, more; another stanza. Call you 'em stanzas?³

Ami. What you will, Monsieur Jaques.

Jaq. Nay, I care not for their names; they owe me nothing.⁴ Will you sing?

Ami. More at your request than to please myself.

Jaq. Well then, if ever I thank any man, I'll thank you: but that they call compliment is like the encounter of two dog-apes;⁵ and when a man thanks me heartily, methinks I have given him a penny, and he renders me the beggarly thanks.⁶ Come, sing; and you that will not, hold your tongues.

Ami. Well, I'll end the song. — Sirs, cover the while;⁷ the duke will drink under this tree. — He hath been all this day to look you.⁸

Jaq. And I have been all this day to avoid him. He is too disputable⁹ for my company: I think of as many matters as he, but I give heaven thanks, and make no boast of them. Come, warble; come.

SONG.

Who doth ambition shun, [All together here.]¹⁰

And loves to live¹¹ i' the sun,

Seeking the food he eats,

And pleas'd with what he gets,

Come hither, come hither, come hither:

Here shall he see

No enemy,

But winter and rough weather.

Jaq. I'll give you a verse to this note, that I made yesterday in despite of my invention.

Ami. And I'll sing it.

Jaq. Thus it goes —

If it do come to pass,

That any man turn ass,

Leaving his wealth and ease,

A stubborn will to please,

Ducdame, ducdame, ducdame:

Here shall he see

Gross fools as he,

An if he will come to me.

Ami. What's that ducdame?¹²

Jaq. 'T is a Greek invocation to call fools into a circle. I'll go sleep if I can; if I cannot, I'll rail against all the first-born of Egypt.¹³

Ami. And I'll go seek the duke: his banquet is prepared. [Exeunt severally.]

SCENE VI.

Another Part of the Forest.

Enter ORLANDO and ADAM.

Adam. Dear master, I can go no further: O! I die for food.¹ Here lie I down, and measure out my grave. Farewell, kind master.

Orl. Why, how now, Adam! no greater heart in thee? Live a little; comfort a little; cheer thyself a little. If this uncouth forest yield any thing savage,² I will either be food for it, or bring it for food to thee. Thy conceit is nearer death than thy powers. For my sake be comfortable,³ hold death awhile at the arm's end, I will here be with thee presently, and if I bring thee not something to eat, I will give thee leave to die; but if thou diest before I come, thou art a mocker of my labour.⁴ Well said! thou look'st cheerily; and I'll be with thee quickly. — Yet thou liest in the bleak air: come, I will bear thee to some shelter, and thou shalt not die for lack of a dinner, if there live any thing in this desert. Cheerly, good Adam.

1) Manche Hgg. ändern mit Pope tune für turn (turne) der Fol., ohne Grund. — So in Hall's Satires: While threadbare Martial turns his merry note, || To beg of Rufus a cast winter-coat. 2) ragged = uneben, rauh. So kommt in Nashe's Apologie for Pierce Pennilesse ragged verses vor. — Rowe setzt das synonyme rugged dafür. 3) In der Fol. steht stanzo und stanzos. — Jaques will den fremden und affectirten Modeausdruck verspotten. 4) Ich brauche ihre Namen nicht zu wissen, da ich sie nicht als ihr Gläubiger vor Gericht einzuklagen habe. 5) Was man Compliment nennt, das ist, als wenn zwei Affen gegen einander Gesichter schneiden. 6) beggarly thanks = Dank, wie ihn ein Bettler für ein Almosen sagt. 7) Ihr Herren, deckt unterdess, während ich singe, den Tisch für den Herzog. 8) Er ist den ganzen Tag darüber aus gewesen, Einer ansichtig zu werden. 9) disputable = zum Disputiren geneigt. So gebraucht Sh. die Adjectiva auf -able und -ible häufig im activen Sinne, z. B. comptible in Twelfth-Night (A. 1, Sc. 5). 10) So in der Fol. 11) Einige Hgg. setzen willkürlich lie für live. 12) Bei ducdame denkt Farmer an eine Zusammenstellung von duck und dame aus einem alten Liede: Dame, what makes your ducks to die? || Duck, duck, duck. || Dame, what makes your chicks to cry? || Chuck, chuck, chuck. — und Hanmer findet darin eine Umstellung des lateinischen duc ad me = bringe ihn zu mir. — Wahrscheinlich ist ducdame ein sinnloser Reirain, mit dessen Deutung Jaques den Amiens nur zum Besten hat. — circle ist der Kreis, den die Geisterbeschwörer ziehen, wie invocation die Beschwörungsformel. 13) Sprichwörtlich: alle vornehmen und reichen Leute. Die Bezeichnung ist aus der englischen Bibel, 2. Buch Mose (Cap. 12, V. 29) the Lord smote all the first-born in the land of Egypt.

SCENE VII.

Another Part of the Forest.¹

A table set out. Enter DUKE Senior, AMIENS, Lords, and Others.

Duke S. I think he be transform'd into a beast, For I can nowhere find him like a man.²

1. Lord. My lord, he is but even now gone hence: Here was he merry, hearing of a song.

Duke S. If he, compact of jars,³ grow musical, We shall have shortly discord in the spheres. — Go, seek him: tell him, I would speak with him.

1. Lord. He saves my labour by his own approach.

Enter JAQUES.

Duke S. Why, how now, Monsieur! what a life is this, That your poor friends must woo your company? What, you look merrily.

Jaq. A fool, a fool! — I met a fool i' the forest, A motley fool — a miserable world!⁴ —

As I do live by food, I met a fool, Who laid him down and bask'd him in the sun, And rail'd on Lady Fortune in good terms, In good set terms, and yet a motley fool.

»Good morrow, fool,« quoth I: — »No, Sir,« quoth he,

»Call me not fool, till heaven hath sent me fortune.«⁵

And then he drew a dial from his poke,

And looking on it with lack-lustre eye,

Says very wisely, »It is ten o'clock:

Thus may we see,« quoth he, »how the world wags:«⁶

'T is but an hour ago since it was nine,

And after one hour more 't will be eleven;

And so from hour to hour we ripe and ripe,

And then from hour to hour we rot and rot,

And thereby hangs a tale.« When I did hear

The motley fool thus moral⁷ on the time,

My lungs began to crow like chanticleer,⁸

That fools should be so deep-contemplative;

And I did laugh, sans intermission,⁹

An hour by his dial. — O noble fool!

A worthy fool! Motley's the only wear.¹⁰

Duke S. What fool is this?

Jaq. O worthy fool! — One that hath been a courtier,

And says, if ladies be but young and fair,

They have the gift to know it; and in his brain,

Which is as dry as the remainder biscuit

After a voyage, he hath strange places¹¹ cramm'd

With observation, the which he vents

In mangled forms. — O, that I were a fool!

I am ambitious for a motley coat.

Duke S. Thou shalt have one.

Jaq.

It is my only suit;¹²

Provided that you weed your better judgments

Of all opinion that grows rank in them,

That I am wise. I must have liberty

Withal,¹³ as large a charter as the wind,¹⁴

To blow on whom I please; for so fools have:

And they that are most galled with my folly,

They most must laugh. And why, Sir, must they so?

The why is plain as way to parish church:

He, that a fool doth very wisely hit,

Doth very foolishly, although he smart,

Not to¹⁵ seem senseless of the bob; if not,

1) d. h. aus Mangel an Nahrung. So vorher (A. 2, Sc. 4) and faints for succour, und ähnlich in Two Gentlemen of Verona (A. 1, Sc. 2) Yet here they shall not lie, for catching cold. 2) Orlando denkt an ein wildes Thier, das er erlegen will, wenn er nicht selbst ihm zur Beute wird. 3) comfortable = für Trost empfänglich, der Ermuthigung fähig oder zugänglich. 4) So treibst Du Dein Spiel mit der Mühe, die ich mir mache, so vereitelst Du meine Anstrengung. — Da Adam bei diesen Worten lächelt, so fährt Orlando fort: Well said! = brav! — Vgl. zu dieser Scene Einleitung pag. 350.

1) Manche Hgg. bezeichnen diese Scene und die vorhergehende sechste mit The Same, was für die Sh.'sche Bühne ganz richtig ist, aber für die jetzigen Theatereinrichtungen nicht passt. Die sechste Scene muss durchaus an einem andern Orte gedacht werden, als die fünfte, auf deren Schauplatz dagegen die siebente Scene uns zurückführt. — A table set out ist derselbe Tisch, der vorher gedeckt worden. Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 5, Anm. 7. — Die Fol. hat hier nur Enter Duke Sen. and Lord, like Out-laws. Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 1, Anm. 1. 2) Der Herzog kann den Jaques nirgend in Gestalt eines Menschen finden und vermuthet deshalb scherzhaft, derselbe müsse wohl in ein Thier des Waldes verwandelt sein. 3) compact of jars = zusammengefügt aus Dissonanzen. 4) Dieser parenthetische Ausruf bezeichnet entweder Jaques' Misanthropie im Allgemeinen, oder geht auf die kläglichen Zustände der Welt, dass er sich an einem Narren erbauen muss. 5) Das lateinische Sprichwort Fortuna favet fatuis wird auch in Ben Jonson's Alchemist angeführt: Fortune, that favours fools, these two short hours || We wish away. 6) to wag familiär für to go oder to pass. 7) to moral = moralisiren, Betrachtungen anstellen über Etwas. 8) chanticleer = Hahn, wegen seiner hellen Stimme so genannt: Jaques schlug eine helle Lache an. 9) sans für without, zunächst in affectirter Rede, dann aber auch wegen des bequemeren Gebrauchs in Versen: ohne Unterbrechung eine Stunde lang nach der Uhr des Narren. 10) Das bunte Narrencostüm ist die einzige Tracht, die sich schickt, ist das beste Costüm in unserer Zeit. 11) strange places = seltsame Stellen aus Schriften, auffallende Citate, voll von Beobachtungsgabe, mit denen der Narr sein ausgetrocknetes Gehirn vollgestopft hat. — Das folgende the which bezieht sich auf strange places. 12) suit ist zugleich = Gesuch, Bitte, und = Tracht, sowie only zugleich = einzig, und = auserlesen. 13) withal = zugleich mit der Narrentracht. 14) So in K. Henry V. (A. 1, Sc. 1) The air, a charter'd libertine, is still. 15) not to ergänzte Theobald zur Vervollständigung des Sinnes wie des Verses: Derjenige, den ein Narr mit seinen Reden trifft, handelt sehr thöricht, wenn er sich nicht das Ansehen giebt, als sei er unempfindlich für den Stich, so sehr er sich auch verletzt fühlen mag. Thut er das nicht,

The wise man's folly is anatomiz'd
Even by the squandering glances of the fool.
Invest me in my motley: give me leave
To speak my mind, and I will through and through Cleanse the foul body of the infected world,
If they¹⁶ will patiently receive my medicine.

Duke S. Fie on thee! I can tell what thou wouldst do.

Jaq. What, for a counter,¹⁷ would I do but good?

Duke S. Most mischievous foul sin, in chiding sin:
For thou thyself hast been a libertine,
As sensual as the brutish sting itself;¹⁸
And all the embossed sores, and headed evils,¹⁹
That thou with license of free foot²⁰ hast caught,
Wouldst thou disgorge into the general world.

Jaq. Why, who cries out on pride,
That can therein tax any private party?
Doth it not flow as hugely as the sea,
Till that the weary very means do ebb?²¹
What woman in the city do I name,
When that I say, the city-woman bears
The cost of princes on unworthy shoulders?
Who can come in,²² and say that I mean her,
When such a one as she, such is her neighbour?
Or what is he of basest function,
That says, his bravery²³ is not on my cost,
Thinking that I mean him, but therein suits
His folly to the mettle of my speech?²⁴
There then; how then? what then? Let me see wherein
My tongue hath wrong'd him: if it do him right,
Then he hath wrong'd himself; if he be free,²⁵
Why, then my taxing like a wild-goose flies,
Unclaim'd of any man. — But who comes²⁶ here?

Enter ORLANDO, with his sword drawn.

Orl. Forbear, and eat no more.

Jaq. Why, I have eat none yet.

Orl. Nor shalt not, till necessity be serv'd.

Jaq. Of what kind should this cock come of?

Duke S. Art thou thus bolden'd, man, by thy distress,
Or else a rude despiser of good manners,
That in civility thou seem'st so empty?

Orl. You touch'd my vein at first:²⁷ the thorny point

Of bare distress hath ta'en from me the show
Of smooth civility; yet am I inland bred,²⁸
And know some nurture.²⁹ But forbear, I say:
He dies that touches any of this fruit,
Till I and my affairs are answered.

Jaq. An you will not be answered with reason,
I must die.

Duke S. What would you have? Your gentleness shall force,

More than your force move us to gentleness.

Orl. I almost die for food, and let me have it.

Duke S. Sit down and feed, and welcome to our table.

Orl. Speak you so gently? Pardon me, I pray you:
I thought, that all things had been savage here,
And therefore put I on the countenance
Of stern commandment. But whate'er you are,
That in this desert inaccessible,³⁰
Under the shade of melancholy boughs,
Lose and neglect the creeping hours of time,
If ever you have look'd on better days,
If ever been where bells have knoll'd to church,
If ever sat at any good man's feast,
If ever from your eyelids wip'd a tear,
And know what 't is to pity, and be pitied,
Let gentleness my strong enforcement be:
In the which hope, I blush, and hide my sword.

Duke S. True is it that we have seen better days,
And have with holy bell been knoll'd to church,
And sat at good men's feasts, and wip'd our eyes
Of drops that sacred pity hath engender'd;
And therefore sit you down in gentleness,
And take upon command³¹ what help we have,
That to your wanting may be minister'd.

Orl. Then, but forbear your food a little while.
Whiles, like a doe, I go to find my fawn,
And give it food.³² There is an old poor man,
Who after me hath many a weary step
Limp'd in pure love: till he be first suffic'd, so wird seine hinter der Weisheit versteckte Thorheit blossgelegt schon durch die sich überallhin zerstreuen den Streifschüsse des Narren. — he zu Anfange des Satzes ist identisch mit dem folgenden the wise man. 16) they geht auf world: die Menschen auf dieser kranken Welt. — to cleanse steht im ärztlichen Sinne für das gewöhnliche to purge. 17) for a counter = für einen Rechenpfennig, den Jaques auf die Behauptung verwetten will, dass er als privilegirter Narr nur Gutes bewirken würde. 18) So sinnlich wie der fleischliche Trieb, der sich im unvernünftigen Thiere regt. 19) headed ist synonym mit dem vorhergehenden embossed: die Uebel, die wie ein Geschwür eine Spitze gewonnen, sich gesammelt haben und zum Ausbruch reif sind. 20) Indem Dir in Deinen Lüsten freie Bewegung gestattet war. — So in Hamlet-(A. 3, Sc. 3) For we will fetters put upon this fear, Which now goes too free-footed. 21) So die Fol.: bis dass die erschöpften Mittel selbst zur Befriedigung des hoch einherfluthenden Stolzes ebbend oder schwinden. — Die meisten Hgg. lesen mit Pope the very very means; plausibler ist, wenn doch am alten Texte geändert werden soll, Staunton's Vorschlag, the very-weary oder weary-very means zu lesen. — Singer liest the wearer's very means. 22) to come in = vor Gericht kommen, klagend auftreten. 23) bravery = Kleiderstaat, Prunk: der Niedrigstgestellte, der auf meine allgemeinen Bemerkungen versetzt, sein Kleiderprunk gehe mich nichts an, da ich nicht dafür zu bezahlen brauche. 24) Er meint, dass ich auf ihn ziele, aber er passt seine eigene Narrheit nur dem Geiste meiner Rede an, bringt sie damit in Verbindung. — Für das folgende there then vermuthete Malone where then? 25) free = unverletzt, ohne Schuldbewusstsein. — Zu taxing vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 14. 26) Die Fol. hat come, was die zweite Folioausg. verbessert. 27) at first = gleich zuerst, in der ersten Vermuthung, scil. Art thou thus bolden'd, man, by thy distress? — Vgl. zu dieser Rede Orlando's die entsprechende bei Lodge, Einleitung pag. 350. 28) inland bred = im innern Lande aufgezogen. Das innere Land als Sitz feinerer Cultur wird dem upland oder outland, dem Sitze grösserer Rohheit, gegenübergestellt. 29) nurture = Erziehung, Bildung. 30) Sh. fand denselben Ausdruck in B. Riche's Adventures of Simonides (1580) and only acquainted himself with the solitariness of this inaccessible desert. 31) upon command erklärt Steevens mit at your own command, und Dyce mit at your will and pleasure. 32) Dasselbe Bild kehrt wieder in Venus and Adonis: Like a

Oppress'd with two weak evils,³³ age and hunger, —
I will not touch a bit.

Duke S. Go find him out,
And we will nothing waste till you return.

Orl. I thank ye, and be bless'd for your good comfort!
[Exit.]

Duke S. Thou seest, we are not all alone unhappy:
This wide and universal theatre
Presents more woful pageants than the scene
Wherein we play in.³⁴

Jaq. All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players:³⁵
They have their exits and their entrances;
And one man in his time plays many parts,
His acts being seven ages. At first, the infant,
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms.
Then,³⁶ the whining school-boy, with his satchel,
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school. And then, the lover,
Sighing like furnace, with a woful ballad
Made to his mistress' eyebrow. Then, a soldier,
Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the pard,
Jealous in honour, sudden³⁷ and quick in quarrel,
Seeking the bubble reputation
Even in the cannon's mouth. And then, the justice,
In fair round belly, with good capon lin'd,
With eyes severe, and beard of formal cut,³⁸
Full of wise saws and modern instances;³⁹
And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloons,⁴⁰
With spectacles on nose, and pouch on side;
His youthful hose well sav'd, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all,
That ends this strange eventful history,
Is second childishness, and mere oblivion;
Sans⁴¹ teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans every thing.

Re-enter ORLANDO, with ADAM.

Duke S. Welcome. Set down your venerable burden,
And let him feed.

Orl. I thank you most for him.

Adam. So had you need:
I scarce can speak to thank you for myself.

Duke S. Welcome; fall to: I will not trouble you
As yet to question you about your fortunes.
Give us some music; and, good cousin, sing.

SONG.

Ami. Blow, blow, thou winter wind,
Thou art not so unkind⁴²
As man's ingratitude;
Thy tooth is not so keen,
Because thou art not seen,⁴³
Although thy breath be rude.
Heigh, ho! sing, heigh, ho! unto the green holly:
Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere folly.
Then,⁴⁴ heigh, ho! the holly!
This life is most jolly.

Freeze, freeze, thou bitter sky,
That dost not bite so nigh

As benefits forgot:
Though thou the waters warp,⁴⁵
Thy sting is not so sharp
As friend remember'd⁴⁶ not.

Heigh, ho! sing, etc.

Duke S. If that you were the good Sir Rowland's son,
As you have whisper'd faithfully, you were,
And as mine eye doth his effigies witness
Most truly limn'd, and living in your face,
Be truly welcome hither. I am the duke,
That lov'd your father. The residue of your fortune,
Go to my cave and tell me. — Good old man,
Thou art right welcome as thy master⁴⁷ is.
Support him by the arm. — Give me your hand.
And let me all your fortunes understand. [Exeunt.]

milch doe, whose swelling dugs do ache, || Hasting to feed her fawn hid in some brake. 33) two weak evils = zwei Uebel, welche den Menschen matt und schwach machen. 34) Die Wiederholung der Präposition am Ende eines Relativsatzes oder Fragesatzes ist bei Sh. sehr gewöhnlich. So in Coriolanus (A. 2, Sc. 1) In what enormity is Marcius poor in, that you two have not in abundance? 35) Der lateinische Denkspruch des Petronius: Totus mundus agit histrionem war als Motto in dem Sh.'schen Globustheater angebracht, und in Edwards' altem Drama Damon and Pythias steht Pythagoras said that this world was like a stage || Whereon many play their parts. — Die zuerst dem Hippokrates zugeschriebene Eintheilung in sieben Lebensalter war lange vor Sh. vielfach in Schriften und bildlichen Darstellungen ausgeführt. 36) Manche Hgg. setzen des Verses wegen mit Pope and then. 37) sudden = jähzornig, rasch aufbrausend. 38) Der ehrbar und regelrecht zugestutzte Bart des Richters unterscheidet sich charakteristisch von dem vorhererwähnten wild flatternden, ungestutzten Soldatenbart (bearded like the pard). 39) modern instances = Gemeinplätze. — modern = gewöhnlich, herkömmlich, ist Sh.'sch. 40) pantaloons, ital. Pantalone, die stehende Figur des geprellten und eifersüchtigen Alten auf dem italienischen Theater. — Sh. hat das Wort auch in Taming of the Shrew (A. 3, Sc. 1) that we might beguile the old pantaloons. — Er wurde in Pantoffeln und mit der Brille auf der Nase dargestellt, wie er hier geschildert wird. 41) Vgl. oben Anm. 9. 42) Wenn der Winterwind scharf bläst, so thut er nur seiner Natur gemäss, während der Undank des Menschen den natürlichen Regungen widerstrebt. 43) Der schneidende Frost des Windes ist leichter zu ertragen, als der Undank des Menschen, weil er uns nicht sichtlich entgegentritt, nicht auch dem Auge sich aufdrängt, welches den Anblick des Undankbaren zu ertragen hat. 44) then verbessert Rowe das the der Fol. 45) to warp = schrumpfen, zusammenziehen, deuten die Commentatoren hier theils von dem Frost, der das Wasser zu Eise gefrieren lässt, theils von dem Winde, der das Wasser stürmisch bewegt. Die erstere Erklärung ist die plausiblere. Ein altes angelsächsisches Sprichwort lautet genau übersetzt: Winter shall warp water. 46) remember'd erklärt Malone hier mit remembering, weil to be remembered = an eine Sache sich erinnern, heisst. — Natürlicher scheint hier die gewöhnliche Bedeutung des passiven Particips: wie ein Freund, der vergessen wird, wie das Vergessen eines Freundes. 47) So verbessert die zweite Folioausg. das masters der ersten Fol. — Auf diese Scene bezieht sich die Tradition, welche den Dichter selbst als Darsteller des Adam auf seiner Bühne uns überliefert hat. Vgl. Biographische Nachrichten, Erläuterungen und Beilagen, 24.

ACT III.

SCENE I.

A Room in the Palace.

Enter Duke FREDERICK, OLIVER, and Attendants.

Duke F. Not see him since? ¹ Sir, Sir, that cannot be: But were I not the better part made mercy, I should not seek an absent argument ² Of my revenge, thou present. But look to it: Find out thy brother, wheresoe'er he is; Seek him with candle; ³ bring him, dead or living, Within this twelvemonth, or turn thou no more To seek a living in our territory. Thy lands, and all things that thou dost call thine, Worth seizure, do we seize into our hands, Till thou canst quit thee by thy brother's mouth, Of what we think against thee.

Oli. O, that your highness knew my heart in this! I never lov'd my brother in my life.

Duke F. More villain thou. — Well, push him out of doors;

And let my officers of such a nature Make an extent upon ⁴ his house and lands.

Do this expediently, ⁵ and turn him going. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The Forest of Arden.

Enter ORLANDO, with a paper.

Orl. Hang there, my verse, in witness of my love: And thou, thrice-crowned queen of night, ¹ survey With thy chaste eye, from thy pale sphere above, Thy huntress' name, that my full life doth sway. O Rosalind! these trees shall be my books, And in their barks my thoughts I'll character, That every eye, which in this forest looks, Shall see thy virtue witness'd every where. Run, run, Orlando: carve on every tree The fair, the chaste, and unexpressive ² she. [Exit.]

Enter CORIN and TOUCHSTONE.

Cor. And how like you this shepherd's life, Master Touchstone?

Touch. Truly, shepherd, in respect of itself, it is a good life, but in respect that it is a shepherd's life, it is naught. In respect that it is solitary, I like it very well; but in respect that it is private, it is a very vile life. Now, in respect it is in the fields, it pleaseth me well; but in respect it is not in the court, it is tedious. As it is a spare life, look you, it fits my humour well; but as there is no more plenty in it, it goes much against my stomach. Hast any philosophy in thee, shepherd?

Cor. No more, but that I know, the more one sickens, the worse at ease he is; and that he that wants money, means, and content, is without three good friends; that the property of rain is to wet, and fire to burn; that good pasture makes fat sheep, and that a great cause of the night is lack of the sun; that he that hath learned no wit by nature nor art may complain of good breeding, ³ or comes of a very dull kindred.

Touch. Such a one is a natural philosopher. ⁴ Wast ever in court, shepherd?

Cor. No, truly.

Touch. Then thou art damned.

Cor. Nay, I hope. —

Touch. Truly, thou art damned, like an ill-roasted egg, all on one side. ⁵

Cor. For not being at court? Your reason.

Touch. Why, if thou never wast at court, thou never saw'st good manners; if thou never saw'st good manners, then thy manners ⁶ must be wicked; and wickedness is sin, and sin is damnation. Thou art in a parlous ⁷ state, shepherd.

Cor. Not a whit, Touchstone: those that are good manners at the court are as ridiculous in the country, as the behaviour of the country is most mockable at the court. You told me, you salute not at the court, but you kiss your hands: that courtesy would be uncleanly, if courtiers were shepherds.

Touch. Instance, briefly; come, instance.

Cor. Why, we are still handling our ewes, and their fells, you know, are greasy.

Touch. Why, do not your courtier's hands sweat? and is not the grease of a mutton as wholesome as the sweat of a man? Shallow, shallow. A better instance, I say; come.

Cor. Besides, our hands are hard.

Touch. Your lips will feel them the sooner: shallow again. A more sounder instance; come.

1) Oliver hat so eben betheuert, dass er den Orlando seit seiner Rückkehr von dem Ringkampfe nicht gesehen habe: I did not see him since oder so. 2) argument of revenge = Thema, mit dem die Rache sich zu beschäftigen hat, daher = Gegenstand der Rache. 3) Steevens citirt dazu aus der englischen Bibel, Evang. Luc. (Cap. 15, V. 8) if she lose one piece, doth she not light a candle, — and seek diligently till she find it? 4) to make an extent upon = Beschlag auf Etwas legen. 5) expediently = fördernd, thunlichst rasch. — Sh. sagt überall expedient und expedience für expeditious und expedition. — Vgl. zu dieser Scene Einleitung pag. 350 u. 351.

1) So heisst es von der Luna in Midsummer-Night's Dream (A. 5, Sc. 2) the triple Hecate's team, und ebenso in Chapman's Hymns: Nature's bright eye-sight, and the Night's fair soul, || That with thy triple forehead dost control || Earth, seas, and hell. 2) unexpressive = was sich nicht darstellen, nicht schildern lässt, ein Sh.'sches Wort, wie es scheint. — Bei Lodge gräbt Rosalind seine Verse in die Rinde der Bäume ein: desirous to discover his woes to the woodes he engraved with his knife on the bark of a mir tre, this pretie estimate of his mistress perfection. 3) may complain of good breeding erklärt Johnson richtiger mit may complain of the want of good breeding, als Malone mit may complain of a good education for being so inefficient, of so little use to him. — Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 6, Anm. 1. 4) natural philosopher = Naturphilosoph, und = ursprünglicher, ungeschulter Philosoph. 5) all on one side bezieht sich auf ill-roasted: ein Ei, das nur an einem Ende, also schlecht, geröstet ist. So wird auch der Schäfer in der Hölle geröstet werden, weil er nicht am Hofe gewesen ist. 6) manners = Lebensart, Manierlichkeit im Aeussern, und = Gesittung, Moral im Innern. 7) parlous, aus perilous entstell, ist schon vor Sh. häufig. 8) So heisst es in Much Ado about

Cor. And they are often tarred over with the surgery of our sheep; and would you have us kiss tar? The courtier's hands are perfumed with civet.⁸

Touch. Most shallow man! Thou worms-meat, in respect of a good piece of flesh, indeed! — Learn of the wise, and perpend: civet is of a baser birth than tar; the very uncleanly flux of a cat.⁹ Mend the instance, shepherd.

Cor. You have too courtly a wit for me: I'll rest.

Touch. Wilt thou rest damned? God help thee, shallow man! God make incision in thee!¹⁰ thou art raw.

Cor. Sir, I am a true labourer: I earn that I eat, get that I wear; owe no man hate, envy no man's happiness, glad of other men's good, content with my harm;¹¹ and the greatest of my pride is, to see my ewes graze and my lambs suck.

Touch. That is another simple¹² sin in you, to bring the ewes and the rams together, and to offer to get your living by the copulation of cattle; to be bawd to a bell-wether, and to betray a she-lamb of a twelvemonth, to a crooked-pated, old, cuckoldly ram, out of all reasonable match. If thou be'st not damned for this, the devil himself will have no shepherds: I cannot see else how thou shouldst scape.

Cor. Here comes young Master Ganymede, my new mistress's brother.

Enter ROSALIND, reading a paper.

Ros. From the east¹³ to western Ind,
No jewel is like Rosalind.
Her worth, being mounted on the wind,
Through all the world bears Rosalind.
All the pictures, fairest lin'd,¹⁴
Are but black to Rosalind.
Let no face be kept in mind,
But the fair¹⁵ of Rosalind.

Touch. I'll rhyme you so eight years together, dinners, and suppers, and sleeping hours excepted: it is the right butter-women's rank to market.¹⁶

Ros. Out, fool!

Touch. For a taste: —

»If a hart do lack a hind,
Let him seek out Rosalind.
If the cat will after kind,
So, be sure, will Rosalind.
Winter garments¹⁷ must be lin'd,
So must slender Rosalind.
They that reap must sheaf and bind,
Then to cart with Rosalind.
Sweetest nut hath sourest rind,
Such a nut is Rosalind.
He that sweetest rose will find,
Must find love's prick, and Rosalind.¹⁸

This is the very false gallop¹⁹ of verses: why do you infect yourself with them?

Ros. Peace! ycu dull fool: I found them on a tree.

Touch. Truly, the tree yields bad fruit.

Ros. I'll graff it with you, and then I shall graff it with a medlar:²⁰ then it will be the earliest fruit i' the country; for you'll be rotten ere you be half ripe, and that's the right virtue of the medlar.

Touch. You have said; but whether wisely or no, let the forest judge.

Ros. Peace!

Here comes my sister, reading: stand aside.

Enter CELIA, reading a paper.

Cel. Why should this a desert be?²⁰
For it is unpeopled? No;
Tongues I'll hang on every tree,
That shall civil sayings²¹ show.
Some, how brief the life of man
Runs his erring pilgrimage,
That the stretching of a span
Buckles in his sum of age.
Some, of violated vows
'Twixt the souls of friend and friend:
But upon the fairest boughs,
Or at every sentence' end,
Will I Rosalinda write;
Teaching all that read, to know
The quintessence of every sprite

Nothing (A. 3, Sc. 2) von Benedick, der den feinen Herrn zu spielen anfängt. u. A.: nay, he rubs himself with civet. 9) Mit cat ist hier die Zibethkatze gemeint, musk-cat wie sie in All's well that ends well (A. 5, Sc. 2) genannt wird. 10) Gott curire Dich! — to make incision bezeichnet eigentlich eine chirurgische Operation. — raw = roh, unwissend. 11) Ich klage nicht über das mir beschiedene Ungemach, finde mich in mein Leid. 12) simple sin = Sünde, die aus der Einfalt entspringt, und = einfache, unzweifelhafte Sünde. 13) east ist adjectivisch und gehört wie western zu Ind. So in Merry Wives of Windsor (A. 1, Sc. 3) they shall be my East and West Indies. — Die beiden Indien werden hier als die juwelenreichen Länder aufgefasst. 14) to line = skizziren, zeichnen, von dem substantivischen line = Linie, Strich. Die Fol. hat Lind. — Manche Hgg. setzen ohne Noth linn'd dafür. — fair = schön, und = hellfarbig, ist der gewöhnliche Gegensatz zu black = dunkelfarbig, und = hässlich. — to Rosalind = im Vergleich mit, im Verhältniss zu Rosalinde. 15) fair = Schönheit, in demselben Sinne wie bei Lodge: And hers the fair which all men do respect. — Die späteren Folioausgg. lesen den Vers But the most fair Rosalind, was auch Rowe noch beibehielt. — Pope setzte face für fair. 16) Die Verse gehen, alle mit demselben Reime, so einer hinter dem andern her, wie die Weiber, die Butter zu Markt tragen, eine hinter der andern hergehen. — rank = Reihe, ist von manchen Hggn. mit Hammer ohne Grund in rate verändert. 17) So verbessern die letzten Folioausgg. das wintred garments der Fol. und zweiten Folioausg. von 1632. 18) false gallop ist, wenn das Pferd mit dem verkehrten Fusse anspringt und so zu galoppiren fortfährt. Von hinkenden Versen hatte schon vor Sh. Nashe in seinem Apologie for Pierce Penniless (1593) dieses Gleichniss gebraucht: I would trot a false gallop through the rest of his ragged verses. 19) Das Wortspiel von medlar = Mispel, und meddler = Zwischenträger, der sich in fremde Angelegenheiten mischt, hat Sh. auch in Timon of Athens (A. 4, Sc. 3). — Die Mispel, die sonst die späteste Frucht im Jahr und erst angefault essbar ist, wird die früheste Frucht werden, wenn man sie mit dem schon vor der Reife verfaulten Narren impft. 20) a vor desert fügte Rowe ein. — Manche Hgg. lesen dagegen mit Tyrwhitt: Why should this desert silent be? — Das folgende for steht für because. 21) civil sayings = Sprüche aus dem civilisirten Leben, aus der gebildeten Menschenwelt, im Gegensatz zu a desert. 22) in little = in Miniatur, zu einem Bilde

Heaven would in little show.²²
 Therefore Heaven Nature charg'd
 That one body should be fill'd
 With all graces wide enlarg'd:
 Nature presently distill'd
 Helen's cheek, but not her²³ heart,
 Cleopatra's majesty,
 Atalanta's better part,²⁴
 Sad Lucretia's modesty.
 Thus Rosalind of many parts
 By heavenly synod²⁵ was devis'd,
 Of many faces, eyes, and hearts,
 To have the touches dearest priz'd.
 Heaven would that she these gifts should have,
 And I to live and die her slave.²⁶

Ros. O most gentle Jupiter! — what tedious homily of love have you wearied your parishioners withal, and never cried, »Have patience, good people!«

Cel. How now? back-friends.²⁷ — Shepherd, go off a little: — go with him, sirrah.

Touch. Come, shepherd, let us make an honourable retreat; though not with bag and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage.²⁸ [Exeunt CORIN and TOUCHSTONE.]

Cel. Didst thou hear these verses?

Ros. O! yes, I heard them all, and more too; for some of them had in them more feet than the verses would bear.

Cel. That's no matter: the feet might bear the verses.

Ros. Ay, but the feet were lame, and could not bear themselves without the verse, and therefore stood lamely in the verse.

Cel. But didst thou hear without wondering, how thy name should be hanged and carved upon these trees?

Ros. I was seven of the nine days out of the wonder,²⁹ before you came; for look here what I found on a palm-tree: I was never so be-rhymed since Pythagoras' time, that I was an Irish rat,³⁰ which I can hardly remember.

Cel. Trow you, who hath done this?

Ros. Is it a man?

Cel. And a chain, that you once wore, about his neck.³¹ Change you colour?

Ros. I pr'ythee, who?

Cel. O Lord, Lord! it is a hard matter for friends to meet; but mountains may be removed with earthquakes, and so encounter.³²

Ros. Nay, but who is it?

Cel. Is it possible?

Ros. Nay, I pr'ythee, now, with most petitionary vehemence, tell me who it is.

Cel. O, wonderful, wonderful, and most wonderful wonderful! and yet again wonderful! and after that, out of all whooping!³³

Ros. Good my complexion!³⁴ dost thou think, though I am caparison'd like a man, I have a doublet and hose in my disposition? One inch of delay more is a South-sea of discovery;³⁵ I pr'ythee, tell me, who is it, quickly, and speak apace. I would thou couldst stammer, that thou mightst pour this concealed man out of thy mouth, as wine comes out of a narrow-mouth'd bottle; either too much at once, or none at all. I pr'ythee, take the cork out of thy mouth, that I may drink thy tidings.

Cel. So you may put a man in your belly.

Ros. Is he of God's making? What manner of man? Is his head worth a hat, or his chin worth a beard?

Cel. Nay, he hath but a little beard.

Ros. Why, God will send more, if the man will be thankful. Let me stay the growth of his beard, if thou delay me not the knowledge of his chin.

Cel. It is young Orlando, that tripp'd up the wrestler's heels and your heart, both in an instant.

im Kleinen zusammengefasst: indem Orlando überall Rosalindens Namen einschreibt, will er Jeden, der lesen kann, erkennen lehren, dass der Himmel in ihr die Quintessenz aller Geister vereinigt zeigen wollte. 23) Die Fol. hat his, was Rowe verbesserte. 24) Die Commentatoren streiten darüber, was Sh. unter Atalanta's better part verstanden habe: ihre geistigen oder ihre körperlichen Vorzüge, ihre Jungfräulichkeit oder ihre im Wettlauf erprobte Schnelligkeit. Am einfachsten erscheint Steevens' Vermuthung, dass Sh. keine bestimmte und besondere Eigenschaft im Auge gehabt, sondern nur: the best part about her, such as was most commended. 25) synod gebraucht Sh. vorzugsweise von der Versammlung der Götter im Olymp: so wurde Rosalinde durch Götterbeschluss geschaffen und zusammengesetzt aus vielen einzelnen Gaben, die sonst an Andern sich nur zerstreut finden, aus verschiedenen Angesichtern, Augen und Herzen, so dass sie in sich alle Züge (touches) vereinigt, die am theuersten geschätzt werden. 26) Der Himmel wollte, dass ich als ihr Sklave leben und sterben soll. 27) back-friends = Freunde hinterm Rücken, ruft Celia aus, da sie plötzlich sich von Rosalinde und den Andern belauscht sieht. — Manche Hgg. interpungiren back, friends = zurück, Freunde. — back-friend hat Sh. in Comedy of Errors (A. 4, Sc. 2). 28) scrippage ist aus scrip = Hirtentasche, so gebildet wie baggage aus bag. — Letzteres wird von dem Rückzug eines Kriegsheeres gesagt, und passt daher nicht auf Hirten, wie Corin und Touchstone. 29) Ein Wunder hält nach dem Sprichwort neun Tage vor. So in K. Henry VI. Third Part (A. 3, Sc. 2) Gloster. That would be ten days' wonder at the least. — Clarence. That's a day longer than a wonder lasts. 30) Dass man in Irland die Ratten durch gereimte Zaubersprüche bannte und tödtete, wird auch bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen erwähnt, so in Ben Jonson's Poetaster: Rhyme them to death, as they do Irish rats || In drumming tunes. — Anspielungen auf die Lehre des Pythagoras von der Seelenwanderung hat Sh. an verschiedenen Stellen, so in Twelfth-Night (A. 4, Sc. 2) und in Merchant of Venice (A. 4, Sc. 1). 31) Sie spielt an auf die Kette, welche Rosalinde dem Orlando (A. 1, Sc. 2 am Schlusse) überreicht hatte. 32) Ein Sprichwort in Ray's Sammlung lautet: Friends may meet, but mountains never greet. — Sh. fand in Holland's Plinius: Two hills removed by an earthquake, encountered together, charging as it were, and with violence assaulting one another, and retiring again with a most mighty noise. 33) out of all whooping = über alles Geschrei hinaus, über die Massen. — Gewöhnlicher heisst es out of all cry. 34) Nach Malone's Meinung redet damit Rosalinde scherzhaft ihr eignes weibliches Naturell an, das sich vor Neugierde nicht länger hält. — Natürlich erscheint es, dass der Ausruf der Celia gelte, vielleicht in Bezug auf deren frühere Worte Change you colour? 35) Farmer las off für of und erklärte: eine Entdeckung, die so fern liegt wie die Südsee. — Ungefähr derselbe Sinn lässt sich jedoch auch mit der alten Lesart verbinden: wenn ich nur einen Zoll weit von der Kunde entfernt bleibe, wer der Mann ist, so ist das ebenso, als wenn es eine ganze Südsee wäre, die zu erforschen oder zu entdecken bliebe. — Johnson vermuthete a South-sea

Ros. Nay, but the devil take mocking: speak sad brow, and true maid.³⁶

Cel. I' faith, coz, 't is he.

Ros. Or'lando?

Cel. Orlando.

Ros. Alas the day! what shall I do with my doublet and hose? — What did he, when thou saw'st him? What said he? How look'd he? Wherein went he?³⁷ What makes he here? Did he ask for me? Where remains he? How parted he with thee, and when shalt thou see him again? Answer me in one word.

Cel. You must borrow me Gargantua's mouth³⁸ first: 't is a word³⁹ too great for any mouth of this age's size. To say, ay, and no, to these particulars is more than to answer in a catechism.

Ros. But doth he know that I am in this forest, and in man's apparel? Looks he as freshly as he did the day he wrestled?

Cel. It is as easy to count atomies, as to resolve the propositions of a lover:⁴⁰ but take a taste of my finding him, and relish it with good observance.⁴¹ I found him under a tree, like a dropped acorn.

Ros. It may well be call'd Jove's tree, when it drops forth such fruit.⁴²

Cel. Give me audience, good Madam.

Ros. Proceed.

Cel. There lay he, stretch'd along like a wounded knight.

Ros. Though it be pity to see such a sight, it well becomes the ground.⁴³

Cel. Cry, holla! to thy tongue.⁴⁴ I pr'ythee; it curvets unseasonably. He was furnish'd like a hunter.

Ros. O ominous! he comes to kill my heart.⁴⁵

Cel. I would sing my song without a burden: thou bring'st me out of tune.

Ros. Do you not know I am a woman? when I think, I must speak. Sweet,⁴⁶ say on.

Cel. You bring me out.⁴⁷ — Soft! comes he not here?

Ros. 'T is he: slink by, and note him.

[ROSALIND and CELIA retire.]

Enter ORLANDO and JAQUES.

Jaq. I thank you for your company; but, good faith, I had as lief have been myself alone.

Orl. And so had I; but yet, for fashion sake, I thank you too for your society.

Jaq. Good bye, you: let 's meet as little as we can.

Orl. I do desire we may be better strangers.

Jaq. I pray you, mar no more trees with writing love-songs in their barks.

Orl. I pray you, mar no more⁴⁸ of my verses with reading them ill-favouredly.

Jaq. Rosalind is your love's name?

Orl. Yes, just.

Jaq. I do not like her name.

Orl. There was no thought of pleasing you, when he was christened.

Jaq. What stature is she of?

Orl. Just as high as my heart.

Jaq. You are full of pretty answers. Have you not been acquainted with goldsmiths' wives, and conn'd them out of rings?⁴⁹

Orl. Not so; but I answer you right painted cloth, from whence you have studied your questions.⁵⁰

Jaq. You have a nimble wit: I think 't was made of Atalanta's heels.⁵¹ Will you sit down with me? and we two will rail against our mistress the world, and all our misery.

Orl. I will chide no breather in the world,⁵² but myself, against whom I know most faults.

Jaq. The worst fault you have, is to be in love.

Orl. 'T is a fault I will not change for your best virtue. I am weary of you.

Jaq. By my troth, I was seeking for a fool when I found you.

Orl. He is drown'd in the brook: look but in, and you shall see him.

Jaq. There I shall see mine own figure.

Orl. Which I take to be either a fool, or a cypher.

Jaq. I'll tarry no longer with you. Farewell, good Signior Love.

discovery. 36) Sprich mit ernster Miene und als ein aufrichtiges Mädchen. — So wird to speak auch sonst construiert, z. B. in Othello (A. 2, Sc. 3) drunk? and speak parrot? und in K. Henry V. (A. 5, Sc. 2) I speak to thee plain soldier. 37) In welcher Tracht ging er? wie trug er sich? 38) Gargantua, der fabelhafte Riese des französischen Satyrikers Rabelais, der fünf Pilger in einer Salatschüssel auf einmal verschlang, war zu Sh.'s Zeit auch in England durch Volksbücher, wie The History of Gargantua (1594), vielfach bekannt. 39) d. h. ein Wort, das auf alle neun Fragen Rosalindens Antwort geben könnte. 40) Die Fragen oder Räthsel beantworten oder lösen, die ein Verliebter uns vorlegt. 41) Manche Hgg. ändern ohne Grund with a good observance. 42) such ergänzt erst die zweite Folioausg. von 1632. — it steht, als ob Celia oak statt tree gesagt hätte; doch ist die Eiche hinlänglich durch dropped acorn bezeichnet. — Als Baum des Jupiter wird die Eiche auch erwähnt in Tempest (A. 5, Sc. 1) Jove's stout oak. 43) Ein solcher Anblick steht dem Boden gut an, ziert den Boden. So in Hamlet (A. 5, Sc. 2) such a sight as this becomes the field. 44) thy tongue setzt Rowe für the tongue der Fol. — holla! ist der Zuruf, mit dem der Reiter das wild courbettirende Pferd zum Stillstehen bringt und beruhigt. So in Venus and Adonis: What recketh he his rider's angry stir, || His flattering holla, or his „Stand, I say“? — Steevens und Malone setzen ohne Autorität very vor unseasonably. 45) Das Wortspiel zwischen heart und hart ist Sh. sehr geläufig. 46) sweet, ein Ausruf schmeichelnden Zuredens oder der Ermuthigung. 47) Du bringst mich aus dem Concept. 48) Die Fol. hat das veraltete more für more. 49) Solche sinnreiche Sprüche wurden in Ringe eingegraben, und Orlando lernte sie vermuthlich in Goldschmiedläden kennen, als er mit den Weibern der Goldschmiede sich zu schaffen machte. 50) Auf den alten Wandtapeten waren oft neben einander stehende menschliche Figuren gemalt, aus deren Munde Sprüche, in Gestalt von Rede und Antwort, hervorgingen. Von diesen hat Jaques die Frage, Orlando die entsprechende Antwort studirt. — to answer right painted cloth = genau im Styl der Tapeten antworten, ist construiert wie vorher to speak (vgl. oben Anm. 36). 51) Vgl. oben Anm. 24. 52) Kein athmendes oder lebendes Wesen auf der Welt. So hat Sh. in den Sonnets (81) When all the breathers of this world are dead. 53) Auf den affectirten Titel Signior antwortet Orlando mit dem eben so affectirten Monsieur; Beide in persiflirender Absicht. So kommt eben so höhnisch in Pericles (A. 1, Sc. 2) Signior Sooth, und in K. Henry IV. First Part (A. 1, Sc. 2) Monsieur Remorse vor. 54) scil. I do hear very well. 55) Dieselbe

Orl. I am glad of your departure. Adieu, good Monsieur⁵³ Melancholy.

[Exit JAQUES. — ROSALIND and CELIA come forward.]

Ros. [Aside to CELIA.] I will speak to him like a saucy lackey, and under that habit play the knave with him. — Do you hear, forester?

Orl. Very well:⁵⁴ what would you?

Ros. I pray you, what is 't o'clock?

Orl. You should ask me, what time o'clock: there 's no clock in the forest.

Ros. Then, there is no true lover in the forest; else sighing every minute,⁵⁵ and groaning every hour, would detect the lazy foot of Time as well as a clock.

Orl. And why not the swift foot of Time? had not that been as proper?

Ros. By no means, Sir. Time travels in divers paces with divers persons. I'll tell you, who Time ambles withal, who Time trots withal, who Time gallops withal, and who he stands still withal.

Orl. I pr'ythee, who doth he trot withal?

Ros. Marry, he trots hard⁵⁶ with a young maid, between the contract of her marriage, and the day it is solemnized: if the interim be but a se'nnight, Time's pace is so hard that it seems the length of seven years.

Orl. Who ambles Time withal?

Ros. With a priest that lacks Latin, and a rich man that hath not the gout; for the one sleeps easily, because he cannot study; and the other lives merrily, because he feels no pain: the one lacking the burden of lean and wasteful⁵⁷ learning; the other knowing no burden of heavy tedious penury. These Time ambles withal.

Orl. Who doth he gallop withal?

Ros. With a thief to the gallows; for though he go as softly as foot can fall, he thinks himself too soon there.

Orl. Who stays it still withal?

Ros. With lawyers in the vacation; for they sleep between term and term, and then they perceive not how Time moves.

Orl. Where dwell you, pretty youth?

Ros. With this shepherdess, my sister; here in the skirts of the forest, like fringe upon a petticoat.

Orl. Are you native of this place?

Ros. As the cony, that you see dwell where she is kindled.

Orl. Your accent is something finer than you could purchase in so removed a dwelling.⁵⁸

Ros. I have been told so of many: but, indeed, an old religious uncle of mine taught me to speak, who was in his youth an inland man;⁵⁹ one that knew courtship too well, for there he fell in love. I have heard him read many lectures against it; and I thank God, I am not a woman, to be touched with so many giddy offences, as he hath generally taxed their whole sex withal.

Orl. Can you remember any of the principal evils that he laid to the charge of women?

Ros. There were none principal: they were all like one another, as half-pence are; every one fault seeming monstrous, till its fellow fault came to match it.

Orl. I pr'ythee, recount some of them.

Ros. No; I will not cast away my physic but on those that are sick. There is a man haunts the forest, that abuses our young plants with carving Rosalind on their barks; hangs odes upon hawthorns, and elegies on brambles; all, forsooth, deifying the name of Rosalind: if I could meet that fancy-monger,⁶⁰ I would give him some good counsel, for he seems to have the quotidian of love upon him.

Orl. I am he that is so love-shaken.⁶¹ I pray you, tell me your remedy.

Ros. There is none of my uncle's marks upon you: he taught me how to know a man in love; in which cage of rushes, I am sure, you are⁶² not prisoner.

Orl. What were his marks?

Ros. A lean cheek, which you have not; a blue eye,⁶³ and sunken, which you have not; an unquestionable⁶⁴ spirit, which you have not; a beard neglected, which you have not: — but I pardon you for that, for simply, your having⁶⁵ in beard is a younger brother's revenue. — Then, your hose should be ungartered,⁶⁶ your bonnet unbanded, your sleeve unbuttoned, your shoe untied, and every thing about you demonstrating a careless desolation. But you are no such man: you are rather point-device⁶⁷ in your accoutrements; as loving yourself, than seeming the lover of any other.

Orl. Fair youth, I would I could make thee believe I love.

Ros. Me believe it? you may as soon make her that you love believe it; which I warrant, she is apter to do, than to confess she does; that is one of the points in the which women still give the lie to their consciences. But, in good sooth, are you he that hangs the verses on the trees, wherein Rosalind is so admired?

Orl. I swear to thee, youth, by the white hand of Rosalind, I am that he, that unfortunate he.

Ros. But are you so much in love as your rhymes speak?

Orl. Neither rhyme nor reason⁶⁸ can express how much.

Zeitrechnung ist in K. Richard II. (A. 5, Sc. 5) so sighs, and tears, and groans, show minutes, times, and hours. 56) to trot hard muss nach dem Zusammenhange hier eine schwerfällige, lästig stossende Bewegung des Pferdes andeuten, im Gegensatz zu dem folgenden to amble, das einen leichten, angenehmen und bequemen Passgang bezeichnet. 57) wasteful = verzehrend, abzehrend, bestimmt näher den Begriff des vorhergehenden lean = abmagernd. 58) to purchase = sich aneignen; removed = entlegen, abgelegen. 59) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 7, Anm. 28. — Auf inland bezieht sich das folgende there he fell in love. 60) fancy-monger, der sich mit Liebeschwärmerei befasst, sich ein Geschäft daraus macht, verliebt zu sein. — deifying verbessern die späteren Folioausgg. das deifying der Fol. 61) love-shaken = von der Liebe geschüttelt, wie vom Fieber, bezieht sich auf quotidian of love = ein täglich wiederkehrendes Liebesfieber. — In Othello (A. 2, Sc. 1) findet sich dasselbe Particip wind-shaken. 62) you art in der Fol. 63) blue eye = Auge mit blauen Rändern. So in Tempest (A. 1, Sc. 2) this blue-ey'd hag. 64) unquestionable = mit dem sich nicht sprechen lässt, wortkarg. 65) having = Besitzthum: was Ihr an Bart besitzt, ist so gering, wie das Einkommen eines jüngern Bruders. 66) Dieses Merkmal eines Liebhabers, der, in Gedanken vertieft, sein Aeusseres vernachlässigt und seine Kniegürtel festzubinden vergisst, hat Sh. auch in Two Gentlemen of Verona (A. 2, Sc. 1) when you chid at Sir Proteus for going ungartered. 67) point-device = der pedantisch auf alles Aeusserliche hält. 68) Dieselbe sprichwörtliche Zusammenstellung ist in Comedy of Errors (A. 2, Sc. 2) When, in the why, and the wherefore, is neither rhyme

Ros. Love is merely a madness; and, I tell you, deserves as well a dark house⁶⁹ and a whip as madmen do; and the reason why they are not so punished and cured, is, that the lunacy is so ordinary, that the whippers⁷⁰ are in love too. Yet I profess curing it by counsel.

Orl. Did you ever cure any so?

Ros. Yes, one; and in this manner. He was to imagine me his love, his mistress, and I set him every day to woo me: at which time would I, being but a moonish⁷¹ youth, grieve, be effeminate, changeable, longing, and liking; proud, fantastical, apish, shallow, inconstant, full of tears, full of smiles; for every passion something, and for no passion truly anything, as boys and women are, for the most part, cattle of this colour; would now like him, now loathe him; then entertain him, then forswear him; now weep for him, then spit at him; that I drave my suitor from his mad humour of love, to a living humour of madness,⁷² which was, to forswear the full stream of the world, and to live in a nook merely monastic. And thus I cured him; and this way will I take upon me to wash your liver as clean as a sound sheep's heart,⁷³ that there shall not be one spot of love in 't.

Orl. I would not be cured, youth.

Ros. I would cure you, if you would but call me Rosalind, and come every day to my cote, and woo me.

Orl. Now, by the faith of my love, I will. Tell me where it is.

Ros. Go with me to it, and I'll show it you; and, by the way, you shall tell me where in the forest you live. Will you go?

Orl. With all my heart, good youth.

Ros. Nay, you must call me Rosalind. — Come, sister, will you go? [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Another Part of the Forest.

Enter TOUCHSTONE and AUDREY; JACQUES behind, observing them.

Touch. Come apace, good Audrey: I will fetch up your goats, Audrey. And how, Audrey? am I the man yet? doth my simple feature content you?

Aud. Your features? Lord warrant us! what features?¹

Touch. I am here with thee and thy goats, as the most capricious poet, honest Ovid, was among the Goths.²

Jaq. [Aside.] O knowledge ill-inhabited, worse than Jove in a thatched house!³

Touch. When a man's verses cannot be understood, nor a man's good wit seconded with the forward child Understanding, it strikes a man more dead than a great reckoning in a little room.⁴ — Truly, I would the gods had made thee poetical.

Aud. I do not know what poetical is. Is it honest in deed and word? Is it a true thing?

Touch. No, truly, for the truest poetry is the most feigning; and lovers are given to poetry, and what they swear in poetry, may be said, as lovers they do feign.⁵

Aud. Do you wish then, that the gods had made me poetical?

Touch. I do, truly; for thou swear'st to me, thou art honest: now, if thou wert a poet, I might have some hope thou didst feign.

Aud. Would you not have me honest?

Touch. No, truly, unless thou wert hard-favour'd,⁶ for honesty coupled to beauty, is to have honey a sauce to sugar.

Jaq. [Aside.] A material fool.⁷

Aud. Well, I am not fair, and therefore I pray the gods make me honest.

Touch. Truly, and to cast away honesty upon a foul slut were to put good meat into an unclean dish.

Aud. I am not a slut, though I thank the gods I am foul.⁸

Touch. Well, praised be the gods for thy foulness: sluttishness may come hereafter. But be it as it may be, I will marry thee; and to that end, I have been with Sir Oliver Mar-text, the vicar of the next village, who hath promised to meet me in this place of the forest, and to couple us.

Jaq. [Aside.] I would fain see this meeting.

nor reason. 69) dark house = Zelle für Irre. 70) whippers = die Leute, welche eigentlich die Peitsche bei den Verrückten handhaben sollten, sie aber nicht handhaben, weil sie selber verliebt sind. 71) moonish = veränderlich wie der Mond, launisch. 72) Manche Hgg. setzen, um einen vollkommeneren Gegensatz zu dem Vorhergehenden zu gewinnen: to a loving humour of madness. Indess lässt sich die alte Lesart rechtfertigen, sei es, dass man living mit Knight im Sinne von actual, positive fasst, oder wie Malone a living humour of madness als a mad humour of life versteht. Letztere Erklärung wird gestützt durch das folgende which was, to forswear etc. 73) Steevens dehnt die Vergleichung auch auf das Ausspülen und Reinwaschen des Herzens eines geschlachteten Schafes aus. Vielleicht ist aber nur der Sinn der, dass Rosalinde die Leber, den Sitz der Leidenschaft, von aller Liebe so rein waschen will, wie ein gesundes Schafherz davon rein ist. — Rosalinde spricht in ihrem angenommenen Charakter als Schäfer. Vgl. zu diesem Dialog zwischen Orlando und Rosalinde das Entsprechende bei Lodge, Einleitung pag. 351.

1) Audrey versteht das Wort feature, = körperliche Bildung im Allgemeinen, nicht. 2) Dass Sh. ein Wortspiel zwischen goats und Goths beabsichtigte, ist klarer, als dass er, wie einige Commentatoren wollen, bei capricious an das lateinische capere gedacht hat. 3) ill-inhabited = schlecht einquartiert: mit schlechterer Wohnung versehen als Jupiter unter einem Strohdach. — Diese Anspielung auf Jupiter's Bewirthung in ländlicher Hütte bei Philemon und Baucis findet sich deutlicher in Much Ado about Nothing (A. 2, Sc. 1) D. Pedro. My visor is Philemon's roof; within the house is Jove. — Hero. Why, then your visor should be thatch'd. 4) Sh. dachte bei dieser scherzhaften Vergleichung vielleicht an den Doppelsinn von bilt = Rechnung, und = Hellebarde, den er in Timon of Athens (A. 3, Sc. 4) zum Wortspiel benutzt: knock me down with 'em. 5) Was die Liebesleute poetisch betheuern, das, kann man sagen, erheucheln oder dichten sie als Liebesleute. — to feign in diesem Doppelsinne kommt auch in Twelfth-Night (A. 1, Sc. 5) vor: Viola. Alas! I took great pains to study it, and 't is poetical. — Olivia. It is the more like to be feigned. 6) hard-favoured = von hässlichem Aeussern. 7) material = gehaltvoll, wie (A. 2, Sc. 1) der Herzog von Jaques gesagt hatte: I love to cope him in these sullen fits, || For then he's full of matter. 8) foul = hässlich, unscheinbar von Ansehen, also nicht der Verführung ausgesetzt. 9) Aber was

Aud. Well, the gods give us joy!

Touch. Amen. A man may, if he were of a fearful heart, stagger in this attempt; for here we have no temple but the wood, no assembly but horn-beasts. But what though?⁹ Courage! As horns are odious, they are necessary.¹⁰ It is said, — many a man knows no end of his goods: right; many a man has good horns, and knows no end¹¹ of them. Well, that is the dowry of his wife: 't is none of his own getting. Horns? Even so. — Poor men alone?¹² — No, no; the noblest deer hath them as huge as the rascal.¹³ Is the single man therefore blessed? No: as a walled town is more worthier than a village, so is the forehead of a married man more honourable than the bare brow of a bachelor; and by how much defence is better than no skill,¹⁴ by so much is a horn more precious than to want. Here comes Sir Oliver.

Enter Sir OLIVER MAR-TEXT.

Sir Oliver Mar-text, you are well met: will you dispatch us here under this tree, or shall we go with you to your chapel?

Sir Oli. Is there none here to give¹⁵ the woman?

Touch. I will not take her on gift of any man.

Sir Oli. Truly, she must be given, or the marriage is not lawful.

Jaq. [Coming forward.] Proceed, proceed: I'll give her.

Touch. Good even, good Master What-ye-call 't: how do you, Sir? You are very well met: God 'ild you for your last company.¹⁶ I am very glad to see you. — Even a toy in hand here,¹⁷ Sir. — Nay; pray, be cover'd.

Jaq. Will you be married, motley?

Touch. As the ox hath his bow,¹⁸ Sir, the horse his curb, and the falcon her bells,¹⁹ so man hath his desires; and as pigeons bill, so wedlock would be nibbling.

Jaq. And will you, being a man of your breeding, be married under a bush, like a beggar? Get you to church, and have a good priest that can tell you what marriage is: this fellow will but join you together as they join wainscot; then one of you will prove a shrunk panel, and, like green timber, warp, warp.

Touch. [Aside.] I am not in the mind but I were better to be married of him than of another; for he is not like to marry me well, and not being well married, it will be a good excuse for me hereafter to leave my wife.

Jaq. Go thou with me, and let me counsel thee.

Touch. Come, sweet Audrey:

We must be married, or we must live in bawdry.

Farewell, good Master Oliver! Not, —

O sweet Oliver!

O brave Oliver!

Leave me not behind thee:

but, —

Wind away,

Begone, I say,

I will not to wedding with thee.²⁰

[Exeunt JAQUES, TOUCHSTONE, and AUDREY.]

Sir Oli. 'T is no matter: ne'er a fantastical knave of them all shall flout me out of my calling. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.

Another Part of the Forest. Before a Cottage.

Enter ROSALIND and CELIA.

Ros. Never talk to me: I will weep.

Cel. Do, I pr'ythee; but yet have the grace to consider, that tears do not become a man.

Ros. But have I not cause to weep?

Cel. As good cause as one would desire: therefore weep.

Ros. His very hair is of the dissembling colour.

Cel. Something browner than Judas's.¹ Marry, his kisses are Judas's own children.

Ros. I' faith, his hair is of a good colour.

Cel. An excellent colour: your chestnut was ever the only colour.

Ros. And his kissing is as full of sanctity as the touch of holy bread.

macht das? — though familiär = doch. 10) necessary = unvermeidlich, vom Schicksal unabwendlich verhängt. — Die gewöhnliche Sh.'sche Anspielung auf das Horn des Hahnrei kehrt auch hier wieder. 11) Wortspiel zwischen end = Ende, Grenze, und end = Ende, Spitze des Horns. 12) Hörner? fragt der Narr und beantwortet sich selbst die Frage mit: Allerdings. — Dann fragt er weiter: Haben nur arme Leute Hörner? und antwortet abermals: Nein, nein! — Der Satz steht in der Fol. ohne Interpunction sinnlos so: hornes, even so poor men alone: No, no, the noblest deer etc. — Dyce ändert: Horns? ever to poor men alone? 13) rascal = elendes, mageres Wild. 14) defence = Mittel zur Vertheidigung, Schutzwehr, im Gegensatz zu no skill, wobei defence zu suppliren ist, = Wehrlosigkeit. — Manche Erklärer fassen hier defence = Fechtkunst, was aber der Zusammenhang mit dem Vorhergehenden und dem Folgenden nicht verstattet. Die Vertheidigungswaffe ist eben das Horn. 15) to give für to give away, der technische Ausdruck bei der Hochzeit von dem Brautführer, der die Braut dem Bräutigam zuführt. — Touchstone versteht to give ohne diese Beziehung im gewöhnlichen Sinne des Wortes. 16) Gott lohne es Euch, dass Ihr mir neulich Gesellschaft leistetet. — Er meint die Begegnung, von der Jaques (A. 2, Sc. 7) dem Herzog erzählt hatte. — Die Fol. schreibt goddild = God yield. 17) Ich habe hier gerade eine Kleinigkeit um die Hand, ich will mich gerade verheirathen. 18) bow = das krumme Joch, unter das ein Ochs gespannt wird. 19) bells = die Schellen, die an die Kappe des Jagdfalken befestigt werden. — Knight citirt dazu aus Gervase Markham's Boke of St. Albans: The bells which your hawks shall wear, look in any wise that they be not too heavy, whereby they overload her, neither that one be heavier than another, but both of like weight: look also that they be well sounding and shrill, yet not both of one sound, but one at least a note under the other. 20) Der Narr citirt Bruchstücke aus zwei einander entsprechenden Balladen, von denen sich nur die Anfangsworte in den Registern der Buchhändler (1582—85) erhalten haben. — Manche Hgg. setzen Not — O sweet Oliver und But wind away, als ob not und but in den Text des Liedes gehörten.

1) Das englische Publicum war gewohnt, Judas und andere Heuchler und Verräther auf dem Theater mit herkömmlichem rothen Kopf- und Barthaar erscheinen zu sehen. — Darauf geht auch dissembling colour. 2) Ein Paar abgelegte Lippen der Diana. — Für cast der Fol. lesen die späteren Folioausgg. chaste, was auch Rowe noch beibehielt. 3) Sh. fingirt hier eine klösterliche Genossenschaft des Winters, um die Kälte und Keuschheit derselben

Cel. He hath bought a pair of cast lips of Diana:² a nun of winter's sisterhood³ kisses not more religiously; the very ice of chastity is in them.

Ros. But why did he swear he would come this morning, and comes not?

Cel. Nay, certainly, there is no truth in him.

Ros. Do you think so?

Cel. Yes: I think he is not a pick-purse, nor a horse-stealer; but for his verity in love, I do think him as concave as a covered goblet,⁴ or a worm-eaten nut.

Ros. Not true in love?

Cel. Yes, when he is in; but I think he is not in.

Ros. You have heard him swear downright, he was.

Cel. Was is not is: besides, the oath of a⁵ lover is no stronger than the word of a tapster;⁶ they are both the confirmers⁷ of false reckonings. He attends here in the forest on the duke your father.

Ros. I met the duke yesterday, and had much question⁸ with him. He asked me, of what parentage I was: I told him, of as good as he; so he laughed, and let me go. But what talk we of fathers, when there is such a man as Orlando?

Cel. O, that's a brave man! he writes brave verses, speaks brave words, swears brave oaths, and breaks them bravely, quite traverse, athwart the heart of his lover; as a puny tilter,⁹ that spurs his horse but on one side, breaks his staff like a noble goose. But all's brave, that youth mounts, and folly guides. — Who comes here?

Enter CORIN.

Cor. Mistress, and master, you have oft inquir'd After the shepherd that complain'd of love, Who you saw sitting by me on the turf, Praising the proud disdainful shepherdess That was his mistress.

Cel. Well, and what of him?

Cor. If you will see a pageant truly play'd, Between the pale complexion of true love, And the red glow of scorn and proud disdain, Go hence a little, and I shall conduct you, If you will mark it.

Ros. O! come, let us remove: The sight of lovers feedeth those in love. — Bring us to¹⁰ this sight, and you shall say I'll prove a busy actor in their play. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Another Part of the Forest.

Enter SILVIUS and PHEBE.

Sil. Sweet Phebe, do not scorn me; do not, Phebe: Say that you love me not; but say not so In bitterness. The common executioner, Whose heart the accustom'd sight of death makes hard, Falls not the axe upon the humbled neck, But first begs pardon: will you sterner be Than he that dies and lives¹ by bloody drops?

Enter ROSALIND, CELIA, and CORIN, behind.

Phe. I would not be thy executioner: I fly thee, for I would not injure thee. Thou tell'st me, there is murder in mine eye: 'T is pretty, sure,² and very probable, That eyes — that are the frail'st and softest things, Who shut their coward gates on atomies, — Should be call'd tyrants, butchers, murderers! Now I do frown on thee with all my heart; And if mine eyes can wound, now let them kill thee; Now counterfeit to swoon,³ why, now fall down; Or, if thou canst not, O, for shame, for shame! Lie not, to say mine eyes are murderers. Now show the wound mine eye hath made in thee: Scratch thee but with a pin, and there remains Some scar of it; lean⁴ upon a rush, The cicatrice and capable impressure⁵ Thy palm some moment keeps, but now mine eyes, Which I have darted at thee, hurt thee not, Nor, I am sure, there is no force in eyes That can⁶ do hurt.

Sil. O dear Phebe, If ever (as that ever may be near) You meet in some fresh cheek the power of fancy,⁷ Then shall you know the wounds invisible That love's keen arrows make.

Phe. But till that time Come not thou near me; and when that time comes, Afflict me with thy mocks, pity me not, As till that time I shall not pity thee.

Ros. [Advancing.] And why, I pray you? Who might be your mother, zu bezeichnen. — In ähnlicher Ideenassociation steht in Coriolanus (A. 5, Sc. 3) chaste as the icicle, || That's curdied by the frost from purest snow, || And hangs on Dian's temple. 4) Der Deckel liegt nur auf dem Becher, wenn er leer ist, und bildet so eine Höhlung. 5) a, das die Fol. zufällig auslässt, ergänzt die zweite Folioausg. 6) So in Timon of Athens (A. 4, Sc. 3) Thou gav'st thine ears, like tapsters that bade welcome, || To knaves, and all approachers. 7) Die Fol. hat confirmer. 8) question = Gespräch. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 2, Anm. 64. 9) Die rücksichtslose Art, wie Orlando sein der Rosalinde gegebenes Versprechen gebrochen hat, wird verglichen mit der Art, wie ein ungeübter Reiter im Turnier seine Lanze schlecht gegen die Brust seines Gegners führt und sie regelwidrig zerbricht. — Sh. hat dasselbe Gleichniss auch sonst von ungeschickten und verfehlten Angriffen; so in Much Ado about Nothing (A. 5, Sc. 1) Nay, then give him another staff: this last was broke cross. — lover = die Geliebte. 10) Malone setzte des Verses wegen unto für to der Fol. — Vielleicht wollte Sh. bring's für bring us gelesen haben.

1) to die and live by = bei Etwas leben und sterben, sein Lebenlang mit Etwas zu thun haben. — Steevens vermuthet in dies das Sh. und seinen Zeitgenossen sehr geläufige Wortspiel von to die = sterben, und to dye = färben. Doch ist der Sinn auch ohne diese Annahme verständlich genug. 2) sure = fürwahr, sicherlich, parenthetisch eingeschoben. 3) swoon in der Fol. 4) So die Fol. — Manche Hgg. fügen mit der zweiten Folioausg. but hinter lean ein. 5) cicatrice, hier in ungewöhnlichem Sinne = Kerbe, Einschnitt in die Hand durch die Binse, worauf sie sich stützt, wird näher erklärt durch das folgende capable impressure = der Eindruck, der die Binse in sich aufnimmt, der für die Binse empfänglich ist. 6) that can hängt von no force ab. 7) fancy = Liebe, Liebesgedanke. 8) Von welcher Mutter habt Ihr den Hochmuth geerbt, dass Ihr den Unglücklichen verhöhnt und über ihn triumphirt und Alles das zu gleicher Zeit? — Sh. gebraucht sonst to insult im Sinne des

That you insult, exult, and all at once,
Over the wretched? ⁹ What though you have no beauty
(As, by my faith, I see no more in you
Than without candle may go dark to bed),
Must you be therefore proud and pitiless?
Why, what means this? Why do you look on me?
I see no more in you, than in the ordinary
Of nature's sale-work. ¹⁰ — O'd's my little life! ¹¹
I think she means to tangle my eyes too.
No, 'faith, proud mistress, hope not after it:
'T is not your inky brows, your black silk ¹² hair,
Your bugle eyeballs, ¹³ nor your cheek of cream,
That can entame ¹⁴ my spirits to your worship. —
You foolish shepherd, wherefore do you follow her,
Like foggy south, puffing with wind and rain? ¹⁵
You are a thousand times a properer man,
Than she a woman: 't is such fools as you,
That make the world full of ill-favour'd children. ¹⁶
'T is not her glass, but you, that flatters her;
And out of you she sees herself more proper,
Than any of her lineaments can show her. —
But, mistress, know yourself: down on your knees,
And thank heaven, fasting, for a good man's love;
For I must tell you friendly in your ear,
Sell when you can: you are not for all markets.
Cry the man mercy; love him; take his offer:
Foul is most foul, being foul to be a scoffer. ¹⁷
So, take her to thee, shepherd. — Fare you well.

Phe. Sweet youth, I pray you, chide a year together. ¹⁸
I had rather hear you chide, than this man woo.

Ros. He's fallen in love with your foulness, ¹⁹ and she'll fall in love with my anger. If it be so, as fast as she answers thee with frowning looks, I'll sauce her with bitter words. — Why look you so upon me?

Phe. For no ill will I bear you.

Ros. I pray you, do not fall in love with me,
For I am falser than vows made in wine:
Besides, I like you not. — If you will know my house,
'T is at the tuft of olives, here hard by. —
Will you go, sister? — Shepherd, ply her hard. —
Come, sister. — Shepherdess, look on him better,

And be not proud: though all the world could see,
None could be so abus'd in sight as he. ²⁰
Come, to our flock. [Exeunt ROSALIND, CELIA, and CORIN.]

Phe. Dead shepherd! ²¹ now I find thy saw of might:
'Who ever lov'd, that lov'd not at first sight?'

Sil. Sweet Phebe, —

Phe. Ha! what say'st thou, Silvius?

Sil. Sweet Phebe, pity me.

Phe. Why, I am sorry for thee, gentle Silvius.

Sil. Wherever sorrow is, relief would be:

If you do sorrow at my grief in love,
By giving love your sorrow and my grief
Were both extermin'd.

Phe. Thou hast my love: is not that neighbourly?

Sil. I would have you.

Phe. Why, that were covetousness.

Silvius, the time was that I hated thee,
And yet it is not ²² that I bear thee love;
But since that thou canst talk of love so well,
Thy company, which erst was irksome to me,
I will endure, and I'll employ thee too;
But do not look for further recompense,
Than thine own gladness that thou art employ'd.

Sil. So holy, and so perfect is my love,
And I in such a poverty of grace,
That I shall think it a most plenteous crop
To glean the broken ears after the man
That the main harvest reaps: loose now and then
A scatter'd smile, ²³ and that I'll live upon.

Phe. Know'st thou the youth that spoke to me ere-while?

Sil. Not very well; but I have met him oft;
And he hath bought the cottage, and the bounds,
That the old carlot ²⁴ once was master of.

Phe. Think not I love him, though I ask for him.

'T is but a peevish boy: — yet he talks well: —
But what care I for words? yet words do well,
When he that speaks them pleases those that hear.
It is a pretty youth: — not very pretty: —
But, sure, he's proud; and yet his pride becomes him.
He'll make a proper man: the best thing in him jetzigen to exult. — Für all wollte Warburton rail lesen, indess gebraucht Sh. all auch sonst von zwei Dingen, für both. 9) So die Fol. mit gutem Sinne, da Rosalinde der Phebe gar keine Schönheit und mithin kein Recht zum Sprödethun zugestehen will. — Theobald liess no weg, und Malone und Steevens setzten no und more dafür. 10) In der gewöhnlichen Handwerkerarbeit, welche die Natur für den Verkauf liefert. 11) Eine verkleinernde Erweiterung der gewöhnlichen Bethörung: O'd's (scil. God's) life, wie God's bodikin für God's body. 12) Manche Hgg. bilden ein Compositum black-silk = von schwarzer Seide; doch scheint nur schwarzes, seidnes Haar gemeint zu sein. 13) bugle eyeballs = Augen von Glaskugeln, oder wie Glaskugeln. 14) to entame = zahm machen, beugen. — to your worship = zu Eurem Dienst, so dass ich Euch huldige. 15) Rosalinde vergleicht die Thränen und Seufzer des verliebten Schäfers mit dem Regen und Winde, die der feuchte Südwind bringt. 16) Indem ihr solche hässliche Weiber, die ihr für schön haltet, freit und mit ihnen dann eben so hässliche Kinder zeugt. 17) Die Hässliche ist am hässlichsten, wenn sie den Freier mit Spott zurückweist, da sie doch hässlich ist. — to be a scoffer ist mit most foul zu verbinden. 18) a year together = in Einem fort, ununterbrochen ein Jahr lang. 19) Hanmer änderte ohne Grund her foulness. — Rosalinde redet nacheinander die Phebe und den Silvius an. 20) Wenn auch alle Welt ihre Sehkraft üben wollte, so könnte doch Niemand so sich täuschen wie Silvius, der nur Euch für schön hält. — Johnson erklärt wohl zu speciell: though all mankind could look on you. 21) Der todte Schäfer ist der bei der ersten Aufführung von As you like it längst verstorbene Dichter Marlowe, in dessen nach dem Musäus gearbeiteten Epos Hero and Leander sich der folgende Vers findet. — Vgl. Einleitung pag. 353 u. 354. — Auf dasselbe Gedicht spielt Sh. vielleicht in Two Gentlemen of Verona (A. 1, Sc. 1) an. 22) Und auch noch ist die Zeit nicht da, dass ich Dich liebe. 23) Das Bild von dem Aehrenleser, der hinter dem Schnitter hergeht, wird auch in a scatter'd smile fortgesetzt. Das Lächeln der Phebe ist gleichsam eine Garbe, die sie hie und da fallen lässt, und von der Silvius leben will. 24) Die Fol. und auch Rowe drucken Carlo als Eigennamen in Cursiv. Dasselbe Wort, von carle gebildet, = Bauer, Landmann, kommt auch in Drayton's The Baron's Wars vor: Who in his castle, carelessly defended, || That crafty carlet closely apprehended. — Vielleicht wollte Sh. Carlot wirklich als Eigennamen des Schäfers verstanden wissen, von dem Corin (A. 2, Sc. 4) der

Is his complexion; and faster than his tongue
Did make offence, his eye did heal it up.
He is not very tall; yet for his years he 's tall.
His leg is but so so; and yet 't is well.
There was a pretty redness in his lip;
A little riper, and more lusty red
Than that mix'd in his cheek: 't was just the difference
Betwixt the constant red, and mingled damask.²⁵
There be some women, Silvius, had they mark'd him
In parcels,²⁶ as I did, would have gone near
To fall in love with him; but, for my part,
I love him not, nor hate him not; and yet
Have²⁷ more cause to hate him than to love him:
For what had he to do to chide at me?
He said, mine eyes were black, and my hair black;
And, now I am remember'd,²⁸ scorn'd at me.
I marvel, why I answer'd not again:
But that 's all one; omittance is no quittance.
I 'll write to him a very taunting letter,
And thou shalt bear it; wilt thou, Silvius?
Sil. Phebe, with all my heart.
Phe. I 'll write it straight;
The matter 's in my head, and in my heart:
I will be bitter with him, and passing short.
Go with me, Silvius. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.

The Forest of Arden.

Enter ROSALIND, CELIA, and JAUQUES.

Jaq. I pr'ythee, pretty youth, let me be¹ better acquainted with thee.

Ros. They say, you are a melancholy fellow.

Jaq. I am so: I do love it² better than laughing.

Ros. Those that are in extremity of either are abominable fellows, and betray themselves to every modern censure³ worse than drunkards.

Jaq. Why, 't is good to be sad and say nothing.

Ros. Why then, 't is good to be a post.⁴

Jaq. I have neither the scholar's melancholy, which is emulation; nor the musician's, which is fantastical; nor the courtier's, which is proud; nor the soldier's, which is ambitious; nor the lawyer's, which is politic; nor the lady's, which is nice;⁵ nor the lover's, which is all these; but it is a melancholy of mine own, compounded of many simples, extracted from many objects, and, indeed, the sundry contemplation of my travels; which, by often rumination,⁶ wraps me in a most humorous sadness.

Ros. A traveller! By my faith, you have great reason to be sad. I fear, you have sold your own lands, to see other men's; then, to have seen much, and to have nothing, is to have rich eyes and poor hands.

Jaq. Yes, I have gained my experience.

Ros. And your experience makes you sad. I had rather have a fool to make me merry, than experience to make me sad; and to travel for it too!⁷

Enter ORLANDO.

Orl. Good day, and happiness, dear Rosalind.

Jaq. Nay then, God be wi' you, an you talk in blank verse. [Exit.]

Ros. Farewell, Monsieur Traveller.⁸ Look you lisp, and wear strange suits; disable⁹ all the benefits of your own country; be out of love with your nativity; and almost chide God for making you that countenance you are: or I will scarce think you have swam in a gondola.¹⁰ — Why, how now, Orlando! where have you been all this while? You a lover? — An you serve me such another trick, never come in my sight more.

Orl. My fair Rosalind, I come within an hour of my promise.

Ros. Break an hour's promise in love! He that will divide a minute into a thousand parts, and break but a part of the thousandth part of a minute in the affairs of love, it may be said of him, that Cupid hath clapped him o' the shoulder,¹¹ but I 'll warrant him heart-whole.

Orl. Pardon me, dear Rosalind.

Ros. Nay, an you be so tardy, come no more in my sight: I had as lief be woo'd of a snail.

Orl. Of a snail?

Ros. Ay, of a snail; for though he comes slowly, he carries his house on his head, a better jointure, I think, than you make¹² a woman. Besides, he brings his destiny with him.

Orl. What 's that?

Ros. Why, horns; which such as you are fain to be beholding¹³ to your wives for: but he comes armed in his fortune, and prevents the slander of his wife.¹⁴

Rosalinde erzählt hatte. 25) constant red = das eigentliche, entschiedene Roth. — mingled damask = das mit hellen Farben nüancirte Hochroth. 26) in parcels = in seinen Einzelheiten, im Detail. 27) Manche Hgg. fügen mit der zweiten Folioausg. I vor have ein. 28) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 7, Anm. 46.

1) be, das in der Fol. fehlt, ergänzt die zweite Folioausg. 2) scil. melancholy, als Substantiv gefasst. 3) modern = gewöhnlich, gemein; censure = Beurtheilung: Diejenigen, welche zu viel lachen oder aus blosser Affectation schwermüthig thun, stellen sich für jedes gewöhnliche Urtheil, für Jedermanns Urtheil, schlimmer als Trunkenbolde bloss. 4) Wenn man ernst aussehen und nichts sagen will, so könnte man auch eben so gut ein Thürpfosten sein. 5) nice = wer sich mit geringfügigen Dingen zu schaffen macht, oder was auf geringfügigen Dingen beruht, daher = kleinlich, geziert. 6) Die Fol. hat in which by often rumination etc. — Malone strich das erste in; andere Hgg. lesen mit der zweiten Folioausg. in which my often rumination. 7) Und noch dazu reisen, lediglich um melancholisch zu werden! 8) Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 2, Anm. 53. 9) to disable = Etwas für untauglich erklären, schlecht machen, herabsetzen. 10) Oder ich will kaum glauben, dass Ihr in Venedig waret. — gondola und gondolier als charakteristisch für Venedig, den damaligen Lieblingsaufenthalt reicher und müssiger Engländer. hat Sh. auch in Merchant of Venice (A. 2, Sc. 8) und in Othello (A. 1, Sc. 1). — Die Fol. liest Gundello für gondola. 11) Cupido hat ihm vielleicht freundschaftlich auf die Schulter geklopft, aber sein Herz hat er nicht verwundet. — heart-whole = heil, unverletzt im Herzen. — Ebenvorher hat die Fol. thousand part für thousandth part, wie sie überall eight für eighth setzt. 12) Han mer las willkürlich you can make. 13) to be beholding = Jemandem verpflichtet sein für Etwas, sich an Jemanden halten in Bezug auf Etwas. — Die meisten Hgg. vertauschen das Sh.'sche beholding mit beholden. 14) Ein Liebhaber wie die Schnecke kommt

Orl. Virtue is no horn-maker, and my Rosalind is virtuous.

Ros. And I am your Rosalind.

Cel. It pleases him to call you so; but he hath a Rosalind of a better leer¹⁵ than you.

Ros. Come, woo me, woo me; for now I am in a holiday humour, and like enough to consent. — What would you say to me now, an I were your very very Rosalind?

Orl. I would kiss before I spoke.

Ros. Nay, you were better speak first; and when you were gravelled for lack of matter, you might take occasion to kiss. Very good orators, when they are out, they will spit; and for lovers, lacking (God warn us!)¹⁶ matter, the cleanliest shift is to kiss.

Orl. How if the kiss be denied?

Ros. Then she puts you to entreaty, and there begins new matter.

Orl. Who could be out, being before his beloved mistress?

Ros. Marry, that should you, if I were your mistress, or I should think my honesty ranker than my wit.¹⁷

Orl. What, of my suit?¹⁸

Ros. Not out of your apparel, and yet out of your suit. Am not I your Rosalind?

Orl. I take some joy to say you are, because I would be talking of her.

Ros. Well, in her person, I say — I will not have you.

Orl. Then, in mine own person, I die.

Ros. No, 'faith, die by attorney. The poor world is almost six thousand years old, and in all this time there was not any man died in his own person, videlicet, in a love-cause. Troilus had his brains dashed out with a Grecian club;¹⁹ yet he did what he could to die before, and he is one of the patterns of love. Leander, he would have lived many a fair year, though Hero had turned nun, if it had not been for a hot midsummer-night; for, good youth, he went but forth to wash him in the Hellespont, and, being taken with the cramp, was drowned, and the foolish chroniclers²⁰ of that age found it was — Hero of Sestos. But these are all lies: men have died from time to time, and worms have eaten them, but not for love.

Orl. I would not have my right Rosalind of this mind, for, I protest, her frown might kill me.

Ros. By this hand, it will not kill a fly. But come, now I will be your Rosalind in a more coming-on disposition; and ask me what you will, I will grant it.

Orl. Then love me, Rosalind.

Ros. Yes, 'faith will I; Fridays, and Saturdays, and all.

Orl. And wilt thou have me?

Ros. Ay, and twenty such.

Orl. What say'st thou?

Ros. Are you not good?

Orl. I hope so.

Ros. Why then, can one desire too much of a good thing? — Come, sister, you shall be the priest, and marry us. — Give me your hand, Orlando. — What do you say, sister?

Orl. Pray thee, marry us.

Cel. I cannot say the words.

Ros. You must begin, — 'Will you, Orlando, —

Cel. Go to. — Will you, Orlando, have to wife this Rosalind?

Orl. I will.

Ros. Ay, but when?

Orl. Why, now, as fast as she can marry us.

Ros. Then you must say, — 'I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.'

Orl. I take thee, Rosalind, for wife.

Ros. I might ask you for your commission; but, — I do take thee, Orlando, for my husband: — there's a girl goes before the priest;²¹ and certainly, a woman's thought runs before her actions.

Orl. So do all thoughts: they are winged.

Ros. Now tell me how long you would have her, after you have possessed her.

Orl. For ever, and a day.

Ros. Say a day, without the ever. No, no, Orlando: men are April when they woo, December when they wed; maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when they are wives. I will be more jealous of thee than a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen; more clamorous than a parrot against rain; more new-fangled²² than an ape; more giddy in my desires than a monkey: I will weep for nothing, like Diana in the fountain,²³ and I will do that when you are disposed to be merry; I will laugh like a hyen,²⁴ and that when thou art inclined to sleep.

Orl. But will my Rosalind do so?

Ros. By my life, she will do as I do.

Orl. O! but she is wise.

Ros. Or else she could not have the wit to do this: the wiser, the waywarder. Make the doors²⁵ upon a woman's wit, and it will out at the casement; shut that, schon in dem ihm bestimmten Schicksal, in den Hörnern, und beugt so dem üblen Ruf vor, den seine Frau sich zuziehen würde, wenn sie erst ihm die Hörner aufsetzte.

15) leer = Gesicht, Gesichtsfarbe. — Eine scherzhafte Anspielung auf den künstlichen Teint, den Rosalinde sich zugelegt hat, um unerkannt zu bleiben. Vgl. A. 1. Sc. 3, Anm. 21.

16) Gott behüte uns davor, dass uns Liebesleuten der Stoff zur Unterhaltung ausgehe. 17) Wäre ich Eure Geliebte, so würde ich, wenn anders mein Witz meiner Tugend nichts nachgäbe, Euch schon mit Eurer Werbung aus der Fassung bringen.

18) scil. out of my suit = aus dem Concept der Liebeswerbung. — Gleich nachher wird suit doppelsinnig = Werbung, und = Tracht, Kleidung, gefasst.

19) Dieses Ende des Troilus hat Sh. nicht mehr in Troilus and Cressida. — In Chaucer's Troilus and Creseide steht jedoch Dispitously him slough the fierce Achill.

20) Für chroniclers wollte Hammer coroners lesen, weil to find der technische Ausdruck von dem Verdict der Geschworenen oder der Todtenbeschauer ist. — Indess macht Sh. mit seinem the chroniclers found scherzhaft die Chronisten selbst gleichsam zu Geschworenen, die über Leander's Todesart ihr Urtheil abzugeben hatten und die dann erklärten, Leander sei aus Liebe zur Hero gestorben.

21) Rosalinde wartet nicht ab, dass der Priester ihr die Trauungsformel vorspricht, sondern spricht sie selbst. — Farmer änderte ohne Grund there a girl.

22) new-fangled = auf alles Neue erpicht. 23) Wie eine Statue der Diana, aus deren Augen Wasser in das Brunnenbecken lief, auf dem sie stand. — Ueber die Anspielung, die man hier zur chronologischen Bestimmung dieses Dramas hat finden wollen, vgl. Einleitung pag. 347. — So in Mayne's City-Match: Now could I cry || Like any image in a fountain, which || Runs lamentation.

24) Douce citirt dazu aus Bartholomaeus' De proprietatibus rerum von der Hyäne: He commeth to houses by night, and faineth and 't will out at the key-hole; stop that, 't will fly with the smoke out at the chimney.

Orl. A man that had a wife with such a wit, he might say, — »Wit, whither wilt?«²⁶

Ros. Nay, you might keep that check for it, till you met your wife's wit going to your neighbour's bed.

Orl. And what wit could wit have to excuse that?

Ros. Marry, to say, — she came to seek you there. You shall never take her without her answer, unless you take her without her tongue:²⁷ O! that woman that cannot make her fault her husband's occasion,²⁸ let her never nurse her child herself, for she will breed it like a fool.²⁹

Orl. For these two hours, Rosalind, I will leave thee.

Ros. Alas, dear love! I cannot lack thee two hours.

Orl. I must attend the duke at dinner: by two o'clock I will be with thee again.

Ros. Ay, go your ways, go your ways. — I knew what you would prove; my friends told me as much, and I thought no less: — that flattering tongue of yours won me: — 't is but one cast away,³⁰ and so, — come, death! — Two o'clock is your hour?

Orl. Ay, sweet Rosalind.

Ros. By my troth, and in good earnest, and so God mend me, and by all pretty oaths that are not dangerous,³¹ if you break one jot of your promise, or come one minute behind your hour, I will think you the most pathological break-promise,³² and the most hollow lover, and the most unworthy of her you call Rosalind, that may be chosen out of the gross band of the unfaithful. Therefore, beware my censure, and keep your promise.

Orl. With no less religion, than if thou wert indeed my Rosalind: so, adieu.

Ros. Well, Time is the old justice that examines all such offenders, and let Time try. Adieu.

[Exit ORLANDO.]

Cel. You have simply³³ misused our sex in your love-prate. We must have your doublet and hose plucked over your head, and show the world what the bird hath done to her own nest.³⁴

Ros. O! coz, coz, coz, my pretty little coz, that thou didst know how many fathom deep I am in love! But I cannot be sounded: my affection hath an unknown bottom, like the bay of Portugal.

Cel. Or, rather, bottomless; that as fast as you pour affection in, it runs out.

Ros. No; that same wicked bastard of Venus, that was begot of thought,³⁵ conceived of spleen, and born of madness, that blind rascally boy, that abuses every one's eyes, because his own are out, let him be judge how deep I am in love. — I'll tell thee, Aliena, I cannot be out of the sight of Orlando. I'll go find a shadow, and sigh till he come.

Cel. And I'll sleep. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Another Part of the Forest.

Enter JAQUES and Lords, like foresters.¹

Jaq. Which is he that killed the deer?

1. Lord. Sir, it was I.

Jaq. Let's present him to the duke, like a Roman conqueror; and it would do well to set the deer's horns upon his head for a branch of victory. — Have you no song, forester, for this purpose?

2. *Lord.*² Yes, Sir.

Jaq. Sing it: 't is no matter how it be in tune, so it make noise enough.

SONG.

What shall he have, that kill'd the deer?

His leather skin, and horns to wear.

Then sing him home.³

Take thou no scorn, to wear the horn;⁴

It was a crest ere thou wast born.

Thy father's father wore it,

And thy father bore it:

The horn, the horn, the lusty horn,

Is not a thing to laugh to scorn. [Exeunt.]

mannes voyce as he may. 25) to make the door = die Thüre schliessen. 26) Eine sprichwörtliche Redensart. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 10. 27) Eine Frau, wenn sie von ihrem Manne auf irgend einem Fehltritte ertappt wird, weiss sich immer zu verantworten, so lange sie nur noch eine Zunge hat. 28) Johnson erklärt ganz richtig represent her fault as occasioned by her husband. — Für occasion änderte Hamner willkürlich accusation, und Staunton schlug, plausibler jedenfalls, confusion vor. 29) So sagt Iago in Othello (A. 2, Sc. 1) von einer ehrbaren Frau: She was a wight, — if ever such wight were, — || To suckle fools. 30) Es ist nur eine verlassene Geliebte mehr zu den vielen, die schon dieses Schicksal erfahren. 31) Keine gotteslästerlichen Flüche und Schwüre, die das Seelenheil gefährden. 32) pathetical deutet Malone auf den tiefen Schmerz, den die Geliebte über den Treubruch des Liebhabers empfindet. Talbot erklärt es mit contemptible. — Nach der Sh.'schen Lizenz lässt sich pathetical auf promise beziehen: der ein mit allem Pathos, feierlich, gegebenes Versprechen bricht. 33) simply = geradezu, ohne Umschweife. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 2, Anm. 12. 34) So bei Lodge: I pray you, quoth Aliena, if your robes were off, what mettle are you made of, that you are so satirical against wömen? Is it not a foul bird defileth her own nest? 35) thought = Grübeleien, Melancholie.

1) Die Bühnenweisung der Fol. lautet Enter Jaques and Lords, Foresters, was Rowe erklärt Lords and Foresters. Vgl. jedoch A. 2, Sc. 1, Anm. 1. 2) Die Fol. unterscheidet die beiden Lords nicht. — Rowe theilt diese Antwort dem Forester zu. Vgl. Anm. 1. 3) Die Fol. druckt in einer Zeile als Theil des Liedes: Then sing him home, the rest shall bear this burthen. — Letzteres ist offenbar eine Bühnenweisung, welche erstere Worte im Chor von Allen wiederholen lässt. Wahrscheinlich muss auch zum Schluss des Liedes noch einmal der Chor mit Then sing him home einfallen. — Andere fassen indess auch Then sing him home als Theil der Bühnenweisung. — Das Lied wird in einigen Ausgg. auch dergestalt unter zwei Sänger vertheilt, dass der Eine die erste Zeile, der Andere die zweite singt. — In Bezug auf diese zweite citirt Malone eine entsprechende Stelle bei Lodge: What news, forester? Hast thou wounded some deer and lost him in the fall? Care not, man, for so small a loss; thy fees was but the skin, the shoulders, and the horns. 4) So in dem alten K. John, den Sh. seinem Drama zum Grunde legte: But let the foolish Frenchman take no scorn, || If Philip front him with an English horn.

SCENE III.

Another Part of the Forest.

Enter ROSALIND and CELIA.

Ros. How say you now? Is it not past two o'clock? and here much¹ Orlando!

Cel. I warrant you, with pure love, and troubled brain, he hath ta'en his bow and arrows, and is gone forth — to sleep. Look, who comes here.

Enter SILVIUS.

Sil. My errand is to you, fair youth. —
My gentle Phebe did² bid me give you this:

[Giving a letter.]

I know not the contents; but, as I guess
By the stern brow, and waspish action,
Which she did use as she was writing of it,
It bears an angry tenour. Pardon me,
I am but as a guiltless messenger.

Ros. Patience herself would startle at this letter,
And play the swaggerer:³ bear this, bear all.⁴
She says, I am not fair; that I lack manners;
She calls me proud, and that she could not love me,
Were man as rare as phoenix. Od's my will!
Her love is not the hare that I do hunt:
Why writes she so to me? — Well, shepherd, well;
This is a letter of your own device.

Sil. No, I protest; I know not the contents:
Phebe did write it.

Ros. Come, come, you are a fool,
And turn'd into the extremity of love.
I saw her hand:⁵ she has a leathern hand,
A freestone-colour'd hand: I verily did think
That her old gloves were on, but 't was her hands:
She has a housewife's hand; but that 's no matter.
I say, she never did invent this letter;
This is a man's invention, and his hand.⁶

Sil. Sure, it is hers.

Ros. Why, 't is a boisterous and a cruel style,
A style for challengers: why, she defies me,
Like Turk to Christian. Woman's⁷ gentle brain
Could not drop forth such giant-rude invention,
Such Ethiop words, blacker in their effect
Than in their countenance. — Will you hear the letter?

Sil. So please you; for I never heard it yet,
Yet heard too much of Phebe's cruelty.

Ros. She phebes⁸ me. Mark how the tyrant writes.

»Art thou god to shepherd turn'd,

That a maiden's heart hath burn'd?⁹ —

Can a woman rail thus?

Sil. Call you this railing?

Ros. »Why, thy godhead laid apart,

Warr'st thou with a woman's heart?¹⁰

Did you ever hear such railing? —

»Whiles the eye of man did woo me,

That could do no vengeance to me.¹¹ —

Meaning me a beast. —

»If the scorn of your bright eyne¹²

Have power to raise such love in mine,

Alack! in me what strange effect

Would they work in mild aspect?

Whiles you chid me, I did love;

How then might your prayers move?

He that brings this love to thee,

Little knows this love in me:

And by him seal up thy mind;

Whether that thy youth and kind¹³

Will the faithful offer take

Of me, and all that I can make;¹⁴

Or else by him my love deny,

And then I'll study how to die.¹⁵

Sil. Call you this chiding?

Cel. Alas, poor shepherd!

Ros. Do you pity him? no; he deserves no pity. — Wilt thou love such a woman? — What, to make thee an instrument, and play false strains upon thee?¹⁶ not to be endured! — Well, go your way to her, (for I see, love hath made thee a tame snake,) and say this to her: — that if she love me, I charge her to love thee; if she will not, I will never have her, unless thou entreat for her.
— If you be a true lover, hence, and not a word, for here comes more company. [Exit SILVIUS.]

Enter OLIVER.

Oli. Good morrow, fair ones. Pray you, if you know,
Where in the purlieu¹⁵ of this forest stands
A sheep-cote, fenc'd about with olive-trees?

Cel. West of this place, down in the neighbour bottom:
The rank of osiers, by the murmuring stream,
Left on your right hand,¹⁶ brings you to the place.

1) much, ironisch im Sinne des Gegentheils. So in Ben Jonson's Every Man in his Humour: Much wench, or much son! — Die Fol. druckt diese ersten Reden als Verse, was sie offenbar nicht sind. 2) Die zweite Folioausg. lässt did aus, und so manche Hgg. 3) Die Geduld würde sich geberden wie ein Raufbold und Renommist, der bei jedem Anlass auffährt und Handel sucht. 4) Wenn man sich dies gefallen lässt, so lässt man sich Alles gefallen. 5) Eine so plumpe, von grober Arbeit mitgenommene Hand, wie die der Phebe, war nicht im Stande, so zierlich zu schreiben, so feine Striche zu machen, wie dieser Brief sie enthält. 6) invention ist der Inhalt und Styl des Briefes; hand die Handschrift. 7) woman's setzte Rowe für women's der Fol. 8) Sh. bildet scherzhaft ein Verbum to phebe = wie Phebe behandeln, wie in Coriolanus (A. 2, Sc. 1) to fidius von Aufidius. — Vgl. mit diesem Briefe den entsprechenden bei Lodge, Einleitung pag. 351. 9) Der Nachdruck liegt auf man im Gegensatz zu god: So lange das Auge eines Mannes, keines Gottes, um mich warb, so konnte mir das keinen Schaden thun, so blieb ich ungerührt. — Rosalinde fasst aber in geflissentlichem Missverständnisse beast als Gegensatz zu man. 10) Die veraltete Form eyne für eyes gebraucht Sh. häufig im Reime. 11) kind = natürlicher Hang und Trieb, natürliche Neigung. 12) make erklärt Malone mit raise as profit from any thing; Knight deutet es plausibler mit make up. 13) instrument = Werkzeug, und = musikalisches Instrument, auf welchem Phebe falsch spielt. 14) Knight findet mit grosser Wahrscheinlichkeit darin eine Anspielung auf Schlangen, welche der orientalische Schlangenbändiger zu zähmen versteht, so dass sie nicht mehr beissen, sondern sich Alles gefallen lassen. — Andere Commentatoren halten snake für einen blossen Ausdruck der Verachtung, = a poor contemptible fellow. 15) purlieu = der Bezirk, der unmittelbar an einen Wald stösst und noch mit zu dessen Jagdgehege gehört. 16) left gehört zu rank of osiers: der Strich von Weiden, den Ihr beim Gehen zur

But at this hour the house doth keep itself;
There's none within.

Oli. If that an eye may profit by a tongue,¹⁷
Then should I know you by description;
Such garments, and such years: — »The boy is fair,
Of female favour, and bestows himself
Like a ripe sister:¹⁸ the woman low,
And browner than her brother.« Are not you
The owner of the house I did inquire for?

Cel. It is no boast, being ask'd, to say, we are.

Oli. Orlando doth commend him to you both;
And to that youth, he calls his Rosalind,
He sends this bloody napkin.¹⁹ Are you he?

Ros. I am. What must we understand by this?

Oli. Some of my shame; if you will know of me,
What man I am, and how, and why, and where
This handkercher was stain'd.

Cel. I pray you, tell it.

Oli. When last the young Orlando parted from you,
He left a promise to return again
Within an hour;²⁰ and, pacing through the forest,
Chewing the food of sweet and bitter fancy,²¹
Lo, what befell! he threw his eye aside,
And, mark, what object did present itself!
Under an old²² oak, whose boughs were moss'd with age,

And high top bald with dry antiquity,
A wretched ragged man, o'ergrown with hair,
Lay sleeping on his back: about his neck
A green and gilded snake had wreath'd itself,
Who with her head,²³ nimble in threats, approach'd
The opening of his mouth; but suddenly,
Seeing Orlando, it unlink'd itself,
And with indented glides did slip away
Into a bush; under which bush's shade
A lioness, with udders all drawn-dry,
Lay couching, head on ground, with catlike watch,
When that the sleeping man should stir; for 't is
The royal disposition of that beast,
To prey on nothing that doth seem as dead.

This seen, Orlando did approach the man,
And found it was his brother, his elder brother.

Cel. O! I have heard him speak of that same brother;

And he did render²⁴ him the most unnatural
That liv'd 'mongst²⁵ men.

Oli. And well he might so do,
For well I know he was unnatural.

Ros. But, to Orlando. — Did he leave him there,
Food to the suck'd and hungry lioness?

Oli. Twice did he turn his back, and purpos'd so;
But kindness, nobler ever than revenge,

And nature, stronger than his just occasion,²⁶
Made him give battle to the lioness,

Who quickly fell before him: in which hurtling²⁷
From miserable slumber I awak'd.

Cel. Are you his brother?

Ros. Was it you he rescu'd?

Cel. Was 't you that did so oft contrive to kill him?

Oli. 'T was I; but 't is not I. I do not shame
To tell you what I was, since my conversion

So sweetly tastes, being the thing I am.

Ros. But, for the bloody napkin?

Oli. By and by.

When from the first to last, betwixt us two,
Tears our recountments had most kindly bath'd,

As, how²⁸ I came into that desert place: —

In brief,²⁹ he led me to the gentle duke,

Who gave me fresh array, and entertainment,
Committing me unto my brother's love:

Who led me instantly unto his cave,

There stripp'd himself; and here, upon his arm,

The lioness had torn some flesh away,

Which all this while had bled; and now he fainted.

And cried, in fainting, upon Rosalind.

Brief, I recover'd him, bound up his wound;

And, after some small space, being strong at heart,³⁰

He sent me hither, stranger as I am,

To tell this story, that you might excuse

His broken promise; and to give this napkin,

Dy'd in his blood,³¹ unto the shepherd youth

That he in sport doth call his Rosalind.

[ROSALIND swoons.

Cel. Why, how now, Ganymede? sweet Ganymede!

Oli. Many will swoon when they do look on blood.

Cel. There is more in it. — Cousin! — Ganymede!³²

Oli. Look, he recovers.

rechten Seite liegen lasset. 17) Wenn mein Auge sich belehren lassen konnte durch das, was Orlando's Zunge mir gesagt hat. 18) Er benimmt sich oder er giebt sich in seinem Benehmen wie eine völlig ausgewachsene Schwester. — Es wird damit das Uebergewicht der Rosalinde über die Celia angedeutet. — Für a ripe sister schlug Lettsom sinnreich a right forester vor. — Sollte forester Sh.'s Wort sein, so wäre dem Verse auch ohne die Lesart der zweiten Folioausg. but the woman low aufgeholfen. 19) napkin synonym mit handkercher, wie es in Orlando's nächster Rede heisst. Für handkercher der Fol. änderte Rowe handkerchief. 20) Johnson wollte verbessern within two hours, in Uebereinstimmung mit dem, was Orlando vorher (A. 4, Sc. 1) gesagt hatte: For these two hours, Rosalind, I will leave thee. — Indess ist Sh. in solchen Zeitbestimmungen nicht immer consequent. 21) Sh. fand bei Lodge: I have noted the variable disposition of fancy a bitter pleasure wrapt in sweet prejudice. — to chew in demselben übertragenen Sinne = nachdenken, grübeln über Etwas, in Julius Caesar (A. 1, Sc. 2) chew upon this. — Staunton liest, um das Bild noch weiter fortzuführen, cud für food. — fancy ist auch hier = Liebe. 22) Steevens strich old als pleonastisch und verswidrig. 23) Der rasche Uebergang von itself auf her head ist in Sh.'s Manier. 24) to render = Etwas mit Worten wiedergeben, beschreiben. 25) Die Fol. hat amongst. — Vielleicht wäre zu lesen that lived amongst men. 26) his just occasion = der gerechte Anlass oder Beweggrund, den er hatte, seinen Bruder seinem Schicksale zu überlassen. 27) hurtling = lärmender Zusammenstoss, wie hier zwischen Orlando und der Löwin. So in Julius Caesar (A. 2, Sc. 2) The noise of battle hurtled in the air. 28) As, how etc. bezieht sich auf our recountments: die Erzählung z. B. wie ich u. s. w. 29) Die Fol. hat I brief. — Dieses in brief schneidet die weiteren Umstände der Begegnung der beiden Brüder kurz ab. — Vgl. Einleitung pag. 351 u. 352. 30) Da er gutes Muthes war, da er sich erholt hatte. 31) his setzt die zweite Folioausg. für this der Fol., was manche Hgg. beibehalten. 32) Celia in ihrem Schrecken fällt aus der Rolle und redet zuerst Rosalinde als ihre Base, dann, indem sie sich besinnt, als ihren Bruder Ganymed an. — Dyce verwischt diesen Zug, indem er Cousin Ganymede! interpungirt.

Ros. I would I were at home.
Cel. We'll lead you thither. —
 I pray you, will you take him by the arm?
Oli. Be of good cheer, youth. — You a man? You lack a man's heart.
Ros. I do so, I confess it. Ah, sirrah!³³ a body would think this was well counterfeited. I pray you, tell your brother how well I counterfeited. — Heigh-ho! —
Oli. This was not counterfeit: there is too great testimony in your complexion, that it was a passion of earnest.
Ros. Counterfeit, I assure you.
Oli. Well then, take a good heart, and counterfeit to be a man.
Ros. So I do; but, i' faith, I should have been a woman by right.
Cel. Come; you look paler and paler: pray you, draw homewards. — Good Sir, go with us.
Oli. That will I, for I must bear answer back,
 How you excuse my brother, Rosalind.
Ros. I shall devise something. But, I pray you, commend my counterfeiting to him.³⁴ — Will you go?

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.

The Forest of Arden.

Enter TOUCHSTONE and AUDREY.

Touch. We shall find a time, Audrey: patience, gentle
 Audrey.¹

Aud. 'Faith, the priest was good enough, for all the old gentleman's saying.²

Touch. A most wicked Sir Oliver, Audrey; a most vile Mar-text. But, Audrey, there is a youth here in the forrest lays claim to you.

Aud. Ay, I know who 't is: he hath no interest in me in the world. Here comes the man you mean.

Enter WILLIAM.

Touch. It is meat and drink to me to see a clown.³
 By my troth, we that have good wits have much to answer for: we shall be flouting; we cannot hold.

Will. Good even, Audrey.

Aud. God ye good even, William.

Will. And good even to you, Sir.

Touch. Good even, gentle friend. Cover thy head, cover thy head, nay, pr'ythee, be covered. How old are you, friend?

Will. Five-and-twenty, Sir.

Touch. A ripe age. Is thy name William?

Will. William, Sir.

Touch. A fair name. Wast born i' the forest here?

Will. Ay, Sir, I thank God.

Touch. Thank God; — a good answer. Art rich?

Will. 'Faith, Sir, so, so.

Touch. So, so, is good, very good, very excellent good:
 — and yet it is not; it is but so, so. Art thou wise?

Will. Ay, Sir, I have a pretty wit.

Touch. Why, thou say'st well. I do now remember a saying, »The fool doth think he is wise, but the wise man knows himself to be a fool.« The heathen philosopher,⁴ when he had a desire to eat a grape, would open his lips when he put it into his mouth, meaning thereby, that grapes were made to eat, and lips to open. You do love this maid?

Will. I do, Sir.

Touch. Give me your hand. Art thou learned?

Will. No, Sir.

Touch. Then learn this of me. To have, is to have;
 for it is a figure in rhetoric, that drink, being poured out of a cup into a glass, by filling the one doth empty the other; for all your writers do consent,⁵ that ipse is he:
 now, you are not ipse, for I am he.

Will. Which he, Sir?

Touch. He, Sir, that must marry this woman. Therefore, you clown, abandon, — which is in the vulgar, leave, — the society, — which in the boorish is, company, — of this female, — which in the common is, woman; which together is, abandon the society of this female, or, clown, thou perishest; or, to thy better understanding, diest; or, to wit, I kill thee, make thee away, translate thy life into death, thy liberty into bondage.
 I will deal in poison with thee, or in bastinado, or in steel: I will bandy with thee in faction;⁶ I will o'errun thee with policy; I will kill thee a hundred and fifty ways: therefore tremble, and depart.

Aud. Do, good William.

Will. God rest you merry, Sir.⁷ [Exit.]

Enter CORIN.

Cor. Our master and mistress seek you: come, away, away!

Touch. Trip, Audrey, trip, Audrey. — I attend, I attend. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Another Part of the Forest.

Enter ORLANDO and OLIVER.

Orl. Is 't possible, that on so little acquaintance you should like her? that, but seeing, you should love her?
 and, loving, woo? and, wooing, she should grant? and will you persevere¹ to enjoy her?

Oli. Neither call the giddiness of it in question,² the poverty of her, the small acquaintance, my sudden wooing, nor her³ sudden consenting; but say with me, I love

33) Manche Hgg. setzen mit Pope Sir für sirrah, das häufig in familiärer Rede und Anrede gebraucht wurde.
 34) Rülmt ihm, wie geschickt ich mich verstellte, als ich eine Ohnmacht fingirte.

1) Wie es scheint, hatte Audrey auf schleunige Verheirathung gedrungen. 2) Unter old gentleman ist Jaques gemeint. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 3, zum Schluss. 3) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 4, Anm. 12. 4) Touchstone hat hier wohl kaum eine bestimmte Persönlichkeit im Sinne, sondern fingirt die Tradition einer Anekdote, die durch ihren nichtssagenden Inhalt komisch wirken soll. — Die Ideenverbindung mit dem Folgenden liegt klarer vor in einer Stelle bei Lodge: Phebe is no lattice for your lips, and her grapes hang so hie, that gaze at them you may, but touch them you cannot. 5) to consent = übereinstimmen, einer Meinung sein. 6) Ich will eine Partei gegen Dich aufbringen, im Parteikampf mit Dir anbinden. 7) Gott erhalte Euch bei guter Laune.

1) Bleibt Ihr dabei, dass Ihr sie besitzen wollt? — to persevere mit betonter zweiter Sylbe ist Sh.'s Wort.
 2) Zieht weder das Unüberlegte, Unbedachte der Sache in Betracht. — Die folgenden Worte zeigen, worin the

Aliena; say with her, that she loves me; consent with both, that we may enjoy each other: it shall be to your good; for my father's house, and all the revenue that was old Sir Rowland's, will I estate⁴ upon you, and here live and die a shepherd.

Orl. You have my consent. Let your wedding be to-morrow: thither will I invite the duke, and all his contented followers.⁵ Go you, and prepare Aliena; for, look you, here comes my Rosalind.

Enter ROSALIND.

Ros. God save you, brother.

Oli. And you, fair sister.⁶ [Exit.]

Ros. O! my dear Orlando, how it grieves me to see thee wear thy heart in a scarf.

Orl. It is my arm.

Ros. I thought thy heart had been wounded with the claws of a lion.

Orl. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a lady.

Ros. Did your brother tell you how I counterfeited to swoon,⁷ when he showed me your handkercher?

Orl. Ay, and greater wonders than that.

Ros. O! I know where you are. — Nay, 't is true: there was never anything so sudden, but the fight of two rams, and Caesar's thrasonical brag of — »I came, saw, and overcame:«⁸ for your brother and my sister no sooner met, but they looked; no sooner looked, but they loved; no sooner loved, but they sighed; no sooner sighed, but they asked one another the reason; no sooner knew the reason, but they sought the remedy: and in these degrees have they made a pair of stairs to marriage, which they will climb incontinent, or else be incontinent⁹ before marriage. They are in the very wrath of love, and they will together: clubs¹⁰ cannot part them.

Orl. They shall be married to-morrow, and I will bid the duke to the nuptial.¹¹ But, O! how bitter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes! By so much the more shall I to-morrow be at the height of heart-heaviness, by how much I shall think my brother happy in having what he wishes for.

Ros. Why then, to-morrow I cannot serve your turn for Rosalind?

Orl. I can live no longer by thinking.

Ros. I will weary you then no longer with idle talking.

Know of me then (for now I speak to some purpose), that I know you are a gentleman of good conceit. I speak not this, that you should bear a good opinion of my knowledge, insomuch I say, I know you are; neither do I labour for a greater esteem than may in some little measure draw a belief from you, to do yourself good, and not to grace me.¹² Believe then, if you please, that I can do strange things. I have, since I was three years old, conversed with a magician, most profound in his art, and yet not damnable. If you do love Rosalind so near the heart as your gesture cries it out, when your brother marries Aliena, shall you marry her. I know into what straits of fortune she is driven; and it is not impossible to me, if it appear not inconvenient to you, to set her before your eyes to-morrow, human as she is, and without any danger.¹³

Orl. Speak'st thou in sober meaning?

Ros. By my life, I do; which I tender dearly, though I say I am a magician.¹⁴ Therefore, put you in your best array, bid your friends,¹⁵ for if you will be married to-morrow, you shall, and to Rosalind, if you will. Look, here comes a lover of mine, and a lover of hers.

Enter SILVIUS and PHEBE.

Phe. Youth, you have done me much ungentleness, To show the letter that I writ to you.

Ros. I care not, if I have: it is my study To seem¹⁶ despiteful and ungentle to you. You are there follow'd by a faithful shepherd: Look upon him, love him; he worships you.

Phe. Good shepherd, tell this youth what 't is to love.

Sil. It is to be all made of sighs and tears;¹⁷ And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganymede.

Orl. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of faith and service; And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganymede.

Orl. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of fantasy, All made of passion, and all made of wishes; All adoration, duty, and observance;

giddiness of it besteht. 3) Das unentbehrliche her fügte zuerst Rowe ein. 4) to estate upon = als erbliches Besitzthum auf Jemanden übertragen. 5) all his contented followers = alle seine Diener, die mit ihrem Dienst, mit ihrer bescheidenen Stellung bei dem verbannten Herzog zufrieden sind, die nach nichts Höherem streben. — Die Fol., welche aus dieser Prosa Verse zu machen sucht, setzt deshalb all's für all his. 6) Oliver geht ein auf den zwischen Orlando und Ganymed verabredeten Scherz, dass Letzterer die Rosalinde des Ersteren vorstellen solle, und begrüsst deshalb den vermeintlichen Ganymed als Schwester, d. h. als Schwägerin, wie Ganymed ihn als Bruder, d. h. als Schwager, begrüsst. — Das folgende Exit fehlt in der Fol. und in den meisten Ausgg. und wurde zuerst von Capell ergänzt. 7) Die Fol. schreibt sound für swoon; eine Orthographie, die sich in ihr neben swoond und swoound häufiger findet. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 5, Anm. 3. 8) Julius Cäsar's bekanntes veni, vidi, vici wird als grosssprecherisch auch erwähnt in Cymbeline (A. 3, Sc. 1) a kind of conquest || Caesar made here; but made not here his brag || Of „came“, and „saw“, and „overcame“. — Die Fol. hat overcome. 9) incontinent = unmittelbar, sogleich, als Adverb, und = unenthaltend, als Adjectiv. 10) clubs! clubs! war der gewöhnliche Ruf in London, um ein Handgemenge oder eine Rauferei auf der Strasse aneinander zu bringen. — Hier ist das scherzhaft übertragen auf das enge Zusammenhalten der Liebenden, wie ebenvorher wrath of love in uneigentlichem Sinne stand. 11) nuptial als Singular bei Sh. — to bid = einladen. 12) Ich strebe nicht nach einer grösseren Achtung bei Euch für mich, als nur so weit, dass Ihr mir die Fähigkeit zutraut, Euch Gutes zu erweisen; nicht aber strebe ich nach dieser Achtung, um mich damit in Euren Augen zu schmücken. 13) In menschlicher, leibhafter Gestalt, und ohne etwa gefährliche Zauberkünste anzuwenden. 14) Rosalinde, indem sie eingesteht, dass sie zaubern könne, setzt sich der Gefahr aus, dass man ihr wegen der Zauberei den Process mache und sie zum Tode verurtheile. 15) Ladet Eure Freunde zu Eurer Hochzeit ein. 16) to seem = sich zeigen, erscheinen. 17) Es ist, ganz aus Seufzern und Thränen zu bestehen. 18) Für das erste oder für das zweite observance, das in solcher

All humbleness, all patience, and impatience;
All purity, all trial, all observance;¹⁵
And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And so am I for Ganymede.

Orl. And so am I for Rosalind.

Ros. And so am I for no woman.

Phe. [To ROSALIND.] If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

Sil. [To PHEBE.] If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

Orl. If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

Ros. Who do you speak to,¹⁹ Why blame you me to love you?

Orl. To her, that is not here, nor doth not hear.

Ros. Pray you, no more of this: 't is like the howling of Irish wolves against the moon.²⁰ — [To SILVIUS] I will help you, if I can: — [to PHEBE] I would love you, if I could. — To-morrow meet me all together. — [To PHEBE] I will marry you, if ever I marry woman, and I'll be married to-morrow: — [to ORLANDO] I will satisfy you, if ever I satisfied man, and you shall be married to-morrow: — [to SILVIUS] I will content you, if what pleases you contents you, and you shall be married to-morrow. — [To ORLANDO] As you love Rosalind, meet: — [to SILVIUS] as you love Phebe, meet: and as I love no woman, I'll meet. — So, fare you well: I have left you commands.

Sil. I'll not fail, if I live.

Phe. Nor I.

Orl. Nor I.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Another Part of the Forest.

Enter TOUCHSTONE and AUDREY.

Touch. To-morrow is the joyful day, Audrey: to-morrow will we be married.

Aud. I do desire it with all my heart, and I hope it is no dishonest desire, to desire to be a woman of the world.¹ Here come two of the banished duke's pages.

Enter Two Pages.

1. Page. Well met, honest gentleman.

Touch. By my troth, well met. Come, sit, sit, and a song.

2. Page. We are for you: sit i' the middle.

1. Page. Shall we clap into 't roundly,² without hawking, or spitting, or saying we are hoarse, which are the only³ prologues to a bad voice?

2. Page. I' faith, i' faith; and both in a tune, like two gipsies on a horse.⁴

SONG.

*It was a lover, and his lass,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
That o'er the green corn-field did pass,
In the spring time, the only pretty ring⁵ time,
When birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding;
Sweet lovers love the spring.*

*Between the acres of the rye,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
These pretty country folks would lie,
In spring time, etc.*

*This carol they began that hour,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
How that a life was but a flower
In spring time, etc.*

*And therefore take the present time,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
For love is crowned with the prime
In spring time, etc.*

Touch. Truly, young gentlemen, though there was no great matter in the ditty, yet the note was very untuneable.⁶

1. Page. You are deceived, Sir: we kept time; we lost not our time.

Touch. By my troth, yes; I count it but time lost to hear such a foolish song. God be wi' you; and God mend your voices. Come, Audrey. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

Another Part of the Forest.

Enter DUKE Senior, AMIENS, JAKES, ORLANDO, OLIVER, and CELIA.

Duke S. Dost thou believe, Orlando, that the boy can do all this that he hath promised?

Orl. I sometimes do believe, and sometimes do not, As those that fear; they hope, and know they fear.⁷

Wiederholung unstatthaft wäre, hat Sh. ein anderes, ähnliches Wort: obedience, wie Malone will, oder noch plausibler obeisance, wie Ritson vorschlägt, geschrieben. 19) So änderte Rowe das why do you speak too der Fol. 20) So bei Lodge: I tell thee, Montanus, in courting Phoebe, thou barkest with the wolves of Syria, against the moon. — In Midsummer-Night's Dream (A. 5, Sc. 2) Now the hungry lion roars, || And the wolf howls the moon.

1) to be a woman of the world = sich verheirathen, wie in Much Ado about Nothing (A. 2, Sc. 1) to go to the world in demselben Sinne steht. — Steevens citirt dazu aus der Bibel, Evang. Luc. (Cap. 20, V. 34) the children of this world marry, and are given in marriage. 2) roundly = geradezu, ohne Umschweife oder Complimente. 3) only = auserlesen, vortrefflich, wird in diesem Sinne mit dem bestimmten Artikel gesetzt: die rechte, gehörige Einleitung. 4) Wie zwei Zigeuner auf einem Pferde reiten, so wollen die Beiden aus einem Tone singen. — Das folgende Lied ist in der Fol. verkehrt arrangirt, indem die letzte, vierte Strophe die Stelle der zweiten einnimmt. Die von Thirlby herrührende richtige Strophenfolge hat seitdem ihre Bestätigung gefunden in einer mit Noten begleiteten Abschrift des Liedes, die sich in der Advocatenbibliothek in Edinburgh findet. 5) Die Fol. hat ring time, wofür Johnson rank time setzte. Das Richtige fand Steevens: ring time = Zeit zum Ringewechseln, zum Heirathen. So liest auch die Edingburgher Handschrift. 6) In Bezug auf die Antwort des Pagen änderte Theobald untuneable für untuneable der Fol. — Indess ist bei Sh. time und tune synonym, wie gleich nachher das ihm geläufige Wortspiel von time = Zeitmass, Takt, und = Zeit, wiederkehrt.

1) Diese Zeile giebt nach der alten Interpunction As those that fear they hope, and know they fear keinen Sinn, wohl aber nach der von Henley vorgeschlagenen: Ich schwanke zwischen Glauben und Unglauben,

Enter ROSALIND, SILVIUS, and PHEBE.

Ros. Patience once more, whiles our compact is urg'd.² —

[To the DUKE.] You say, if I bring in your Rosalind, You will bestow her on Orlando here?

Duke S. That would I, had I kingdoms to give with her.

Ros. [To ORLANDO.] And you say, you will have her, when I bring her?

Orl. That would I, were I of all kingdoms king.

Ros. [To PHEBE.] You say, you'll marry me, if I be willing?

Phe. That will I, should I die the hour³ after.

Ros. But if you do refuse to marry me, You'll give yourself to this most faithful shepherd?

Phe. So is the bargain.

Ros. [To SILVIUS.] You say, that you'll have Phebe, if she will?

Sil. Though to have her and death were both one thing.

Ros. I have promis'd to make all this matter even. Keep you your word, O duke! to give your daughter; — You yours, Orlando, to receive his daughter; — Keep you⁴ your word, Phebe, that you'll marry me, Or else, refusing me, to wed this shepherd; — Keep your word, Silvius, that you'll marry her, If she refuse me: — and from hence I go, To make these doubts all even.

[Exeunt ROSALIND and CELIA.]

Duke S. I do remember in this shepherd-boy Some lively touches of my daughter's favour.

Orl. My lord, the first time that I ever saw him, Methought he was a brother to your daughter; But, my good lord, this boy is forest-born, And hath been tutor'd in the rudiments Of many desperate studies⁵ by his uncle, Whom he reports to be a great magician, Obscured in the circle of this forest.

Jaq. There is, sure, another flood toward, and these couples are coming to the ark. Here comes a pair of very strange beasts,⁶ which in all tongues are called fools.

Enter TOUCHSTONE and AUDREY.

Touch. Salutation and greeting to you all.

Jaq. Good my lord, bid him welcome. This is the motley-minded⁷ gentleman, that I have so often met in the forest: he hath been a courtier, he swears.

Touch. If any man doubt that, let him put me to my purgation.⁸ I have trod a measure;⁹ I have flattered a lady; I have been politic with my friend, smooth with mine enemy; I have undone three tailors;¹⁰ I have had four quarrels, and like to have fought one.

Jaq. And how was that ta'en up?

Touch. 'Faith, we met, and found the quarrel was upon the seventh cause.¹¹

Jaq. How seventh cause? — Good my lord, like this fellow.

Duke S. I like him very well.

Touch. God 'ild you,¹² Sir; I desire you of the like.¹³ I press in here, Sir, amongst the rest of the country copulatives, to swear, and to forswear, according as marriage binds, and blood breaks.¹⁴ — A poor virgin, Sir, an ill-favoured thing, Sir, but mine own: a poor humour of mine, Sir, to take that no man else will. Rich honesty dwells like a miser, Sir, in a poor house, as your pearl in your foul oyster.

Duke S. By my faith, he is very swift¹⁵ and sententious.

Touch. According to the fool's bolt, Sir, and such dulcet diseases.

Jaq. But, for the seventh cause, how did you find the quarrel on the seventh cause?

Touch. Upon a lie seven times removed. — Bear your body more seeming, Audrey. — As thus, Sir. I did dislike¹⁶ the cut of a certain courtier's beard: he sent me word, if I said his beard was not cut well, he was in the mind it was: this is called the »retort courteous«. If I sent him word again it was not well cut, he would send me word he cut it to please himself: this is called the »quip modest«. If again, it was not well cut, he disabled¹⁷ my judgment: this is called the »reply churlish«. If wie Diejenigen, welche Zweifel hegen; sie hoffen dabei im Stillen und wissen doch, dass sie zweifeln, dass sie Grund zum Zweifeln haben. — Der Nachdruck liegt auf know im Gegensatze zu hope. 2) Die Anwesenden sollen sich still verhalten, während Rosalinde den Einzelnen den mit ihnen abgemachten Vertrag noch einmal in's Gedächtniss zurückruft, wie dies im Folgenden geschieht. 3) hour ist hier, wie oft, zweisylbig zu lesen. 4) Manche Hgg. streichen mit Pope you. 5) desperate studies = bedenkliche Studien, Studien, zu denen ein tollkühner Muth gehört. — Vgl. zu der vorhergehenden Aeusserung des Herzogs die entsprechende bei Lodge, Einleitung pag. 352. 6) Bei dem Herannahen der Sündfluth flüchten sich Paare von allen Thiergattungen in die Arche des Noah, und darunter figuriren als ein Paar seltsamer Thiere auch Touchstone und Audrey. 7) motley-minded bezeichnet, dass Touchstone nicht bloss die Narrentracht trägt, sondern auch im Geiste dem entsprechend närrisch ist. — So in Twelfth-Night (A. 1, Sc. 5) I wear not motley in my brain. 8) purgation bezieht sich auf doubt: gerichtliche und eidliche Rechtfertigung von dem Verdachte, dass ich etwa kein Hofmann gewesen sei. 9) to tread a measure = eine Menuet tanzen. 10) Auf die Sitte vornehmer Leute, ihren Schneider nicht zu bezahlen, geht auch ein Spruch in K. Lear (A. 3, Sc. 2) When nobles are their tailors' tutors. 11) seventh cause wird nachher näher bestimmt als a lie seven times removed. Das Ganze ist eine Satyre auf ein Buch von Vincentio Savio: Of Honor and honorable Quarrels (1595), dem die Einzelheiten des von Touchstone auseinandergesetzten Systems ziemlich genau entlehnt sind. Vgl. darüber Einleitung pag. 353. 12) Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 3, Anm. 16. 13) Diese Construction mit dem Accusativ der Person und of der Sache = Jemanden um Etwas ersuchen, kommt bei to desire und synonymen Verben häufig vor. 14) to swear = Treue schwören, gehört zu as marriage binds; to forswear = den Treuschwur brechen, gehört zu as blood breaks = wie die Leidenschaft den Mann dazu hinreisst. 15) swift = rasch und gewandt, in Auffassung und Antwort, treffend. So in Much Ado about Nothing (A. 3, Sc. 1) Having so swift and excellent a wit, || As she is priz'd to have. — Auf das dem Narren gespendete Compliment bezieht sich das folgende according to the fool's bolt = wie der Bolzen eines Narren zum Ziel trifft; es ist das eine sprichwörtliche Redensart, die der Narr zu ähnlichen solchen, komisch als dulcet diseases bezeichneten Redensarten einreihet. 16) to dislike = sein Missfallen zu erkennen geben. So in Measure for Measure (A. 1, Sc. 2) I never heard any soldier dislike it. 17) Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 1, Anm. 9. 18) lie circumstantial, again, it was not well cut, he would answer, I spake not true: this is called the »reproof valiant«. If again, it was not well cut, he would say, I lie: this is called the »countercheck quarrelsome:« and so to the »lie circumstantial«, and the »lie direct«.¹⁸

Jaq. And how oft did you say, his beard was not well cut?

Touch. I durst go no further than the »lie circumstantial«, nor he durst not give me the »lie direct«; and so we measured swords, and parted.

Jaq. Can you nominate in order now the degrees of the lie?

Touch. O Sir, we quarrel in print;¹⁹ by the book, as you have books for good manners:²⁰ I will name you the degrees. The first, the retort courteous; the second, the quip modest; the third, the reply churlish; the fourth, the reproof valiant; the fifth, the countercheck quarrelsome; the sixth, the lie with circumstance; the seventh, the lie direct. All these you may avoid, but the lie direct; and you may avoid that too, with an if. I knew when seven justices could not take up a quarrel; but when the parties were met themselves, one of them thought but of an if, as if you said so, then I said so; and they shook hands and swore brothers. Your if is the only²¹ peace-maker; much virtue in if.

Jaq. Is not this a rare fellow, my lord? he 's as good at anything, and yet a fool.

Duke S. He uses his folly like a stalking-horse,²² and under the presentation of that, he shoots his wit.

Enter HYMEN, leading ROSALIND in woman's clothes, and CELIA.

Still Music.²³

Hym. Then is there mirth in heaven,
When earthly things made even Atone together.²⁴

Good duke, receive thy daughter,
Hymen from heaven brought her;
Yea, brought her hither,
That thou mightst join her hand with his,
Whose heart within her bosom is.²⁵

Ros. [To DUKE S.] To you I give myself, for I am yours.

[To ORLANDO.] To you I give myself, for I am yours.

Duke S. If there be truth in sight, you are my daughter.

Orl. If there be truth in sight, you are my Rosalind.

Phe. If sight and shape be true,
Why then, my love adieu!

Ros. [To DUKE S.] I 'll have no father, if you be not he: —

[To ORLANDO] I 'll have no husband, if you be not he: —

[To PHEBE] Nor ne'er wed woman, if you be not she.

Hym. Peace, ho! I bar confusion.

'T is I must make conclusion

Of these most strange events:

Here 's eight that must take hands,

To join in Hymen's bands,

If truth holds true contents.²⁶

[To ORLANDO and ROSALIND] You and you no cross shall part:

[To OLIVER and CELIA] You and you are heart
in heart:

[To PHEBE] You to his love must accord,

Or have a woman to your lord:

[To TOUCHSTONE and AUDREY] You and you are sure together,

As the winter to foul weather.

Whiles a wedlock-hymn we sing,

Feed yourselves with questioning,

That reason²⁷ wonder may diminish,

How thus we met, and these things finish.

SONG.

Wedding is great Juno's crown:

O blessed bond of board and bed!

'T is Hymen peoples every town;

High wedlock then be honoured.²⁸

Honour, high honour, and renown,

To Hymen, god of every town!

Duke S. O my dear niece! welcome thou art to me:

Even daughter, welcome in no less degree.

Phe. [To SILVIUS.] I will not eat my word,²⁹ now
thou art mine;

Thy faith my fancy to thee doth combine.³⁰

Enter JACQUES DE BOIS.³¹

That bring these tidings to this fair assembly. —
 Duke Frederick, hearing how that every day
 Men of great worth resorted to this forest,
 Address'd³² a mighty power, which were on foot
 In his own conduct, purposely to take
 His brother here, and put him to the sword.
 And to the skirts of this wild wood he came,
 Where, meeting with an old religious man,
 After some question with him, was converted
 Both from his enterprise, and from the world;
 His crown bequeathing to his banish'd brother,
 And all their lands restor'd to them³³ again,
 That were with him exil'd. This to be true,
 I do engage my life.

Duke S. Welcome, young man;
 Thou offer'st fairly to thy brothers' wedding:
 To one, his lands withheld; and to the other,
 A land itself at large, a potent dukedom.
 First, in this forest, let us do those ends
 That here were well begun, and well begot;³⁴
 And after, every of this happy number,
 That have endur'd shrewd days and nights with us,
 Shall share the good of our returned fortune,
 According to the measure of their states.
 Meantime, forget this new-fall'n dignity,
 And fall into our rustic revelry. —
 Play, music! and you brides and bridegrooms all,
 With measure heap'd in joy,³⁵ to the measures fall.

Jaq. Sir, by your patience. — If I heard you rightly,
 The duke hath put on a religious life,
 And thrown into neglect the pompous court?

Jaq. de B. He hath.

Jaq. To him will I: out of these convertites
 There is much matter to be heard and learn'd. —

[To Duke S.] You to your former honour I bequeath;
 Your patience, and your virtue, well deserve it: —

[To Orlando] You to a love, that your true faith doth merit: —

[To Oliver] You to your land, and love, and great allies:³⁶

[To Silvius] You to a long and well deserved bed: —

[To Touchstone] And you to wrangling; for thy loving voyage

Is but for two months victuall'd. — So, to your pleasures:

I am for other than for dancing measures.

Duke S. Stay, Jaques, stay.

Jaq. To see no pastime, I: — what you would have,
 I'll stay to know at your abandon'd cave. [Exit.]

Duke S. Proceed, proceed: we will begin these rites,
 As³⁷ we do trust they'll end in true delights.

[A dance.]

EPILOGUE.

Ros. It is not the fashion to see the lady the epilogue; but it is no more unhandsome, than to see the lord the prologue.³⁸ If it be true that good wine needs no bush,³⁹
 't is true that a good play needs no epilogue; yet to good wine they do use good bushes, and good plays prove the better by the help of good epilogues. What a case am I in then, that am neither a good epilogue, nor cannot insinuate with you in the behalf of a good play? I am not furnished like a beggar; therefore to beg will not become me: my way is, to conjure you; and I'll begin with the women. I charge you, O women! for the love you bear to men, to like as much of this play as please you: and I charge you, O men! for the love you bear to women (as I perceive by your simpering, none of you hates⁴⁰ them), that between you and the women, the play may please.
 If I were a woman,⁴¹ I would kiss as many of you as had beards that pleased me, complexions that liked me,⁴² and breaths that I defied not; and, I am sure, as many as have good beards, or good faces, or sweet breaths, will, for my kind offer, when I make curtsy, bid me farewell.
 [Exeunt.]

vow. 31) Die Fol. hat Enter Second Brother. — Der Name ergibt sich aus der ersten Rede Orlando's (A. 1, Sc. 1). — Vgl. Einleitung pag. 353. 32) to address = rüsten. 33) him in der Fol., von Rowe verbessert. 34) Die Zwecke, die im Walde wohl begonnen und wohl beschafft wurden, sind die Vermählungen der verschiedenen Paare. 35) measure heap'd in joy = das aufgehäuften Mass der Freude, ist ein Wortspiel mit measures = Tänze. 36) great allies = die Verwandtschaft mit dem wiedereingesetzten Herzog. 37) Manche Hgg. setzen willkürlich and für as. — Die folgenden Bühnenweisungen A dance und Epilogue fehlen in der Fol., welche dagegen hinter der Rede des Herzogs Exit setzt. 38) Der Prolog wurde in der Regel nicht von dem Schauspieler gesprochen, der in dem Stücke die Rolle des grossen Herrn hatte, sondern von einem untergeordneten Darsteller. 39) Dieses Sprichwort, das auf die Sitte anspielt, einen Busch, meistens von Epheu, an der Thüre einer Weinschenke aufzuhängen, wird u. A. in Gascoigne's Glass of Government (1775) erwähnt: Now a days the good wyne needeth none ivye garland. 40) Manche Hgg. setzen hate für hates der Fol. 41) Zu Sh.'s Zeit wurden die Frauenrollen von Jünglingen oder Knaben dargestellt. 42) that liked me = welche mir zusagten, gefielen. Diese Construction von to like kehrt öfter bei Sh. wieder; so in Hamlet (A. 2, Sc. 2) it likes us well.

THE TAMING OF THE SHREW.

Einleitung.

In der Folioausgabe der Shakspeare'schen Dramen (1623) steht, als das elfte Stück unter den Comedies, The Taming of the Shrew. Es ist daselbst, freilich nur mangelhaft und ungenau, in Acte eingetheilt; eine Bezeichnung der Scenen und ein Personenverzeichniss, das zuerst Rowe in seiner Ausgabe (1709) gab, fehlen. Der Text gehört zu den besseren der Folio und bietet nur geringe Schwierigkeiten.

Dass Shakspeare's Taming of the Shrew schon vorher in einer etwa jetzt verloren gegangenen Einzelausgabe in Quarto erschienen wäre, wird uns weder durch eine sonstige Notiz bezeugt, noch durch irgend eine Eintragung in die Register der Buchhändlergilde wahrscheinlich gemacht. Zwar haben auch die Verleger der Folioausgabe unter denjenigen Dramen Shakspeare's, die vorher nicht einem andern Verleger angehört hatten und also noch besonders eingetragen werden mussten, dieses Lustspiel nicht namhaft gemacht; aber diese Uebergelung, sowie die Nichterwähnung desselben in Francis Meres' Palladis Tamia (1598), erklärt sich am einfachsten aus der Annahme, dass weder die Herausgeber der Folio noch Francis Meres in The Taming of the Shrew ein eigentliches Originalwerk unseres Dichters, diesem allein angehörig, zu erkennen vermochten, sondern lediglich eine Shakspeare'sche Bearbeitung eines älteren Dramas unter fast gleichlautendem Namen, das dem Publicum sowohl durch wiederholte Auflagen als durch die Aufführungen auf einer andern Bühne hinlänglich bekannt geworden, vielleicht auch häufig mit dem Shakspeare'schen Lustspiel schon verwechselt war. Dieses ältere Drama erschien nachweislich zuerst im Druck 1594 mit folgendem Titelblatt: A Pleasant Conceited Historie, called The Taming of a Shrew. As it was sundry times acted by the Right honorable the Earle of Pembroke his seruants. Printed at London by Peter Short and are to be sold by Cutbert Burbie, at his shop at the Royall Exchange. 1594. — Eine zweite Auflage vom Jahre 1596 und eine dritte vom Jahre 1607 bezeugen die fortdauernde Popularität dieses Lustspiels, welche vielleicht darin ihren Grund hatte, dass das Lesepublicum, dem das Shakspeare'sche Drama im Drucke vorenthalten wurde, sich für die Lectüre, wie mit einem Surrogate, mit diesem, denselben Stoff in äusserlich wenigstens gleicher Bearbeitung darbietenden Stücke begnügen musste. Denn auf dieses ältere Taming of a Shrew hat Shakspeare sein Taming of the Shrew in ungefähr derselben Weise begründet, wie sein King John das ältere Drama von dem Troublesome Raigne of John King of England zu seiner Grundlage hat. Um das Verfahren des Dichters bei dieser Benutzung eines fremden Originals zu charakterisiren, ist es, wie in der Einleitung zum King John, zunächst unsere Aufgabe, die Aehnlichkeiten und Verschiedenheiten der beiden Dramen hervorzuheben und aus dem älteren Taming of a Shrew so viel zu citiren, wie zu diesem Zwecke nöthig erscheint.*)

Die Personen des Vorspiels sind fast dieselben in beiden Dramen, nur dass Shakspeare an die Stelle des Zapfers die Wirthin gesetzt hat. Der eine Schauspieler, der Clown der Gesellschaft, wird nach der Rolle, die er späterhin in dem eigentlichen Drama zu spielen hat, schon vorher als Sander bezeichnet. Das Vorspiel selbst lautet in der älteren Fassung, nach dem Texte der ersten Ausgabe von 1594, wörtlich und buchstäblich abgedruckt, folgendermassen:

Enter a Tapster, beating out of his doores
Slie Droonken.

Tapster.

*You whorson droonken slaue, you had best be gone,
And empty your droonken panch some where else.
For in this house thou shalt not rest to night.*

[Exit Tapster.]

Slie. Tilly, vally, by crisee Tapster Ile fese you anon.

*Fils the tother pot and alls paid for, looke you
I doo drinke it of mine owne Instegation, Omne bene*

*Heere Ile lie awhile, why Tapster I say,
Fils a fresh cushen heere.
Heigh ho, heers good warme lying. [He fals asleepe.*

Enter a Noble man and his men from hunting.

*Lord. Now that the gloomie shaddow of the night,
Longing to view Orions drisling lookes,
Leapes from th' antarticke world vnto the skie,
And dims the Welkin with her pitchie breath,
And darkesome night oreshades the christall heauens,
Here breake we off our hunting for to night;
Cupple vppe the hounds and let vs hie vs home,*

*) Der evidenten Thatsache gegenüber, dass Shakspeare seinem Drama das ältere Taming of a Shrew zu Grunde gelegt, bedarf es kaum der Erwähnung zweier abweichender Hypothesen: derjenigen Pope's, der beide Dramen für Werke Shakspeare's hielt und demnach ganze Stücke aus dem ältern in das jüngere hinübernahm, und einer andern, sinnreichern Hypothese von Hickson, dass das Lustspiel des Anonymus eine Nachahmung des Shakspeare'schen Lustspiels sei.

And bid the huntsman see them meated well,
For they haue all deseru'd it well to claie,
But soft, what sleepe fellow is this lies heere?
Or is he dead, see one what he dooth lacke?

Seruingman. My lord, tis nothing but a drunken sleepe,
His head is too heauie for his bodie,
And he hath drunke so much that he can go no further.

Lord. Fie, how the slauish villaine stinckes of drinke.

Ho, sirha arise. What so sound asleepe?
Go take him vppe and beare him to my house,
And beare him easilie for feare he wake,
And in my fairest chamber make a fire,
And set a sumptuous banquet on the boord,
And put my richest garmentes on his backe,
Then set him at the Table in a chaire:
When that is doone against he shall awake,
Let heauenlie musicke play about him still,
Go two of you awaie and beare him hence,
And then Ile tell you what I haue deuise,
But see in any case you wake him not.

[Exeunt two with Slie.

Now take my cloake and gyue me one of yours,
Al fellowes now, and see you take me so,
For we will waite vpon this droonken man,
To see his couninace when he dooth awake
And finde him selfe clothed in such attire,
With heauenlie musicke sounding in his eares,
And such a banquet set before his eies,
The fellow sure will thinke he is in heauen,
But we will be about him when he wakes,
And see you call him Lord, at everie word,
And offer thou him his horse to ride abroad,
And thou his hawkes and houndes to hunt the deere,
And I will aske what sutes he meanes to weare,
And what so ere he saith, see you doo not laugh,
But still perswade him that he is a Lord.

Enter one.

Mes. And it please your honour your plaiers be com

And doo attend your honours pleasure here.

Lord. The fittest time they could haue chosen out,
Bid one or two of them come hither straight,
Now will I fit my selfe accordinglie,
For they shall play to him when he awakes.

Enter two of the players with packs at their backs,
and a boy.

Now sirs, what store of plaies haue you?

San. Marrie my lord you maie haue a Tragical
Or a comoditie, or what you will.

The other. A Comedie thou shouldst say, souns thout shame vs all.

Lord. And whats the name of your Comedie?

San. Marrie my lord tis calde The taming of a shrew

Tis a good lesson for vs my lord, for vs yt are married men.

Lord. The taming of a shrew, thats excellent sure,

Go see that you make you readie straight,
For you must play before a lord to night,
Say you are his men and I your fellow,
Hees something foolish, but what so ere he saes,

See that you be not dasht out of countenance.
And sirha go you make you ready straight,
And dresse your selfe like some louelie ladie,
And when I call see that you come to me,
For I will say to him thou art his wife,
Dallie with him and hug him in thine armes,
And if he desire to goe to bed with thee,
Then faine some scuse and say thou wilt anon.
Be gone I say, and see thou doost it well.

Boy. Feare not my Lord, Ile dandell him well enough

And make him thinke I loue him mightilie.

[Ex. boy.

Lord. Now sirs go you and make you ready to,
For you must play assoone as he dooth wake.

San. O braue, sirha Tom, we must play before
A foolish Lord, come lets go make us ready,
Go get a dishclout to make cleane your shooes,
And Ile speake for the properties, My Lord, we must

Haue a shoulder of mutton for a propertie,
And a little vinegre to make our Diuell rore.

Lord. Very well: sirha see that they want nothing.

[Exeunt Omnes.

Enter two with a table and a banquet on it, and two other with Slie asleepe in a chaire, richlie apparelled, and the musicke plaieng.

One. So: sirha now go call my Lord,
And tel him that all things is ready as he wild it.

Another. Set thou some wine vpon the boord
And then Ile go fetch my Lord presentlie. [Exit.

Enter the Lord and his men.

Lord. How now, what is all thinges readie?

One. I my Lord.

Lord. Then sound the musick, and Ile wake him straight,

And see you doo as earst I gaue in charge.

My lord, My lord, he sleepes soundlie: My Lord.

Slie. Tapster, gis a little small ale. Heigh ho.

Lord. Heers wine my lord, the purest of the grape.

Slie. For which Lord?

Lord. For your honour my Lord.

Slie. Who I, am I a Lord? Jesus what fine ap-parell haue I got.

Lord. More richer farre your honour hath to weare,

And if it please you I will fetch them straight.

Wil. And if your honour please to ride abroad

Ile fetch you lustie steedes more swift of pace

Then winged Pegasus in all his pride,

That ran so swiftlie ouer the Persian plaines.

Tom. And if your honour please to hunt the deere,
Your hounds stands readie cuppeld at the doore.

Who in running will oretake the Row,

And make the long breathde Tygre broken winded.

Slie. By the masse I thinke I am a Lord indeed,
Whats thy name?

Lord. Simon and it please your honour.

Slie. Simon, thats as much to say Simion or Simon.
Put foorth thy hand and fill the pot.

Give me thy hand, Sim am I a lord indeed?

Lord. I my gracious Lord, and your louelie ladie
Long time hath moorned for your absence heere,
And now with ioy behold where she dooth come
To gratulate your honours safe returne.

Enter the boy in Womans attire.

Slie. Sim. Is this she?

Lord. I my Lord.

Slie. Masse tis a prettie wench, whats her name?

Boy. Oh that my louelie Lord would once vouchsafe
To looke on me, and leaue these frantike fits,
Or were I now but halfe so eloquent,
To paint in words what ile performe in deedes,
I know your honour then would pittie me.

Slie. Harke you mistrese, will you eat a peece of bread,

Come sit downe on my knee, Sim drinke to hir Sim,
For she and I will go to bed anon.

Lord. May it please you, your honors plaiers be come;

To offer your honour a plaie.

Slie. A plaie Sim, O braue, be they my plaiers?

Lord. I my Lord.

Slie. Is there not a foole in the plaie?

Lord. Yes my lord.

Slie. When wil they plaie Sim?

Lord. Euen when it please your honor, they be readie.

Boy. My lord Ile go bid them begin their plaie.

Slie. Doo, but looke that you come againe.

Boy. I warrant you, my lord, I will not leaue you thus. [Exit boy.]

Slie. Come Sim, where be the plaiers? Sim stand by me and wee le flout the plaiers out of their cotes.

Lord. Ile cal them my lord. Hoe where are you there?

Die Personen des eigentlichen Stückes, das nun beginnt, sind folgende, wobei in Klammern die Personen der Shakspeare'schen Umarbeitung, so weit sie den älteren Figuren entsprechen, angegeben sind: Alfonso, Kaufmann in Athen (Baptista) — Kate, seine älteste Tochter (Katharina) — Emelia und Phylema, seine beiden jüngeren Töchter (Bianca) — Herzog von Sestos (Vincentio) — Aurelius, sein Sohn (Lucentio) — Ferando (Petruchio) — Sander, dessen Diener (Grumio) — Polidor, Freund des Aurelius — Valeria, Diener des Aurelius (Tranio) — Philotus, ein Kaufmann (Pedant) — Schneider und Modehändler (wie bei Shakspeare). — Die Handlung geht theils in Athen (Padua) vor sich, theils in Ferando's Landhaus (Petruchio's Landhaus).

Wie schon das Personenverzeichniss ergiebt, hat Shakspeare aus dem älteren Drama, dem fast beibehaltenen Titel entsprechend, Alles beibehalten, was sich auf die Zählung der Keiferin bezieht. Auch das Auftreten des Lucentio, der seiner Studien wegen nach Padua kommt, unter falschem Namen, seine plötzliche Verliebtheit und Werbung um Bianca, fand Shakspeare in dem Aurelius des älteren Dramas vorgebildet, ebenso die Verkleidung des Pedanten in den angeblichen Vater, welcher dann die Erscheinung des wirklichen Vaters ein Ende macht. Dagegen enthält das ältere Drama nichts von der Rivalität dreier Bewerber (Gremio, Lucentio und Hortensio) um Baptista's jüngere Tochter, da gleich zu Anfang Polidor als Freier der Emelia erscheint, Aurelius sich in die Phylema verliebt. Die Szenen, in welchen diese Rivalitäten und Verkleidungen in Baptista's Hause spielen, sind also Shakspeare's freie Erfindung, und nur die Idee, den Hortensio als Musiklehrer in Baptista's Familie einzuführen, entlehnte er aus dem älteren Drama, insofern als dort Valeria, der Diener des Aurelius, diese Rolle, jedoch nur bei der Keiferin, spielt und in der von Shakspeare beibehaltenen Manier von ihr abgefertigt wird. Wie sehr aber unser Dichter auch in den übrigen Szenen, in denen er sich dem Gange des älteren Taming of a Shrew anschloss, trotz Beibehaltung sogar einzelner Spässe und Witze, die das Publicum nicht entbehren mochte, die Charakteristik und die Sprache selbständig zu schaffen hatte, mögen einige weitere Citate zur Vergleichung darthun.

Zu A. 1, Sc. 2 (zum Schluss) und A. 2, Sc. 1. Petruchio's erstes Auftreten bei Baptista und seine erste Zusammenkunft mit Katharina ist auf folgende Scene des Taming of a Shrew begründet:

Enter Ferando and his man Saunders with a blew coat.

Pol. Here comes the man that I did tel you of.

Feran. Good morrow gentlemen to all at once.

How now Polidor, what man still in loue?

Euer wooing and canst thou neuer speed,

God send me better luck when I shall woo.

San. I warrant you maister & you take my coun-cell.

Feran. Why sirha, are you so cunning?

San. Who I, twere better for you by fise marke
And you could tel how to doo it as well as I.

Pol. I would thy maister once were in the vaine,
To trie himselfe how he could woe a wench.

Feran. Faith I am euen now a going.

San. I faith sir, my maisters going to this geere
now.

Pol. Whither in faith Ferando, tell me true.

Feran. To bonie Kate, the patientst wench aliue
The diuel himselfe dares scarce venter to woo her,
Signior Alfonso's eldest daughter,

And he hath promisd me six thousand crownes

If I can win her once to be my wife,

And she and I must woo with skoulding sure,

And I will hold hir toot till she be wearie,

Or else Ile make her yeeld to graunt me loue.

Pol. How like you this Aurelius, I thinke he knew
Our mindes before we sent to him,

But tell me, when doo you meane to speake with her?

Feran. Faith presentlie, doo you but stand aside
And I will make her father bring hir hither,
And she, and I, and he, will talke alone.

Pol. With al our heartes, Come Aurelius

Let vs be gone and leaue him heere alone. [Exit.]

Feran. Ho Signiour Alfonso, whose within there?

Alfon. Signiour Ferando your welcome hartlie,
You are a stranger sir vnto my house

Harke you sir, looke what I did promise you

Ile performe, if you get my daughters loue.

Feran. Then when I haue talkt a word or two with hir,

Doo you step in and giue her hand to me

And tell her when the marriage daie shal be

For I doo know she would be married faine,

And when our nuptiall rites be once performde

Let me alone to tame hir well enough,

Now call hir forth that I may speake with hir.

Enter Kate.

Alfon. Ha Kate, Come hither wench & list to me,
Vse this gentleman friendlie as thou canst.

Feran. Twentie good morrowes to my louely
Kate.

Kate. You iest I am sure, is she yours alreadie?
Feran. I tell thee Kate I know thou lou'st me well.

Kate. The deuill you doo, who told you so?

Feran. My mind sweet Kate doth say I am the man,

Must wed, and bed, and marrie bonnie Kate.

Kate. Was euer seene so grose an asse as this?

Feran. I, to stand so long and neuer get a kisse.

Kate. Hands off I say, and get you from this place;

Or I wil set my ten commandments in your face.

Feran. I prethe doo Kate; they say thou art a shrew,

And I like thee the better for I would haue thee so.

Kate. Let go my hand for feare it reech your eare.

Feran. No Kate, this hand is mine and I thy loue.

Kate. In faith sir no, the woodcock wants his taile, Feran. But yet his bil wil serue, if the other faile.

Alfon. How now, Ferando, what saies my daughter?

Feran. Shees willing sir and loues me as hir life.

Kate. Tis for your skin then, but not to be your wife.

Zu A. 3, Sc. 2. Petruchio's Erscheinung zur Hochzeit und der Gang zur Trauung in die Kirche lautet in dem älteren Drama so:

Enter Ferando baselie attired, and a red cap on his head.

Feran. Godmorow father, Polidor well met, You wonder I know that I haue staid so long.

Alfon. I marrie son, we were almost perswaded, That we should scarce haue had our bridegroom heere,

But say, why art thou thus basely attired?

Feran. Thus richlie father you should haue said,

For when my wife and I am married once, Shees such a shrew, if we should once fal out

Sheele pul my costlie sutes ouer mine cares, And therefore am I thus attired awhile,

For manie thinges I tell you's in my head,

And none must know thereof but Kate and I,

For whe shall liue like lammes and Lions sure,

Nor Lammes to Lions neuer was so tame,

If once they lie within the Lions pawes

As Kate to me if we were married once,

And therefore come let vs to church presently.

Pol. Fie Ferando not thus atired for shame

Come to my Chamber and there sute thy selfe,

Of twentie sutes that I did neuer were.

Feran. Tush Polidor I haue as many sutes Fantasticke made to fit my humor so

As any in Athens and as richlie wrought

As was the Massie Robe that late adorn'd,

The stately legat of the Persian King,

And this from them haue I made choise to weare.

Alfon. I prethie Ferando let me intreat

Alfon. Come hither Kate and let me giue thy hand

To him that I haue chosen for thy loue,

And thou tomorrow shalt be wed to him.

Kate. Why father what do you meane to do with me,

To giue me thus vnto this brainsick man,

That in his mood cares not to murder me?

[She turnes aside and speakes.

But yet I will consent and marrie him,

For I melinkes haue liude too long a maid,

And match him to, or else his manhoods good.

Alfon. Giue me thy hand Ferando loues thee wel

And will with wealth and ease maintaine thy state,

Here Ferando take her for thy wife,

And Sunday next shall be your wedding day.

Feran. Why so, did I not tell thee I should be the man

Father, I leaue my louelie Kate with you,

Provide your selues against our mariage daie;

For I must hie me to my countrie house

In hast to see prouision may be made.

To entertaine my Kate when she dooth come.

Alfon. Doo so come Kate why doost thou looke

So sad, be merrie wench thy wedding daies at hand.

Sonne fare you well, and see you keepe your promise. [Exit Alfonso and Kate.

Before thou goste vnto the church with vs To put some other sute vpon thy backe.

Feran. Not for the world if I might gaine it so, And therefore take me thus or not at all.

Enter Kate.

But soft se where my Kate doth come,

I must salute hir: how fares my louely Kate?

What art thou readie? shall we go to church?

Kate. Not I with one so mad, so basely tirde,

To marrie such a filthie slauish groome

That as it seemes sometimes is from his wits,

Or else he would not thus haue come to vs.

Feran. Tush Kate these words addes greater loue in me

And makes me thinke thee fairrer then before,

Sweete Kate the louelier then Dianas purple robe,

Whiter then are the snowie Apenis,

Or icie haire that groes on Boreas chin.

Father I sweare by Ibis golden beake,

More faire and Radiente is my bonie Kate,

Then siluer Zanthus when he doth imbrace,

The ruddie Simies at Idas feete,

And care not thou swete Kate how I be clad,

Thou shalt haue garments wrought of Median silke

Enchast with pretious Iewells fecht from far,

By Italian Marchants that with Russian stemes,

Plous vp huge forrowes in the Terren Maine,

And better farre my louely Kate shall weare,

Then come sweet loue and let vs to the church,

For this I sweare shall be my wedding sute.

[Exeunt Omnes

Ebendasselbst. Die Rückkehr von der Kirche und der Abschied Petruchio's und Katharina's:

Enter Ferando and Kate and Alfonso and Polidor and Amelia and Aurelius and Philema.

Feran. Father farwell, my Kate and I must home,

Sirra go make ready my horse presentlie.

Alfon. Your horse? What son I hope you doo but iest

I am sure you will not go so suddainly.

Kate. Let him go or tarry I am resolu'de to stay,
And not to trauell on my wedding day.

Feran. Tut Kate I tell thee we must needes go home,

Villaine hast thou saddled my horse?

San. Which horse, your curtall?

Feran. Sounes you slaue stand you prating here?
Saddell the bay gelding for your Mistris.

Kate. Not for me: for He not go.

San. The ostler will not let me haue him you owe tenpence

For his meate and 6 pence for stuffing my Mistris saddle.

Feran. Here villaine go pay him straight.

San. Shall I giue them another pecke of lauender.

Feran. Out slaue and bring them presently to the dore.

Alfon. Why son I hope at least youle dine with vs.

San. I pray you maister lets stay till dinner be don.

Feran. Sounes villaine art thou here yet?

[Ex. Sander.

Come Kate our dinner is provided at home.

Kate. But not for me, for here I meane to dine
He haue my will in this as well as you,

Zu A. 4, Sc. 1. Die Ankunft der Neuvermählten auf Petruccio's Landsitz:

Enter Ferando and Kate.

Feran. Now welcome Kate: where's these villains
Here, what? not supper yet vppon the borde:

Nor table spread nor nothing don at all,

Wheres that villaine that I sent before.

San. Now, ad sum, sir.

Feran. Come hether you villaine He cut your nose,

You Rogue: helpe me of with my bootes: wilt please
You to lay the cloth? sounes the villaine

Hurts my foote? pull easely I say; yet againe.

[He beates them all.

[They couer the bord and fetch in the meate.
Sounes? burnt and skorcht who drest this meate?

Will. Forsouth Iohn cooke.

[He throwes downe the table and meate and all,
and beates them.

Feran. Go you villaines bringe you me such meate,

Out of my sight I say and beare it hence,

Come Kate wele haue other meate provided,

Is there a fire in my chamber sir?

Zu A. 4, Sc. 3. Der weitere Fortgang der Zählung wird in dem älteren Drama so vorgeführt:

Enter Sander and his Mistris.

San. Come Mistris.

Kate. Sander I prethe helpe me to some meate,
I am so faint that I can scarcely stande.

Though you in madding mood would leaue your friends

Despite of you He tarry with them still.

Feran. I Kate so thou shalt at but some other time,

When as thy sisters here shall be espousd,

Then thou and I will keepe our wedding day,

In better sort then now we can provide,

For here I promise thee before them all,

We will ere long retorne to them againe,

Come Kate stand not on termes we will awaie,

This is my day, tomorrow thou shalt rule,

And I will doo what euer thou commandes.

Gentlemen farwell, wele take our leues,

It will be late before that we come home.

[Exit Ferando and Kate.

Pol. Farwell Ferando since you will be gone.

Alfon. So mad a cupple did I neuer see.

Emel. They're euen as well macht as I would wish.

Phile. And yet I hardly thinke that he can tame her.

For when he has don she will do what she list.

Aurel. Her manhood then is good I do beleue.

Pol. Aurelius or else I misse my marke

Her toung will walke if she doth hold her handes,

I am in dout ere halfe a month be past

Hele curse the priest that married him so soone.

And yet it may be she will be reclaimde,

For she is verie patient grone of late.

Alfon. God hold it that it may continue still

I would be loth that they should disagree

But he I hope will holde her in a while.

Pol. Within this two daies I will ride to him,

And see how louingly they do agree.

San. I forsooth. [Exit Ferando and Kate.

[Manent seruing men and eate vp all the meate.

Tom. Sounes? I thinke of my conscience my Masters

Mad since he was married.

Will. I laft what a boxe he gaue Sander

For pulling of his bootes.

Enter Ferando againe.

San. I hurt his foote for the nonce man.

Feran. Did you so you damned villaine.

[He beates them all out againe.

This humor must I holde me to awhile,

To bridle and holde backe my headstrong wife,

With curbes of hunger: ease: and want of sleepe.

Nor sleepe nor meate shall she inioie to night,

He mew her vp as men do mew their hawkes,

And make her gentlie come vnto the lure,

Were she as stuborne or as full of strength

As were the Thracian horse Alcides tamde,

That King Egeus fed with flesh of men,

Yet would I pull her downe and make her come

As hungry hawkes do flie vnto there lure. [Exit.

San. You say true indeed: why looke you Mistris,
What say you to a peece of beefe and mustard
now?

Kate. Why I say tis excellent meate, canst thou helpe me to some?

San. I, I could helpe you to some but that
I doubt the mustard is too colerick for you,
But what say you to a sheepes head and garlick?

Kate. Why any thing, I care not what it be.

San. I but the garlike I doubt will make your breath stincke,
and then my maister will course me for letting
You eate it: But what say you to a fat Capon?

Kate. Thats meate for a King sweet Sander helpe

Me to some of it.

San. Nay ber lady then tis too deere for vs, we must

Not meddle with the Kings meate.

Kate. Out villaine dost thou mocke me,
Take that for thy sawsinesse.

[She beates him.

San. Sounes are you so light fingerd with a mur-rin,

Ile keepe you fasting for it this two daies.

Kate. I tell thee villaine Ile tear the flesh of Thy face and eate it and thou prates to me thus.

San. Here comes my Maister now hele course
you.

Daran schliesst sich weiterhin die Scene mit dem Schneider und dem Modehändler:

Enter Ferando and Kate and Sander.

San. Master the haberdasher has brought my Mistresse home hir cappe here.

Feran. Come hither sirra: what haue you there?

Habar. A veluet cappe sir and it please you.

Feran. Who spoake for it? didst thou Kate?

Kate. What if I did, come hither sirra, giue me
The cap, Ile see if it will fit me.

[She sets it one hir head.

Feran. O monstrous, why it becomes thee not,
Let me see it Kate: here sirra take it hence
This cappe is out of fashion quite.

Kate. The fashion is good inough: belike you
Meane to make a foole of me.

Feran. Why true he meanes to make a foole of thee

To haue thee put on such a curtald cappe,
Sirra begon with it.

Enter the Taylor with a gowne.

San. Here is the Taylor too with my Mistris gowne.

Feran. Let me see it Taylor: what with cuts and iaggas.

Sounes you villaine, thou hast spoiled the gowne.

Taylor. Why sir I made it as your man gaue me direction.

You may reade the note here.

Feran. Come hither sirra Taylor reade the note.

Taylor. Item, a faire round compast cape.

San. I thats true.

Taylor. And a large truncke sleeue.

San. Thats a lie maister. I sayd two truncke sleeues.

Feran. Well sir goe forward.

Enter Ferando with a peece of meate vppon his daggers point, and Polidor with him.

Feran. Se here Kate I haue prouided meate for thee

Here take it what ist not worthie thanks,
Goe sirra? take it awaie againe you shal be Thankefull for the next you haue.

Kate. Why I thanke you for it.

Feran. Nay now tis not worth a pin go sirray and take it hence I say.

San. Yes sir Ile Carrie it hence: Maister let her
Haue none for she can fight as hungrie as she is.

Pol. I pray you sir let it stand, for Ile eate
Some with her my selfe.

Feran. Well sirra set it downe againe.

Kate. Nay nay I pray you let him take it hence,
And keepe it for your owne diete for Ile none,
Ile nere be beholding to you for your Meate,
I tell thec flatlie here vnto thy teethe

Thou shalt not keepe me nor feede me as thou list,
For I will home againe vnto my fathers house;

Feran. I, when you'r meeke and gentell but not Before, I know your stomack is not yet come downe,
Therefore no maruell thou canste not eate,
And I will goe vnto your fathers house;

Come Polidor let vs goe in againe,

And Kate come in with vs I know ere longe

That thou and I shall louingly agree. [Exeunt Omnes.

Taylor. Item a loose bodied gowne.

San. Maister if euer I sayd loose bodied gowne,
Sew me in a seame and beate me to death,
With bottome of browne thred.

Taylor. I made it as the note bad me.

San. I say the note lies in his throute and thou too

And thou sayst it.

Taylor. Nay nay nere be so hot sirra, for I feare you not.

San. Doost thou heare Taylor, thou hast braued
Many men: braue not me.

Thou'st faste many men.

Taylor. Well sir.

San. Face not me Ile neither be faste nor braued
At thy handes I can tell thee.

Kate. Come come I like the fashion of it well enough,

Heres more a do then needs Ile haue it, I

And if you do not like it hide your eies,
I thinke I shall haue nothing by your will.

Feran. Go I say and take it vp for your mais-ters vse.

San. Souns villaine not for thy life touch it not,
Souns take vp my mistris gowne to his Maisters vse?

Feran. Well sir whats your conceit of it.

San. I haue a deeper conceite in it then you thinke for, take vp my mistris gowne
To his maisters vse?

Feran. Tailor come hether; for this time take it
Hence againe, and Ile content thee for thy paines.

Taylor. I thanke you sir.

[Exit Taylor.

Feran. Come Kate we now will go see thy fathers house

Euen in these honest meane abilliments,

Our purses shall be rich our garments plaine,
To shrowd our bodies from the winter rage,
And thats inough, what should we care for more
Thy sisters Kate to morrow must be wed,
And I haue promised them thou shouldst be there
The morning is well vp lets hast away,
It will be nine a clocke ere we come there.

Kate. Nine a clock, why tis allreadie past two
In the after noone by all the clocks in the towne.

Zu A. 4, Sc. 5. Petruchio's und Katharina's Heimkehr und ihre Begegnung mit Vincentio ist folgender
Scens des älteren Dramas nachgebildet:

Enter Ferando and Kate and Sander.

Feran. Sirra go fetch our horsses forth and bring Them to the backe gate presentlie.

San. I will sir I warrant you. [Exit Sander.

Feran. Come Kate the Moone shines cleare to night

Methinkes.

Kate. The moone? why husband you are deceiued
It is the sun.

Feran. Yet againe come backe againe it shall be
The moone ere we come at your fathers.

Kate. Why Ile say as you say it is the moone.

Feran. Jesus saue the glorious moone.

Kate. Jesus saue the glorious moone.

Feran. I am glad Kate your stomach is come downe,

I know it well thou knowest it is the sun,
But I did trie to see if thou wouldst speake,
And crosse me now as thou hast donne before,
And trust me Kate hadst thou not named the moone,
We had gon back againe as sure as death,
But soft whose this thats comming here.

Enter the Duke of Cestus alone.

Duke. Thus all alone from Cestus am I come,
And left my princelie courte and noble traine,
To come to Athens, and in this disguise,
To see what course my son Aurelius takes
But stay, heres some it may be Trauells thether,
Good sir can you drect me the way to Athens?

[Ferando speakes to the olde man.
Faire louely maide yoong and affable,

Zu A. 5, Sc. 2. Die Wette um den Gehorsam der drei Frauen und ihr Ausgang zu Gunsten Petruchio's ist in dem älteren Drama so durchgeföhrt:

Enter Ferando, Aurelius and Polidor and his boy and Valeria and Sander.

Feran. Come gentlemen now that suppers donne
How shall we spend the time till we go to bed?

Aurel. Faith if you will in triall of our wiues,
Who will come sownest at their husband's call.

Pol. Nay then Ferando he must needes sit out,
For he may call I thinke till he be weary,
Before his wife will come before she list.

Feran. Tis well for you that haue such gentle
wiues

Yet in this triall will I not sit out,

It may be Kate will come as soone as yours.

Aurel. My wife comes soonest for a hundred pound.

Pol. I take it. Ile lay as much to youres,
That my wife comes as soone as I do send.

Aurel. How now Ferando you dare not lay belike.

Feran. I say tis but nine a clock in the morning.

Kate. I say tis two a clock in the after noone.

Feran. It shall be nine then ere we go to your fathers,

Come backe againe we will not go to day.

Nothing but crossing of me still,

Ile haue you say as I doo ere you go.

[Exeunt Omnes.

More cleere of hew and far more beautifull,
Then pretious Sardonix or purple rockes,
Of Amithests or glistering Hiasinthe,
More amiable farre then is the plain
Where glistring Cepherus in siluer boures,
Gaseth vpon the Giant Andromede,
Sweete Kate entertaine this louely woman.

Duke. I thinke the man is mad he calls me a woman.

Kate. Faire louely lady brighte and Christalline,
Bewteous and stately as the eie traind bird,
As glorious as the morning washt with dew,
Within whose eies she takes her dawning beames,
And golden sommer sleepes vpon thy cheekes,
Wrap vp thy radiations in some cloud,
Least that thy bewty make this stately towne
Inhabitable like the burning Zone
With sweet reflections of thy louely face.

Duke. What is she mad to? or is my shape trans-formd,

That both of them perswade me I am a woman,
But they are mad sure, and therefore Ile begon,
And leaue their companies for feare of harme,
And vnto Athens hast to seeke my son. [Exit Duke.

Feran. Why so Kate this was friendly done of
thee,

And kindly too, why thus must we two liue,
One minde, one heart and one content for both,
This good old man dos thinke that we are mad,
And glad he is I am sure, that he is gonne,
But come sweet Kate for we will after him,
And now perswade him to his shape againe.

[Ex. Omnes.

Feran. Why true I dare not lay indeede;
But how so little mony on so sure a thing,
A hundred pound: why I haue layd as much
Vpon my dogge, in running at a Deere.
She shall not come so farre for such a trifle,
But will you lay five hundred markes with me,
And whose wife soonest comes when he doth call,
And shewes her selfe most louing vnto him,
Let him inioye the wager I haue laid,
Now what say you? dare you aduenture thus?

Pol. I weare it a thousand pounds I durst presume

On my wiues loue: and I will lay with thee.

Enter Alfonso.

Alfon. How now sons what in conference so hard,
May I without offence, know whereabouts.

Aurel. Faith father a waighly cause about our wiues

*Five hundred markes already we haue layd,
And he whose wife doth shew most loue to him,
He must inioie the wager to himselfe.*

*Alfon. Why then Ferando he is sure to lose,
I promise thee son thy wife will hardly come,
And therefore I would not wish thee lay so much.*

*Feran. Tush father were it ten times more,
I durst aduenture on my louely Kate,
But if I lose Ile pay, and so shall you.*

Aurel. Vpon mine honour if I loose Ile pay.

Pol. And so will I vpon my faith I vow.

Feran. Then sit we downe and let vs send for them.

Alfon. I promise thee Ferando I am afraid thou wilt lose.

Aurel. Ile send for my wife first, Valeria Go bid your Mistris come to me.

Val. I will my Lord. [Exit Valeria.

*Aurel. Now for my hundred pound.
Would any lay ten hundred more with me,
I know I should obtaine it by her loue.*

Feran. I pray God you haue not laid too much already.

*Aurel. Trust me Ferando I am sure you haue,
For you I dare presume haue lost it all.*

Enter Valeria againe.

Now sirra what saies your mistris?

Val. She is something busie but shele come anon.

*Feran. Why so, did I not tell you this before,
She is busie and cannot come.*

Aurel. I pray God your wife send you so good an answere.

She may be busie yet she sayes shele come.

Feran. Well well: Polidor send you for your wife.

Pol. Agreed: Boy desire your mistris to come hither.

Boy. I will sir. [Ex. Boy.

Feran. I so so he desiers her to come.

*Alfon. Polidor I dare presume for thee,
I thinke thy wife will not deny to come,*

*And I do maruell much Aurelius,
That your wife came not when you sent for her.*

Enter the Boy againe.

Pol. Now wheres your Mistris?

*Boy. She bad me tell you that she will not come.
And you haue any businesse you must come to her.*

*Feran. Oh monstrous intollerable presumption,
Worse then a blasing starre, or snow at midsommer,
Earthquakes or any thing vnseasonable,
She will not come: but he must come to her.*

Pol. Well sir I pray you lets here what Answere your wife will make.

*Feran. Sirra command your Mistris to come
To me presentlie. [Exit Sander.*

*Aurel. I thinke my wife for all she did not come,
Will proue most kinde for now I haue no feare,
For I am sure Ferandos wife she will not come.*

Feran. The mores the pittie: then I must lose.

Enter Kate and Sander.

But I haue won for see where Kate doth come.

Kate. Sweet husband did you send for me?

*Feran. I did my loue I sent for thee to come,
Come hither Kate, whats that vpon thy head.*

Kate. Nothing husband but my cap I thinke.

*Feran. Pull it of and treade it vnder thy feete,
Tis foolish I will not haue thee weare it.*

[She takes of her cap and treads on it.

Pol. O wounderfull metamorphosis.

Aurel. This is a wonder almost past beleefe.

*Feran. This is a token of her true loue to me,
And yet Ile trie her further you shall see,
Come hither Kate where are thy sisters.*

Kate. They be sitting in the bridall chamber.

Feran. Fetch them hither and if they will not come,

Bring them perforce and make them come with thee.

Kate. I will.

Alfon. I promise thee Ferando I would haue sworne

Thy wife would nere haue donne so much for thee.

Feran. But you shall see she will do more then this

For see where she brings her sisters forth by force.

Enter Kate thrusting Phylema and Emelia before her, and makes them come vnto their husbands call.

Kate. See husband I haue brought them both.

Feran. Tis well don Kate.

*Eme. I sure and like a louing peece your worthy
To haue great praise for this attempt.*

Phyle. I for making a foole of her selfe and vs.

Aurel. Beshrew thee Phylema, thou hast

Lost me a hundred pound to night,

For I did lay that thou wouldst first haue come.

Pol. But thou Emelia hast lost me a great deale more.

*Eme. You might haue kept it better then,
Who bad you lay?*

*Feran. Now louely Kate before there husbands
here,*

I prethe tell vnto these hedstrong women

What dutie wiues doo owe vnto their husbands.

Kate. Then you that liue thus by your pompered wills

Now list to me and marke what I shall say.

The'ternall power that with his only breath,

Shall cause this end and this beginning frame,

*Not in time, nor before time, but with time, con-
fusd,*

For all the course of yeares, of ages, moneths,

Of seasons temperate, of dayes and houres,

Are tund and stopt, by measure of his hand,

The first world was a forme without a forme,

A heape confusd a mixture all deformd,

A gulfe of gulfes, a body bodiles,

Where all the elements were orderles,

Before the great commander of the world

The King of Kings the glorious God of heauen,

Who in six daies did frame his heauenly worke

And made all things to stand in perfit course,

Then to his image he did make a man,

Olde Adam and from his side asleepe,

A rib was taken, of which the Lord did make,

The woe of man so termd by Adam then,

Woman for that, by her came sinne to vs,

And for her sin was Adam doomd to die,

As Sara to her husband so should we

Obey them, loue them, keepe, and nourish them

If they by any meanes doo want our helpes,

Laying our handes vnder their feete to tread,

If that by that we might procure there ease,

*And for a president Ile first begin
And lay my hand vnder my husbands feete.
[She laies her hand vnder her husbands feete.
Fer. an. Inough sweet, the wager thou hast won,
And they I am sure cannot denie the same.
Alfon. I Ferando the wager thou hast won,
And for to shew thee how I am pleasd in this,
A hundred poundes I freely giue thee more,
Another dowry for another daughter,
For she is not the same she was before.
Fer. an. Thankes sweet father, gentlemen godnight
For Kate and I will leaue you for to night,
Tis Kate and I am wed, and you are sped.*

Zum Schluss erscheint in dem Taming of a Shrew noch einmal Slie, der auch durch das ganze Stück hindurch die Aufführung mit seinen Anmerkungen begleitet hat, während er bei Shakspeare schon nach dem Schluss der ersten Scene des ersten Actes ganz verschwindet:

*Then enter two bering of Slie in his Owne apparrell againe and leaues him
Where they found him, and then goes out.
Then enter the Tapster.*

*Tapster. Now that the darkesome night is ouerpast,
And dawning day appeares in chrystall sky,
Now must I hast abroad: but soft whose this?
What Slie oh wondrous hath he laine here allnight,
Ile wake him, I thinke he's starued by this,
But that his belly was so stuft with ale,
What how Slie, Awake for shame.*

Slie. Sim gis some more wine, whats all the Plaiers gon: am not I a Lord?

Tapster. A lord with a murrin: come art thou dronken still?

And so farwell for we will to our beds.

[Exit Ferando and Kate and Sander.

Alfon. Now Aurelius what say you to this?

Aurel. Beleeue me father I reioice to see Ferando and his wife so louingly agree.

[Exit Aurelius and Phylema and Alfonso and Valeria.

Eme. How now Polidor in a dump, what sayst thou man?

Pol. I say thou art a shrew.

Eme. Thats better then a sheepe.

Pol. Well since tis don let it go, come lets in.

[Exit Polidor and Emelia.

Slie. Whose this? Tapster, oh Lord sirra, I haue had

The brauest dreame to night, that euer thou Hardest in all thy life.

*Tapster. I marry but you had best get you home,
For your wife will course you for dreaming here tonight.*

*Slie. Will she? I know now how to tame a shrew,
I dreamt vpon it all this night till now,
And thou hast wakt me out of the best dreame
That euer I had in my life, but Ile to my Wife presently and tame her too,
And if she anger me.*

Tapster. Nay tarry Slie for Ile go home with thee,

And heare the rest that thou hast dreamt to night.

[Exeunt Omnes.

Der Verfasser dieses älteren Dramas ist unbekannt geblieben, doch hat Dyce an dem hohlen Bombast der Liebesscenen, der mit mythologischem Prunk aller Art und gesuchtem Bilderkram ausstaffirt ist, eine geflissentliche Nachahmung des Marlowe'schen Styles nachgewiesen. Daraus, sowie aus der platten Formlosigkeit der derbkomischen Scenen, ergiebt sich denn auch mit grosser Wahrscheinlichkeit, dass dieses Taming of a Shrew nicht erst im Jahre 1594, wo es im Druck erschien, auf die Bühne gebracht worden ist, sondern mehrere Jahre vorher. Die spätere Veröffentlichung durch den Druck im Jahre 1594 bietet zugleich einen chronologischen Fingerzeig für die Entstehung des Shakspeare'schen Taming of the Shrew, insofern als die Popularität dieser damals zuerst auf die Bühne gebrachten neuen Bearbeitung den Cuthbert Burbie, den späteren Verleger von Shakspeare's Love's Labour's Lost und Romeo and Juliet, veranlassen mochte, statt des Shakspeare'schen Taming of the Shrew das ältere Taming of a Shrew dem Lesepublicum darzubieten. Ist diese Hypothese begründet, so mag auch eine Notiz in dem Tagebuche des Theaterdirectors Henslowe über die Aufführungen auf dem Theater zu Newington aus dem Jahre 1594 sich auf das Shakspeare'sche Stück beziehen, obgleich der Titel, in dessen Bezeichnung Henslowe überall sehr ungenau ist, buchstäblich auf das ältere Stück zu gehen scheint: 11 of June 1594 Rd. (d. h. Received) at the tamynge of a shrowe — IX s. — Auf dem Theater in Newington bei London spielten damals gleichzeitig die Henslowe'sche Truppe und die des Blackfriarstheaters, welcher unser Dichter angehörte (In the name of God Amen beginning at Newington my Lord Admiralle and my Lorde chamberlen men as foloweth. 1594 — wie Henslowe diesen Abschnitt seines Tagebuches überschreibt). Das ältere Drama war aber, nach dem Titelblatt, von einer andern Schauspielergesellschaft, der Pembroke'schen, aufgeführt worden, und zwar höchst wahrscheinlich in vollständigerer Gestalt, als es uns gedruckt vorliegt.

Die Verkleidungen Lucentio's, Hortensio's und Tranio's, die Figur des alten Gremio, die Anwerbung des Pedanten, dessen Auftreten als Vincentio u. s. w., was in dem Taming of a Shrew theils nur flüchtig skizzirt, theils gar nicht sich findet, entlehnte Shakspeare aus einem Lustspiel, das Gascoigne unter dem Namen The Suppose aus dem italienischen Gli Suppositi des Ariost übersetzt und im Jahre 1566 schon herausgegeben hatte. Indess hat unser Dichter in diesem Theile seines Stückes sein Vorbild nur in einzelnen Zügen und dabei so frei benutzt, dass ein Nachweis zur Vergleichung unnöthig erscheint.

INDUCTION.¹

SCENE I.

Before an Ale-house on a Heath.

*Enter Hostess and SLY.*²

Sly. I'll pheeze³ you, in faith.

Host. A pair of stocks, you rogue!

Sly. Y' are a baggage: the Slys are no rogues;⁴ look in the chronicles, we came in with Richard Conqueror.⁵ Therefore, paucas pallabris;⁶ let the world slide. Sessa!

Host. You will not pay for the glasses you have burst?⁷

Sly. No, not a denier. Go by, Saint Jeronimy:⁸ go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Host. I know my remedy: I must go fetch the third-borough.⁹ [Exit.

Sly. Third, or fourth, or fifth borough, I'll answer him by law. I'll not budge an inch, boy: let him come, and kindly. [Lies down on the ground, and falls asleep.

Wind Horns. Enter a Lord from hunting, with Huntsmen and Servants.

Lord. Huntsman, I charge thee, tender well my hounds: Brach Merriman, the poor cur is emboss'd,¹⁰ And couple Clowder with the deep-mouth'd brach.¹¹ Saw'st thou not, boy, how Silver made it good At the hedge-corner, in the coldest fault?¹² I would not lose the dog for twenty pound.

1) Induction = Einleitung, Vorspiel. Diese Bezeichnung ist von Pope gemacht; in der Fol. und noch bei Rowe ist das Vorspiel dem ersten Act einverleibt. 2) Die Fol. nennt ihn Begger und Christophero Sly. 3) to pheeze = zwacken, zausen. Dieses provinzielle Wort steht an der entsprechenden Stelle in dem älteren Drama (vgl. Einleitung pag. 391), und Sh. hat es in Troilus and Cressida (A. 2, Sc. 3) An 'a be proud with me, I'll pheeze his pride. 4) Die Slys sind aus alter Familie, keine Vagabunden ohne Herkunft und Heimath, die man in den Fussblock stecken lässt. 5) Er meint William the Conqueror, mit dem so Viele vom ältesten Adel in's Land kamen. 6) paucas pallabris ist entstellt aus spanisch pocas palabras = wenig Worte, kurz gesagt, was auch sonst als ausländische Modephrase in den Dramen der Zeit vorkommt; so in Kyd's Spanish Tragedy: pocas palabras, mild as the lamb. — Scherzhaft entstellt wie hier hat Sh. es auch in Much Ado about Nothing (A. 3, Sc. 5) Comparisons are odorous: palabras, neighbour Verges. — to let the world slide = der Welt ihren Lauf lassen, ist sprichwörtlich, und in Verbindung damit ist vielleicht das folgende sessal aufzufassen = sei ruhig, höre auf, von dem französischen cessez. 7) to burst = zerbrechen. 8) Die Fol. hat die gewöhnliche Abkürzung S. Jeronimy. — Sly verwechselt den heil. Hieronymus mit dem Helden von Kyd's Spanish Tragedy, der u. A. auf die vorwurfsvolle Frage des Königs von Spanien: Who is he that interrupts our business? antwortet: Not I: Hieronimo beware, go by, go by. — Dieser Passus, sowie ein anderer, vorhergehender desselben Dramas: What outcries pluck me from my naked bed? wurden von den zeitgenössischen Dramatikern häufig parodirt und citirt, wie hier von Sh., und die erstere Stelle war förmlich sprichwörtlich geworden. So in Webster's und Dekker's Lustspiel Westward Hoe: she's like a play; if new, very good company; but if stale, like old Jeronimo, go by, go by. — Die Cambridge Edd. halten das S vor Jeronimy für verdruckt aus einem Fragezeichen (?), das in den Handschriften jener Zeit statt des Ausrufungszeichens (!) gebraucht wird, und setzen deshalb, wie schon die Q. von 1631 that, go by, Jeronimy. 9) thirdborough = Constabler, liest Theobald für headborough der Fol. — Sly's Antwort zeigt die Nothwendigkeit dieser Emendation. 10) Für brach, das am Ende des nächsten Verses wiederkehrt, wäre allerdings der Imperativ eines Verbums zu vermuthen, zu dem Merriman, der Name des Jagdhundes, als Object stände. So schlug Hamner leech vor für brach, Johnson bathe, Mitford breathe, und Dyce endlich trash Merriman. — to trash ist: einen Jagdhund, der zu hitzig ist, oder, wie hier, in Folge der grossen Anstrengung am Munde schäumt (embossed), an der Leine zurückhalten. 11) Ein Jagdhund, der sich durch ein besonders tiefes Gebell auszeichnet. 12) to make it good und coldest fault sind technische Jagdausdrücke = auf der kältesten Fährte die Spur des Wildes verfolgen. Ebenso das folgende

1. Hun. Why, Belman is as good as he, my lord;
He cried upon it at the merest loss,
And twice to-day pick'd out the dullest scent:
Trust me, I take him for the better dog.

Lord. Thou art a fool: if Echo were as fleet,
I would esteem him worth a dozen such.
But sup them well, and look unto them all:
To-morrow I intend to hunt again.

1. Hun. I will, my lord.

Lord. What's here? one dead, or drunk? See, doth he breathe?

2. Hun. He breathes, my lord. Were he not warm'd with ale,

This were a bed but cold to sleep so soundly.

Lord. O monstrous beast! how like a swine he lies!
Grim death, how foul and loathsome is thine image!
Sirs, I will practise on this drunken man.

What think you, if he were convey'd to bed,
Wrapp'd in sweet clothes, rings put upon his fingers,
A most delicious banquet by his bed,
And brave¹³ attendants near him when he wakes,
Would not the beggar then forget himself?

1. Hun. Believe me, lord, I think he cannot choose.

2. Hun. It would seem strange unto him when he wak'd.

Lord. Even as a flattering dream, or worthless fancy.
Then take him up, and manage well the jest.

Carry him gently to my fairest chamber,
And hang it round with all my wanton pictures;
Balm his foul head with warm distilled waters,¹⁴
And burn sweet wood¹⁵ to make the lodging sweet.

Procure me music ready when he wakes,
To make a dulcet and a heavenly sound;
And if he chance to speak, be ready straight,
And, with a low submissive reverence,
Say, »What is it your honour will command?«
Let one attend him with a silver basen,
Full of rose-water, and bestrew'd with flowers;
Another bear the ewer, the third a diaper,
And say, »Will 't please your lordship cool your hands?«
Some one be ready with a costly suit,
And ask him what apparel he will wear;
Another tell him of his hounds and horse,
And that his lady mourns at his disease.
Persuade him, that he hath been lunatic;
And, when he says he is —,¹⁶ say, that he dreams,
For he is nothing but a mighty lord.
This do, and do it kindly, gentle Sirs:

It will be pastime passing excellent,
If it be husbanded with modesty.¹⁷

1. Hun. My lord, I warrant you, we will play our part,
As he shall think, by our true diligence,
He is no less than what we say he is.

Lord. Take him up gently, and to bed with him,
And each one to his office when he wakes. —

[Sly is borne out. A trumpet sounds.

Sirrah, go see what trumpet 't is that sounds:¹⁸ —

[Exit Servant.

Belike, some noble gentleman, that means,
Travelling some journey, to repose him here. —

Re-enter Servant.

How now? who is it?

Serv. An it please your honour,
Players that offer service to your lordship.¹⁹

Lord. Bid them come near.

Enter Players.

Now, fellows, you are welcome.

Players. We thank your honour.

Lord. Do you intend to stay with me to-night?

A Play. So please your lordship to accept our duty.

Lord. With all my heart. — This fellow I remember,
Since once he play'd a farmer's eldest son: —

'T was where you woo'd the gentlewoman so well.
I have forgot your name; but, sure, that part
Was aptly fitted, and naturally perform'd.

A Play. I think, 't was Soto that your honour means.²⁰

Lord. 'T is very true: thou didst it excellent.

Well, you are come to me in happy time,
The rather for I have some sport in hand,
Wherein your cunning²¹ can assist me much.
There is a lord will hear you play to-night;
But I am doubtful of your modesties,²²
Lest, over-eying of his odd behaviour,
(For yet his honour never heard a play,)

You break into some merry passion,
And so offend him; for I tell you, Sirs,
If you should smile he grows impatient.

A Play. Fear not, my lord: we can contain ourselves,
Were he the veriest antick in the world.

Lord. Go, sirrah, take them to the buttery,²³
And give them friendly welcome every one:

Let them want nothing that my house affords. —

[Exeunt Servant and Players.

He cried etc.: als das Wild schon so gut wie verloren war, gab er durch sein Gebell dessen Spur an. 13) brave = stattlich gekleidet. So hat A. 1, Sc. 2 die Fol. Enter Tranio brave. 14) distilled waters = wohlriechende Essenzen, mit denen der schmutzige und übelriechende Kopf Sly's gewaschen werden soll. 15) sweet wood = wohlriechendes Lorbeerholz. 16) Der Gedankenstrich, der übrigens in der Fol. nicht steht, soll nach Blackstone's Erklärung andeuten, dass der Lord nicht weiss, wie Sly sich bei seinem Erwachen nennen werde. — Rowe las and when he says he is poor, Johnson he's Sly. Dyce vermuthet den Ausfall eines vorhergehenden Verses. 17) modesty = Masshaltung: wenn die Sache ohne Uebertreibung betrieben wird. — In demselben Sinne steht zwei Zeilen vorher kindly = natürlich, sachgemäss. 18) Mit einem Trompetenstoss kündigt auch in Hamlet (A. 2, Sc. 2) die wandernde Schauspielertruppe ihre Ankunft an. 19) Der Dienst, den die Schauspieler anbieten, besteht in einer dramatischen Aufführung, wie solche zu Sh.'s Zeit durch herumziehende Schauspielertruppen auf den Landsitzen der Grossen stattfanden. 20) Sh. bezieht sich hier wahrscheinlich auf ein verloren gegangenes Drama der Zeit, denn in Fletcher's Women Pleased, einen Lustspiel, das jedenfalls später erschien als The Taming of the Shrew, kommt zwar ein Soto, der Sohn eines Pächters, vor, aber das Uebrige — where you woo'd the gentlewoman so well — passt nicht auf ihn. — Diese Rede des Schauspielers ist in der Fol. mit Sincklo bezeichnet. So hiess ein Mitglied der Shakspeare'schen Truppen, dem diese Rolle wohl übertragen war. 21) your cunning = Eure Geschicklichkeit als Schauspieler. 22) Ich fürchte, dass Ihr Euch beim Spiel nicht gehörig in Schranken haltet. Vgl. Anm. 17. 23) buttery = Vorrathskammer, wo Besucher von untergeordnetem Range, wie diese wandernden Schauspieler, gespeist und getränkt wurden. So in Twelfth-Night (A. 1, Sc. 3) bring your hand

[To a Servant.] Sirrah, go you to Barthol'mew my page,²⁴
 And see him dress'd in all suits like a lady:
 That done, conduct him to the drunkard's chamber;
 And call him Madam, do him obeisance.²⁵
 Tell him from me, as he will win my love,
 He bear himself with honourable action,²⁶
 Such as he hath observ'd in noble ladies
 Unto their lords by them accomplished:
 Such duty to the drunkard let him do,
 With soft low tongue, and lowly courtesy;
 And say, »What is 't your honour will command,
 Wherein your lady, and your humble wife,
 May show her duty, and make known her love?«
 And then, with kind embracements, tempting kisses,
 And with declining head into his bosom,²⁷
 Bid him shed tears, as being overjoy'd
 To see her noble lord restor'd to health,
 Who, for this seven years,²⁸ hath esteemed him
 No better than a poor and loathsome beggar.
 And if the boy have not a woman's gift,
 To rain a shower of commanded tears,
 An onion will do well for such a shift,²⁹
 Which, in a napkin being close convey'd,
 Shall in despite enforce a watery eye.
 See this despatch'd with all the haste thou canst:
 Anon I'll give thee more instructions. [Exit Servant.
 I know, the boy will well usurp the grace,
 Voice, gait, and action of a gentlewoman:
 I long to hear him call the drunkard husband.
 And how my men will stay themselves from laughter,
 When they do homage to this simple peasant.
 I'll in to counsel them: haply, my presence
 May well abate the over-merry spleen,
 Which otherwise would grow into extremes.³⁰
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A Bedchamber in the Lord's House.

SLY is discovered in a rich night-gown, with Attendants; some with apparel, others with bason, ewer and other appurtenances. Enter Lord, dressed like a servant.¹

Sly. For God's sake, a pot of small ale!²

1. Serv. Will 't please your lordship drink a cup of sack?

2. Serv. Will 't please your honour taste of these conserves?

3. Serv. What raiment will your honour wear to-day?

Sly. I am Christophero Sly; call not me honour, nor lordship: I ne'er drank sack in my life; and if you give me any conserves, give me conserves of beef. Ne'er ask me what raiment I'll wear, for I have no more doublets than backs, no more stockings than legs, nor no more shoes than feet; nay, sometime, more feet than shoes, or such shoes as my toes look through the overleather.

Lord. Heaven cease this idle humour in your honour! O, that a mighty man, of such descent, Of such possessions, and so high esteem, Should be infused with so foul a spirit!³

Sly. What! would you make me mad?⁴ Am not I Christopher Sly, old Sly's son, of Burton-heath,⁵ by birth a pedlar, by education a card-maker, by transmutation a bear-herd,⁶ and now by present profession a tinker? Ask Marian Hacket, the fat ale-wife of Wincot, if she know me not: if she say I am not fourteen pence on the score for sheer ale,⁷ score me up for the lyingest knave in Christendom. What! I am not bestraught.⁸ Here's —

1. Serv. O! this it is that makes your lady mourn.

2. Serv. O! this it is⁹ that makes your servants droop.

to the buttry-bar, and let it drink. — In dem älteren Drama sagt an einer anderen Stelle Polidor: take Saunder on with you and have him to the buttry presently. 24) In dem älteren Stück ist der Page auf der Bühne anwesend und erhält den Auftrag direct. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 392. 25) obeisance = Verbeugung, Huldigung, scheint Sh. auf der ersten Sylbe zu betonen, wie Chaucer und Gower ebenfalls thun. — call und do sind construirt, als ob statt conduct ein Wort wie bid oder let voranginge. 26) Dass er sich mit anständiger Haltung und Geberde benehmen solle. — Auf honourable action bezieht sich das folgende such und accomplished. 27) Und indem der Page sein Haupt an die Brust des Kesselflickers legt. 28) Theobald änderte for twice seven years, weil in der nächsten Scene these fifteen years angegeben wird. Indess ist Sh. in solchen Berechnungen niemals sehr genau. — seven ist einsylbig, esteemed dreisylbig zu lesen, und him steht für himself. 29) So auch von erheuchelten Thränen in Antony and Cleopatra (A. 1, Sc. 2) the tears live in an onion, that should water this sorrow. 30) Die allzu muntre Lachlust der Dienerschaft möchte es sonst zu arg machen und damit das ganze Spiel verderben.

1) Die Fol. hat Enter aloft the drunkard with attendants, some with apparel, bason and ewer, and other appurtenances, and Lord. — Es erhellt daraus, dass auf dem Sh.'schen Theater der Kesselflicker und die Uebrigen auf dem Balcon des Hintergrundes erschienen und von dort aus der Aufführung des eigentlichen Dramas, die auf der untern Bühne vor sich ging, zuschauten. 2) small ale = Dünnbier, dasselbe was small beer. 3) Die angebliche Verrücktheit des Herrn wird einem bösen Geiste zugeschrieben, von dem er besessen ist. 4) Wollt Ihr mich für einen Verrückten ausgeben? 5) Wahrscheinlich ist damit Barton-on-the-Heath gemeint, ein Dorf in Warwickshire. — Ebenso scheint Sh. mit Wincot eine bestimmte Localität seiner väterlichen Grafschaft im Sinne gehabt zu haben: Wilnecote oder Wincot, ein Dorf in der Nähe von Stratford, der Wohnsitz von Sh.'s mütterlichem Grossvater. Vielleicht mochte die Wirthin daselbst, dieselbe, die zu Anfang des Stückes auftritt, eine zu Sh.'s Zeit wohlbekannte Persönlichkeit sein. 6) bear-herd entstellt aus bear-ward. 7) sheer ale = reines Bier, ohne andere beigemischte Zuthat. Da in Warwickshire shearing für reaping gebraucht wird, so hat man auch Erntebier darunter verstanden und demnach shear ale gesetzt. 8) bestraught kommt auch bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen als Synonym von distraught oder distracted vor. 9) Die Fol. hat hier this is it. 10) Die früher vernünftigen Gedanken, welche der Wahnsinn gleichsam in's Exil getrieben hat. — thoughts ist Gegensatz zu dreams. 11) Adonis wird ähnlich geschildert in Sh.'s Venus and Adonis: When he beheld his shadow in the brook, || The fishes spread on it their golden gills. — Auch die folgenden Zeilen And Cytherea etc. beziehen sich auf dasselbe Bild, das Adonis und Venus zusammen darstellt. 12) Das Blut der Daphne ist so natürlich gemalt, dass

Lord. Hence comes it that your kindred shuns your house,
As beaten hence by your strange lunacy.
O noble lord, bethink thee of thy birth;
Call home thy ancient thoughts¹⁰ from banishment,
And banish hence these abject lowly dreams.
Look how thy servants do attend on thee,
Each in his office ready at thy beck:
Wilt thou have music? hark! Apollo plays, [Music.
And twenty caged nightingales do sing:
Or wilt thou sleep? we'll have thee to a couch
Softer and sweeter than the lustful bed
On purpose trimm'd up for Semiramis.
Say thou wilt walk, we will bestrew the ground:
Or wilt thou ride, thy horses shall be trapp'd.
Their harness studded all with gold and pearl.
Dost thou love hawking? thou hast hawks will soar
Above the morning lark: or wilt thou hunt?
Thy hounds shall make the welkin answer them,
And fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth.

1. Serv. Say thou wilt course, thy greyhounds are as swift

As breathed stags, ay, fleetier than the roe.

2. Serv. Dost thou love pictures? we will fetch thee straight

Adonis painted by a running brook,¹¹
And Cytherea all in sedges hid,
Which seem to move and wanton with her breath,
Even as the waving sedges play with wind.

Lord. We'll show thee lo as she was a maid,
And how she was beguiled and surpris'd,
As lively painted as the deed was done.

3. Serv. Or Daphne roaming through a thorny wood,
Scratching her legs, that one shall swear she bleeds;¹²
And at that sight shall sad Apollo weep,
So workmanly the blood and tears are drawn.

Lord. Thou art a lord, and nothing but a lord:
Thou hast a lady, far more beautiful
Than any woman in this waning age.¹³

1. Serv. And, till the tears that she hath shed for thee,
Like envious floods, o'erran her lovely face,
She was the fairest creature in the world;
And yet she is inferior to none.

Sly. Am I a lord? and have I such a lady?
Or do I dream? or have I dream'd till now?
I do not sleep; I see, I hear, I speak;
I smell sweet savours, and I feel soft things.¹⁴ —
Upon my life, I am a lord indeed,
And not a tinker, nor Christopher Sly.¹⁵ —
Well, bring our lady hither to our sight;
And once again, a pot o' the smallest ale.

2. Serv. Will't please your mightiness to wash your hands?

[Servants present an ewer, bason, and napkin.

man schwören sollte, es sei wirkliches; dasselbe gilt von den Thränen Apollo's, der auf demselben Gemälde mit dargestellt ist. 13) In dieser Zeit, in welcher die Schönheit der Weiber immer mehr schwindet. 14) soft things sind die weichen Kissen, auf denen er ruht. 15) So die Fol. Manche Hgg. setzen mit den späteren Folioausgg., wie vorher, Christopher Sly. 16) leet für court-leet = Gerichtstag bei einem Patrimonialgericht. Dort wollte der Kesselflicker die Wirthin verklagen, weil sie ihren Gästen das Bier in steinernen Krügen, nicht in geachteten, das richtige Viertelmaß haltenden Gefäßen vorsetzte. 17) maid ist hier, wie der Name Cicely Hacket zeigt, die Tochter der Wirthin, die vorhin Marian Hacket genannt war. 18) Greece ist vielleicht scherzhaft entstellt aus grease und soll die fette Corpulenz des Mannes andeuten. — Hanmer änderte old John Naps o' th' Green, wie in K. Henry IV. Second Part (A. 3, Sc. 2) einer Peter Bull-calf of the Green heisst. 19) Der Page versteht to fare = sich befinden, Sly versteht das Wort = eine Mahlzeit halten. 20) goodman nennt die Frau ihren Ehemann in den niederen Ständen und auf dem Lande. 21) Sly hält die ihm unbekannte Anrede Madam für den

O, how we joy to see your wit restor'd!

O, that once more you knew but what you are!

These fifteen years you have been in a dream.

Or, when you wak'd, so wak'd as if you slept.

Sly. These fifteen years! by my fay, a goodly nap.

But did I never speak of all that time?

1. Serv. O! yes, my lord, but very idle words; —

For though you lay here in this goodly chamber,

Yet would you say, ye were beaten out of door;

And rail upon the hostess of the house,

And say you would present her at the leet,¹⁶

Because she brought stone jugs and no seal'd quarts.

Sometimes you would call out for Cicely Hacket.

Sly. Ay, the woman's maid of the house.¹⁷

3. Serv. Why, Sir, you know no house, nor no such maid,

Nor no such men, as you have reckon'd up, —

As Stephen Sly, and old John Naps of Greece,¹⁸

And Peter Turf, and Henry Pimpernell,

And twenty more such names and men as these,

Which never were, nor no man ever saw.

Sly. Now, Lord be thanked for my good amends!

All. Amen.

Sly. I thank thee; thou shalt not lose by it.

Enter the Page, as a lady, with Attendants.

Page. How fares my noble lord?

Sly. Marry, I fare well,¹⁹ for here is cheer enough.

Where is my wife?

Page. Here, noble lord: what is thy will with her?

Sly. Are you my wife, and will not call me husband?

My men should call me lord: I am your goodman.²⁰

Page. My husband and my lord, my lord and husband;
I am your wife in all obedience.

Sly. I know it well. — What must I call her?

Lord. Madam.

Sly. Al'ce Madam, or Joan Madam?²¹

Lord. Madam, and nothing else: so lords call ladies.

Sly. Madam wife, they say that I have dream'd

And slept above some fifteen year or more.²²

Page. Ay, and the time seems thirty unto me,

Being all this time abandon'd from your bed.

Sly. 'Tis much. — Servants, leave me and her alone. —

Madam, undress you, and come now to bed.

Page. Thrice noble lord, let me entreat of you

To pardon me yet for a night or two;

Or if not so, until the sun be set:

For your physicians have expressly charg'd,

In peril to incur your former malady,

That I should yet absent me from your bed.

I hope, this reason stands for my excuse.

Sly. Ay, it stands²³ so, that I may hardly tarry so long; but I would be loath to fall into my dreams again:

I will therefore tarry, in despite of the flesh and the blood.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Your honour's players, hearing your amendment,
Are come to play a pleasant comedy;
For so your doctors hold it very meet,
Seeing too much sadness hath congeal'd your blood,
And melancholy is the nurse of frenzy:
Therefore, they thought it good you hear a play,
And frame your mind to mirth and merriment,
Which bars a thousand harms, and lengthens life.

Sly. Marry, I will; let them play it. Is not a commonty²⁴ a Christmas gambol, or a tumbling-trick?

Page. No, my good lord: it is more pleasing stuff.

Sly. What, household stuff?

Page. It is a kind of history.

Sly. Well, we'll see 't. Come, madam wife, sit by my side,
And let the world slip: ²⁵ we shall ne'er be younger.

[*They sit down.*²⁶

ACT I.

SCENE I.

Padua. A public Place.

Enter LUCENTIO and TRANIO.

Luc. Tranio, since for the great desire I had
To see fair Padua, nursery of arts,
I am arriv'd for fruitful Lombardy,
The pleasant garden of great Italy;
And, by my father's love and leave, am arm'd
With his good will, and thy good company,
My trusty servant, well approv'd in all;
Here let us breathe, and haply¹ institute
A course of learning, and ingenious² studies.
Pisa, renowned for grave citizens,

Gave me my being, and my father first,
A merchant of great traffic through the world,
Vincentio, come of the Bentivolii.³
Vincentio's son,⁴ brought up in Florence,
It shall become, to serve all hopes conceiv'd,⁵
To deck his fortune with his virtuous deeds:
And therefore, Tranio, for the time I study,
Virtue,⁶ and that part of philosophy
Will I apply, that treats of happiness
By virtue specially to be achiev'd.
Tell me thy mind; for I have Pisa left,
And am to Padua come, as he that leaves
A shallow plash, to plunge him in the deep,
And with satiety seeks to quench his thirst.⁷
Tra. Mi perdonate, gentle master mine,⁸
I am in all affected as yourself,
Glad that you thus continue your resolve,
To suck the sweets of sweet philosophy.
Only, good master, while we do admire
This virtue, and this moral discipline,
Let's be no stoics, nor no stocks,⁹ I pray;
Or so devote to Aristotle's checks,¹⁰
As Ovid be an outcast quite abjur'd.
Balk logic¹¹ with acquaintance that you have,
And practise rhetoric in your common talk:
Music and poesy use to quicken you.¹²
The mathematics, and the metaphysics,
Fall to them,¹³ as you find your stomach serves you.
No profit grows, where is no pleasure ta'en. —
In brief, Sir, study what you most affect.

Luc. Gramercies, Tranio, well dost thou advise.

If, Biondello, thou wert come ashore,¹⁴

We could at once put us in readiness,
And take a lodging fit to entertain
Such friends as time in Padua shall beget.
But stay awhile: what company is this?

Tra. Master, some show,¹⁵ to welcome us to town.

Familiennamen seiner Frau. 22) So die Fol., von manchen Hgg. in and more verändert. 23) to stand in obscönem Doppelsinn. 24) Wie Sly hier commonty aus comedy macht, so sagt in dem älteren Drama der eine Schauspieler commodity für comedy (vgl. Einleitung pag. 392). Die Fol. interpungirt I will let them play, it is not a Commontie etc. — Unter Christmas gambol versteht Sly eine Pantomime mit Tanz, wie sie zu Weihnacht aufgeführt wird. 25) Vgl. Induction Sc. 1, Anm. 6 zu let the world slide. 26) Die Fol. hat hier keine Bühnenweisung, noch bezeichnet sie den Anfang des ersten Acts. Vgl. Anm. 1 dieser Scene.

1) haply = mit gutem Glück, auf gut Glück. — Manche Hgg. setzen happily dafür. 2) Da in dem alten Drucke zwischen ingenious und ingenuous nicht unterschieden wird, so ist es möglich, dass Sh. hier auch an ingenuous studies = edle Studien, dachte. 3) Vincentio, come etc. = Vincentio, der von der Familie der Bentivolii stammt, ist, wie das vorhergehende A merchant etc., Apposition zu my father, welches letztere, wenn es nicht coordinirt zu my being gefasst wird, sondern als Nominativ steht, vermöge eines Sh.'schen Anakoluths kein Verbum hinter sich hat. — Vincentio setzte Hanmer für das Vincentio's der Fol., die hinter world ein Colon und hinter Bentivolii ein Comma setzt. 4) Zur Vervollständigung des Verses las Pope Vincentio his son in dem Sinne von Vincentio's son: es wird mir, als Vincentio's Sohn, geziemen. 5) scil. conceiv'd of him = alle Hoffnungen, die man von dem Sohne Vincentio's hegt. 6) virtue, and that part etc. ist Object zu apply = Etwas betreiben, üben. So in Gascoigne's Supposes: I fear he applies his study so that he will not leave the minute of an hour from his book. 7) Seinen Durst bis zur vollsten Genüge löschen. — Die Fol. schreibt sacietie. 8) Diese italienische Phrase emendirte erst Capell aus dem Me Pardonato der Fol. 9) Wortspiel zwischen stoics und stocks. 10) checks erklärt Steevens: the harsh rules of Aristotle; Malone setzt hinzu: such as tend to check and restrain the indulgence of the passions. Das Wort ist also in Verbindung mit dem folgenden Verse aufzufassen. — Blackstone schlug vor, ethics für checks zu lesen. 11) So die Fol., von Rowe ohne Grund in talk logic verändert. — to balk = disputiren, kommt in demselben Sinne wie hier in Spenser's Faerie Queene vor: But to occasion him to further talk, || To feed her humour with his pleasing style, || Her list in stryful terms with him to balk. 12) Pfl eget die Musik und die Dichtkunst, um Euch zu beleben, Euch anzuregen. 13) fall to = langt zu, greift zu, wie bei einer Mahlzeit, zur Mathematik und Metaphysik. 14) Diese pathetische Apostrophe an den abwesenden Diener Biondello hat allerdings etwas Auffallendes. Dyce liest If Biondello now were come ashore. Vielleicht wäre für thou hier then zu vermuthen. 15) Tranio erklärt die Auftretenden scherzhaft für einen Festaufzug, der den beiden Fremdlingen entgegengeschickt wurde, um sie in

Enter BAPTISTA, KATHARINA, BIANCA, GREMIO, and HORTENSIO.¹⁶ LUCENTIO and TRANIO stand aside.

Bap. Gentlemen, importune me no further,
For how I firmly am resolv'd you know;
That is, not to bestow my youngest daughter,
Before I have a husband for the elder.
If either of you both love Katharina,
Because I know you well, and love you well,
Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure.

Gre. [Aside.] To cart¹⁷ her rather: she's too rough for me. —

There, there, Hortensio, will you any wife?

Kath. [To Bap.] I pray you, Sir, is it your will
To make a stale of me amongst these mates?¹⁸

Hor. Mates, maid! how mean you that? no mates for
you,

Unless you were of gentler, milder mould.

Kath. I' faith, Sir, you shall never need to fear:
I wis,¹⁹ it is not half way to her heart;
But, if it were, doubt not her care should be
To comb your noddle with a three-legg'd stool,
And paint your face, and use you like a fool.

Hor. From all such devils, good Lord, deliver us!

Gre. And me too, good Lord!

Tra. Hush, master! here is some good pastime toward:

That wench is stark mad, or wonderful froward.

Luc. But in the other's silence do I see
Maid's mild behaviour and sobriety.

Peace, Tranio!

Tra. Well said, master: mum! and gaze your fill.

Bap. Gentlemen, that I may soon make good
What I have said,²⁰ — Bianca, get you in:
And let it not displease thee, good Bianca,
For I will love thee ne'er the less, my girl.

Kath. A pretty peat!²¹ it is best
Put finger in the eye, — an she knew why.

Bian. Sister, content you in my discontent. —
Sir, to your pleasure humbly I subscribe:

My books, and instruments, shall be my company,
On them to look,²² and practise by myself.

Luc. Hark, Tranio! thou may'st hear Minerva speak.

Hor. Signior Baptista, will you be so strange?²³
Sorry am I, that our good will effects
Bianca's grief.

Gre. Why, will you mew her up,
Signior Baptista, for this fiend of hell,
And make her bear the penance of her tongue?

Bap. Gentlemen, content ye; I am resolv'd. —
Go in, Bianca. [Exit BIANCA.]

And for I know, she taketh most delight
In music, instruments, and poetry,
Schoolmasters will I keep within my house,
Fit to instruct her youth. — If you, Hortensio,
Or Signior Gremio, you, know any such,
Prefer them hither; for to cunning men
I will be very kind, and liberal
To mine own children in good bringing-up;²⁴
And so farewell. Katharina, you may stay,
For I have more to commune with Bianca. [Exit.]

Kath. Why, and I trust, I may go too; may I not?
What! shall I be appointed hours, as though, belike,
I knew not what to take, and what to leave? Ha! [Exit.]

Gre. You may go to the devil's dam: your gifts²⁵ are so good, here's none will hold you. — Their love²⁶ is not so great, Hortensio, but we may blow our nails together, and fast it fairly out: our cake's dough on both sides. Farewell: — yet, for the love I bear my sweet Bianca, if I can by any means light on a fit man to teach her that wherein she delights, I will wish him to her father.²⁷

Hor. So will I, Signior Gremio: but a word, I pray.
Though the nature of our quarrel yet never brook'd parle, know now, upon advice,²⁸ it toucheth us both, — that we may yet again have access to our fair mistress, and be happy rivals in Bianca's love, — to labour and effect one thing specially.

Gre. What's that, I pray?

Hor. Marry, Sir, to get a husband for her sister.

Padua zu bewillkommen. 16) Die Fol. charakterisirt die beiden Letztgenannten näher: Gremio a Pantalowne (d. h. Pantalon, die italienische Charaktermaske eines närrischen, verliebten Alten) und Hortensio suitor to Bianca. — sutor ist in der Fol. zu sister verdruckt. 17) Wortspiel zwischen to court und to cart. — Es war eine Strafe für böse Weiber, an einen Karren gebunden und ausgepeitscht zu werden. 18) stale ist alles zur Schau oder als Köder Ausgestellte, wie Katharina hier von ihrem Vater dem Gremio und Hortensio angeboten wird. — Douce findet eine Anspielung auf den Ausdruck im Schachspiel stale-mate, wo der König sich nicht von der Stelle bewegen kann, ohne in Schach zu kommen. Hortensio fasst das von Katharina verächtlich = Gesell, Cumpan, gebrauchte mates in anderem Sinne = Ehegenosse. 19) I wis, eigentlich = ich weiss, steht als Bethenerung = fürwahr. — Katharina spricht hier von sich selbst in der dritten Person. 20) Baptista unterbricht den begonnenen Satz, den er ohne Nachsatz lässt, indem er sich an Bianca wendet. 21) peat, ein Liebkosungsausdruck = verzogenes, zartes Wesen, das jetzige pet. — Katharina behandelt die Schwester wie ein verzogenes Kind, das sich anstellt, als weine es, ohne zu wissen, weshalb. — Dyce hält die gereimten Worte Put finger etc. für ein Citat aus einem Liede oder einer Ballade. 22) to look bezieht sich auf books, to practise auf instruments = musikalische Instrumente. 23) strange erklärt Johnson hier mit so odd, so different from others in your conduct. Es ist wohl = zurückhaltend, spröde, kalt, wie in Merchant of Venice (A. 1, Sc. 1) you grow exceeding strange. 24) Indem Baptista sich gegen tüchtige, gescheite Männer freundlich erweist, ist er zugleich freigebig gegen seine Kinder in der guten Erziehung, die er ihnen geben lässt. 25) gifts erklärt Malone mit endowments; eher sind damit wohl ironisch die bösen Worte gemeint, mit denen Katharina so freigebig ist. 26) their love bezieht Knight wohl mit Recht auf die gegenseitige Zuneigung zwischen Katharina und ihrem Vater, welche für jetzt zwar einer Bewerbung um Bianca in den Weg tritt, aber nicht auf die Dauer, wenn Gremio und Hortensio es nur ruhig abwarten. — M. Mason las mit einer späteren Folioausg. our love, Malone vermuthete your love, Dyce endlich this love. — Das folgende our cake's dough on both sides ist sprichwörtlich: unsere beiderseitigen Hoffnungen sind vereitelt. 27) to wish = auffordern, rathen: so will ich ihn bitten, zu ihrem Vater zu gehen. So in Much Ado about Nothing (A. 3, Sc. 1) To wish him wrestle with affection. — Vielleicht ist to wish auch geradezu = empfehlen. 28) upon advice = wenn wir es recht überlegen. 29) high-cross = das steinerne Kreuz auf dem Marktplatz,

Gre. A husband! a devil.

Hor. I say, a husband.

Gre. I say, a devil. Think'st thou, Hortensio, though her father be very rich, any man is so very a fool to be married to hell?

Hor. Tush, Gremio! though it pass your patience and mine, to endure her loud alarms, why, man, there be good fellows in the world, an a man could light on them, would take her with all faults, and money enough.

Gre. I cannot tell; but I had as lief take her dowry with this condition, — to be whipped at the high-cross³⁹ every morning.

Hor. 'Faith, as you say, there's small choice in rotten apples. But, come; since this bar in law³⁰ makes us friends, it shall be so far forth friendly maintained, till by helping Baptista's eldest daughter to a husband, we set his youngest free for a husband, and then have to 't afresh.³¹ — Sweet Bianca! — Happy man be his dole!³² He that runs fastest gets the ring. How say you, Signior Gremio?

Gre. I am agreed: and 'would I had given him the best horse in Padua to begin his wooing, that would thoroughly woo her, wed her, and bed her, and rid the house of her. Come on. [Exeunt GREMIO and HORTENSIO.]

Tra. [Advancing.]³³ I pray, Sir, tell me, is it possible, That love should of a sudden take such hold?

Luc. O Tranio! till I found it to be true, I never thought it possible, or likely; But see! while idly I stood looking on, I found the effect of love in idleness;³⁴ And now in plainness do confess to thee, — That art to me as secret, and as dear, As Anna to the queen of Carthage was,³⁵ — Tranio, I burn, I pine; I perish, Tranio, If I achieve not this young modest girl. Counsel me, Tranio, for I know thou canst: Assist me, Tranio, for I know thou wilt.

Tra. Master, it is no time to chide you now; Affection is not rated from the heart:³⁶ If love have touch'd you, nought remains but so, — *Redime te captum, quam queas minimo.*³⁷

Luc. Gramercies, lad; go forward: this contents; The rest will comfort, for thy counsel's sound.

Tra. Master, you look'd so longly³⁸ on the maid, Perhaps you mark'd not what's the pith of all.

Luc. O! yes, I saw sweet beauty in her face, Such as the daughter of Agenor had, That made great Jove to humble him to her hand, When with his knees he kiss'd the Cretan strand.³⁹

Tra. Saw you no more? mark'd you not, how her sister

Began to scold, and raise up such a storm, That mortal ears might hardly endure the din?

Luc. Tranio, I saw her coral lips to move, And with her breath she did perfume the air:

Sacred, and sweet, was all I saw in her.

Tra. Nay, then, 't is time to stir him from his trance. —

I pray, awake, Sir: if you love the maid, Bend thoughts and wits to achieve her. Thus it stands:

Her elder sister is so curst and shrewd, That, till the father rid his hands of her,

Master, your love must live a maid at home;

And therefore has he closely mew'd her up, Because she will⁴⁰ not be annoy'd with suitors.

Luc. Ah, Tranio, what a cruel father's he!

But art thou not advis'd, he took some care

To get her cunning schoolmasters to instruct her?

Tra. Ay, marry, am I, Sir; and now 't is plotted.⁴¹

Luc. I have it, Tranio.

Tra. Master, for my hand,

Both our inventions meet and jump in one.

Luc. Tell me thine first.

Tra. You will be schoolmaster,

And undertake the teaching of the maid:

That's your device.

Luc. It is: may it be done?

Tra. Not possible; for who shall bear your part,

And be in Padua, here, Vincentio's son;

Keep house, and ply his book, welcome his friends,

Visit his countrymen, and banquet them?

Luc. Basta,⁴² content thee; for I have it full.⁴³

We have not yet been seen in any house,

Nor can we be distinguished by our faces,

For man or master: then, it follows thus: —

Thou shalt be master, Tranio, in my stead,

Keep house, and port,⁴⁴ and servants, as I should.

an dem die öffentlichen Züchtigungen vollzogen werden. 30) bar in law = Hinderniss zu seinem Rechte zu gelangen, seine Sache gerichtlich zu verfolgen. Hortensio versteht darunter die von Baptista ausgesprochene Bedingung, erst die ältere Tochter zu verheirathen, ehe die jüngere an die Reihe komme. — Das folgende it bezieht sich nicht auf this bar, sondern auf ein aus makes us friends zu supplirendes Wort, wie our friendship. 31) Und dann fängt unsere Nebenbuhlerschaft von Neuem an. 32) Eine sprichwörtliche Phrase, hier in Bezug auf Den, dem Bianca endlich zu Theil wird: Möge sein Theil sein, sich einen glücklichen Mann zu nennen! — Das folgende Sprichwort He that runs etc. spielt zugleich auf den Trauring und den Ring im Carrouselreiten an. Auf den letztern Sinn beziehen sich dann Gremio's Worte the best horse in Padua. 33) Lucentio und Tranio haben mittlerweile ihr Zwiegespräch im Hintergrunde der Bühne fortgesetzt und Ersterer dem Andern seine plötzlich entstandene Liebe zu Bianca entdeckt. 34) in idleness bezieht sich auf das vorhergehende idly: während ich müßig oder gedankenlos zuschaute, fand ich, wie die Liebe aus solcher müßigen Gedankenlosigkeit erwächst. 35) Anna, die Schwester der Dido und ihre Vertraute in der Liebe zum Aeneas, kannte Sh. wahrscheinlich aus Marlowe's Drama Dido Queen of Carthage. 36) Die Liebe lässt sich aus dem Herzen nicht wegschelten, wenn sie einmal darin ist. 37) Ein Citat aus dem Eunuchus des Terenz, das Sh. jedoch in dieser abgekürzten Fassung aus Lilly's Grammatik entlehnte. 38) longly = sehnüchtig, verlangend. — Das Wort kommt sonst kaum vor für longingly. 39) Auf den Mythos von Zeus und der Europa, der Tochter Agenor's, spielt Sh. auch sonst an; so in Much Ado about Nothing (A. 5, Sc. 4) und in Merry Wives of Windsor (A. 5, Sc. 5). 40) Die meisten Hgg. setzen mit Rowe shall für will. — Tranio spricht seine Meinung, nicht die des Baptista aus: weil sie, eingesperrt, nicht von Bewerbern belästigt werden wird. 41) Der Plan, den ich zu Euren Gunsten auf Baptista's Absicht baue, ist jetzt reif. 42) basta = genug! Diese italienische Phrase, die auch bei seinen Zeitgenossen gesprächsweise vorkommt, hat Sh. nur an dieser Stelle. Vgl. oben Anm. 8. 43) Ich habe meinen ganzen Plan fertig. So hatte Lucentio schon vorher gesagt I have it, Tranio. 44) to keep port = äusserlich

I will some other be; some Florentine,
Some Neapolitan, or meaner man of Pisa.⁴⁵
'T is hatch'd, and shall be so: — Tranio, at once
Uncase thee, take my colour'd hat and cloak:
When Biondello comes, he waits on thee;
But I will charm him first to keep his tongue.⁴⁶

Tra. So had you need. [They exchange habits.]
In brief, Sir, sith it your pleasure is,⁴⁷
And I am tied to be obedient (For so your father charg'd me at our parting;
Be serviceable to my son, quoth he,
Although, I think, 't was in another sense),
I am content to be Lucentio,
Because so well I love Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio, be so, because Lucentio loves,
And let me be a slave,⁴⁸ to achieve that maid
Whose sudden sight hath thrall'd my wounded eye.

Enter BIONDELLO.

Here comes the rogue. — Sirrah, where have you been?

Bion. Where have I been? Nay, how now? where are you?

Master, has my fellow Tranio stol'n your clothes,
Or you stol'n his, or both? pray, what 's the news?

Luc. Sirrah, come hither: 't is no time to jest,
And therefore frame your manners to the time.
Your fellow Tranio here, to save my life,
Puts my apparel and my countenance on,
And I for my escape have put on his;
For in a quarrel, since I came ashore,
I kill'd a man, and fear I was descried.
Wait you on him, I charge you, as becomes,
While I make way from hence to save my life.
You understand me?

Bion. I, Sir? ne'er a whit.⁴⁹

Luc. And not a jot of Tranio in your mouth:
Tranio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Bion. The better for him; 'would I were so too!

Tra. So could⁵⁰ I, 'faith, boy, to have the next wish after,

That Lucentio indeed had Baptista's youngest daughter.
But, sirrah, not for my sake, but your master's, I advise
You use your manners discreetly in all kind of companies:

When I am alone, why, then I am Tranio;
But in all places else, your master, Lucentio.⁵¹

Luc. Tranio, let 's go. —

One thing more rests, that thyself execute;
To make one among these wooers: if thou ask me why,
Sufficeth, my reasons are both good and weighty.

[*Exeunt.*⁵²

1. Serv. My lord, you nod; you do not mind the play.

Sly. Yes, by Saint Anne, do I. A good matter, surely: comes there any more of it?

Page. My lord, 't is but begun.

Sly. 'T is a very excellent piece of work, madam lady:
'would 't were done!

SCENE II.

The Same. Before HORTENSIO'S House

Enter PETRUCHIO and GRUMIO.

Pet. Verona, for a while I take my leave,
To see my friends in Padua; but, of all,
My best beloved and approved friend,
Hortensio; and, I trow, this is his house. —
Here, sirrah Grumio! knock, I say.

Gru. Knock, Sir! whom should I knock? is there any man has rebused¹ your worship?

Pet. Villain, I say, knock me here soundly.

Gru. Knock you² here, Sir? why, Sir, what am I, Sir, that I should knock you here, Sir?

Pet. Villain, I say, knock me at this gate;
And rap me well, or I 'll knock your knave's pate.

Gru. My master is grown quarrelsome. — I should knock you first,

And then I know after who comes by the worst.

Pet. Will it not be?

'Faith, sirrah, an you 'll not knock, I 'll wring³ it:
I 'll try how you can sol, fa, and sing it.⁴

[He wrings GRUMIO by the ears.

Gru. Help, masters,⁵ help! my master is mad.

Pet. Now, knock when I bid you: sirrah! villain!

Enter HORTENSIO.

Hor. How now? what 's the matter? — My old friend Grumio, and my good friend Petruchio! — How do you all at Verona?

Pet. Signior Hortensio, come you to part the fray?⁶
Con tutto il core ben trovato, may I say.

eine stattliche Haltung beobachten, den angesehenen Mann spielen. 45) Ein Pisaner von geringerem Stande als ich selber bin. 46) to charm = Jemanden gleichsam durch Zauberkraft zum Stillschweigen binden. — Kürzer sagt Sh. sonst auch to charm a tongue. — Die folgende Bühnenweisung rührt von Theobald her. 47) Steevens und Malone fügen zur Verbesserung des Verses hinter brief ein then ein. 48) Lass mich die Rolle eines Dieners oder Sklaven spielen, da ich doch durch den Anblick eines Mädchens in Knechtschaft gerathen bin. — slave ist mit thrall'd in Verbindung zu setzen. 49) Dyce hält es für möglich, dass Ay, Sir. — Ne'er a whit zu lesen sei. 50) Zu could ist aus dem Vorhergehenden und Folgenden ein Wort wie wish zu ergänzen. — Die meisten Hgg. setzen mit den späteren Folioausgg. would für could. — Die Fol. druckt diese Rede Tranio's, die sich als Knittelverse allerdings nicht vollständig in das metrische Schema fügt, als Prosa. 51) Die Fol. hat you master Lucentio; verbessert von der zweiten Folioausg. von 1632. 52) Das folgende kurze Zwischengespräch wird in der Fol. eingeleitet mit The Presenters above speak = die Darsteller auf der oberen Bühne, d. h. Sly und die Leute des Lord, sprechen. Zum Schluss der Scene heisst es dann in der Fol.: They sit and mark. — Das ältere Drama hat an dieser Stelle keine Zwischenreden.

1) rebused entstellt Grumio aus abused oder rebuked. 2) me, das Petruchio als Dativ versteht, missversteht Grumio geflissentlich als Accusativ. 3) Wortspiel zwischen to ring = die Thürklingel ziehen, und to wring by the ears = bei den Ohren ziehen. — Die Fol. hat ring hier und auch rings in der folgenden Bühnenweisung. 4) Ich will versuchen, wie Du die Tonleiter verstehst und singst. 5) masters verbesserte Theobald das mistress der alten Ausgg., das in der Handschrift wahrscheinlich in einer Abbeviatur geschrieben stand. 6) Das Handgemenge zwischen Herrn und Diener. So in Much Ado about Nothing (A. 5, Sc. 1) you are

Hor. Alla nostra casa ben venuto; molto honorato signior mio Petruchio.

Rise, Grumio, rise: we will compound this quarrel.

Gru. Nay, 't is no matter, Sir, what he 'leges in Latin.⁷ — If this be not a lawful cause for me to leave his service, — look you, Sir, — he bid me knock him, and rap him soundly, Sir: well, was it fit for a servant to use his master so; being, perhaps, (for aught I see) two-and-thirty, — a pip⁸ out?

Whom, 'would to God, I had well knock'd at first, Then had not Grumio come by the worst.

Pet. A senseless villain! — Good Hortensio, I bade the rascal knock upon your gate, And could not get him for my heart to do it.

Gru. Knock at the gate? — O heavens! Spake you not these words plain, — »Sirrah, knock me here,

Rap me here, knock me well, and knock me soundly«? And come you now with knocking at the gate?

Pet. Sirrah, be gone, or talk not, I advise you.

Hor. Petruchio, patience: I am Grumio's pledge. Why, this⁹ a heavy chance 'twixt him and you, Your ancient, trusty, pleasant servant Grumio. And tell me now, sweet friend, what happy gale Blows you to Padua, here, from old Verona?

Pet. Such wind as scatters young men through the world,

To seek their fortunes further than at home, Where small experience grows. But, in a few,¹⁰

Signior Hortensio, thus it stands with me:

Antonio, my father, is deceas'd,

And I have thrust myself into this maze,¹¹

Haply to wive, and thrive, as best I may.

Crowns in my purse I have, and goods at home,

And so am come abroad to see the world.

Hor. Petruchio, shall I then come roundly¹² to thee, And wish thee to a shrewd ill-favour'd wife?

Thou 'dst thank me but a little for my counsel;

And yet I'll promise thee she shall be rich,

And very rich: — but thou 'rt too much my friend,

And I'll not wish thee to her.

Pet. Signior Hortensio, 'twixt such friends as we Few words suffice; and therefore, if thou know One rich enough to be Petruchio's wife (As wealth is burthen of my wooing dance),¹³

Be she as foul as was Florentius' love,¹⁴

As old as Sibyl, and as curst and shrewd

As Socrates' Xanthippe, or a worse:

She moves me not, or not removes, at least,

Affection's edge in me, — were she as rough¹⁵

As are the swelling Adriatic seas:

I come to wive it wealthily in Padua;

If wealthily, then happily in Padua.

Gru. Nay, look you, Sir, he tells you flatly what his mind is: why, give him gold enough and marry him to a puppet, or an aglet-baby;¹⁶ or an old trot with ne'er a tooth in her head, though she have as many diseases as two-and-fifty horses:¹⁷ why, nothing comes amiss, so money comes withal.

Hor. Petruchio, since we are stepp'd thus far in, I will continue that I broach'd in jest.

I can, Petruchio, help thee to a wife

With wealth enough, and young, and beauteous,

Brought up as best becomes a gentlewoman:

Her only fault, and that is faults enough,¹⁸

Is, that she is intolerable¹⁹ curst,

And shrewd, and froward; so beyond all measure,

That, were my state far worser than it is,

I would not wed her for a mine of gold.

Pet. Hortensio, peace! thou know'st not gold's effect. —

Tell me her father's name, and 't is enough;

For I will board her, though she chide as loud

As thunder, when the clouds in autumn crack.

Hor. Her father is Baptista Minola,

An affable and courteous gentleman;

Her name is Katharina Minola,

Renown'd in Padua for her scolding tongue.

Pet. I know her father, though I know not her.

And he knew my deceased father well.

I will not sleep, Hortensio, till I see her;

And therefore let me be thus bold with you,

To give you over at this first encounter,²⁰

Unless you will accompany me thither.

Gru. I pray you, Sir, let him go while the humour lasts. O' my word, an she knew him as well as I do, she would think scolding would do little good upon him. She may, perhaps, call him half a score knaves, or so;²¹ why, that's nothing: an he begin once, he'll rail in his rope-tricks.²² I'll tell you what, Sir, — an she stand him²³ almost come to part almost a fray. 7) Grumio hält die italienischen Begrüssungsphrasen, welche Petruchio und Hortensio mit einander austauschen, für lateinische Floskeln, mit denen sein Herr sein Verfahren gegen den Diener dem Hortensio gegenüber rechtfertigen wolle. 8) pip = Auge in der Karte, ist Rowe's Emendation für peepe der Fol. 9) scil. this is. — Dyce schreibt deshalb mit Recht this. 10) in a few scil. words. — Die Fol. interpungirt Where small experience grows but in a few. 11) Auf solchen Irrweg, auf dem Du mich siehst, auf ein glücklich Ungefähr eine Frau zu nehmen und mein Glück zu machen. Zu haply vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 1. 12) roundly = geradaus. Zu dem folgenden wish thee vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 27. 13) Reichthum ist der Refrain meiner Brautwerbungsmelodie; Reichthum gehört durchaus dazu, wenn ich freien soll. 14) Die Geschichte des jungen Ritters Florent, Neffen des Kaisers Claudius, der ein hässliches Weib heirathete, weil sie ein Räthsel gelöst hatte, von dem sein Leben abhing, fand Sh. in Gower's Confessio Amantis. 15) So verbessert die zweite Folioausg. das were she is as rough der ersten Fol. 16) aglet-baby = ein Püppchen so klein wie ein geschnittes Figürchen, das den Kopf einer Tuchnadel bildet. 17) Wie Malone aus dem Pseudo-Sh.'schen A Yorkshire Tragedy citirt: O stumbling jade! the spavin o'ertake thee! the fifty diseases stop thee! so scheinen the fifty diseases of a horse sprichwörtlich gewesen zu sein. 18) Und der eine Fehler begreift schon Fehler genug in sich. 19) intolerable steht adverbial, wie Sh. auch sonst die Adjectiva auf —able so gebraucht. Manche Hgg. ändern stillschweigend intolerably. 20) Verzeiht, dass ich mir die Freiheit nehme, Euch gleich bei unsrer ersten Begegnung im Stich zu lassen. 21) Sie mag ihn zehnmal nacheinander Schelm oder ähnlich nennen. 22) rope-tricks = Streiche, für die man den Strick verdient. Aehnlich kommt in Chapman's May-day vor: Lord, how you roll in your rope-ripe terms. — Collier vermuthet, dass Grumio rhetorics sagen wolle, und bezieht darauf das folgende figure = Redefigur. 23) to stand him = ihm Stand halten, ihm die Spitze bieten.

but a little, he will throw a figure in her face,²⁴ and so disfigure her with it, that she shall have no more eyes to see withal than a cat. You know him not, Sir.

Hor. Tarry, Petruchio, I must go with thee, For in Baptista's keep²⁵ my treasure is: He hath the jewel of my life in hold, His youngest daughter, beautiful Bianca, And her withholds from me, and other more²⁶ Suitors to her, and rivals in my love; Supposing it a thing impossible, For those defects I have before rehears'd, That ever Katharina will be woo'd: Therefore this order hath Baptista ta'en,²⁷ That none shall have access unto Bianca, Till Katharine the curst have got a husband.

Gru. Katharine the curst! A title for a maid of all titles the worst.

Hor. Now shall my friend Petruchio do me grace, And offer me, disguis'd in sober robes, To old Baptista as a schoolmaster Well seen²⁸ in music, to instruct Bianca; That so I may, by this device, at least Have leave and leisure to make love to her, And unsuspected court her by herself.²⁹

Enter Gremio, and Lucentio disguised, with books under his arm.

Gru. Here's no knavery!³⁰ See, to beguile the old folks, how the young folks lay their heads together! Master, master, look about you: who goes there? ha!

Hor. Peace, Grumio: 't is the rival of my love. Petruchio, stand by awhile.

Gru. A proper stripling, and an amorous!³¹

[They retire.]

Gre. O! very well; I have perus'd the note.³² Hark you, Sir; I'll have them very fairly bound: All books of love, see that at any hand,³³ And see you read no other lectures to her. You understand me. — Over and beside Signior Baptista's liberality, I'll mend it with a largess. — Take your papers,³⁴ too, And let me have them very well perfum'd, For she is sweeter than perfume itself, To whom they go to.³⁵ What will you read to her?

Luc. Whate'er I read to her, I'll plead for you, As for my patron, stand you so assur'd, As firmly as yourself were still in place;³⁶

Yea, and perhaps with more successful words Than you, unless you were a scholar, Sir.

Gre. O, this learning! what a thing it is!

Gru. O, this woodcock!³⁷ what an ass it is!

Pet. Peace, sirrah!

Hor. Grumio, mum! — [Coming forward.] God save you, Signior Gremio!

Gre. And you're well met, Signior Hortensio. Trow you, Whither I am going? — To Baptista Minola.

I promis'd to inquire³⁸ carefully

About a schoolmaster for the fair Bianca;³⁹

And, by good fortune, I have lighted well On this young man; for learning, and behaviour, Fit for her turn; well read in poetry,

And other books, — good ones, I warrant ye.

Hor. 'T is well: and I have met a gentleman, Hath promis'd me to help me⁴⁰ to another,

A fine musician to instruct our mistress:

So shall I no whit be behind in duty

To fair Bianca, so belov'd of me.

Gre. Belov'd of me, and that my deeds shall prove.

Gru. And that his bags shall prove.

Hor. Gremio, 't is now no time to vent our love.

Listen to me, and if you speak me fair,

I'll tell you news indifferent⁴¹ good for either.

Here is a gentleman, whom by chance I met,

Upon agreement from us to his liking,⁴²

Will undertake to woo curst Katharine;

Yea, and to marry her, if her dowry please.

Gre. So said, so done, is well. —

Hortensio, have you told him all her faults?

Pet. I know, she is an irksome, brawling scold:

If that be all, masters, I hear no harm.

Gre. No, say'st me so, friend? What countryman?

Pet. Born in Verona, old Antonio's⁴³ son:

My father dead, my fortune lives for me;

And I do hope good days and long to see.

Gre. O! Sir, such a life, with such a wife, were strange;

But if you have a stomach, to 't o' God's name:

You shall have me assisting you in all.

But will you woo this wild-cat?

Pet. Will I live?

Gru. Will he woo her? ay, or I'll hang her.

Pet. Why came I hither, but to that intent?

Think you, a little din can daunt mine ears?

24) So wird er mit einem Faustschlag ihr Gesicht zeichnen, ihr eine Zeichnung in's Gesicht werfen. 25) keep = Hut, Obhut. 26) Die Fol. lässt and aus und beginnt mit other more einen neuen Satz. Die Emendation rührt von Thirlby her. 27) to take order = eine Massregel oder Anordnung treffen. 28) well seen = wohl bewandert, eigentlich = der sich wohl umgesehen hat in Etwas. 29) by herself = wenn sie für sich, allein, ist. 30) Die Negation steht hier ironisch als verstärkte Affirmation. So in Merchant of Venice (A. 2, Sc. 2) I cannot get a service, — no; I have ne'er a tongue in my head. 31) So spricht Grumio ironisch von dem alten Gremio: ein stattlicher Jüngling und einer, der recht zur Liebe geschaffen ist. — Zu amorous ist one scil. strippling zu suppliren. 32) Das Verzeichniss der Bücher, welche der als Lehrer verkleidete Lucentio mit Bianca lesen soll. 33) at any hand = auf jeden Fall. In demselben Sinne steht in All's well that ends well (A. 3, Sc. 6) in any hand. 34) papers sind die schriftlichen Aufsätze im Gegensatz zu den vorher erwähnten gedruckten Büchern. — papers setzte Pope für paper der Fol. 35) Die Wiederholung einer Präposition am Ende eines relativen oder interrogativen Satzes ist ebenso in Sh.'s Manier, wie die Weglassung derselben am Anfang und Ende. — Rowe verwischte diese Eigenthümlichkeit, indem er das zweite to strich. 36) Ich will so standhaft Eure Sache führen, als ob Ihr stets zugegen wäret. 37) woodcock, eigentlich = Schnepfe, auch sonst = Einfaltspinsel. 38) inquire ist hier dreisylbig zu lesen, wie fire öfter zweisylbig bei Sh. 39) Steevens las des Verses wegen for fair Bianca. 40) me verbesserte Rowe das one der Fol. 41) indifferent, in adverbialen Sinne mit good verbunden, bezieht sich auf either: Nachrichten, die für den Einen von uns eben so vorthellhaft lauten, wie für den Andern. 42) Nach einer Uebereinkunft zwischen uns und seiner eignen Neigung. 43) Die Fol. hat Butonios;

Have I not in my time heard lions roar?
 Have I not heard the sea, puff'd up with winds,
 Rage like an angry boar, chafed with sweat?
 Have I not heard great ordnance in the field,
 And heaven's artillery thunder in the skies?
 Have I not in a pitched battle heard
 Loud 'larums, neighing steeds, and trumpets' clang?
 And do you tell me of a woman's tongue,
 That gives not half so great a blow⁴⁴ to hear
 As will a chestnut in a farmer's fire?
 Tush! tush! fear boys with bugs.⁴⁵

Gru. For he fears none.

Gre. Hortensio, hark.

This gentleman is happily arriv'd,
 My mind presumes, for his own good, and ours.⁴⁶

Hor. I promis'd we would be contributors,
 And bear his charge of wooing, whatsoe'er.

Gre. And so we will, provided that he win her.

Gru. I would, I were as sure of a good dinner.

Enter TRANIO, bravely apparelled;⁴⁷ and BIONDELLO.

Tra. Gentlemen, God save you! If I may be bold,
 Tell me, I beseech you, which is the readiest way
 To the house of Signior Baptista Minola?

Gre. He that has the two fair daughters: — is 't he you mean?

Tra. Even he. — Biondello!

Gre. Hark you, Sir: you mean not her too?⁴⁸

Tra. Perhaps, him and her, Sir: what have you to do?

Pet. Not her that chides, Sir, at any hand,⁴⁹ I pray.

Tra. I love no chiders, Sir. — Biondello, let 's away.⁵⁰

Luc. [Aside.] Well begun, Tranio.

Hor. Sir, a word ere you go.

Are you a suitor to the maid you talk of, yea, or no?

Tra. An if I be, Sir, is it any offence?

Gre. No; if without more words you will get you hence.

Tra. Why, Sir, I pray, are not the streets as free
 For me, as for you?

Gre. But so is not she.

Tra. For what reason, I beseech you?

Gre. For this reason, if you 'll know,
 That she 's the choice love of Signior Gremio.

Hor. That she 's the chosen of Signior Hortensio.

Tra. Softly, my masters! if you be gentlemen,
 Do me this right; hear me with patience.

Baptista is a noble gentleman,
 To whom my father is not all unknown;
 And were his daughter fairer than she is,
 She may more suitors have, and me for one.
 Fair Leda's daughter had a thousand wooers;
 Then, well one more may fair Bianca have,
 And so she shall. Lucentio shall make one,
 Though Paris came in hope to speed alone.

Gre. What! this gentleman will out-talk us all.⁵¹

Luc. Sir, give him head: I know, he 'll prove a jade.

Pet. Hortensio, to what end are all these words?

Hor. Sir, let me be so bold as ask you,
 Did you yet ever see Baptista's daughter?

Tra. No, Sir; but hear I do, that he hath two,
 The one as famous for a scolding tongue,
 As is the other for beauteous modesty.

Pet. Sir, Sir, the first 's for me; let her go by.

Gre. Yea, leave that labour to great Hercules,
 And let it be more than Alcides' twelve.⁵²

Pet. Sir, understand you this of me: in sooth,
 The youngest daughter, whom you hearken for,
 Her father keeps from all access of suitors,
 And will not promise her to any man,
 Until the elder sister first be wed;
 The younger then is free, and not before.

Tra. If it be so, Sir, that you are the man
 Must stead us all, and me among the rest;
 And if you break the ice, and do this feat,⁵³
 Achieve the elder, set the younger free
 For our access, — whose⁵⁴ hap shall be to have her
 Will not so graceless be, to be ingrate.

Hor. Sir, you say well, and well you do conceive;
 And since you do profess to be a suitor,
 You must, as we do, gratify this gentleman,
 To whom we all rest generally beholding.⁵⁵

Tra. Sir, I shall not be slack: in sign whereof, Please ye we may contrive⁵⁶ this afternoon, verbessert von Rowe nach einem vorhergehenden Verse dieser Scene: Antonio, my father, is deceas'd. 44) blow = Explosion, Losplatzen. Wenn man das Wort so auffasst, ist to hear ohne Noth von Hammer in to th' ear verwandelt: die Zunge eines Weibes explodirt nicht einmal so laut wie eine Kastanie, die in der heissen Asche eines ländlichen Herdes gebraten wird und platzt. 45) to fear = Jemandem bange machen. — bug = Popanz, wesenloses Gespenst. 46) ours emendirte Theobald das yours der Fol. 47) Die Fol. hat Enter Tranio brave. Vgl. Induction Sc. 1, Anm. 13. 48) So vertheilt und interpungirt Tyrwhitt die letzten drei Verse, welche die meisten Hgg. nach der Fol. so lesen: Bion. He that has the two fair daughters: is 't [Aside to Tranio] he you mean? — Tra. Even he, Biondello. — Gre. Hark you, Sir: You mean not her to —. Hier soll, nach Malone's Meinung, Tranio Gremio's Frage, die etwa mit woo schliessen würde, unterbrechen. — Gremio scheint aber besorgt zu sein, dass Tranio nicht bloss den Vater, sondern auch die Tochter, d. h. Bianca, meine (her too). 49) Vgl. oben Anm. 33. 50) Zum Weggehen forderte vorher schon Tranio den Diener auf mit Biondello! als Gremio ihn zurückrief: Hark you, Sir etc. 51) Dieser Herr wird durch seine schönen Reden uns Alle bei der Bianca ausstechen. — Darauf bezieht sich auch Lucentio's Antwort mit der Metapher von einem Pferde, dem man getrost den Zügel schiessen lassen mag, weil es doch nur eine Mähre ist. 52) Lasst es für mehr als die zwölf Heldenthaten des Hercules gelten, wenn Petruchio die Katharina sein nennen darf. 53) feat verbesserte Rowe das seeke der Fol. 54) Vor whose ist ein he zu suppliren, auf das sich will not so graceless be bezieht. 55) Für beholding, das Sh. überall setzt, ändern viele Hgg. mit Rowe auch hier beholden = verpflichtet. 56) to contrive = verbringen, hinbringen. So in der von Sh. für Romeo and Juliet benutzten Novelle aus Paynter's Palace of Pleasure: Juliet — — retired for the day into her chamber, and contrived that whole night more in weeping than sleeping, und in Edwards' Drama Damon and Pythias: in travelling countries we three have contrived full many a year. — Theobald änderte ohne Noth convive. — In dem folgenden Verse vermuthet Sidney Walker mistress als Abkürzung für mistresses. 57) Wie Sachwalter, die vor Gericht die Sache streitender Parteien führen, aber zu Hause in collegialischer Verbindung leben. 58) ben

And quaff carouses to our mistress' health;
And do as adversaries do in law,⁵⁷
Strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends.

Gru., Bion. O excellent motion! Fellows, let's be gone.

Hor. The motion's good indeed, and be it so. —
Petruchio, I shall be your ben venuto.⁵⁸ [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.

The Same. A Room in BAPTISTA'S House.

Enter KATHARINA and BIANCA.

Bian. Good sister, wrong me not, nor wrong yourself,

To make a bondmaid and a slave of me:
That I disdain; but for these other gawds,¹
Unbind my hands, I'll pull them off myself,
Yea, all my raiment, to my petticoat;
Or what you will command me, will I do,
So well I know my duty to my elders.

Kath. Of all thy suitors, here I charge thee,² tell Whom thou lov'st best: see thou dissemble not.

Bian. Believe me, sister, of all the men alive,
I never yet beheld that special face
Which I could fancy more than any other.

Kath. Minion, thou liest. Is't not Hortensio?

Bian. If you affect him, sister, here I swear,
I'll plead for you myself, but you shall have him.

Kath. O! then, belike, you fancy riches more:
You will have Gremio to keep you fair.³

Bian. Is it for him you do envy⁴ me so?
Nay, then you jest; and now I well perceive,
You have but jested with me all this while.
I pr'ythee, sister Kate, untie my hands.

Kath. If that be jest, then all the rest was so.

[Strikes her.]

Enter BAPTISTA.

Bap. Why, how now, dame! whence grows this insolence? —

Bianca, stand aside: — poor girl! she weeps. —
Go ply thy needle; meddle not with her. —
For shame, thou hilding⁵ of a devilish spirit,
Why dost thou wrong her that did ne'er wrong thee?
When did she cross thee with a bitter word?

Kath. Her silence flouts me, and I'll be reveng'd.

[*Flies after BIANCA.*⁶]

Bap. What! in my sight? — Bianca, get thee in.

[Exit BIANCA.]

Kath. What! will you not suffer me? Nay, now I see,
She is your treasure, she must have a husband;
I must dance bare-foot on her wedding-day,
And, for your love to her, lead apes in hell.⁸
Talk not to me: I will go sit and weep,
Till I can find occasion of revenge. [Exit.]

Bap. Was ever gentleman thus griev'd as I? —
But who comes here?

Enter GREMIO, with LUCENTIO in the habit of a mean man;⁹ PETRUCHIO, with HORTENSIO as a musician; and TRANIO, with BIONDELLO bearing a lute and books.

Gre. Good morrow, neighbour Baptista.

Bap. Good morrow, neighbour Gremio. God save you, gentlemen!

Pet. And you, good Sir. Pray, have you not a daughter,
Call'd Katharina, fair, and virtuous?

Bap. I have a daughter, Sir, call'd Katharina.

Gre. You are too blunt: go to it orderly.

Pet. You wrong me, Signior Gremio: give me leave. —
I am a gentleman of Verona, Sir,
That, hearing of her beauty, and her wit,
Her affability, and bashful modesty,
Her wondrous qualities, and mild behaviour,
Am bold to show myself a forward guest¹⁰
Within your house, to make mine eye the witness
Of that report which I so oft have heard.
And, for an entrance to my entertainment,¹¹
I do present you with a man of mine,

[Presenting HORTENSIO.]

Cunning in music and the mathematics,
To instruct her fully in those sciences,
Whereof, I know, she is not ignorant.
Accept of him, or else you do me wrong:
His name is Licio, born in Mantua.

Bap. You're welcome, Sir; and he, for your good sake.
But for my daughter Katharine, this I know,
She is not for your turn, the more my grief.

Pet. I see, you do not mean to part with her,
Or else you like not of my company.

Bap. Mistake me not; I speak but as I find.
Whence are you, Sir? what may I call your name?

Pet. Petruchio is my name, Antonio's son;
A man well known throughout all Italy.

Bap. I know him well: you are welcome for his sake.

Gre. Saving your tale, Petruchio, I pray,
Let us, that are poor petitioners, speak too.

Backare!¹² you are marvellous forward.

venuto im Italienischen = willkommen. Sh. scheint hier sagen zu wollen, dass Hortensio den Petruchio willkommen heißen will, bei sich oder bei Baptista. So in Love's Labour's Lost (A. 4, Sc. 2) I will — — undertake your ben venuto.

1) gawds = bunter Tand, d. h. die Putzsachen, welche Bianca an sich hat, ist Theobald's Emendation für goods der Fol. 2) thee, das in der Fol. fehlt, ergänzt die zweite Folioausg. 3) Damit Gremio Dich im Putz hübsch halte. 4) to envy betont Sh. bald auf der ersten, bald auf der letzten Sylbe. 5) hilding wird auch sonst als Schimpfwort für ein Mädchen gebraucht; so in Romeo and Juliet (A. 3, Sc. 5) Out on her, hilding! Es ist = gemeines, niedriges Geschöpf. 6) Diese Bühnenweisung, sowie die vorige Strikes her, ist aus der Fol. 7) Manche Hgg. streichen what, des Verses wegen. 8) Eine sprichwörtliche Bezeichnung für alte Jungfern, die nach ihrem Tode Affen in der Hölle am Gängelbände führen, da sie auf Erden sich nicht mit Kindern befasst haben. So in dem Pseudo-Sh.'schen London Prodigal: women dying maids lead apes in hell. — In Much Ado about Nothing (A. 2, Sc. 1) hat Sh., abweichend von dieser Erklärung: lead his apes into hell. 9) So die Fol. — Lucentio erscheint nicht als Cavalier gekleidet, sondern in schlichter Tracht, wie sie für einen jungen Gelehrten sich ziemt. 10) Ein Gast, der von selbst auftritt, ohne eingeladen zu sein. 11) Um den Empfang, den ich bei Euch hoffe, einzuleiten. 12) backare = zurück! weicht zurück! kommt öfter sprichwörtlich vor in der

Pet. O! pardon me, Signior Gremio; I would fain be doing.¹³

Gre. I doubt it not, Sir; but you will curse your wooing. —

Neighbour,¹⁴ this is a gift very grateful, I am sure of it. To express the like kindness, myself that have been more kindly beholding to you than any, freely give unto you this young scholar [presenting LUCENTIO], that hath been long studying at Rheims; as cunning in Greek, Latin, and other languages, as the other in music and mathematics. His name is Cambio: pray accept his service.

Bap. A thousand thanks, Signior Gremio; welcome, good Cambio. — [To TRANIO.] But, gentle Sir, methinks, you walk like a stranger: may I be so bold to know the cause of your coming?

Tra. Pardon me, Sir, the boldness is mine own, That, being a stranger in this city here, Do make myself a suitor to your daughter, Unto Bianca, fair, and virtuous.

Nor is your firm resolve unknown to me, In the preferment of the eldest sister.

This liberty is all that I request, —

That, upon knowledge of my parentage,¹⁵

I may have welcome 'mongst the rest that woo, And free access and favour as the rest.

And, toward the education of your daughters,

I here bestow a simple instrument,

And this small packet of Greek and Latin books:

If you accept them, then their worth is great.¹⁶

Bap. Lucentio is your name?¹⁷ of whence, I pray?

Tra. Of Pisa, Sir; son to Vincentio.

Bap. A mighty man of Pisa; by report¹⁸

I know him well: you are very welcome, Sir. —

[To HOR.] Take you the lute, [to LUC.] and you the set of books;

You shall go see your pupils presently.

Holla, within!

Enter a Servant.

Sirrah, lead these gentlemen

To my daughters; and tell them both,¹⁹

These are their tutors: bid them use them well.

[Exit Servant, with HORTENSIO, LUCENTIO, and BIONDELLO.

We will go walk a little in the orchard,

And then to dinner. You are passing welcome,

And so I pray you all to think yourselves.

Pet. Signior Baptista, my business asketh haste, And every day I cannot come to woo.²⁰

You knew my father well, and in him, me,

Left solely heir to all his lands and goods,

Which I have better'd rather than decreas'd:

Then tell me, — if I get your daughter's love,

What dowry shall I have with her to wife?

Bap. After my death, the one half of my lands And in possession twenty thousand crowns.

Pet. And, for that dowry, I'll assure her of

Her widowhood,²¹ be it that she survive me,

In all my lands and leases whatsoever.

Let specialties be therefore drawn between us,

That covenants may be kept on either hand.

Bap. Ay, when the special thing is well obtain'd,

That is, her love; for that is all in all.

Pet. Why, that is nothing; for I tell you, father,

I am as peremptory as she proud-minded;

And where two raging fires meet together,

They do consume the thing that feeds their fury

Though little fire grows great with little wind,

Yet extreme gusts will blow out fire and all;

So I to her, and so she yields to me,

For I am rough, and woo not like a babe.

Bap. Well may'st thou woo, and happy be thy speed!

But be thou arm'd for some unhappy words.²²

Pet. Ay, to the proof,²³ as mountains are for winds,

That shake not, though they blow perpetually.²⁴

Re-enter HORTENSIO, with his head broken.

Bap. How now, my friend? why dost thou look so pale?

Hor. For fear, I promise you, if I look pale.

Bap. What, will my daughter prove a good musician?

Hor. I think, she'll sooner prove a soldier:

Iron may hold with her, but never lutes.

Redensart Backare! quoth Mortimer to his son. So auch in Lyly's Midas: The masculine gender is more worthy than the feminine, and therefore, Licio, backare! 13) to be doing = thätig sein, fördern, mit frivolem erotischen Nebensinn, den Gremio auffasst. So auch in K. Henry V. (A. 3, Sc. 7) Doing is activity, and he will still be doing. 14) neighbour = wie Gremio den Baptista anredet, ist Theobald's Emendation für neighbours der Fol. — Das Folgende ist in der Fol. mit Unrecht als Vers gedruckt, ebenso Baptista's Antwort. — Das vor freely give von den meisten Hgg. eingefügte I streichen, mit der Fol., die Cambridge Edd. mit Recht, indem sie zwischen kindness und myself ein Comma setzen. Für unto you hat die Fol. nur unto. 15) Sobald Ihr wisst, von welcher Verwandtschaft oder Familie ich bin. 16) Auf then liegt der Nachdruck: die Laute und die Bücher erhalten als Geschenke ihren Werth erst dadurch, dass Baptista sie nicht verschmäht. 17) Malone vermuthet, dass hier eine Zeile ausgefallen, in welcher Tranio sich dem Baptista als Lucentio zu erkennen gegeben; nach Theobald's Meinung geschah das in einem Zwiegespräch, das sie bei Seite führten. Ein anderer Commentator meint, Lucentio's Name stehe auf dem Bücherpaket, das Tranio überreicht. Das Wahrscheinlichste ist, dass Sh. ein Versehen beging. 18) Die Interpunction der Fol. und mancher Hgg. verbindet by report mit dem Vorhergehenden, und Malone fasst demgemäss I know him well = ich weiss wohl, wer er ist; ich kenne ihn von Hörensagen. 19) Die zweite Folioausg., welche oft mit allerlei Flickwörtern unmetrische Zeilen der Fol. vervollständigt, hat auch hier To my two daughters, and then tell them both. 20) Steevens citirt dazu einen Vers aus einem Interlude von Puttenham: I cannot come a wooing every day, und ebenso einen Refrain aus einer alten Ballade, The Ingenious Braggadoccio, der so lautet: And I cannot come every day to woo. 21) widowhood = das Witthum, das Petruchio der Katharina zusichern will. — to assure mit dem Accusativ der Person und of der Sache = Jemanden in Bezug auf Etwas sicher stellen. — Dieses Witthum will er ihr auf seine liegenden Gründe anweisen, und es soll ein articulirter Vertrag deshalb zwischen ihm und Baptista gerichtlich aufgesetzt werden, damit die Uebereinkunft beiderseits gehalten werde. — Auf specialties bezieht sich dann the special thing = das, worauf es besonders ankommt. 22) some unhappy words = einige böse Worte, wie Katharina sie dem Petruchio sagen wird. 23) scil. armed to the proof = undurchdringlich gerüstet gegen jeden Angriff. 24) that bezieht sich

Bap. Why, then thou canst not break her to the lute?

Hor. Why, no, for she hath broke the lute to me.²⁵
I did but tell her she mistook her frets,²⁶
And bow'd her hand to teach her fingering,
When, with a most impatient, devilish spirit,
'Frets call you these?' quoth she; 'I'll fume with them:'

And with that word she struck me on the head,
And through the instrument my pate made way;
And there I stood amazed for a while,
As on a pillory, looking through the lute,²⁷
While she did call me rascal fiddler,
And twangling Jack,²⁸ with twenty such vile terms,
As had she²⁹ studied to misuse me so.

Pet. Now, by the world, it is a lusty wench!
I love her ten times more than e'er I did:
O, how I long to have some chat with her!

Bap. Well, go with me, and be not so discomfited:
Proceed in practice with my younger daughter;
She's apt to learn, and thankful for good turns. —
Signior Petruchio, will you go with us,
Or shall I send my daughter Kate to you?

Pet. I pray you do; I will attend her here,
[Exeunt BAPTISTA, GREMIO, TRANIO, and HORTENSIO.]

And woo her with some spirit when she comes.
Say, that she rail; why, then I'll tell her plain,
She sings as sweetly as a nightingale:
Say, that she frown; I'll say, she looks as clear
As morning roses newly wash'd with dew:
Say, she be mute, and will not speak a word;
Then I'll commend her volubility,³⁰
And say, she uttereth piercing eloquence:
If she do bid me pack, I'll give her thanks,
As though she bid me stay by her a week:
If she deny to wed, I'll crave the day
When I shall ask the banns, and when be married. —
But here she comes; and now, Petruchio, speak.

Enter KATHARINA.

Good morrow, Kate, for that's your name, I hear.

Kath. Well have you heard, but something hard of hearing:³¹

They call me Katharine, that do talk of me.

Pet. You lie, in faith; for you are call'd plain Kate,
And bonny Kate, and sometimes Kate the curst;

But Kate, the prettiest Kate in Christendom;
Kate of Kate-Hall, my super-dainty Kate,
For dainties are all cates:³² and therefore, Kate,
Take this of me,³³ Kate of my consolation: —
Hearing thy mildness prais'd in every town,
Thy virtues spoke of, and thy beauty sounded,
Yet not so deeply as to thee belongs,
Myself am mov'd to woo thee for my wife.

Kath. Mov'd! in good time: let him that mov'd you
hither,
Remove you hence. I knew you at the first,
You were a moveable.

Pet. Why, what's a moveable?

Kath. A joint-stool.³⁴

Pet. Thou hast hit it: come, sit on me.

Kath. Asses are made to bear, and so are you.

Pet. Women are made to bear, and so are you.

Kath. No such jade as bear you, if me you mean.³⁵

Pet. Alas, good Kate! I will not burden thee;
For, knowing thee to be but young and light, —

Kath. Too light for such a swain as you to catch,
And yet as heavy as my weight should be.

Pet. Should be? ³⁶ should buzz.

Kath. Well ta'en, and like a buzzard.

Pet. O slow-wing'd turtle! shall a buzzard take thee?

Kath. Ay, for a turtle, as he takes a buzzard.

Pet. Come, come, you wasp; i' faith, you are too angry.

Kath. If I be waspish, best beware my sting.

Pet. My remedy is then, to pluck it out.

Kath. Ay, if the fool could find it where it lies.

Pet. Who knows not where a wasp does wear his sting?
In his tail.

Kath. In his tongue.

Pet. Whose tongue?

Kath. Yours, if you talk of tails; and so farewell.

Pet. What! with my tongue in your tail? nay, come again:

Good Kate, I am a gentleman.

Kath. That I'll try. [Striking him.]

Pet. I swear I'll cuff you, if you strike again.

Kath. So may you lose your arms:³⁷

If you strike me, you are no gentleman,

And if no gentleman, why, then no arms.

Pet. A herald, Kate? O! put me in thy books.³⁸

Kath. What is your crest? a coxcomb?

auf mountains, they auf winds. 25) to break her to the lute = sie einüben auf der Laute; to break the lute to me = die Laute an mir zerschlagen. 26) frets = der Bund am Halse der Laute, wo die Saiten auslaufen. — Katharina fasst frets = leidenschaftliche Stimmung. 27) Hortensio vergleicht die zerbrochene Laute, durch die sein Kopf hindurchgefahren ist, mit einem Halseisen, mit dem die Verbrecher an den Pranger befestigt werden. 28) twangling Jack = ein klimpernder Hans, schlechter Lautenspieler. — In der vorigen Zeile ist fiddler dreisylbig (fiddeler) zu lesen. 29) as had she für as if she had, wie had she für if she had stehen kann. — Die meisten Hgg. ändern ohne Noth mit Rowe as she had. 30) volubility = Zungengeläufigkeit, auch ohne den Zusatz von tongue oder words. 31) Ein Wortspiel zwischen heard und hard, die in alter Aussprache eher mit einander verwechselt wurden, als jetzt. 32) Wortspiel zwischen Kate und cates = Leckerbissen, Lebensmittel. 33) take this of me = höre das von mir, erfahre das von mir. 34) Anspielung an die auch in K. Lear (A. 3, Sc. 6) vorkommende Redensart Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool, eine grobe oder höhnische Entschuldigung, wenn man Jemanden geflissentlich übersehen hat. Die Fol. hat ioyn'd stoole. — moveable bezieht sich auf move und remove. 35) Ich bin keine solche Mähre, dass ich Euch tragen möchte, wenn Ihr es auf mich abgesehen habt. — bear fügte D y c e ein. — Die meisten Hgg. schieben statt dessen mit der zweiten Folioausg. ein unwahrscheinliches Flickwort Sir ein und lesen No such jade, Sir, as you etc. 36) Wortspiel zwischen be = sein, und bee = Biene, wie gleich darauf zwischen to buzz = summen, und buzzard = Mäusefalk. 37) Das Wortspiel zwischen arms = Arme, und arms = Waffen, Wappen, kehrt wieder in Hamlet (A. 5, Sc. 1). — In dem älteren Drama droht die Keiferin nur mit Schlägen. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 394. 38) In den Büchern des heraldischen Amts (Herald's Office) mussten die Wappen zur Beglaubigung verzeichnet stehen. Zugleich ist put me in thy books = nimm Notiz von mir, behalte mich in gutem Andenken. 39) Wortspiel zwischen coxcomb = Narren-

Pet. A combless cock,³⁹ so Kate will be my hen.

Kath. No cock of mine; you crow too like a craven.⁴⁰

Pet. Nay, come, Kate, come; you must not look so sour.

Kath. It is my fashion when I see a crab.⁴¹

Pet. Why, here's no crab, and therefore look not sour.

Kath. There is, there is.

Pet. Then show it me.

Kath. Had I a glass, I would.

Pet. What, you mean my face?

Kath. Well aim'd of such a young one.⁴²

Pet. Now, by Saint George, I am too young for you.

Kath. Yet you are wither'd.

Pet. 'T is with cares.

Kath. I care not.

Pet. Nay, hear you, Kate: in sooth, you 'scape not so.

Kath. I chafe you, if I tarry: let me go.

Pet. No, not a whit: I find you passing gentle.

'T was told me, you were rough, and coy, and sullen,
And now I find report a very liar;

For thou art pleasant, gamesome, passing courteous,
But slow in speech, yet sweet as spring-time flowers.

Thou canst not frown, thou canst not look askance,

Nor bite the lip, as angry wenches will;

Nor hast thou pleasure to be cross in talk;

But thou with mildness entertain'st thy wooers,
With gentle conference, soft and affable.

Why does the world report that Kate doth limp?
O slanderous world! Kate, like the hazel-twig,

Is straight, and slender; and as brown in hue
As hazel-nuts, and sweeter than the kernels.

O! let me see thee walk: thou dost not halt.

Kath. Go, fool, and whom thou keep'st command.

Pet. Did ever Dian so become a grove,
As Kate this chamber with her princely gait?

O! be thou Dian, and let her be Kate,

And then let Kate be chaste, and Dian sportful.

Kath. Where did you study all this goodly speech?

Pet. It is extempore, from my mother-wit.

Kath. A witty mother! witless else her son.

Pet. Am I not wise?

Kath. Yes; keep you warm.⁴³

Pet. Marry, so I mean, sweet Katharine, in thy bed.

And therefore, setting all this chat aside,

Thus in plain terms: — your father hath consented

That you shall be my wife; your dowry 'greed on;

And, will you, nill you,⁴⁴ I will marry you.

Now, Kate, I am a husband for your turn;

For, by this light, whereby I see thy beauty,

Thy beauty that doth make me like thee well,

Thou must be married to no man but me:

For I am he am born to tame you, Kate.

And bring you from a wild Kate⁴⁵ to a Kate

Conformable, as other household Kates.

Here comes your father: never make denial;

I must and will have Katharine to my wife.

Re-enter BAPTISTA, GREMIO, and TRANIO.

Bap. Now, Signior Petruchio, how speed you with my daughter?

Pet. How but well, Sir? how but well?

It were impossible I should speed amiss.

Bap. Why, how now, daughter Katharine? in your dumps?

Kath. Call you me daughter? now, I promise you,

You have show'd a tender fatherly regard,

To wish me wed to one half lunatic;

A mad-cap ruffian, and a swearing Jack,⁴⁶

That thinks with oaths to face the matter out.

Pet. Father, 't is thus: — yourself and all the world,

That talk'd of her, have talk'd amiss of her.

If she be curst, it is for policy,

For she's not froward, but modest as the dove;

She is not hot, but temperate as the morn;⁴⁷

For patience she will prove a second Grissel,⁴⁸

And Roman Lucrece for her chastity;

And to conclude, — we have 'greed so well together,

That upon Sunday is the wedding-day.

Kath. I'll see thee hang'd on Sunday first.

Gre. Hark, Petruchio: she says, she'll see thee hang'd first.

Tra. Is this your speeding? nay then, good night our part.⁴⁹

Pet. Be patient, gentlemen, I choose her for myself:

If she and I be pleas'd, what's that to you?

'T is bargain'd 'twixt us twain, being alone,

That she shall still be curst in company.

I tell you, 't is incredible to believe

How much she loves me. O, the kindest Kate!

She hung about my neck, and kiss on kiss

She vied⁵⁰ so fast, protesting oath on oath,

That in a twink she won me to her love.

O! you are novices: 't is a world to see,⁵¹

How tame, when men and women are alone,⁵²

A meacock⁵³ wretch can make the curstest shrew. —

Give me thy hand, Kate: I will unto Venice,

To buy apparel 'gainst the wedding-day. —

Provide the feast, father, and bid the guests;

I will be sure, my Katharine shall be fine.

Bap. I know not what to say; but give me your hands:⁵⁴

God send you joy, Petruchio! 't is a match.

kappe, und cock's comb = Hahnenkamm. 40) craven = ein feiger, überwundener Hahn. 41) crab = ein Holzapfel, der so sauer ist, dass man selbst dabei sauer aussieht; zugleich = ein Murrkopf, Sauertopf. 42) Dafür, dass Ihr noch so jung seid, habt Ihr meine Meinung gut genug getroffen. 43) Das Sprichwort ist ausführlicher angedeutet in Much Ado about Nothing (A. 1, Sc. 1) if he have wit enough to keep himself warm. 44) Und mögt Ihr wollen oder nicht. So in Edwards' Drama Damon and Pythias: Need hath no law; will I or nill I, it must be done. 45) wild Kate erinnert an wild cat, ebenso household Kates an household cats. 46) a swearing Jack = ein Flucher. Vgl. oben zu twangling Jack Anm. 28. Ebenso ist oath = Fluchwort. 47) hot und temperate beziehen sich auf das Temperament der Katharina, das mit der Temperatur des kühleren Morgens im Gegensatz zum heißen Mittag verglichen wird. 48) Sh. kannte die Geschichte der Griseldis wahrscheinlich aus dem Clerkes Tale in den Canterbury Tales von Chaucer. — a second ist auch zu suppliren zu dem folgenden Roman Lucrece. 49) Wenn Ihr so schlecht fahrt, so haben wir für unsern Theil gar nichts zu hoffen, so müssen wir auf Bianca ganz verzichten. 50) to vie = überbieten, eine Karte im Kartenspiel mit der andern decken. 51) 't is a world to see, eine sprichwörtliche Redensart, die Steevens mit it is wonderful to see erklärt. 52) d. h. wenn ein Mann mit einem Weibe allein ist. 53) meacock, gewöhnlich substantivisch = Memme, weibischer Mann, steht hier adjectivisch in demselben Sinne. 54) your hands = die Hand Petruchio's

Gre., Tra. Amen, say we: we will be witnesses.

Pet. Father, and wife, and gentlemen, adieu.

I will to Venice; Sunday comes apace.

We will have rings, and things, and fine array;

And kiss me, Kate, we will be married o' Sunday.⁵⁵

[Exeunt PETRUCHIO and KATHARINA, severally.]

Gre. Was ever match clapp'd up so suddenly?

Bap. Faith, gentlemen, now I play a merchant's part,
And venture madly on a desperate mart.

Tra. 'T was a commodity lay fretting by you:

'T will bring you gain, or perish on the seas.

Bap. The gain I seek is — quiet in⁵⁶ the match.

Gre. No doubt but he hath got a quiet catch. —

But now, Baptista, to your younger daughter.

Now is the day we long have looked for:

I am your neighbour, and was suitor first.

Tra. And I am one, that love Bianca more
Than words can witness, or your thoughts can guess.

Gre. Youngling,⁵⁷ thou canst not love so dear as I.

Tra. Grey-beard, thy love doth freeze.

Gre. But thine doth fry.

Skipper, stand back: 't is age, that nourisheth.

Tra. But youth, in ladies' eyes that flourisheth.

Bap. Content you, gentlemen; I'll compound this strife:

'T is deeds must win the prize; and he, of both,

That can assure my daughter greatest dower,

Shall have Bianca's love.⁵⁸ —

Say, Signior Gremio, what can you assure her?

Gre. First, as you know, my house within the city
Is richly furnished with plate and gold:

Basins, and ewers, to lave her dainty hands;

My hangings all of Tyrian tapestry;

In ivory coffer I have stuff'd my crowns;⁵⁹

In cypress chests my arras, counterpoints,⁶⁰

Costly apparel, tents,⁶¹ and canopies,

Fine linen, Turkey cushions boss'd with pearl,

Valance of Venice gold in needle-work,

Pewter and brass, and all things that belong

To house, or housekeeping: then, at my farm,

I have a hundred milch-kine to the pail,

Sixscore fat oxen standing in my stalls,

And all things answerable to this portion.

Myself am struck in years, I must confess;

And if I die to-morrow, this is hers,

If whilst I live she will be only mine.⁶²

Tra. That »only« came well in. — Sir, list to me:

I am my father's heir and only son:

If I may have your daughter to my wife,

I'll leave her houses three or four as good,

Within rich Pisa walls, as any one

Old Signior Gremio has in Padua;

Besides two thousand ducats by the year

Of fruitful land, all which shall be her jointure. —

What, have I pinch'd you, Signior Gremio?

Gre. Two thousand ducats by the year of land!

My land amounts not to so much in all:⁶³

That she shall have; besides an argosy,

That now is lying in Marseilles' ⁶⁴ road. —

What, have I chok'd you with an argosy?

Tra. Gremio, 't is known, my father hath no less Than three great argosies, besides two galliasses.

And twelve tight galleys:⁶⁵ these I will assure her,

And twice as much, whate'er thou offer'st next.

Gre. Nay, I have offer'd all, I have no more;

And she can have no more than all I have: —

If you like me, she shall have me and mine.

Tra. Why, then the maid is mine from all the world,⁶⁶

By your firm promise. Gremio is out-vied.⁶⁷

Bap. I must confess, your offer is the best;

And, let your father make her the assurance,

She is your own; else, you must pardon me:

If you should die before him, where 's her dower?

Tra. That 's but a cavil: he is old, I young.

Gre. And may not young men die, as well as old?

Bap. Well, gentlemen,

I am thus resolv'd. — On Sunday next, you know,

My daughter Katharine is to be married:

Now, on the Sunday following shall Bianca

Be bride to you, if you make this assurance;

If not, to Signior Gremio:

And so I take my leave, and thank you both. [Exit.]

Gre. Adieu, good neighbour. — Now I fear thee not:

Sirrah, young gamester, your father were a fool

To give thee all, and, in his waning age,

Set foot under thy table. Tut! a toy!

An old Italian fox⁶⁸ is not so kind, my boy. [Exit.]

Tra. A vengeance on your crafty wither'd hide!

Yet I have faced it with a card of ten.⁶⁹

'T is in my head to do my master good: —

I see no reason, but suppos'd Lucentio

Must get a father, call'd — suppos'd Vincentio;

und Katharina's, die er ineinander legen will. 55) Collier citirt nach mündlicher Ueberlieferung ein Stück aus einem Liede, das Sh. gekannt haben muss. Es lautet: To church away! || We will have rings || And fine array || With other things || Against the day, || For I'm to be married on Sunday. 56) in verbesserte Rowe das me der Fol. 57) youngling = junger, unreifer Mensch, in verächtlichem Sinn. 58) Die Fol. wiederholt durch ein Versehen das my der vorigen Zeile vor Bianca's. 59) my crowns = mein gemünztes Gold. 60) counterpoints = Bettdecken, zu Sh.'s Zeit aus taftenen Stoffen kunstreich zusammengesetzt und gestickt, werden auch sonst neben arras = gestickten oder gewirkten Tapeten, zu den Kostbarkeiten eines Hausrathes gerechnet. — Die Fol. hat kein Comma zwischen arras und counterpoints. 61) tents sind wahrscheinlich die zeltartig aufgesteckten Vorhänge eines Bettes. 62) only gehört nicht zu mine, sondern nur will be: wenn sie sich nur entschliessen will, die Meinige zu werden. — Tranio verbindet only mit mine. 63) Da Gremio's Ertrag von seinen Grundstücken nicht völlig zweitausend Ducaten beträgt, so soll Bianca zu diesem Ertrage als ihr ausgesetztes Witthum noch ein Kauffahrteischiff erhalten, das gerade auf der Rhede von Marseille liegt. 64) Die Fol. schreibt Marcellus. — Marseilles ist auch an anderer Stelle bei Sh. dreisylbig zu lesen. 65) galliass wird von Kersey mit a great double galley erklärt. 66) Mein vor allen Uebrigen. 67) to out-vie = überbieten, übertrumpfen, im Kartenspiel. Vgl. oben Ann. 50. 68) Die Schlanheit, als charakteristisch für die Italiener, wird auch in Cymbeline (A. 5, Sc. 5) hervorgehoben: mine Italian brain || 'Gan in your duller Britain operate. 69) Nach Staunton's plausibler Erklärung bezeichnet to face it with a card of ten die Dreistigkeit, mit der ein Spieler im Besitz der Zehn im Kartenspiel es aufnimmt mit dem Mitspieler, der Bilder in der Karte, also eine höhere Karte hat. 70) Steevens, um einen Schlussreim zu gewinnen, schlug doing für cunning vor.

And that 's a wonder: fathers, commonly,
Do get their children; but in this case of wooing,
A child shall get a sire, if I fail not of my cunning.⁷⁰
[Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.

A Room in BAPTISTA'S House.

Enter LUCENTIO, HORTENSIO, and BIANCA.

Luc. Fiddler, forbear: you grow too forward, Sir.
Have you so soon forgot the entertainment
Her sister Katharine welcom'd you withal?

Hor. But, wrangling pedant, this is¹
The patroness of heavenly harmony:
Then give me leave to have prerogative;
And when in music we have spent an hour,
Your lecture shall have leisure for as much.

Luc. Preposterous ass, that never read so far²
To know the cause why music was ordain'd!
Was it not to refresh the mind of man,
After his studies, or his usual pain?³
Then give me leave to read philosophy,
And while I pause serve in⁴ your harmony.

Hor. Sirrah, I will not bear these braves⁵ of thine.

Bian. Why, gentlemen, you do me double wrong,⁶
To strive for that which resteth in my choice.
I am no breeching scholar⁷ in the schools;
I'll not be tied to hours, nor 'pointed times,
But learn my lessons as I please myself.
And, to cut off all strife, here sit we down: —
Take you your instrument, play you the whiles;
His lecture will be done, ere you have tun'd.

Hor. You'll leave his lecture, when I am in tune?

[Retires.]

Luc. That will be never: — tune your instrument.

Bian. Where left we last?

Luc. Here, Madam: —

Hic ibat Simois; hic est Sigeia tellus;

*Hic steterat Priami regia celsa senis.*⁸

Bian. Construe⁹ them.

Luc. Hic ibat, as I told you before, — Simois, I am Lucentio, — hic est, son unto Vincentio of Pisa, — Si- geia tellus, disguised thus to get your love; — Hic
steterat, and that Lucentio that comes a-wooing, —

Priami, is my man Tranio, — regia, bearing my port,¹⁰
— celsa senis, that we might beguile the old pantaloone.¹¹

Hor. [Returning.] Madam, my instrument 's in tune.

Bian. Let 's hear. [Hor. plays.] O fie! the treble jars.

Luc. Spit in the hole, man, and tune again.

Bian. Now let me see if I can construe it:

Hic ibat Simois, I know you not; — hic est Sigeia tellus,
I trust you not; — Hic steterat Priami, take heed he hear us not; — regia, presume not; — celsa senis, despair not.

Hor. Madam, 't is now in tune.

Luc. All but the base.

Hor. The base is right; 't is the base knave that jars.¹²

How fiery and forward our pedant is!¹³

Now, for my life, the knave doth court my love:

Pedascule,¹⁴ I'll watch you better yet.

Bian. In time I may believe, yet I mistrust.

Luc. Mistrust it not; for, sure, Æacides
Was Ajax, call'd so from his grandfather.¹⁵

Bian. I must believe my master; else, I promise you,
I should be arguing still upon that doubt:

But let it rest. — Now, Licio, to you.

Good masters,¹⁶ take it not unkindly, pray,

That I have been thus pleasant with you both.

Hor. [To LUCENTIO.] You may go walk, and give me leave awhile:

My lessons make no music in three parts.¹⁷

Luc. Are you so formal, Sir? [Aside.] Well, I must wait,

And watch withal; for, but I be deceiv'd,

Our fine musician groweth amorous.

Hor. Madam, before you touch the instrument,

To learn the order of my fingering,

I must begin with rudiments of art;

To teach you gamut in a briefer sort,

More pleasant, pithy, and effectual,

Than hath been taught by any of my trade:

And there it is in writing, fairly drawn.

Bian. Why, I am past my gamut long ago.

Hor. Yet read the gamut of Hortensio.

Bian. [Reads.] »Gamut I am, the ground of all accord,¹⁸

A re, to plead Hortensio's passion;

B mi, Bianca, take him for thy lord,

C fa ut, that loves with all affection:

1) Einzelne Hgg. suchen den Vers auf verschiedene Art zu vervollständigen; so Hanmer: But, wrangling pedant, know this lady is. — Vielleicht ist pedant hier auf der zweiten Sylbe zu betonen, und wrangling dreisylbig (wrangling) zu lesen. 2) Der Du nie so weit in Deinen Studien gekommen bist, dass Du wüsstest. 3) usual pain = die gewohnte tägliche Arbeit. — Der Nachdruck liegt auf after: die Musik darf erst nach der Arbeit kommen. 4) to serve in = auftragen, wie ein Gericht bei der Mahlzeit. 5) braves = prahlerische Reden, Grosssprecherei. 6) double wrong = Unrecht beiderseits: Ihr thut mir Beide Unrecht. 7) breeching scholar = ein Schüler, der noch körperlicher Züchtigung, wobei ihm die Hose heruntergezogen wird, unterliegt. So in Marlowe's King Edward II.: Whose looks were as a breeching to a boy. 8) Die Stelle ist aus Ovid's Heroiden, aus einem Briefe der Penelope an Ulysses. 9) Die Fol. hat conster, eine in Büchern jener Zeit viel verbreitete Schreibweise; doch hat die Fol. an andern Stellen auch construe. 10) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 44. 11) Pantalowne in der Fol., d. h. Gremio. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 16. 12) Wortspiel zwischen base = Bass, und base knave = elender Wicht; sowie zwischen to jar = dissoniren, und = zanken. — Die nächsten vier Verse theilt die Fol. irrig dem Lucentio zu, die dann folgenden zwei Mistrust it — — grandfather der Bianca, endlich die sich daran schliessenden fünf I must believe — — with you both dem Hortensio. — Die richtige Personenbezeichnung rührt von Pope her. 13) fiery ist dreisylbig zu lesen, und pedant auf der letzten Sylbe zu betonen. Vgl. oben Anm. 1. 14) Woher Sh. diesen scherzhaft aus pedant und didascalos gebildeten lateinischen Vocativ hat, ist nicht mehr auszumachen. 15) Lucentio fingirt mit diesen Worten, im Unterricht der Bianca begriffen zu sein, um den Hortensio irre zu leiten. 16) masters verbessert Pope das master der Fol. — pleasant = scherzhaft. 17) music in three parts = Trio's, Terzette, so dass ein Dritter daran Theil nehmen kann. 18) Die Scala

D sol re, one cliff, two notes have I:

E la mi, show pity, or I die.⁴

Call you this gamut? tut! I like it not:
Old fashions please me best; I am not so nice,
To change true rules for odd inventions.¹⁹

*Enter a Servant.*²⁰

Serv. Mistress, your father prays you leave your books,
And help to dress your sister's chamber up:
You know, to-morrow is the wedding-day.

Bian. Farewell, sweet masters both: I must be gone.

[Exeunt BIANCA and Servant.]

Luc. 'Faith, mistress, then I have no cause to stay.

[Exit.]

Hor. But I have cause to pry into this pedant:
Methinks, he looks as though he were in love. —

Yet if thy thoughts, Bianca, be so humble,
To cast thy wandering eyes on every stale,²¹
Seize thee that list: if once I find thee ranging, Hortensio will be quit with thee by changing. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

The Same. Before BAPTISTA'S House.

Enter BAPTISTA, GREMIO, TRANIO, KATHARINA, BIANCA, LUCENTIO, and Attendants.

Bap. Signior Lucentio, this is the 'pointed day,
That Katharine and Petruchio should be married,
And yet we hear not of our son-in-law.
What will be said? what mockery will it be,
To want the bridegroom, when the priest attends
To speak the ceremonial rites of marriage!
What says Lucentio to this shame of ours?

Kath. No shame but mine: I must, forsooth, be forc'd
To give my hand, oppos'd against my heart,
Unto a mad-brain rudesby, full of spleen;
Who woo'd in haste, and means to wed at leisure.
I told you, I, he was a frantic fool,
Hiding his bitter jests in blunt behaviour;
And to be noted for a merry man,
He 'll woo a thousand, 'point the day of marriage,

Make friends, invite them,¹ and proclaim the banns;
Yet never means to wed where he hath woo'd.

Now must the world point at poor Katharine,
And say, — 'Lo, there is mad Petruchio's wife,
If it would please him come and marry her.'

Tra. Patience, good Katharine, and Baptista too.

Upon my life, Petruchio means but well,
Whatever fortune stays him from his word:

Though he be blunt, I know him passing wise;

Though he be merry, yet withal he 's honest.

Kath. 'Would Katharine had never seen him though!

[Exit, weeping, followed by BIANCA and Others.]

Bap. Go, girl; I cannot blame thee now to weep,

For such an injury would vex a very saint,

Much more a shrew of thy² impatient humour.

Enter BIONDELLO.

Bion. Master, master! old news,³ and such news as you never heard of!

Bap. Is it new and old too? how may that be?

Bion. Why, is it not news to hear of Petruchio's coming?

Bap. Is he come?

Bion. Why, no, Sir.

Bap. What then?

Bion. He is coming.

Bap. When will he be here?

Bion. When he stands where I am, and sees you there.

Tra. But, say, what to thine old news?⁴

Bion. Why, Petruchio is coming, in a new hat, and an old jerkin; a pair of old breeches, thrice turned; a pair of boots that have been candle-cases,⁵ one buckled, another laced; an old rusty sword ta'en out of the townarmoury, with a broken hilt, and chapeless;⁶ with two broken points:⁷ his horse hipped, with an old mothy saddle, and stirrups of no kindred;⁸ besides, possessed with the glanders, and like to mose in the chine; troubled with the lampass, infected with the fashions,⁹ full of windgalls, sped with spavins, rayed with the yellows, past cure of the fives, stark spoiled with the staggers, begnawn with the bots, swayed in the back,¹⁰ and shoulder-shotten; ne'er-legged before,¹¹ and with a half-

Vgl. Induction Sc. 1, Anm. 20. 21) stale = Köder. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 18.

1) them, das in der Fol. fehlt, fügte zuerst Malone ein. Andere Hgg. lesen mit der Folioausg. von 1632: Make friends, invite, yes, and proclaim the banns. Unter friends sind die Verwandten der Braut gemeint. 2) thy fehlt in der Fol. und wird zuerst in der zweiten Folioausg. ergänzt. 3) old fügte Rowe vor news ein, nach Massgabe von Baptista's nächster Rede. Andere Hgg. lesen news, old news. — old fasst Biondello = überreichlich, mehr als genug. So in Merchant of Venice (A. 4, Sc. 2) we shall have old swearing, || That they did give the rings away to men. 4) So interpungirt die Fol.: Sprich, was betrifft Deine alten Neuigkeiten? — Andere Hgg. lesen But, say, what: — To thine old news. 5) Die Stiefel waren so abgenutzt, dass man schon angefangen hatte, Talglichter darin aufzubewahren. 6) chapeless = ohne Schnallhaken, also ein Schwert, das sich nicht anschnallen lässt. 7) two broken points sind die Nesteln an Petruchio's Beinkleid, und beziehen sich nicht mehr auf das Schwert. 8) stirrups of no kindred = Steigbügel, die nicht zusammen gehören. 9) fashions, eigentlich farcins = Räude, eine Pferdekrankheit. — So wird fives = Feifel, eine Mandelentzündung der Pferde, gewöhnlich vives geschrieben. — Die übrigen Pferdekrankheiten sind: glanders = Drüse, Geschwulst in der Kehle; to mose in the chine = an der Rückendarre leiden; lampass = Froschgeschwulst im Maule des Pferdes; windgalls = Geschwulst am Knie oder Fesselgelenk des Pferdes; spavins = Spath, Entzündung der Sprunggelenkknochen beim Pferde; yellows = Gelbsucht, Krankheit der Galle; staggers = Schwindel, Hirnkrankheit der Pferde; bots = Würmer im Darmcanal. Letztere Krankheit erwähnt Sh. auch in K. Henry IV. First Part (A. 2, Sc. 1). 10) Die Fol. hat waid für swayed in the back = rückenlahm. Die Verbesserung rührt von Hanmer her. — shoulder-shotten = buglahm. 11) ne'er-legged before = mit schwachen Vorderfüssen.

checked bit, and a head-stall of sheep's leather; which, being restrained to keep him from stumbling, hath been often burst, and now repaired with knots; one girth six times pieced, and a woman's crupper of velure,¹² which hath two letters for her name fairly set down in studs, and here and there pieced with packthread.

Bap. Who comes with him?

Bion. O, Sir! his lackey, for all the world¹³ caparisoned like the horse; with a linen stock¹⁴ on one leg, and a kersey boot-hose on the other, gartered with a red and blue list; an old hat, and »the humour of forty fancies«¹⁵ pricked in 't for a feather: a monster, a very monster in apparel, and not like a christian footboy, or a gentleman's lackey.

Tra. 'T is some odd humour pricks him to this fashion; Yet oftentimes he goes but mean-apparell'd.

Bap. I am glad he is come, howsoe'er he comes.

Bion. Why, Sir, he comes not.

Bap. Didst thou not say, he comes?

Bion. Who? that Petruchio came?

Bap. Ay, that Petruchio came.

Bion. No, Sir; I say, his horse comes, with him on his back.

Bap. Why, that 's all one.

Bion. Nay, by Saint Jamy,

I hold you a penny,

A horse and a man

Is more than one,

And yet not many.¹⁶

Enter PETRUCHIO and GRUMIO.

Pet. Come, where be these gallants? who 's at home?

Bap. You are welcome, Sir.

Pet. And yet I come not well.

Bap. And yet you halt not.

Tra. Not so well apparell'd, As I wish you were.

Pet. Were it better,¹⁷ I should rush in thus.

But where is Kate? where is my lovely bride? —

How does my father?¹⁸ — Gentles, methinks you frown:

And wherefore gaze this goodly company,

As if they saw some wondrous monument,

Some comet, or unusual prodigy?

Bap. Why, Sir, you know, this is your wedding-day.

First were we sad, fearing you would not come;

Now sadder, that you come so unprovided.

Fie! doff this habit, shame to your estate,

An eye-sore to our solemn festival.

Tra. And tell us what occasion of import Hath all so long detain'd you from your wife, And sent you hither so unlike yourself?¹⁹

Pet. Tedious it were to tell, and harsh to hear:

Sufficeth, I am come to keep my word,

Though in some part enforced to digress;²⁰

Which, at more leisure, I will so excuse

As you shall well be satisfied withal.

But, where is Kate? I stay too long from her:

The morning wears, 't is time we were at church.

Tra. See not your bride in these unreverent robes.

Go to my chamber: put on clothes of mine.

Pet. Not I, believe me: thus I 'll visit her.

Bap. But thus, I trust, you will not marry her.

Pet. Good sooth, even thus; therefore ha' ²¹ done with words:

To me she 's married, not unto my clothes.

Could I repair what she will wear in me,²²

As I can change these poor accoutrements,

'T were well for Kate, and better for myself.

But what a fool am I to chat with you,

When I should bid good-morrow to my bride,

And seal the title²³ with a lovely kiss!

[Exeunt PETRUCHIO, GRUMIO, and BIONDELLO.]

Tra. He hath some meaning in his mad attire.

We will persuade him, be it possible,

To put on better ere he go to church.

Bap. I 'll after him, and see the event of this.

[Exit.]

Tra. But to her love²⁴ concerneth us to add

Her father's liking: which to bring to pass,

As I²⁵ before imparted to your worship,

I am to get a man, — whate'er he be,

It skills not much, we 'll fit him to our turn, —

And he shall be Vincentio of Pisa,

And make assurance, here in Padua,

Of greater sums than I have promised.

So shall you quietly enjoy your hope,

And marry sweet Bianca with consent.

Luc. Were it not that my fellow schoolmaster

Doth watch Bianca's steps so narrowly,

'T were good, methinks, to steal our marriage;

Which once perform'd, let all the world say no,

I 'll keep mine own, despite of all the world.

Tra. That by degrees we mean to look into,

And watch our vantage in this business.

We 'll overreach the grey-beard, Gremio,

The narrow-prying father, Minola,

12) a woman's crupper = Schwanzriem von einem Damensattel, mit den Anfangsbuchstaben des Namens der Besitzerin darauf gestickt. 13) for all the world: eine emphatische Betheuerung. 14) linen stock = leinene Strumpfhose. 15) Warburton hält the humour of forty fancies für den Titel einer jetzt verloren gegangenen Balladensammlung, welche Grumio statt der Feder an den Hut befestigt habe. — Malone weist nach, dass fancy einen modischen Hutschmuck bedeutete, und nimmt an, dass der Reitknecht vierzig solche Bänder oder Cocarden aus Laune zusammengefügt und an den Hut gesteckt habe. 16) Collier vermuthet, dass dies ein Stück aus einer Ballade sei. 17) better bezieht sich auf well apparell'd: Wäre meine Kleidung auch besser, so würde ich doch so hereinstürzen. 18) Eine höfliche Erkundigung nach Baptista's Befinden. 19) so unlike yourself = in einem Aufzug, der Euch so wenig entspricht, Euer so wenig würdig ist. 20) Obwohl ich theilweise von meinem gegebenen Worte abweichen muss, obwohl ich mein Wort nur theilweise erfüllen kann. 21) ha' in der Fol.; familiäre Abkürzung von have, was die meisten Hgg. hier in den Text setzen. 22) Wenn ich eben so leicht das, was Katharina in mir abnutzen wird, wieder herstellen könnte. 23) scil. the title of a bride. — lovely = liebevoll, zärtlich. 24) So emendirt Grant White das but, Sir, love der Fol. — Tranio meint Bianca's Liebe, welche Lucentio bereits gewonnen und zu der es wichtig sei, auch die Billigung ihres Vaters hinzuzufügen. — Vor concerneth ist ein it zu suppliren. — Theobald las but, Sir, to our love. — Knight setzt but, Sir, to love, wie auch Staunton. — Indess ist her vor love kaum zu entbehren. 25) I fehlt in der Fol. 26) quaint musician = der geschickte Musiker und der sich auf diese Geschicklichkeit viel einbildet. 27) fool = ein armes Närrchen, das

The quaint musician,²⁸ amorous Licio;
All for my master's sake, Lucentio.

Re-enter GREMIO.

Signior Gremio, came you from the church?

Gre. As willingly as e'er I came from school.

Tra. And is the bride, and bridegroom, coming home?

Gre. A bridegroom say you? 't is a groom indeed,
A grumbling groom, and that the girl shall find.

Tra. Curster than she? why, 't is impossible.

Gre. Why, he's a devil, a devil, a very fiend.

Tra. Why, she's a devil, a devil, the devil's dam.

Gre. Tut! she's a lamb, a dove, a fool²⁷ to him.

I'll tell you, Sir Lucentio: when the priest

Should ask, if Katharine should be his wife,

»Ay, by gogs-wouns,«²⁸ quoth he; and swore so loud,

That, all amaz'd, the priest let fall the book;

And, as he stoop'd again to take it up,

This mad-brain'd bridegroom took him such a cuff,

That down fell priest and book, and book and priest:

»Now take them up,« quoth he, »if any list.«

Tra. What said the wench, when he arose again?

Gre. Trembled and shook; for why, he stamp'd, and swore,

As if the vicar meant to cozen him.

But after many ceremonies done,

He calls for wine: — »A health!« quoth he; as if

He had been aboard, carousing to his mates

After a storm: — quaff'd off the muscadel,

And threw the sops²⁹ all in the sexton's face;

Having no other reason,

But that his beard grew thin and hungerly.

And seem'd to ask him sops as he was drinking.

This done, he took the bride about the neck,

And kiss'd her lips with such a clamorous smack,

That, at the parting, all the church did echo.

And I, seeing this, came thence for very shame;

And after me, I know, the rout is coming:

Such a mad marriage never was before.

Hark, hark! I hear the minstrels play.³⁰ [Music.]

Enter PETRUCHIO, KATHARINA, BIANCA, BAPTISTA, HOR-TENSIO, GRUMIO, and Train.

Pet. Gentlemen and friends, I thank you for your pains.

I know, you think to dine with me to-day,

And have prepar'd great store of wedding cheer;

But, so it is, my haste doth call me hence,

And therefore here I mean to take my leave.

Bap. Is 't possible you will away to-night?

Pet. I must away to-day, before night come.

Make it no wonder: if you knew my business,

You would entreat me rather go than stay. —

And, honest company, I thank you all,

That have beheld me give away myself

To this most patient, sweet, and virtuous wife.

Dine with my father, drink a health to me,

For I must hence: and farewell to you all.

Tra. Let us entreat you stay till after dinner.

Pet. It may not be.

Gre. Let me entreat you.

Pet. It cannot be.

Kath. Let me entreat you.³¹

Pet. I am content.

Kath. Are you content to stay?

Pet. I am content you shall entreat me stay,

But yet not stay, entreat me how you can.

Kath. Now, if you love me, stay.

Pet. Grumio, my horse!

Gru. Ay, Sir, they be ready: the oats have eaten the horses.³²

Kath. Nay, then,

Do what thou canst, I will not go to-day;

No, nor to-morrow, nor³³ till I please myself.

The door is open, Sir, there lies your way,

You may be jogging whiles your boots are green;

For me, I'll not be gone, till I please myself. —

'T is like you'll prove a jolly surly groom,

That take it on you at the first so roundly.³⁴

Pet. O, Kate! content thee: pr'ythee, be not angry.

Kath. I will be angry. What hast thou to do?³⁵ —

Father, be quiet; he shall stay my leisure.

Gre. Ay, marry, Sir, now it begins to work.

Kath. Gentlemen, forward to the bridal dinner.

I see, a woman may be made a fool,

If she had not a spirit to resist.

Pet. They shall go forward, Kate, at thy command. —

Obeys the bride, you that attend on her:

Go to the feast, revel and domineer,³⁶

Carouse full measure to her maidenhead,

Be mad and merry, or go hang yourselves.

But for my bounny Kate, she must with me.

Nay, look not big, nor stamp, nor stare, nor fret;

I will be master of what is mine own.

She is my goods, my chattels; she is my house,

My household stuff, my field, my barn,

My horse, my ox, my ass,³⁷ my anything;

And here she stands; touch her whoever dare,

I'll bring mine action on the proudest he³⁸

That stops my way in Padua. — Grumio,

Draw forth thy weapon; we're beset with thieves:

sich nicht zu helfen weiss. So heisst es in K. Lear (A. 5, Sc. 3) von Cordelia: And my poor fool is hang'd! 28) Ein Fluchwort, entstellt aus by God's wounds, gewöhnlich abgekürzt zu 'sounds. — In Tranio's nächster Frage ist arose again eine Emendation von Reed für rose again der Fol. — Die spätern Folioausgg. vervollständigen den Vers mit rose up again, was die meisten Hgg. beibehalten. 29) Es war Sitte der Zeit, unmittelbar nach der Trauung noch in der Kirche Wein und Kuchen, der in den Wein getaucht wurde (sops), zu präsentieren. So in Dekker's Satiromastix: and when we are at church, bring the wine and cakes. 30) Die Musikanten ziehen vor den aus der Kirche heimkehrenden Hochzeitleuten einher. — Diese Rede Gremio's druckt die Fol. als Prosa. 31) Bei Let me entreat you legt Gremio den Nachdruck auf entreat, Katharina auf me. 32) Steevens meint, Grumio wolle damit sagen, dass Petruchio's schlechte Pferde des guten Hafers nicht werth seien. — Wahrscheinlich ist es eine blossе Wortverdrehung, wie sie überall für die Redeweise der Sh.'schen Clowns gebräuchlich und charakteristisch ist. 33) nor verbessert Rowe das not der Fol. 34) Dass Ihr Euch gleich anfangs so geradezu, so ungenirt anstellt. 35) Was hast Du zu thun, dass Du nicht hier bleiben kannst? 36) to domineer = den grossen Herrn spielen, herrlich und in Freuden leben. 37) Ritson findet hier eine Anspielung auf ein Stück des Dekalogs: thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, nor his ox, nor his ass. 38) Ich will meine Klage vorbringen gegen den stolzesten Mann, der mich u. s. w. — So in K. Henry VI. Third Part (A. 1, Sc. 1)

Rescue thy mistress, if thou be a man. —
 Fear not, sweet wench; they shall not touch thee, Kate:
 I'll buckler thee against a million.

[Exeunt PETRUCHIO, KATHARINA, and GRUMIO.

Bap. Nay, let them go, a couple of quiet ones.

Gre. Went they not quickly, I should die with laughing.

Tra. Of all mad matches never was the like!

Luc. Mistress, what's your opinion of your sister?

Bian. That, being mad herself, she's madly mated.³⁹

Gre. I warrant him, Petruchio is Kated.

Bap. Neighbours and friends, though bride and bridegroom wants

For to supply the places at the table,

You know, there wants no junkets at the feast. —

Lucentio, you shall supply the bridegroom's place,

And let Bianca take her sister's room.

Tra. Shall sweet Bianca practise how to bride it?⁴⁰

Bap. She shall, Lucentio. — Come, gentlemen, let's go.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.

A Hall in PETRUCHIO'S Country House.

Enter GRUMIO.

Gru. Fie, fie, on all tired jades, on all mad masters, and all foul ways! Was ever man so beaten? was ever man so rayed?¹ was ever man so weary? I am sent before to make a fire, and they are coming after to warm them. Now, were not I a little pot, and soon hot,² my very lips might freeze to my teeth, my tongue to the roof of my mouth, my heart in my belly, ere I should some by a fire to thaw me; but, I, with blowing the fire, shall warm myself, for, considering the weather, a taller man than I will take cold. Holla, ho! Curtis!

Enter CURTIS.

Curt. Who is that calls so coldly?

Gru. A piece of ice: if thou doubt it, thou may'st slide from my shoulder to my heel, with no greater a run but my head and my neck.³ A fire, good Curtis.

Curt. Is my master and his wife coming, Grumio?

Gru. O! ay, Curtis, ay; and therefore fire, fire; cast on no water.⁴

Curt. Is she so hot a shrew as she's reported?

Gru. She was, good Curtis, before this frost; but, thou know'st, winter tames man, woman, and beast,⁵ for it hath tamed my old master, and my new mistress, and myself, fellow Curtis.

Curt. Away, you three-inch fool! I am no beast.

Gru. Am I but three inches? why, thy horn is a foot; and so long am I at the least.⁶ But wilt thou make a fire, or shall I complain on thee to our mistress, whose hand (she being now at hand) thou shalt soon feel, to thy cold comfort, for being slow in thy hot office?⁷

Curt. I pr'ythee, good Grumio, tell me, how goes the world?

Gru. A cold world, Curtis, in every office but thine; and, therefore, fire. Do thy duty, and have thy duty,⁸ for my master and mistress are almost frozen to death.

Curt. There's fire ready; and therefore, good Grumio, the news.

Gru. Why, »Jack, boy! ho, boy!«⁹ and as much news as thou wilt.

Curt. Come, you are so full of cony-catching.¹⁰

Gru. Why, therefore, fire: for I have caught extreme cold. Where's the cook? is supper ready, the house trimmed, rushes strewed,¹¹ cobwebs swept; the serving-men in their new fustian, their¹² white stockings, and every officer his wedding-garment on? Be the jacks fair within, the jills fair¹³ without, the carpets laid, and every thing in order?

Curt. All ready; and therefore, I pray thee, news.

Gru. First, know, my horse is tired; my master and mistress fallen out.¹⁴

Curt. How?

Gru. Out of their saddles into the dirt; and thereby hangs a tale.

Curt. Let's ha't, good Grumio.

Gru. Lend thine ear.

The proudest he that holds up Lancaster. 39) madly mated = mit einem tollen Gatten vermählt. Dem entspricht dann das Kated der nächsten Zeile = mit einer Käthe versehen; vielleicht auch hier mit dem Wortspiel von cat (vgl. A. 2, Sc. 1, Anm. 45). 40) to bride it = die Braut oder die Neuvermählte spielen. — Vgl. zu dieser Scene die entsprechende des älteren Dramas, Einleitung pag. 394 u. 395.

1) to ray = übel zurichten, erklärt Johnson marked with lashes, Tolle besser mit made dirty d. h. von dem Schmutze des Weges, in Bezug auf all foul ways. 2) Sprichwörtlich von einem Kochtopf, der, je kleiner er ist, desto eher heiss wird. Zugleich eine Anspielung auf die kleine Statur Grumio's, welche nachher auch mit three-inch fool = drei Zoll langer Narr, verspottet wird. 3) Grumio ist so zu Eis gefroren, dass Curtis an ihm hinunterglitschen kann, von der Schulter bis zur Ferse so rasch, als ginge es nur vom Kopfe zum Halse. 4) Blackstone citirt dazu einen Canon, der so lautet: Scotland burneth, Scotland burneth. || Fire, fire; fire, fire; || Cast on some more water. 5) In Ray's Collection of Proverbs kommt vor: Wedding and ill wintering tame both man and beast. — Mit beast identificirt dann Grumio nicht nur sich selbst, sondern auch den Curtis, da er ihn als seinesgleichen bezeichnet: and myself, fellow Curtis, was der Letztere zurückweist. — So erklärt, bedarf die Stelle zu ihrem richtigen Verständniss nicht der von Staunton empfohlenen Conjectur Warburton's: thysself für myself. 6) Ich bin doch wenigstens einen Fuss lang, so lang wie das Horn des Hahnrei, das dem Curtis von seiner Frau aufgesetzt ist. 7) cold comfort = kalter Trost, Unbehaglichkeit, im Gegensatz zu hot office = Curtis' Amt, ein Feuer anzumachen. 8) Wenn Du thust, was Dir gebührt, so erhältst Du auch, was Dir gebührt. 9) Der Anfang eines alten Trinkliedes. — as thou wilt in der zweiten Folioausg.; as wilt thou in der ersten. 10) cony-catching = Prellerei, Gaunerstreich. — Grumio verdreht es zu cold-catching oder catching cold. 11) Die Binsen wurden auf den Fussboden der Zimmer gestreut, wie jetzt Matten gelegt werden. 12) their verbessern die spätern Folioausgg. das the der ersten Fol. 13) Wortspiel zwischen jack = ein Trinkgefäss von schwarzem Leder, jill = ein metallnes Trinkgefäss, und Jack = Hans, ein allgemeiner Mannsname für Leute niederen Standes, Knechte, wie Jill = Grete, Bäuerin, Magd. So in Love's Labour's Lost (A. 5, Sc. 2) Jack hath not Jill. — carpets sind die Decken, mit denen die Tische bedeckt werden. 14) fallen out = in Streit gerathen, wie Curtis

Curt. Here.

Gru. There. [Striking him.

Curt. This is to feel a tale, not to hear a tale.

Gru. And therefore 't is called a sensible tale;¹⁵ and this cuff was but to knock at your ear, and beseech listening. Now I begin: Imprimis, we came down a foul hill, my master riding behind my mistress, —

Curt. Both of¹⁶ one horse?

Gru. What 's that to thee?

Curt. Why, a horse.

Gru. Tell thou the tale: — but hadst thou not crossed me, thou shouldst have heard how her horse fell, and she under her horse; thou shouldst have heard, in how miry a place; how she was bemoiled;¹⁷ how he left her with the horse upon her; how he beat me because her horse stumbled; how she waded through the dirt to pluck him off me; how he swore; how she prayed, that never prayed before; how I cried; how the horses ran away; how her bridle was burst;¹⁸ how I lost my crupper; — with many things of worthy memory, which now shall die in oblivion, and thou return unexperienced to thy grave.

Curt. By this reckoning he is more shrew¹⁹ than she.

Gru. Ay; and that thou and the proudest of you all shall find, when he comes home. But what talk I of this? — Call forth Nathaniel, Joseph, Nicholas, Philip, Walter, Sugarsop, and the rest: let their heads be sleekly combed, their blue coats²⁰ brushed, and their garters of an indifferent knit:²¹ let them curtsy with their left legs, and not presume to touch a hair of my master's horsetail, till they kiss their hands. Are they all ready?

Curt. They are.

Gru. Call them forth.

Curt. Do you hear? ho! you must meet my master, to countenance my mistress.²²

Gru. Why, she hath a face of her own.

Curt. Who knows not that?

Gru. Thou, it seems, that callest for company to countenance her.

Curt. I call them forth to credit her.

Gru. Why, she comes to borrow nothing of them.

Enter several Servants.

Nath. Welcome home, Grumio.

Phil. How now, Grumio?

Jos. What, Grumio!

Nich. Fellow Grumio!

Nath. How now, old lad?

Gru. Welcome, you; — how now, you; — what, you; — fellow, you; — and thus much for greeting. Now, my spruce companions, is all ready, and all things neat?

Nath. All things is ready. How near is our master?

Gru. E'en at hand, alighted by this; and therefore be not — Cock's passion, silence! — I hear my master.

Enter PETRUCHIO and KATHARINA.

Pet. Where be these knaves? What! no man at door, To hold my stirrup, nor to take my horse?

Where is Nathaniel, Gregory, Philip? —

All Serv. Here, here, Sir; here, Sir.

Pet. Here, Sir! here, Sir! here, Sir! here, Sir!

You logger-headed and unpolish'd grooms!

What, no attendance? no regard? no duty? —

Where is the foolish knave I sent before?

Gru. Here, Sir; as foolish as I was before.

Pet. You peasant swain! you whoreson malt-horse drudge!²³

Did I not bid thee meet me in the park,

And bring along these rascal knaves with thee?

Gru. Nathaniel's coat, Sir, was not fully made,

And Gabriel's pumps were all unpink'd i' the heel;²⁴

There was no link to colour Peter's hat,²⁵

And Walter's dagger was not come from sheathing:

There were none fine, but Adam, Ralph, and Gregory;

The rest were ragged, old,²⁶ and beggarly;

Yet, as they are, here are they come to meet you.

Pet. Go, rascals, go, and fetch my supper in. —

[Exeunt Servants.]

[Sings.] Where is the life that late I led²⁷ —

Where are those — ? Sit down, Kate, and welcome.

Soud, soud, soud, soud!²⁸

Re-enter Servants, with supper.

Why, when, I say? — Nay, good sweet Kate, be merry.

Off with my boots, you rogues, you villains! When?²⁹

[Sings.] It was the friar of orders grey,

As he forth walked on his way: —

Out,³⁰ you rogue! you pluck my foot awry:

Take that, and mend the plucking of the other.³¹ —

[Strikes him.]

Be merry, Kate. — Some water, here; what, ho! —

Where 's my spaniel Troilus? — Sirrah, get you hence,

And bid my cousin Ferdinand come hither:

[Exit Servant.]

versteht; = aus dem Sattel gefallen, wie Grumio meint. 15) a sensible tale = eine vernünftige Geschichte, und = eine fühlbare, merkbare Geschichte, in Bezug auf to feel a tale, und auf die Ohrfeige, die Grumio dem Curtis giebt. — Die Fol. hat this 't is to feel a tale. 16) of für on, wie oft bei Sh. 17) to bemoil = mit Koth bedecken. 18) Vgl. Induction Sc. 1, Anm. 7. 19) shrew wird im älteren Englisch auch von Männern gebraucht. So in Gower's Confessio Amantis: He took to his counsel a shrew. 20) blue coat = Tracht der Diener, Livree. 21) Die Kniegürtel leidlich, anständig geknüpft. — Malone bezieht indifferent auf die Farbe und meint, Grumio habe different sagen wollen = party-coloured garters. Andere verstehen darunter, dass beide Kniegürtel gleichmächtig geknüpft sind. 22) to countenance my mistress versteht Curtis = meiner Herrin ein Ansehen geben, ihr Ehre machen; Grumio verdreht es = ihr ein Gesicht geben. — Ebenso verdreht er das von Curtis mit to countenance synonym gebrauchte to credit her = ihr Credit bewilligen. 23) malt-horse, eigentlich = Bierbrauerpferd, substantivisch = Tölpel, gebraucht in Comedy of Errors (A. 3, Sc. 1), steht hier adjektivisch in demselben Sinne = tölpelhaft. 24) Die Schuhe waren hinten in ihren Nestellöchern losgegangen, so dass der Schuhriemen nicht festhielt. 25) Der Russ von einer angebrannten Pechfackel diente dazu, den Hut schwarz zu färben. 26) old = in ihren alten, abgetragenen Kleidern, im Gegensatz zu fine = in neuen Kleidern, hübsch, geputzt. 27) Die erste Zeile eines Liedes, die sich nur als Titel und Angabe der Melodie in einer Balladensammlung erhalten hat. Sie wird auch citirt in K. Henry IV. Second Part (A. 5, Sc. 3). 28) Wahrscheinlich ein Ausruf der Ungeduld, vielleicht auch der Müdigkeit. 29) Ausruf der Ungeduld: Wird's bald? — Ebenso in der vorigen Zeile. 30) Manche Hgg. setzen mit Pope out zweimal. 31) Zieh mir den andern Stiefel geschickter aus.

One, Kate, that you must kiss, and be acquainted with. —
Where are my slippers? — Shall I have some water? ³²

Enter a Servant with a bason and ewer.

Come, Kate, and wash, and welcome heartily. —
You whoreson villain! will you let it fall? [Strikes him.]

Kath. Patience, I pray you; 't was a fault unwilling.

Pet. A whoreson, beetle-headed, flap-ear'd knave!

Come, Kate, sit down; I know you have a stomach.

Will you give thanks, sweet Kate, or else shall I? ³³

What 's this? mutton?

1. Serv.

Ay.

Pet.

Who brought it?

1. Serv.

I.

Pet. 'T is burnt; and so is all the meat.

What dogs are these! — Where is the rascal cook?

How durst you, villains, bring it from the dresser,

And serve it thus to me that love it not?

There, take it to you, trenchers, cups, and all.

[Throws the meat, etc. at them.]

You heedless joltheads, and unmanner'd slaves!

What! do you grumble? I 'll be with you straight.

Kath. I pray you, husband, be not so disquiet:

The meat was well, if you were so contented.

Pet. I tell thee, Kate, 't was burnt and dried away,

And I expressly am forbid to touch it.

For it engenders choler, planteth anger.

And better 't were, that both of us did fast,

Since, of ourselves, ourselves are choleric,

Than feed it ³⁴ with such over-roasted flesh.

Be patient, ³⁵ to-morrow 't shall be mended,

And for this night we 'll fast for company.

Come, I will bring thee to thy bridal chamber.

[Exeunt PETRUCHIO, KATHARINA, and CURTIS.]

Nath. Peter, didst ever see the like?

Peter. He kills her in her own humour.

Re-enter CURTIS.

Gru. Where is he?

Curt. In her chamber,

Making a sermon of continency to her;

And rails, and swears, and rates, that she, poor soul,

Knows not which way to stand, to look, to speak,

And sits as one new-risen from a dream.

Away, away! for he is coming hither. [Exeunt.]

Re-enter PETRUCHIO.

Pet. Thus have I politically begun my reign,

And 't is my hope to end successfully.

My falcon now is sharp, and passing empty,

And, till she stoop, she must not be full-gorg'd, ³⁶

For then she never looks upon her lure. ³⁷

Another way I have to man my haggard, ³⁸

To make her come, and know her keeper's call;

That is, to watch her, as we watch these kites,

That bate, ³⁹ and beat, and will not be obedient.

She eat no meat to-day, nor none shall eat;

Last night she slept not, nor to-night she shall not:

As with the meat, some undeserved fault

I 'll find about the making of the bed;

And here I 'll fling the pillow, there the bolster,

This way the coverlet, another way the sheets: —

Ay, and amid this hurly, I intend, ⁴⁰

That all is done in reverent care of her;

And, in conclusion, she shall watch all night:

And, if she chance to nod, I 'll rail and brawl,

And with the clamour keep her still awake.

This is a way to kill a wife with kindness;

And thus I 'll curb her mad and headstrong humour.

He that knows better how to tame a shrew,

Now let him speak: 't is charity to show. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

Padua. Before BAPTISTA'S HOUSE.

Enter TRANIO and HORTENSIO.

Tra. Is 't possible, friend Licio, that Mistress Bianca
Doth fancy any other but Lucentio?

I tell you, Sir, she bears me fair in hand. ¹

Hor. Sir, to satisfy you in what I have said,

Stand by, and mark the manner of his teaching.

[They stand aside.]

Enter BIANCA and LUCENTIO.

Luc. Now, mistress, profit you in what you read?

Bian. What, master, read you? first resolve me that.

Luc. I read that I profess, the Art to Love. ²

Bian. And may you prove, Sir, master of your art!

Luc. While you, sweet dear, prove mistress of my heart. [They retire.]

Hor. [Coming forward.] Quick proceeders, ³ marry!

Now tell me, I pray,

You that durst swear that your mistress Bianca

Lov'd none ⁴ in the world so well as Lucentio.

Tra. O despiteful love! unconstant womankind! —

I tell thee, Licio, this is wonderful.

Hor. Mistake no more: I am not Licio,

Nor a musician, as I seem to be,

But one that scorns to live in this disguise,

32) Es war Sitte, sich die Hände vor und nach Tische zu waschen. 33) to give thanks = das Tischgebet sprechen. 34) it bezieht sich auf ein aus choleric zu supplirendes Substantiv, wie choleric. 35) patient ist dreisylbig, wie das 't shall be der Fol. andeutet, wofür manche Hgg. it shall be setzen. 36) Der Jagdfalke darf nicht eher satt gefüttert werden, als bis er gelernt hat, auf den Wink des Herrn sich niederzulassen auf dessen Hand. — Mit der Zähmung des weiblichen Falken wird nun die Zähmung der Katharina verglichen. — full-gorged = vollgefressen, steht entgegen dem empty = leer im Magen. Vgl. mit diesem Monolog den entsprechenden des älteren Dramas, Einleitung pag. 395. 37) Wenn der Falke nicht hungrig ist, so achtet er nicht auf den Köder, mit welchem der Jäger ihn zu sich zurücklockt. 38) Ausser dieser Methode der Zähmung durch Hunger hat Petruchio noch eine zweite, seinen wilden Falken zu zähmen, nämlich durch Wachhalten. Auf dieselbe Methode eines Falkeniers spielt Sh. auch an in Troilus and Cressida (A. 3, Sc. 2) you must be watched ere you be made tame. 39) to bate = mit den Flügeln schlagen, erhält seine nähere Erklärung in and beat. 40) to intend = als Absicht zu erkennen geben, vorschützen.

1) Sie foppt mich offenbar, sie hält mich geradezu hin mit nichtigem Anschein. 2) Eine Anspielung auf Ovid's Gedicht Ars Amandi, ein Buch, das er mit Bianca liest. 3) quick proceeders = Leute, die schnell die akademischen Würden erlangen, von to proceed = promoviren; in Bezug auf master of your art und mistress,

For such a one, as leaves a gentleman,
And makes a god of such a cullion.⁵
Know, Sir, that I am call'd Hortensio.

Tra. Signior Hortensio, I have often heard
Of your entire⁶ affection to Bianca;
And since mine eyes are witness of her lightness,
I will with you, if you be so contented,
Forswear Bianca and her love for ever.

Hor. See, how they kiss and court! — Signior Lucentio,

Here is my hand, and here I firmly vow
Never to woo her more; but do forswear her,
As one unworthy all the former favours
That I have fondly flatter'd her⁷ withal.

Tra. And here I take the like unfeigned oath,
Never to marry with her, though she would entreat.
Fie on her! see, how beastly she doth court him.

Hor. 'Would all the world, but he, had quite forsworn!⁸

For me, that I may surely keep mine oath,
I will be married to a wealthy widow,
Ere three days pass, which hath as long lov'd me,
As I have lov'd this proud disdainful haggard.
And so farewell, Signior Lucentio. —
Kindness in women, not their beauteous looks,
Shall win my love: — and so I take my leave,
In resolution as I swore before.

[Exit HORTENSIO. — LUCENTIO and BIANCA advance.]

Tra. Mistress Bianca, bless you with such grace,
As 'longeth to a lover's blessed case!
Nay, I have ta'en you napping, gentle love,
And have forsworn you, with Hortensio.

Bian. Tranio, you jest. But have you both forsworn me?

Tra. Mistress, we have.

Luc. Then we are rid of Licio.

Tra. I' faith, he 'll have a lusty widow now,
That shall be woo'd and wedded in a day.

Bian. God give him joy!

Tra. Ay, and he 'll tame her.⁹

Bian. He says so, Tranio.

Tra. 'Faith, he is gone unto the taming-school.

Bian. The taming-school! what, is there such a place?

Tra. Ay, mistress, and Petruchio is the master;
That teacheth tricks eleven and twenty long,¹⁰
To tame a shrew, and charm¹¹ her chattering tongue.

Enter BIONDELLO, running.

Bion. O master, master! I have watch'd so long
That I 'm dog-weary; but at last I spied
An ancient angel¹² coming down the hill,
Will serve the turn.

Tra. What is he, Biondello?

Bion. Master, a mercatant, or a pedant,¹³
I know not what; but formal in apparel,
In gait and countenance surely¹⁴ like a father.

Luc. And what of him, Tranio?

Tra. If he be credulous, and trust my tale,
I 'll make him glad to seem Vincentio.
And give assurance to Baptista Minola,
As if he were the right Vincentio.
Take in¹⁵ your love, and then let me alone.

[Exeunt LUCENTIO and BIANCA.]

Enter a Pedant.

Ped. God save you, Sir!

Tra. And you, Sir! you are welcome.
Travel you far on, or are you at the furthest?

Ped. Sir, at the furthest for a week or two;
But then up further, and as far as Rome,
And so to Tripoli, if God lend me life.

Tra. What countryman, I pray?

Ped. Of Mantua.

Tra. Of Mantua, Sir? — marry, God forbid!
And come to Padua, careless of your life?

Ped. My life, Sir! how, I pray? for that goes hard.

Tra. 'T is death for any one in Mantua
To come to Padua. Know you not the cause?
Your ships are stay'd at Venice; and the duke,
For private quarrel 'twixt your duke and him,
Hath publish'd and proclaim'd it openly.
'T is marvel; but that you are but newly come,
You might have heard it else proclaim'd about.

Ped. Alas, Sir! it is worse for me than so;
For I have bills for money by exchange
From Florence, and must here deliver them.

Tra. Well, Sir, to do you courtesy,
This will I do, and this I will advise you. —
First, tell me, have you ever been at Pisa?

Ped. Ay, Sir, in Pisa have I often been;
Pisa, renowned for grave citizens.¹⁶

Tra. Among them, know you one Vincentio?

zugleich = Leute, die rasch verfahren. 4) none verbessert Rowe das me der Fol. 5) Um eines Mädchens willen, das einen anständigen Mann im Stich lässt und aus solchem gemeinen Gesellen einen Gott macht, solchen Cujon vergöttert. 6) entire = ungetheilt, rückhaltlos. 7) her setzen die späteren Folioausgg. für them der Fol. 8) scil. forsworn her oder her love. 9) Das Folgende bis Petruchio is the master ist fast wörtlich aus dem älteren Drama: But tell me my Lord, is Ferando married then? || Aurel. He is, and Polidor shortly shall be wed, || And he meanes to tame his wife ere long. || Vale. He saies so. || Aurel. Faith he 's gone unto the taming schoole. || Vale. The taming schoole; why is there such a place? || Aurel. I: and Ferando is the Maister of the schoole. 10) Eine scherzhafte Bezeichnung, wie lang diese Künste sind, und wie weit sie reichen. 11) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 46. 12) Dem Biondello erscheint der vom Berge niedersteigende Wanderer wie ein ihnen zu Hülfe gesandter Engel, und, weil der Pedant bejahrt ist, nennt er ihn scherzhaft an ancient angel. — Theobald u. A. lesen für das angel der Fol. engle in der übrigens nicht zu belegenden Bedeutung = Einfaltspinsel. — In Cotgrave's Lexikon wird das französische Angelot à la grosse escaille erklärt: An old angell; and by metaphor a fellow of the old sound, honest and worthie stamp. — Demgemäss wäre angel hier in dem Sinne der bekannten englischen Goldmünze zu fassen, und an ancient angel würde einen alten, gediegenen Biedermann bezeichnen. 13) Die Fol. hat Master, a Marcantant, or a pedant. — mercatante, italienisch = Kaufmann, kommt in den Dramen der Zeit öfter vor und ist hier in einer italienischen Komödie besonders an seiner Stelle. — Sh. beabsichtigte wohl einen Reim zwischen mercatant und pedant, das er als italienisch auf der letzten Sylbe betont. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 1, Anm. 1. — Die meisten Hgg. lesen mit Capell, um pedant = Magister, Hauslehrer, nach englischer Art auf der ersten Sylbe zu betonen: Master, a mercatantè, or a pedant. 14) So die

Ped. I know him not, but I have heard of him:
A merchant of incomparable wealth.

Tra. He is my father, Sir; and, sooth to say,
In countenance somewhat doth resemble you.

Bion. [Aside.] As much as an apple doth an oyster,
• and all one.

Tra. To save your life in this extremity,
This favour will I do you for his sake;
And think it not the worst of all your fortunes,
That you are like to Sir Vincentio.
His name and credit shall you undertake,
And in my house you shall be friendly lodg'd.
Look, that you take upon you as you should!¹⁷
You understand me, Sir; — so shall you stay
Till you have done your business in the city.
If this be courtesy,¹⁸ Sir, accept of it.

Ped. O! Sir, I do; and will repute you ever
The patron of my life and liberty.

Tra. Then go with me, to make the matter good.
This, by the way, I let you understand:
My father is here look'd for every day,
To pass assurance of a dower in marriage¹⁹
'Twixt me and one Baptista's daughter here:
In all these circumstances²⁰ I'll instruct you.
Go with me,²¹ to clothe you as becomes you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

A Room in PETRUCHIO's House.

Enter KATHARINA and GRUMIO.

Gru. No, no, forsooth; I dare not, for my life.

Kath. The more my wrong, the more his spite appears.

What, did he marry me to famish me?
Beggars, that come unto my father's door,
Upon entreaty, have a present alms;¹
If not, elsewhere they meet with charity:
But I, who never knew how to entreat,
Nor never needed that I should entreat,
Am starv'd for meat,² giddy for lack of sleep;
With oaths kept waking, and with brawling fed.³
And that which spites me more than all these wants,
He does it under name of perfect love;
As who should say, if I should sleep, or eat,
'T were deadly sickness, or else present death.

I pr'ythee go, and get me some repast;
I care not what, so it be wholesome food.

Gru. What say you to a neat's foot?

Kath. 'T is passing good: I pr'ythee let me have it.

Gru. I fear, it is too choleric⁴ a meat.

How say you to a fat tripe, finely broil'd?

Kath. I like it well: good Grumio, fetch it me.

Gru. I cannot tell; I fear, 't is choleric.

What say you to a piece of beef, and mustard?

Kath. A dish that I do love to feed upon.

Gru. Ay, but the mustard is too hot a little.

Kath. Why, then the beef, and let the mustard rest.

Gru. Nay, then I will not: you shall have the mustard,
Or else you get no beef of Grumio.

Kath. Then bath, or one, or anything thou wilt.

Gru. Why, then the mustard without the beef.

Kath. Go, get thee gone, thou false deluding slave,
[Beats him.]

That feed'st me with the very name of meat.

Sorrow on thee, and all the pack of you,

That triumph thus upon my misery!

Go, get thee gone, I say.

Enter PETRUCHIO, with a dish of meat, and HORTENSIO.

Pet. How fares my Kate? What, sweeting, all a-mort?⁵

Hor. Mistress, what cheer?

Kath. Faith, as cold⁶ as can be.

Pet. Pluck up thy spirits; look cheerfully upon me.

Here, love; thou seest how diligent I am,
To dress thy meat myself, and bring it thee:

[Sets the dish on a table.]

I am sure, sweet Kate, this kindness merits thanks.

What! not a word? Nay then, thou lov'st it not,

And all my pains is sorted to no proof.⁷ —

Here, take away this dish.

Kath. I pray you, let it stand.

Pet. The poorest service is repaid with thanks,
And so shall mine, before you touch the meat.

Kath. I thank you, Sir.

Hor. Signior Petruchio, fie! you are to blame.

Come, Mistress Kate, I'll bear you company.

Pet. [Aside.] Eat it up all, Hortensio, if thou lov'st
me. —

Much good do it unto thy gentle heart!⁸

Kate, eat apace. — And now, my honey love,

Fol. Die zweite Folioausg. hat surlly, was Rowe und Theobald beibehielten. 15) in emendirte Theobald das me der Fol. 16) Derselbe Vers kam schon A. 1, Sc. 1 in Lucentio's erster Rede vor. 17) Seht, dass Ihr Euch so benehmt oder geberdet, wie Ihr als Vincentio müsst. 18) Wenn Euch das als eine Freundlichkeit erscheint, die ich Euch erweise. 19) Um die Abtretungsurkunde einer Mitgift gerichtlich festzustellen. 20) circumstances = Details, die zur Sache gehören. 21) Die späteren Folioausgg. fügen zur Vervollständigung des Verses sir hinter me ein. — Die Fol. beginnt mit der folgenden dritten Scene erst den vierten Act des Dramas. — Vgl. zu dieser dritten Scene das ältere Drama, Einleitung pag. 395—397.

1) Erhalten sogleich ein Almosen, sobald sie nur darum bitten. 2) scil. for want of meat. Solche Ungenauigkeit des Ausdrucks findet sich häufig bei Sh. So in Two Gentlemen of Verona (A. 1, Sc. 2) Yet here they shall not lie, for catching cold. 3) Ich werde wachgehalten durch die lauten Flüche Petruchio's und bekomme statt Speise und Trank nur sein lärmendes Gezänke. 4) So die Fol. Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 1, Anm. 34. — Manche Hgg. lesen mit der zweiten Folioausg. phlegmatic für choleric, eine Lesart, die sich aus der Art der Sh.'schen Clowns, im Gebrauch von Fremdwörtern sich zu vergreifen und das Gegentheil des Beabsichtigten zu sagen, allenfalls rechtfertigen liesse. — Doch hat das ältere Drama an der entsprechenden Stelle ebenfalls choleric: the mustard is too choleric for you. 5) a-mort = am Verenden, todt; von dem Jagdausdruck mort = das Verenden des erlegten Wildes; hier scherzhaft von der niedergeschlagenen, muthlosen Stimmung Katharina's. 6) scil. cold cheer = traurige, muthlose Stimmung, im Gegensatz zu good cheer = guter Muth, fröhliche Stimmung. 7) to sort to = zu Etwas ausschlagen, sich zu Etwas fügen: und alle meine Mühe hat sich als nichtig erwiesen, hat nicht die Probe bestanden. 8) Wohl bekomme Dir das Essen! — gentle heart ist ironisch gemeint. 9) bravely bezieht sich auf

Will we return unto thy father's house,
And revel it as bravely as the best,⁹
With silken coats, and caps, and golden rings,
With ruffs, and cuffs, and farthingales, and things;¹⁰
With scarfs, and fans, and double change of bravery,¹¹
With amber bracelets, beads, and all this knavery.
What, hast thou din'd? The tailor stays thy leisure,
To deck thy body with his ruffling¹² treasure.

Enter Tailor.

Come, tailor, let us see these ornaments;
Lay forth the gown. —

Enter Haberdasher.

What news with you, Sir?

Hab. Here is the cap your worship did bespeak.

Pet. Why, this was moulded on a porringer;¹³
A velvet dish: — fie, fie! 't is lewd and filthy.

Why, 't is a cockle or a walnut-shell,
A knack, a toy, a trick, a baby's cap:
Away with it! come, let me have a bigger.

Kath. I'll have no bigger: this doth fit the time,¹⁴
And gentlewomen wear such caps as these.

Pet. When you are gentle,¹⁵ you shall have one too;
And not till then.

Hor. [Aside.] That will not be in haste.

Kath. Why, Sir, I trust, I may have leave to speak,
And speak I will; I am no child, no babe:
Your betters have endur'd me say my mind,
And, if you cannot, best you stop your ears.
My tongue will tell the anger of my heart,
Or else my heart, concealing it, will break:
And, rather than it shall, I will be free
Even to the uttermost, as I please, in words.

Pet. Why, thou say'st true: it is a paltry cap,
A custard-coffin,¹⁶ a bauble, a silken pie.
I love thee well, in that thou lik'st it not.

Kath. Love me, or love me not, I like the cap,
And it I will have, or I will have none.

[Exit Haberdasher.]

Pet. Thy gown? why, ay: — come, tailor, let us see 't.
O, mercy, God! what masking stuff is here?
What 's this? a sleeve? 't is like a demi-cannon:
What! up and down, carv'd like an apple-tart?

Here 's snip, and nip, and cut, and slish, and slash,
Like to a censer in a barber's shop.¹⁷ —

Why, what, o' devil's name, tailor, call'st thou this?

Hor. [Aside.] I see, she 's like to have neither cap nor gown.

Tai. You bid me make it orderly and well,
According to the fashion and the time.

Pet. Marry, and did: but if you be remember'd,
I did not bid you mar it to the time.

Go, hop me over every kennel home,

For you shall hop without my custom, Sir.

I'll none of it: hence! make your best of it.

Kath. I never saw a better-fashion'd gown,
More quaint, more pleasing, nor more commendable.
Belike, you mean to make a puppet of me.

Pet. Why, true; he means to make a puppet of thee.¹⁸

Tai. She says, your worship means to make a puppet of her.

Pet. O monstrous arrogance! Thou liest, thou thread,¹⁹
Thou thimble,

Thou yard, three-quarters, half-yard, quarter, nail!

Thou flea, thou nit, thou winter-cricket thou! —

Brav'd in mine own house with a skein of thread?

Away! thou rag, thou quantity,²⁰ thou remnant,

Or I shall so be-mete²¹ thee with thy yard,

As thou shalt think on prating whilst thou liv'st!

I tell thee, I, that thou hast marr'd her gown.

Tai. Your worship is deceiv'd: the gown is made
Just as my master had direction.

Grumio gave order how it should be done.

Gru. I gave him no order; I gave him the stuff.

Tai. But how did you desire it should be made?

Gru. Marry, Sir, with needle and thread.

Tai. But did you not request to have it cut?

Gru. Thou hast faced many things.

Tai. I have.

Gru. Face²² not me: thou hast braved many men; brave not me: I will neither be faced nor braved. I say unto thee, — I bid thy master cut out the gown; but I did not bid him cut it to pieces: ergo, thou liest.

Tai. Why, here is the note of the fashion to testify.

Pet. Read it.

Gru. The note lies in 's throat, if he say I said so.

Tai. »Imprimis, a loose-bodied gown.«

die hübschen Kleider, in denen sie die Lustbarkeiten mitmachen wollen (revel it). — Vgl. Induction Sc. 1, Anm. 13. 10) and things = und was sonst noch dazu gehört, und alles Mögliche. 11) double change of bravery = zwei vollständige Prachtanzüge, mit denen sie wechseln wollen. 12) to ruffle = rauschen, wird auch bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen von dem Rauschen seidener Gewänder und sonstiger Putzsachen gebraucht. So in Lyly's Euphues and his England: Shall I ruffle in new devices, with rings, with robes; und Drayton hat in seinem Battaile of Agincourt: With ruffling banners that do brave the sky. 13) Die Haube ist nach dem Muster einer Suppenschüssel geformt. So in K. Henry VIII. (A. 5, Sc. 3) railed upon me till her pink'd porringer fell off her head. — Eben so humoristisch bezeichnet Petruchio die sammtne Haube gleich nachher als a velvet dish = eine Schüssel von Sammt. 14) time = die jetzige Zeit: solche Haube ist jetzt in der Mode. 15) gentle = freundlich, sanft, bezieht sich auf gentlewomen = Damen von Stande. 16) custard-coffin = der erhöhte Deckel eines Eierkuchens. — So bezeichnet auch Ben Jonson in seinem Bartholomew Fair eine Haube: for all her velvet custard on her head. — In der Fol. und in den meisten Ausgg. ist der Weggang des Modehändlers nicht angegeben. 17) In den Barbierstuben, wo immer ein grosser Zusammenfluss von Menschen stattfand, standen zur Verbesserung der Luft Rauchfässer von Metall fabricirt und mit vielen Einschnitten versehen, aus denen der Rauch hervordrang. Mit solchen Einschnitten vergleicht Petruchio die Einschnitte in dem Staatskleide Katharina's. 18) a puppet versteht Katharina = eine Puppe, die ohne allen Willen sich von ihrem Gatten lenken lässt; Petruchio versteht darunter = eine Puppe, die der Schneider mit seinen Kleidern aus ihr macht. 19) Ritson wollte thou thread streichen, weil gleich nachher a skein of thread wiederkehrt. 20) quantity = Stück, als Gegensatz zu einem Ganzen. 21) to be-mete = Einem das Mass nehmen, Einen messen. 22) to face = wenden, von der Schneiderarbeit beim Kleidermachen, und = Einem in's Gesicht trotzen. Eben so doppelsinnig ist das folgende to brave = Jemanden hübsch machen, putzen, und = Jemandem trotzen. — Beides ist aus dem älteren Gru. Master, if ever I said loose-bodied²³ gown, sew me in the skirts of it, and beat me to death with a bottom of brown thread. I said, a gown.

Pet. Proceed.

Tai. »With a small compassed²⁴ cape.«

Gru. I confess the cape.

Tai. »With a trunk sleeve.«

Gru. I confess two sleeves.

Tai. »The sleeves curiously²⁵ cut.«

Pet. Ay, there's the villany.

Gru. Error i' the bill, Sir; error i' the bill. I commanded the sleeves should be cut out, and sewed up again; and that I'll prove upon thee, though thy little finger be armed in a thimble.

Tai. This is true, that I say: an I had thee in place where, thou shouldst know it.

Gru. I am for thee straight: take thou the bill,²⁶ give me thy mete-yard, and spare not me.

Hor. God-a-mercy, Grumio, then he shall have no odds.

Pet. Well, Sir, in brief, the gown is not for me.

Gru. You are i' the right, Sir: 't is for my mistress.

Pet. Go, take it up unto thy master's use.

Gru. Villain, not for thy life! Take up my mistress' gown for thy master's use!²⁷

Pet. Why, Sir, what's your conceit in that?

Gru. O, Sir, the conceit is deeper than you think for. Take up my mistress' gown to his master's use! O, fie, fie, fie!

Pet. [Aside.] Hortensio, say thou wilt see the tailor paid. — Go take it hence; be gone, and say no more.

Hor. Tailor, I'll pay thee for thy gown to-morrow: Take no unkindness of his hasty words.

Away, I say; commend me to thy master.²⁸

[Exit Tailor.]

Pet. Well, come, my Kate; we will unto your father's, Even in these honest mean habiliments.

Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor:

For 't is the mind that makes the body rich;

And as the sun breaks through the darkest clouds,

So honour peereth in the meanest habit.

What, is the jay more precious²⁹ than the lark,

Because his feathers are more beautiful?

Or is the adder better than the eel,

Because his painted skin contents the eye?

O! no, good Kate; neither art thou the worse

For this poor furniture, and mean array.

If thou account'st³⁰ it shame, lay it on me;

And therefore frolic: we will hence forthwith,

To feast and sport us at thy father's house. —

Go, call my men, and let us straight to him;

And bring our horses unto Long-lane end;

There will we mount, and thither walk on foot. —

Let's see; I think, 't is now some seven o'clock,

And well we may come there by dinner-time.

Kath. I dare assure you, Sir, 't is almost two,

And 't will be supper-time, ere you come there.

Pet. It shall be seven, ere I go to horse.

Look, what I speak, or do, or think to do,

You are still crossing it. — Sirs, let 't alone:

I will not go to-day; and ere I do,

It shall be what o'clock I say it is.

Hor. Why, so this gallant will command the sun.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

Padua. Before BAPTISTA'S House.

Enter TRANIO, and the Pedant dressed like VINCENTIO.

Tra. Sir,¹ this is the house: please it you, that I call?

Ped. Ay, what else? and, but I be deceived,²

Signior Baptista may remember me,

Near twenty years ago, in Genoa,

Where we were lodgers at the Pegasus.³

Tra. 'T is well; and hold your own,⁴ in any case, With such austerity as 'longeth to a father.

Enter BIONDELLO.

Ped. I warrant you. But, Sir, here comes your boy; 'T were good he were school'd.

Tra. Fear you not him.⁵ Sirrah Biondello,

Now do your duty thoroughly, I advise you:

Imagine 't were the right Vincentio.

Bion. Tut! fear not me.

Tra. But hast thou done thy errand to Baptista?

Bion. I told him, that your father was at Venice,

And that you look'd for him this day in Padua.

Tra. Thou'rt a tall fellow:⁶ hold thee that to drink.⁷ Here comes Baptista. — Set your countenance, Sir. —

Enter BAPTISTA and LUCENTIO.⁸

Signior Baptista, you are happily met. —

Sir, this is the gentleman I told you of.

I pray you, stand good father to me now,

Give me Bianca for my patrimony.⁹

Ped. Soft, son! —

Sir, by your leave: having come to Padua

To gather in some debts, my son Lucentio

Drama. 23) loose-bodied = mit weiter Taille; zugleich mit der Anspielung auf loose body = eine lockere, unkeusche Person. Der Witz tritt deutlicher hervor in der entsprechenden Stelle des ältern Dramas, wo der Diener mit loose bodies gown replicirt. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 396. 24) compassed = abgerundet, rund. 25) curiously cut = sorgsam modisch ausgeschnitten. 26) Das Wortspiel mit bill = Rechnung, und = Hellebarde, findet sich auch in Timon of Athens (A. 3, Sc. 4). — mete-yard = Schneiderelle zum Massnehmen. 27) to take up = Etwas bewahren, einstecken, und = aufheben, von dem Saum eines Kleides gesagt. 28) Hortensio spricht diese Worte zum Schneider so, dass Katharina sie nicht hört. 29) precious = geschätzt nach dem eigentlichen Werthe. 30) accounted st in der Fol., von Rowe verbessert.

1) Sir verbessert Theobald das Sirs der Fol. 2) Wenn ich mich nicht irre. 3) Diese Zeile theilt die Fol. dem Tranio zu, Theobald mit Recht dem Pedanten. — Ein Pegasus war das Abzeichen des Hauses, in welchem sie logirten. 4) Behauptet was Euch zukommt, führt Eure Rolle durch. 5) Seid um seinetwillen unbesorgt. Ebenso bald nachher fear not me. 6) tall = tüchtig, hier von den Leistungen, nicht von der Persönlichkeit. 7) Nimm hier das Trinkgeld. 8) Die Fol. fügt hinzu and Pedant booted and bare-headed, eine Bühnenweisung, die schon oben an ihrem Platze gewesen wäre. — booted zeigt an, dass der falsche Vincentio erst eben von der Reise kommt und vom Pferde gestiegen ist; bare-headed = kahlköpfig, bezeichnet das Alter, in dem er erscheint. 9) Verschafft mir Bianca, indem Ihr mein Erbtheil ihr als Mitgift zusichert, gebt mir Bianca um den Preis meines

Made me acquainted with a weighty cause
Of love between your daughter and himself:
And, for the good report I hear of you,
And for the love he beareth to your daughter,
And she to him, — to stay him not too long,¹⁰
I am content, in a good father's care,
To have him match'd; and, if you please to like
No worse than I,¹¹ upon some agreement,
Me shall you find ready and willing
With one consent¹² to have her so bestow'd;
For curious¹³ I cannot be with you,
Signior Baptista, of whom I hear so well.

Bap. Sir, pardon me in what I have to say:
Your plainness, and your shortness please me well.
Right true it is, your son Lucentio here
Doth love my daughter, and she loveth him,
Or both dissemble deeply their affections;
And, therefore, if you say no more than this,
That like a father you will deal with him,
And pass¹⁴ my daughter a sufficient dower,
The match is made, and all is done:
Your son shall have my daughter with consent.

Tra. I thank you, Sir. Where then do you know best,
We be affied,¹⁵ and such assurance ta'en,¹⁶
As shall with either part's agreement stand?

Bap. Not in my house, Lucentio; for, you know,
Pitchers have ears,¹⁷ and I have many servants.
Besides, old Gremio is hearkening still,
And, happily,¹⁸ we might be interrupted.

Tra. Then at my lodging, an it like you:¹⁹
There doth my father lie,²⁰ and there this night
We'll pass the business privately and well.
Send for your daughter by your servant here;
My boy shall fetch the scrivener presently.
The worst is this, — that, at so slender warning,
You're like to have a thin and slender pittance.

Bap. It likes me well: — Cambio, hie you home,
And bid Bianca make her ready²¹ straight;
And, if you will, tell what hath happened:
Lucentio's father is arriv'd in Padua,
And how she's like to be Lucentio's wife.

Luc. I pray the gods she may, with all my heart!²²

Tra. Dally not with the gods, but get thee gone. —
Signior Baptista, shall I lead the way?

Welcome: one mess is like to be your cheer.²³
Come, Sir; we will better it in Pisa.

Bap. I follow you.

[Exeunt TRANIO, Pedant, and BAPTISTA.]

Bion. Cambio! —

Luc. What say'st thou, Biondello?

Bion. You saw my master wink and laugh upon you?

Luc. Biondello, what of that?

Bion. Faith, nothing; but he has left me here behind, to expound the meaning or moral²⁴ of his signs and tokens.

Luc. I pray thee, moralize them.

Bion. Then thus. Baptista is safe,²⁵ talking with the deceiving father of a deceitful son.

Luc. And what of him?

Bion. His daughter is to be brought by you to the supper.

Luc. And then? —

Bion. The old priest at Saint Luke's church is at your command at all hours.

Luc. And what of all this?

Bion. I cannot tell, except²⁶ they are busied about a counterfeit assurance: take you assurance of her, cum privilegio ad imprimendum solum.²⁷ To the church!
— take the priest, clerk, and some sufficient²⁸ honest witnesses.

If this be not that you look for, I have no more to say.
But bid Bianca farewell for ever and a day.²⁹

Luc. Hear'st thou, Biondello?

Bion. I cannot tarry: I knew a wench married in an afternoon as she went to the garden for parsley to stuff a rabbit; and so may you, Sir; and so adieu, Sir. My master hath appointed me to go to Saint Luke's, to bid the priest be ready to come against you come with your appendix. [Exit.]

Luc. I may, and will, if she be so contented:
She will be pleas'd, then wherefore should I doubt?

Hap what hap may, I'll roundly go about her:³⁰
It shall go hard, if Cambio go without her. [Exit.]

Erbtheils. — Diese drei letzten Zeilen sind an den angeblichen Vincentio gerichtet. 10) Damit ich ihn nicht zu lange warten lasse. 11) Wenn Ihr denselben guten Willen habt wie ich. — upon some agreement = nach irgend einer Uebereinkunft zwischen uns, gehört zu dem Folgenden. — Die zweite Folioausg. fügt des Verses wegen Sir vor upon ein und setzt aus demselben Grunde in der nächsten Zeile most ready and most willing. 12) with one consent bezieht sich auf Beide, auf me und you, = mit einer und derselben Zustimmung, Uebereinstimmung. 13) curious = bedenklich, der erst Alles genau erforscht und prüft. 14) to pass a dower = eine Mitgift auf einen Andern übertragen, sie ihm gerichtlich zusichern. Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 2, Anm. 19. 15) to affy = verloben. 16) scil. assurance of a dower. Vgl. oben Anm. 14. 17) Dasselbe Sprichwort in K. Richard III. (A. 2, Sc. 4). 18) happily = zufällig, von Ungefähr. 19) Manche Hgg. fügen mit der zweiten Folioausg. zur Vervollständigung des Verses Sir hinzu. 20) to lie = logiren, im Quartier liegen. 21) make her ready = sich ankleiden. 22) Diese Zeile theilte die Fol. dem Biondello zu; das Richtige sah Rowe. — Die Cambridge Edd. behalten das Arrangement der Fol. bei und lassen scheinbar den Biondello hinausgehen, um nach dem Abgange der drei Andern wieder bei Lucentio zu erscheinen. Demgemäss vermuthen sie auch in Baptista's vorhergehender Rede Biondello, hie you home für Cambio, hie you home. 23) Ihr werdet nur ein Gericht heute in unserm Gasthof zum Abendessen erhalten, aber wenn Ihr uns in Pisa besucht, wollen wir Euch besser bewirthen. 24) moral = die Deutung oder Nutzenanwendung, die sich aus einem Bilde oder einer Allegorie ziehen lässt. — to moralize = solche Nutzenanwendung anstellen. 25) Von Baptista ist keine Gefahr zu besorgen für uns. 26) Die Fol. hat expect, was Malone als Imperativ auffasst und mit wait the event erklärt. — Natürlicher erscheint hier die Lesart except aus der Folioausg. von 1632: ich kann nicht sagen, was dies Alles zu bedeuten hat, wenn nicht etwa das, dass sie sich jetzt mit einer nachgemachten Abtretungsurkunde beschäftigen. So in Macbeth (A. 1, Sc. 2) Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds, || Or memorize another Golgotha, || I cannot tell. 27) Die lateinische Formel auf Büchern, deren Druck ausschliesslich nur einem Drucker zugesichert war, hier in Bezug auf Bianca mit zweideutigem Nebensinne. 28) sufficient = ausreichend, vollgültig im gerichtlichen Sinne. 29) Für immer und noch einen Tag darüber. 30) Ich will mich geradezu an sie machen, geradezu mit ihr verfahren.

SCENE V.

A public Road.

Enter PETRUCHIO, KATHARINA, and HORTENSIO.

Pet. Come on, o' God's name: once more toward our father's.

Good Lord, how bright and goodly shines the moon!

Kath. The moon! the sun: it is not moonlight now.

Pet. I say, it is the moon that shines so bright.

Kath. I know, it is the sun that shines so bright.

Pet. Now, by my mother's son,¹ and that's myself, It shall be moon, or star, or what I list,

Or ere I journey to your father's house. —

Go one,² and fetch our horses back again. —

Evermore cross'd, and cross'd; nothing but cross'd!

Hor. Say as he says, or we shall never go.

Kath. Forward, I pray, since we have come so far, And be it moon, or sun, or what you please.

An if you please to call it a rush-candle,

Henceforth, I vow, it shall be so for me.

Pet. I say, it is the moon.

Kath. I know, it is the moon.

Pet. Nay, then you lie: it is the blessed sun.

Kath. Then, God be bless'd, it is³ the blessed sun:

But sun it is not, when you say it is not,

And the moon changes, even as your mind.

What you will have it nam'd, even that it is;

And so it shall be so for Katharine.

Hor. Petruchio, go thy ways: the field is won.

Pet. Well, forward, forward! thus the bowl should run,

And not unluckily against the bias. —

But soft; what⁴ company is coming here?

Enter VINCENTIO, in a travelling dress.

[To VINCENTIO.] Good morrow, gentle mistress: where away? —

Tell me, sweet Kate, and tell me truly too,

Hast thou beheld a fresher gentlewoman?

Such war of white and red within her cheeks!⁵

What stars do spangle heaven with such beauty,

As those two eyes become that heavenly face? —

Fair lovely maid, once more good day to thee. —

Sweet Kate, embrace her for her beauty's sake.

Hor. 'A will make the man mad, to make a woman⁶ of him.

Kath. Young budding virgin, fair, and fresh, and sweet,

Whither away, or where⁷ is thy abode?

Happy the parents of so fair a child;

Happier the man, whom favourable stars

Allot thee for his lovely bedfellow!⁸

Pet. Why, how now, Kate? I hope thou art not mad:

This is a man, old, wrinkled, faded, wither'd,

And not a maiden, as thou say'st he is.

Kath. Pardon, old father, my mistaking eyes,

That have been so bedazzled with the sun,

That every thing I look on seemeth green.

Now I perceive thou art a reverend father;

Pardon, I pray thee, for my mad mistaking.

Pet. Do, good old grandsire; and, withal, make known

Which way thou travellest: if along with us,

We shall be joyful of thy company.

Vin. Fair Sir, and you my merry mistress,⁹

That with your strange encounter much amaz'd me,

My name is call'd Vincentio; my dwelling — Pisa;

And bound I am to Padua, there to visit

A son of mine, which long I have not seen.

Pet. What is his name?

Vin. Lucentio, gentle Sir.

Pet. Happily met; the happier for thy son.

And now by law, as well as reverend age,

I may entitle thee — my loving father:

The sister to my wife, this gentlewoman,

Thy son by this hath married. Wonder not,

Nor be not griev'd: she is of good esteem,

Her dowry wealthy, and of worthy birth;

Beside, so qualified as may beseem

The spouse of any noble gentleman.

Let me embrace with old Vincentio;

And wander we to see thy honest son,

Who will of thy arrival be full joyous.

Vin. But is this true? or is it else your pleasure,

Like pleasant¹⁰ travellers, to break a jest

Upon the company you overtake?

Hor. I do assure thee, father, so it is.

Pet. Come, go along, and see the truth hereof;

For our first merriment hath made thee jealous.¹¹

[Exeunt PETRUCHIO, KATHARINA, and VINCENTIO.

Hor. Well, Petruchio, this has put me in heart.

Have to my widow;¹² and if she be¹³ froward,

Then hast thou taught Hortensio to be untoward. [Exit.

1) Vielleicht ist auch hier, wie so oft bei Sh., ein Wortspiel zwischen son und sun beabsichtigt. — Vgl. zu dieser Scene die entsprechende des älteren Dramas, Einleitung pag. 397. 2) one verbessert Collier's alter Corrector das on der Fol. — go on müsste an Hortensio gerichtet sein. 3) in in der Fol.; is in der Folioausg. von 1632. 4) what fügte Ritson ein, nach Massgabe der entsprechenden Stelle des älteren Dramas: But soft; who's this that's coming here? 5) So wird die Mischung von Weiss und Roth auf den Wangen auch bezeichnet in Coriolanus (A. 2, Sc. 1) the war of white and damask in their nicely-gawded cheeks. 6) a woman hat die zweite Folioausg. für the woman der ersten. 7) So die zweite Folioausg.; die Fol. wiederholt whither (whether). 8) Steevens citirt dazu aus der Sh. bekannten Uebersetzung des Ovid von Golding folgende Verse: right happie folk are they || By whome thou camst into this world; right happie is (I say) || Thy mother and thy sister too, (if anie be): good hap || That woman had that was thy nurse, and gave thy mouth hir pap. || But far above all other far, more blist than these is shee || Whome thou vouchsafest for thy wife || And bedfellow for to bee. 9) mistress ist hier dreisylbig (misteress) zu lesen. 10) pleasant = spasshaft, zum Scherz geneigt. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 1, Anm. 16. 11) jealous = argwöhnisch: Du bist misstrauisch geworden, weil wir zuerst unsern Spass mit Dir getrieben haben. 12) Frisch zu meiner Wittwe! Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 2, wo Hortensio gesagt hatte I will be married to a wealthy widow, || Ere three days pass. 13) be, das in der ersten Fol. fehlt, ergänzt die zweite Folioausg.

1) In der Fol. Enter Biondello, Lucentio, and Bianca; Gremio is out before. 2) master, d. h. Tranio, der den Herrn Biondello's vorstellt, emendirt Theobald das mistriss der Fol. Vielleicht wäre to my master's zu lesen und im Manuscript stand die Abkürzung Ms. 3) Das Haus meines Vaters geht mehr nach dem Markt-

ACT V.

SCENE 1.

Padua. Before LUCENTIO'S House.

*Enter on one side BIONDELLO, LUCENTIO, and BIANCA;
GREMIO walking on the other side.*¹

Bion. Softly and swiftly, Sir, for the priest is ready.

Luc. I fly, Biondello; but they may chance to need thee at home: therefore leave us.

Bion. Nay, 'faith, I'll see the church o' your back; and then come back to my master² as soon as I can.

[Exeunt LUCENTIO, BIANCA, and BIONDELLO.]

Gre. I marvel Cambio comes not all this while.

Enter PETRUCHIO, KATHARINA, VINCENTIO, and Attendants.

Pet. Sir, here 's the door, this is Lucentio's house: My father's bears more toward the market-place;³ Thither must I, and here I leave you, Sir.

Vin. You shall not choose but drink before you go. I think, I shall command your welcome here, And, by all likelihood, some cheer is toward. [Knocks.]

Gre. They 're busy within; you were best knock louder.

*Enter Pedant above, at a window.*⁴

Ped. What 's he, that knocks as he would beat down the gate?

Vin. Is Signior Lucentio within, Sir?

Ped. He 's within, Sir, but not to be spoken withal.

Vin. What, if a man bring him a hundred pound or two, to make merry withal?

Ped. Keep your hundred pounds to yourself: he shall need none, so long as I live.

Pet. Nay, I told you, your son was well beloved in Padua. — Do you hear, Sir? — to leave frivolous circumstances,⁵ — I pray you, tell Signior Lucentio, that his father is come from Pisa, and is here at the door to speak with him.

Ped. Thou liest: his father is come from Pisa,⁶ and here looking out at the window.

Vin. Art thou his father?

Ped. Ay, Sir; so his mother says, if I may believe her.

Pet. [To VINCENTIO.] Why, how now, gentleman! Why, this is flat knavery, to take upon you another man's name.

Ped. Lay hands on the villain. I believe, 'a means to cozen somebody in this city under my countenance.

Re-enter BIONDELLO.

Bion. I have seen them in the church together: God send 'em good shipping!⁷ — But who is here? mine old master, Vincentio! now we are undone, and brought to nothing.

Vin. [Seeing BIONDELLO.] Come hither, crack-hemp.⁸

Bion. I hope I may choose, Sir.

Vin. Come hither, you rogue. What, have you forgot me?

Bion. Forgot you? no, Sir: I could not forget you, for I never saw you before in all my life.

Vin. What, you notorious villain, didst thou never see thy master's father,⁹ Vincentio?

Bion. What, my old, worshipful old master? yes, marry, Sir; see where he looks out of the window.

Vin. Is 't so, indeed?

[Beats BIONDELLO.]

Bion. Help, help, help! here 's a madman will murder me. [Exit.]

Ped. Help, son! help, Signior Baptista!

[Exit from the window.]

Pet. Pr'ythee, Kate, let 's stand aside, and see the end of this controversy. [They retire.]

Re-enter Pedant below; BAPTISTA, TRANIO, and Servants.

Tra. Sir, what are you, that offer to beat my servant?

Vin. What am I, Sir? nay, what are you, Sir? — O immortal gods! O fine villain! A silken doublet! a velvet hose! a scarlet cloak! and a copatain hat!¹⁰ — O, I am undone! I am undone! while I play the good husband at home,¹¹ my son and my servant spend all at the university.

Tra. How now? what 's the matter?

Bap. What, is the man lunatic?

Tra. Sir, you seem a sober ancient gentleman by your habit, but your words show you a madman. Why, Sir, what 'cerns¹² it you if I wear pearl and gold? I thank my good father, I am able to maintain it.

Vin. Thy father? O villain! he is a sail-maker in Bergamo.

Bap. You mistake, Sir: you mistake, Sir. Pray, what do you think is his name?

Vin. His name? as if I knew not his name: I have brought him up ever since he was three years old, and his name is Tranio.

Ped. Away, away, mad ass! his name is Lucentio; and he is mine only son, and heir to the lands of me, Signior Vincentio.

B. in Two Gentlemen of Verona, wiederholt italienische Städtenamen verwechselt, oder durch ein Versehen des Druckers, da in der Handschrift vielleicht abgekürzt P. stand. — Die Cambridge Edd. behalten die Lesart der Fol. bei und rechtfertigen sie in ziemlich gezwungener Deutung: The Pedant has been staying some time in Padua, and that is all he means when he contradicts the newly-arrived traveller from Pisa. 7) Wie A. 1, Sc. 1, wo Lucentio sagt If, Biondello, thou wert come ashore, so nimmt Sh. auch hier an, dass man Padua zu Wasser erreiche und verlasse. — Indess lässt sich good shipping auch figürlich fassen. 8) crack-hemp = Galgenstrick, eigentlich = der den hanfenen Strick, an dem er gehängt wird, zerreisst. Gebräuchlicher war zu Sh.'s Zeit das synonyme crack-rope, so in Tarleton's Jests: There was a crack-rope boy. — In Gascoigne's Supposes, das er hier benutzte, fand Sh. ein anderes Synonym: crack-halter. 9) Die Fol. hat auch hier mistriss' father, was die zweite Folioausg. verbessert. Vgl. oben Anm. 2. 10) copatain hat = ein Hut mit hohem, spitzzulaufendem Deckel. — Gascoigne nennt solche Hüte coptankt hats, und in Danet's Uebersetzung des Comines heisst es: upon their heads they wore felt hats, copletankt a quarter of an ell high or more. 11) Während ich daheim den guten Hauswirth spiele, sparsam lebe. 12) 'cerns abgekürzt aus

Vin. Lucentio! O! he hath murdered his master. — Lay hold on him, I charge you, in the duke's name. — O, my son, my son! — Tell me, thou villain, where is my son Lucentio?

Tra. Call forth an officer.¹³

Enter One with an Officer.

Carry this mad knave to the gaol. — Father Baptista, I charge you see that he be forthcoming.¹⁴

Vin. Carry me to the gaol!

Gre. Stay, officer: he shall not go to prison.

Bap. Talk not, Signior Gremio. I say, he shall go to prison.

Gre. Take heed, Signior Baptista, lest you be cony-catching¹⁵ in this business. I dare swear this is the right Vincentio.

Ped. Swear, if thou darest.

Gre. Nay, I dare not swear it.

Tra. Then thou wert best say, that I am not Lucentio.

Gre. Yes, I know thee to be Signior Lucentio.

Bap. Away with the dotard! to the gaol with him!

Vin. Thus strangers may be haled and abus'd. — O monstrous villain!¹⁶

Re-enter BIONDELLO, with LUCENTIO and BIANCA.

Bion. O, we are spoiled! and yonder he is: deny him, forswear him, or else we are all undone.

Luc. Pardon, sweet father. [Kneeling.]

Vin. Lives my sweet¹⁷ son?

[*BIONDELLO, TRANIO, and Pedant run out.*¹⁸]

Bian. Pardon, dear father. [Kneeling.]

Bap. How hast thou offended?¹⁹

Where is Lucentio?

Luc. Here 's Lucentio,

Right son to the right Vincentio;
That have by marriage made thy daughter mine,
While counterfeit supposes blear'd thine eyne.²⁰

Gre. Here 's packing²¹ with a witness, to deceive us all!

Vin. Where is that damned villain, Tranio,
That fac'd and brav'd me in this matter so?

Bap. Why, tell me, is not this my Cambio?

Bion. Cambio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Luc. Love wrought these miracles. Bianca's love
Made me exchange my state with Tranio,
While he did bear my countenance in the town;
And happily I have arrived at the last

Unto the wished haven of my bliss.

What Tranio did, myself enforc'd him to;

Then pardon him, sweet father, for my sake.

Vin. I'll slit the villain's nose, that would have sent me to the gaol.

Bap. [To LUCENTIO.] But do you hear, Sir? Have you married my daughter without asking my good will?

Vin. Fear not, Baptista; we will content you: go to; but I will in, to be revenged for this villany. [Exit.]

Bap. And I, to sound the depth of this knavery. [Exit.]

Luc. Look not pale, Bianca; thy father will not frown.

[Exeunt LUCENTIO and BIANCA.]

Gre. My cake is dough;²² but I'll in among the rest, Out of hope of all, but my share of the feast.²³ [Exit.]

PETRUCHIO and KATHARINA advance.

Kath. Husband, let's follow, to see the end of this ado.

Pet. First kiss me, Kate, and we will.

Kath. What, in the midst of the street?

Pet. What! art thou ashamed of me?

Kath. No, Sir, God forbid; but ashamed to kiss.

Pet. Why, then let's home again. — Come, sirrah, let's away.

Kath. Nay, I will give thee a kiss: now pray thee, love, stay.

Pet. Is not this well? — Come, my sweet Kate:

Better once than never, for never too late. [*Exeunt.*²⁴]

SCENE II.

A Room in LUCENTIO's House.

*A banquet set out. Enter BAPTISTA, VINCENTIO, GREMIO, the Pedant, LUCENTIO, BIANCA, PETRUCHIO, KATHARINA, HORTENSIO, and Widow; TRANIO, BIONDELLO, GRUMIO, and Others, attending.*¹

Luc. At last, though long, our jarring notes agree
And time it is, when raging war is done,²
To smile at scapes and perils overblown. —
My fair Bianca, bid my father welcome,
While I with self-same kindness welcome thine. —
Brother Petruchio, — sister Katharina, —
And thou, Hortensio, with thy loving widow,
Feast with the best,³ and welcome to my house:
My banquet is to close our stomachs up,

So in K. Henry VI. Second Part (A. 2, Sc. 1) Your lady is forthcoming yet at London. 15) Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 1, Anm. 10. 16) Dyce vermuthet, dass das villaine der Fol. villanie (villany) zu lesen wäre. 17) Steevens und Malone setzen des Verses wegen sweetest. Vielleicht wäre eher liveth für lives zu lesen. 18) Exit Biondello, Tranio, Pedant, as fast as may be in der Fol. 19) Weshalb bittest Du um Verzeihung? 20) supposes = untergeschobene Personen oder Dinge. After our great good cheer. Pray you, sit down;
For now we sit to chat, as well as eat.

[They sit at table.]

Pet. Nothing but sit and sit, and eat and eat!

Bap. Padua affords this kindness, son Petruchio.

Pet. Padua affords nothing but what is kind.

Hor. For both our sakes I would that word were true.

Pet. Now, for my life, Hortensio fears his widow.⁴

Wid. Then never trust me, if I be afraid.

Pet. You are very sensible, and yet you miss my sense:⁵
I mean, Hortensio is afraid of you.

Wid. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round.

Pet. Roundly⁶ replied.

Kath. Mistress, how mean you that?

Wid. Thus I conceive by him.

Pet. Conceives by me! — How likes Hortensio that?

Hor. My widow says, thus she conceives her tale.

Pet. Very well mended. Kiss him for that, good widow.

Kath. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round: —
I pray you, tell me what you meant by that.

Wid. Your husband, being troubled with a shrew,
Measures my husband's sorrow by his woe:

And now you know my meaning.

Kath. A very mean meaning.

Wid. Right, I mean you.

Kath. And I am mean, indeed, respecting you.

Pet. To her, Kate!

Hor. To her, widow!

Pet. A hundred marks, my Kate does put her down.⁷

Hor. That's my office.

Pet. Spoke like an officer.⁸ — Ha' to thee, lad.⁹

[Drinks to HORTENSIO.]

Bap. How likes Gremio these quick-witted folks?

Gre. Believe me, Sir, they butt together well.

Bian. Head and butt? an hasty-witted body

Would say, your head and butt were head and horn.¹⁰

Vin. Ay, mistress bride, hath that awaken'd you?

Bian. Ay, but not frightened me; therefore, I'll sleep
again.

Pet. Nay, that you shall not; since you have begun,
Have at you for a bitter¹¹ jest or two.

Bian. Am I your bird? I mean to shift my bush,
And then pursue me as you draw your bow. —
You are welcome all.

[Exeunt BIANCA, KATHARINA, and Widow.]

Pet. She hath prevented me. — Here, Signior¹² Tranio;
This bird you aim'd at, though you hit her not:
Therefore, a health to all that shot and miss'd.

Tra. O Sir! Lucentio slipp'd¹³ me, like his greyhound,
Which runs himself, and catches for his master.

Pet. A good swift¹⁴ simile, but something currish.

Tra. 'T is well, Sir, that you hunted for yourself:

'T is thought, your deer does hold you at a bay.¹⁵

Bap. O ho, Petruchio! Tranio hits you now.

Luc. I thank thee for that gird,¹⁶ good Tranio.

Hor. Confess, confess, hath he not hit you here?

Pet. 'A has a little gall'd me, I confess;

And, as the jest did glance away from me,

'T is ten to one it maim'd you two¹⁷ outright.

Bap. Now, in good sadness,¹⁸ son Petruchio,

I think thou hast the veriest shrew of all.

Pet. Well, I say no: and therefore, for¹⁹ assurance,

Let's each one send unto his wife;

And he, whose wife is most obedient

To come at first when he doth send for her,

Shall win the wager which we will propose.

Hor. Content. What is the wager?

Luc. Twenty crowns.

Pet. Twenty crowns!

I'll venture so much of²⁰ my hawk, or hound,

But twenty times so much upon my wife.

Luc. A hundred then.

Hor. Content.

Pet. A match! 't is done.

Hor. Who shall begin?

Luc. That will I.

Go, Biondello, bid your mistress come to me.

Bion. I go.

Bap. Son, I will be your half. Bianca comes.²¹

Luc. I'll have no halves; I'll bear it all myself.

Re-enter BIONDELLO.

How now! what news?

Bion. Sir, my mistress sends you word.

That she is busy, and she cannot come.

Pet. How! she is busy, and she cannot come!

Is that an answer?

Gre. Ay, and a kind one too:

Pray God, Sir, your wife send you not a worse.

Pet. I hope, better.

Hor. Sirrah Biondello, go, and entreat my wife

To come to me forthwith.

Pet. O ho! entreat her!

Nay, then she must needs come.

Hor. I am afraid, Sir,

Do what you can, yours will not be entreated.

Now, where 's my wife?

Bion. She says, you have some goodly jest in hand; She will not come: she bids you come to her.

Pet. Worse and worse: she will not come? O vile, Intolerable, not to be endur'd!

Sirrah Grumio, go to your mistress; say, I command her come to me. [Exit GRUMIO.]

Hor. I know her answer.

Pet. What?

Hor. She will not.

Pet. The fouler fortune mine,²² and there an end.

Enter KATHARINA.

Bap. Now, by my holidame, here comes Katharina!

Kath. What is your will, Sir, that you send for me?

Pet. Where is your sister, and Hortensio's wife?

Kath. They sit conferring by the parlour fire.

Pet. Go, fetch them hither: if they deny to come, Swinge me them soundly forth unto their husbands. Away, I say, and bring them hither straight.

[Exit KATHARINA.]

Luc. Here is a wonder, if you talk of a wonder.

Hor. And so it is. I wonder what it bodes.

Pet. Marry, peace it bodes, and love, and quiet life, An awful rule,²³ and right supremacy; And, to be short, what not that 's sweet and happy?²⁴

Bap. Now fair befall thee, good Petruchio!

The wager thou hast won; and I will add

Unto their losses twenty thousand crowns;

Another dowry to another daughter,²⁵

For she is chang'd, as she had never been.²⁶

Pet. Nay, I will win my wager better yet,

And show more sign of her obedience,

Her new-built virtue and obedience.²⁷

See, where she comes, and brings your froward wives As prisoners to her womanly persuasion. —

Re-enter KATHARINA, with BIANCA and Widow.

Katharine, that cap of yours becomes you not:

Off with that bauble, throw it under foot.

[KATHARINA pulls off her cap, and throws it down.]

Wid. Lord! let me never have a cause to sigh,

Till I be brought to such a silly pass!

Bian. Fie! what a foolish duty call you this?

Luc. I would, your duty were as foolish too:

The wisdom of your duty, fair Bianca,

Hath cost me an hundred²⁸ crowns since supper-time.

Bian. The more fool you for laying on²⁹ my duty.

Pet. Katharine, I charge thee, tell these headstrong women,

What duty they do owe their lords and husbands.

Wid. Come, come, you 're mocking: we will have no telling.

Pet. Come on, I say; and first begin with her.

Wid. She shall not.

Pet. I say, she shall: — and first begin with her.

Kath. Fie, fie! unknot that threatening unkind brow, And dart not scornful glances from those eyes, To wound thy lord, thy king, thy governor: It blots thy beauty, as frosts do³⁰ bite the meads, Confounds thy fame, as whirlwinds shake fair buds, And in no sense is meet, or amiable.

A woman mov'd is like a fountain troubled,

Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of beauty;

And, while it is so, none so dry or thirsty

Will deign to sip, or touch one drop of it.

Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper,

Thy head, thy sovereign; one that cares for thee,

And for thy maintenance;³¹ commits his body

To painful labour, both by sea and land,

To watch the night in storms, the day in cold,

Whilst thou liest warm at home, secure and safe;

And craves no other tribute at thy hands,

But love, fair looks; and true obedience,

Too little payment for so great a debt.

Such duty as the subject owes the prince,

Even such a woman oweth to her husband;

And when she 's froward, peevish, sullen, sour,

And not obedient to his honest will,³²

What is she but a foul contending rebel,

And graceless traitor to her loving lord? —

I am asham'd, that women are so simple

To offer war, where they should kneel for peace;

Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway,

When they are bound to serve, love, and obey.

Why are our bodies soft, and weak, and smooth,

Unapt to toil and trouble in the world,

But that our soft conditions,³³ and our hearts,

Should well agree with our external parts?

Come, come, you froward and unable worms,³⁴

My mind hath been as big as one of yours,

My heart as great, my reason, haply, more

To bandy word for word, and frown for frown;

But now I see, our lances are but straws,

Our strength as weak, our weakness past compare, —

That seeming to be most, which we indeed least are.

Then vail your stomachs,³⁵ for it is no boot,

And place your hands below your husband's foot:³⁶

ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

Einleitung.

Shakspeare's All's well that ends well wurde zuerst gedruckt in der Gesamtausgabe seiner Schauspiele in Folio, im Jahre 1623. Das Drama steht daselbst als das zwölfte in der Reihe der Comedies, in Acte, aber nicht in Scenen eingetheilt, und ohne ein Personenverzeichniss, das zuerst Rowe in seiner Ausgabe (1709) beifügte. Der Text, wie er in der Folio vorliegt, bedarf mancher Verbesserungen, welche bei der schwierigen und dunkeln Sprache des Stücks zum Theil nur als unsichere Vermuthungen aufgenommen werden können und für die kritische Feststellung der Recension Manches zu wünschen übrig lassen.

Francis Meres erwähnt in seiner wiederholt citirten Palladis Tamia, Wit's Treasury, unter den Lustspielen Shakspeare's neben »Love labours lost« auch »his Love labours wonne«. Da es beispieillos und unerklärlich sein müsste, wenn ein Drama Shakspeare's, das Francis Meres als ein damals allgemein bekanntes im Jahre 1598 rühmend hervorheben konnte, verloren gegangen und von den Herausgebern der Folio nicht in ihre Gesamtausgabe aufgenommen wäre, so lag von selbst der Gedanke nahe, dass das Shakspeare'sche Drama, welches Meres als Love's Labour's Won von der Bühnendarstellung her kannte und lobend namhaft machte, unter anderm Namen uns in der Folioausgabe erhalten geblieben, wie ja solche doppelte Betitelung eines und desselben Dramas auch sonst nicht unerhört war. Es kam nur darauf an, unter den Comedies Shakspeare's, die bis zum Jahre 1598 geschrieben sein konnten, dasjenige Stück zu finden, dessen Inhalt dem von Meres aufbewahrten Titel vorzugsweise entsprechen möchte. Und als solches bezeichnete Farmer in seinem Essay on the Learning of Shakespeare (1767) Shakspeare's All's well that ends well, mit allgemeiner Zustimmung von fast sämtlichen späteren Commentatoren und Kritikern; denn ein Versuch Hunter's, in Shakspeare's Tempest dasjenige Drama nachzuweisen, das den Nebentitel Love's Labour's Won geführt habe, blieb vereinzelt und scheiterte schon an der evidenten Unwahrscheinlichkeit, dass The Tempest, ein offenbar der letzten Zeit Shakspeare's angehöriges Drama, bereits im Jahre 1598 habe existiren können.

Sind nun auch die Herausgeber über die Identität von All's well that ends well und Love's Labour's Won ziemlich einig, so scheiden sich doch ihre Meinungen in der Frage nach dem chronologischen Verhältnisse der beiden erwähnten Titel zu einander. Nach der einen Ansicht schrieb der Dichter zuerst Love's Labour's Won als ein Jugenddrama und als ein Gegenstück zu seinem Love's Labour's Lost, und in dieser Gestalt hatte Meres es aufführen sehen; später arbeitete Shakspeare das Drama dann um und gab ihm den neuen Titel All's well that ends well, und in dieser Gestalt ging es in die Folioausgabe von 1623 über. — Nach der andern Ansicht, welche, in Ermangelung aller äussern oder innern Zeugnisse zu Gunsten der ersteren, als die wahrscheinlichere gelten muss, hat Shakspeare das Stück überhaupt nur einmal geschrieben, so dass also entweder später nur der eine Titel mit dem andern vertauscht worden ist, oder, wie in dem Falle von Twelfth-Night: or, What you will, das Stück gleichzeitig beide Titel geführt hat, von denen Meres den einen, die Editoren der Folioausgabe den andern angeführt, obwohl Beide dasselbe Werk in derselben Bearbeitung vor sich hatten. — Wenn nach der ersten Ansicht eine doppelte Textrecension des Stückes bestanden hat, so kann von der früheren, vor 1598 vorhandenen, schwerlich viel in die uns in der Folioausgabe vorliegende spätere Textgestaltung von dem Dichter mit hinübergenommen sein: der Styl und Vers unterscheiden sich in ihrer charakteristischen Eigenthümlichkeit durchgängig und in allen Theilen des Dramas zu auffallend von dem Styl und Verse der Shakspeare'schen Jugendarbeiten; der Dichter müsste also das Ganze vollständig neu gearbeitet haben. Eben diese stylistischen und metrischen Merkmale führen aber, bei der Annahme einer nur einmaligen Abfassung, auf die Vermuthung, dass All's well that ends well erst kurz vor 1598 geschrieben sein kann; ja, sollte, was freilich kaum denkbar erscheint, das von Meres erwähnte Love's Labour's Won in der That ein anderes, uns auffallender Weise verloren gegangenes Drama unseres Dichters gewesen sein, so liesse sich aus inneren Gründen eher auf ein noch späteres Datum der Abfassung von All's well that ends well schliessen, wie denn z. B. Malone, freilich auf eine sehr vage Deutung muthmasslicher Anspielungen hin, das Jahr 1606 dafür annimmt.

Den Stoff zu seinem Drama entlehnte Shakspeare aus der mehrfach von ihm benutzten Novellensammlung William Paynter's, welche unter dem Titel The Palace of Pleasure in zwei Bänden, 1566 und 1567, erschienen war. Paynter hatte die betreffende Novelle, die achtunddreissigste seines ersten Bandes, aus dem Italienischen des Boccaccio übersetzt, in dessen Decamerone sie sich als die neunte des dritten Tages findet. Die eigentliche Charakteristik blieb, wie in andern Fällen einer dramatischen Bearbeitung novellistischer Stoffe, unserm Dichter ausschliesslich vorbehalten; auch sind mehrere Figuren, und zwar gerade die gelungensten, wie die alte Gräfin von Rousillon, Lafeu, Parolles, der Clown, von Shakspeare hinzugefügt, ohne dass die Novelle ihm auch nur, wie bei den übrigen, ein schwaches Vorbild dazu geboten hätte. Da er jedoch im Ganzen und Grossen dem Gange der Erzählung, wie er sie bei Paynter vorfand, gefolgt ist, so erscheint zur Vergleichung ein Abdruck der Novelle Giletta of Narbona aus The Palace of Pleasure an dieser Stelle gerechtfertigt.

In Fraunce there was a gentleman called Isnardo, the counte of Rossiglione, who bicause he was sickly and diseased, kepte alwaies in his house a phisicion, named maister Gerardo of Narbona. This counte had one onely sonne called Beltramo, a verie yonge childe, pleasaunt and faire. With whom there was nourished and broughte up, many other children of his age: emonges whom one of the doughters of the said phisicion, named Giletta, who ferventlie fill in love with Beltramo, more then was meete for a maiden of her age. This Beltramo, when his father was dedde, and left under the roial custodie of the kyng, was sente to Paris, for whose departure the maiden was verie pensife. A little while after, her father beyng likewise dedde, she was desirous to goe to Paris, onely to see the younge counte, if for that purpose she could gette any good occasion. But beyng diligently looked unto by her kinsfolke (bicause she was riche and fatherlesse) she could see no conveniente waie for her intended journey: and being now marriageable, the love she bare to the counte was never out of her remembraunce, and refused many husbandes with whom her kinsfolke would have placed her, without making them privie to the occasion of her refusall. Now it chaunced that she burned more in love with Beltramo than ever she did before, bicause she heard tell that hee was growen to the state of a goodly yonge gentlemanne. She heard by reporte, that the Frenche kyng had a swellynge upon his breast, whiche by reason of ill cure was growen to a fistula, and did putte him to merveilous paine and grief, and that there was no phisicion to be founde (although many were proved) that could heale it, but rather did impaire the grief and made it worsse and worsse. Wherfore the kyng, like one that was in dispaire, would take no more counsaill or helpe. Wherof the yonge maiden was wonderfull glad, and thought to have by this meanes, not onelie a lawfull occasion to goe to Paris, but if the disease were suche (as she supposed,) easely to bryng to passe that she might have the counte Beltramo to her husbände. Whereupon with suche knowledge as she had learned at her fathers handes before time, shee made a poudre of certain herbes, whiche she thought meete for that disease, and rode to Paris. And the first thing she went about when she came thither was to see the counte Beltramo. And then she repaired to the kyng, praying his grace to vouchsaufe to shewe her his disease. The kyng perceivynge her to be a faire yonge maiden and a comelie, would not hide it, but opened the same unto her. So soone as she sawe it, shee putte hym in comforte, that she was able to heale hym, sayng: „Sire, if it shall please your grace, I trust in God without any paine or grief unto your highnesse, within eighte daies I will make you whole of this disease.“ The kyng hearyng her saie so, began to mocke her, sayng: „How is it possible for thee, beyng a yong woman, to doe that whiche the best renoumed phisicions in the worlde can not?“ He thanked her for her good will, and made her a directe answer, that he was determind no more to followe the counsaile of any phisicion. Whereunto the maiden answered: „Sire, you dispise my knowledge bicause I am yonge and a woman, but I assure you that I doe not minister phisicke by profession, but by the aide and helpe of God: and with the cunningg of maister Gerardo of Narbona, who was my father, and a phisicion of greate fame so longe as he lived.“ The kyng hearyng those wordes, saied to hymself: „This woman, peradventure, is sent unto me of God, and therefore why should I disdain to prove her cunningg? sithens she promiseth to heale me within a litle space, without any offence or grief unto me.“ And beyng determind to prove her, he said: „Damosell, if thou doest not heale me, but make me to breake my determination, what wilt thou shall folowe thereof.“ „Sire,“ saied the maiden: „Let me be kept in what garde and keepynge you list: and if I dooe not heale you within these eight daies, let me bee burnte: but if I doe heale your grace what recompence shall I have then? To whom the kyng answered: „Bicause thou art a maiden and unmarried, if thou heale me accordyng to thy promisse, I will bestowe thee upon some gentleman, that shalbe of right good worship and estimacion.“ To whom she answered: „Sire, I am verie well content that you bestowe me in mariage: but I will have suche a husbände as I my self shall demaunde, without presumption to any of your children or other of your bloude.“ Whiche requeste the kyng incontinently graunted. The yong maiden began to minister her phisicke, and in shorte space before her appointed tyme, she had throughly cured the kyng. And when the king perceived himself whole, said unto her: „Thou hast well deserved a husbände (Giletta) even suche a one as thy selfe shalt chose.“ „I have then my lorde (quod she) deserved the countie Beltramo of Rossiglione, whom I have loved from my youthe.“ The kyng was very lothe to graunte hym unto her: but bicause he had made a promis which he was lothe to breake, he caused hym to be called forthe, and saied unto hym: „Sir counte, bicause you are a gentleman of greate honor, our pleasure is, that you retourne home to your owne house, to order your estate according to your degree: and that you take with you a damosell whiche I have appointed to be your wife.“ To whom the counte gave his humble thanks, and demaunded what she was? „It is she (quoth the kyng) that with her medecines had healed me.“ The counte knewe her well, and had alredie seen her, although she was faire, yet knowing her not to be of a stocke convenable to his nobilitie, disdainfullie said unto the king, „Will you then (sir) give me a phisicion to wife? It is not the pleasure of God that ever I should in that wise bestowe my self.“ To whom the kyng said: „Wilt thou then, that we should breake our faith, whiche we to recover health have given to the damosell, who for a rewarde thereof asked thee to husband?“ „Sire (quoth Beltramo) you maie take from me al that I have, and give my persone to whom you please, bicause I am your subject: but I assure you I shall never be contented with that mariage.“ „Well, you shall have her (saied the kyng) for the maiden is faire and wise, and loveth you moste intirely: thinkyng verelie you shall leade a more joyfull life with her, then with a ladie of a greater house.“ The counte therewithal helde his peace, and the king made great preparacion for the mariage. And when the appointed daie was come, the counte in the presence of the kyng (although it were againste his will) married the maiden, who loved hym better then her owne self. Whiche dooen, the counte determining before what he would doe, praied licence to retourne to his countrie to consummat the mariage. And when he was on horsebacke he went not thither, but tooke his journey into Thuscane, where understanding that the Florentines and Senois were at warres, he determined to take the Florentines parte, and was willinglie received and honourable interteigned, and made capitaine of a certaine number of men, continuynge in their service a longe tyme. The newe married gentlewoman, scarce contented with that, and hopynge by her well doynge to cause hym to retourne into his countrie, went to Rossiglione, where she was received of all his subjectes for their ladie. And perceivynge that through the countes absence all thynges were spoiled and out of order, she like a sage lady, with greate diligence and care, disposed all thynges in order againe: whereof the subjectes rejoyced verie muche, bearyng to her their hartie love and affection, greatlie blamyng the counte bicause he could not contente himself with her. This notable gentlewoman having restored all the countrie againe, sent worde thereof to the counte her husbände, by two knightes of the countrie, whiche she sent to signifie unto hym, that if it were for her sake that he had abandoned his countrie, he should sende her worde thereof, and she to doe hym pleasure, would depart from thence. To whom he chorlishlie saied: „Lette her doe what she list: for I doe purpose to dwell with her, when she shall have this ryng (meanyng a ryng which he wore) upon her finger, and a soonne in her armes begotten by me.“ He greatly loved that ryng, and kepte it verie carefullie, and never tooke it of from his finger, for a certaine vertue that he knewe it had. The knightes hearyng the harde condicion of twoo thynges impossible: and seynge that by them he could not be removed from his determinacion, thei returned againe to the ladie, tellinge her his answer: who, verie sorrowfull, after she hadde a good while bethought herself, purposed to finde meanes to attaine to those twoo thynges, to the intente that thereby she might recover her husbände. And havynge advised with her self what to doe, she assembled the noblest and chiefest of her countrie, declaring unto them in lamentable wise what shee had alredie dooen, to winne the love of the counte, shewynge them also what folowed thereof. And in the ende saied unto them, that she was lothe the counte for her sake should dwell in perpetuall exile: therefore she determined to spende the rest of her tyme in pilgrimages and devocion, for preservacion of her soule, prayng them to take the charge and governement of the countrie, and that they would lette the counte understande, that she had forsaken his house, and was removed farre from thence: with purpose never to retourne to Rossiglione againe. Many teares were shedde by the people, as she was speakynge these wordes, and divers supplications were made unto him to alter his opinion, but al in vaine. Wherefore commending them all unto God, she tooke her waie with her maide, and one of her kinsemen, in the habite of a pilgrime, well furnished with silver and precious Jewelles: tellyng no man whither shee wente, and never rested till she came to Florence: where arrivynge by fortune at a poore widowes house, she contented her self with the state of a poore pilgrime, desirous to here newes of her lorde, whom by fortune she sawe the next daie passing by the house (where she lay) on horsebacke with his companie. And although she knewe him well enough, yet she demaunded of the good wife of the house what he was: who answered that he was a straunge gentleman, called the counte Beltramo of Rossiglione, a curteous knight, and wel beloved in the citie, and that he was merveilously in love with a neighbor of hers, that was a gentlewoman, verie poore and of small substaunce, neverthesse of right honest life and report, and by reason of her povertie was yet unmarried, and dwelte with her mother, that was a wise and honest ladie. The countesse well notynge these wordes, and by litle and litle debatynge every particular point thereof, comprehendynge the effecte of those newes, concluded what to doe, and when she had well understood whiche was the house, and the name of the ladie, and of her doughter that was beloved of the counte: upon a daie repaired to the house secretelie in the habite of a pilgrime, where finding the mother and doughter in poore estate emonges their familie, after she hadde saluted them, tolde the mother that she had to saie unto her. The gentlewoman risynge up, curteously interteigned her, and beyng entred alone into a chamber, thei satte doune, and the countesse began to saie unto her in this wise. „Madame, me thinke that ye be one upon whom fortune doeth frowne, so well as upon me: but if you please, you maie bothe comfort me and your self.“ The ladie answered, „That there was nothyng in the worlde whereof she was more desirous then of honest comforte.“ The countesse procedynge in her talke, saied unto her. „I have nede now of your fidelitie and trust, whereupon if I doe staie, and you deceive mee, you shall bothe undoe me and your self.“ „Tel me then what it is hardelie (saied the gentlewoman:) if it bee your pleasure: for you shall never bee deceived of me.“ Then the countesse beganne to recite her whole estate of love: tellyng her what she was, and what had chaunced to that present daie, in such perfite order that the gentlewoman belevynge her woordes, bicause she had partlie heard report thereof before, beganne to have compassion upon her, and after that the countesse had rehearsed all the whole circumstance, she continued her purpose, sayng: „Now you have heard emonges other my troubles, what twoo thynges thei bee, whiche behoveth me to have, if I do recover my husbände, whiche I knowe none can helpe me to obtain, but onely you, if it bee true that I heare, whiche is, that the counte my husbände, is farre in love with your doughter.“ To whom the gentlewoman saied: „Madame, if the counte love my doughter, I knowe not, albeit the likelihoode is greates: but what am I able to doe, in that whiche you desire?“ „Madame, answered the countesse, I will tell you: but first I will declare what I mean to doe for you, if my determinacion be brought to effect: I see your faier doughter of good age, redie to marie, but as I understand the cause why she is unmarried, is the lacke of substance to bestowe upon her. Wherefore I purpose, for recompence of the pleasure, whiche you shall dooe for me, to give so much redie money to marie her honorably, as you shall thinke sufficient.“ The countesse offer was very well liked of the ladie, bicause she was but poore: yet having a noble hart, she saied unto her, „Madame, tell me wherein I maie do you service: and if it be a thing honest, I will gladlie performe it, and the same being brought to passe, do as it shal please you." Then saied the countesse: "I thinke it requisite, that by some one whom you truste, that you give knowledge to the counte my husbände, that your doughter is, and shalbe at his commaundement: and to the intent she maie bee well assured that he loveth her in deede above any other, that she praieth him to sende her a ring that he weareth upon his finger, whiche ring she heard tell he loved cerie derely: and when he sendeth the ryng, you shall give it unto me, and afterwarde sende hym woorde, that your doughter is redie to accomlishe his pleasure, and then you shall cause him secretly to come hither, and place me by hym (in steede of your daughter) peradventure God will give me the grace, that I maie bee with childe, and so havynge this ring on my finger, and the childe in myne armes begotten by him, I shall recover him, and by your meanes continue with hym, as a wife ought to doe with her husbände." This thing semed difficulte unto the gentlewoman: fearyng that there would folowe reproche unto her doughter. Notwithstandyng, considering what an honest parte it were, to be a meane that the good ladie should recover her husband, and that she should doe it for a good purpose, havynge affiaunce in her honest affection, not onely promised the countesse to bryng this to passe, but in fewe daies with greate subtiltie, folowyng the order wherein she was instructed, she had gotten the ryng, although it was with the countes ill will, and toke order that the countesse in stede of her doughter did lye with hym. And at the first meetyng, so affectuously desired by the counte: God so disposed the matter that the countesse was begotten with child, of twoo goodly sonnes, and her delivery chaunced at the due time. Whereupon the gentlewoman, not onely contented the countesse at that tyme with the companie of her husbände, but at many other times so secretly that it was never knowen: the counte not thinkyng that he had lien with his wife, but with her whom he loved. To whom at his uprisyng in the mornyng, he used many curteous and amiable woordes, and gave divers faire and precious jewelles, whiche the countesse kepte moste carefullie: and when shee perceived herself with childe, she determined no more to trouble the gentlewoman, but saied unto her. "Madame, thanks be to God and you, I have the thyng that I desire, and even so it is tyme to recompence your desert, that afterwarde I maie departe." The gentlewoman saied unto her, that if she had doen any pleasure agreeable to her mind, she was right glad thereof whiche she did, not for hope of rewarde, but because it appertained to her by well doynge so to doe. Whereunto the countesse saied. "Your sayyng pleaseth me well, and likewise for my parte, I dooe not purpose to give unto you the thing you shall demaunde of me in rewarde, but for consideracion of your well doynge, which duetie forceth me to so dooe." The gentlewoman then constrained with necessitie, demaunded of her with greate bashefulness, an hundred poundes to marie her doughter. The countesse perceivynge the shamefastnesse of the gentlewoman, and hearyng her curteous demaunde, gave her five hundred poundes, and so many faire and costly jewells whiche almoste amounted to like valer. For whiche the gentlewoman more then contented, gave moste hartie thanks to the countesse, who departed from the gentlewoman and retourned to her lodging. The gentlewoman to take occasion from the counte of any farther repaire, or sendyng to her house, tooke her doughter with her, and went into the countrie to her frendes. The counte Beltramo, within fewe daies after, beyng revoked home to his owne house by his subjectes, (hearyng that the countesse was departed from thence) retourned. The countesse knowynge that her housband was gone from Florence and retourned into his countrie, was verie glad and contented, and she continewed in Florence till the tyme of her childbedde was come, and was brought a bedde of twoo soones, whiche were verie like unto their father, and caused them carefullie to be nursed and brought up, and when she sawe tyme, she toke her journey (unknownen to any manne) and arrived at Montpellier: and restyng her self there for certaine daies, hearyng newes of the counte, and where he was, and that upon the daie of All Sainctes, he purposed to make a great feast and assemblie of ladies and knightes, in her pilgrimes weede she wente thither. And knowynge that they were all assembled, at the palace of the counte, redie to sitte doune at the table, she passed through the people without chaunge of apparell, with her twoo sonnes in her armes: and when she was come up into the hall, even to the place where the counte was, fallyng doune prostrate at his feete, wepyng, saied unto him: "My lorde, I am thy poore infortunate wife, who to th'intent thou mightest returne and dwel in thine owne house, have been a great while beggyng about the worlde. Therefore I now beseche thee, for the honour of God, that thou wilt observe the condicions, whiche the twoo knightes (that I sent unto thee) did commaunde me to doe: for beholde, here in myne armes, not onelie one soonne begotten by thee, but twaine, and likewise thy ryng. It is now tyme then (if thou kepe promis) that I should be received as thy wife." The counte hearyng this, was greatly astonned, and knewe the ryng, and the children also, they were so like hym. "But tell me (quod he) how is this come to passe?" The countesse to the great admiracion of the counte, and of all those that were in presence, rehearsed unto them in order all that, whiche had been doen, and the whole discourse thereof. For whiche cause the counte knowynge the thynges she had spoken to be true (and perceivynge her constaunt minde and good witte, and the twoo faier yonge boies to kepe his promisse made, and to please his subjectes, and the ladies that made sute unto him, to accept her from that time forth as his lawfull wife, and to honour her) abjected his obstinate rigour: causyng her to rise up, and imbraced and kissed her, acknowledgyng her againe for his lawfull wife. And after he had apparelled her according to her estate, to the greate pleasure and contentacion of those that were there, and of all his other frendes not onely that daie, but many others, he kepte great chere, and from that tyme forth, he loved and honoured her, as his dere spouse and wife.

ACT I.

SCENE I.

Rousillon. A Room in the COUNTESS'S Palace.

*Enter BERTRAM, the COUNTESS of Rousillon, HELENA, and LAFEU, all in black.*¹

Count. In delivering my son from me, I bury a second husband.

Ber. And I, in going, Madam, weep o'er my father's death anew; but I must attend his majesty's command, to whom I am now in ward,² evermore in subjection.

Laf. You shall find of the king a husband, Madam; — you, Sir, a father. He that so generally is at all times good, must of necessity hold his virtue to you, whose worthiness would stir it up where it wanted, rather than lack it where there is such abundance.³

Count. What hope is there of his majesty's amendment?

Laf. He hath abandoned his physicians, Madam; under whose practices he hath persecuted time with hope, and finds no other advantage in the process⁴ but only the losing of hope by time.

Count. This young gentlewoman had a father, — O, that 'had'! how sad a passage 't is!⁵ — whose skill was almost as great as his honesty; had it stretched so far, would⁶ have made nature immortal, and death should have play for lack of work. 'Would, for the king's sake, he were living! I think it would be the death of the king's disease.

Laf. How called you the man you speak of, Madam?

Count. He was famous, Sir, in his profession, and it was his great right to be so: — Gerard de Narbon.

Laf. He was excellent, indeed, Madam: the king very lately spoke of him, admiringly and mourningly. He was skilful enough to have lived still, if knowledge could be set up against mortality.

Ber. What is it, my good lord, the king languishes of?

Laf. A fistula, my lord.

Ber. I heard not of it before.⁷

Laf. I would it were not notorious. — Was this gentlewoman the daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

Count. His sole child, my lord; and bequeathed to my overlooking. I have those hopes of her good that her education promises: her dispositions she inherits, which make⁸ fair gifts fairer; for where an unclean mind carries virtuous qualities,⁹ there commendations go with pity; they are virtues and traitors too: in her they are the better for their simpleness; she derives her honesty, and achieves her goodness.

1) So die Fol. — Die Trauerkleidung gilt dem jüngst verstorbenen Grafen Rousillon, in der Fol. Rossillon. Helena trägt um ihren Vater Trauer. 2) Bertram als der verwaiste Sohn eines französischen Grossen steht unter der Vormundschaft des Königs, der ihn jetzt durch Lafeu an seinen Hof beschieden hat. Sh. folgt darin seiner Quelle. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 436. 3) scil. abundance of goodness. Bertram's Würdigkeit würde die Güte des Königs eher rege machen, wo dieselbe etwa mangeln sollte, als sie vermissen, jetzt, da diese Güte in solcher Fülle vorhanden ist. 4) process = Verlauf, bezieht sich auf time. — Spitzfindig wird to persecute time with hope und to lose hope by time einander gegenübergestellt. 5) Welch ein trauriger Vergang liegt in diesem 'hatte', welches kein 'hat' ist! — So gebraucht Sh. passage in K. Henry VI. First Part (A. 2, Sc. 5) 'would some part of my young years || Might but redeem the passage of your age'. 6) Die Auslassung des it vor would, das aus dem ebenvorhergehenden it sich suppliren lässt, ist ganz in Sh.'s Manier: hätte das Talent des Arztes ganz so weit gereicht, wie seine Redlichkeit, so würde es die Natur des Menschen, das menschliche Leben unsterblich gemacht, vor dem Tode bewahrt haben. — play = Spiel, Müssiggang, ist Gegensatz zu work = Arbeit. 7) Bertram hat nie von einer Krankheit dieses Namens gehört. — Als fistula bezeichnet sie auch Paynter. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 436. 8) Die Lesart der Fol. makes verdunkelt den von Sh. offenbar beabsichtigten Gegensatz zwischen dispositions = das gute Naturell und Talent, welches Helena von ihrem Vater ererbt hat, und fair gifts = die schönen Gaben, welche sie der Erziehung verdankt und welche erst durch jenes Erbtheil ihren vollen Werth erhalten. 9) virtuous qualities = tüchtige, ausgezeichnete Gaben, die ein unreines Gemüth sich äusserlich angeeignet hat, und die man deshalb nur mit Bedauern anerkennt und lobt. Dadurch werden diese Gaben zugleich zu Täuschungen,

Laf. Your commendations, Madam, get from her tears.

Count. 'T is the best brine a maiden can season her praise in.¹⁰ The remembrance of her father never approaches her heart, but the tyranny of her sorrows takes all livelihood¹¹ from her cheek. — No more of this, Helena: go to, no more; lest it be rather thought you affect a sorrow, than to have.¹²

Hel. I do affect a sorrow, indeed: but I have it too.

Laf. Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead, excessive grief the enemy to the living.

Count. If the living be enemy to the grief, the excess makes it soon mortal.¹³

Ber. Madam, I desire your holy wishes.

Laf. How understand we that?¹⁴

Count. Be thou blest, Bertram; and succeed thy father in manners, as in shape! thy blood,¹⁵ and virtue, Contend for empire in thee; and thy goodness Share with thy birthright! Love all, trust a few, Do wrong to none: be able for thine enemy Rather in power than use, and keep thy friend Under thy own life's key:¹⁶ be check'd for silence, But never tax'd for speech. What heaven more will, That thee may furnish,¹⁷ and my prayers pluck down, Fall on thy head! Farewell. — My lord,¹⁸ 'T is an unseason'd courtier: good my lord, Advise him.

Laf. He cannot want the best¹⁹ That shall attend his love.

Count. Heaven bless him! — Farewell, Bertram. [Exit.]

Ber. [To HELENA.] The best wishes that can be forged in your thoughts be servants to you.²⁰ Be comfortable to my mother, your mistress, and make much of her.

Laf. Farewell, pretty lady: you must hold the credit of your father. [Exeunt BERTRAM and LAFEU.]

Hel. O, were that all!²¹ — I think not on my father; And these great tears²² grace his remembrance more Than those I shed for him. What was he like?²³

I have forgot him: my imagination Carries no favour²⁴ in 't but Bertram's.

I am undone: there is no living, none,

If Bertram be away. It were²⁵ all one,

That I should love a bright particular star,

And think to wed it, he is so above me:

In his bright radiance and collateral light²⁶

Must I be comforted, not in his sphere.

The ambition in my love thus plagues itself:

The hind that would be mated by the lion

Must die for love. 'T was pretty, though a plague,

To see him every hour; to sit and draw

His arched brows, his hawking eye, his curls,

In our heart's table;²⁷ heart too capable

Of every line and trick of his sweet favour:

But now he 's gone, and my idolatrous fancy

Must sanctify his relics. — Who comes here?²⁸

One that goes with him: I love him for his sake,

And yet I know him a notorious liar,

Think him a great way fool, solely²⁹ a coward;

Yet these fix'd evils sit so fit in him,

That they take place,³⁰ when virtue's steely bones

zu falschen und betrügerischen Scheintugenden, aber bei der Helena sind sie um so besser, je aufrichtiger und ächter sie sind. — Hammer las for her simpleness. 10) Das Salz der Thränen vergleicht Sh. auch sonst mit dem Salz, das zur Erhaltung und Würze der Speisen angewandt wird. So in Romeo and Juliet (A. 2, Sc. 3) How much salt water thrown away in waste, || To season love. 11) livelihood = äussere Symptome des innern Lebens, Lebendigkeit. So in K. Richard III. (A. 3, Sc. 4) By any livelihood he show'd to-day. 12) to have steht als ob lest you be rather thought to affect vorherginge. — to affect gebraucht die Gräfin = zum Schein annehmen, geflissentlich zur Schau tragen; Helena in ihrer vielleicht bei Seite gesprochenen Replik fasst das Wort = sich geflissentlich einer Sache annehmen, sich mit ihr zu schaffen machen. — Die Fol. interpungirt to have — 13) Die Gräfin schliesst sich der Mahnung, die Lafeu an die Helena richtet, an, sich dem Schmerze nicht zu sehr hinzugeben, indem sie, an seine letzten Worte anknüpfend, fortfährt: Wenn der Lebendige mit dem Gram in Feindschaft lebt, so macht ein Uebermass den Gram bald tödtlich, so tödtet der Gram bald den Lebendigen. So fasst Warburton hier mortal auf; andere Hgg. verstehen mortal = das was stirbt, zum Tode reif, und deuten es auf das baldige Aufhören des Grames, sobald der Lebende nur ernstlich dem Grame abhold sei. 14) Diese Frage Lafeu's bezieht sich schwerlich auf die ebenvorhergehenden, ganz verständlichen Worte Bertram's, sondern entweder auf die spitzfindige letzte Rede der Gräfin, welche Knight der Helena zuertheilen wollte, oder auf die ihm räthselhafte tiefe Trauer der Helena. 15) blood ist Bertram's edle Abstammung, virtue die ihm anezogene Tüchtigkeit und Mannhaftigkeit. — contend ist wie share Coniunctiv. 16) Sei Deinem Feinde gewachsen mehr in der Macht es mit ihm aufzunehmen als in der Anwendung dieser Macht, und hüte Deinen Freund so sorgsam, wie Du Dein eigenes Leben hütetest. 17) Was der Himmel ausserdem Dir zu Deiner Ausstattung und Förderung bestimmt. 18) Die Interpunction der Fol. verbindet Farewell, my lord. 19) Die Besten, Vornehmsten am Hofe werden sich um Bertram's Zuneigung bemühen, ihm huldigen. 20) Was Ihr Euch nur Gutes wünschen könnt, das möge Euch zu Gebote stehen. 21) Hätte ich keine andere Sorge, als den Ruhm meines Vaters in mir zu bewahren, aufrecht zu erhalten! 22) these great tears = die Thränen jener Grossen, welche die Gräfin und, nach Lafeu's Bericht, auch der König dem Andenken Gerard's gewidmet haben, stehen im Gegensatz zu those I shed for him = die Thränen, welche ich, seine Tochter, um ihn vergiesse. — So in K. Lear (A. 5, Sc. 3) their greater pleasures = das Belieben jener Grösseren. 23) Helena erinnert sich nicht mehr, wie ihr Vater aussah. 24) favour = Gesichtszüge, Gesichtsbildung, ebenso bald nachher every line and trick of his sweet favour = jeder Zug und jede Eigenthümlichkeit seines holden Gesichts. 25) Die Fol. hat 't were. 26) collateral light = das Licht, das von seinen Seiten oder von ihm seitwärts ausströmt. 27) table ist sowohl die Tafel von Holz oder Leinwand, auf die ein Gemälde aufgetragen wird, als das Gemälde selbst. — our heart sagt Helena allgemeiner von dem weiblichen Herzen überhaupt. — capable of = leicht empfänglich für Etwas, Etwas schnell auffassend. 28) Die Fol. notirt, nach ihrer Art, das Auftreten des Parolles schon hier, etwas früher als es wirklich geschehen sollte, als eine Weissung für den Schauspieler, sich bereit zu halten. — Die meisten Hgg. folgen ihr darin. 29) solely = in ausserlesenenem, hervorstechendem Grade. 30) Diese eingewurzelten Uebel stehen ihm so passend, dass sie Rang und Platz gewinnen oder ihm Rang und Platz verschaffen. 31) cold = frierend, der Kälte ausgesetzt, ist dem super-

Enter PAROLLES.

Par. Save you, fair queen!

Hel. And you, monarch!

Par. No.³²

Hel. And no.

Par. Are you meditating on virginity?

Hel. Ay. You have some stain of soldier³³ in you; let me ask you a question. Man is enemy to virginity; how may we barricado it against him?

Par. Keep him out.

Hel. But he assails; and our virginity, though valiant in the defence, yet is weak. Unfold to us some warlike resistance.

Par. There is none: man, sitting down before you, will undermine you, and blow you up.

Hel. Bless³⁴ our poor virginity from underminers and blowers up! — Is there no military policy, how virgins might blow up men?

Par. Virginity being blown down, man will quicklier be blown up: marry, in blowing him down again, with the breach yourselves made, you lose your city.³⁵ It is not politic in the commonwealth of nature to preserve virginity. Loss of virginity is rational³⁶ increase; and there was never virgin got, till virginity was first lost. That you were made of, is metal to make virgins. Virginity, by being once lost, may be ten times found: by being ever kept, it is ever lost. 'T is too cold a companion: away with 't.

Hel. I will stand for 't a little, though therefore I die a virgin.

Par. There's little can be said in 't:³⁷ 't is against the rule of nature. To speak on the part of virginity is to accuse your mothers, which is most infallible disobedience. He that hangs himself is a virgin:³⁸ virginity murders itself, and should be buried in highways, out of all sanctified limit, as a desperate offendress against nature. Virginity breeds mites, much like a cheese, consumes itself to the very paring, and so dies with feeding his own stomach. Besides, virginity is peevish, proud, idle, made of self-love, which is the most inhibited sin in the canon.³⁹ Keep it not: you cannot choose but lose by 't. Out with 't:⁴⁰ within the year it will make itself two,⁴¹ which is a goodly increase, and the principal itself not much the worse. Away with 't.

Hel. How might one do, Sir, to lose it to her own liking?

Par. Let me see: marry, ill,⁴² to like him that ne'er it likes. 'T is a commodity will lose the gloss with lying; the longer kept, the less worth: off with 't, while 't is vendible: answer the time of request. Virginity, like an old courtier, wears her cap out of fashion; richly suited, but unsuitable: just like the brooch and the toothpick, which wear not now.⁴³ Your date⁴⁴ is better in your pie and your porridge than in your cheek: and your virginity, your old virginity, is like one of our French withered pears: it looks ill, it eats drily; marry, 't is a withered pear; it was formerly better; marry, yet, 't is a withered pear. Will you anything with it?

Hel. Not my virginity yet.⁴⁵

fluens = im Ueberflusse lebend, gegenübergestellt: die Weisheit, welche in ihrem ärmlichen Gewande friert, muss der schwelgenden Thorheit dienstbar sein. 32) Parolles protestirt gegen den Titel monarch, den Helena ihm scherzhaft als Revanche für die Begrüssung queen beilegt, und in Folge dessen will auch Helena nicht mehr queen heissen. — Manche Hgg. betonen monarch auf der zweiten Sylbe und finden darin eine Anspielung auf eine bekannte Persönlichkeit der Zeit, einen Phantasten und Prahler, mit dem Beinamen Monarcho, den Sh. in Love's Labour's Lost erwähnt. — Indess bedarf es einer solchen Anspielung nicht zum Verständniss des Wortes. 33) some stain of soldier = ein gewisser Anstrich vom Soldaten, nicht das wirkliche Wesen eines solchen. 34) scil. God bless = Gott beschütze unsere Jungfernschaft vor Minirern! 35) Durch die Mauerbresche, die der Belagerte selbst macht, indem er den Belagerer in die Luft sprengen will, dringt der Letztere in die Stadt ein. — Dasselbe Bild von einer belagerten Stadt hat in ähnlicher Anwendung Sh. in Lucrece: This moves in him more rage, and lesser pity, || To make the breach, and enter this sweet city. 36) rational, wofür Tyrwhitt ohne Grund national lesen wollte, ist ungefähr dasselbe, was ebenvorher politic hiess. — Die Fol. hat goe für got, was die zweite Folioausg. berichtigt. 37) in 't = in dieser Sache, in Sachen der Jungfernschaft. 38) Ein Selbstmörder ist nicht schlimmer als eine Jungfrau; und eine Jungfernschaft, die sich behaupten will, sollte deshalb behandelt werden wie ein Selbstmörder, der nicht in geweihtem Bezirk beerdigt wird, sondern auf der Heerstrasse. 39) Die Sünde, welche in den göttlichen Satzungen am strengsten verboten ist. 40) out with 't = fort damit! und = thut sie auf Zinsen aus. 41) the year ist die plausible Conjectur eines Anonymus bei den Cambridge Edd. für ten years in der Fol. — Die meisten Hgg. ändern mit Hammer two in ten um. 42) scil. one must do ill. 43) Die Agraffe am Hut und der Zahnstocher, der ebenfalls von Stützern am Hute getragen wurde, bezeichnen hier eine schon vorübergegangene Mode. — to wear = getragen werden, in der Mode sein, setzte Capell für were der Fol. 44) date = Lebensalter, Lebensdauer, und = Dattel. Dasselbe Wortspiel in Troilus and Cressida (A. 1, Sc. 2) to be baked with no date in the pie, for then the man's date's out. 45) Der Sinn dieser elliptischen Worte ist wahrscheinlich der, dass Helena das Capitel von der Jungfernschaft im Gespräche abbrechen und auf ein andres Capitel, auf Bertram's künftiges Leben am Hofe, übergehen will. — Das folgende there deutet in unbestimmter Hinweisung auf den Hof hin und ist aus dem Context verständlich genug, ohne dass es nöthig wäre, Worte, wie die von Hammer vorgeschlagenen you're for the court, vor there einzuschieben. Am Hofe wird Bertram bald eine Geliebte finden, die ihm Alles in Allem sein wird: Mutter, Geliebte, Freund, Führer u. s. w., und die zugleich die widersprechendsten Eigenschaften in sich vereinigt: his humble ambition etc. 46) scil. a dear one, auf traitress bezüglich. Dieses one lässt Sh. oft aus. 47) christendom = Name, den man

Hel. That I wish well. — 'T is pity —

Par. What's pity?

Hel. That wishing well had not a body in 't, Which might be felt;⁴⁸ that we, the poorer born, Whose baser stars do shut us up in wishes, Might with effects of them follow our friends, And show what we alone⁴⁹ must think; which never Returns us thanks.

Par. Little Helen, farewell: if I can remember thee, I will think of thee at court.

Hel. Monsieur Parolles, you were born under a charitable star.

Par. Under Mars, I.

Hel. I especially think, under Mars.

Par. Why under Mars?

Hel. The wars have so kept you under, that you must needs be born under Mars.

Par. When he was predominant.

Hel. When he was retrograde, I think, rather.

Par. Why think you so?

Hel. You go so much backward, when you fight.

Par. That's for advantage.⁵⁰

Hel. So is running away, when fear proposes the safety. But the composition that your valour and fear makes in you is a virtue of a good wing,⁵¹ and I like the wear well.

Par. I am so full of businesses, I cannot answer thee acutely. I will return perfect courtier; in the which my instruction shall serve to naturalize⁵² thee, so thou wilt be capable of a courtier's counsel, and understand what advice shall thrust upon thee; else thou diest in thine unthankfulness, and thine ignorance makes thee away: farewell. Hel. Our remedies oft in ourselves do lie, Which we ascribe to heaven: the fated sky⁵³

Gives us free scope; only, doth backward pull Our slow designs, when we ourselves are dull. What power is it which mounts my love so high; That makes me see, and cannot feed mine eye? The mightiest space in fortune nature brings To join like likes, and kiss like native things.⁵⁴ Impossible be strange attempts to those That weigh their pains in sense, and do suppose, What hath been cannot be.⁵⁵ Who ever strove To show her merit, that did miss her love? The king's disease — my project may deceive me, But my intents are fix'd, and will not leave me. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

Paris. A Room in the King's Palace.

Flourish of cornets. Enter the KING of France, with letters; Lords and Others attending.

King. The Florentines and Senoys¹ are by the ears; Have fought with equal fortune, and continue A braving war.

1. Lord. So 't is reported, Sir.

King. Nay, 't is most credible: we here receive it² A certainty, vouch'd from our cousin Austria, With caution, that the Florentine will move us For speedy aid; wherein our dearest friend Prejudicates the business, and would seem To have us make denial.

1. Lord. His love and wisdom, Approv'd so to your majesty, may plead For amplest credence.

King. He hath arm'd our answer, And Florence³ is denied before he comes: Yet, for our gentlemen, that mean to see The Tuscan service, freely have they leave To stand on either part.

2. Lord. It may well serve A nursery to our gentry, who are sick For breathing and exploit.⁴

King. What's he comes here?

Enter BERTRAM, LAFEU, and PAROLLES.

1. Lord. It is the count Rousillon, my good lord, Young Bertram.

in der Taufe erhält, hier = die verschiedenen, von Amor als Taufpathen eingegebenen und willkürlich angenommenen (adoptious) Beinamen, mit welchen Bertram seine Geliebte am Hofe bezeichnen wird, wie eine Reihe solcher Namen in der vorhergehenden Aufzählung bis auf his sweet disaster schon vorgekommen ist. 48) Dass die guten Wünsche, mit denen ich Bertram geleite, sich nicht in körperlicher Gestalt darstellen lassen. 49) alone gehört zu think: das offen darlegen oder bethätigen, was wir bloss denken dürfen. 50) Das geschieht, um mit desto günstigerer Chance fechten zu können. 51) of a good wing, eigentlich von einem Jagdfalken gebraucht, der gut fliegt, hier zweideutig in Bezug auf die Neigung des Parolles zum Weglaufen. 52) to naturalize = naturalisieren, einbürgern, ist in Verbindung mit courtier aufzufassen. Parolles will die Helena in Hofmanieren einweihen, wenn sie dafür empfänglich ist. — capable und thrust upon thee ist mit obscönem Nebensinne zu verstehen. 53) Der Himmel, dem unser Schicksal anvertraut ist, lässt uns freien Spielraum. 54) Selbst den mächtigsten Zwischenraum im Glück, d. h. selbst Wesen, die in ihren Glücksstellungen der grösste Zwischenraum scheidet, bringt die Natur dazu, sich zu vereinigen, wie Gleiches sich zu Gleichem gesellt, und sich innig zu berühren, wie Geschöpfe, die einander durch Geburt angehören, die sich nicht fremd sind. 55) Auffallende, kühne Unternehmungen erscheinen Denen als unmöglich, welche die darauf verwandten Anstrengungen achtsam prüfen und erwägen, und welche daran zweifeln, dass das, was doch schon geschehen ist, wie z. B. die Ausgleichung verschiedener Glücksstellungen, von der ebenvorhin die Rede war, nicht auch abermals geschehen könnte.

1) Die Einwohner von Siena in Toscana, Sanesi im Italienischen, was schon Paynter mit Senois übersetzt, eigentlich französisch Siennois. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 437. 2) Der König verweist auf den Brief vom österreichischen Herzog, den er in der Hand hält. 3) Florence ist hier, wie vorher the Florentine, = der Herzog von Florenz. 4) Der französische Adel sehnt sich krankhaft nach kriegerischen Uebungen und Thaten. 5) curious

King. Youth, thou bear'st thy father's face;
Frank nature, rather curious⁵ than in haste,
Hath well compos'd thee. Thy father's moral parts
May'st thou inherit too! Welcome to Paris.

Ber. My thanks and duty are your majesty's.

King. I would I had that corporal soundness now,
As when thy father, and myself, in friendship
First tried our soldiership. He did look far Into the service of the time,⁶ and was
Disciplined of the bravest: he lasted long;
But on us both did haggish age steal on,
And wore us out of act. It much repairs⁷ me
To talk of your good father. In his youth
He had the wit, which I can well observe
To-day in our young lords; but they may jest,
Till their own scorn return to them unnoted,
Ere they can hide their levity in honour.⁸
So like a courtier, contempt nor bitterness
Were in his pride, or sharpness;⁹ if they were,
His equal had awak'd them; and his honour,
Clock to itself, knew the true minute when Exception bid him speak, and at this time
His tongue obey'd his hand:¹⁰ who were below him
He us'd as creatures of another place,¹¹
And bow'd his eminent top to their low ranks,
Making them proud of his humility,
In their poor praise he humbled.¹² Such a man
Might be a copy to these younger times,
Which, follow'd well, would demonstrate¹³ them now
But goes backward.

Ber. His good remembrance, Sir,
Lies richer in your thoughts, than on his tomb:
So in approof lives not his epitaph,
As in your royal speech.¹⁴

King. 'Would I were with him! He would always say, (Methinks, I hear him now: his plausible words
He scatter'd not in ears, but grafted them,
To grow there, and to bear.)¹⁵ — »Let me not live,« —
Thus¹⁶ his good melancholy oft began,
On the catastrophe and heel of pastime,

When it was out, — »Let me not live,« quoth he,
»After my flame lacks oil, to be the snuff
Of younger spirits, whose apprehensive senses
All but new things disdain; whose judgments are Mere fathers of their garments;¹⁷ whose constancies
Expire before their fashions.« — This he wish'd:
I, after him, do after him wish too,¹⁸
Since I nor wax, nor honey, can bring home,
I quickly were dissolved from my hive,
To give some labourers room.

2. Lord. You are lov'd, Sir;
They, that least lend it¹⁹ you, shall lack you first.

King. I fill a place, I know 't. — How long is 't, count,
Since the physician at your father's died?
He was much fam'd.

Ber. Some six months since, my lord.

King. If he were living, I would try him yet: —
Lend me an arm: — the rest²⁰ have worn me out
With several applications: nature and sickness
Debate it at their leisure. Welcome, count;
My son's no dearer.

Ber. Thank your majesty. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter COUNTESS, Steward, and Clown.

Count. I will now hear: what say you of this gentlewoman?

Stew. Madam, the care I have had to even¹ your content, I wish might be found in the calendar of my past endeavours; for then we wound our modesty, and make foul the clearness of our deservings, when of ourselves we publish them.

Count. What does this knave here? Get you gone, sirrah: the complaints I have heard of you, I do not all believe: 't is my slowness, that I do not; for I know you lack not folly to commit them,² and have ability enough to make such knaveries yours.

= der von sich und Andern nicht leicht befriedigt ist, sorgsam und anspruchsvoll. So hat die Natur auf Bertram allen Fleiss verwandt und nicht eilfertig gearbeitet, als sie ihn schuf. 6) Er hatte eine tiefe Einsicht und Erfahrung in dem Kriegsdienst seiner Zeit. 7) to repair = wiederbeleben, wiederherstellen. 8) Die jetzigen jungen Herren witzeln und spotten wohl, aber ihr Spott fällt unbeachtet auf sie zurück, da sie ihren Scherz und Leichtsinns nicht mit einer ehrenvollen Stellung zu decken oder zu vertreten wissen. 9) contempt, vor welchem Worte neither zu suppliren ist, gehört zu pride, wie bitterness zu sharpness: Er war ein so ächter Hofmann, im besten Sinne des Wortes, dass sein Stolz nichts von Verachtung, seine Schärfe im Reden oder Urtheilen nichts von Bitterkeit an sich hatte. 10) hand = der Zeiger an der Uhr, ist mit dem vorhergehenden clock durch his verbunden, das Sh. überall für its gebraucht. Seine Zunge gehorchte dem Winke seiner Ehre, sobald diese ihm gebot zu reden. 11) Geschöpfe von einem andern Range als dem seinigen, denen er demgemäss nicht so auf gleichem Terrain entgegenzutreten konnte, wie seines Gleichen (his equal). 12) humbled ist Particip: indem er gedemüthigt wurde in dem armen Lobe dieser Niedriggestellten. — Staunton vermuthet be humbled für he humbled, fasst also auch humbled als Particip. 13) to demonstrate betont Sh. bald auf der ersten, bald auf der zweiten Sylbe. 14) his epitaph lives ist mit Sh. scher Kühnheit gesagt für he in his epitaph lives: in solcher Anerkennung lebt mein Vater nicht in seiner Grabschrift fort wie in Eurer königlichen Rede; seine Grabschrift erhält seinen Ruhm nicht so dauernd, wie er in Euern Worten fortbesteht. — approof = Anerkennung, Geltung. 15) Seine beifällig aufgenommenen Worte waren nicht wie Samenkörner, die man ausstreut, sondern wie Schösslinge, die man dem Ohr oder dem Baum einimpft, damit sie wachsen und Früchte tragen. — Zu plausible vgl. A. 4, Sc. 1, Anm. 5. 16) thus ist Pope's Emendation für this der Fol. — Zwei Zeilen weiter bezieht sich it in when it was out offenbar auf das ebenvorhergegangene pastime: wenn der Spass zu Ende war; und Staunton's Conjectur, wit für it, zu lesen, scheint überflüssig. 17) Der Verstand der jungen Leute wird nur auf Erzeugung ihrer Kleider verwandt, dient nur dazu, neue Trachten zu erfinden, und sie wechseln ihren Sinn oder Entschluss noch rascher, als sie ihre Moden wechseln. 18) Ich, der ich hinter ihm zurückgeblieben bin auf Erden, wünsche auch nach seinem Vorbild, dass ich bald erlöst wäre. 19) it bezieht sich auf das folgende lack: die es am wenigsten zugestehen, dass sie Euch vermissen werden. 20) Die übrigen Aerzte, die ich bisher gebraucht habe.

Clo. 'T is not unknown to you, Madam, I am a poor fellow.

Count. Well, Sir.

Clo. No, Madam; 't is not so well, that I am poor, though many of the rich are damned. But, if I may have your ladyship's good will to go to the world,³ Isbel, the woman,⁴ and I will do as we may.

Count. Wilt thou needs be a beggar?

Clo. I do beg your good will in this case.

Count. In what case?

Clo. In Isbel's case, and mine own. Service is no heritage,⁵ and, I think, I shall never have the blessing of God, till I have issue of my body, for they say, barnes are blessings.

Count. Tell me thy reason why thou wilt marry.

Clo. My poor body, Madam, requires it: I am driven on by the flesh, and he must needs go, that the devil drives.

Count. Is this all your worship's reason?

Clo. 'Faith, Madam, I have other holy reasons, such as they are.

Count. May the world know them?

Clo. I have been, Madam, a wicked creature, as you and all flesh and blood are; and, indeed, I do marry that I may repent.

Count. Thy marriage, sooner than thy wickedness.

Clo. I am out o' friends, Madam; and I hope to have friends for my wife's sake.

Count. Such friends are thine enemies, knave.

Clo. You are shallow, Madam; e'en⁶ great friends; for the knaves come to do that for me, which I am aweary of. He that ears my land spares my team, and gives me leave to inn⁷ the crop: if I be his cuckold, he 's my drudge. He that comforts my wife is the cherisher of my flesh and blood; he that cherishes my flesh and blood loves my flesh and blood; he that loves my flesh and blood is my friend: ergo he that kisses my wife is my friend. If men could be contented to be what they are, there were no fear in marriage; for young Charbon the puritan, and old Poysam the papist,⁸ howsome'er their hearts are severed in religion, their heads are both one; they may joll horns together, like any deer i' the herd.

Count. Wilt thou ever be a foul-mouthed and calumnious knave?

Clo. A prophet I, Madam; and I speak the truth the next way:⁹

For I the ballad will repeat,

Which men full true shall find;

Your marriage comes by destiny,

Your cuckoo sings by kind.¹⁰

Count. Get you gone, Sir: I'll talk with you more anon.

Stew. May it please you, Madam, that he bid Helen come to you: of her I am to speak.

Count. Sirrah, tell my gentlewoman, I would speak with her; Helen I mean.¹¹

Clo. Was this fair face the cause, quoth she,

Why the Grecians sacked Troy?

Fond¹² done, done fond,

Was this king Priam's joy?

With that she sighed as she stood,¹³

With that she sighed as she stood,

And gave this sentence then;

Among nine bad if one be good,

Among nine bad if one be good,

There 's yet one good in ten.

Count. What! one good in ten? you corrupt the song, sirrah.

Clo. One good woman in ten, Madam, which is a purifying o' the song.¹⁴ 'Would God would serve the world so all the year! we'd find no fault with the tithe-woman,¹⁵ if I were the parson. One in ten, quoth 'a! an

1) to even mit dem Accusativ = gleichkommen einer Sache, ihr entsprechen. 2) them bezieht Mason auf das erst nachfolgende knaveries, eine Construction, die kaum thunlich erscheint. Richtiger verbindet Heath das Wort mit dem vorhergehenden complaints, mit dem Begriffswechsel: Gegenstand der Klage, für Klage selbst. — Zwischen folly und ability besteht ein Gegensatz. 3) to go to the world = sich der Welt, dem Leben in der Welt zuwenden, wird auch sonst = sich verheirathen, gebraucht. So in Much Ado about Nothing (A. 2, Sc. 1) thus goes every one to the world but I. 4) Die Apposition the woman deutet auf das englische Trauungsformular hin, in welchem die Braut so bezeichnet wird. — Grant White liest your woman. — Für das folgende I hat die Fol. w, in der zweiten Folioausg. verbessert. 5) Der Narr citirt hier drei verschiedene Sprichwörter. Das dritte lautet eigentlich Needs must when the devil drives. 6) e'en verbesserte Hanmer das in der Fol., welche auch an andern Stellen in für e'en, oder e'n in älterer Orthographie, setzt. Die alte Lesart you are shallow in great friends erklärt Johnson etwas gezwungen mit you are not deeply skilled in the character or offices of great friends. 7) to ear = pflügen; ackern; to inn = unter Dach bringen. 8) Charbon und Poysam sind fingirte Namen, ohne eine nachweisliche Beziehung auf bestimmte Persönlichkeiten der Zeit. Charbon = Kohle, bezeichnet vielleicht den Feuereifer der Puritaner, und Poysam mag entstellt sein aus poison. — Eine sinnreiche Vermuthung stellen die Cambridge Edd. auf: Is it possible that Shakespeare may have written „Chair bonne“ and „Poisson“, alluding to the respective lenten fare of the Puritan and the Papist? — howsome'er (how somere in der Fol.) verändern manche Hgg. stillschweigend in howsoe'er. 9) the next way = geradeswegs, auf dem nächsten Wege. 10) Steevens citirt dazu aus John Grange's Garden (1577) folgende Verse, die bei Sh. nur etwas modificirt sind: Content yourself as well as I, let reason rule your mind: || As cuckolds come by destiny, so cuckoos sing by kind. 11) Der Name Helen erinnert den Narren an eine Ballade von der griechischen Helena und der Zerstörung Troja's, und er singt einige Verse daraus, jedoch theils sie verstümmelnd, theils travestirend, wie der vierte Vers sich offenbar nicht auf die Helena, sondern auf Paris bezieht. — Malone hält mit grosser Wahrscheinlichkeit die verloren gegangene Ballade für identisch mit einer, welche 1585 in die Register der Buchhändler eingetragen wurde unter dem Titel The Lamentation of Hecuba and the Ladyes of Troy. 12) fond done = thöricht gehandelt. 13) Die Fol. setzt bis hinter diesen Vers, den der Narr also zweimal singt. 14) Der Schluss des Liedes, dessen Text der Narr auf diese Weise zu reinigen meint, lautet eigentlich There 's yet nine good in ten. 15) tithe-woman = die zehnte Frau, und = die Frau, die den Zehnten entrichtet oder die man als Zehnten erhält. Auf die zweite Bedeutung des Wortspiels bezieht sich the parson = der Pfarrer, der den Zehnten erhält. 16) for emendirt Knight das ore der Fol. — Die Erscheinung eines Kometen, die immer

we might have a good woman born but for ¹⁶ every blazing star, or at an earthquake, 't would mend the lottery well: a man may draw his heart out, ere he pluck one.

Count. You 'll be gone, sir knave, and do as I command you!

Clo. That man should be at woman's command, and yet no hurt done! — Though honesty be no puritan, yet it will do no hurt; it will wear the surplice of humility over the black gown of a big heart. ¹⁷ — I am going, forsooth: the business is for Helen to come hither.

[Exit.

Count. Well, now.

Stew. I know, Madam, you love your gentlewoman entirely. ¹⁸

Count. 'Faith, I do: her father bequeathed her to me; and she herself, without other advantage, may lawfully make title to as much love as she finds: there is more owing her than is paid, and more shall be paid her than she 'll demand.

Stew. Madam, I was very late more near her than, I think, she wished me: alone she was, and did communicate to herself, her own words to her own ears; she thought, I dare vow for her, they touched not any stranger sense. ¹⁹ Her matter was, she loved your son: Fortune, she said, was no goddess, that had put such difference betwixt their two estates; Love, no god, that would not extend his might, only where qualities were level; ²⁰ Diana, no queen of virgins, that would suffer her poor knight ²¹ surprised, without rescue in the first assault, or ransom afterward. This she delivered in the most bitter touch of sorrow, that e'er I heard virgin exclaim in; which I held my duty speedily to acquaint you withal, sithence ²² in the loss that may happen, it concerns you something to know it.

Count. You have discharged this honestly: keep it to yourself. Many likelihoods informed me of this before, which hung so tottering in the balance, that I could neither believe, nor misdoubt. Pray you, leave me: stall this in your bosom, and I thank you for your honest care. I will speak with you further anon. [Exit Steward. ²³

Count. Even so it was with me, when I was young. If ever we are nature's, these ²⁴ are ours; this thorn doth to our rose of youth rightly belong; Our blood to us, this to our blood is born: It is the show and seal of nature's truth, Where love's strong passion is impress'd in youth: By our remembrances of days foregone, Such were our faults; or then we thought them none. ²⁵

Enter HELENA.

Her eye is sick on 't: I observe her now. ²⁶

Hel. What is your pleasure, Madam?

Count. You know, Helen, I am a mother to you.

Hel. Mine honourable mistress.

Count. Nay, a mother.

Why not a mother? When I said, a mother, Methought you saw a serpent: what 's in mother, That you start at it? I say, I am your mother, And put you in the catalogue of those That were enwombed mine. 'T is often seen, Adoption strives with nature; and choice breeds A native slip to us from foreign seeds; ²⁷ You ne'er oppress'd me with a mother's groan, ²⁸ Yet I express to you a mother's care. — God's mercy, maiden! does it curd thy blood, To say, I am thy mother? ²⁹ What 's the matter, That this distemper'd messenger of wet, The many-colour'd Iris, ³⁰ rounds thine eye? — Why? that you are my daughter?

Hel. That I am not.

Count. I say, I am your mother.

Hel. Pardon, Madam;

The count Rousillon cannot be my brother: I am from humble, he from honour'd name; No note upon my parents, his all noble: My master, my dear lord he is; and I His servant live, and will his vassal die. He must not be my brother.

Count. Nor I your mother?

auffallende Ereignisse vorbedeuten soll, bezeichnet hier die Geburt einer guten Frau als ein solches seltenes Wunder. Ebenso ist ein Erdbeben ein Omen wunderbarer Ereignisse. 17) Der Narr vergleicht den Widerwillen, mit dem er sich dem Willen seiner Gebieterin fügt und ihren Befehl vollführt, mit dem Widerwillen, den die Puritaner gegen den in der englischen Kirche üblichen weissen Chorrock hegten, statt des schwarzen Talars, den sie vorzogen. — Tyrwhitt wollte lesen though honesty be a puritan. Indess gebraucht Sh. die Negation in Verbindung mit Partikeln wie less, though und ähnlichen mit grosser Lizenz. — humility = Demuth, steht im Gegensatz zu big heart = Trotz. 18) entirely = aufrichtig, von ganzem Herzen. 19) Helena war überzeugt, dass ihr Selbstgespräch keinem Fremden zu Gehör käme. — stranger = fremd, als Adjectiv. 20) Amor sei kein Gott, da er seine Macht nicht zeigen wollte, nur da zeigen wollte, wo die Verhältnisse der Liebenden auf gleichem Range ständen. — Bei Sh.'s willkürlichem Gebrauche der Negationen (vgl. oben Anm. 17) ist es jedoch denkbar, dass es eigentlich heissen müsste that would extend his might only etc. — Die folgenden Worte Diana, no fügte Theobald in den ohne sie sinnlosen Text der Fol. ein, dem Rowe weniger gut hatte aufhelfen wollen, indem er complain'd against the vor queen of virgins einschob. 21) Manche Hgg. ändern to be surprised ohne Grund, da Dyce dieselbe Construction auch bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen nachweist; so in Greene's Penelope's Web: Least we should be spotted with the stain of ingratitude, in suffering the princess' injury unrevenged. 22) sithence, veraltet für since, von Sh. hier geflissentlich in dem gesuchten Style des Steward gebraucht. 23) Die Fol. und die meisten Hgg. lassen die Helena schon hier auftreten. Vgl. A. I, Sc. 1, Anm. 28. 24) these steht dem we und ours entsprechend für this, ohne dass ein bestimmtes Subject hinzuzudenken wäre. — Pope liess des Verses wegen ever vor we are aus. Plausibler vermuthen die Cambridge Edd. e'er dafür. 25) Nach der Erinnerung, die mir von den vergangenen Tagen geblieben ist, waren meine Fehler eben solcher Art, oder es geschah, dass wir sie damals nicht für Fehler hielten. 26) Wie ich sie jetzt beobachte, sieht man ihr Leiden ihrem Auge an. 27) Durch Wahl oder Adoption ziehen wir oft ein Reis aus fremdem Samen auf, als ob es uns eigen oder angeboren wäre. 28) a mother's groan = das Gestöhn der Mutter in Kindesnöthen. So in K. Richard III. (A. 4, Sc. 4) save for a night of groans || Endur'd of her, for whom you bid like sorrow. — Zugleich ist oppress'd und express einander als lautähnlich gegenübergestellt. 29) Wenn ich sage, dass ich Deine Mutter sei. 30) Das in

Hel. You are my mother, Madam: 'would you were (So that my lord, your son, were not my brother)
Indeed my mother! — or were you both our mothers,³¹
I care no more for, than I do for heaven,
So I were not his sister. Can't no other,³²
But, I your daughter, he must be my brother?

Count. Yes, Helen, you might be my daughter-in-law.
God shield, you mean it not! daughter, and mother,
So strive upon your pulse.³³ What, pale again?
My fear hath catch'd your fondness: now I see
The mystery of your loneliness,³⁴ and find
Your salt tears' head.³⁵ Now to all sense 't is gross,
You love my son: invention is asham'd,³⁶
Against the proclamation of thy passion,
To say, thou dost not: therefore tell me true;
But tell me then, 't is so: — for, look, thy cheeks
Confess it, the one to the other; and thine eyes
See it so grossly shown in thy behaviours,
That in their kind they speak it: only sin,
And hellish obstinacy tie thy tongue,
That truth should be suspected. Speak, is 't so?
If it be so, you have wound a goodly clue;³⁷
If it be not, forswear 't: howe'er, I charge thee,
As heaven shall work in me for thine avail,
To tell me truly.

Hel. Good Madam, pardon me.

Count. Do you love my son?

Hel. Your pardon, noble mistress.

Count. Love you my son?

Hel. Do not you love him, Madam?

Count. Go not about: my love hath in 't a bond,
Whereof the world takes note.³⁸ Come, come, disclose
The state of your affection, for your passions
Have to the full appeach'd.³⁹

Hel. Then, I confess,
Here on my knee, before high heaven and you,

That before you, and next unto high heaven,
I love your son. —
My friends⁴⁰ were poor, but honest; so 's my love:
Be not offended, for it hurts not him,
That he is lov'd of me. I follow him not
By any token of presumptuous suit;
Nor would I have him, till I do deserve him,
Yet never know how that desert should be.
I know I love in vain, strive against hope;
Yet, in this captious⁴¹ and intemible sieve,
I still pour in the waters of my love,
And lack not to lose still.⁴² Thus, Indian-like,⁴³
Religious in mine error, I adore
The sun, that looks upon his worshipper,
But knows of him no more. My dearest Madam,
Let not your hate encounter with my love,
For loving where you⁴⁴ do: but, if yourself,
Whose aged honour cites⁴⁵ a virtuous youth,
Did ever, in so true a flame of liking,
Wish chastely, and love dearly, that your Dian⁴⁶
Was both herself and Love: O! then, give pity
To her, whose state is such, that cannot choose
But lend and give where she is sure to lose;
That seeks not to find that her search implies,
But, riddle-like, lives sweetly where she dies.

Count. Had you not lately an intent, speak truly,
To go to Paris?

Hel. Madam, I had.

Count. Wherefore? tell true.

Hel. I will tell truth; by grace itself I swear.
You know, my father left me some prescriptions
Of rare and prov'd effects, such as his reading
And manifest⁴⁷ experience had collected
For general sovereignty: and that he will'd me
In heedfull'st reservation to bestow them,⁴⁸
As notes, whose faculties inclusive were,

Thränen schwimmende Auge in seinem feuchten Glanze wird mit dem Regenbogen, den die Sonne in dem Regen bildet, verglichen. 31) Wäret Ihr unser Beider Mutter, meine und des Grafen Mutter, so würde mir daran eben so viel gelegen sein, wie mir am Himmel, an meinem Seelenheil gelegen ist, so würde ich das eben so hoch schätzen, wenn ich nur nicht zugleich Bertram's Schwester sein müsste. — Der Plural mothers steht vermöge der Attraction des pluralischen both our, wie in Romeo and Juliet (A. 2, Sc. 3) both our remedies = unser Beider Heilmittel. — Diesen Satz von 'would you were bis his sister spricht die Helena vielleicht halb bei Seite. 32) Zu can't ist aus dem Folgenden be zu suppliren, und other ist = otherwise: kann es auf keine andere Weise geschehen, als dass, indem ich Eure Tochter bin, er mein Bruder sein muss? 33) Der Gedanke, dass Du meine Tochter seist, und der, dass ich Deine Mutter sei, wirken um die Wette gewaltig auf Deinen Pulsschlag. 34) loneliness = Hang zur Einsamkeit, ist Theobald's Emendation für loveliness (loveliness) der Fol. 35) Die Quelle Eurer bitteren, salzigen Thränen. 36) ashamed ist mit dem folgenden to say zu verbinden: der lauten Verkündigung Deiner Leidenschaft gegenüber, die sich in Deinen Mienen verräth, schämt die Heuchelei oder Verstellung sich, es abzuleugnen, vermagst Du Dich nicht so weit zu verstellen. 37) So hast Du Dich schön verstrickt. 38) Meine Liebe zu Bertram ist auf ein Band des Blutes begründet, das alle Welt kennt und anerkennt. 39) passions = die äussern Symptome innerer Leidenschaft. 40) friends = Verwandte. 41) captious, das Malone mit capable of receiving erklärt, ist wohl eher, der gewöhnlichen Bedeutung des Wortes näher, = trachtend Etwas in sich aufzunehmen: das Sieb verlangt immer nach dem Wasser, das es doch nicht in sich festzuhalten vermag. — Die Fol. hat intemible, was die zweite Folioausg. verbessert. 42) Ich entbehre es nicht, ich lasse mich dadurch nicht irren, wenn ich das Wasser stets vergebens einschütte, wenn ich es immer wieder verliere. 43) Die indischen Sonnenanbeter erwähnt Sh. auch in Love's Labour's Lost (A. 4, Sc. 3) Who sees the heavenly Rosaline, || That, like a rude and savage man of Inde, || At the first opening of the gorgeous east, || Bows not his vassal head? 44) Der Nachdruck liegt auf you: hasst mich nicht, weil ich da liebe, wo Ihr liebt. 45) to cite = künden, aussagen als Zeuge. 46) Malone lässt that your Dian etc. von wish chastely abhängen, welches letztere jedoch wohl absolut und im Gegensatz zu love dearly zu fassen ist: wenn Ihr jemals zugleich keusche Wünsche und zärtliche Liebe hegtet, so dass Diana, die Schutzgöttin Eurer Jungfräulichkeit, zugleich sie selbst und die Göttin der Liebe war. — Love weiblich personificirt als Liebesgöttin hat Sh. auch sonst, so in Antony and Cleopatra (A. 1, Sc. 1) Now, for the love of Love, and her soft hours. 47) manifest = allseitig anerkannt, augenfällig. — general sovereignty = allgemeine Geltung oder Wirkung. 48) in reservation hängt von to bestow ab: sie sorglichst zu bewahren als Aufzeichnungen oder Wahrnehmungen, deren innere Kräfte bedeutender wären, als wofür man

More than they were in note. Amongst the rest,
There is a remedy approv'd, set down
To cure the desperate languishings⁴⁹ whereof
The king is render'd lost.

Count. This was your motive
For Paris, was it? speak.

Hel. My lord, your son, made me to think of this;
Else Paris, and the medicine, and the king,
Had, from the conversation of my thoughts,
Haply been absent then.

Count. But think you, Helen,
If you should tender your supposed aid,
He would receive it? He and his physicians
Are of a mind; he, that they cannot help him,
They, that they cannot help. How shall they credit
A poor unlearned virgin, when the schools,
Embowell'd of their doctrine,⁵⁰ have left off
The danger to itself?

Hel. There 's something in 't,⁵¹
More than my father's skill, which was the greatest
Of his profession, that his good receipt
Shall, for my legacy, be sanctified
By the luckiest stars in heaven: and, would your honour
But give me leave to try success, I 'd venture
The well-lost life of mine on his grace's cure,
By such a day and hour.⁵²

Count. Dost thou believe 't?

Hel. Ay, Madam, knowingly.

Count. Why, Helen, thou shalt have my leave, and love,

Means, and attendants, and my loving greetings
To those of mine in court. I 'll stay at home,
And pray God's blessing into thy attempt.
Be gone to-morrow; and be sure of this,
What I can help thee to, thou shalt not miss.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.

Paris. A Room in the King's Palace.

Flourish. Enter KING, with divers young Lords taking leave for the Florentine war; BERTRAM, PAROLLES, and Attendants.

King. Farewell, young lords: ¹ these warlike principles
Do not throw from you: — and you, my lords, farewell. —

Share the advice betwixt you; if both gain, all
The gift doth stretch itself² as 't is receiv'd,
And is enough for both.

1. Lord. 'T is our hope, Sir,
After well-enter'd soldiers,³ to return
And find your grace in health.

King. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart
Will not confess he owes the malady
That doth my life besiege.⁴ Farewell, young lords;
Whether I live or die, be you the sons
Of worthy Frenchmen: let higher Italy⁵
(Those 'bated, that inherit but the fall
Of the last monarchy,) see, that you come
Not to woo honour, but to wed it: when
The bravest questant⁶ shrinks, find what you seek,
That fame may cry you loud. I say, farewell.

2. Lord. Health, at your bidding, serve your majesty!

King. Those girls of Italy, take heed of them:
They say, our French lack language to deny,
If they demand: beware of being captives,
Before you serve.⁷

Both. Our hearts receive your warnings.

King. Farewell. — Come hither to me.

[*The King retires to a couch.*⁸ sie kannte. 49) Für languishings setzen manche Hgg. willkürlich languishes: das verzweifelte Uebel, an welchem der König für unheilbar krank gilt, für verloren ausgegeben wird. 50) Die medicinischen Schulen haben alle ihre Gelehrsamkeit erschöpft und überlassen nun die lebensgefährliche Krankheit sich selbst. — to embowel = ausweiden. 51) Es steckt Etwas darin, es ist Etwas daran. — Die meisten Hgg. adoptiren dafür Hanmer's Conjectur There 's something hints. 52) Ich würde mein Leben auf's Spiel setzen und gerne verlieren, wenn ich die Heilung Seiner Majestät nicht zu bestimmtem Tag und bestimmter Stunde vollbracht habe. — Die Fol. an hour, von der zweiten Folioausg. verbessert in and hour.

1) Hanmer liest hier und in der folgenden Zeile lord für lords der Fol. Aber in Bezug auf die Bühnenweisung der Fol. with divers young Lords nehmen die Cambridge Edd. mit Recht an, dass der König hier mehr als zwei junge Herren für die Parteinahme auf beiden Seiten im bevorstehenden Kriege beurlaubt. 2) Die gute Unterweisung des Königs, welche die Herren unter sich theilen sollen, wird mit einem dehnbaren Stoffe verglichen, der, in die Länge gezogen, auch getheilt für Mehrere lang genug ist. 3) Nachdem wir wohleingeweihte Soldaten geworden sind. 4) Von der Krankheit, die mein Leben bestürmt, will mein Herz noch nichts wissen. — to owe = zu eigen haben. — he bezieht sich auf das personifizierte heart. 5) higher Italy, das einige Commentatoren auf eine höhere Würde Italiens im Gegensatz zu worthy Frenchmen beziehen, scheint einfach = Oberitalien, zu sein, der Theil Italiens, wohin die Ritter ziehen. Der Sinn wäre also: lasst das obere Italien, abgerechnet darin Diejenigen, welche nur an dem Sturz der letzten Monarchie, des Römerreiches, also nicht an deren früherem Glanze Theil haben, lasst dieses Italien erkennen, dass Ihr kommt, nicht um die Ehre zu werben, sondern sie heimzuführen. — Andere fassen those 'bated etc. als Apposition zu higher Italy = jene zu Boden Geschlagenen u. s. w. 6) questant = Einer der Etwas sucht, hier im Zusammenhange = der die Ehre auf dem Schlachtfelde sucht. — Für questant, das anderswo kaum vorkommt, lesen die spätern Folioausgg. question. 7) to serve = Kriegsdienste thun. 8) Diese Bühnenweisung ist von Capell. — Jedenfalls sind die letzten Worte des Königs an Jemanden gerichtet, mit dem er sich in den Hintergrund der Bühne zurückzieht, während das folgende Gespräch zwischen Bertram und den Rittern vorn auf der Bühne vor sich geht. — Pope lässt den König hinausgehen oder hinausgeführt werden: Exit. 9) the spark = der muntere junge Herr, scil. Bertram, ist Apposition zu his. — Manche Hgg. interpungiren den Satz, als sei er unvollständig: 'T is not his fault; the spark — 10) scil. there is a coil kept with me: man stellt sich so mit mir an und macht solche Beredung, indem man mich für zu jung erklärt und auf's nächste Jahr vertröstet. — Pope streicht jede Interpunction hinter coil with. 11) Die ihm zugedachte Rolle eines Courmachers am Hofe charakterisirt Bertram hier verächtlich als ein Gestell, worauf man ein Weiberhemd

1. Lord. O my sweet lord, that you will stay behind us!
 Par. 'T is not his fault, the spark.⁹
 2. Lord. O, 't is brave wars!
 Par. Most admirable: I have seen those wars.
 Ber. I am commanded here, and kept a coil with,¹⁰ —
 »Too young,« and »the next year«, and »'t is too early«.
 Par. An thy mind stand to 't, boy, steal away bravely.
 Ber. I shall stay here the forehorse to a smock,¹¹
 Creaking my shoes on the plain masonry,
 Till honour be bought up, and no sword worn,
 But one to dance with.¹² By heaven! I'll steal away.
 1. Lord. There 's honour in the theft.¹³
 Par. Commit it, count.
 2. Lord. I am your accessory; and so farewell.
 Ber. I grow to you, and our parting is a tortured body.¹⁴
 1. Lord. Farewell, captain.
 2. Lord. Sweet Monsieur Parolles!
 Par. Noble heroes, my sword and yours are kin. Good sparks and lustrous, a word, good metals: — you shall find in the regiment of the Spinii, one captain Spurio, with his cicatrice, an emblem of war, here on his sinister cheek:¹⁵ it was this very sword entrenched it: say to him, I live, and observe his reports for me.¹⁶
 2. Lord. We shall, noble captain. [Exeunt Lords.
 Par. Mars dote on you for his novices! — What will you do?
 Ber. Stay; the king —¹⁷
 Par. Use a more spacious ceremony to the noble lords: you have restrained yourself within the list of too cold an adieu: be more expressive to them; for they wear themselves in the cap of the time,¹⁸ there do muster true gait, eat, speak, and move under the influence of the most received star; and though the devil lead the measure, such are to be followed. After them, and take a more dilated farewell.

Ber. And I will do so.

Par. Worthy fellows, and like to prove most sinewy swordmen. [Exeunt BERTRAM and PAROLLES.

Enter LAFEU.

Laf. [Kneeling.] Pardon, my lord, for me and for my tidings.

King. I'll fee¹⁹ thee to stand up.

Laf. Then here 's a man stands, that has bought his pardon.

I would, you had kneel'd, my lord, to ask me mercy, And that, at my bidding, you could so stand up.

King. I would I had; so I had broke thy pate, And ask'd thee mercy for 't.

Laf. Good faith, across.²⁰ But, my good lord, 't is thus;

Will you be cur'd of your infirmity?

King. No.

Laf. O! will you eat no grapes, my royal fox?

Yes, but you will my noble grapes,²¹ an if My royal fox could reach them. I have seen a medicine²²

That 's able to breathe life into a stone,

Quicken a rock, and make you dance canary²³

With spritely fire and motion; whose simple touch

Is powerful to araise king Pepin,²⁴ nay,

To give great Charlemain a pen in 's hand,

And write²⁵ to her a love-line.

King. What her is this?

Laf. Why, doctor she.²⁶ My lord, there 's one arriv'd, If you will see her: — now, by my faith and honour, zum Trocknen aufhängt. 12) Wenn der Kampf vorüber, alle Ehre, die dabei zu erwerben war, gleichsam aufgekauft ist und man das Schwert nur zum Putz beim Tanze trägt. Eine andere Anspielung auf diese Mode findet sich in Titus Andronicus (A. 2, Sc. 1) although our mother, unadvis'd, || Gave you a dancing-rapier by your side. 13) theft = Diebstahl, und = das Sich-weg-stehlen. So in Macbeth (A. 2, Sc. 3) There 's warrant in that theft, || Which steals itself, when there 's no mercy left. — Auf theft in diesem Doppelsinn bezieht sich das folgende accessary: ich will Euer Helfershelfer dabei sein. 14) Ich wachse so an Euch fest, dass unsere Trennung ist wie ein Leib, den man bei der Tortur auseinander reisst. 15) sinister = links, sagt Sh. in gesuchter Rede-weise von der Wange auch in Troilus and Cressida (A. 4, Sc. 5) on the dexter cheek, and this sinister. — Die Fol. hat his cicatrice with, von Theobald umgestellt. 16) for me = mich betreffend, oder = zu meinen Gunsten. 17) Die Hgg. fügen die Bühnenweisung hinzu: Seeing him rise und fassen stay als Imperativ. — Da die Fol. interpungirt Stay the king, so vermuthet Collier, es sei zu lesen Stay with the king = ich will beim König bleiben. — Jedenfalls mag stay als Infinitiv die Antwort auf Parolles' Frage sein. 18) Diese jungen Herren spielen jetzt eine so hervorstechende Rolle, als trüge die Gegenwart sie gleichsam an ihrer Mütze; und in solcher hervorragenden Stellung zeigen sie, wie man gehen, essen, sprechen muss unter dem Einflusse des am meisten geltenden Planeten; wie man sich benehmen muss, wenn man in der Welt Etwas vorstellen will. — Solchen Mustern der Mode nachzufolgen, empfiehlt Parolles dem Bertram, und wenn auch der Teufel den Tanz anführe, wenn es auch zum Teufel gehe. 19) fee ist Theobald's Emendation für see der Fol., und in Uebereinstimmung damit bought für brought der Fol. in der folgenden Zeile: Lafeu hat sich die Vergünstigung, die er vom König sich erbat, erkauft, indem er aufgestanden ist, also das gethan, womit der König, der selbst nicht stehen kann, ihn bezahlen wollte. — Einer weniger gesuchten Deutung als Theobald's Lesart bedarf die von Staunton adoptirte: I'll sue thee to stand up, wobei das brought in der folgenden Zeile unverändert bleibt. — Staunton citirt dazu eine Parallelstelle aus K. Richard II. (A. 5, Sc. 3) Good aunt, stand up. — I do not sue to stand. 20) across = verkehrt, gefehlt! eigentlich ein Ausruf beim Lanzenspiel, wenn die geworfene Lanze ihr Ziel nur von der Seite getroffen hat, steht hier in Bezug auf die Replik des Königs, zugleich doppelsinnig in Verbindung mit broke thy pate across = den Schädel querdurch zerschlagen. 21) scil. you will eat my noble grapes. Unter den Trauben, die nach dem Sprichwort der Fuchs, der sie nicht erreichen kann, für sauer erklärt, versteht Lafeu die Nachricht von der Aussicht auf eine Heilung des Königs. 22) medicine = Arzt. So heisst in Winter's Tale (A. 4, Sc. 3) Camillo the medicine of our house. 23) canary = ein munterer Tanz. Sh. bildet daraus ein Verbum to canary in Love's Labour's Lost (A. 3, Sc. 1). 24) king Pepin als Typus eines längst verstorbenen Königs hat Sh. auch anderswo, so in Love's Labour's Lost (A. 4, Sc. 1) that was a man when king Pepin of France was a little boy. 25) Die Construction ist ungenau, da aus dem Vorhergehenden vor write ein make him supplirt werden muss. — Hanmer las to write. 26) doctor ist ein Titel, den Lafeu der Helena, die er unter she versteht,

If seriously I may convey my thoughts
In this my light deliverance, I have spoke
With one, that in her sex, her years, profession,²⁷
Wisdom, and constancy, hath amaz'd me more
Than I dare blame my weakness.²⁸ Will you see her
(For that is her demand), and know her business?
That done, laugh well at me.

King. Now, good Lafeu,
Bring in the admiration,²⁹ that we with thee
May spend our wonder too, or take off thine,
By wond'ring how thou tookst it.

Laf. Nay, I'll fit you,
And not be all day neither.³⁰ [Exit.]

King. Thus he his special nothing ever prologues.³¹

Re-enter LAFEU, with HELENA.

Laf. Nay, come your ways.

King. This haste hath wings, indeed.

Laf. Nay, come your ways.

This is his majesty, say your mind to him:
A traitor you do look like; but such traitors
His majesty seldom fears. I am Cressid's uncle,³²
That dare leave two together. Fare you well. [Exit.]

King. Now, fair one, does your business follow us?³³

Hel. Ay, my good lord.
Gerard de Narbon was my father,
In what he did profess well found.³⁴

King. I knew him.

Hel. The rather will I spare my praises towards him;
Knowing him, is enough. On 's bed of death
Many receipts he gave me; chiefly one,
Which, as the dearest issue of his practice,
And of his old experience the only darling,³⁵
He bade me store up as a triple eye,³⁶
Safer than mine own two, more dear. I have so;
And, hearing your high majesty is touch'd
With that malignant cause, wherein the honour
Of my dear father's gift stands chief in power,

I come to tender it and my appliance,
With all bound humbleness.

King. We thank you, maiden;

But may not be so credulous of cure,
When our most learned doctors leave us, and
The congregated college³⁷ have concluded
That labouring art can never ransom nature
From her inaidable estate; I say, we must not
So stain our judgment, or corrupt our hope,
To prostitute our past-cure malady
To empirics,³⁸ or to disserve so
Our great self and our credit, to esteem
A senseless help, when help past sense we deem.

Hel. My duty then shall pay me for my pains:
I will no more enforce mine office on you;
Humbly entreating from your royal thoughts
A modest one,³⁹ to bear me back again.

King. I cannot give thee less, to be call'd grateful.
Thou thoughtst to help me, and such thanks I give,
As one near death to those that wish him live;
But what at full I know, thou know'st no part,
I knowing all my peril, thou no art.

Hel. What I can do, can do no hurt to try,
Since you set up your rest 'gainst remedy.⁴⁰
He that of greatest works is finisher,
Oft does them by the weakest minister:
So holy writ in babes hath judgment shown,
When judges have been babes;⁴¹ great floods have flown
From simple sources; and great seas have dried,
When miracles have by the greatest been denied.
Oft expectation fails, and most oft there
Where most it promises; and oft it hits,
Where hope is coldest, and despair most fits.⁴²

King. I must not hear thee: fare thee well, kind maid.
Thy pains, not us'd, must by thyself be paid:
Proffers, not took, reap thanks for their reward.

Hel. Inspired merit so by breath is barr'd.⁴³
It is not so with him that all things knows, scherzhaft ertheilt. 27) profession ist die Aussage der Helena über sich selbst und ihr Versprechen, den König zu heilen. 28) Das Staunen Lafeu's über die Helena ist grösser, als dass er seine Schwäche in dieser Beziehung tadelnd verrathen, als dass er diese Schwäche zu seiner Beschämung eingestehen möchte. — Diese Deutung von Steevens scheint natürlicher, als die gesuchtere M. Mason's: sein Staunen war so gross, dass er es nicht bloss auf Rechnung seiner Schwäche setzen, sondern auf die ausgezeichneten Eigenschaften der Helena schieben möchte. 29) admiration eigentlich hier = die personificirte Bewunderung, dann = der Gegenstand derselben. 30) Ich will nicht den ganzen Tag damit beschäftigt sein, Euch zu helfen; es soll keinen ganzen Tag dauern, dass ich Euern Wunsch erfülle. 31) to prologue = mit einem Prolog einleiten. 32) Lafeu, der die Helena mit dem König zusammenbringt, vergleicht sich scherzhaft mit Pandarus, der den Troilus und die Cressida in Troja verkuppelte und seitdem als Repräsentant aller Gelegenheitsmacherei galt. So in Twelfth-Night (A. 3, Sc. 1) I would play Lord Pandarus of Phrygia, Sir, to bring a Cressida to this Troilus. 33) Geht Euer Geschäft mir nach? Betrifft es mich, was Ihr zu thun habt? 34) well found erklärt Steevens of known, acknowledged excellence. — Es ist vielleicht eher = wohl orientirt, der in Etwas gut Bescheid weiss. 35) Der auserlesene Liebling seiner langjährigen Erfahrung, das Heilmittel, das er in seiner langen Praxis am meisten lieben und schätzen gelernt hatte. 36) triple eye ist mehr als third eye, womit Steevens es erklärt: ein dreifaches Auge, ein Auge, das die beiden natürlichen Augen in sich schliesst und zugleich an Werth übertrifft. 37) scil. college of physicians, wie vorher the schools (vgl. A. 1, Sc. 3, Anm. 50). 38) empirics (empericks in der Fol.) betont Sh. auf der ersten Sylbe. 39) scil. a modest thought. — Helena bittet sich aus, dass der König ehrbar von ihr denke, damit dieser ehrbare Gedanke sie auf ihrem Rückweg geleite. 40) to set up one's rest = Alles an Etwas setzen, hier: da Ihr an allem Heilmittel verzweifelt. 41) Malone citirt dazu aus dem Evangelium Matthäi (Cap. 11, V. 25) die Worte Christi: I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. — Wahrscheinlicher spielte, wie Holt White vermuthet, Sh. auf die biblische Geschichte von Susanna und Daniel an, wie er bei great floods etc. an Moses dachte, der Wasser aus dem Felsen schlug, bei great seas etc. an das rothe Meer beim Durchgang der Kinder Israel's, bei When miracles etc. an Pharao, der die Wunder, die Moses bewirkte, nicht glauben wollte. 42) Die Fol. hat im Widerspruche mit Sinn und Reim shifts, woraus Pope sits machte. Die plausible Emendation fits = sich eignen, passen, ist eine Conjectur Theobald's. 43) Ein blosser Hauch des Mundes, ein blosses Wort, reicht so hin, ein

As 't is with us that square our guess by shows;
But most it is presumption in us, when
The help of heaven we count the act of men.
Dear Sir, to my endeavours give consent;
Of heaven, not me, make an experiment.
I am not an impostor, that proclaim
Myself against the level of mine aim;⁴⁴
But know I think, and think I know most sure,
My art is not past power, nor you past cure.

King. Art thou so confident? Within what space
Hop'st thou my cure?

Hel. The great'st grace lending grace,⁴⁵
Ere twice the horses of the sun shall bring
Their fiery torcher his diurnal ring,⁴⁶
Ere twice in murk and occidental damp
Moist Hesperus hath quench'd his⁴⁷ sleepy lamp;
Or four-and-twenty times the pilot's glass
Hath told the thievish minutes how they pass,⁴⁸
What is infirm from your sound parts shall fly,
Health shall live free, and sickness freely⁴⁹ die.

King. Upon thy certainty and confidence,
What dar'st thou venture?

Hel. Tax of impudence,
A strumpet's boldness, a divulged shame,
Traduc'd by odious ballads;⁵⁰ my maiden's name
Sear'd otherwise; ne worse of worst extended,⁵¹
With vilest torture let my life be ended.

King. Methinks, in thee some blessed spirit doth speak⁵²

His powerful sound, within an organ weak;
And what impossibility would slay
In common sense, sense saves another way.⁵³
Thy life is dear; for all, that life can rate
Worth name of life, in thee hath estimate;
Youth, beauty, wisdom, courage,⁵⁴ all
That happiness and prime⁵⁵ can happy call:
Thou this to hazard, needs must intimate
Skill infinite, or monstrous desperate.⁵⁶

Sweet practiser, thy physic I will try,
That ministers thine own death, if I die.

Hel. If I break time, or flinch in property⁵⁷
Of what I spoke, unpitied let me die,
And well deserv'd. Not helping, death's my fee;
But, if I help, what do you promise me?

King. Make thy demand.

Hel. But will you make it even?

King. Ay, by my sceptre, and my hopes of heaven.⁵⁸

Hel. Then shalt thou give me with thy kingly hand
What husband in thy power I will command:

Exempted be from me the arrogance
To choose from forth the royal blood of France,
My low and humble name to propagate
With any branch or image of thy state;⁵⁹
But such a one, thy vassal, whom I know
Is free for me to ask, thee to bestow.

King. Here is my hand; the premises observ'd,
Thy will by my performance shall be serv'd:
So make the choice of thy own time; for I,
Thy resolv'd patient, on thee still rely.

More should I question thee, and more I must,
Though more to know could not be more to trust,
From whence thou cam'st, how tended on; but rest
Unquestion'd welcome, and undoubted blest. —

Give me some help here, ho! — If thou proceed
As high as word,⁶⁰ my deed shall match thy deed.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Rousillon. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Enter COUNTESS and Clown.

Count. Come on, Sir: I shall now put you to the height of your breeding.¹

Clo. I will show myself highly fed, and lowly taught.
I know, my business is but to the court.

Verdienst, eine Wohlthat wirkungslos zu machen, die vom Himmel eingegeben ist. 44) Ich bin keine Betrügerin, welche sich erklärt oder ausspricht im Widerspruch mit der Richtung ihres Ziels, welche anders spricht, als sie im Sinne hat. — Genau construirt sollte proclaims herself stehen. 45) Denselben Zusammenhang von grace = göttliche Gnade, und grace = Gnade, Huld, hat Sh. in Macbeth (A. 5, Sc. 7) by the grace of Grace. 46) his diurnal ring = durch seinen täglichen Kreislauf. 47) his verbesserte Rowe das her der Fol. 48) Ehe die Sanduhr, die in jeder Stunde umgedreht wird, vier und zwanzig Mal die Minuten gezählt hat, wie sie entweichen. — thievish = sich leise oder diebisch wegschleichend. 49) freely = aus eigenem Antriebe, ungezwungen. 50) Die Bänkelsänger trugen in ihren Gassenbauern vorzugsweise Geschichten von Bösewichtern vor; so in Antony and Cleopatra (A. 5, Sc. 2) and scald rhymers ballad us out o' tune. 51) Und wenn nichts Aergeres vom Aergersten mir erwiesen wird, wenn alles Schlimmste gegen mich entfaltet ist, so lasst mein Leben mit den schlechtesten Martern zu Ende gebracht sein. — ne, veraltet für nor, ändern manche Hgg. mit der zweiten Folioausg. in no um. — Die Cambridge Edd. verzeichnen fast ein Dutzend Conjecturen, mit denen man dieser vermeintlich corrupten Stelle hat aufhelfen wollen. Die plausibelste darunter ist die eines Anonymus: on worst of racks extended. — Staunton vermuthet and, worse of worst expended, || With vilest tortures etc. 52) Nach der Interpunction der Fol. ist his powerful sound Object zu speak. — Die meisten Hgg. setzen hinter speak ein Semikolon und fassen his powerful sound als Subject eines zweiten Satzes, zu dem sie als Verbum aus dem ersten doth speak suppliren. 53) Den Glauben an Deine Wunderkraft, den der gesunde Menschenverstand als eine Unmöglichkeit vernichten würde, den rettet ein anderer, höherer Verstand oder Sinn. 54) Theobald fügte zur Vervollständigung des Verses virtue hinter courage ein, ein Wort, das in diesem Zusammenhange wenig passen will. 55) prime = Jugendfrische, Jugendblüthe. — happiness = glückliche Begabung. 56) Zu monstrous desperate lässt sich dem Sinne nach nicht wohl skill, sondern nur, mit Sh.'scher Lizenz, aus dem vorhergehenden thou ein thee suppliren: dass Du dies Alles auf's Spiel setzest, lässt nothwendig auf unendliche Geschicklichkeit und Begabung in Dir schliessen, oder darauf schliessen, dass Du entsetzlich dreist bist. 57) property = Genauigkeit, Gehörigkeit, hier = die gehörige Vollführung dessen, was ich versprochen habe. 58) heaven ist Thirlby's Emendation für help der Fol. 59) Die Mitglieder der königlichen Familie sind gleichsam Zweige und Abbilder des königlichen Rangs und Throns. — Vgl. Einleitung pag. 436. 60) Wenn Dein Thun so hoch kommt wie Dein Wort, so soll auch meine That, die Erfüllung meines Wortes, Deiner That entsprechen.

Count. To the court! why, what place make you special, when you put off that with such contempt? But to the court!

Clo. Truly, Madam, if God have lent a man any manners, he may easily put it off at court: he that cannot make a leg,² put off 's cap, kiss his hand, and say nothing, has neither leg, hands, lip, nor cap; and, indeed, such a fellow, to say precisely, were not for the court. But, for me, I have an answer will serve all men.

Count. Marry, that 's a bountiful answer, that fits all questions.

Clo. It is like a barber's chair,³ that fits all buttocks; the pin-buttock, the quatch-buttock, the brawn-buttock, or any buttock.

Count. Will your answer serve fit to all questions?

Clo. As fit as ten groats is for the hand of an attorney, as your French crown⁴ for your taffeta punk, as Tib's rush for Tom's forefinger,⁵ as a pancake for Shrove-Tuesday, a morris for Mayday,⁶ as the nail to his hole, the cuckold to his horn, as a scolding quean to a wrangling knave, as the nun's lip to the friar's mouth; nay, as the pudding to his skin.

Count. Have you, I say, an answer of such fitness for all questions?

Clo. From below your duke to beneath your constable, it will fit any question.

Count. It must be an answer of most monstrous size, that must fit all demands.

Clo. But a trifle neither,⁷ in good faith, if the learned should speak truth of it. Here it is, and all that belongs to 't: ask me, if I am a courtier; it shall do you no harm to learn.

Count. To be young again,⁸ if we could. I will be a fool in question, hoping to be the wiser by your answer. I pray you, Sir, are you a courtier?

Clo. O Lord, Sir! — there 's a simple putting off. — More, more, a hundred of them.⁹

Count. Sir, I am a poor friend of yours, that loves you.

Clo. O Lord, Sir! — Thick, thick, spare not me.

Count. I think, Sir, you can eat none of this homely meat.

Clo. O Lord, Sir! — Nay, put me to 't, I warrant you.

Count. You were lately whipped,¹⁰ Sir, as I think.

Clo. O Lord, Sir! — Spare not me.

Count. Do you cry, »O Lord, Sir!« at your whipping, and »spare not me«? Indeed, your »O Lord, Sir!« is very sequent to your whipping: you would answer very well to a whipping, if you were but bound to 't.

Clo. I ne'er had worse luck in my life, in my — »O Lord, Sir!« I see, things may serve long, but not serve ever.

Count. I play the noble housewife with the time,¹¹ To entertain it so merrily with a fool.

Clo. O Lord, Sir! — why, there 't serves well again.

Count. An end, Sir: to your business.¹² Give Helen this,

And urge her to a present answer back:

Commend me to my kinsmen, and my son.

This is not much.

Clo. Not much commendation to them.¹³

Count. Not much employment for you: you understand me?

Clo. Most fruitfully: I am there before my legs.

Count. Haste you again. [Exeunt severally.]

SCENE III.

Paris. A Room in the KING'S Palace.

Enter BERTRAM, LAFEU, and PAROLLES.

Laf. They say, miracles are past; and we have our philosophical persons, to make modern and familiar, things supernatural and causeless.¹ Hence is it, that we make trifles of terrors, ensconcing ourselves into seeming knowledge, when we should submit ourselves to an unknown fear.²

Par. Why, 't is the rarest argument of wonder, that hath shot out in our latter times.

Ber. And so 't is.

1) Die Gräfin fasst breeding = Erziehung, Erlerntes; der Narr fasst das Wort in materiellerem Sinn = Zucht, Aufziehen eines Thieres, und spielt in seiner Antwort auf das Sprichwort an: Better fed than taught. 2) to make a leg = einen Kratzfuss machen. 3) Dass der Stuhl in einer Barbierstube, auf den sich die verschiedenen Kunden niederlassen, Allen bequem sein musste, kommt auch sonst sprichwörtlich vor zur Bezeichnung eines Gegenstandes, der für Jeden passend ist. 4) French crown doppelsinnig = französische Krone, als Münze, und = Lustseuche. — taffata = schillernder Taft als Kleidung für Freudenmädchen, findet sich auch in K. Henry IV. First Part (A. 1, Sc. 2) a fair hot wench in a flame-colour'd taffeta. 5) rush steht für rush ring = ein Ring von Binsen gemacht, der auf dem Lande, häufig bei der Abschliessung leichtfertiger Ehen, als Trauring benutzt wurde. — Tom und Tib sind = Mann und Frau, mit verächtlichem Nebensinne. 6) morris = der Mohrentanz, eine Reihe stehender Figuren, aus altenglischen Sagen und Balladen entlehnt, die herkömmlich am ersten Mai die Strassen der englischen Städte durchzog. 7) Die Antwort, die ich in Bereitschaft habe auf alle Fragen, ist, genau untersucht, doch nur eine Kleinigkeit. — Mit dieser Antwort O Lord, Sir! persifliert Sh. eine Modephrase der Zeit. 8) Mit To be young again etc. ergänzt die Gräfin den letzten Satz des Narren: it shall do you no harm to learn. 9) Legt mir noch hundert solche Fragen vor. — Dasselbe ist auch zu ergänzen zu dem folgenden thick: legt mir viele Fragen dichtgedrängt hintereinander vor. 10) Auf das Durchpeitschen als eine gewöhnliche Züchtigung des Hausnarren, wenn er den Spass zu weit trieb oder sich sonst vergangen hatte, spielt Sh. öfter an; so in As you like it (A. 1, Sc. 2) you 'll be whipped for taxation. 11) Sie geht mit ihrer Zeit so verschwenderisch um, wie eine adelige Dame, die nicht zu sparen braucht. — Diese beiden Verse drucken die meisten Hgg. mit der Fol. als Prosa. 12) Die meisten Hgg. interpungiren An end, Sir, to your business. — Die Fol. hat and end, was erst Rowe verbesserte. 13) Diese Replik des Narren, der die Worte der Gräfin geflissentlich missversteht, ist vielleicht als Frage zu fassen.

1) Die eigentliche Construction wäre: to make supernatural and causeless things modern and familiar. — causeless = ohne nachweisliche Ursache, unerklärlich; modern = alltäglich, gewöhnlich. 2) Wenn wir uns dem Eindruck eines unbekannten Schreckbildes hingeben sollten, so verschanzen wir uns hinter eine Kunde, ein Wissen, das doch nur scheinbar ist. 3) artist = erfahrener Heilkünstler, wie die Heilkunde selbst art heisst.

Laf. To be relinquished of the artists, ³ —
Par. So I say: both of Galen and Paracelsus. ⁴
Laf. Of all the learned and authentic fellows, ⁵ —
Par. Right; so I say.
Laf. That gave him out incurable, —
Par. Why, there 't is; so say I too.
Laf. Not to be helped, —
Par. Right; as 't were a man assured of a —
Laf. Uncertain life, and sure death.
Par. Just, you say well; so would I have said.
Laf. I may truly say, it is a novelty to the world.
Par. It is, indeed: if you will have it in showing, ⁶ you shall read it in — what do you call there? —
Laf. A showing of a heavenly effect in an earthly actor.
Par. That 's it I would have said; the very same.
Laf. Why, your dolphin is not lustier: ⁷ 'fore me, I speak in respect —
Par. Nay, 't is strange, 't is very strange, that is the brief and the tedious of it; and he is of a most facino-rous ⁸ spirit, that will not acknowledge it to be the —
Laf. Very hand of heaven.
Par. Ay, so I say.
Laf. In a most weak —
Par. And debile minister, great power, great transcendence: which should, indeed, give us a further use to be made, than alone the recovery of the king, as to be —
Laf. Generally thankful.
Par. I would have said it; you say well. Here comes the king.

Enter KING, HELENA, and Attendants.

Laf. Lustick, ⁹ as the Dutchman says: I 'll like a maid the better, whilst I have a tooth in my head. Why, he 's able to lead her a coranto. ¹⁰
Par. Mort du vinaigre! Is not this Helen?
Laf. 'Fore God, I think so.
King. Go, call before me all the lords in court. —
[Exit an Attendant.]
 Sit, my preserver, by thy patient's side:
 And with this healthful hand, whose banish'd sense
 Thou hast repeal'd, a second time receive
 The confirmation of my promis'd gift,
 Which but attends thy naming.

Enter several Lords.

Fair maid, send forth thine eye: this youthful parcel
 Of noble bachelors stand at my bestowing,
 O'er whom both sovereign power and father's voice ¹¹
 I have to use: thy frank election make.
 Thou hast power to choose, and they none to forsake. ¹²
Hel. To each of you one fair and virtuous mistress
 Fall, when Love please! — marry, to each, but one. ¹³
Laf. I 'd give bay curtal, ¹⁴ and his furniturè,
 My mouth no more were broken ¹⁵ than these boys',
 And writ as little beard. ¹⁶
King. Peruse them well:
 Not one of those but had a noble father.
Hel. Gentlemen,
 Heaven hath through me restor'd the king to health.
All. We understand it, and thank heaven for you.
Hel. I am a simple maid; and therein wealthiest.
 That, I protest, I simply am a maid. —
 Please it your majesty, I have done already:
 The blushes in my cheeks thus whisper me,
 »We blush, that thou shouldst choose; but, be refus'd, ¹⁷
 Let the white death sit on thy cheek for ever:
 We 'll ne'er come there again.«
King. Make choice; and, see,
 Who shuns thy love, shuns all his love in me.
Hel. Now, Dian, from thy altar do I fly,
 And to imperial Love, that god most high,
 Do my sighs stream. — Sir, will you hear my suit?
 1. Lord. And grant it.
Hel. Thanks, Sir: all the rest is mute. ¹⁸
Laf. I had rather be in this choice, than throw ames-ace for my life. ¹⁹
Hel. The honour, Sir, that flames in your fair eyes,
 Before I speak, too threateningly replies:
 Love make your fortunes twenty times above
 Her that so wishes, and her humble love!
 2. Lord. No better, if you please.
Hel. My wish receive,
 Which great Love grant! and so I take my leave.
Laf. Do all they deny her? ²⁰ An they were sons of mine, I 'd have them whipped, or I would send them to the Turk to make eunuchs of.

4) Mit seiner Kunde von Galen als berühmtem Arzt brüstet sich auch Falstaff in K. Henry IV. Second Part (A. 1, Sc. 2) I have read the cause of his effects in Galen. 5) fellows = Genossen eines gelehrten Collegiums, wie vorher the congregated college vorkam (vgl. A. 2, Sc. 1, Anm. 37). — authentic = der eine Autorität genießt. 6) in showing = in einer geschriebenen Darlegung, deren fingierten Titel Parolles citiren will, ohne sich darauf besinnen zu können; deshalb fährt er fort: Ihr könnt es lesen in — wie nennt Ihr das Buch doch? 7) Ein Delphin, der lustig im Wasser spielt, ist nicht munterer, als der König es jetzt ist. — your in familiärer Redeweise entspricht unserm ethischen Dativ: Euch. 8) facinorous = verrucht. Die Fol. hat facinerious. 9) Dieses Wort kam als eine von den Holländern erlernte Aufforderung zur Fröhlichkeit zu Sh.'s Zeit in England in Gebrauch und wird in verschiedenen Dramen citirt. — Vielleicht dachte Sh. bei the Dutchman auch an eine bestimmte Figur irgend eines Holländers auf der Bühne oder im Leben. 10) coranto = ein rascher, leidenschaftlicher Tanz. So in K. Henry V. (A. 3, Sc. 5) swift corantos. 11) Die jungen Herren, welche auftreten, sind zugleich Unterthanen und Mündel des Königs. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 2. 12) scil. they have no power to forsake thy election. 13) Helena wünscht Jedem eine schöne Braut, nur Einem nicht, nämlich Demjenigen nicht, den sie selbst für sich wählen will. 14) bay curtal = der braune Stutzschwanz, Lafeu's Lieblingspferd. 15) broken = eingebrochen, von den Zahnlücken im Munde: ich gäbe mein Pferd darum, wenn ich noch alle meine Zähne hätte wie diese Knaben, wenn ich also mit um die Helena werben könnte. 16) to write = sich schreiben, sich schriftlich nennen und zu Etwas bekennen, kommt wie hier in to write beard = sich zu einem Barte bekennen, in ähnlichen Wendungen bei Sh. und seinen Zeitgenossen vor. So in K. Henry IV. Second Part (A. 1, Sc. 2) as if he had writ man, in K. Lear (A. 5, Sc. 3) write happy. Der Sinn ist hier: dass mein Mund so wenig bärtig wäre, wie der dieser Knaben. 17) Aber für den Fall, dass Du ausgeschlagen wirst, wenn der Erwählte Dich verschmäht. — be refused ist Imperativ, hier im Sinn eines Conditionalsatzes. 18) Ausser diesem Dank habe ich Euch nichts zu sagen. So in Hamlet (A. 5, Sc. 2) The rest is silence. 19) ames-ace = zwei Ass im Würfelspiel, also der niedrigste

Hel. [To 3. Lord.] Be not afraid that I your hand should take;

I'll never do you wrong for your own sake:
Blessing upon your vows! and in your bed
Find fairer fortune, if you ever wed!

Laf. These boys are boys of ice, they'll none have her: sure, they are bastards to the English; the French re'er got them.

Hel. You are too young, too happy, and too good,
To make yourself a son out of my blood.

4. Lord. Fair one, I think not so.

Laf. There's one grape²¹ yet, — I am sure, thy father drank wine. — But if thou be'st not an ass, I am a youth of fourteen: I have known thee already.

Hel. [To BERTRAM.] I dare not say, I take you; but I give

Me, and my service, ever whilst I live,
Into your guiding power. — This is the man.

King. Why, then, young Bertram, take her; she's thy wife.

Ber. My wife, my liege! I shall beseech your highness,
In such a business give me leave to use
The help of mine own eyes.

King. Know'st thou not, Bertram,
What she has done for me?

Ber. Yes, my good lord;
But never hope to know why I should marry her.

King. Thou know'st, she has rais'd me from my sickly bed.

Ber. But follows it, my lord, to bring me down
Must answer for your raising? I know her well:
She had her breeding at my father's charge.
A poor physician's daughter my wife! — Disdain
Rather corrupt me ever!

King. 'T is only title²² thou disdain'st in her, the which

I can build up. Strange is it, that our bloods,
Of colour,²³ weight, and heat, pour'd all together,

Would quite confound distinction, yet stand off
In differences so mighty. If she be
All that is virtuous (save what thou dislik'st,
A poor physician's daughter), thou dislik'st
Of virtue for the name; but do not so:
From lowest place when²⁴ virtuous things proceed,
The place is dignified by the doer's deed:
Where great additions swell 's,²⁵ and virtue none,
It is a dropsied honour. Good alone
Is good without a name; vileness is so:²⁶
The property by what it is should go,
Not by the title. She is young, wise, fair;
In these to nature she's immediate heir,²⁷
And these breed honour: that is honour's scorn
Which challenges itself as honour's born,²⁸
And is not like the sire: honours thrive,
When rather from our acts we them derive,
Than our foregoers.²⁹ The mere word 's a slave,
Debosh'd³⁰ on every tomb; on every grave,
A lying trophy; and as oft is dumb,
Where dust and damn'd oblivion³¹ is the tomb
Of honour'd bones indeed. What should be said?
If thou canst like this creature as a maid,
I can create the rest: virtue, and she,
Is her own dower; honour and wealth from me.

Ber. I cannot love her, nor will strive to do 't.

King. Thou wrong'st thyself, if thou shouldst strive to choose.³²

Hel. That you are well restor'd, my lord, I'm glad.
Let the rest go.

King. My honour 's at the stake, which to defeat³³
I must produce my power. Here, take her hand,
Proud scornful boy, unworthy this good gift,
That dost in vile misprision shackle up
My love, and her desert; that canst not dream,
We, poisoning us in her defective scale,
Shall weigh thee to the beam;³⁴ that wilt not know,
It is in us to plant thine honour, where Wurf, den Lafeu wirft, wo sein Leben auf dem Spiel steht. 20) Johnson erklärt diese Worte Lafeu's als ein Missverständniss des Redenden, der auf der Bühne zu weit entfernt stand, um zu hören, was zwischen Helena und den jungen Herren in der That vor sich ging. — Vielleicht aber bezeichnet Lafeu in seiner energischen Weise als deny schon die Gelassenheit der jungen Herren, die sich nicht weiter um die Helena bemühen und kein Verlangen nach ihrem Besitze merken lassen. 21) grape, womit Lafeu den letzten noch übrig bleibenden jungen Herrn meint, erklärt er selbst mit den Worten thy father drank wine: Dein Vater hat Dir Feuer eingeflösst, als er Dich erzeugte. — Aber auch diesem traut er nicht zu, dass er um die Helena sich bemühen werde, und fügt deshalb hinzu: But if thou be'st not an ass etc. — Vielleicht gebraucht Lafeu grape auch in demselben sprichwörtlichen Sinne, wie in einer früheren Scene (vgl. A. 2, Sc. 1, Anm. 21). 22) Für title sollte eigentlich das Gegentheil stehen: es ist lediglich Mangel an Rang und Stand, was Du an ihr schmähest. — the which bezieht sich dann auf title in der eigentlichen Bedeutung des Worts. 23) Malone erklärt: our bloods which are of the same colour etc. Richtiger lässt man wohl of colour etc. von dem nachfolgenden distinction abhängen: allen Unterschied in Bezug auf Farbe, Schwere, Wärme. — All unser Blut, adlig und nichtadlig, würde, zusammengegossen, keinen materiellen Unterschied wahrnehmen lassen. 24) when verbesserte Thirlby das whence der Fol. 25) swell 's ist swell us: wo grosstönende Titel uns aufgebläht machen, und keine Verdienste. 26) Wie das Gute schon für sich allein gut ist und keines weitem Namens bedarf, so verhält es sich auch mit dem Schlechten: es bleibt schlecht, wie man es auch nennen möge. 27) Diese Eigenschaften (young, wise, fair) hat sie unmittelbar von der Natur als Erbtheil erhalten. 28) honour's born = ein Gebornes, ein Kind der Ehre. — honour ist hier männlich personificirt, daher like the sire. — sire ist zweisylbig zu lesen, was die späteren Folioausgg. verkannten und darum zur Vervollständigung des Verses best vor thrive einfügten. 29) scil. from our foregoers = von unsern Vorfahren, oder auch from the acts of our foregoers. 30) debosh'd = befleckt, gemein gemacht, ist die Sh.'sche Orthographie, von vielen Hgg. in debauch'd verändert. — the mere word bezieht sich auf honour. 31) Diese Zusammenfügung von dust und oblivion ist auch in K. Henry V. (A. 2, Sc. 4) from the dust of old oblivion rak'd. 32) to choose = wählen, sich die Wahl noch vorbehalten. 33) Für defeat wollte Theobald defend lesen. Aber defeat bezieht sich, wie Farmer richtig erklärt, auf den ganzen Satz: um zu beseitigen, dass meine Ehre auf dem Spiele stehe; um die Gefahr wegzuräumen, in der meine Ehre schwebt. 34) Der Du Dir nicht einfallen lässtest, dass mein Gewicht, in Helena's zu leichte Wagschale gelegt, Dich in der andern Wagschale bis an den Wagebalken in die

We please to have it grow. Check thy contempt:
Obey our will, which travails³⁵ in thy good:
Believe not thy disdain, but presently
Do thine own fortunes that obedient right,
Which both thy duty owes, and our power claims;
Or I will throw thee from my care for ever
Into the staggers³⁶ and the careless lapse
Of youth and ignorance; both my revenge and hate
Loosing upon thee, in the name of justice,
Without all terms of pity. Speak: thine answer.

Ber. Pardon, my gracious lord, for I submit
My fancy to your eyes. When I consider
What great creation, and what dole of honour,
Flies where you bid it, I find that she, which late
Was in my nobler thoughts most base, is now
The praised of the king; who, so ennobled,
Is, as 't were, born so.

King. Take her by the hand,
And tell her, she is thine: to whom I promise
A counterpoise, if not to thy estate,
A balance more replete.³⁷

Ber. I take her hand.

King. Good fortune, and the favour of the king,
Smile upon this contract; whose ceremony
Shall seem expedient on the now-born brief.³⁸
And be perform'd to-night: the solemn feast
Shall more attend upon the coming space,
Expecting absent friends. As thou lov'st her,
Thy love's to me religious, else, does err.

[*Exeunt KING, BERTRAM, HELENA, Lords, and Attendants.*³⁹]

Laf. Do you hear, monsieur? a word with you.

Par. Your pleasure, Sir?

Laf. Your lord and master did well to make his recantation.

Par. Recantation? — My lord? my master?

Laf. Ay; is it not a language I speak?

Par. A most harsh one, and not to be understood without bloody succeeding. My master?

Laf. Are you companion to the count Rousillon?

Par. To any count; to all counts; to what is man.⁴⁰

Laf. To what is count's man: count's master is of another style.

Par. You are too old, Sir: let it satisfy you, you are too old.

Laf. I must tell thee, sirrah, I write man;⁴¹ to which title age cannot bring thee.

Par. What I dare too well do, I dare not do.

Laf. I did think thee, for two ordinaries,⁴² to be a pretty wise fellow: thou didst make tolerable vent of thy travel: it might pass; yet the scarfs, and the bannerets about thee, did manifoldly dissuade me from believing thee a vessel of too great a burden. I have now found thee:⁴³ when I lose thee again, I care not; yet art thou good for nothing but taking up, and that thou 'rt scarce worth.

Par. Hadst thou not the privilege of antiquity upon thee, —

Laf. Do not plunge thyself too far in anger, lest thou hasten thy trial; which if — Lord have mercy on thee for a hen! So, my good window of lattice, fare thee well: thy casement I need not open, for I look through thee. Give me thy hand.

Par. My lord, you give me most egregious indignity.

Laf. Ay, with all my heart; and thou art worthy of it.

Par. I have not, my lord, deserved it.

Laf. Yes, good faith, every drachm of it; and I will not bate thee a scruple.

Par. Well, I shall be wiser.⁴⁴

Laf. E'en as soon as thou canst, for thou hast to pull at a smack o' the contrary. If ever thou be'st bound in thy scarf, and beaten, thou shalt find what it is to be proud of thy bondage. I have a desire to hold my acquaintance with thee, or rather my knowledge, that I may say, in the default,⁴⁵ he is a man I know.

Par. My lord, you do me most insupportable vexation.

Laf. I would it were hell-pains for thy sake, and my poor doing eternal: for doing I am past, as I will⁴⁶ by thee, in what motion age will give me leave. [Exit.]

Par. Well, thou hast a son shall take this disgrace off me, scurvy, old, filthy, scurvy lord! — Well, I must be patient; there is no fettering of authority. I'll beat him, by my life, if I can meet him with any convenience, an he were double and double a lord. I'll have no more pity of his age, than I would have of — I'll beat him: an if I could but meet him again!

Re-enter LAFEU.

Laf. Sirrah, your lord and master's married: there's news for you; you have a new mistress.

Par. I most unfeignedly beseech your lordship to make some reservation of your wrongs: he is my good lord: whom I serve above is my master.⁴⁷

Laf. Who? God?

Höhe schnellen wird. 35) to travail = sich abmühen, sich abarbeiten. 36) staggers = Schwindel: der Schwindel und der aus Mangel an Ueberwachung entstehende Fehltritt (careless lapse), welche der Jugend und Unwissenheit eigen sind. 37) Die Mitgift, welche der König der Helena zusagt, soll, wenn sie nicht so schwer wiegt, wie der Besitz Bertram's, eher ein noch volleres Gewicht ausmachen. 38) now-born brief = die jetzt gleich ausgestellte schriftliche Heirathsvollmacht: sobald diese ausgestellt ist, wird die Feierlichkeit des Ehebündnisses, die Vermählung (ceremony of the contract), rasch vor sich gehen, zur raschen Erscheinung gelangen und noch heute Abend vollzogen werden. — on = unmittelbar auf. — Andere fassen brief, ohne Beziehung auf etwas Schriftliches, = der jetzige kurze Vorgang des mündlichen Verlöbnisses. — Jedenfalls ist der Sinn von brief an dieser Stelle nicht mit völliger Sicherheit zu ermitteln. 39) Die Fol. fügt als fernere Bühnenweisung hinzu: Parolles and Lafeu stay behind, commenting of this wedding. 40) Parolles fasst man im allgemeinen Sinn = Mann: ich bin ein würdiger Gefährte für Alles, was da Mann heisst. — Lafeu nimmt man = Diener. 41) Vgl. Anm. 16 dieser Scene. 42) Da ich zweimal mit Dir an der Wirthstafel gesessen hatte. — ordinary kommt auch bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen als ein Ort vor, wo man die Bekanntschaft von Fremden und Abenteurern, die daselbst ihre Unterhaltungsgabe leuchten liessen, machen konnte. 43) Ich habe jetzt ausgefunden, wie wenig an Dir ist. — to find steht dann im Gegensatz zu to lose = verlieren, und = Jemanden loswerden. — Eben so doppelsinnig ist to take up = Etwas aufheben vom Boden, und = Jemanden vornehmen, zur Rechenschaft ziehen. 44) Weiser als Ihr, versteht Parolles; weiser als bisher, versteht Lafeu. 45) in the default = im Nothfall, wenn es Dir schlecht geht. 46) scil. as I will pass, was als Wortspiel aus dem vorhergehenden past zu suppliren ist: über die Zeit männlicher

Par. Ay, Sir.

Laf. The devil it is, that's thy master. Why dost thou garter up thy arms o' this fashion? dost make hose of thy sleeves?⁴⁸ do other servants so? Thou wert best set thy lower part where thy nose stands. By mine honour, if I were but two hours younger, I'd beat thee: methinks 't,⁴⁹ thou art a general offence, and every man should beat thee: I think, thou wast created for men to breathe themselves upon thee.⁵⁰

Par. This is hard and undeserved measure, my lord.

Laf. Go to, Sir; you were beaten in Italy for picking a kernel out of a pomegranate: you are a vagabond, and no true traveller. You are more saucy with lords and honourable personages, than the commission of your birth and virtue gives you heraldry.⁵¹ You are not worth another word, else I'd call you knave. I leave you. [Exit.]

Par. Good, very good; it is so then: — good, very good. Let it be concealed awhile.

Re-enter BERTRAM.

Ber. Undone, and forfeited to cares for ever!

Par. What is the matter, sweet-heart?

Ber. Although before the solemn priest I have sworn, I will not bed her.

Par. What, what, sweet-heart?

Ber. O my Parolles, they have married me! —

I'll to the Tuscan wars, and never bed her.

Par. France is a dog-hole, and it no more merits the tread of a man's foot. To the wars!

Ber. There's letters from my mother:⁵² what the import is, I know not yet.

Par. Ay, that would be known. To the wars, my boy! to the wars!

He wears his honour in a box, unseen,
That hugs his kicky-wicky⁵³ here at home,
Spending his manly marrow in her arms,
Which should sustain the bound and high curvet
Of Mars's fiery steed. To other regions!
France is a stable; we, that dwell in 't, jades;
Therefore, to the war!

Ber. It shall be so: I'll send her to my house,
Acquaint my mother with my hate to her,
And wherefore I am fled; write to the king
That which I durst not speak. His present gift

Shall furnish me to those Italian fields,⁵⁴
Where noble fellows strike. War is no strife
To the dark house, and the detested wife.⁵⁵

Par. Will this capriccio hold in thee, art sure?

Ber. Go with me to my chamber, and advise me.

I'll send her straight away: to-morrow

I'll to the wars, she to her single sorrow.⁵⁶

Par. Why, these balls bound; there's noise in it; 't is hard.

A young man married is a man that's marr'd:⁵⁷

Therefore away, and leave her: bravely go;

The king has done you wrong; but, hush! 't is so.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

The Same. Another Room in the Same.

Enter HELENA and Clown.

Hel. My mother greets me kindly: is she well?

Clo. She is not well; but yet she has her health: she's very merry; but yet she is not well: but thanks be given, she's very well, and wants nothing i' the world; but yet she is not well.

Hel. If she be very well, what does she ail, that she's not very well?

Clo. Truly, she's very well, indeed, but for two things.

Hel. What two things?

Clo. One, that she's not in heaven, whither God send her quickly! the other, that she's in earth, from whence God send her quickly!

Enter PAROLLES.

Par. Bless you, my fortunate lady!

Hel. I hope, Sir, I have your good will to have mine own good fortunes.¹

Par. You had my prayers to lead them on; and to keep them on, have them still. — O, my knave! How does my old lady?

Clo. So that you had her wrinkles, and I her money, I would she did as you say.

Par. Why, I say nothing.

Clo. Marry, you are the wiser man; for many a man's tongue shakes out his master's undoing. To say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing, is Leistungen bin ich hinaus. 47) Lafen fasst lord und master identisch, aber Parolles unterscheidet zwischen my good lord = mein Gönner, d. h. Bertram, dessen Titel und Anrede so lautet, und my master = mein Gebieter, d. h. Gott, da droben, dem er dient. Die genauere Construction wäre: he above, whom I serve. 48) Parolles hat seine Aermel so mit Bändern umwunden, wie man sonst nur die Strumpfhosen mit Kniegürteln bindet. 49) scil. methinks it, wofür die Fol. meethink'st schreibt. Die meisten Hgg. setzen methinks. 50) Dass die Leute an Dir ihre Kräfte üben sollten. 51) Ihr seid zudringlicher bei vornehmen Herren, als die Vollmacht Eurer Geburt und Tüchtigkeit Euch dazu ein heraldisches, ein amtlich nachweisliches Recht giebt. — Die meisten Hgg. stellen mit Hammer ohne Grund commission und heraldry um. 52) Die Briefe, deren Ueberbringer der Narr war. Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 2. 53) kicky-wicky, ein von Parolles gebildetes Wort, womit er verächtlich eine Frau oder Geliebte bezeichnen will. — Die meisten Hgg. setzen das eben so sinnlose kicksy-wicksy dafür. — Drei Zeilen weiter verbindet Pope: to other regions France is a stable = im Vergleich mit andern Gegenden ist Frankreich ein Stall. Die Fol. setzt ein Comma hinter regions. 54) Was der König ihm so eben zur Hochzeit geschenkt hat, soll ihm zur Ausrüstung für den italienischen Feldzug dienen. 55) Der Krieg ist keine saure Anstrengung im Vergleich mit dem eigenen Hause, das durch ein verhasstes Weib finster erscheint. — Wie oft bei Sh., so verbindet hier die Copula and zwei Begriffe, die eigentlich näher zusammen gehören. — detested emendirt Rowe das detected der Fol. 56) her single sorrow = der Kummer, den sie als Unvermählte zu tragen hat. — Aus dem I'll ist zu she ein shall zu suppliren. 57) Wortspiel zwischen married und marr'd. — In der folgenden Zeile verbinden die meisten Hgg. leave her bravely: go.

1) fortunes, worauf sich them in Parolles' Antwort bezieht, setzte Capell für fortune der Fol. 2) title = Besitz oder Rang und Würden, worauf Jemand Anspruch macht oder Anrecht hat. 3) knave = Schelm, und to be a great part of your title,² which is within a very little of nothing.

Par. Away! thou 'rt a knave.³

Clo. You should have said, Sir, before a knave thou 'rt a knave; that is, before me thou 'rt a knave: this had been truth, Sir.

Par. Go to, thou art a witty fool; I have found thee.⁴

Clo. Did you find me in yourself, Sir, or were you taught to find me? The search, Sir, was profitable; and much fool may you find in you, even to the world's pleasure, and the increase of laughter.

Par. A good knave, i' faith, and well fed.⁵ —

Madam, my lord will go away to-night;

A very serious business calls on him.

The great prerogative and rite of love,

Which, as your due, time claims, he does acknowledge,

But puts it off to a compell'd restraint;⁶

Whose want, and whose delay, is strew'd with sweets,

Which they distil now in the curbed time,

To make the coming hour o'erflow with joy,

And pleasure drown the brim.

Hel. What's his will else?

Par. That you will take your instant leave o' the king, And make this haste as your own good proceeding, Strengthen'd with what apology you think May make it probable need.⁷

Hel. What more commands he?

Par. That, having this obtain'd, you presently Attend his further pleasure.

Hel. In every thing I wait upon his will.

Par. I shall report it so.

Hel. I pray you. — Come, sirrah. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Another Room in the Same.

Enter LAFEU and BERTRAM.

Laf. But, I hope, your lordship thinks not him a soldier.

Ber. Yes, my lord, and of very valiant approof.¹

Laf. You have it from his own deliverance.

Ber. And by other warranted testimony.

Laf. Then my dial goes not true. I took this lark for a bunting.²

Ber. I do assure you, my lord, he is very great in knowledge, and accordingly valiant.

Laf. I have then sinned against his experience, and transgressed against his valour; and my state that way is dangerous, since I cannot yet find in my heart to repent. Here he comes. I pray you, make us friends: I will pursue the amity.

Enter PAROLLES.

Par. [To BERTRAM.] These things³ shall be done, Sir.

Laf. Pray you, Sir, who's his tailor?

Par. Sir?

Laf. O! I know him well. Ay, Sir; he, Sir, is a good workman, a very good tailor.

Ber. [Aside to PAROLLES.] Is she gone to the king?

Par. She is.

Ber. Will she away to-night?

Par. As you 'll have her.

Ber. I have writ my letters, casketed my treasure, Given order for our horses; and to-night, When I should take possession of the bride, End,⁴ ere I do begin.

Laf. A good traveller is something at the latter end of a dinner,⁵ but one that lies three thirds, and uses a known truth to pass a thousand nothings with, should be once heard, and thrice beaten. — God save you, captain.

Ber. Is there any unkindness between my lord and you, monsieur?

Par. I know not how I have deserved to run into my lord's displeasure.

Laf. You have made shift to run into 't, boots and spurs and all, like him that leaped into the custard,⁶ and out of it you 'll run again, rather than suffer question for your residence.

Ber. It may be, you have mistaken⁷ him, my lord.

Laf. And shall do so ever, though I took him at his prayers. Fare you well, my lord; and believe this of me, there can be no kernel in this light nut; the soul of this = Bursche, in letzterm Sinn eine gewöhnliche Anrede des Clown. 4) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 3, Anm. 43. — Die folgende Rede des Clown theilt die Fol. in zwei, indem sie vor The search, Sir, etc. noch einmal die redende Person mit Clo. bezeichnet. Staunton schliesst daraus mit grosser Wahrscheinlichkeit, dass aus Versehen eine Replik des Parolles ausgelassen sei. 5) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 2, Anm. 1. 6) Aber er verschiebt die Ausübung des Vorrechtes und Brauches der Liebe zu einer erzwungenen Beschränkung, er schiebt sie auf, so dass sie zu einer unfreiwilligen Enthaltbarkeit wird. — Die Sh.'sch kühne Construction veranlasste die spätern Folioausgg. by a compell'd restraint zu setzen, was manche Hgg. beibehalten. — Von restraint ist dann das Folgende abhängig: die Entbehrung und die Hinzögerung dieser Beschränkung ist gleichsam überstreut mit der Süßigkeit, welche sie (want und delay) in dieser jetzigen unfreien, gehemmten Zwischenzeit bereiten, damit die Zukunft, die Stunde der Wiedervereinigung von Freude überflüsse. Der kurze Sinn dieser gesuchten Redewendung ist: dass der Aufschub den Genuss süß macht. 7) Helena soll diese Eile Bertram's in den Augen des Königs als ihr eignes Verfahren, als von ihr selber ausgehend, erscheinen lassen, und dieselbe unterstützen mit Gründen, von denen sie meint, dass sie die eilige Abreise zu scheinbarer Nothwendigkeit machen.

1) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 14. 2) bunting = Ortolan, unterscheidet sich von der ähnlichen Lerche darin, dass er nicht singt und scheu am Boden hinstreicht. 3) d. h. Bertram's Auftrag an Helena, mit dem König zu reden. 4) end ist eine Emendation, die Collier handschriftlich in dem Ellesmere'schen Exemplar der Fol. fand. — Die Fol. hat and, weshalb die früheren Hgg. interpungirten And, ere I do begin, — als sei der Satz unvollständig. — So in Two Gentlemen of Verona (A. 2, Sc. 4) you always end ere you begin. 5) Auf die Unterhaltung, die ein weitgereister Mann mit seinen Erzählungen an der Mittagstafel gewährt, spielt auch der Bastard in K. John an (A. 1, Sc. 1) Now, your traveller, || He and his toothpick at my worship's mess etc. — Die Fol. hat but on that lies, was Rowe in seiner zweiten Ausg. verbesserte. 6) Bei den städtischen Festmahlzeiten wurde ein kolossaler Eierkuchen aufgetragen, so gross, dass der Hausnarr des Lord Mayor zur Belustigung der Gäste kopfüber hineinspringen konnte. 7) to mistake = Jemanden missdeuten, verkennen, in Bertram's Sinn; = übel man is his clothes: trust him not in matter of heavy consequence; I have kept of them⁸ tame, and know their natures. — Farewell, monsieur: I have spoken better of you, than you have or will deserve⁹ at my hand; but we must do good against evil. [Exit.

Par. An idle lord, I swear.

Ber. I think so.

Par. Why, do you not know him?

Ber. Yes, I do know him well; and common speech Gives him a worthy pass. Here comes my clog.

Enter HELENA.

Hel. I have, Sir, as I was commanded from you, Spoke with the king, and have procur'd his leave For present parting; only he desires Some private speech with you.

Ber. I shall obey his will.

You must not marvel, Helen, at my course, Which holds not colour with the time, nor does The ministration and required office

On my particular:¹⁰ prepar'd I was not For such a business; therefore am I found So much unsettled. This drives me to entreat you, That presently you take your way for home; And rather muse¹¹ than ask why I entreat you; For my respects are better than they seem, And my appointments have in them a need Greater than shows itself, at the first view, To you that know them not. This to my mother.

[Giving a letter.

'T will be two days ere I shall see you: so, I leave you to your wisdom.

Hel. Sir, I can nothing say, But that I am your most obedient servant.

Ber. Come, come, no more of that.

Hel. And ever shall With true observance seek to eke out that, Wherein toward me my homely stars have fail'd To equal my great fortune.

Ber. Let that go: My haste is very great. Farewell: hie home.

Hel. 'Pray, Sir, your pardon.

Ber. Well, what would you say?

Hel. I am not worthy of the wealth I owe;¹²

Nor dare I say, 't is mine, and yet it is; But, like a timorous thief, most fain would steal What law does vouch mine own.

Ber. What would you have?

Hel. Something, and scarce so much: — nothing, indeed. —

I would not tell you what I would, my lord: —

Faith, yes; —

Strangers and foes do sunder, and not kiss.

Ber. I pray you, stay not, but in haste to horse.

Hel. I shall not break your bidding, good my lord.

Ber. Where are my other men, monsieur? — Farewell.¹³ [Exit HELENA.

Go thou toward home; where I will never come, Whilst I can shake my sword, or hear the drum. — Away! and for our flight.

Par. Bravely, coragio.¹⁴ [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.

Florence. A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Flourish. Enter the DUKE of Florence, attended; Two French Lords, and Soldiers.

Duke. So that, from point to point, now have you heard

The fundamental reasons of this war, Whose great decision hath much blood let forth, And more thirsts after.

1. Lord. Holy seems the quarrel Upon your grace's part; black and fearful On the opposer.¹

Duke. Therefore we marvel much, our cousin France Would, in so just a business, shut his bosom Against our borrowing prayers.²

2. Lord. Good my lord, The reasons of our state I cannot yield,³ But like a common and an outward⁴ man, That the great figure of a council frames By self-unable motion: therefore dare not Say what I think of it, since I have found aufnehmen, im Sinne Lafeu's. 8) of them = Leute von seinem Schlage, solche Leute. 9) scil. than you have deserved or are willing to deserve. — Die Fol. hat than you have or will to deserve. — Die Cambridge Edd. stellen das schon in der zweiten Folioausg. ausgelassene to, vielleicht mit Recht, wieder her. — Singer vermuthet have wit or will to deserve. — Im Folgenden ist idle = faselnd. — In Bertram's Antwort vermuthet Staunton, dass Sh. I think not so geschrieben habe. Indess steht das I think so als eine zweifelnde, subjective Zustimmung dem I swear des Parolles gegenüber. 10) Auch hier steht and in eigenthümlich Sh.'scher Weise: my course does not minister the office required on my particular. 11) to muse = grübeln über Etwas. 12) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 1, Anm. 4. 13) Die Fol. interpungirt Where are my other men? Monsieur, farewell und legt die Zeile der Helena bei. Die veränderte Interpunction und Bezeichnung rührt von Theobald her. — Bertram fragt, Eile vorschützend, den Parolles nach den übrigen Dienern und entlässt dann die Helena mit dem kurzen Lebewohl. 14) coragio, ausländisch affectirt für courage, kommt als modischer Zuruf der Ermuthigung auch in Tempest (A. 5, Sc. 1) vor: Coragio! bully-monster, coragio!

1) scil. on the part of the opposer. Der Gegner ist Siena. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 1. 2) our borrowing prayers = meine Bitten, welche einen Beistand von ihm entlehnen wollten. 3) Die politischen Gründe unserer Regierung kann ich Euch nicht vorlegen. 4) outward = draussen stehend, der nicht im Vertrauen ist, das Gegenheil von inward = vertraut, intim: ein schlichter, draussen stehender Mann, der nach seiner eigenen schwachen Organisation sich auch den grossen Plan eines Staatsraths zusammensetzt oder denkt. — self ist dem Sinne nach von unable zu trennen und mit motion zu verbinden: by the unable motion of self (of his own self). 5) Die jüngern Leute unseres Schlages, unserer Art. — Rowe las ohne Noth nation für nature. 6) Alle Ehren, die von mir ausgehen können, die ich ertheilen kann, sollen sich auf sie niederlassen. — your places = die Stelle, die ihr im Kriege einnehmt. — Die folgende Zeile deutet auf das in Aussicht stehende Avancement hin.

Myself in my uncertain grounds to fail
As often as I guess'd.

Duke. Be it his pleasure.

2. Lord. But I am sure, the younger of our nature,⁵
That surfeit on their ease, will day by day
Come here for physic.

Duke. Welcome shall they be,
And all the honours that can fly from us
Shall on them settle.⁶ You know your places well;
When better fall, for your avails they fell.
To-morrow to the field. [Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Rousillon. A Room in the COUNTESS's Palace.

Enter COUNTESS and Clown.

Count. It hath happened all as I would have had it, save that he comes not along with her.

Clo. By my troth, I take my young lord to be a very melancholy man.

Count. By what observance, I pray you?

Clo. Why, he will look upon his boot, and sing; mend the ruff,¹ and sing; ask questions, and sing; pick his teeth, and sing. I know a man, that had this trick of melancholy, sold² a goodly manor for a song.

Count. Let me see what he writes, and when he means to come.

Clo. I have no mind to Isbel,³ since I was at court.
Our old ling and our Isbels o' the country are nothing like your old ling⁴ and your Isbels o' the court: the brains of my Cupid's knocked out, and I begin to love, as an old man loves money, with no stomach.

Count. What have we here?

Clo. E'en⁵ that you have there. [Exit.]

Count. [Reads.] »I have sent you a daughter-in-law:
she had recovered the king, and undone me. I have wedded her, not bedded her; and sworn to make the not eternal. You shall hear, I am run away: know it before the report come. If there be breadth enough in the world,
I will hold a long distance. My duty to you.

Your unfortunate son,
BERTRAM.«

This is not well: rash and unbridled boy,
To fly the favours of so good a king!
To pluck his indignation on thy head,
By the misprising of a maid too virtuous
For the contempt of empire!⁶

Re-enter Clown.

Clo. O Madam! yonder is heavy news within, between two soldiers⁷ and my young lady.

Count. What is the matter?

Clo. Nay, there is some comfort in the news, some comfort: your son will not be killed so soon as I thought he would.

Count. Why should he be kill'd?

Clo. So say I, Madam, if he run away, as I hear he does: the danger is in standing to 't;⁸ that's the loss of men, though it be the getting of children. Here they come will tell you more; for my part, I only hear your son was run away. [Exit.]

Enter HELENA and Two Gentlemen.

1. Gent. Save you, good Madam.

Hel. Madam, my lord is gone, for ever gone.

2. Gent. Do not say so.

Count. Think upon patience. — 'Pray you, gentlemen, —

I have felt so many quirks of joy and grief,
That the first face of neither, on the start,
Can woman me unto 't:⁹ — where is my son, I pray
you?

2. Gent. Madam, he's gone to serve the duke of Florence.

We met him thitherward; for¹⁰ thence we came,
And, after some despatch in hand at court,
Thither we bend again.

Hel. Look on his letter, Madam: here's my passport.
[Reads.] »When thou canst get the ring upon my finger,¹¹ which never shall come off, and show me a child begotten of thy body, that I am father to, then call me husband: but in such a then I write a never.«
This is a dreadful sentence.

Count. Brought you this letter, gentlemen?

1. Gent. Ay, Madam;
And, for the contents' sake, are sorry for our pains.¹²

Count. I pr'ythee, lady, have a better cheer;
If thou engrossest all the griefs are thine,¹³
Thou robb'st me of a moiety. He was my son,
But I do wash his name out of my blood.
And thou art all my child. — Towards Florence is he?

2. Gent. Ay, Madam.

Count. And to be a soldier?

2. Gent. Such is his noble purpose; and, believe 't,

1) the ruff bezieht sich auf his boot und sollte eigentlich ruffle heissen = die lose herabhängenden Stiefel-stulpen. 2) sold emendiren die spätern Folioausgg. das hold der ersten Fol. — Der Schwermüthige war so musikalisch, dass er einen Herrenhof hingab für ein Lied. — Zugleich ist for a song = für eine Kleinigkeit.
3) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 3, Anm. 3 u. 4. 4) ling = Stockfisch, eine gewöhnliche Fastenspeise. — Die Fol. hat our old lings. — Für your old ling vermuthet Sidney Walker your youngling. 5) e'en verbesserte Theobald das sinnlose in der Fol. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 3, Anm. 6. 6) Ein Mädchen, zu ausgezeichnet, als dass selbst ein Kaiser sie verachten dürfte, geschweige denn ein Graf. — empire = kaiserlicher Rang, steht hier für den Inhaber eines solchen. 7) two soldiers sind die Begleiter der Helena, wegen ihrer Uniform vom Narren so bezeichnet: eine traurige Nachricht, welche zwei Soldaten und meine junge Gebieterin unter sich zu verhandeln haben. 8) to stand to it = Stand halten im Gefecht, im Gegensatz zu to run away, zugleich mit obscönem Nebensinne. So in Macbeth
(A. 2, Sc. 3) it makes him stand to, and not stand to. 9) to woman = zum Weibe machen, das Weib herauskehren. Die Gräfin hat so häufigen Wechsel von Freude und Leid erlebt, dass der plötzliche Anfall der einen oder des andern sie nicht mehr in weiblicher Art afficiren kann; sie ist gefasst genug, Alles zu hören, was ihren Sohn betrifft. — unto 't = dazu, bezieht sich auf joy and grief. 10) So die Fol. Manche Hgg. lesen willkürlich from thence. 11) d. h. der Ring, der an meinem Finger steckt und nie davon wegkommen soll. 12) our pains = unsere Mühe, den Brief herzubringen. 13) Wenn Du alle Deine Schmerzen für Dich allein ausschliesslich behältst, so beraubst Du mich des mir gebührenden Antheils daran. — Vor are thine ist which zu suppliren. — Rowe las

The duke will lay upon him all the honour
That good convenience claims.

Count. Return you thither?

1. Gent. Ay, Madam, with the swiftest wing of speed.

Hel. [Reads.] »Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France.«

'T is bitter.

Count. Find you that there?

Hel. Ay, Madam.

1. Gent. 'T is but the boldness of his hand, haply, which his heart was not consenting to.

Count. Nothing in France, until he have no wife!
There's nothing here that is too good for him,
But only she; and she deserves a lord,
That twenty such rude boys might tend upon,
And call her hourly, mistress. Who was with him?

1. Gent. A servant only, and a gentleman
Which I have sometime known.

Count. Parolles, was it not?

1. Gent. Ay, my good lady, he.

Count. A very tainted fellow, and full of wickedness.
My son corrupts a well-derived nature
With his inducement.¹⁴

1. Gent. Indeed, good lady,
The fellow has a deal of that, too much,
Which holds him much to have.¹⁵

Count. Y' are welcome, gentlemen.
I will entreat you, when you see my son,
To tell him, that his sword can never win
The honour that he loses: more I'll entreat you
Written to bear along.

2. Gent. We serve you, Madam,
In that and all your worthiest affairs.¹⁶

Count. Not so,¹⁷ but as we change our courtesies.
Will you draw near?

[Exeunt COUNTESS and Gentlemen.]

Hel. »Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France.«

Nothing in France, until he has no wife!
Thou shalt have none, Rousillon, none in France;
Then hast thou all again. Poor lord! is 't I
That chase thee from thy country, and expose
Those tender limbs of thine to the event
Of the none-sparing war? and is it I
That drive thee from the sportive court, where thou
Wast shot at with fair eyes, to be the mark
Of smoky muskets? O you leaden messengers,
That ride upon the violent speed of fire,
Fly with false aim; move the still-peering¹⁸ air,

That sings with piercing, do not touch my lord!

Whoever shoots at him, I set him there;
Whoever charges on his forward breast,
I am the caitiff that do hold him to it;
And, though I kill him not, I am the cause
His death was so effected. Better 't were,
I met the ravin¹⁹ lion when he roar'd
With sharp constraint of hunger: better 't were,
That all the miseries which nature owes
Were mine at once. No, come thou home, Rousillon, Whence²⁰ honour but of danger wins a scar,
As oft it loses all: I will be gone.
My being here it is that holds thee hence:
Shall I stay here to do 't? no, no, although
The air of paradise did fan the house,
And angels offic'd all:²¹ I will be gone,
That pitiful rumour may report my flight,
To console thine ear. Come, night; end, day!
For with the dark, poor thief,²² I'll steal away. [Exit.]

SCENE III.

Florence. Before the DUKE'S Palace.

Flourish. Enter the DUKE of Florence, BERTRAM, PAROLLES,¹ Lords, Officers, Soldiers, and Others.

Duke. The general of our horse thou art; and we,
Great in our hope, lay our best love and credence
Upon thy promising fortune.

Ber. Sir, it is
A charge too heavy for my strength; but yet
We'll strive to bear it, for your worthy sake,
To the extreme edge of hazard.²

Duke. Then go thou forth,
And fortune play upon thy prosperous helm,
As thy auspicious mistress!³

Ber. This very day,
Great Mars, I put myself into thy file:
Make me but like my thoughts, and I shall prove
A lover of thy drum, hater of love. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

Rousillon. A Room in the COUNTESS'S Palace.

Enter COUNTESS and her Steward.

Count. Alas! and would you take the letter of her?
Might you not know, she would do as she has done,¹
By sending me a letter? Read it again.

as thine. 14) his inducement = der böse Einfluss des Parolles auf Bertram. 15) Parolles hat viel von dem, hat zuviel von dem, was ihm den Glauben verschafft, dass er viel habe, was ihn in der Meinung hält oder behauptet, dass er viel habe. — Unter dem of that dieses dunkel und spitzfindig antithetischen Satzes scheint Parolles' Dreistigkeit und das Glück, das dieselbe macht, verstanden zu sein. 16) In allen Angelegenheiten, die für Euch den meisten Werth haben. 17) not so bezieht sich auf we serve you: Ihr sollt mir nicht weiter dienen, als dass wir nur gegenseitig Höflichkeiten austauschen. 18) still-peering = still erscheinend, im Gegensatz zu move. — Die Cambridge Edd. führen eine ganze Reihe von Conjectural-Lesarten für still-peering der Fol. (still-piercing in den spätern Folioausgg.) an. Die plausibelste ist darunter die von Nares: still-pierced, in Verbindung mit dem folgenden piercing, was zugleich den Druckfehler erklären würde: die stets verwundete Luft, welche beim Verwunden singt, welche einen pfeifenden Ton von sich giebt, wenn die Kugeln durch sie hinfahren. 19) Das adjectivische ravin = reissend, gierig schlingend, kommt sonst kaum vor. 20) whence ist durch Attraction = from thence where: kehre heim von da, wo die Ehre der Gefahr nur eine Narbe abgewinnt und eben so oft auch Alles, d. h. das Leben selbst, verliert. 21) Und wenn auch lauter Engel den Dienst hier im Hause versähen. 22) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 1, Anm. 13.

1) Manche Hgg. lassen Parolles hier weg, obschon die Fol. ihn ausdrücklich erwähnt. 2) So hat Sh. in den Sonnets (116) Love alters not with his (scil. time's) brief hours and weeks, || But bears it out even to the edge of doom. 3) So in K. Lear (A. 2, Sc. 1) conjuring the moon || To stand auspicious mistress.

Stew. [Reads.] »I am Saint Jaques' pilgrim, thither² gone.

Ambitious love hath so in me offended,
That bare-foot plod I the cold ground upon,
With sainted vow my faults to have amended.
Write, write, that, from the bloody course of war,
My dearest master, your dear son, may hie:
Bless him at home in peace, whilst I from far
His name with zealous fervour sanctify.
His taken labours³ bid him me forgive:
I, his despiteful Juno, sent him forth
From courtly friends, with camping foes to live,
Where death and danger dogs the heels of worth:⁴
He is too good and fair for Death and me,
Whom⁵ I myself embrace, to set him free.«

Count. Ah, what sharp stings are in her mildest words! —

Rinaldo, you did never lack advice⁶ so much,
As letting her pass so: had I spoke with her,
I could have well diverted her intents,
Which thus she hath prevented.

Stew. Pardon me, Madam:
If I had given you this at over-night,⁷
She might have been o'erta'en; and yet she writes,
Pursuit would be but vain.

Count. What angel shall Bless this unworthy husband? he cannot thrive,
Unless her prayers, whom heaven delights to hear,
And loves to grant, reprieve him from the wrath
Of greatest justice. — Write, write, Rinaldo,
To this unworthy husband of his wife:⁸
Let every word weigh heavy of her worth,
That he does weigh⁹ too light: my greatest grief,
Though little he do feel it, set down sharply.
Despatch the most convenient messenger. —
When, haply, he shall hear that she is gone,
He will return; and hope I may, that she,
Hearing so much, will speed her foot again,
Led hither by pure love. Which of them both
Is dearest to me, I have no skill in sense
To make distinction.¹⁰ — Provide this messenger. —
My heart is heavy, and mine age is weak;
Grief would have tears, and sorrow bids me speak.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Without the Walls of Florence.

A tucket afar off. Enter an old Widow of Florence, DIANA, VIOLENTA,¹ MARIANA, and o'her Citizens.

Wid. Nay, come; for if they do approach the city, we shall lose all the sight.

Dia. They say, the French count has done most honourable service.

Wid. It is reported that he has taken their² greatest commander, and that with his own hand he slew the duke's brother. We have lost our labour; they are gone a contrary way: hark! you may know by their trumpets.

Mar. Come; let's return again, and suffice ourselves³ with the report of it. Well, Diana, take heed of this French earl:⁴ the honour of a maid is her name, and no legacy is so rich as honesty.

Wid. I have told my neighbour, how you have been solicited by a gentleman his companion.⁵

Mar. I know that knave; hang him! one Parolles: a filthy officer he is in those suggestions⁶ for the young earl. — Beware of them, Diana; their promises, enticements, oaths, tokens, and all these engines of lust, are not the things they go under:⁷ many a maid hath been seduced by them; and the misery is, example, that so terrible shows in the wreck of maidenhood, cannot for all that dissuade succession, but that they⁸ are limed with the twigs that threaten them. I hope, I need not to advise you further; but, I hope, your own grace⁹ will keep you where you are, though there were no further danger known, but the modesty which is so lost.

Dia. You shall not need to fear me.¹⁰

Wid. I hope so. — Look, here comes a pilgrim: I know she will lie¹¹ at my house; thither they send one another. I'll question her. —

Enter HELENA, in the dress of a pilgrim.

God save you, pilgrim! — whither are you bound?

Hel. To Saint Jaques le Grand.¹²

Where do the palmers¹³ lodge, I do beseech you?

Wid. At the Saint Francis, here beside the port.¹⁴

Hel. Is this the way?

Wid. Ay, marry, is 't. — Hark you!

[A march afar off.]

1) Der Nachdruck der Betonung, der auf would und has liegt, hebt den Gegensatz der Zukunft und Vergangenheit hervor. 2) thither = zu dem Wallfahrtsorte, wo St. Jacobus verehrt wurde. — Sh. denkt sich, wie aus dem Folgenden erhellt, denselben in Italien, da Helena auf dem Wege Florenz berührt. — Paynter hat an der entsprechenden Stelle nur ganz allgemein to spende the rest of her tyme in pilgrimages and devocion (vgl. Einleitung pag. 437). 3) his taken labours = die Arbeiten und Mühen, die er übernommen hat, spielt auf die Arbeiten des Hercules an, zu denen die ingrimmige Juno ihn aussandte, wie Helena den Bertram. 4) worth = Werth, Tüchtigkeit, steht = tüchtige Männer, wie vorher empire = Kaiser (vgl. A. 3, Sc. 2, Anm. 6). 5) whom geht auf das männlich personifizierte Death. 6) advice = Ueberlegung, Besonnenheit. 7) over-night, sonst adverbial = über Nacht, gebraucht Sh. hier substantivisch mit at = am späten Abend. 8) unworthy ist mit of his wife zu verbinden. 9) to weigh = wiegen, in's Gewicht fallen, und = abwägen, abschätzen. 10) Das weiss ich in meinem Sinn, in meinem Auffassungsvermögen, nicht zu unterscheiden.

1) Violenta ist eine blosse Statistenrolle, da sie weder redend eingeführt, noch überhaupt im Verlauf der Scene erwähnt wird. 2) Unter their sind die Feinde, die Sienesen, verstanden, wie gleich nachher mit the duke's brother der Bruder des Herzogs von Siena gemeint ist. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 1. 3) scil. let us suffice ourselves with = wir wollen uns genügen lassen an dem Bericht. 4) French earl, dasselbe was vorher French count hiess, d. h. Bertram. — Sh. gebraucht earl und count auch sonst unterschiedslos. So heisst in Romeo and Juliet Graf Paris sowohl count wie earl. 5) Die Fol. druckt diese Scene bis hier als, freilich nur scheinbare, Verse ab. 6) those suggestions = solche Einflüsterungen oder Verlockungen, bezieht sich auf das vorhergehende how you have been solicited, und officer = ein Dienstmann, Agent, ist mit for the young earl zu verbinden. 7) to go under = für Etwas passiren; gewöhnlicher ist to go under the name of = unter dem Namen von Etwas gehen. 8) Zu they ist aus dem vorhergehenden maidenhood ein Wort wie maids hinzuzudenken. — Das Bild ist von

They come this way. — If you will tarry, holy pilgrim,
But till the troops come by,
I will conduct you where you shall be lodg'd:
The rather, for I think I know your hostess
As ample¹⁵ as myself.

Hel. Is it yourself?

Wid. If you shall please so, pilgrim.

Hel. I thank you, and will stay upon your leisure.

Wid. You came, I think, from France?

Hel. I did so.

Wid. Here you shall see a countryman of yours,
That has done worthy service.

Hel. His name, I pray you.

Dia. The count Rousillon: know you such a one?

Hel. But by the ear, that hears most nobly of him;
His face I know not.

Dia. Whatsoe'er he is,

He's bravely taken here.¹⁶ He stole from France,
As 't is reported, for the king had married him
Against his liking. Think you it is so?

Hel. Ay, surely, mere the truth:¹⁷ I know his lady.

Dia. There is a gentleman, that serves the count,
Reports but coarsely of her.

Hel. What's his name?

Dia. Monsieur Parolles.

Hel. O! I believe with him,

In argument of praise,¹⁸ or to the worth
Of the great count himself, she is too mean
To have her name repeated: all her deserving
Is a reserved honesty, and that I have not heard examin'd.¹⁹

Dia. Alas, poor lady!

'T is a hard bondage, to become the wife
Of a detesting lord.²⁰

Wid. Ay, right;²¹ good creature, wheresoe'er she is,
Her heart weighs sadly. This young maid might do her
A shrewd turn, if she pleas'd.

Hel. How do you mean?

May be, the amorous count solicits her
In the unlawful purpose.

Wid. He does, indeed;

And brokes²² with all that can in such a suit

Corrupt the tender honour of a maid:
But she is arm'd for him, and keeps her guard
In honestest defence.

Mar. The gods forbid else!

Enter, with drum and colours, a party of the Florentine army,²³ BERTRAM, and PAROLLES.

Wid. So, now they come. —

That is Antonio, the duke's eldest son;

That, Escalus.

Hel. Which is the Frenchman?

Dia. He;

That with the plume: 't is a most gallant fellow;

I would he lov'd his wife. If he were honest,
He were much goodlier; is 't not a handsome gentleman?

Hel. I like him well.

Dia. 'T is pity, he is not honest. Yond's that same knave.

That leads him to these places:²⁴ were I his lady,
I would poison that vile rascal.

Hel. Which is he?

Dia. That jack-an-apes with scarfs. Why is he melancholy?

Hel. Perchance he's hurt i' the battle.

Par. Lose our drum!²⁵ well.

Mar. He's shrewdly vexed at something. Look, he has spied us.

Wid. Marry, hang you!

Mar. And your courtesy, for a ring-carrier!²⁶

[Exeunt BERTRAM, PAROLLES, Officers, and Soldiers.]

Wid. The troop is past. Come, pilgrim, I will bring you

Where you shall host: of enjoin'd penitents²⁷

There's four or five, to Great Saint Jaques bound,
Already at my house.

Hel. I humbly thank you.

Please it this matron, and this gentle maid,

To eat with us to-night, the charge and thanking

Shall be for me; and, to requite you further,

I will bestow some precepts of²⁸ this virgin,
Worthy the note.

Both. We'll take your offer kindly. [Exeunt.]

Vögeln entlehnt, die mit der Leimruthe gefangen werden. 9) grace = Frömmigkeit. 10) Ich werde Euch keinen Anlass geben, meinethwegen Besorgnisse zu hegen. 11) to lie = logiren, sich einquartieren. 12) Saint Jaques le Grand = St. Jacobus Major, der ältere St. Jacobus. 13) palmer = Pilger. Den Namen erklärt Camden in seinen Remains so: Some (names) from that which they commonly carried, as palmer, that is pilgrim, for that they carried palm when they came from Jerusalem. Indess gebraucht Sh. palmer und pilgrim ohne Unterschied. 14) port = Stadthor. — Saint Francis ist eine Herberge, die den St. Franciscus als Schild und Abzeichen hat. 15) ample als Adverbium findet sich auch in Timon of Athens (A. 1, Sc. 2) You see, my lord, how ample y' are belov'd, wie Sh. auch Adjectiva auf — able statt der Adverbien auf — ably gebraucht. 16) Er hat sich tapfer benommen hier. 17) Die reine Wahrheit, nur die Wahrheit. 18) Wenn es sich um ein Lob handelt, wenn man ein Thema des Lobes daraus machen will. 19) to examine = zum Gegenstande einer Prüfung oder Untersuchung machen, Etwas in Frage stellen. 20) Die Gattin eines Gemahls, der sie verabscheut. Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 3, Anm. 55. 21) Manche Hgg. behalten die verkehrte Schreibweise der Fol. I write good creature bei und deuten: ich erkläre sie für ein gutes Geschöpf. Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 3, Anm. 16. — Die richtige Orthographie findet sich schon in den spätern Folioausgg. — Einige Hgg. ändern ohne Grund a right good creature. 22) to broke = den Kuppler oder Unterhändler spielen: er wendet Alles an, was das Gemüth eines jungen Mädchens verderben kann. 23) and the whole army in der Fol. 24) to these places = an solche Orte, sagt Diana, mädchenhaft verschämt, für = liederliche Orte, ohne bestimmte Hinweisung auf einen vorhergegangenen Satz. — Lettsom vermuthete passes für places. 25) Parolles beklagt halblaut, dass sie in der Schlacht eine Trommel verloren haben, die er in der folgenden Scene wiederzugewinnen unternimmt. 26) Parolles hatte als Kuppler für Bertram und in dessen Auftrag der Diana einen goldenen Ring überbracht, den sie zurückgewiesen hatte. 27) enjoin'd penitents = Pilger, denen die Wallfahrt zu St. Jacob dem Aelteren als Busse auferlegt ist. — Great Saint Jaques ist die englische Uebersetzung für Saint Jaques le Grand (vgl. oben Anm. 12). 28) of für on ist Sh.'sch. Doch setzt schon die zweite Folioausg. on this virgin.

SCENE VI.

Camp before Florence.

Enter BERTRAM, and the Two French Lords.¹

1. Lord. Nay, good my lord, put him to 't: let him have his way.

2. Lord. If your lordship find him not a hilding,² hold me no more in your respect.

1. Lord. On my life, my lord, a bubble.

Ber. Do you think I am so far deceived in him?

1. Lord. Believe it, my lord: in mine own direct knowledge, without any malice, but to speak of him as my kinsman,³ he 's a most notable coward, an infinite and endless liar, an hourly promise-breaker, the owner of no one good quality worthy your lordship's entertainment.

2. Lord. It were fit you knew him, lest, reposing⁴ too far in his virtue, which he hath not, he might, at some great and trusty business in a main danger, fail you.

Ber. I would I knew in what particular action to try him.

2. Lord. None better than to let him fetch off his drum, which you hear him so confidently undertake to do.

1. Lord. I, with a troop of Florentines, will suddenly surprise him: such I will have, whom, I am sure, he knows not from the enemy. We will bind and hoodwink him so, that he shall suppose no other but that he is carried into the leaguer⁵ of the adversaries, when we bring him to our own tents. Be but your lordship present at his examination: if he do not, for the promise of his life, and in the highest compulsion of base fear, offer to betray you, and deliver all the intelligence in his power against you, and that with the divine forfeit of his soul upon oath, never trust my judgment in anything.

2. Lord. O! for the love of laughter, let him fetch his drum: he says he has a stratagem⁶ for 't. When your lordship sees the bottom of his success⁷ in 't, and to what metal this counterfeit lump of ore⁸ will be melted, if you give him not John Drum's entertainment,⁹ your inclining cannot be removed. Here he comes.

1. Lord. O! for the love of laughter, hinder not the honour of his design:¹⁰ let him fetch off his drum in any hand.¹¹

Enter PAROLLES.

Ber. How now, monsieur? this drum sticks sorely in your disposition.

2. Lord. A pox on 't! let it go: 't is but a drum.

Par. But a drum! Is 't but a drum? A drum so lost! — There was an excellent command, to charge in with our horse upon our own wings, and to rend our own soldiers!

2. Lord. That was not to be blamed in the command of the service:¹² it was a disaster of war that Cæsar himself could not have prevented, if he had been there to command.

Ber. Well, we cannot greatly condemn our success:¹³ some dishonour we had in the loss of that drum; but it is not to be recovered.

Par. It might have been recovered.

Ber. It might; but it is not now.

Par. It is to be recovered. But that the merit of service is seldom attributed to the true and exact performer, I would have that drum or another, or hic jacet.¹⁴

Ber. Why, if you have a stomach to 't, monsieur, if you think your mystery in stratagem can bring this instrument of honour again into his native quarter, be magnanimous in the enterprise, and go on; I will grace the attempt for a worthy exploit: if you speed well in it, the duke shall both speak of it, and extend to you what further becomes his greatness, even to the utmost syllable of your worthiness.

Par. By the hand of a soldier, I will undertake it.

Ber. But you must not now slumber in it.

Par. I'll about it this evening: and I will presently pen down my dilemmas,¹⁵ encourage myself in my cer-

1) Die Fol. Enter Count Rossillion and the Frenchmen as at first — zur Bezeichnung, dass die beiden französischen Herren dieselben sind, welche zu Anfang des zweiten Acts und ebenso zu Anfang des dritten Acts auftraten. — Die beiden französischen Edelleute werden in der Fol. als Cap. (Captain) G. und Cap. E. unterschieden, und in den frühern Scenen, wo sie auftreten, als Lord G. und Lord E., wie auch als Fren. (Frenchman) G. und Fren. E. — Die Hgg. vermuthen sehr wahrscheinlich, dass G. und E. die Anfangsbuchstaben der Namen der beiden Schauspieler sind, welche diese Rollen auf dem Sh.'schen Theater darstellten. 2) hilding = Lump, ein Mensch in dienender, untergeordneter Stellung. 3) Indem ich lediglich so von ihm rede, als ob er mein Vetter wäre. 4) to repose in = sich verlassen auf Etwas, sich beruhigen bei Etwas. — Vor reposing ist you zu suppliren. 5) leaguer = Feldlager, in militärischer Sprache für camp. — Douce citirt passlich dazu aus Smythe's Discourses (1590): They will not vouchsafe in their speeches or writings to use our ancient terms belonging to matters of war, but do call a camp by the Dutch name of Legar, nor will it afford to say, that such a town, or such a fort is besieged, but that it is beleagard. — Sh. hat das Wort nur an dieser Stelle. 6) stratagem = kriegischer Anschlag, nicht bloss = Kriegslist. 7) success = Erfolg, und = Missgeschick, gebraucht Sh. in gutem wie in bösem Sinne. — Rowe verbesserte his für this der Fol. 8) ore ist Theobald's Emendation für ours der Fol. 9) John, auch Tom und Jack, Drum's entertainment, eine sprichwörtliche Redensart, deren Sinn klarer ist als ihre Herleitung. In Holinshed's History of Ireland heisst es von einem gastfreien Mayor der Stadt Dublin: no guest had ever a cold or forbidding look from any part of his family: so that his porter, or any other officer, durst not, for both his ears, give the simplest man that resorted to his house Tom Drum his entertainment, which is to hale a man in by the head and thrust him out by both the shoulders. — Hier wird mit John Drum zugleich auf die Trommel angespielt, welche Parolles dem Feinde wieder abnehmen will. 10) the honour ist hier ironisch = die Ehre, welche Parolles davon tragen will. Manche Hgg. lesen ohne Grund the humour dafür. 11) in any hand = auf jeden Fall, so oder so. 12) Auf den ironisch ausgesprochenen Tadel des Parolles über an excellent command = ein elendes Commando, versetzt der zweite Herr, dass dem Commando nicht die Schuld ihres Unglücks beizumessen sei. 13) Vgl. Anm. 7 dieser Scene. 14) hic jacet = eine Grabinschrift, die mit diesen lateinischen Worten anfängt: Hier liegt u. s. w. — Parolles wollte entweder diese Trommel wiedererobern oder dem Feinde eine andre abnehmen, oder endlich bei dieser Waffenthat fallen. — In Bertram's tainty, put myself into my mortal preparation, and by midnight look to hear further from me.

Ber. May I be bold to acquaint his grace you are gone about it?

Par. I know not what the success will be, my lord; but the attempt I vow.

Ber. I know thou art valiant, and, to the possibility of thy soldiership,¹⁶ will subscribe for thee. Farewell.

Par. I love not many words.¹⁷ [Exit.

1. Lord. No more than a fish loves water. — Is not this a strange fellow, my lord, that so confidently seems to undertake this business, which he knows is not to be done, damns himself to do, and dares better be damned than to do 't?

2. Lord. You do not know him, my lord, as we do: certain it is, that he will steal himself into a man's favour, and for a week escape a great deal of discoveries; but when you find him out, you have him ever after.¹⁸

Ber. Why, do you think, he will make no deed at all of this, that so seriously he does address himself unto?

1. Lord. None in the world; but return with an invention, and clap upon you two or three probable lies. But we have almost embossed him,¹⁹ you shall see his fall to-night; for, indeed, he is not for your lordship's respect.

2. Lord. We'll make you some sport with the fox, ere we case him. He was first smoked by the old lord Lafau: when his disguise and he is parted, tell me what a sprat you shall find him, which you shall see this very night.

1. Lord. I must go look my twigs:²⁰ he shall be caught.

Ber. Your brother, he shall go along with me.

1. Lord. As 't please your lordship: I'll leave you. [Exit.

Ber. Now will I lead you to the house, and show you The lass I spoke of.

2. Lord. But, you say, she's honest.

Ber. That's all the fault. I spoke with her but once, And found her wondrous cold; but I sent to her, By this same coxcomb that we have i' the wind,²¹ Tokens and letters which she did re-send;²²

And this is all I have done. She's a fair creature; Will you go see her?

2. Lord. With all my heart, my lord.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VII.

Florence. A Room in the Widow's House.

Enter HELENA and Widow.

Hel. If you misdoubt me that I am not she,¹ I know not how I shall assure you further, But I shall lose the grounds I work upon.²

Wid. Though my estate be fall'n, I was well born, Nothing acquainted with these businesses,³ And would not put my reputation now In any staining act.

Hel. Nor would I wish you. First, give me trust, the count he is my husband, And what to your sworn counsel⁴ I have spoken, Is so, from word to word; and then you cannot, By the good aid that I of you shall borrow, Err in bestowing it.

Wid. I should believe you; For you have show'd me that which well approves You are great in fortune.

Hel. Take this purse of gold, And let me buy your friendly help thus far, Which I will over-pay, and pay again, When I have found it. The count he wooes your daughter, Lays down his wanton siege before her beauty, Resolved⁵ to carry her: let her, in fine, consent, As we'll direct her how 't is best to bear it. Now, his important⁶ blood will nought deny That she'll demand: a ring the county⁷ wears, That downward hath succeeded in his house From son to son, some four or five descents Since the first father wore it: this ring he holds In most rich choice; yet, in his idle fire, To buy his will, it would not seem too dear, Howe'er repented after.

Wid. Now I see The bottom of your purpose.

nächster Rede ist mystery in stratagem = Uebung in Kriegsanschlägen. 15) dilemmas ist in der affectirten Sprache des Parolles entweder sein Operationsplan zugleich mit Veranschlagung der feindlichen Gegenoperationen, oder auch die verschiedenen Pläne, zwischen denen Parolles die Wahl hat. 16) So weit Deine kriegerische Tüchtigkeit geht; ich will für Dich gut sagen, bis zu dem ganzen Vermögen Deiner Kriegerschaft. — possibility = Leistungsfähigkeit. 17) Malone will hier die Erklärung des Namens Parolles finden: eigentlich paroles (französisch) = words. 18) So wisst Ihr später immer, was an ihm ist. — to have = wissen, kennen. 19) to emboss a stag ist ein Jagdausdruck = einen Hirsch so abhetzen, dass ihm der weisse Schaum aus dem Munde läuft. Ebenso ist ein bildlich hier gebrauchter Jagdausdruck his fall. — Von der Fuchsjagd sind die folgenden Ausdrücke entlehnt: to case = das Fell abziehen, und to smoke = einen Fuchs aus dem Bau herausräuchern, durch Rauch vertreiben. Andere fassen to smoke = wittern. 20) Ich muss nach meinen Leimruthen sehen, mit denen ich Parolles fangen will. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 5, Anm. 8. 21) to have in the wind = Jemanden in der Witterung haben, Jemandem auf der Fährte sein. 22) to re-send = zurücksenden, ein Sh.'sches Compositum, wie to re-tell und to re-word.

1) she = sie, von der ich Euch erzählt habe, die Gemahlin Bertram's. 2) So kann ich Euch keine weitere Sicherheit geben, wenn ich nicht das Terrain, auf dem ich operire, verlieren will; wenn ich nicht meinen Plan vereiteln will, indem ich Bertram's Zeugniß für mich anrufe, oder mich ihm zu erkennen gebe. 3) these businesses = solche Angelegenheiten, solche Dinge verdächtiger Art. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 5, Anm. 24. 4) to your sworn counsel = die Verschwiegenheit oder Geheimhaltung, die Ihr mir zugeschworen habt. 5) resolved verbessert eine von Collier entdeckte handschriftliche Glosse in dem Egerton'schen Exemplar der Fol. das resolve derselben. Statt dieses Particips lesen die meisten Hgg. resolves mit der zweiten Folioausg. von 1632. 6) important = dringend, ungestüm, leidenschaftlich. So in Much Ado about Nothing (A. 2, Sc. 1) if the prince be too important. 7) county für count = Graf, gebraucht Sh. öfter. So in Much Ado about Nothing (A. 4, Sc. 1) princes, and counties. Vielleicht wäre auch county für count he zu lesen an zwei ebenvorhergehenden Stellen: the county is

Hel. You see it lawful then. It is no more,
But that your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Desires this ring, appoints him an encounter,
In fine, delivers me to fill the time,
Herself most chastely absent.⁸ After this,
To marry her, I'll add three thousand crowns
To what is past already.

Wid. I have yielded.
Instruct my daughter how she shall persevere,
That time and place with this deceit so lawful
May prove coherent.⁹ Every night he comes
With musics of all sorts, and songs compos'd
To her unworthiness: it nothing steads us,
To chide him from our eaves, for he persists,
As if his life lay on 't.

Hel. Why then, to-night
Let us assay our plot; which, if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawful deed,
And lawful meaning in a lawful act,
Where both not sin, and yet a sinful fact.¹⁰
But let's about it.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.

Without the Florentine Camp.

Enter First French Lord,¹ with Five or Six Soldiers in ambush.

1. Lord. He can come no other way but by this hedge-corner. When you sally upon him, speak what terrible language you will: though you understand it not yourselves, no matter; for we must not seem to understand him, unless some one among us, whom we must produce for an interpreter.

1. Sold. Good captain, let me be the interpreter.

1. Lord. Art not acquainted with him? knows he not thy voice?

1. Sold. No, Sir, I warrant you.

1. Lord. But what linsey-woolsey² hast thou to speak to us again?

1. Sold. Even such as you speak to me.

1. Lord. He must think us some band of strangers i' the adversary's entertainment.³ Now, he hath a smack of all neighbouring languages; therefore, we must every one be a man of his own fancy, not to know what we speak one to another; so we seem to know, is to know straight our purpose:⁴ chough's language, gabble enough, and good enough. As for you, interpreter, you must seem very politic. But couch, ho! here he comes, to beguile two hours in a sleep, and then to return and swear the lies he forges.

Enter PAROLLES.

Par. Ten o'clock: within these three hours 't will be time enough to go home. What shall I say I have done?
It must be a very plausible⁵ invention that carries it.
They begin to smoke me, and disgraces have of late knocked too often at my door. I find, my tongue is too foolhardy; but my heart hath the fear of Mars before it, and of his creatures, not daring the reports of my tongue.

1. Lord. [Aside.] This is the first truth that e'er thine own tongue was guilty of.

Par. What the devil should move me to undertake the recovery of this drum, being not ignorant of the impossibility, and knowing I had no such purpose? I must give myself some hurts, and say, I got them in exploit. Yet slight ones will not carry it: they will say, »Came you off with so little?« and great ones I dare not give. Wherefore? what's the instance?⁶ Tongue, I must put you into a butter-woman's mouth, and buy myself another of Bajazet's mule,⁷ if you prattle me into these perils.

1. Lord. [Aside.] Is it possible, he should know what he is, and be that he is?

Par. I would the cutting of my garments would serve the turn, or the breaking of my Spanish sword.

1. Lord. [Aside.] We cannot afford you so.

Par. Or the baring⁸ of my beard, and to say, it was in stratagem.

1. Lord. [Aside.] 'T would not do.

Par. Or to drown my clothes, and say, I was stripped.

1. Lord. [Aside.] Hardly serve.

my husband und the county wooves your daughter. 8) Sie überträgt es mir, die Zeit ihres Rendez-vous mit Bertram anzufüllen, ihre Stelle zu vertreten, indem sie selbst keusch sich fern hält. — after in der Fol. wird erst in der zweiten Folioausg. zu after this vervollständigt. 9) Die Construction ist: that time and place may prove coherent with this lawful deceit. 10) Die eheliche Vereinigung Bertram's und der Helena ist zugleich wicked meaning von Seiten Bertram's, der die Diana zu verführen meint, und lawful deed von derselben Seite, da er in der That seine rechtmässige Gattin umarmt. — lawful meaning und lawful act beziehen sich auf Helena, bei der ein solcher Widerspruch zwischen Absicht und Thun nicht vorhanden ist, wie bei Bertram. — Die letzte Zeile bezieht sich auf Beide, welche nicht sündigen, obgleich es sich um a sinful fact, einen Ehebruch, handelt. — Um die Antithese vollständig durchzuführen, wollte Warburton in a wicked act lesen.

1) Die Fol. Enter one of the Frenchmen. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 6, Anm. 1. 2) linsey-woolsey eigentlich = ein aus Wolle und Leinwand gemischter Stoff, hier = ein Sprachgemisch, Kauderwelsch. 3) entertainment = Sold, Dienst gegen Löhnung. 4) Damit wir uns dem Parolles nicht verrathen, der von allen benachbarten Sprachen Etwas versteht, muss Jeder von uns einen Mann nach seiner eigenen Phantasie darstellen, sich selbst seinen Jargon bilden, ohne dass wir das verstehen, was wir mit einander reden; wenn wir uns nur das Ansehen geben, als verständen wir gegenseitig den Sinn unserer Worte. — Anders fasst Malone das letzte to know = to make him, scil. Parolles, know our purpose. — Hanmer, in demselben Sinne, las to show straight our purpose. 5) plausible und plausible gebraucht Sh. unterschiedslos in den doppelten Bedeutungen der beiden Wörter; so in Hamlet (A. 1, Sc. 4) plausible manners, und plausible obedience in Measure for Measure (A. 3, Sc. 1). 6) instance = dringender Beweggrund. — Parolles fragt: Weshalb habe ich mich in solche gefährvolle Unternehmung eingelassen? und schilt dann auf seine prahlerische Zunge, die daran Schuld gewesen ist. 7) Welche bestimmte Anspielung Sh. mit Bajazet's mule verbunden hat, lässt sich jetzt nicht mehr nachweisen. — Manche Hgg. lesen mit Warburton mute für mule. — Jedenfalls will Parolles für seine geschwätzige Zunge, die er einem schwatzhaften Butterweibe absteht, sich eine schweigsamere kaufen. 8) to bare my beard = meinen Bart abschneiden.

Par. Though I swore I leaped from the window of the citadel —

1. Lord. [Aside.] How deep?

Par. Thirty fathom.

1. Lord. [Aside.] Three great oaths would scarce make that be believed.

Par. I would I had any drum of the enemy's: I would swear I recovered it.

1. Lord. [Aside.] You shall hear one anon.

Par. A drum now of the enemy's! [Alarum within.]

1. Lord. Throca movousus, cargo, cargo, cargo.

All. Cargo, cargo, villianda par corbo, cargo.

Par. O! ransom, ransom! — Do not hide mine eyes.

[They seize and blindfold him.]

1. Sold. Boskos thromuldo boskos.

Par. I know, you are the Muskos' ⁹ regiment;

And I shall lose my life for want of language.

If there be here German, or Dane, low Dutch,

Italian, or French, let him speak to me:

I will discover that which shall undo

The Florentine.

1. Sold. Boskos vauvado: —

I understand thee, and can speak thy tongue: —

Kerelybonto: — Sir,

Betake thee to thy faith, ¹⁰ for seventeen poniards

Are at thy bosom.

Par. O!

1. Sold. O! pray, pray, pray. —

Manka revania dulce.

1. Lord. Oscorbi dulchos volivorco.

1. Sold. The general is content to spare thee yet,

And, hoodwink'd as thou art, will lead thee on

To gather from thee: haply, thou may'st inform

Something to save thy life.

Par. O! let me live,

And all the secrets of our camp I'll show,

Their force, their purposes; nay, I'll speak that

Which you will wonder at.

1. Sold. But wilt thou faithfully?

Par. If I do not, damn me.

1. Sold. Acordo linta. —

Come on, thou art granted space.

[Exit, with PAROLLES guarded.]

1. Lord. Go, tell the count Rousillon, and my brother, ¹¹

We have caught the woodcock, and will keep him muffled,

Till we do hear from them.

2. Sold. Captain, I will.

1. Lord. 'A will betray us all unto ourselves.

Inform on that. ¹²

2. Sold. So I will, Sir.

1. Lord. Till then, I'll keep him dark, and safely lock'd. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Florence. A Room in the Widow's House.

Enter BERTRAM and DIANA.

Ber. They told me, that your name was Fontibell.

Dia. No, my good lord, Diana.

Ber. Titled goddess,

And worth it, ¹ with addition! But, fair soul,

In your fine frame hath love no quality? ²

If the quick fire of youth light not your mind,

You are no maiden, but a monument:

When you are dead, you should be such a one

As you are now, for you are cold and stern; ³

And now you should be as your mother was,

When your sweet self was got.

Dia. She then was honest.

Ber. So should you be.

Dia. No:

My mother did but duty; such, my lord,

As you owe to your wife.

Ber. No more o' that!

I pr'ythee, do not strive against my vows. ⁴

I was compell'd to her; but I love thee

By love's own sweet constraint, and will for ever

Do thee all rights of service.

Dia. Ay, so you serve us,

Till we serve you; but when you have our roses,

You barely leave our thorns to prick ourselves,

And mock us with our bareness.

Ber. How have I sworn!

Dia. 'T is not the many oaths that make the truth,

But the plain single vow, that is vow'd true.

What is not holy, that we swear not by,

But take the Highest to witness: ⁵ then, pray you, tell me,

If I should swear by Jove's great attributes,

I lov'd you dearly, would you believe my oaths,

When I did love you ill? This has no holding,

To swear by him, whom I protest to love,

— Parolles will glauben machen, die Feinde hätten ihn auf seiner Expedition so zugerichtet. — Ueber stratagem vgl. A. 3, Sc. 6, Anm. 6. 9) Als Muskos versteht Parolles das boskos des ersten Soldaten, dessen Reden die Fol. von hier an mit Inter. (scil. Interpreter) bezeichnet. 10) Suche Deinen Trost in Deinem Glauben, bereite Dich christlich auf Dein Ende vor. — So auch das folgende pray = bete. 11) my brother ist der 2. French Lord. 12) So die Fol. mit verständlichem Sinn = Gebt darüber Auskunft. — Rowe änderte Inform 'em that.

1) scil. worth to be a titled goddess, mit der Anspielung auf den Namen Diana. 2) quality = Eigenschaft. Fehlt in dem schönen Gebilde, aus dem Ihr besteht, die Eigenschaft der Liebe? 3) Kalt und streng, in Gesicht und Haltung, wie ein steinernes oder ehernes Bild auf einem Grabmal. In solchem Sinne steht monument auch in Taming of the Shrew (A. 3, Sc. 2) As if they saw some wondrous monument. 4) my vows erklärt Steevens als die Gelübde, mit denen Bertram sich auf ewig von der Helena losgesagt hatte. Eher versteht Bertram aber die Betheuerungen seiner Liebe zur Diana darunter, denen diese nicht länger widerstreben soll. So sagt er gleich nachher How have I sworn! in deutlicher Beziehung zur Diana, was als Ausruf, nicht als Frage zu fassen ist. 5) Es giebt nichts Heiliges, das wir nicht zu Zeugen unserer Schwüre anrufen, und selbst das Heiligste rufen wir so an. 6) this has no holding weist auf das Folgende hin: Darauf ist kein Verlass, wenn ich, in der angegebenen Weise, in Bezug auf Einen, den ich zu lieben betheure, Eide schwöre, nur zu dem Zweck, dass ich unter der Maske dieser Eide beabsichtige, gegen ihn zu verfahren, ihm zu schaden. — by in to swear by him lässt sich nicht wohl auffassen, wie die Hgg. es thun, die zum Theil dafür swear to him lesen wollen, wie by in swear by Jove's great attributes, sondern by him ist = Einem gegenüber, in Verkehr mit Einem, in Bezug auf Einen. — Andere beziehen swear by him auf Jove, und lassen whom I protest etc. abhängen von work against him. —

That I will work against him.⁶ Therefore, your oaths
Are words, and poor conditions, but unseal'd;
At least, in my opinion.⁷

Ber. Change it, change it.
Be not so holy-cruel; love is holy,
And my integrity ne'er knew the crafts
That you do charge men with. Stand no more off,
But give thyself unto my sick desires,
Who then recover: say, thou art mine, and ever
My love, as it begins, shall so persevere.

Dia. I see, that men make ropes in such a scarr,⁸
That we'll forsake ourselves. Give me that ring.

Ber. I'll lend it thee, my dear; but have no power
To give it from me.

Dia. Will you not, my lord?

Ber. It is an honour 'longing to our house,
Bequeathed down from many ancestors,
Which were the greatest obloquy i' the world
In me to lose.

Dia. Mine honour 's such a ring.
My chastity 's the jewel of our house,
Bequeathed down from many ancestors,
Which were the greatest obloquy i' the world
In me to lose. Thus, your own proper wisdom Brings in the champion honour⁹ on my part
Against your vain assault.

Ber. Here, take my ring:
My house, mine honour, yea, my life, be thine,
And I'll be bid by thee.

Dia. When midnight comes, knock at my chamber-window:

I'll order take, my mother shall not hear.
Now will I charge you in the band of truth,
When you have conquer'd my yet maiden bed,
Remain there but an hour, nor speak to me.
My reasons are most strong; and you shall know them,
When back again this ring shall be deliver'd:
And on your finger, in the night, I'll put

Another ring, that what in time proceeds
May token to the future our past deeds.¹⁰

Adieu, till then; then, fail not. You have won
A wife of me,¹¹ though there my hope be done.

Ber. A heaven on earth I have won by wooing thee.

[Exit.]

Dia. For which live long to thank both heaven and me!

You may so in the end. —

My mother told me just how he would woo,
As if she sat in 's heart; she says, all men
Have the like oaths. He had sworn to marry me,
When his wife 's dead; therefore I'll lie with him,
When I am buried. Since Frenchmen are so braid,¹²
Marry that will, I live and die a maid:
Only, in this disguise, I think 't no sin
To cozen him, that would unjustly win. [Exit.]

SCENE III.

The Florentine Camp.

Enter the Two French Lords, and Two or Three Soldiers.

1. Lord. You have not given him his mother's letter?

2. Lord. I have delivered it an hour since: there is something in 't that stings his nature, for on the reading it he changed almost into another man.

1. Lord. He has much worthy blame laid upon him,¹ for shaking off so good a wife, and so sweet a lady.

2. Lord. Especially he hath incurred the everlasting displeasure of the king, who had even tuned his bounty to sing happiness to him. I will tell you a thing, but you shall let it dwell darkly within you.

1. Lord. When you have spoken it, 't is dead, and I am the grave of it.²

2. Lord. He hath perverted a young gentlewoman, here in Florence, of a most chaste renown, and this night

Staunton sucht die Schwierigkeiten dieser Stelle zu beseitigen, indem er die Rede anders vertheilt. Demnach spricht Diana: 'Tis not the many — — — to witness. Dann spricht Bertram: Then, pray you, — — — love you ill? Endlich Diana: This has no holding — — — in my opinion. 7) Eure Eidschwüre sind nur Worte und arme Vorschläge, auf die aber mein Gutachten, meine Ansicht von ihnen, wenigstens noch nicht das Siegel der Bestätigung und Genehmigung gedrückt hat. — Das folgende change it bezieht sich auf my opinion. 8) In der Fol. lautet die schwierige und vielleicht corrumpte Stelle: I see that men make rope's in such a scarre That wee'l forsake our selves. — Für ropes lesen die meisten Hgg. mit Rowe hopes, und to make hopes soll heissen: sich Hoffnungen schaffen. — Für a scarre liest Rowe affairs, Malone a scene, Dyce a case; Singer, der früher a war las, entscheidet sich jetzt für a scare = terror, alarm. — scarr ist ein steiler Felsen, zu dessen Ersteigung die Männer Stricke anwenden, während die Mädchen sich schon für verloren halten. Der unfigürliche Sinn wird also sein: Die Männer wissen sich in einer solchen Verlegenheit, in der wir uns preisgeben, immer zu helfen. — Staunton liest mit Rowe hopes und nach eigener Conjectur snare für scarre. — Eine plausible Lesart von Williams führen die Cambridge Edd. an: may cope's (für cope us) in such a sorte. Damit wäre die seltsame Schreibweise der Fol. rope's für ropes erklärt. 9) honour, die Ehre oder der Ehrenschnuck, den Bertram angeführt hatte, um den Ring zu verweigern, dient nun der Diana ihrerseits als Kämpfe zur Vertheidigung gegen Bertram's Angriffe. 10) Die Ringe, die wir wechseln, sollen bei dem, was die Zeit noch bringen mag, uns als ein Erinnerungszeichen unseres vergangenen Thuns dienen. 11) Diana spricht geflissentlich zweideutig, da sie unter a wife of me die Helena versteht, mit welcher Bertram durch ihr Bemühen wieder vereinigt werden soll; während Bertram glaubt, dass Diana selbst, wie eine Gattin, sich ihm zu eigen geben wolle. 12) braid, das durch den Reim gesichert ist, findet sich als Adjectiv nur an dieser Stelle und wird theils erklärt = listig, verschlagen, von dem substantivischen braid = List, theils = heftig, leidenschaftlich, wie at a braid = plötzlich, im jähen Stoss. — Ein verbales to braid kommt vor = to start, und Boaden fasst daher braid hier = fickle, apt to start away. — In der folgenden Zeile lesen manche Hgg. mit den späteren Folioausgg. I'll live.

1) Er hat sich sehr verdienten Tadel zugezogen. 2) So in Coriolanus (A. 1, Sc. 9) you shall not be the grave of your deserving. 3) his monumental ring = ein Ring, der zum Gedächtniss seines Stammes gehört, der in diesem Gedächtniss vererbt wird. — Diesen Ring hat Bertram der Diana überliefert, dafür, dass sie sich ihm preisgibt, und er hält sich für einen gemachten Mann, er glaubt, dass er sehr gewinne bei diesem un-he fleshes his will in the spoil of her honour: he hath given her his monumental ring,³ and thinks himself made in the unchaste composition.

1. Lord. Now, God delay our rebellion:⁴ as we are ourselves, what things are we!

2. Lord. Merely our own traitors: and as in the common course of all treasons, we still see them reveal themselves, till they attain to their abhorred ends, so he that in this action contrives against his own nobility, in his proper stream o'erflows himself.⁵

1. Lord. Is it not meant damnable⁶ in us, to be trumpeters of our unlawful intents? We shall not then have his company to-night?

2. Lord. Not till after midnight, for he is dieted to his hour.

1. Lord. That approaches apace: I would gladly have him see his company⁷ anatomized, that he might take a measure of his own judgments, wherein so curiously he had set this counterfeit.

2. Lord. We will not meddle with him till he come, for his presence must be the whip of the other.⁸

1. Lord. In the meantime, what hear you of these wars?

2. Lord. I hear there is an overture of peace.

1. Lord. Nay, I assure you, a peace concluded.

2. Lord. What will count Rousillon do then? will he travel higher,⁹ or return again into France?

1. Lord. I perceive by this demand, you are not altogether of his council.

2. Lord. Let it be forbid, Sir; so should I be a great deal of his act.

1. Lord. Sir, his wife some two months since fled from his house: her pretence¹⁰ is a pilgrimage to Saint Jaques le Grand, which holy undertaking with most austere sanctimony she accomplished; and, there residing, the tenderness of her nature became as a prey to her grief; in fine, made a groan of her last breath, and now she sings in heaven.

2. Lord. How is this justified?

1. Lord. The stronger part¹¹ of it by her own letters; which makes her story true, even to the point of her death: her death itself, which could not be her office to say is come,¹² was faithfully confirmed by the rector of the place.

2. Lord. Hath the count all this intelligence?

1. Lord. Ay, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arming of the verity.¹³

2. Lord. I am heartily sorry that he'll be glad of this.

1. Lord. How mightily, sometimes, we make us comforts of our losses!

2. Lord. And how mightily, some other times, we drown our gain in tears. The great dignity, that his valour hath here acquired for him, shall at home be encountered with a shame as ample.

1. Lord. The web of our life is of a mingled yarn, good and ill together: our virtues would be proud, if our faults whipped them not; and our crimes would despair,¹⁴ if they were not cherished by our virtues.

Enter a Servant.

How now? where's your master?

Serv. He met the duke in the street, Sir, of whom he hath taken a solemn leave; his lordship will next morning for France. The duke hath offered him letters of commendations to the king.

2. Lord. They shall be no more than needful there, if they were more than they can commend.

1. Lord. They cannot be too sweet for the king's tartness. Here's his lordship now.

Enter BERTRAM.

How now, my lord! is't not after midnight?

Ber. I have to-night despatched sixteen businesses, a month's length a-piece, by an abstract of success:¹⁵ I have conge'd with the duke, done my adieu with his nearest, buried a wife, mourned for her, writ to my lady mother I am returning, entertained my convoy;¹⁶ and between these main parcels of despatch effected many nicer needs:¹⁷ the last was the greatest, but that I have not ended yet.

2. Lord. If the business be of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it requires haste of your lordship.

Ber. I mean, the business is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter. But shall we have this dialogue between the fool and the soldier?¹⁸ Come, bring forth this keuschen Verträge oder Handel. 4) rebellion in Bezug auf God = Empörung gegen Gott, Abfall zur Sünde. — So auch das folgende as we are ourselves = wie wir ohne Gottes Beistand sind. 5) Wie die Verräther sich allemal selbst entdecken, noch ehe sie ihre bösen Zwecke erreichen, so ist auch Graf Rousillon bei dem Plan, den er gegen seinen eignen angeborenen Adel geschmiedet, über die Grenzen seines eignen Strombettes hinausgetreten, d. h. er hat seine verbrecherischen Absichten auf die Diana verrathen, ehe er sie ausgeführt. — Staunton erklärt abhorred ends mit disgraceful punishments. Indess ist nicht wohl abzusehen, wie die Worte diesen Sinn haben können. 6) M. Mason las mean and damnable, und Johnson dachte an most damnable. Indess steht das Adjectiv in adverbialen Sinne, wie Sh. die Adjectiva auf —ble vorzugsweise statt der Adverbia auf —bly auch sonst anwendet. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 5, Anm. 15. 7) company = Gefährte, die Person, die man sich zur Gesellschaft wählt. Hier ist Parolles gemeint, dessen bevorstehender Enthüllung oder moralischer Zergliederung Bertram beiwohnen soll, um einen richtigen Massstab seines eignen Urtheils zu gewinnen, in welchem Urtheil er diesen Heuchler und werthlosen Menschen in so erlesener Weise (curiously) hochgestellt oder eingefasst hatte. 8) Die Anwesenheit des Einen muss die Züchtigung des Andern werden; Bertram und Parolles sollen beide durch einander bestraft werden. — So gebraucht Sh. his und the other's = des Einen und des Andern, auch in Macbeth (A. 4, Sc. 3) Desire his jewels, and this other's house. 9) d. h. weiter hinauf in Italien. 10) pretence = ausgesprochene Absicht. 11) the stronger part erklärt Dyce richtig mit the main part = der bedeutendere Theil der Nachrichten von Helena. 12) Ihr Tod, von dem es nicht ihr Amt sein konnte zu sagen, dass er gekommen. — Das it, das vor could zu suppliren wäre, lässt Sh. in solcher Construction leicht aus. 13) So dass die Wahrheit in voller Beweiskraft erscheint, dass die Wahrheit mit allen Bestätigungen ausgerüstet ist. 14) d. h. wir würden wegen unserer Schlechtigkeit verzweifeln, wenn unsere Tugend uns nicht wieder Muth machte. 15) by an abstract of success = vermittelst einer glücklichen Abkürzung oder Zusammenfassung habe ich heute Nacht sechzehn Geschäfte, die jedes für sich einen Monat dauern würden, auf einmal abgemacht. 16) Ich habe counterfeit model:¹⁹ he has deceived me, like a double-meaning prophet.

2. Lord. Bring him forth. [Exeunt Soldiers.] He has sat i' the stocks all night, poor gallant knave.

Ber. No matter; his heels have deserved it, in usurping his spurs so long.²⁰ How does he carry himself?

1. Lord. I have told your lordship already; the stocks carry him.²¹ But, to answer you as you would be understood, he weeps, like a wench that had shed her milk. He hath confessed himself to Morgan, whom he supposes to be a friar, from the time of his remembrance to this very instant disaster of his setting i' the stocks; and what think you he hath confessed?

Ber. Nothing of me, has 'a?

2. Lord. His confession is taken, and it shall be read to his face: if your lordship be in 't, as I believe you are, you must have the patience to hear it.

*Re-enter Soldiers, with PAROLLES.*²²

Ber. A plague upon him! muffled? he can say nothing of me: hush! hush!

1. Lord. Hoodman²³ comes! — Porto tartarossa.

1. Sold. He calls for the tortures: what will you say without 'em?

Par. I will confess what I know without constraint: if ye pinch me like a pasty, I can say no more.

1. Sold. Bosko chimurcho.

2. Lord. Boblibindo chicurmurco.

1. Sold. You are a merciful general. — Our general bids you answer to what I shall ask you out of a note.

Par. And truly, as I hope to live.

1. Sold. »First, demand of him, how many horse the duke is strong.« What say you to that?

Par. Five or six thousand; but very weak and unserviceable: the troops are all scattered, and the commanders very poor rogues, upon my reputation and credit, and as I hope to live.

1. Sold. Shall I set down your answer so?

Par. Do: I'll take the sacrament on 't, how and which way you will.

Ber. All 's one to him.²⁴ What a past-saving slave is this!

1. Lord. You are deceived, my lord: this is Monsieur

Parolles, the gallant militarist,²⁵ (that was his own phrase) that had the whole theoric²⁶ of war in the knot of his scarf, and the practice in the chape²⁷ of his dagger.

2. Lord. I will never trust a man again for keeping his sword clean; nor believe he can have every thing in him by wearing his apparel neatly.

1. Sold. Well, that 's set down.

Par. Five or six thousand horse, I said, — I will say true, — or thereabouts, set down, — for I'll speak truth.

1. Lord. He 's very near the truth in this.

Ber. But I con him no thanks for 't, in the nature he delivers it.²⁸

Par. Poor rogues,²⁹ I pray you, say.

1. Sold. Well, that 's set down.

Par. I humbly thank you, Sir. A truth 's a truth: the rogues are marvellous poor.

1. Sold. »Demand of him, of what strength they are afoot.« What say you to that?

Par. By my troth, Sir, if I were to live this present hour,³⁰ I will tell true. Let me see: Spurio, a hundred and fifty; Sebastian, so many; Corambus, so many; Jaques, so many; Guiltian, Cosmo, Lodowick, and Gratii, two hundred fifty each; mine own company, Chitopher, Vau-mond, Bentii, two hundred fifty each: so that the muster-file, rotten and sound,³¹ upon my life, amounts not to fifteen thousand poll; half of the which dare not shake the snow from off their cassocks,³² lest they shake themselves to pieces.

Ber. What shall be done to him?

1. Lord. Nothing, but let him have thanks. — Demand of him my condition,³³ and what credit I have with the duke.

1. Sold. Well, that 's set down. »You shall demand of him, whether one captain Dumain be i' the camp, a Frenchman; what his reputation is with the duke; what his valour, honesty, and expertness in wars; or whether he thinks, it were not possible with well-weighing sums of gold to corrupt him to a revolt.« What say you to this? what do you know of it?

Par. I beseech you, let me answer to the particular of the inter'gatories:³⁴ demand them singly.

1. Sold. Do you know this captain Dumain?

mein Weggeleit engagirt. 17) nicer needs = geringfügigere Besorgungen, ist dem main parcels of despatch = hauptsächlich Stücke, die erledigt werden, entgegengesetzt. 18) Bertram betrachtet das scherzhafte Verhör, das sie mit Parolles vornehmen wollen, wie eine Theaterscene, die zwischen einem Narren und einem Soldaten aufgeführt wird. Parolles stellt in seiner Person Beide vor. 19) counterfeit model, in der alten Orthographie der Fol. hier module, = eine Form, ein Abbild, das unächt, nachgemacht ist einem ächten, wahren Mann. 20) Er hat verdient, mit den Fersen in den Block gesteckt zu werden, weil er so lange an ihnen ohne Berechtigung die Sporen, die nur dem Ritter zukommen, getragen hat. 21) Wortspiel zwischen to carry one's self = sich benehmen, sich betragen, und to carry = Jemanden tragen. 22) Die Fol. hat Enter Parolles with his Interpreter. Demgemäss werden auch die Reden des 1. Sold. mit Interpreter bezeichnet. Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 1, Anm. 9. 23) hoodman ist die Blindkuh im Blindkuhspiel, das zu Sh.'s Zeit hoodman blind hiess. 24) all 's one to him verbindet die Fol. noch mit der vorigen Rede des Parolles, weshalb Rowe me für him setzte. — Die richtige Vertheilung rührt von Capell her. 25) militarist = Kenner des Militärwesens, ein geflissentlich affectirtes Wort, das kaum anderswo vorkommt, gebildet nach Analogie von martialist, statist. 26) theoric. eine ältere Nebenform für theory, die Sh. auch sonst anwendet. — Zu dem folgenden practice ist of war zu suppliren. 27) chape = der Haken, an welchem der Dolch festgehängt wird. 28) Ich weiss es ihm keinen Dank, dass er die Wahrheit spricht, da er sie als feiger Verräther von sich giebt. 29) Parolles kommt auf seine frühern Worte zurück: the commanders very poor rogues. 30) Steevens versteht but this present hour: wenn ich nur diese Stunde noch leben sollte. — Tolleret vermuthet, dass Parolles in seiner Angst sich verspreche und live für die sage. 31) Die Musterrolle der Soldaten, der Angefaulten sowohl wie der Gesunden. 32) cassock = ein weiter Mantel, der auch bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen als zur Soldatentracht gehörig vorkommt. So in Glapthorne's Hollander: Here, Sir, receive this military cassock, it has seen service. 33) condition = Qualification, sowohl die innere, als die äusserliche. 34) inter'gatories für interrogatories ist auch anderswo durch das Versmass gesichert; so in Mer-

Par. I know him: he was a botcher's 'prentice in Paris, from whence he was whipped for getting the shrieve's fool³⁵ with child; a dumb innocent, that could not say him, nay. [DUMAIN lifts up his hand in anger.]

Ber. Nay, by your leave, hold your hands; though I know, his brains are forfeit to the next tile that falls.

1. Sold. Well, is this captain in the duke of Florence's camp?

Par. Upon my knowledge he is, and lousy.

1. Lord. Nay, look not so upon me; we shall hear of your lordship³⁶ anon.

1. Sold. What is his reputation with the duke?

Par. The duke knows him for no other but a poor officer of mine, and writ to me this other day to turn him out o' the band: I think, I have his letter in my pocket.

1. Sold. Marry, we 'll search.

Par. In good sadness,³⁷ I do not know: either it is there, or it is upon a file, with the duke's other letters, in my tent.

1. Sold. Here 't is: here 's a paper; shall I read it to you?

Par. I do not know if it be it, or no.

Ber. Our interpreter does it well.

1. Lord. Excellently.

1. Sold. [Reads.] »Dian, the count's a fool, and full of gold,« —

Par. That is not the duke's letter, Sir: that is an advertisement to a proper maid in Florence, one Diana, to take heed of the allurements of one count Rousillon, a foolish idle boy, but, for all that, very ruttish. I pray you, Sir, put it up again.

1. Sold. Nay, I 'll read it first, by your favour.

Par. My meaning in 't, I protest, was very honest in the behalf of the maid: for I knew the young count to be a dangerous and lascivious boy, who is a whale to virginity, and devours up all the fry it finds.

Ber. Damnable, both-sides³⁸ rogue!

1. Sold. [Reads.] »When he swears oaths, bid him drop gold, and take it;

After he scores, he never pays the score:³⁹

Half won is match well made; match, and well make it:⁴⁰

He ne'er pays after⁴¹ debts; take it before,

And say, a soldier, Dian, told thee this.

Men are to mell with, boys are not to kiss;⁴²

For count of this, the count's a fool, I know it.

Who pays before, but not when he does owe it.

Thine, as he vow'd to thee in thine ear,

PAROLLES. «

Ber. He shall be whipped through the army, with this rhyme in 's forehead.

2. Lord. This is your devoted friend, Sir; the manifold linguist,⁴³ and the armipotent soldier.

Ber. I could endure anything before but a cat, and now he's a cat to me.

1. Sold. I perceive, Sir, by our⁴⁴ general's looks, we shall be fain to hang you.

Par. My life, Sir, in any case! not that I am afraid to die; but that, my offences being many, I would repent out the remainder of nature.⁴⁵ Let me live, Sir, in a dungeon, i' the stocks, or anywhere, so I may live.

1. Sold. We 'll see what may be done, so you confess freely: therefore, once more to this captain Dumain. You have answered to his reputation with the duke, and to his valour: what is his honesty?

Par. He will steal, Sir, an egg out of a cloister:⁴⁶ for rapes and ravishments he parallels Nessus.⁴⁷ He professes not keeping of oaths; in breaking them he is stronger than Hercules. He will lie, Sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a fool: drunkenness is his best virtue; for he will be swine-drunk, and in his sleep he does little harm, save to his bed-clothes about him; but they know his conditions,⁴⁸ and lay him in straw. I have but little more to say, Sir, of his honesty: he has every thing that an honest man should not have; what an honest man should have, he has nothing.

1. Lord. I begin to love him for this.

Ber. For this description of thine honesty? A pox upon him! for me he is more and more a cat.

chant of Venice (A. 5, Sc. 1) And charge us there upon intergatories. 35) a shrieve's fool ist, wie aus dem Folgenden erhellt, ein blödsinniges Mädchen, das der Obhut des Vogts, als ihres natürlichen Vormundes, anvertraut war. — Diese blödsinnige Person (innocent) konnte zu Dumain nicht Nein! sagen, weil sie überhaupt nicht sprechen konnte. — Die folgende Bühnenweisung ist modern. — In Bertram's folgender Rede liegt eine Anspielung auf die sprichwörtliche Geschichte von dem Ziegel, der vom Dache fällt und Den tödtet, dem das Schicksal solchen plötzlichen Tod bestimmt hat. 36) So verbessern die Hgg. your lord in der Fol. — lord und lordship wurden in den Handschriften abbreviiert. 37) sadness = Ernst. 38) both-sides ist Adjectiv zu rogue = ein achselträgerischer, doppelzüngiger Schurke. Parolles war zugleich der Kuppler des Grafen bei Diana und warnte sie vor ihm. — Schon die Fol. schreibt both-sides. 39) Wenn er einmal die Schuld anschreiben lässt, wenn er sie nicht auf der Stelle bezahlt, so bezahlt er sie nie. 40) Wenn ein Handel halb gewonnen ist, wenn die Bezahlung so gut wie gewiss ist, so ist er gut abgeschlossen; schliesse Du also den Handel ab und schliesse ihn gut ab. — to match ist zugleich doppelsinnig = unterhandeln, und = sich paaren. 41) after, adverbial = nachher, steht dem before = vorher, gegenüber. 42) to mell ist to meddle = mit Jemandem sich einlassen, verkehren. — Theobald las boys are but to kiss, weil er willkürlich einen Gegensatz zwischen mell und kiss annahm. — In der folgenden Zeile ist ein Wortspiel zwischen to count of = Etwas in Anschlag bringen, und count = Graf. 43) manifold linguist = vielseitiger Sprachkenner. So hiess es in A. 4, Sc. 1 von Parolles: he hath a smack of all neighbouring languages. — Das hier ironisch angewandte armipotent wird gewöhnlich dem Mars beigelegt; schon in Chaucer's Knights Tale, und ebenso in Sh.'s Love's Labour's Lost (A. 5, Sc. 2) the armipotent Mars. 44) Die Fol. hat your, wofür die spätern Folioausgg. the setzen. Die bessere Emendation our findet sich schon bei Capell. 45) Ich möchte den Rest der mir von der Natur gesetzten Lebensfrist in Reue und Busse verbringen. — nature = das organische Leben des einzelnen Menschen, und = der menschliche Organismus selbst, kommt oft bei Sh. vor. 46) out of a cloister steht hier wegen der Heiligkeit eines solchen Platzes, aus dem selbst eine Kleinigkeit, wie ein Ei, zu stehlen, schon ruchlos ist. — Staunton fasst egg als Metapher = young girl auf. 47) Den Centauren Nessus, der der Deianira, der Gemahlin des Hercules, Gewalt anthat, erwähnt Sh. auch in Antony and Cleopatra (A. 4, Sc. 10) the shirt of Nessus is upon me. 48) Vgl. oben Anm. 33. 49) Er versteht vom Kriege nicht mehr, als dass er mit der Trommel vor den im Lande umherziehenden Schauspielern einher-

1. Sold. What say you to his expertness in war?

Par. 'Faith, Sir, he has led the drum before the English tragedians,⁴⁹ — to belie him, I will not, — and more of his soldiership I know not; except, in that country, he had the honour to be the officer at a place there called Mile-end, to instruct for the doubling of files: I would do the man what honour I can, but of this I am not certain.⁵⁰

1. Lord. He hath out-villained villany⁵¹ so far, that the rarity redeems him.

Ber. A pox on him! he 's a cat still.⁵²

1. Sold. His qualities being at this poor price, I need not ask you, if gold will corrupt him to revolt.

Par. Sir, for a cardcue⁵³ he will sell the fee-simple of his salvation, the inheritance of it; and cut the entail from all remainders, and a perpetual succession for it perpetually.

1. Sold. What 's his brother, the other captain Dumain?

2. Lord. Why does he ask him of me?

1. Sold. What 's he?

Par. E'en a crow o' the same nest; not altogether so great as the first in goodness, but greater a great deal in evil. He excels his brother for a coward, yet his brother is reputed one of the best that is. In a retreat he outruns any lackey; marry, in coming on he has the cramp.

1. Sold. If your life be saved, will you undertake to betray the Florentine?

Par. Ay, and the captain of his horse, count Rousillon.

1. Sold. I 'll whisper with the general, and know his pleasure.

Par. [Aside.] I 'll no more drumming; a plague of all drums! Only to seem to deserve well, and to beguile the supposition of that lascivious young boy the count,⁵⁴ have I run into this danger. Yet who would have suspected an ambush, where I was taken?

1. Sold. There is no remedy, Sir, but you must die. The general says, you, that have so traitorously discovered the secrets of your army, and made such pestiferous reports of men very nobly held, can serve the world for no honest use; therefore you must die. Come, headsman, off with his head.

Par. O Lord, Sir, let me live, or let me see my death!

1. Sold. That shall you, and take your leave of all your friends. [Unmuffling him.]

So, look about you: know you any here?

Ber. Good morrow, noble captain.

2. Lord. God bless you, captain Parolles.

1. Lord. God save you, noble captain.

2. Lord. Captain, what greeting will you to my lord Lafeu? I am for France.

1. Lord. Good captain, will you give me a copy of the sonnet you writ to Diana in behalf of the count Rousillon? an I were not a very coward,⁵⁵ I 'd compel it of you; but fare you well. [Exeunt BERTRAM, Frenchmen, etc.]

1. Sold. You are undone, captain; all but your scarf, that has a knot on 't yet.⁵⁶

Par. Who cannot be crushed with a plot?

1. Sold. If you could find out a country where but women were, that had received so much shame, you might begin an impudent nation.⁵⁷ Fare you well, Sir; I am for France too: we shall speak of you there. [Exit.]

Par. Yet am I thankful: if my heart were great, 'T would burst at this. Captain I 'll be no more; But I will eat and drink, and sleep as soft As captain shall: simply the thing I am Shall make me live. Who knows himself a braggart, Let him fear this;⁵⁸ for it will come to pass, That every braggart shall be found an ass. Rust, sword! cool, blushes! and, Parolles, live Safest in shame! being fool'd, by foolery thrive! There 's place and means for every man alive! I 'll after them. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.

Florence. A Room in the Widow's House.

Enter HELENA, Widow, and DIANA.

Hel. That you may well perceive I have not wrong'd you,

One of the greatest in the christian world Shall be my surety: 'fore whose throne, 't is needful, Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneel. Time was, I did him a desired office, Dear almost as his life; which gratitude¹ Through flinty Tartar's bosom would peep forth, marschirt ist. Weil Sh. hier eine in England vorkommende Sitte von Franzosen erwähnen lässt, fügt er English vor tragedians hinzu, wie er auch im Folgenden, wo er sich auf eine Anwesenheit Dumain's in England bezieht, Mile-end, einen Uebungsplatz für die Londoner Bürgermiliz, der seinem Publicum sehr wohl bekannt war, bezeichnet at a place there called Mile-end. 50) of this bezieht sich auf das vorher Erzählte von except an: wenn er nicht etwa in England die Ehre gehabt hat u. s. w. 51) to out-villain villany ist zusammengestellt wie to out-frown fortune's frown in K. Lear (A. 5, Sc. 3), und to out-herod Herod in Hamlet (A. 3, Sc. 2). 52) scil. a cat for me = so verhasst, wie eine Katze mir nur sein kann. So hatte Bertram vorher gesagt and now he 's a cat to me. 53) cardcue, französisch quart d'écu, der vierte Theil einer französischen Krone, eine Münze, die auch in England viel circulirte. — Die meisten Hgg. schreiben dieses in England eingebürgerte Wort im Widerspruch mit der Fol. französisch quart d'écu. — Für einen Viertelthaler würde Dumain nicht nur seinen eigenen Anspruch auf die künftige Seligkeit verkaufen, sondern zugleich alle ferneren Anrechte seiner Nachkommen daran, die sie kraft der Erbschaft erheben könnten, im Voraus abschneiden. 54) Um den jungen Grafen in seiner Meinung von meiner Tapferkeit fälschlich zu erhalten oder zu bestärken; um mir fälschlich seine gute Meinung zu gewinnen. 55) Er bezieht sich auf Parolles' frühere Worte He excels his brother for a coward etc. 56) Wortspiel zwischen undone = vernichtet, und = aufgelöst, von der Schleife, welche Parolles' Schärpe zusammenhält. — Die Schärpe und die Bänder, mit denen Parolles sich putzt, bilden durch das ganze Drama hindurch einen Gegenstand der Persiflage. 57) Mit einer Frau, die bei so viel Schmach so frech bliebe wie Parolles, könnte Parolles geistesverwandte Kinder zeugen und der Stammvater eines Volkes werden, das sich durch Unverschämtheit auszeichnete. 58) Der nehme sich ein warnendes Beispiel daran.

1) which gratitude steht in Sh.'s lockerer Relativverbindung = wofür die Dankbarkeit, oder so dass die Dankbarkeit dafür. 2) Marseilles, in der Fol. Marcellae, gebraucht Sh. dreisylbig. 3) Da das Heer sich auflöst,

And answer, thanks. I duly am inform'd,
His grace is at Marseilles;² to which place
We have convenient convoy. You must know,
I am supposed dead: the army breaking,
My husband hies him home;³ where, heaven aiding,
And by the leave of my good lord the king,
We'll be before our welcome.⁴

Wid. Gentle Madam,
You never had a servant, to whose trust
Your business was more welcome.

Hel. Nor you, mistress,⁵
Ever a friend, whose thoughts more truly labour
To recompense your love. Doubt not, but heaven
Hath brought me up to be your daughter's dower,
As it hath fated her to be my motive,⁶
And helper to a husband. But, O strange men!
That can such sweet use make of what they hate,
When saucy trusting of the cozen'd thoughts
Defiles the pitchy night!⁷ so lust doth play
With what it loathes, for that which is away.
But more of this hereafter. — You, Diana,
Under my poor instructions, yet must suffer
Something in my behalf.

Dia. Let death and honesty⁸
Go with your impositions, I am yours
Upon your will to suffer.

Hel. Yet, I pray you:⁹
But with the word,¹⁰ the time will bring on summer,
When briars shall have leaves as well as thorns,
And be as sweet as sharp. We must away;
Our waggon is prepar'd, and time revives us:
All's well that ends well: still the fine's¹¹ the crown;
Whate'er the course, the end is the renown. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Rousillon. A Room in the COUNTESS'S Palace.

Enter COUNTESS, LAFEU, and Clown.

Laf. No, no, no; your son was misled with a snipt-taffeta fellow¹ there, whose villanous saffron² would have made all the unbaked and doughy youth of a nation in his colour: your daughter-in-law had been alive at this hour, and your son here at home, more advanced by the king, than by that red-tailed³ humble-bee I speak of.

Count. I would I had⁴ not known him. It was the death of the most virtuous gentlewoman that ever nature had praise for creating: if she had partaken of my flesh, and cost me the dearest groans⁵ of a mother, I could not have owed her a more rooted love.

Laf. 'T was a good lady, 't was a good lady: we may pick a thousand salads, ere we light on such another herb.

Clo. Indeed, Sir, she was the sweet-marjoram of the salad, or rather the herb of grace.⁶

Laf. They are not salad-herbs,⁷ you knave; they are nose-herbs.

Clo. I am no great Nebuchadnezzar, Sir; I have not much skill in grass.

Laf. Whether dost thou profess thyself, a knave,⁸ or a fool?

Clo. A fool, Sir, at a woman's service, and a knave at a man's.

Laf. Your distinction?

Clo. I would cozen the man of his wife, and do his service.

so eilt mein Gatte nach Haus. 4) Wo wir eintreffen wollen, ehe man uns willkommen heissen kann, ehe man dort auf unsern Empfang sich gefasst macht. 5) Die Fol. hat nor your mistress, was Rowe emendirte. 6) my motive erklärte Malone mit mover. Es ist aber vielleicht eher = das Werkzeug, das ich in Bewegung setzte, wie in Troilus and Cressida (A. 4, Sc. 5) motive ein bewegendes oder bewegliches Glied bedeutet. 7) Wenn die sinnliche Leichtgläubigkeit der betrogenen Gedanken die pechschwarze Nacht befleckt; wenn der von der dunkeln Nacht getäuschte Bertram seiner Wollust leichtgläubig sich hingiebt, da er die Helena für Diana hält. — saucy = sinnlich zudringlich. — Bei defiles the pitchy night dachte Sh. an das Sprichwort Pitch defiles. — Auch das folgende to play = sein Spiel mit Etwas treiben, ist von dem Liebesgenusse verstanden. 8) Die Copula and verbindet auch hier zwei Begriffe, die eigentlich einen bilden sollten: Möge ein Tod in der Ehrbarkeit, oder ein ehrbarer Tod, den Aufträgen, die Ihr mir ertheilt, beigesellt sein, so will ich doch Euch gehorchen. — imposition = Aufgabe, Befehl. 9) Helena wiederholt, mit dem bittenden I pray you begleitet, das yet ihres vorigen Satzes: you yet must suffer etc. — Blackstone schlug vor zu lesen yet I pray you but with the word = doch ich erschrecke Euch nur mit dem Worte (d. h. mit dem Worte suffer). — Staunton vermuthet yet I pay you but with the word = jetzt bezahle ich Euch nur mit dem Worte. 10) with the word, eigentlich = so wie das Wort sich sprechen lässt, steht allgemein = im Nu, plötzlich kommt der Sommer, wo an den Büschen nicht bloss Dornen, sondern auch Blätter sich finden, wo die Büsche nicht bloss scharf, durch die Dornen, sondern auch süß, durch die Früchte, sind. — Helena weist auf die Zeit hin, wo Freude und Leid sich ausgleicht. — In Verbindung mit diesem Bilde ist auch das folgende time revives us zu verstehen: die Zeit des Glückes, welche wiederkehrt, giebt uns neuen Muth für das, was wir jetzt zu thun haben. — Hamner las reviles, und Johnson invites für revives. 11) fine = Ende. Sh. gebraucht das seltene Wort hier in Beziehung auf das lateinische Sprichwort Finis coronat opus, das er dreifach wiedergiebt, erst mit dem Titel seines Dramas, dann mit einer englischen Uebersetzung, endlich mit einer Paraphrase: Whate'er the course etc.

1) Ein Gesell, der ein Wamms von ausgeschnittenem Taffet trägt, — ein Kennzeichen des Gecken. So in Twelfth-Night (A. 2, Sc. 4) the tailor make thy doublet of changeable taffeta. 2) Eine Anspielung auf die Mode der Zeit, die Hand- und Halskrausen mit gelber Stärke von Saffran zu steifen. So in Tomkins' Albumazar: Trincalo, what price bears wheat and saffron that your band is so stiff and yellow? — Mit diesem Saffran hätte Parolles die ganze unausgebackene und ungare Jugend anstecken oder färben mögen. 3) Parolles erschien wahrscheinlich in rothen Hosen auf dem Theater. 4) Hamner wollte lesen he had, scil. Bertram had not known Parolles. — Die Gräfin will aber nur sagen: ich wollte, ich hätte nie von ihm gehört. 5) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 3, Anm. 28. 6) herb of grace = Gnadenkraut, Raute. 7) salad-herbs, das der Zusammenhang fordert, setzte Rowe für das bloss herbs der Fol. — Eben so richtig verbesserte er in der Antwort des Narren grass für das grace der Fol.: ich verstehe mich nicht so auf das Gras, wie Nebukadnezar, der eine Zeitlang Gras frass,

Laf. So you were a knave at his service, indeed.

Clo. And I would give his wife my bauble,⁹ Sir, to do her service.

Laf. I will subscribe for thee, thou art both knave and fool.

Clo. At your service.

Laf. No, no, no.

Clo. Why, Sir, if I cannot serve you, I can serve as great a prince as you are.

Laf. Who 's that? a Frenchman?

Clo. 'Faith, Sir, 'a has an English name;¹⁰ but his phisnomy is more hotter in France, than there.

Laf. What prince is that?

Clo. The black prince, Sir; alias, the prince of darkness; alias, the devil.

Laf. Hold thee, there 's my purse. I give thee not this to suggest¹¹ thee from thy master thou talkest of: serve him still.

Clo. I am a woodland fellow,¹² Sir, that always loved a great fire; and the master I speak of, ever keeps a good fire. But, sure, he is the prince of the world; let his nobility remain in 's court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pomp to enter: some, that humble themselves, may; but the many will be too chill and tender, and they 'll be for the flowery way,¹³ that leads to the broad gate, and the great fire.

Laf. Go thy ways, I begin to be aweary of thee; and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy ways: let my horses be well looked to, without any tricks.

Clo. If I put any tricks upon 'em, Sir, they shall be jades' tricks,¹⁴ which are their own right by the law of nature. [Exit.]

Laf. A shrewd knave, and an unhappy.¹⁵

Count. So he is. My lord, that 's gone, made himself much sport out of him: by his authority he remains here, which he thinks is a patent for his sauciness; and, indeed, he has no pace,¹⁶ but runs where he will.

Laf. I like him well; 't is not amiss. And I was about to tell you, since I heard of the good lady's death, and that my lord your son was upon his return home, I moved the king, my master, to speak in the behalf of my daughter; which, in the minority of them both, his majesty, out of a self-gracious remembrance,¹⁷ did first propose. His highness hath promised me to do it; and to stop up the displeasure he hath conceived against your son, there is no fitter matter. How does your ladyship like it?

Count. With very much content, my lord; and I wish it happily effected.

Laf. His highness comes post from Marseilles, of as able body as when he numbered thirty: he will be here to-morrow, or I am deceived by him that in such intelligence hath seldom failed.

Count. It rejoices me that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I have letters that my son will be here to-night: I shall beseech your lordship to remain with me till they meet together.

Laf. Madam, I was thinking with what manners I might safely be admitted.

Count. You need but plead your honourable privilege.

Laf. Lady, of that I have made a bold charter; but, I thank my God, it holds yet.

Re-enter Clown.

Clo. O Madam! yonder 's my lord your son with a patch of velvet on 's face: whether there be a scar under it, or no, the velvet knows; but 't is a goodly patch of velvet. His left cheek is a cheek of two pile and a half,¹⁸ but his right cheek is worn bare.

Laf. A scar nobly got, or a noble scar, is a good livery of honour; so, belike, is that.

Clo. But it is your carbonadoed face.¹⁹

Laf. Let us go see your son, I pray you: I long to talk with the young noble soldier.

Clo. 'Faith, there 's a dozen of 'em, with delicate fine hats, and most courteous feathers, which bow the head, and nod at every man. [Exeunt]

ACT V.

SCENE I.

Marseilles. A Street.

Enter HELENA, Widow, and DIANA, with Two Attendants.

Hel. But this exceeding posting, day and night,
Must wear your spirits low: we cannot help it;
But, since you have made the days and nights as one,
To wear your gentle limbs in my affairs,
Be bold¹ you do so grow in my requital,
As nothing can unroot you. In happy time;

8) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 4, Anm. 3. 9) bauble = Narrenkolben, und = Testikel. Dieselbe obscöne Zweideutigkeit ist in Romeo and Juliet (A. 2, Sc. 4) like a great natural, that runs lolling up and down to hide his bauble in a hole. 10) Die Fol. hat maine, was Henley als mane beibehalten wollte, in einer Anspielung auf den dicken Haarwulst, mit dem der Teufel auf dem Theater in den altenglischen Mysterien dargestellt wurde. Aber im Zusammenhange mit dem Vorhergehenden und Folgenden erscheint doch Rowe's Emendation name vorzüglicher. Der englische Name des Teufels ist black prince, eine Bezeichnung, die Hall in seinen Satyren dem Gott der Unterwelt, Pluto, zuwendet. — In dem phisnomy more hotter in France liegt eine Beziehung auf die Lustkrankheit, die französische Krankheit. 11) to suggest from = Jemanden zur Untreue gegen Einen verlocken. 12) a woodland fellow = ein Mensch aus einer holzreichen Gegend gebürtig, wo man das Brennmaterial nicht zu sparen braucht. 13) So wird der Weg zur Hölle auch in Macbeth (A. 2, Sc. 3) bezeichnet: the primrose way to the everlasting bonfire. 14) jade's trick = ein Pferdestreich, und = ein schlechter Witz. Derselbe Doppelsinn kommt in Much Ado about Nothing vor (A. 1, Sc. 1) you always end with a jade's trick. 15) unhappy = ungerathen, boshaft. — Die Auslassung des one hinter dem Adjectiv ist in Sh.'s Manier. — So auch in Paynter's Novelle: a fair maid and a comely. 16) Er hält keinen Schritt in seinen Reden und Gedanken, sondern schweift unstät umher. — Für pace las Hamner place. 17) Aus einer gnädigen Erinnerung, die von ihm selbst ausging, die nicht von Andern ihm eingegeben wurde. Eine ähnliche Verbindung mit self vgl. A. 3, Sc. 1, Anm. 4. 18) Ein Wortspiel mit dem Sammtplaster auf Bertram's linker Wange, mit velvet, das auch three-pile heisst. 19) Bertram's Gesicht ist Euch so zerhackt, wie eine Carbonade. So in K. Lear (A. 2, Sc. 2) I'll so carbonado your shanks.

*Enter a Gentleman.*²

This man may help me to his majesty's ear,
If he would spend his power. — God save you, Sir.

Gent. And you.

Hel. Sir, I have seen you in the court of France.

Gent. I have been sometimes there.

Hel. I do presume, Sir, that you are not fallen
From the report that goes upon your goodness;
And therefore, goaded with most sharp occasions,
Which lay nice manners³ by, I put you to
The use of your own virtues, for the which I shall continue thankful.

Gent. What's your will?

Hel. That it will please you
To give this poor petition⁴ to the king,
And aid me with that store of power you have,
To come into his presence.

Gent. The king's not here.

Hel. Not here, Sir?

Gent. Not, indeed:
He hence remov'd last night, and with more haste
Than is his use.

Wid. Lord, how we lose our pains!

Hel. All's well that ends well yet,
Though time seem so adverse,⁵ and means unfit. —
I do beseech you, whither is he gone?

Gent. Marry, as I take it, to Rousillon;
Whither I am going.

Hel. I do beseech you, Sir,
Since you are like to see the king before me,
Commend the paper to his gracious hand;
Which, I presume, shall render you no blame,
But rather make you thank your pains for it.

I will come after you, with what good speed
Our means will make us means.⁶

Gent.

This I'll do for you.

Hel. And you shall find yourself to be well thank'd,
Whate'er falls more. — We must to horse again: —
Go, go, provide. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

Rousillon. The inner Court of the COUNTESS'S Palace.

Enter Clown and PAROLLES.

Par. Good Monsieur Lavatch,¹ give my lord Lafeu this letter. I have ere now, Sir, been better known to you, when I have held familiarity with fresher clothes; but I am now, Sir, muddied in fortune's mood,² and smell somewhat strong of her strong displeasure.

Clo. Truly, fortune's displeasure is but sluttish, if it smell so strongly as thou speakest of: I will henceforth eat no fish of fortune's buttering.³ Pr'ythee, allow the wind.

Par. Nay, you need not to stop your nose, Sir: I spake but by a metaphor.

Clo. Indeed, Sir, if your metaphor stink, I will stop my nose;⁴ or against any man's metaphor. Pr'ythee, get thee further.

Par. Pray you, Sir, deliver me this paper.

Clo. Foh! pr'ythee, stand away: a paper from fortune's close-stool to give to a nobleman! Look, here he comes himself.

Enter LAFEU.

Here is a pur⁵ of fortune's, Sir, or of fortune's cat (but not a musk-cat), that has fallen into the unclean fishpond of her displeasure, and, as he says, is muddied withal.

1) be bold ist mit dem Folgenden zu verknüpfen: seid zuversichtlich gewiss, dass Ihr so fest wachst in meiner Vergeltung, in meiner Dankbarkeit, dass nichts Euch entwurzeln, daraus losreißen kann. 2) Die Fol. hat Enter a gentle Astringer, woraus die zweite Folioausg. Enter a gentle Astranger, und die folgenden Folioausgg. Enter a Gentleman a Stranger machten. — astringer, eigentlich austringer oder ostringer, ist ein Falkonier. Knight citirt aus einem alten Buche über die Falkenjagd von Markham: They be called ostringers which are the keepers of gosshawks or tercelles, und Steevens aus Cowell's Law Dictionary: We usually call a falconer who keeps that kind of hawk, an austringer. — Da jedoch die Eigenschaft des Falkoniers bei dem Auftretenden nicht urgirt wird, und der Name Astringer ganz verschollen ist, scheint es rathsam, mit Dyce ihn der Deutlichkeit wegen einfach als a Gentleman zu bezeichnen, wie auch die Fol. ihn bei seinem spätern Erscheinen (A. 5, Sc. 3) nennt. 3) nice manners = übertriebene Höflichkeit, peinliche Beobachtung des herkömmlichen Ceremoniels im Umgange. 4) poor petition = ein Bittgesuch von einer Armen, in Noth Befindlichen. — Diese freiere Construction des Adjectivs ist auch sonst Sh. eigenthümlich. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 22. 5) adverse betont Sh. bald auf der ersten, bald auf der zweiten Sylbe. 6) our means sind die pecuniären Mittel, die der Helena zu Gebote stehen und mit denen sie sich die Mittel zur raschen Beförderung nach Rousillon (make us means) verschafft. — Erwägung verdient der Vorschlag eines Anonymus in den Cambridge Edd., das zweite means zu streichen, so dass good speed als Object zu make us supplirt wird. Auch der Vers würde dadurch gewinnen.

1) Der Name des Clown, der nur hier genannt wird, ist, wie Tollet annimmt, aus dem französischen la vache entstellt. 2) Parolles, der, im Gegensatz zu seiner frühern bunten und geckenhaften Tracht, jetzt in abgetragenen und schmutzigen Kleidern erscheint, spricht demgemäss von der bösen Laune der Fortuna, in der er schmutzig geworden sei, und von ihrer Ungnade, nach der er übel rieche. Der Narr versteht die letzte Metapher in eigentlichem Wortsinne. — mood gebraucht Sh. auch sonst von der plötzlich wechselnden, bald bösen, bald guten Laune der Glücksgöttin. Vielleicht ist auch ein der Aussprache der Sh.'schen Zeit näher liegendes Wortspiel mit mud beabsichtigt. 3) Wenn die Ungnade der Fortuna einen so übeln Geruch an sich hat, so will ich ferner keinen Fisch essen, an den sie ihre Butter gethan hat, weil er auch schlecht riechen möchte. — Auch das folgende allow the wind = lass den Luftzug frei streichen, stehe mir nicht an der Seite, woher der Wind kommt, bezieht sich auf das Missverständniss, mit welchem der Narr Parolles' Worte aufgefasst hat. 4) scil. against it. — Der Clown missversteht das Wort metaphor als einen Körpertheil des Parolles. 5) pur = das Schnurren einer Katze, deutet Douce richtig auf den Bettelbrief des Parolles an Lafeu. Die Katze selbst ist Parolles, der in den schmutzigen Fischteich der Fortuna gefallen ist. — Wegen des vermeintlichen übeln Geruches unterscheidet der Narr aber diese Katze von der Bisamkatze, deren Bisam als ein gebräuchlicher Parfüm auch sonst bei Sh. vorkommt; so in As you like it (A. 3, Sc. 2) civet is of a baser birth than tar; the very uncleanly flux of a cat. — Für pur schlug

Pray you, Sir, use the carp⁶ as you may, for he looks like a poor, decayed, ingenious, foolish, rascally knave. I do pity his distress in my smiles of comfort,⁷ and leave him to your lordship. [Exit.]

Par. My lord, I am a man whom fortune hath cruelly scratched.

Laf. And what would you have me to do? 'T is too late to pare her nails now. Wherein have you played the knave with fortune, that she should scratch you, who of herself is a good lady, and would not have knaves thrive long under her?⁸ There's a cardcue⁹ for you. Let the justices make you and fortune friends; I am for other business.

Par. I beseech your honour to hear me one single word.

Laf. You beg a single penny more: come, you shall ha't; save your word.¹⁰

Par. My name, my good lord, is Parolles.

Laf. You beg more than one word then, — Cox¹¹ my passion! give me your hand. — How does your drum?

Par. O my good lord! you were the first that found me.¹²

Laf. Was I, in sooth? and I was the first that lost thee.

Par. It lies in you, my lord, to bring me in some grace,¹³ for you did bring me out.

Laf. Out upon thee, knave! dost thou put upon me at once both the office of God and the devil? one brings thee in grace, and the other brings thee out. [Trumpets sound.] The king's coming; I know by his trumpets. — Sirrah, inquire further after me: I had talk of you last night. Though you are a fool and a knave, you shall eat:¹⁴ go to, follow.

Par. I praise God for you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The Same. A Room in the Countess's Palace.

Flourish. Enter KING, COUNTESS, LAFEU, Lords, Gentlemen, Guards, etc.

King. We lost a jewel of her, and our esteem Was made much poorer by it:¹ but your son, As mad in folly, lack'd the sense to know Her estimation home.

Count. 'T is past, my liege; And I beseech your majesty to make it Natural rebellion, done i' the blaze of youth;² When oil and fire, too strong for reason's force, O'erbears it, and burns on.

King. My honour'd lady, I have forgiven and forgotten all, Though my revenges were high bent upon him, And watch'd the time to shoot.³

Laf. This I must say, — But first I beg my pardon, — the young lord Did to his majesty, his mother, and his lady, Offence of mighty note, but to himself The greatest wrong of all: he lost a wife, Whose beauty did astonish the survey Of richest eyes;⁴ whose words all ears took captive: Whose dear perfection hearts that scorn'd to serve Humbly call'd mistress.⁵

King. Praising what is lost Makes the remembrance dear. — Well, call him hither. We are reconcil'd, and the first view shall kill All repetition.⁶ — Let him not ask our pardon: The nature of his great offence⁷ is dead, And deeper than oblivion we do bary

Malone puss vor. 6) Als karpfen bezeichnet er den Parolles, weil er aus dem Fischteich der Fortuna kommt. 7) Heath erklärt den Satz: I testify my pity for his distress, by encouraging him with a gracious smile. Eher ist aber in my smiles of comfort lediglich = indem ich mich des Lächelns des Glücks erfreue. — In dem Vorhergehenden ist vielleicht ingenious-foolish zu einem Compositum zu verbinden. 8) her, das in der Fol. fehlt, supplirt die zweite Folioausg. von 1632. 9) Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 3, Anm. 53. 10) Erspart Euch das eine Wort, das Ihr mich anzuhören bittet. Und da nun Parolles doch mehrere Worte sagt: My name — — Parolles, antwortet Lafeu abermals: Ihr bittet also doch um mehr als ein Wort. — Malone vermuthet dagegen ein Wortspiel mit Parolles, französisch paroles, was als Plural mehr als ein Wort bedeutet. Die Fol. hat you beg more than word then; das one vor word fügte erst eine spätere Folioausg. ein. — überflüssig, wie Malone mit Recht bemerkt, wenn man seiner etwas gesuchten Deutung beipflichtet. 11) Cox entsteht aus God's. — Lafeu erkennt den Parolles erst jetzt, da dieser sich nennt, und begrüßt ihn demnach ironisch, indem er sich nach der Trommel erkundigt, die Parolles in dem Florentiner Kriege wiedererobern wollte. 12) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 3, Anm. 43. — Daran knüpft sich das Wortspiel mit to lose = verlieren, und = in Verlust bringen. 13) Parolles versteht grace = Ansehen bei den Menschen, Lafeu versteht es = Gnade bei Gott, Stand der Gnade. 14) So sollt Ihr doch nicht Hungers sterben.

1) Johnson erklärt: durch den Verlust eines Juwels wie Helena wurde das Ansehen des Königs werthloser, sank im Preise; M. Mason dagegen: durch die schlechte Behandlung, mit welcher Bertram Helena's Tod herbeigeführt, verlor die richtige Schätzung des Königs, der sie hochhielt, an Werth. — Die natürlichste Erklärung scheint, by it nur auf jewel, nicht auf den ganzen Satz zu beziehen: wir verloren an Helena ein Juwel, neben welchem unsere Abschätzung desselben ärmer erschien, ein Juwel, das reicher war als wir es schätzten. — Dies steht dann im Gegensatz zu dem Folgenden, dass Bertram sie gar nicht habe schätzen können. — home = gründlich. 2) Die Fol. hat blade of youth = wenn die Jugend in vollen Halmen steht. — Die Emendation Warburton's blaze of youth passt besser zu dem Folgenden, wo das Bild von einem Brande und Aufflammen der jugendlichen Leidenschaft fortgesetzt wird. So kam A. 4, Sc. 2 the quick fire of youth vor. 3) Das Bild ist von einem gespannten Bogen hergenommen, dessen Träger gerade den günstigen Augenblick abwartet, ihn abzuschliessen. 4) richest eyes = die Augen, die darin reich sind, dass sie alles Schönste gesehen haben, also schwer noch zu befriedigen sind. 5) Deren Vollkommenheit Herzen, die sonst zu dienen verschmähten, als ihres Dienstes würdig verehrten. 6) Mit dem ersten Wiedersehen zwischen Bertram und dem König soll alles Vergangene abgethan, soll die Besprechung und Herzhaltung des Geschehenen beseitigt sein. — Wie to repeat = Etwas herzhählen, der Reihe nach erwähnen, so auch das substantivische repetition. 7) Das, worin sein grosses Vergehen bestand oder bestanden hatte. Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 3, Anm. 45. 8) Die noch brennenden, noch nicht erloschenen Trümmer. 9) Er

The incensing relics⁸ of it: let him approach,
A stranger, no offender; and inform him,
So 't is our will he should.

Gent. I shall, my liege. [Exit.]

King. What says he to your daughter? have you spoke?

Laf. All that he is hath reference to your highness.⁹

King. Then shall we have a match. I have letters sent me,
That set him high in fame.¹⁰

Enter BERTRAM.

Laf. He looks well on 't.¹¹

King. I am not a day of season,¹²
For thou may'st see a sunshine and a hail
In me at once; but to the brightest beams
Distracted clouds give way: so stand thou forth;
The time is fair again.

Ber. My high-repented¹³ blames,
Dear sovereign, pardon to me.

King. All is whole;
Not one word more of the consumed time.
Let's take the instant by the forward top,
For we are old, and on our quick'st decrees
The inaudible and noiseless foot of time
Steals, ere we can effect them.¹⁴ You remember
The daughter of this lord?

Ber. Admiringly, my liege.¹⁵
At first I stuck my choice upon her, ere my heart
Durst make too bold a herald of my tongue:
Where the impression of mine eye infixing,
Contempt his scornful perspective¹⁶ did lend me,
Which warp'd the line of every other favour,
Scorn'd a fair colour, or express'd it stolen,

Extended or contracted all proportions
To a most hideous object. Thence it came,
That she, whom all men prais'd, and whom myself,
Since I have lost,¹⁷ have lov'd, was in mine eye
The dust that did offend it.

King. Well excus'd:
That thou didst love her,¹⁸ strikes some scores away
From the great compt. But love, that comes too late,
Like a remorseful pardon¹⁹ slowly carried,
To the great sender turns a sour offence,
Crying, »That's good that's gone.« Our rash faults
Make trivial price of serious things²⁰ we have,
Not knowing them, until we know their grave:
Oft our displeasures, to ourselves unjust,
Destroy our friends, and after weep their dust:
Our own love, waking, cries to see what's done,
While shameful hate sleeps out the afternoon.²¹
Be this sweet Helen's knell, and now forget her.
Send forth your amorous token for fair Maudlin:²²
The main consents are had; and here we'll stay
To see our widower's second marriage-day.

Count. Which better than the first, O dear heaven, bless!

Or, ere they meet, in me, O nature, cess!²³

Laf. Come on, my son, in whom my house's name
Must be digested, give a favour from you,
To sparkle in the spirits of my daughter,
That she may quickly come. [BERTRAM gives a ring.]

By my old beard,
And every hair that's on 't, Helen, that's dead,
Was a sweet creature; such a ring as this,
The last that e'er I took her leave at court,²⁴
I saw upon her finger.

bezieht sich in Allem, was er ist, auf Eure Majestät; er hat keinen eigenen Willen mehr, sondern nur Euren Willen als Richtschnur seines Seins. 10) Die Briefe des Herzogs von Florenz, von denen A. 4, Sc. 3 die Rede war: The duke hath offered him letters of commendations to the king. 11) Lafen's Worte beziehen sich auf Then shall we have a match: Bertram ist wohl zufrieden damit. 12) a day of season erklärt Henley mit a day of uninterrupted rain. — Malone fasst es plausibler als a seasonable day. In dem Antlitz des Königs, in welchem Unwille und Verzeihung, Trauer und Freude zugleich ausgedrückt sind, lässt sich nicht eine bestimmte Jahreszeit, sondern nur ein Gemisch aus verschiedenen erkennen. 13) high-repented = in hohem Grade bereut. So hat Sh. high-versed in Timon of Athens (A. 4, Sc. 3), und high-fantastical in Twelfth-Night (A. 1, Sc. 1). 14) Steevens citirt dazu eine Sh. gewiss bekannte Parallelstelle aus Sidney's Arcadia: The summons of time had so creepingly stolen upon him that he had heard scarcely the noise of his feet. 15) Manche Hgg. verbinden my liege mit dem Folgenden und beginnen, indem sie den letzten Vers in der Rede des Königs unvollständig lassen, mit admiringly einen neuen, ebenfalls unvollständigen Vers. Die Einschlebung eines sechsfüssigen Jambus ist bei Sh. durchaus nicht unerhört. 16) perspective = Ocularglas, durch das betrachtet die Gegenstände anders erscheinen als sie sind. Sh. betont das Wort auf der ersten Sylbe. — Ein solches Perspectiv war für Bertram, der seine Augen auf Lafen's Tochter fest gerichtet hatte, der Stolz, der ihm andere Reize in einem falschen und entstellten Lichte, als ein verzerrtes Bild, erscheinen liess. 17) scil. lost her. Sh. lässt her weg, da whom vorangeht. 18) Dass Du Helena liebtest, nachdem Du sie verloren. — great compt ist die grosse Schuldrechnung, welche dem Bertram zur Last fällt. 19) remorseful pardon = die barmherzige Begnadigung eines zur Hinrichtung Verurtheilten, die zu spät anlangt und dem königlichen Absender nur einen bitteren Vorwurf zurückbringt. So in K. Henry VIII. (A. 4, Sc. 2) that comfort comes too late; 'T is like a pardon after execution. 20) serious things = Wesen, die ernst geschätzt sein wollen, im Gegensatz zu trivial price = geringfügige, leichtsinnige Abschätzung. 21) Die wahre Liebe, die wir wirklich in uns hegen, jammert, wenn sie erwacht, über das, was geschehen ist, dass wir nämlich in Verblendung unsere Freunde verstossen oder vernichtet haben; unterdessen hält der Hass, der uns verblendete, schamerfüllt über das, was er angestiftet, nicht länger an als ein Nachmittagschlaf dauert und schläft sich in der Zeit aus. — Diese Erklärung scheint dem Zusammenhange besser zu entsprechen, als Malone's: Hate sleeps at ease, unmolested by any remembrance of the dead. — M. Mason wollte old love lesen, indess ist own love = die Liebe, zu der wir uns als uns eigen bekennen, im Gegensatz zu shameful hate = der Hass, der sich schämt. — Den Gegensatz zwischen love und hate verwischt eine sonst sinnreiche Conjectur shame full late, welche die Cambridge Edd. mittheilen. 22) Maudlin für Magdalen, Lafen's Tochter. 23) Diese beiden Verse theilte zuerst Theobald der Gräfin Rousillon zu; in der Fol. gehören sie noch zur Rede des Königs. — cess, alterthümlich für cease, steht des Reimes wegen und ist schon in den spätern Folioausgg. in cease umgeändert. — to cess findet sich bei Chaucer und Spenser. 24) the last = das letzte

Ber. Hers it was not.

King. Now, 'pray you, let me see it; for mine eye,
While I was speaking, oft was fasten'd to 't. —
This ring was mine; and, when I gave it Helen,
I bade her, if her fortunes ever stood
Necessitated to help, that by this token
I would relieve her.²⁵ Had you that craft to reave her
Of what should stead her most?

Ber. My gracious sovereign,
Howe'er it pleases you to take it so,
The ring was never hers.

Count. Son, on my life,
I have seen her wear it; and she reckon'd it
At her life's rate.

Laf. I am sure I saw her wear it.

Ber. You are deceiv'd: my lord, she never saw it.
In Florence was it from a casement thrown me,
Wrapp'd in a paper, which contain'd the name
Of her that threw it. Noble she was, and thought
I stood engag'd:²⁶ but when I had subscrib'd
To mine own fortune, and inform'd her fully,
I could not answer in that course of honour
As she had made the overture, she ceas'd,
In heavy satisfaction,²⁷ and would never Receive the ring again.

King. Plutus himself,
That knows the tinct and multiplying medicine,²⁸
Hath not in nature's mystery more science,
Than I have in this ring: 't was mine, 't was Helen's,
Whoever gave it you. Then, if you know
That you are well acquainted with yourself,
Confess 't was hers, and by what rough enforcement
You got it from her. She call'd the saints to surety,
That she would never put it from her finger,
Unless she gave it to yourself in bed,
Where you have never come, or sent it us
Upon her great disaster.

Ber. She never saw it.

King. Thou speak'st it falsely, as I love mine honour,
And mak'st conjectural fears to come into me,²⁹

Which I would fain shut out. If it should prove That thou art so inhuman, — 't will not prove so; —
And yet I know not: — thou didst hate her deadly,
And she is dead; which nothing, but to close
Her eyes myself, could win me to believe,
More than to see this ring.³⁰ — Take him away. —

[Guards seize BERTRAM.]

My fore-past proofs, howe'er the matter fall,
Shall tax my fears of little vanity,
Having vainly fear'd too little.³¹ — Away with him!
We 'll sift this matter further.

Ber. If you shall prove
This ring was ever hers, you shall as easy
Prove that I husbanded³² her bed in Florence,
Where yet she never was.

[Exit, guarded.]

Enter a Gentleman.³³

King. I am wrapp'd in dismal thinkings.

Gent. Gracious sovereign,

Whether I have been to blame, or no, I know not:
Here 's a petition from a Florentine,
Who hath, for four or five removes,³⁴ come short
To tender it herself. I undertook it,
Vanquish'd thereto by the fair grace and speech
Of the poor suppliant, who by this, I know,
Is here attending: her business looks in her
With an importing visage,³⁵ and she told me,
In a sweet verbal brief,³⁶ it did concern
Your highness with herself.

King. [Reads.]³⁷ »Upon his many protestations to marry me, when his wife was dead, I blush to say it, he won me. Now is the count Rousillon a widower: his vows are forfeited to me, and my honour 's paid to him. He stole from Florence, taking no leave, and I follow him to his country for justice. Grant it me, O king! in you it best lies; otherwise a seducer flourishes, and a poor maid is undone.

DIANA CAPILET.

Laf. I will buy me a son-in-law in a fair, and toll:
for this, I 'll none of him.³⁸

Mal, dass ich von ihr am Hofe Abschied nahm. — Rowe las she für I, und Hammer the last time ere she took her leave. — ere und e'er verwechselt die alte Orthographie beständig. — Die Bühnenweisung Bertram gives a ring fügte zuerst Hammer ein. 25) Das vorhergehende I bade her liess einen Schluss erwarten, wie etwa that by this token she should apply to me and I would relieve her. Indess ist solch ein Wechsel der Construction und die entsprechende Modification des Satzes ganz Sh.'sch. 26) Die Fol. hat ingaged, was Tyrwhitt auffasste wie Theobald's Lesart ungaged = not engaged, weil auch gaged = engaged gebraucht wird. Wahrscheinlich ist aber ingaged nur eine andere Orthographie für engaged, und der Sinn ist demnach: die Dame glaubte, weil Bertram ihren Ring empfangen, er sei ihr verlobt. 27) Da gab sie sich am Ende schwermüthig zufrieden. 28) tinct = Goldtinctur, das Geheimmittel, mit dem die Alchymisten Gold machen oder vermehren wollten, erhält, auf Sh.'sche Art durch die Copula and verbunden, die nähere Erklärung in multiplying medicine. — So in Antony and Cleopatra (A. 1, Sc. 5) that great medicine hath with his tinct gilded thee. 29) Du veranlassest, dass Besorgnisse, die auf Vermuthungen beruhen, sich in meine Seele schleichen. 30) Dass Helena wirklich todt sei, davon konnte der König nicht fester überzeugt sein, wenn er ihr selbst die Augen zgedrückt hätte, als nun, da er diesen Ring sieht. 31) Wie auch die Sache ausgehen möge, die Verdachtsgründe, die sich mir früher schon gegen Bertram ergeben haben, werden meine Besorgniss nur geringer Nichtigkeit oder Eitelkeit beschuldigen können, werden meine Besorgniss als nicht ungegründet erscheinen lassen, da ich unüberlegt früher zu wenig fürchtete, als ich die Helena dem Bertram vermählte. 32) to husband = als Ehemann besitzen, mit einem Gatten versehen. 33) Dieser Gentleman ist offenbar derselbe, den die Fol. vorher als gentle Astringer bezeichnet (vgl. A. 5, Sc. 1, Anm. 2). — Die beiden vorhergehenden Bühnenweisungen sind von Rowe eingefügt. 34) removes = Stationen, wo die Pferde unterwegs gewechselt werden. Um so viele Stationen ist Helena hinter dem König zurückgeblieben und hat ihm die Bittschrift nicht in Person überreichen können. 35) Man sieht ihrem Gesicht an, dass ihre Angelegenheit dringend ist. 36) sweet verbal brief = eine gedrängte Darstellung in kurzen, anmuthigen Worten. — Er bezieht sich auf seine Unterredung mit der Helena in A. 5, Sc. 1. 37) Der König liest den ersten Theil der Bittschrift leise für sich und fährt dann laut fort. 38) to toll erklärt Steevens = die Todtenglocke läuten lassen, und verbindet demnach, wie auch die Fol. interpungirt, for this, scil. Bertram, mit toll. — Andere fassen

King. The heavens have thought well on thee, Lafeu,
To bring forth this discovery. — Seek these suitors: —
Go speedily, and bring again the count.

[Exeunt Gentleman and some Attendants.]
I am afeard, the life of Helen, lady,
Was foully snatch'd.

Count. Now, justice on the doers!

Re-enter BERTRAM, guarded.

King. I wonder, Sir, sith³⁹ wives are monsters to you,
And that you fly them as you swear them lordship,⁴⁰
Yet you desire to marry. —

Re-enter Gentleman, with Widow and DIANA.

What woman 's that?

Dia. I am, my lord, a wretched Florentine,
Derived from the ancient Capilet:
My suit, as I do understand, you know,
And therefore know how far I may be pitied.

Wid. I am her mother, Sir, whose age and honour
Both suffer under this complaint we bring,
And both shall cease, without your remedy.

King. Come hither, count. Do you know these women?

Ber. My lord, I neither can, nor will deny.
But that I know them. Do they charge me further?⁴¹

Dia. Why do you look so strange upon your wife?

Ber. She 's none of mine, my lord.

Dia. If you shall marry,
You give away this hand, and that is mine;
You give away heaven's vows, and those are mine;
You give away myself, which is known mine;⁴²
For I by vow am so embodied yours,
That she which marries you must marry me;
Either both, or none.

Laf. [To BERTRAM.] Your reputation comes too short for my daughter: you are no husband for her.

Ber. My lord, this is a fond and desperate creature,
Whom sometime I have laugh'd with.⁴³ Let your highness lay a more noble thought upon mine honour,
Than for to⁴⁴ think that I would sink it here.

King. Sir, for my thoughts, you have them ill to friend,
Till your deeds gain them: fairer prove your honour,
Than in my thought it lies.

Dia. Good my lord,
Ask him upon his oath, if he does think
He had not my virginity.

King. What say'st thou to her?

Ber. She 's impudent, my lord;
And was a common gamester⁴⁵ to the camp.

Dia. He does me wrong, my lord: if I were so,
He might have bought me at a common price:

Do not believe him. O! behold this ring,
Whose high respect, and rich validity⁴⁶
Did lack a parallel; yet, for all that,
He gave it to a commoner o' the camp,
If I be one.

Count. He blushes, and 't is it:⁴⁷
Of six preceding ancestors, that gem
Conferr'd by testament to the sequent issue,
Hath it been ow'd and worn. This is his wife:
That ring 's a thousand proofs.

King. Methought, you said,
You saw one here in court could witness it.

Dia. I did,⁴⁸ my lord, but loath am to produce
So bad an instrument: his name 's Parolles.

Laf. I saw the man to-day, if man he be.

King. Find him, and bring him hither.

[Exit an Attendant.]

Ber. What of him?

He 's quoted⁴⁹ for a most perfidious slave,
With all the spots o' the world tax'd and debosh'd,⁵⁰
Whose nature sickens but to speak a truth.⁵¹
Am I or that, or this, for what he 'll utter,
That will speak anything?

King. She hath that ring of yours.

Ber. I think, she has: certain it is, I lik'd her,
And boarded her i' the wanton way of youth.
She knew her distance, and did angle for me,
Madding my eagerness with her restraint,
As all impediments in fancy's course
Are motives⁵² of more fancy; and, in fine,
Her infinite cunning,⁵³ with her modern grace,
Subdued me to her rate: she got the ring,
And I had that, which any inferior might
At market-price have bought.

Dia. I must be patient;
You, that have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
May justly diet me.⁵⁴ I pray you yet,
(Since you lack virtue, I will lose a husband,)
Send for your ring; I will return it home,
And give me mine again.

Ber. I have it not.

to toll entweder = den Marktzoll entrichten, oder = auf dem Markt ausschellen lassen als Kaufgesuch, wie auch die spätern Folioausgg. lesen and toll him: for this, I 'll none of him. Jedenfalls erscheint auch mit Weglassung des überflüssigen him diese Interpunction als die vorzüglichere. 39) Die Fol. setzt zweimal sir; für das zweite sir emendirt Tyrwhitt since, Collier nach einer handschriftlichen Verbesserung for, und Dyce endlich sith, das am leichtesten sir gelesen werden konnte. 40) So wie Ihr ihnen nur Gattenpflicht schwört. — lordship von lord = Gatte. 41) Nehmen sie mich weiter in Anspruch, als dass ich sie kenne? 42) Ihr verschenkt mein Selbst, das für das Meinige gilt. 43) Ein thörichtes Geschöpf, mit dem ich einmal meinen Spass gehabt. 44) for to = um zu, vor Infinitiven in der älteren Sprache. 45) gamester = der oder die das Spiel mitmacht, eine Umschreibung = Hure. So in Pericles (A. 4, Sc. 6) Were you a gamester at five, or at seven? — common ist mit to the camp zu verbinden, wie bald nachher folgt commoner o' the camp. So in Othello (A. 4, Sc. 2) O thou public commoner! 46) validity = Geltung, Schätzung. 47) Die Fol. hat 't is hit, wie sie auch einmal, einer älteren Orthographie zufolge, in Macbeth (A. 1, Sc. 7) hit für it setzte. — Pope las 't is his. — 't is it ist Malone's Emendation = es ist der Ring. 48) Sh. lässt hier den König und Diana sich auf Worte beziehen, die nicht gesprochen sind. 49) to quote = notiren, die Summe von Etwas ziehen. 50) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 3, Anm. 30. 51) Die Wahrheit ist der Natur des Parolles so zuwider, dass er schon krank wird, wenn er sie nur sprechen soll. 52) motive = Werkzeug, das Etwas in Bewegung setzt. Alle Hindernisse im Laufe der Liebe setzen nur noch mehr die Liebe in Bewegung. — Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 4, Anm. 6. 53) infinite cunning verbesserte Sidney Walker das insuite comming der Fol. — modern = gewöhnlich, nicht ausserordentlich. — her rate = der Preis, den Diana selbst auf ihre Gunst setzte. 54) to diet = auf schmale Kost setzen, hier = karg behandeln. 55) Die Fol. hat

King. What ring was yours, I pray you?

Dia. Sir, much like
The same upon your finger.

King. Know you this ring? this ring was his of late.

Dia. And this was it I gave him, being a-bed.

King. The story then goes false, you threw it him
Out of a casement.

Dia. I have spoke the truth.

*Re-enter Attendant with PAROLLES.*⁵⁵

Ber. My lord, I do confess, the ring was hers.

King. You boggle⁵⁶ shrewdly, every feather starts
you.

Is this the man you speak of?

Dia. Ay, my lord.

King. Tell me, sirrah, but tell me true, I charge you,
Not fearing the displeasure of your master
(Which, on your just proceeding, I'll keep off),
By⁵⁷ him, and by this woman here, what know you?

Par. So please your majesty, my master hath been an honourable gentleman: tricks he hath had in him, which gentlemen have.

King. Come, come, to the purpose. Did he love this woman?

Par. 'Faith, Sir, he did love her; but how?

King. How, I pray you?

Par. He did love her, Sir, as a gentleman loves a woman.

King. How is that?

Par. He loved her, Sir, and loved her not.

King. As thou art a knave, and no knave. What an equivocal companion is this!⁵⁸

Par. I am a poor man, and at your majesty's command.

Laf. He's a good drum, my lord, but a naughty orator.

Dia. Do you know, he promised me marriage?

Par. 'Faith, I know more than I'll speak.

King. But wilt thou not speak all thou know'st?

Par. Yes, so please your majesty. I did go between them, as I said; but more than that, he loved her, — for, indeed, he was mad for her, and talked of Satan, and of limbo, and of Furies,⁵⁹ and I know not what: yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knew of their going to bed, and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things that would derive me ill will to speak of: therefore, I will not speak what I know.

King. Thou hast spoken all already, unless thou canst say they are married. But thou art too fine⁶⁰ in thy evidence; therefore, stand aside. —
This ring, you say, was yours?

Dia. Ay, my good lord.

King. Where did you buy it? or who gave it you?

Dia. It was not given me, nor I did not buy it.

King. Who lent it you?

Dia. It was not lent me neither.

King. Where did you find it then?

Dia. I found it not.

King. If it were yours by none of all these ways,
How could you give it him?

Dia. I never gave it him.

Laf. This woman's an easy glove, my lord:⁶¹ she goes off and on at pleasure.

King. This ring was mine: I gave it his first wife.

Dia. It might be yours, or hers, for aught I know.

King. Take her away: I do not like her now.
To prison with her; and away with him. —
Unless thou tell'st me where thou hadst this ring,
Thou diest within this hour.

Dia. I'll never tell you.

King. Take her away.

Dia. I'll put in bail, my liege.

King. I think thee now some common customer.⁶²

Dia. By Jove, if ever I knew man, 't was you.

King. Wherefore hast thou accus'd him all this while?

Dia. Because he's guilty, and he is not guilty.
He knows I am no maid, and he'll swear to 't:
I'll swear I am a maid, and he knows not.
Great king, I am no strumpet, by my life!
I am either maid, or else this old man's wife.

[Pointing to LAFEU.]

King. She does abuse our ears. To prison with her!

Dia. Good mother, fetch my bail. [Exit Widow.] —

Stay, royal Sir:

The jeweller that owes the ring is sent for,
And he shall surety me. But for this lord,
Who hath abus'd me, as he knows himself,
Though yet he never harm'd me, here I quit him.⁶³
He knows himself my bed he hath defil'd,
And at that time he got his wife with child:
Dead though she be, she feels her young one kick.⁶⁴
So there's my riddle, — one that's dead is quick;
And now behold the meaning.⁶⁵

Re-enter Widow, with HELENA.

King. Is there no exorcist⁶⁶
Beguiles the truer office of mine eyes?
Is 't real, that I see?

Hel. No, my good lord;

'T is but the shadow of a wife you see;
The name, and not the thing.

Ber. Both, both! O, pardon!

Hel. O my good lord, when I was like this maid,
I found you wondrous kind. There is your ring;
And, look you, here's your letter; this it says:
'When from my finger you can get this ring,
And are⁶⁷ by me with child,' etc. — This is done.
Will you be mine, now you are doubly won?

Ber. If she, my liege, can make me know this clearly,
I'll love her dearly, ever, ever dearly.

doppelzüngiger Geselle. 59) Der verliebte Bertram führte hochtrabende pathetische Reden, in denen der Satan,

Hel. If it appear not plain, and prove untrue,
Deadly divorce step between me and you! —
O my dear mother, do I see you living?

Laf. Mine eyes smell onions, I shall weep anon. —

King. Let us from point to point this story know,
To make the even truth in pleasure flow. —

For I can guess, that by thy honest aid

EPILOGUE.

King. The king 's a beggar⁷⁰ now the play is done.
All is well ended, if this suit be won,
That you express content; which we will pay,

Your gentle hands⁷² lend us, and take our hearts.

TWELFTH-NIGHT: OR, WHAT YOU WILL.

Einleitung.

Die im Jahre 1623 erschienene Folioausgabe der Shakspeare'schen Schauspiele enthält auch den ersten Druck des nachfolgenden Lustspiels. Es steht daselbst als das dreizehnte Stück in der Reihe der Comedies unter dem Titel: Twelfth Night, Or what you will, in Acte und in Scenen eingetheilt, aber ohne ein Personenverzeichnis, das zuerst Rowe seiner Ausgabe (1709) beifügte. Daraus, dass Twelfth-Night zugleich in demselben Jahre 1623 für die Erscheinung der Folioausgabe in die Register der Buchhändler eingetragen worden ist, ergibt sich ziemlich sicher, dass eine frühere Einzelausgabe dieses Dramas niemals existirt hat. Der wahrscheinlich unmittelbar aus der Bühnenhandschrift abgedruckte Text gehört zu den correcteren der Folio und bietet weniger Schwierigkeiten dar, als der mancher anderer Stücke, die in dieser Gesamtausgabe zuerst veröffentlicht sind.

Für die chronologische Feststellung von Twelfth-Night ist besonders wichtig eine von Hunter entdeckte Notiz in dem handschriftlich aufbewahrten Tagebuche eines gewissen John Manningham, Mitglied der Juristeninnung des Middle Temple in London. Derselbe verzeichnet unterm 2. Februar 1601 (d. h. nach jetziger Zeitrechnung 1602): At our feast, we had a play called Twelve Night, or what you will, much like the Comedy of errors, or Menechmi in Plautus; but most like and neere to that in Italian called Inganni. A good practice in it to make the Steward beleve his lady widdowe was in love with him by counterfayting a letter as from his lady in generall termes, telling him what shee liked best in him, and prescribing his gestures, inscribing his apparaile etc., and then when he came to practice, making him beleve they tooke him to be mad. — Es geht daraus hervor, dass im Jahre 1602 am Mariä-Lichtmess-Feste im Middle Temple Shakspeare's Lustspiel zur Aufführung gelangte und dass dasselbe wenigstens dem Schreiber des Tagebuchs damals neu war. Wie lange vorher Twelfth-Night öffentlich auf dem Shakspeare'schen Theater gespielt worden ist, lässt sich nur vermuthen. Das Stillschweigen von Francis Meres in seiner Palladis Tamia (1598), da, wo er die damals bekannten Dramen unsers Dichters aufzählt, gestattet mit ziemlicher Sicherheit den Schluss, dass im Jahre 1598 dieses Lustspiel noch nicht vorhanden gewesen. Weniger sicher scheint der Beweis für dessen Existenz im folgenden Jahre 1599 in einer Stelle des damals auf die Bühne gebrachten Dramas Every Man out of his Humour von Ben Jonson zu liegen, die von manchen Commentatoren als eine satyrische Anspielung auf das Shakspeare'sche Stück gedeutet ist. Dort sagt der Kritiker, den der Dichter in den Zwischenacten redend einführt, von der Intrigue des aufgeführten Lustspiels: that the argument of his comedy might have been of some other nature, as of a duke to be in love of a countess, and that countess to be in love with the duke's son, and the son to love the lady's waiting-maid; some such cross wooing, with a clown to their serving-man, better than to be thus near and familiarly allied to the time. — Wie man sieht, stimmt die von Ben Jonson fingirte Intrigue nur entfernt und bei bedeutenden Abweichungen mit derjenigen überein, welche Shakspeare in seinem Lustspiel entwickelt hat.

Was nun die Quellen Shakspeare's für sein Twelfth-Night betrifft, so fand er die Abenteuer der Viola und ihres Bruders Sebastian, die Liebe Orsino's und der Olivia, in verschiedenen Novellensammlungen, in der italienischen des Bandello, in der französischen des Belleforest, erzählt. Höchst wahrscheinlich benutzte er aber eine englische Bearbeitung in einer Sammlung von acht Novellen, welche zuerst im Jahre 1581 mit folgendem Titelblatt erschien: Riche his Farewell to Militarie profession: conteining verie pleasaunt discourses fit for a peaceable tyme. Gathered together for the onely delight of the courteous Gentlewomen bothe of England and Irelande, For whose onely pleasure thei were collected together, And unto whom they are directed and dedicated by Barnabe Riche, Gentleman. — Die zweite Novelle dieses Buches führt den Titel: Apolonius and Silla und giebt ihren Inhalt, den allgemeinen Umrissen nach, in folgendem vorausgeschickten Argument an:

Apolonius Duke, having spent a yeres service in the warres against the Turke, returning homeward with his companie by sea, was driven by force of weather to the Ile of Cypres, where he was well received by Pontus, gouvernour of the same ile, with whom Silla, daughter to Pontus, fell so straungely in love, that after Apolonius was departed to Constantinople, Silla, with one man, followed, and commyng to Constantinople, she served Apolonius in the habite of a manne, and after many pretty accidentes falling out, she was knowne to Apolonius, who, in requitall of her love, married her.

Zur Vergleichung mag hier derjenige Theil der Erzählung einen Platz finden, welcher dem Shakspeare'schen Drama am nächsten kommt, vom ersten Auftreten der Viola an (A. I, Sc. 2) bis zur Begegnung der Olivia mit dem Sebastian (A. 4, Sc. 1):

And now, to prevent a number of injuries that might bee proffered to a woman that was left in her case, she determined to leave her owne apparell, and to sort her self into some of those sutes, that, beyng taken for a man, she might passe through the countrie in the better safetie: and, as she changed her apparell, she thought it likewise convenient to change her name; wherefore, not readily happenyng of any other, she called her self Silvio, by the name of her owne brother, whom you have heard spoken of before.

In this maner she travailed to Constantinople, where she inquired out the palace of the Duke Apolonius; and thinking herself now to be bothe fitte and able to plaie the servyngman, she presented herself to the Duke, cravyng his service. The Duke, verie willyng to give succour unto strangers, perceivyng him to bee a proper smogue yong man, gave hym entertainment. Silla thought her self now more then satisfied for all the casualties that had happened unto her in her journey, that she might at her pleasure take but the vew of the Duke Apolonius, and above the reste of his servantes was verie diligent and attendaunt uppon hym; the whiche the Duke perceivyng, beganne likewise to growe into good likyng with the diligence of his man, and therefore made hym one of his chamber: who but Silvio then was moste neare aboute hym, in helpyng of him to make hym readie in a mornynge, in the setting of his ruffes, to the keepyng of his chamber? Silvio pleased his maister so well, that above all the reste of his servantes aboute hym he had the greatest credite, and the Duke put him moste in trust.

At this verie instaunt there was remainyng in the citie a noble Dame, a widowe, whose housebände was but lately deceased, one of the noblest men that were in the partes of Grecia, who left his lady and wife large possessions and greate livinges. This ladies name was called Julina, who, besides the abundance of her wealth and the greatnesse of her revenues, had likewise the soveraigntie of all the dames of Constantinople for her beaultie. To this Ladie Julina Apolonius became an earnest suter; and, accordyng to the maner of woers, besides faire woordes, sorrowfull sighes, and piteous countenaunces, there must bee sendyng of lovyng letters, chaines, bracelettes, brouches, rynges, tablets, gemmes, juels, and presentes, I knowe not what. So my Duke, who in the tyme that he remained in the Ile of Cypres had no skill at all in the arte of love, although it were more then half proffered unto hym, was now become a scholler in love's schoole, and had alreadie learned his first lesson; that is, to speake pitifully, to looke ruthfully, to promise largely, to serve diligently, and to please carefully: now he was learnyng his seconde lesson; that is, to reward liberally, to give bountifully, to present willyngly, and to write lovyngly. Thus Apolonius was so busied in his newe studie, that I warrant you there was no man that could challenge hym for playng the truant, he followed his profession with so good a will: and who must bee the messenger to carrie the tokens and love letters to the Ladie Julina, but Silvio, his manne: in hym the Duke reposed his onely confidence to goe betweene hym and his ladie.

Now, gentilwomen, doe you thinke there could have been a greater torment devised, wherewith to afflicte the harte of Silla, then her self to bee made the instrumente to woorke her owne mishapp, and to plaie the atturney in a cause that made so muche againste her self? But Silla, altogether desirous to please her maister, cared nothyng at all to offende herself, followed his businesse with so good a will, as if it had been in her owne preferment.

Julina, now havynge many tymes taken the gaze of this yong youth, Silvio, perceivynge hym to bee of suche excellent perfect grace, was so intangeled with the often sight of this sweete temptation, that she fell into as greate a likyng with the man as the maister was with herself; and on a tyme, Silvio beyng sent from his maister with a message to the Ladie Julina, as he beganne very earnestly to solicit in his maister's behalfe, Julina, interruptyng hym in his tale, saied: Silvio, it is enough that you have saied for your maister; from henceforthe, either speake for your self, or saie nothyng at all. Silla, abashed to heare these wordes, began in her minde to accuse the blindness of Love, that Julina, neglectyng the good will of so noble a Duke, would preferre her love unto suche a one, as nature it self had denaied to recompense her likyng.

And now, for a tyme leavyng matters dependyng as you have heard, it fell out that the right Silvio indeede (whom you have heard spoken of before, the brother of Silla) was come to his father's courte into the Ile of Cypres; where, understanding that his sister was departed in maner as you have heard, conjectured that the very occasion did proceade of some liking had betwene Pedro her man (that was missyng with her) and herself: but Silvio, who loved his sister as dearly as his owne life, and the rather for that, as she was his naturall sister, bothe by father and mother, so the one of them was so like the other in countenance and favour, that there was no man able to descerne the one from the other by their faces, savyng by their aparell, the one beyng a man, the other a woman.

Silvio, therefore, vowed to his father, not onely to seeke out his sister Silla, but also to revenge the villanie whiche he conceived in Pedro for the carryng awaie of his sister; and thus departyng, havynge travailed through many cities and tounes, without hearyng any maner of newes of those he wente to seeke for, at the laste he arrived at Constantinople, where as he was walkyng in an evenyng for his owne recreation, on a pleasaunte greene yarde, without the walles of the citie, he fortunèd to meete with the Ladie Julina, who likewise had been abroad to take the aire; and as she sodainly caste her eyes uppon Silvio, thinkyng hym to bee her olde acquaintaunce, by reason thei were so like one another, as you have heard before, saied unto hym, Sir Silvio, if your haste be not the greater, I praie you, let me have a little talke with you, seyng I have so luckely mette you in this place.

Silvio, wonderyng to heare hym self so rightlie named, beyng but a straunger, not of above twoo daies continuance in the citie, verie courteslie came towards her, desirous to heare what she would saie.

Julina, commaunding her traine somthyng to stande backe, saied as followeth: Seyng my good will and frendly love hath been the onely cause to make me so prodigall to offer that I see is so lightly rejected, it maketh me to thinke that men bee of this condition, rather to desire those thynges whiche thei can not come by, then to esteeme or value of that whiche bothe largely and liberallie is offered unto them: but if the liberalitie of my proffer hath made to seme lesse the value of the thing that I ment to present, it is but in your owne conceipt, consideryng how many noble men there hath been here before, and be yet at this present, whiche hath bothe served, sued, and moste humbly intreated, to attaine to that, whiche to you of myself I have freely offred, and I perceive is despised, or at the least verie lightly regarded.

Silvio, wonderyng at these woordes, but more amazed that she could so rightlie call hym by his name, could not tell what to make of her speeches, assuryng hym self that she was deceived and did mistake hym, did thinke, notwithstanding, it had been a poyncte of greate simplicitie, if he should forsake that whiche Fortune had so favourably proffered unto hym, perceivynge by her traine that she was some ladie of greate honour, and vewyng the perfection of her beautie and the excellencie of her grace and countenance, did thinke it impossible that she should be despised, and therefore answered thus:

Madame, if before this tyme I have seemed to forgett my self, in neglectyng your courtesie whiche so liberally you have ment unto me, please it you to pardon what is paste, and from this daie forwardes Silvio remaineth readie preste to make suche reasonable amendes as his abilitie may any waies permit, or as it shall please you to commaunde.

Die Novelle schliesst:

Julina, seyng Silvio in place, did know very well that he was the father of her childe, and was so ravished with joye, that she knewe not whether she were awake, or in some dreame. Silvio, imbracyng her in his armes, cravynge forgiveness of all that was past, concluded with her the marriage daie, which was presently accomplished with greate joye and contentation to all parties. And thus, Silvio havynge attained a noble wife, and Silla, his sister, her desired housband, thei passed the residue of their daies with suche delight as those that have accomplished the perfection of their felicities.

Abgesehen von dieser Novelle, soll Shakspeare nach der Meinung einiger Kritiker auch zwei italienische Lustspiele für sein Twelfth-Night möglicherweise benutzt haben: die Inganni, auf welche schon Manningham in der oben angeführten Tagebuchnotiz hinweist, und ein andres, fast gleichnamiges, die Ingannati. Von letzterem Lustspiele giebt Hunter folgende Analyse: Fabritio and Lelia, a brother and a sister, are separated by the sack of Rome, in 1527. Lelia is carried to Modena, where resides Flaminio, to whom she had formerly been attached. Lelia disguises her as a boy and enters his service. Flaminio had forgotten Lelia and was suitor to Isabella. Isabella is insensible to the importunities of Flaminio, but conceives a violent passion for Lelia, mistaking her for a man. In the third act Fabritio arrives at Modena, when mistakes arise owing to the close resemblance there is between Fabritio and his sister in her male attire. Ultimately recognitions take place; the affections of Isabella are easily transferred from Lelia to Fabritio, and Flaminio takes to his bosom the affectionate and faithful Lelia. — We have in the Italian play a subordinate character, named Pasquelloa, to whom Maria corresponds; and in the subordinate incidents we find Fabritio mistaken in the street for Lelia, by the servant of Isabella, who takes him to her mistress' house, exactly as Sebastian is taken for Viola and led to the house of Olivia. — Von geringfügigeren Uebereinstimmungen führt Hunter an: den Namen Fabian, den Shakspeare einem seiner Charaktere giebt, nach Fabia, wie die verkleidete Lelia sich nennt. — Ebenso soll Malvolio in Twelfth-Night nach Malevolti in dem italienischen Drama gebildet sein. — Endlich wird in dem italienischen Prolog la Notte di Beffana (Dreikönigsabend) erwähnt, woraus Sh. den Titel seines Dramas Twelfth-Night entlehnt haben soll.

Zu A. 1, Sc. 3: Wherefore are these things hid? wherefore have these gifts a curtain before them? are they like to take dust, like Mistress Mall's picture? entlehnen wir aus Staunton's Ausgabe Folgendes: The picture in question is supposed to be a portrait of one Mary Frith, commonly known as Mall Cutpurse, an Amazonian bona roba, to whom allusions innumerable are made by the dramatic and satirical writers of the period. She is said to have been born in Barbican, and to have attained to such disreputable celebrity, that about 1610 a book was published, entitled „The Madde Francks of mery Mall of the Banckside, with her walkes in man's apparell and to what purpose, written by John Day.“ In the following year she was made the heroine of a comedy by Middleton and Decker, called „The Roaring Girle, or Moll Cutpurse, as it hath lately beene Acted on the Fortune-stage by the Prince his Players,“ on the title-page of which she is represented in her male habiliments, and smoking tobacco. About the same time she did penance at St. Paul's Cross, of which ceremony the following account is preserved in a letter from Iohn Chamberlain to Sir Dudley Carleton, dated February 12, 1611-12: — „This last Sunday Moll Cutpurse, a notorious baggage that used to go in man's apparel, and challenged the field of diverse gallants, was brought to the same place, where she wept bitterly, and seemed very penitent; but it is since doubted she was maudlin drunk, being discovered to have tippel'd of three quarts of sack before she came to her penance.“ She died in 1659, and is stated to have left twenty pounds by her will for the Fleet-street conduit to run with wine when King Charles the Second returned, which happened soon after.

Zu A. 2, Sc. 3. Das Lied, das Sir Toby und der Narr wechselweise singen, findet sich unter dem Titel Corydon's Farewell to Phillis in Percy's Reliques of Ancient Poetry, und lautet vollständig:

*Farewell, dear love; since thou wilt needs be gone,
Mine eyes do shew, my life is almost done.*

Nay I will never die, so long as I can spie

There be many mo, though that she doe goe,

There be many mo, I fear not:

Why then let her goe, I care not.

Farewell, farewell; since this I find is true

I will not spend more time in wooing you:

But I will seek elsewhere, if I may find love there:

Shall I bid her goe? what and if I doe?

Shall I bid her goe and spare not?

O no, no, no, I dare not.

Ten thousand times farewell; — yet stay a while: —
Sweet, kiss me once; sweet kisses time beguile:
I have no power to move. How now am I in love?
Wilt thou needs be gone? Go then, all is one.
Wilt thou needs be gone? Oh, hie thee!
Nay stay, and do no more deny me.

Once more adieu, I see loath to depart
Bids oft adieu to her, that holds my heart.
But seeing I must lose thy love, which I did choose,

Zu A. 3, Sc. 4: it is with me as the very true sonnet is, „Please one, and please all.“ — Dieses Gedicht theilt Staunton nach dem neuerdings aufgefundenen, wahrscheinlich einzig erhaltenen Exemplare mit: A prettie new Ballad, intituled: The Crowe sits upon the wall, Please one and please all.

Please one and please all,
Be they great be they small,
Be they little be they lowe,
So pypeth the Crowe,
Sitting upon a wall:
Please one and please all,
Please one and please all.

Be they white be they black,
Have they a smock on their back,
Or a kercher on her head,
Whether they spin silke or thred,
Whatsoever they them call:
Please one and please all.

Be they sluttish be they gay,
Love they worke or love they play,
Whatsoever be theyre cheere,
Drinke they ale or drinke they beere,
Whether it be strong or small:
Please one and please all.

Be they sower be they swete,
Be they shrewish be they meeke,
Weare they silke or cloth so good
Velvet bonnet or french-hood,
Upon her head a cap or call:
Please one and please all.

Be they halt be they lame,
Be she Lady be she dame,
If that she doo weare a pinne,
Keepe she taverne or keepe she Inne,
Either bulke bouth or stall:
Please one and please all.

The goodwife I doo meane,
Be she fat or be she leane,
Whatsoever that she be,
This the Crowe tolde me,
Sitting uppon a wall:
Please one and please all.

If the goodwife speake aloft,
See that you then speake soft,
Whether it be good or ill,
Let her doo what she will:
And to keepe yourselfe from thrall,
Please one and please all.

If the goodwife be displeased,
All the whole house is diseased,
And therefore by my will,
To please he learne the skill,
Least that she should alwaise brall:
Please one and please all.

Goe thy way for me, since that may not be.
Goe thy ways for me. But whither?
Goe, oh, but where I am come thither.

What shall I doe? my love is now departed.
She is as fair, as she is cruel-hearted.
She would not be intreated, with prayers oft repeated,

If she come no more, shall I die therefore?
If she come no more, what care I?
Faith, let her goe, or come, or tarry.

If that you bid her do ought,
If that she doo it not,
And though that you be her goodman,
You yourself must doo it then,
Be it in kitchin or in hall:
Please one and please all.

Let her have her owne will,
Thus the Crowe pypeth still,
Whatsoever she command,
She that you doo it out of hand,
Whensoever she doth call:
Please one and please all.

Be they wanton be they wilde,
Be they gentle be they milde:
Be shee white be shee browne,
Dooth shee skould or dooth she frowne,
Let her doo what she shall:
Please one and please all.

Be she coy be she proud,
Speake she soft or speake she loud,
Be she simple be she flaunt,
Dooth she trip or dooth she taunt,
The Crowe sits upon the wall:
Please one and please all.

Is she huswife is she none,
Dooth she drudge dooth she groone,
Is she nimble is she quicke,
Is she short, is she thicke,
Let her be what she shall:
Please one and please all.

Be she cruel be she curst,
Come she last come she first,
Be they young be they olde,
Doo they smile doo they scold,
Though they doo nought at all:
Please one and please all.

Though it be some Crowes guise,
Oftentimes to tell lyes,
Yet this Crowes words dooth try,
That her tale is no lye,
For thus it is and ever shall
Please one and please all.

Please one and please all,
Be they great be they small,
Be they little be they lowe,
So pipeth the Crowe,
Sitting upon a wall:
Please one and please all,
Please one and please all.

EINLEITUNG.

Zu A. 4, Sc. 2. Das Lied, das der Narr bruchstückweise singt, findet sich vollständig unter der Ueberschrift: The Careful Lover Complaineth, and the Happy Lover Counselleth in den Gedichten des Sir Thomas Wyatt:

Ah! Robin!
Joly Robin!
Tell me how thy Leman doth?
And thou shalt know of mine.
„My Lady is unkind, perdie!“
Alack, why is she so?
„She loveth another better than me,
And yet she will say, no.“

RESPONSE.

I find no such doubleness;
I find women true.
My Lady loveth me doubtless,
And will change for no new.

LE PLAINTIF.

Thou art happy while that doth last,
But I say as I find;
That woman's love is but a blast,
And turneth like the wind.

RESPONSE.

But if thou wilt avoid thy harm,
Learn this lesson of me;
At others' fires thyself to warm,
And let them warm with thee.

LE PLAINTIF.

Such folks shall take no harm by love,
That can abide their turn;
But I, alas, can no way prove
In love, but lack, and mourn.

ACT I.

SCENE I.

An Apartment in the DUKE's Palace.

Enter DUKE, CURIO, Lords; Musicians attending.

Duke. If music be the food of love,¹ play on;
 Give me excess of it, that, surfeiting,
 The appetite may sicken, and so die. —
 That strain again! it had a dying fall:
 O! it came o'er my ear like the sweet sound²
 That breathes upon a bank of violets,
 Stealing and giving odour. — Enough! no more:
 'T is not so sweet now, as it was before.
 O spirit of love! how quick and fresh art thou,
 That, notwithstanding thy capacity
 Receiveth as the sea, nought enters there,³
 Of what validity and pitch soe'er,
 But falls into abatement and low price,⁴
 Even in a minute! so full of shapes is fancy,
 That it alone is high-fantastical.⁵

Cur. Will you go hunt, my lord?

Duke.

What, Curio?

Cur.

The hart.

Duke. Why, so I do, the noblest that I have.
 O! when mine eyes did see Olivia first,
 (Methought she purg'd the air of pestilence)⁶
 That instant was I turn'd into a hart,
 And my desires, like fell and cruel hounds,
 E'er since pursue me.⁷ —

Enter VALENTINE.

How now? what news from her?

Val. So please my lord, I might not be admitted,
 But from her handmaid do return this answer: —
 The element itself, till seven years heat,⁸
 Shall not behold her face at ample view;
 But, like a cloistress, she will veiled walk,
 And water once a day her chamber round
 With eye-offending brine: all this, to season⁹
 A brother's dead love, which she would keep fresh
 And lasting in her sad remembrance.¹⁰

1) So in Antony and Cleopatra (A. 2, Sc. 5) Give me some music; music, moody food || Of us that trade in love. — Das Bild von einer Nahrung, die, im Uebermass genossen, die Esslust vernichtet, ist Sh. sehr geläufig. — surfeiting ist participiale Apposition zu appetite. 2) Der Herzog vergleicht die seinem Ohre schmeichelnde Musik an Süßigkeit einem über ein Veilchenbeet dahinsäuselnden und so zum Wohllaut noch den Wohlgeruch fügenden Tone. — Für sound änderte Rowe wind und Pope, dem die meisten Hgg. folgten, south. 3) there bezieht sich auf thy capacity: die Fähigkeit der Liebe, Alles in sich aufzunehmen. 4) abatement entspricht dem validity = Geltung, Werth, low price dem pitch = hohe Stellung, hoher Rang. So wird validity in All's well that ends well (A. 5, Sc. 3) gebraucht: behold this ring, || Whose high respect and rich validity || Did lack a parallel. 5) fancy = Liebe, und zugleich = Phantasie, in Verbindung mit high-fantastical = äusserst phantasiereich, und zugleich = phantastisch, wunderlich. 6) Nach Capell's Interpunction, der den Satz als einen parenthetischen betrachtet und That instant etc. als Nachsatz zu dem Vordersatze O! when mine eyes etc. fasst. Die gewöhnliche Interpunction hat keine Parenthese und beginnt mit That instant einen neuen Satz. 7) Sh. dachte an den Mythos von Actæon, auf den er deutlicher hinweist in Merry Wives of Windsor (A. 2, Sc. 1) go thou, || Like Sir Actæon he, with Ringwood at thy heels. Dasselbe Bild wie hier fand Sh. in Daniel's Sonnets (1592), wo der Dichter von der Sprödigkeit seiner Geliebten sagt: Which turn'd my sport into a hart's despair, || Which still is chas'd, while I have any breath, || By mine own thoughts set on me by my fair; || My thoughts like hounds pursue me to my death. 8) heat für heated: die Luft selbst, bis sie sieben Jahre erwärmt ist, also sieben Sommer hindurch. Andere schreiben seven years' heat und fassen also heat substantivisch. — Das Particip heat kommt auch in Webster's Northward Hoe vor: he's heat to the proof. — element = Luft, Atmosphäre, findet sich in Julius Cæsar (A. 1, Sc. 3) the complexion of the element || In favour's like the work we have in hand. — Für heate der Fol. liest Rowe hence. 9) Die Metapher von dem Salz der Thränen, das zur Erhaltung und Würze eines Gegenstandes dient, hat Sh. wiederholt; so in Romeo and Juliet (A. 2, Sc. 3) How much salt water thrown away in waste, || To season love. 10) remembrance ist

Duke. O! she that hath a heart of that fine frame,
To pay this debt of love but to a brother,
How will she love, when the rich golden shaft¹¹
Hath kill'd the flock of all affections else
That live in her: when liver, brain, and heart,
These sovereign thrones, are all supplied, and fill'd
(Her sweet perfections)¹² with one self king. —
Away, before me to sweet beds of flowers;
Love-thoughts lie rich, when canopied with bowers.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The Sea-coast.

Enter VIOLA, Captain, and Sailors.

Vio. What country, friends, is this?

Cap. This is Illyria, lady.

Vio. And what should I do in Illyria?

My brother he is in Elysium.¹
Perchance, he is not drown'd: — what think you, sailors?

Cap. It is perchance² that you yourself were sav'd.

Vio. O my poor brother! and so, perchance, may he be.

Cap. True, Madam: and, to comfort you with chance,
Assure yourself, after your ship did split,
When you, and those poor number³ saved with you,
Hung on our driving boat, I saw your brother,
Most provident in peril, bind himself
(Courage and hope both teaching him the practice)
To a strong mast, that lived upon the sea;⁴
Where, like Arion on the dolphin's back,
I saw him hold acquaintance with the waves⁵
So long as I could see.

Vio. For saying so there's gold.
Mine own escape unfoldeth to my hope,
Whereto thy speech serves for authority,
The like⁶ of him. Know'st thou this country?

Cap. Ay, Madam, well; for I was bred and born
Not three hours' travel from this very place.

Vio. Who governs here?

Cap. A noble duke, in nature as in name.⁷

Vio. What is his name?

Cap. Orsino.

Vio. Orsino! I have heard my father name him:
He was a bachelor then.

Cap. And so is now, or was so very late;
For but a month ago I went from hence,
And then 't was fresh in murmur (as, you know,
What great ones do, the less will prattle of),
That he did seek the love of fair Olivia.

Vio. What's she?

Cap. A virtuous maid, the daughter of a count
That died some twelvemonth since; then leaving her
In the protection of his son, her brother,
Who shortly also died: for whose dear love,
They say, she hath abjur'd the company
And sight of men.⁸

Vio. O! that I serv'd that lady,
And might not be deliver'd to the world,
Till I had made mine own occasion mellow,
What my estate is.⁹

Cap. That were hard to compass,
Because she will admit no kind of suit,
No, not the duke's.

Vio. There is a fair behaviour in thee, captain;
And though that nature with a beauteous wall
Doth oft close in pollution, yet of thee
I will believe, thou hast a mind that suits
With this thy fair and outward character.
I pr'ythee (and I'll pay thee bounteously),
Conceal me what I am,¹⁰ and be my aid
For such disguise as haply shall become
The form of my intent. I'll serve this duke:
Thou shalt present me as an eunuch to him.
It may be worth thy pains; for I can sing,
And speak to him in many sorts of music,
That will allow me very worth his service.¹¹

vieryslybig (remembrance) zu lesen, wie in Macbeth (A. 3, Sc. 2) Let your remembrance apply to Banquo. 11) Cupido's goldner und bleierner Pfeil wird in Golding's Uebersetzung des Ovid so geschildert: That causes love is all of gold, with point full sharp and bright. || That chaseth love is blunt, whose steel with leaden head is dight. 12) her sweet perfections fasst Steevens als parenthetische Apposition zu liver, brain, and heart als den Sitzen der Leidenschaften, der Urtheilskraft und der Empfindungen. Nach Knight's Erklärung, der dann mit Capell perfection lesen müsste, beziehen sich die Worte auf die Besetzung dieser drei Sitze oder Throne durch einen einzigen König, durch Cupido, weil erst dadurch diese Vollkommenheit Olivia's erreicht wird. — one self = ein und derselbe. So in Beaumont and Fletcher's The Laws of Candy: we meet in one self centre of blest content. — Manche Hgg. lesen mit der zweiten Folioausg. von 1632 with one self-same king. — Die Cambridge Edd. adoptiren Warburton's Interpunction are all supplied, and fill'd || Her sweet perfections with one self king! — Staunton möchte mit einer Umstellung lesen are all supplied and fill'd || With one self king, — her sweet perfection. Also wesentlich im Sinne der Knight'schen Interpretation.

1) Douce macht auf den Gleichklang von Illyria und Elysium, als vom Dichter beabsichtigt, aufmerksam. 2) perchance = vielleicht, fasst der Schiffscapitain = durch Glückszufall (per chance). 3) Sh. verbindet den pluralischen Begriff poor number mit dem Plural those, was die Hgg. meistens in that oder this umändern. 4) Der Mast schwamm auf dem Wasser wie ein lebendiges Wesen, wie der Delphin, auf dem Arion sich rettete. — Die Fol. hat Orion, was sogar Rowe noch beibehielt. 5) Viola's Bruder war mit den Wellen so vertraut, wie mit Bekannten, mit denen er verkehrte. 6) the like bezieht sich auf mine own escape. — country ist vielleicht dreisylbig zu lesen (counetry), wie in Peele's Edward I.: Sending whole countries of heathen souls || To Pluto's house. 7) Der Herzog ist eben so adlig in seinem Wesen, wie vermöge seines Namens und seiner Abstammung aus der Familie Orsino. — Manche Hgg. theilen den Vers anders ab und lesen willkürlich A noble duke, in nature || As in his name. 8) So stellt Hammer die Worte der Fol. the sight || And company of men um. 9) what my estate is ist zu verbinden mit deliver'd to the world, obwohl der Zwischensatz Till I had etc. die Construction stört: Möchte ich doch im Dienste der Dame sein und nicht eher als das, was ich eigentlich bin, vor die Welt treten, bis ich selbst die Gelegenheit dazu reif gemacht haben werde. 10) Verhehle mich als das, was ich bin, verrathe mein eigentliches Geschlecht nicht. 11) to allow = anerkennen als Etwas: Viola's musikalisches Talent, die zu dem Zwecke sich dem Herzog als Castrat vorstellen will, wird ihr die Anerkennung verschaffen, dass

What else may hap to time I will commit;
Only, shape thou thy silence to my wit.

Cap. Be you his eunuch, and your mute I'll be:
When my tongue blabs, then let mine eyes not see.¹²

Vio. I thank thee. Lead me on. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

A Room in OLIVIA'S House.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH, and MARIA.

Sir To. What a plague means my niece, to take the death of her brother thus? I am sure care's an enemy to life.

Mar. By my troth, Sir Toby, you must come in earlier o' nights: your cousin, my lady, takes great exceptions to your ill hours.¹

Sir To. Why, let her except before excepted.

Mar. Ay, but you must confine yourself within the modest limits of order.

Sir To. Confine? I'll confine myself no finer than I am. These clothes are good enough to drink in, and so be these boots too; an they be not, let them hang themselves in their own straps.

Mar. That quaffing and drinking will undo you: I heard my lady talk of it yesterday, and of a foolish knight, that you brought in one night here, to be her wooer.

Sir To. Who? Sir Andrew Ague-cheek?

Mar. Ay, he.

Sir To. He's as tall² a man as any's in Illyria.

Mar. What's that to the purpose?

Sir To. Why, he has three thousand ducats a year.

Mar. Ay, but he'll have but a year in all these ducats: he's a very fool, and a prodigal.

Sir To. Fie, that you'll say so! he plays o' the viol-de-gamboys,³ and speaks three or four languages word for word without book, and hath all the good gifts of nature.

Mar. He hath, indeed, — almost natural;⁴ for, besides that he's a fool, he's a great quarreller; and, but that he hath the gift of a coward to allay the gust he hath in quarrelling, 't is thought among the prudent he would quickly have the gift of a grave.

Sir To. By this hand, they are scoundrels, and subtractors,⁵ that say so of him. Who are they?

Mar. They that add, moreover, he's drunk nightly in your company.

Sir To. With drinking healths to my niece. I'll drink to her as long as there is a passage in my throat, and drink in Illyria. He's a coward, and a coystil,⁶ that will not drink to my niece, till his brains turn o' the toe like a parish-top.⁷ What, wench! Castiliano vulgo;⁸ for here comes Sir Andrew Ague-face.

Enter Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Sir And. Sir Toby Belch! how now, Sir Toby Belch?

Sir To. Sweet Sir Andrew.

Sir And. Bless you, fair shrew.

Mar. And you too, Sir.

Sir To. Accost, Sir Andrew, accost.⁹

Sir And. What's that?

Sir To. My niece's chambermaid.

Sir And. Good Mistress Accost, I desire better acquaintance.

Mar. My name is Mary, Sir.

Sir And. Good Mistress Mary Accost, —

Sir To. You mistake, knight: accost is front her, board her, woo her, assail her.

Sir And. By my troth, I would not undertake her in this company. Is that the meaning of accost?

Mar. Fare you well, gentlemen.

Sir To. An thou let part so, Sir Andrew, 'would thou mightst never draw sword again!

Sir And. An you part so, mistress, I would I might never draw sword again. Fair lady, do you think you have fools in hand?

Mar. Sir, I have not you by the hand.

Sir And. Marry, but you shall have; and here's my hand.

Mar. Now, Sir, thought is free:¹⁰ I pray you, bring your hand to the buttery-bar,¹¹ and let it drink.

Sir And. Wherefore, sweet-heart? what's your metaphor?

Mar. It's dry, Sir.

Sir And. Why, I think so: I am not such an ass, but I can keep my hand dry. But what's your jest?

Mar. A dry jest, Sir.

sie würdig ist, ihm zu dienen. 12) Eine Anspielung auf die aus Eunuchen und Stummen bestehende Dienerschaft in türkischen Harems, sowie auf die dort übliche Strafe der Blendung.

1) Mein Fräulein hat viel auszusetzen an den unpassenden Stunden Eures Zuhausekommens. — Sir Toby fasst dann scherzhaft to except im juristischen Sinne = perhorresciren, und macht ebenso ein Wortspiel mit to confine, das er als Compositum von fine = fein gekleidet, fasst. 2) tall = tüchtig, stattlich. 3) viol-de-gamboys ist entstellt aus viol-de-gambo = eine Art von Violoncell. 4) Wortspiel zwischen nature und natural = Einfaltspinsel. — Upton liest den Satz so: He hath indeed all, most natural. 5) Er will detractors sagen. — Manche Hgg. setzen subtractors. 6) coystil = Trossbube, von einigen Hggn. irrthümlich identificirt mit kestrel = a kind of bastard hawk, kommt als verächtliche Bezeichnung auch bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen vor; so in Ben Jonson's Every Man in his Humour: You whoreson bragging coystil. 7) parish-top oder town-top, ein grosser Kreisel, der zur Belustigung der Einwohner, die ihn namentlich bei kaltem Wetter peitschten, in englischen Städten und Dörfern gehalten wurde. 8) Warburton änderte Castiliano volto, als wolle Sir Toby der Maria eine ernste spanische Miene empfehlen. Wahrscheinlich spricht er nur beliebige spanisch klingende Worte, um sich bei dem herzukommenden Sir Andrew, dem diese Sprachkenntnisse imponiren, in Respect zu setzen. 9) to accost = sich an Jemanden machen, mit Jemandem anbinden; so in Ben Jonson's Cynthia's Revels: to accost him with some choice remnant of Spanish or Italian. — Sir Andrew hält das ihm unbekannte Wort für den Familiennamen der Maria. — In demselben Sinne wie to accost gebraucht Sir Toby auch to board. 10) Das sprichwörtliche thought is free bezieht sich wieder auf Sir Andrew's Frage: do you think you have fools in hand? — So in Lyly's Euphues: None, quoth she, can judge of wit, but they that have it; why then, quoth he, dost thou think me a fool? Thought is free, my Lord, quoth she. 11) buttery-bar = Speisekammer oder Butterkammer, der Ort, wo die Domestiken gespeist und getränkt wurden. — Eine trockene Hand galt für ein Symptom

Sir And. Are you full of them?

Mar. Ay, Sir; I have them at my fingers' ends:¹² marry, now I let go your hand, I am barren.

[Exit MARIA.]

Sir To. O knight! thou lack'st a cup of canary. When did I see thee so put down?¹³

Sir And. Never in your life, I think; unless you see canary put me down. Methinks sometimes I have no more wit than a Christian, or an ordinary man has; but I am a great eater of beef, and, I believe, that does harm to my wit.

Sir To. No question.

Sir And. An I thought that, I'd forswear it. I'll ride home to-morrow, Sir Toby.

Sir To. Pourquoi, my dear knight?

Sir And. What is pourquoi? do or not do? I would I had bestowed that time in the tongues, that I have in fencing, dancing, and bear-baiting. O, had I but followed the arts!¹⁴

Sir To. Then hadst thou had an excellent head of hair!

Sir And. Why, would that have mended my hair?

Sir To. Past question; for thou seest it will not curl by nature.¹⁵

Sir And. But it becomes me well enough, does't not?

Sir To. Excellent: it hangs like flax on a distaff, and I hope to see a housewife take thee between her legs, and spin it off.

Sir And. 'Faith, I'll home to-morrow, Sir Toby: your niece will not be seen; or, if she be, it's four to one she'll none of me. The count himself, here hard by, wooes her.

Sir To. She'll none o' the count;¹⁶ she'll not match above her degree, neither in estate, years, nor wit; I have heard her swear it. Tut, there's life in't,¹⁷ man.

Sir And. I'll stay a month longer. I am a fellow o' the strangest mind i' the world: I delight in masques and revels sometimes altogether.

Sir To. Art thou good at these kick-shaws, knight?

Sir And. As any man in Illyria, whatsoever he be under the degree of my betters: and yet I will not compare with an old man.¹⁸

Sir To. What is thy excellence in a galliard, knight?

Sir And. 'Faith, I can cut a caper.¹⁹

Sir To. And I can cut the mutton to't.

Sir And. And, I think, I have the back-trick,²⁰ simply as strong as any man in Illyria.

Sir To. Wherefore are these things hid? wherefore have these gifts a curtain before them? are they like to take dust, like Mistress Mall's picture?²¹ why dost thou not go to church in a galliard, and come home in a coranto?²² My very walk should be a jig: I would not so much as make water, but in a sink-a-pace. What dost thou mean? is it a world to hide virtues in? I did think, by the excellent constitution of thy leg, it was formed under the star of a galliard.

Sir And. Ay, 't is strong, and it does indifferent well in a damask-coloured²³ stock. Shall we set about some revels?

Sir To. What shall we do else? were we not born under Taurus?²⁴

Sir And. Taurus? that's sides and heart.

Sir To. No, Sir, it is legs and thighs. Let me see thee caper. Ha! higher: ha, ha! — excellent! [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

A Room in the Duke's Palace.

Enter VALENTINE, and VIOLA in man's attire.¹

Val. If the duke continue these favours towards you, Cesario, you are like to be much advanced: he hath known you but three days, and already you are no stranger.

Vio. You either fear his humour, or my negligence, that you call in question the continuance of his love. Is he inconstant, Sir, in his favours?

von körperlicher und geistiger Schwäche. — Sir Andrew, der den Spass nicht versteht, fasst dry hand im wörtlichen Sinne, als Gegensatz zu einer nassen, vom Wasser angefeuchteten Hand. 12) Maria identificirt dry jest und dry hand: die trockene Hand des Sir Andrew. 13) d. h. so im Wortgefecht besiegt, wie Maria ihn besiegt hat. 14) arts fasst Sir Andrew = Wissenschaften, wie sie auf Universitäten betrieben werden, und wie er vorher schon als einen Theil derselben the tongues = das Studium fremder Sprachen, erwähnt hatte. Sir Toby fasst in seiner Replik art als Gegensatz zu nature und versteht z. B. auch die Kunst des Haarkräuslers darunter. 15) curl by nature emendirt Theobald das sinnlose cool my nature der Fol. 16) Unter count ist der Herzog Orsino verstanden. Mit ähnlicher Lizenz oder Verwechslung heisst in Love's Labour's Lost der König von Navarra öfter the duke. 17) Eine sprichwörtliche Redensart: Du brauchst den Muth noch nicht sinken zu lassen, Du brauchst noch nicht zu verzweifeln. So in K. Lear (A. 4, Sc. 6) Then there's life in it. 18) Sir Andrew, wenn er sich auch noch so gut auf solche Narrenspotten versteht wie irgend ein Anderer seines Ranges, will es deshalb doch nicht mit einem alten Manne, der vielleicht mehr davon gelernt hat, aufnehmen. — Nach Steevens' Erklärung, die jedoch weniger einleuchtet, will Sir Andrew deshalb selber nicht für einen alten Mann gelten. — In Sir Toby's voriger Rede hat die Fol. kicke-chawses, und erst die vierte Folioausg. kick-shaws. Die Cambridge Edd. lesen daher kickshawses. 19) Sir Andrew fasst caper = Luftsprung, Bocksprung, Sir Toby fasst es = Kapper, wie sie in einer Brühe zum Hammelfleisch genossen werden. 20) back-trick = der Pas im Tanze, wo man zurückspringt. 21) Ueber Mistress Mall, deren Portrait man ihres übeln Rufes wegen mit einem Vorhang bedeckte, unter dem Vorwande, dasselbe vor Staub zu bewahren, vgl. Einleitung pag. 483. 22) galliard und coranto sind rasche, muntre Tänze, vom Auslande nach England eingeführt. Ersterer heisst auch sink-a-pace, eigentlich cinq-pace, weil fünf Pas dazu gehörten. 23) damask-coloured (vielleicht dam'sk coloured geschrieben) emendirt Knight das dam'd coloured der Fol., wofür die meisten Hgg. mit Rowe flame-coloured setzen. — Sir Andrew, um sein schönes Bein zu heben, zieht rosenfarbige Strumpfhosen an. 24) Wie schon vorher scherzhaft bei dem unter dem Gestirne einer Galliarde geformten Bein, so wird auch hier auf den astrologischen Glauben hingedeutet, dass sowohl der Mensch unter gewissem Einfluss des gerade bei seiner Geburt vorherrschenden Gestirnes stehe, als auch dass von diesem Einfluss besondere Theile des Menschen influenzirt werden. Nach den Angaben, die darüber in den Almanachen der Zeit sich finden, soll jedoch, wie Douce bemerkt, das Sternbild des Stiers im Thierkreise nicht, wie Sir Andrew meint, die Seiten und das Herz, sondern den Hals und die Kehle regieren.

Val. No, believe me.

Vio. I thank you. Here comes the count.

Enter DUKE, CURIO, and Attendants.

Duke. Who saw Cesario, ho?

Vio. On your attendance, my lord; here.

Duke. Stand you awhile aloof. — Cesario,
Thou know'st no less but all: I have unclasp'd
To thee the book even of my secret soul;
Therefore, good youth, address thy gait unto her:
Be not denied access,² stand at her doors,
And tell them,³ there thy fixed foot shall grow,
Till thou have audience.

Vio. Sure, my noble lord,
If she be so abandon'd to her sorrow,
As it is spoke, she never will admit me.

Duke. Be clamorous, and leap all civil bounds,
Rather than make unprofitable return.⁴

Vio. Say, I do speak with her, my lord: what then?

Duke. O! then unfold the passion of my love;
Surprise her with discourse of my dear faith:
It shall become thee well to act my woes;
She will attend it better in thy youth,
Than in a nuncio⁵ of more grave aspect.

Vio. I think not so, my lord.

Duke. Dear lad, believe it;
For they shall yet belie thy happy years,
That say thou art a man: Diana's lip
Is not more smooth and rubious; thy small pipe⁶
Is as the maiden's organ, shrill and sound,
And all is semblative a woman's part.⁷
I know, thy constellation is right apt
For this affair. — Some four, or five, attend him;
All, if you will; for I myself am best,
When least in company. — Prosper well in this,
And thou shalt live as freely as thy lord
To call his fortunes thine.

Vio. I'll do my best,
To woo your lady: [aside] yet, a barful strife!⁸
Whoe'er I woo, myself would be his wife. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

A Room in OLIVIA'S House.

Enter MARIA and Clown.

Mar. Nay, either tell me where thou hast been, or I will not open my lips so wide as a bristle may enter, in way of thy excuse. My lady will hang thee for thy absence.

Clo. Let her hang me: he that is well hanged in this world needs to fear no colours.¹

Mar. Make that good.

Clo. He shall see none to fear.

Mar. A good lenten² answer. I can tell thee where that saying was born, of, I fear no colours.

Clo. Where, good Mistress Mary?

Mar. In the wars; and that may you be bold to say in your foolery.

Clo. Well, God give them wisdom that have it; and those that are fools, let them use their talents.

Mar. Yet you will be hanged, for being so long absent; or, to be turned away, — is not that so good as a hanging to you?³

Clo. Many a good hanging prevents a bad marriage; and for turning away, let summer bear it out.⁴

Mar. You are resolute then?

Clo. Not so neither; but I am resolved⁵ on two points.

Mar. That, if one break, the other will hold; or, if both break, your gaskins fall.

Clo. Apt, in good faith; very apt. Well, go thy way:
if Sir Toby would leave drinking, thou wert as witty a piece of Eve's flesh as any in Illyria.⁶

Mar. Peace, you rogue, no more o' that. Here comes my lady: make your excuse wisely, you were best.

[Exit.]

Clo. Wit, an 't be thy will, put me into good fooling!
Those wits that think they have thee, do very oft prove fools; and I, that am sure I lack thee, may pass for a wise man: for what says Quinapalus?⁷ Better a witty fool, than a foolish wit.

1) Diese Bühnenweisung findet sich schon in der Fol. 2) Lass Dir den Zutritt nicht verweigern. — Der Herzog denkt an das was dem Valentin bei der Olivia geschehen war, der A. 1, Sc. 1 sagte: So please my lord, I might not be admitted. 3) them d. h. Olivia's Dienerschaft. 4) Setze Dich lieber über alle Schranken des Anstandes hinweg, als dass Du unverrichteter Sache zurückkehrst. 5) nuncio = Bote, ein affectirtes Wort, das Sh. nur an dieser Stelle hat. — Die Fol. hat Nuncio's, vielleicht für Nuntius, wie die Fol. Antonio's für Antonius u. s. w. druckt. 6) small pipe = Pfeife mit hohem Discantton. Der Herzog versteht darunter Viola's Discantstimme. So in Coriolanus (A. 3, Sc. 2) my throat of war be turn'd into a pipe small as an eunuch. 7) Alles eignet sich an Dir zu einer Weiberrolle, wie solche auf dem Sh.'schen Theater von Knaben dargestellt wurde. 8) barful strife ist der schwer zu hebende innere Conflict der Viola zwischen ihrer eigenen Neigung zum Herzog und der Sendung, mit der sie beauftragt ist.

1) Ein sprichwörtlicher Ausdruck, der eigentlich colours = Fahnen, also = Kriegsdienst, fasst; dann aber ist colours auch = Vorwände, Täuschungen. 2) lenten, eigentlich = zur Fastenzeit gehörig, dann = ärmlich, kümmerlich. — Die Fol. hat lenton. 3) Oder wenn Du aus dem Dienste gejagt würdest, ist das nicht so schlimm für Dich, als wenn Du gehängt würdest? — Manche Hgg. lesen mit der zweiten Folioausg. von 1632 or be turn'd away in engerer Verbindung mit dem Vorhergehenden. 4) Wenn ich weggejagt werde, so lässt sich das im Sommer, wo man im Freien übernachten kann, schon aushalten. 5) Der Narr unterscheidet spitzfindig zwischen resolute und resolved und fasst point = Punkt, was Maria = Nestel zur Befestigung der Beinkleider, fasst. Ein ähnliches Wortspiel begegnet in K. Henry IV. First Part (A. 2, Sc. 4) Their points being broken, — down fell their hose. — gaskins, oder vollständig gally-gasco'nes, = weite Beinkleider, von Coles in seinem lateinischen Lexikon mit braccae laxae erklärt. 6) Der Narr deutet schalkhaft auf die Möglichkeit einer Verheirathung Sir Toby's mit Maria hin, wenn die Letztere ihm nur das Trinken abgewöhnen könne. 7) Der Narr fingirt den Namen eines alten Philosophen, dem er den folgenden Denkspruch zuschreibt. 8) dishonest = unehrbar, liederlich, bezieht sich auf das lange Wegbleiben des Narren, über das schon Maria geklagt hatte. 9) Diese italienische Anrede an eine Dame gebraucht Sh. nur in diesem Drama. Die Fol. hat Madona. — In der vorigen Zeile setzen einige Hgg. that's as much as to say. Doch hat Sh. auch in K. Henry VI. Second Part (A. 4, Sc. 2) which is as much to say as, — let the

Enter OLIVIA and MALVOLIO.

God bless thee, lady!

Oli. Take the fool away.

Clo. Do you not hear, fellows? Take away the lady.

Oli. Go to, you're a dry fool; I'll no more of you: besides, you grow dishonest.⁸

Clo. Two faults, madonna, that drink and good counsel will amend: for give the dry fool drink, then is the fool not dry; bid the dishonest man mend himself: if he mend, he is no longer dishonest; if he cannot, let the botcher mend him. Any thing that's mended is but patched: virtue that transgresses is but patched with sin; and sin that amends is but patched with virtue. If that this simple syllogism will serve, so; if it will not, what remedy? As there is no true cuckold but calamity, so beauty's a flower. — The lady bade take away the fool; therefore, I say again, take her away.

Oli. Sir, I bade them take away you.

Clo. Misprision in the highest degree! — Lady, cucullus non facit monachum: that's as much to say as, I wear not motley in my brain. Good madonna,⁹ give me leave to prove you a fool.

Oli. Can you do it?

Clo. Dexteriously,¹⁰ good madonna.

Oli. Make your proof.

Clo. I must catechise you for it, madonna. Good my mouse of virtue, answer me.

Oli. Well, Sir, for want of other idleness, I'll bide your proof.¹¹

Clo. Good madonna, why mourn'st thou?

Oli. Good fool, for my brother's death.

Clo. I think his soul is in hell, madonna.

Oli. I know his soul is in heaven, fool.

Clo. The more fool, madonna, to mourn for your brother's soul being in heaven. — Take away the fool, gentlemen.

Oli. What think you of this fool, Malvolio? doth he not mend?¹²

Mal. Yes; and shall do, till the pangs of death shake him: infirmity, that decays the wise,¹³ doth ever make the better fool.

Clo. God send you, Sir, a speedy infirmity, for the better increasing your folly! Sir Toby will be sworn that I am no fox, but he will not pass his word for twopence¹⁴ that you are no fool.

Oli. How say you to that, Malvolio?

Mal. I marvel your ladyship takes delight in such a barren rascal: I saw him put down the other day with an ordinary fool,¹⁵ that has no more brain than a stone. Look you now, he's out of his guard already: unless you laugh and minister occasion to him, he is gagged. I protest, I take these wise men, that crow so at these set kind of fools, no better than the fools' zanies.¹⁶

Oli. O! you are sick of self-love, Malvolio, and taste with a distempered appetite. To be generous, guiltless,¹⁷ and of free disposition, is to take those things for bird-bolts, that you deem cannon-bullets. There is no slander in an allowed fool,¹⁸ though he do nothing but rail; nor no railing in a known discreet man, though he do nothing but reprove.

Clo. Now, Mercury endue thee with leasing, for thou speakest well of fools!¹⁹

Re-enter MARIA.

Mar. Madam, there is at the gate a young gentleman much desires to speak with you.

Oli. From the count Orsino, is it?

Mar. I know not, Madam: 't is a fair young man, and well attended.²⁰

Oli. Who of my people hold him in delay?

Mar. Sir Toby, Madam, your kinsman.

Oli. Fetch him off, I pray you: he speaks nothing but madman.²¹ Fie on him! [Exit MARIA.] Go you, Malvolio: if it be a suit from the count, I am sick, or not at home; what you will, to dismiss it. [Exit MALVOLIO.] Now you see, Sir, how your fooling grows old, and people dislike it.

Clo. Thou hast spoke for us, madonna, as if thy eldest son should be a fool, whose skull Jove cram with brains; for here he comes, one of thy kin, has a most weak pia mater.²²

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH.

Oli. By mine honour, half drunk. — What is he at the gate, cousin?

Sir To. A gentleman.

Oli. A gentleman! What gentleman?

Sir To. 'T is a gentleman here²³ — a plague o' these pickle-herring! — How now, sot?²⁴

Clo. Good Sir Toby!

magistrates etc. 10) dexteriously sagt der Narr scherzhaft und affectirt für dexterously, was manche Hgg. mit der vierten Folioausg. setzen. 11) Weil ich gerade keinen andern müssigen Zeitvertreib habe, will ich Eurer Beweisführung mich fügen. Manche Hgg. setzen 'bide, aus abide abgekürzt. 12) Olivia bezieht sich auf die eigenen Worte des Narren vorher: bid the dishonest man mend himself etc. 13) Die Altersschwäche, welche den Weisen herunterbringt, ihn verfallen lässt. 14) Er wird keine zwei Pfennige darauf verwetten. 15) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 3, Anm. 13. — with gebraucht Sh. öfter für by von Personen, die zugleich als Werkzeug aufgefasst werden. — ordinary fool ist, wie Staunton vermuthet, nicht = ein gewöhnlicher Narr, sondern = ein Spassmacher, der die Gäste am Wirthstisch (ordinary) belustigen musste. 16) Ich halte solche vernünftigen Leute, welche so laut lachen über solche hergebrachte, einmal eingeführte Art von Narren, für nichts Besseres als für die Hanswurste, die untergeordneten Gesellen der Narren. — zany kommt in diesem Sinne in Ben Jonson's Every Man out of his Humour vor: He's like a zany to a tumbler, || That tries tricks after him to make men laugh. 17) guiltless = arglos, der auch Andern nichts Böses zutraut. 18) allowed fool = ein Narr, der als solcher anerkannt und privilegiert wird, dem man daher nichts übel nimmt. 19) Gebe Mercur Dir die Gabe der Lüge, damit Du noch besser von Narren redest, als Du jetzt thust, da Du die Wahrheit sprichst. — for für because. 20) Der Herzog hatte in der vorigen Scene gesagt some four, or five, attend him. 21) Diese Construction von to speak ist Sh. geläufig. So in Othello (A. 2, Sc. 3) speak parrot und in Merry Wives of Windsor (A. 3, Sc. 2) he speaks holiday. 22) Die pia mater = dünne Hirnhaut, gebraucht Sh. für das Gehirn selbst auch in Love's Labour's Lost (A. 4, Sc. 2) und in Troilus and Cressida (A. 2, Sc. 1). 23) Sir Toby will etwa fortfahren here at the gate; da er aber rülpsen muss, so unterbricht er den Satz und verwünscht die genossenen

Oli. Cousin, cousin, how have you come so early by this lethargy?

Sir To. Lechery! I defy lechery. There's one at the gate.

Oli. Ay, marry; what is he?

Sir To. Let him be the devil, an he will, I care not: give me faith, say I. Well, it's all one. [Exit.

Oli. What's a drunken man like, fool?

Clo. Like a drown'd man, a fool, and a madman: one draught above heat²⁵ makes him a fool, the second mads him, and a third drowns him.

Oli. Go thou and seek the coroner, and let him sit o' my coz; ²⁶ for he's in the third degree of drink, he's drown'd: go, look after him.

Clo. He is but mad yet, ²⁷ madonna; and the fool shall look to the madman. [Exit.

Re-enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. Madam, yond young fellow swears he will speak with you. I told him you were sick: he takes on him to understand so much, ²⁸ and therefore comes to speak with you. I told him you were asleep: he seems to have a fore-knowledge of that too, and therefore comes to speak with you. What is to be said to him, lady? he's fortified against any denial.

Oli. Tell him, he shall not speak with me.

Mal. Ha's been told so; and he says, he'll stand at your door like a sheriff's post, ²⁹ and be the supporter to a bench, but he'll speak with you.

Oli. What kind o' man is he?

Mal. Why, of mankind. ³⁰

Oli. What manner of man?

Mal. Of very ill manner: he'll speak with you, will you, or no.

Oli. Of what personage and years is he?

Mal. Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy; as a squash is before 't is a peascod, or a codling when 't is almost an apple; ³¹ 't is with him in standing water, between boy and man. He is very well-favoured, ³² and he speaks very shrewishly: one would think, his mother's milk were scarce out of him.

Oli. Let him approach. Call in my gentlewoman.

Mal. Gentlewoman, my lady calls. [Exit.

Re-enter MARIA.

Oli. Give me my veil: come, throw it o'er my face. We'll once more hear Orsino's embassy.

Enter VIOLA.

Vio. The honourable lady of the house, which is she?

Oli. Speak to me; I shall answer for her. Your will?

Vio. Most radiant, exquisite, and unmatchable beauty. — I pray you, tell me, if this be the lady of the house, for I never saw her; I would be loath to cast away my speech; for, besides that it is excellently well penned, I have taken great pains to con it. Good beauties, let me sustain no scorn; I am very comptible ³³ even to the least sinister usage.

Oli. Whence came you, Sir?

Vio. I can say little more than I have studied, and that question's out of my part. ³⁴ Good gentle one, give me modest assurance if you be the lady of the house, that I may proceed in my speech.

Oli. Are you a comedian?

Vio. No, my profound heart; and yet, by the very fangs of malice I swear, I am not that I play. Are you the lady of the house?

Oli. If I do not usurp myself, ³⁵ I am.

Vio. Most certain, if you are she, you do usurp yourself; for what is yours to bestow, is not yours to reserve. But this is from my commission. I will on with my speech in your praise, and then show you the heart of my message.

Oli. Come to what is important in 't: I forgive you ³⁶ the praise.

Vio. Alas! I took great pains to study it, and 't is poetical.

Oli. It is the more like to be feigned: ³⁷ I pray you, keep it in. I heard, you were saucy at my gates, and allowed your approach, rather to wonder at you than to hear you. If you be not mad, ³⁸ be gone; if you have

Häringe, denen er sein Aufstossen zuschreibt. 24) sot zugleich = Narr, und = Trunkenbold. 25) Ein Trunk mehr, wenn er warm geworden ist. 26) Auf das englische Gesetz, dass ein Todtenbeschauer gerichtlich über die Leiche eines Ertrunkenen sein Urtheil abgeben und die Todesart constatiren muss, spielt auch eine Stelle in Hamlet (A. 5, Sc. 1) an: the crowner hath sat on her, and finds it christian burial. 27) d. h. er ist erst in dem zweiten Stadium der Trunkenheit. 28) Er behauptet, dass er das bereits wisse. 29) An der Thüre eines Sheriff wurden als Abzeichen seiner Würde zwei buntbemalte oder sonstwie verzierte Pfosten errichtet. So in Rowley's A Woman never vexed: If e'er I live to see thee sheriff of London, || I'll gild thy painted posts cum privilegio. — An diesen Pfosten wurde, wie es scheint, auch bisweilen eine Bank befestigt. — Für to a bench setzen manche Hgg. stillschweigend of a bench. — Das contrahirte ha's für he has zu Anfang dieser Rede findet sich so schon in der Fol. 30) Wortspiel zwischen kind of man = Art von Mann, und mankind = männliches Geschlecht, wie gleich darauf zwischen manner = Art, und = Manier, Benehmen. 31) squash = junge, unreife Schote, verhält sich zu peascod = ausgewachsene Erbsenschote, wie codling = unreife Frucht, zu apple = reifer Apfel. — in standing water = in einem Wasserstande zwischen Ebbe und Fluth, in unentschiedener Mittelstufe. So in Tempest (A. 2, Sc. 1) Well: I am standing water. — Manche Hgg. ändern mit Steevens: 't is with him e'en standing water. 32) well-favoured = mit hübschem Gesicht. — Viola wird bei ihrem Auftreten in der Fol. Violenta genannt, was die zweite Folioausg. verbessert. 33) comptible, das so viel wie accountable ist, gebraucht Viola in geflissentlich affectirter Sprache = geneigt, Rechenschaft zu fordern, also = empfindlich gegen die geringste üble Behandlung. 34) to study = eine Rolle einstudiren. — out of my part = was nicht in der Rolle steht. 35) Wenn ich das nicht als fremdentlehnten Schein annehme oder mir beilege, was ich wirklich bin. So kommt in Othello (A. 1, Sc. 3) usurped beard vor. — Viola fasst dann to usurp = usurpiren, mit dem Begriff der Unrechtmässigkeit des Besitzes. 36) to forgive = Einem Etwas erlassen, ihn davon dispensiren. 37) Eben so doppelsinnig ist to feign in As you like it (A. 3, Sc. 3) the truest poetry is the most feigning. 38) M. Mason las if you be mad und fasste die Worte als Gegensatz zu dem folgenden if you have reason. 39) time of moon in Bezug auf die vom Monde abhängende, wechselnde Stimmung des Menschen. — skipping reason, be brief: 't is not that time of moon with me to make one in so skipping a dialogue.³⁹

Mar. Will you hoist sail, Sir? here lies your way.

Vio. No, good swabber; I am to hull⁴⁰ here a little longer. — Some mollification for your giant,⁴¹ sweet lady.

Oli. Tell me your mind.⁴²

Vio. I am a messenger.

Oli. Sure, you have some hideous matter to deliver, when the courtesy of it⁴³ is so fearful. Speak your office.

Vio. It alone concerns your ear. I bring no overture of war, no taxation of homage. I hold the olive in my hand: my words are as full of peace as matter.⁴⁴

Oli. Yet you began rudely. What are you? what would you?

Vio. The rudeness that hath appear'd in me, have I learn'd from my entertainment.⁴⁵ What I am, and what I would, are as secret as maidenhead: to your ears, divinity; to any other's, profanation.

Oli. Give us the place alone. We will hear this divinity. [Exit MARIA.] Now, Sir; what is your text?

Vio. Most sweet lady, —

Oli. A comfortable doctrine,⁴⁶ and much may be said of it. Where lies your text?

Vio. In Orsino's bosom.

Oli. In his bosom! In what chapter of his bosom?

Vio. To answer by the method, in the first of his heart.

Oli. O! I have read it: it is heresy. Have you no more to say?

Vio. Good Madam, let me see your face.

Oli. Have you any commission from your lord to negotiate with my face? you are now out of your text: but we will draw the curtain, and show you the picture. Look you, Sir; such a one I was this present: is 't not well done?⁴⁷ [Unveiling.]

Vio. Excellently done, if God did all.

Oli. 'T is in grain, Sir: 't will endure wind and weather.

Vio. 'T is beauty truly blent,⁴⁸ whose red and white Nature's own sweet and cunning hand laid on.

Lady, you are the cruell'st she alive,

If you will lead these graces to the grave,

And leave the world no copy.⁴⁹

Oli. O! Sir, I will not be so hard-hearted. I will give out divers schedules of my beauty: it shall be inventoried, and every particle, and utensil, labelled to my will; as, item, two lips indifferent red; item, two grey⁵⁰ eyes with lids to them; item, one neck, one chin, and so forth. Were you sent hither to praise me?⁵¹

Vio. I see you what you are: you are too proud;

But, if you were the devil, you are fair.

My lord and master loves you: O! such love

Could be but recompens'd,⁵² though you were crown'd

The nonpareil of beauty!

Oli. How does he love me?

Vio. With adorations, with fertile⁵³ tears,

With groans that thunder love, with sighs of fire.

Oli. Your lord does know my mind; I cannot love him:

Yet I suppose him virtuous, know him noble,

Of great estate, of fresh and stainless youth;

In voices well divulg'd,⁵⁴ free, learn'd, and valiant;

And in dimension, and the shape of nature,

A gracious person; but yet I cannot love him.

He might have took his answer long ago.

Vio. If I did love you in my master's flame,

With such a suffering,⁵⁵ such a deadly life,

In your denial I would find no sense:

I would not understand it.

Oli. Why, what would you?

Vio. Make me a willow cabin at your gate,

And call upon my soul within the house;

Write loyal cantons⁵⁶ of contemned love,

And sing them loud even in the dead of night;

Halloo your name to the reverberate⁵⁷ hills,

And make the babbling gossip of the air

Cry out, Olivia! O! you should not rest dialogue = ein leichtfüßiges, schlagfertiges Wechselgespräch. 40) to hull = sich von den Wellen schaukeln lassen, nicht segeln. 41) Als Riesen bezeichnet scherzhaft Viola die kleingewachsene Maria, weil dieselbe sich so grimmig anstellt. — Johnson findet zugleich eine Anspielung auf die Riesen darin, welche in Fabelbüchern als Ehrenwächter der Prinzessinnen fungiren. 42) Die Fol. legt auch diese Worte Tell me your mind wie die folgenden I am a messenger der Viola in den Mund. — Die richtige Eintheilung rührt von Warburton her. — Mit I am a messenger deutet Viola an, dass sie nicht ihre Meinung, sondern, als Bote, die des Herzogs zu verkünden hat. 43) the courtesy of it = die höfliche Einkleidung des auszurichtenden Auftrags. 44) Der ganze Inhalt meiner Worte besteht aus Frieden. 45) Sie meint den unmanierlichen Empfang, den sie an Olivia's Thüre durch Sir Toby und Malvolio gefunden. 46) Mit doctrine, wie nachher mit text und heresy, bezieht sich Olivia schalkhaft auf das vorhergehende divinity, als ob Viola's Botschaft in der That eine Predigt wäre. 47) Olivia schlägt den Schleier zurück, wie wenn sie einen Vorhang vor einem Portrait wegzöge, und sagt, als ob sie von einem Bilde spräche: So sah ich in diesem Augenblicke aus. Ist das Bild nicht gut gemalt? — Manche Hgg. ändern: such a one as I was this present. — Das Gleichniss von einem Portrait wird auch im Folgenden fortgesetzt, wo Viola zweifelnd fragt, ob die Kunst der Schminke das Gesicht nicht verschönert habe, und Olivia erwiedert, dass das Portrait durch und durch gefärbt sei, oder, ohne Metapher, dass ihre Gesichtsfarben ächt seien. 48) blent Particip von to blend = vermischen, zusammensetzen. 49) copy = Abbild, auf these graces bezüglich, d. h. ein eben so schönes Kind, missversteht Olivia geflissentlich = Verzeichniss der Reize, als Beilage zum Testament. 50) grey bezeichnet die hellblane Farbe der Augen, die bei Sh. auch sonst als schön erwähnt wird. 51) to praise kommt öfter in dem Sinne von to appraise vor. 52) Wäret Ihr auch als unvergleichliche Schönheit gekrönt, so könntet Ihr eine Liebe wie die des Herzogs nur belohnen, nicht aber übertreffen oder beschämen. 53) Das with vor fertile, das die Fol. auslässt, ergänzte zuerst Pope. — fertile tears = reichliche Thränen. — Die Cambridge Edd. suppliren kein with vor fertile, vermuthen dagegen, dass vor adorations ein Wort wie earthward oder earthly ausfiel, so dass alle vier Elemente in den Symptomen der Liebe Orsino's vertreten wären. 54) Wohl besprochen in den Stimmen des Gerüchtes, gut beleumundet im Munde des Volkes. 55) suffering = duldend, schmachkend, ist wie deadly = todähnlich, Epitheton zu life. 56) canton = Gesang, wird im ältern Englisch für das jetzige canto gebraucht. 57) reverberate = mit einem Wiederhall versehen, activ wie passiv gebraucht. — So hat Heywood's Troja Britannica: reverberate echoes und Drayton's Polyolbion: reverberate sound. — Auf den

Between the elements of air and earth,
But you should pity me.

Oli. You might do much. What is your parentage?

Vio. Above my fortunes, yet my state is well:
I am a gentleman.

Oli. Get you to your lord:
I cannot love him. Let him send no more,

Unless, perchance, you come to me again.

To tell me how he takes it. Fare you well:

I thank you for your pains. Spend this for me.

Vio. I am no fee'd post,⁵⁸ lady; keep your purse:

My master, not myself, lacks recompense.

Love make his heart of flint that you shall love,⁵⁹

And let your fervour, like my master's, be

Plac'd in contempt! Farewell, fair cruelty. [Exit.

Oli. »What is your parentage?«

»Above my fortunes, yet my state is well:

I am a gentleman.« — I'll be sworn thou art:

Thy tongue, thy face, thy limbs, actions, and spirit.

Do give thee five-fold blazon. — Not too fast: — soft!
soft!

Unless the master were the man.⁶⁰ — How now?

Even so quickly may one catch the plague?

Methinks, I feel this youth's perfections

With an invisible and subtle stealth

To creep in at mine eyes. Well, let it be. —

What, ho! Malvolio. —

Re-enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. Here, Madam, at your service.

Oli. Run after that same peevish⁶¹ messenger,

The county's man:⁶² he left this ring behind him,

Would I, or not: tell him, I'll none of it.

Desire him not to flatter with his lord,⁶³

Nor hold him up with hopes: I am not for him.

If that the youth will come this way to-morrow,

I'll give him reasons for 't. Hie thee, Malvolio.

Mal. Madam, I will. [Exit.

Oli. I do I know not what, and fear to find

Mine eye too great a flatterer for my mind.⁶⁴

Fate, show thy force: ourselves we do not owe;⁶⁵

What is decreed must be, and be this so! [Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I.

The Sea-coast.

Enter ANTONIO and SEBASTIAN.

Ant. Will you stay no longer? nor will you not that I go with you?

Seb. By your patience, no. My stars shine darkly over me: the malignancy of my fate might, perhaps, distemper yours; therefore, I shall crave of you your leave, that I may bear my evils alone. It were a bad recompense for your love, to lay any of them on you.

Ant. Let me yet know of you, whither you are bound.

Seb. No, 'sooth, Sir. My determinate voyage is mere extravagancy.¹ But I perceive in you so excellent a touch of modesty, that you will not extort from me what I am willing to keep in: therefore, it charges me in manners the rather to express myself.² You must know of me then,
Antonio, my name is Sebastian, which I called Rodorigo.
My father was that Sebastian of Messaline,³ whom, I know, you have heard of: he left behind him myself and a sister, both born in an hour. If the heavens had been pleased, 'would we had so ended!⁴ but you, Sir, altered that; for some hour before you took me from the breach of the sea⁵ was my sister drowned.

Ant. Alas the day!

Seb. A lady, Sir, though it was said she much resembled me, was yet of many accounted beautiful: but, though I could not with such estimable wonder⁶ overfar believe that, yet thus far I will boldly publish her, — she bore a mind that envy could not but call fair. She is drowned already, Sir, with salt water, though I seem to drown her remembrance again with more.⁷

Ant. Pardon me, Sir, your bad entertainment.

Seb. O good Antonio! forgive me your trouble.⁸

Ant. If you will not murder me for my love, let me be your servant.

Seb. If you will not undo what you have done, that is, kill him whom you have recovered, desire it not. Fare ye well at once: my bosom is full of kindness; and I am

Wiederhall oder die personificirt gedachte Echo geht auch das folgende babbling gossip of the air. 58) fee'd post = ein Eilbote, den man mit Geld ablohnt. 59) Möge der Liebesgott das Herz Dessen zu Stein verhärten, den Ihr einmal lieben werdet! Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 11. 60) Olivia ruft sich selbst ein warnendes Halt! zu und meint, solches rasche Verlieben würde unstatthaft sein, wofern nicht der Herzog der Diener, also umgekehrt der Diener der Herzog wäre. Genau genommen, sollte stehen unless the man were the master. 61) peevish = der sich nicht zu benehmen, sich nicht zu helfen weiss. 62) county für count. Die Fol. hat the Countes man, nicht Counts, wie sonst im Genitiv. 63) to flatter with als intransitives Verbum = den Schmeichler bei Jemandem spielen. So in Two Gentlemen of Verona (A. 4, Sc. 4) Unless I flatter with myself too much. 64) Olivia fürchtet, dass der Anblick Cesario's ihr Hoffnungen erzeuge, welche ihren Geist nur täuschen könnten. 65) Wir gehören nicht uns selber an, sondern das Schicksal verfügt über uns.

1) Die Reise, die ich beschlossen habe, ist ein blosses Umherschweifen ohne bestimmtes Ziel. — So hat Sh. in Hamlet (A. 1, Sc. 1) the extravagant and erring spirit. 2) Eure Zurückhaltung gebietet mir um so mehr höflicher Weise mich auszusprechen. 3) Für Messaline vermuthen manche Hgg. Mettaline oder Metelin, das alte Mitylene auf der Insel Lesbos. Vielleicht auch fingirte Sh. den Namen, ohne an eine bestimmte Localität zu denken. 4) d. h. ended in one hour. 5) breach of the sea = die Brandung, das Brechen der Wellen, die an das Ufer schlagen. 6) estimable = zu einer Schätzung fähig, wonder = Verwunderung, Bewunderung. Wenn Sebastian auch nicht mit solcher abschätzenden Bewunderung allzuweit in dem Glauben an die Schönheit seiner Schwester gehen konnte, wie viele Andre, so will er doch so weit kühn von ihr aussagen, dass u. s. w. — overfar ist dem thus far entgegengestellt, und far publish her wird gebraucht wie in Cymbeline (A. 1, Sc. 1) You speak him far. 7) scil. with more salt water. Sebastian meint die reichlich strömenden Thränen, die er bei der Erinnerung an seine Schwester vergiesst. 8) Wie your entertainment = die Aufnahme, die Ihr bei mir fandet, so ist your trouble = die Beschwerde, die ich Euch verursachte. 9) Ich bin so weibisch; euphemistisch ausgedrückt: ich arte noch so nach meiner Mutter, dass bei der geringsten weiteren Veranlassung meine Augen mich

yet so near the manners of my mother, that, upon the least occasion more, mine eyes will tell tales of me.⁹ I am bound to the count Orsino's court: farewell. [Exit.]

Ant. The gentleness of all the gods go with thee! I have many enemies in Orsino's court, Else would I very shortly see thee there; But, come what may, I do adore thee so. That danger shall seem sport, and I will go. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

A Street.

Enter VIOLA; MALVOLIO following.¹

Mal. Were not you even now with the countess Olivia?

Vio. Even now, Sir: on a moderate pace I have since arrived but hither.

Mal. She returns this ring to you, Sir: you might have saved me my pains, to have taken it away yourself. She adds, moreover, that you should put your lord into a desperate assurance² she will none of him. And one thing more: that you be never so hardy to come again in his affairs, unless it be to report your lord's taking of this. Receive it so.³

Vio. She took the ring of me; — I'll none of it.⁴

Mal. Come, Sir; you peevishly⁵ threw it to her, and her will is, it should be so returned: if it be worth stooping for, there it lies in your eye; if not, be it his that finds it. [Exit.]

Vio. I left no ring with her: what means this lady?

Fortune forbid my outside have not charm'd her!

She made good view of me; indeed, so much,

That,⁶ methought, her eyes had lost her tongue,⁷

For she did speak in starts distractedly.

She loves me, sure: the cunning of her passion

Invites me in this churlish messenger.

None of my lord's ring! why, he sent her none.

I am the man: — if it be so, as 't is,

Poor lady, she were better love a dream.

Disguise, I see, thou art a wickedness,

Wherein the pregnant enemy⁸ does much.

How easy is it for the proper-false⁹

In women's waxen hearts to set their forms!

Alas! our frailty is the cause, not we,

For such as we are made of, such we be.¹⁰

How will this fadge?¹¹ My master loves her dearly;

And I, poor monster,¹² fond as much on him;

And she, mistaken, seems to dote on me.

What will become of this? As I am man,

My state is desperate for my master's love;¹³

As I am woman, — now alas the day! —

What thriftless sighs shall poor Olivia breathe!

O time! thou must untangle this, not I;

It is too hard a knot for me t' untie.¹⁴ [Exit.]

SCENE III.

A Room in OLIVIA'S House.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH and Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Sir To. Approach, Sir Andrew: not to be a-bed after midnight is to be up betimes; and diluculo surgere, thou know'st,¹ —

Sir And. Nay, by my troth, I know not; but I know, to be up late, is to be up late.

Sir To. A false conclusion: I hate it as an unfilled can. To be up after midnight, and to go to bed then, is early; so that, to go to bed after midnight, is to go to bed betimes. Does not our life² consist of the four elements?

Sir And. 'Faith, so they say; but I think, it rather consists of eating and drinking.

Sir To. Thou art a scholar; let us therefore eat and drink. — Marian, I say! — a stoop³ of wine!

verrathen, meine Thränen meine weibische Beschaffenheit kundthun. So in K. Henry V. (A. 4, Sc. 6) And all my mother came into mine eyes.

1) Die alte Bühnenweisung sagt vielmehr, dass Viola und Malvolio von verschiedenen Seiten auftreten: Enter Viola, and Malvolio, at several doors. 2) desperate assurance = hoffnungslose Gewissheit, eine Versicherung, die ihm jede Hoffnung auf Olivia's Besitz raubt. 3) Receive it so = Fasst meine Botschaft so auf, wie sie gemeint ist. Einige Hgg. beziehen it auf den Ring, aber Steevens erklärt die Worte richtig mit understand it, wie in Macbeth (A. 1, Sc. 7) will it not be receiv'd. 4) Viola geht, um die Olivia nicht in Malvolio's Augen zu compromittiren, auf deren Fiction ein und setzt dieselbe fort, indem sie sagt: Da Olivia einmal den Ring von mir angenommen, muss sie ihn auch behalten. — Malone interpungirte She took the ring of me! als einen Ausruf der Verwunderung und schlug zugleich vor no ring für the ring zu lesen. 5) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 5, Anm. 61. 6) Manche Hgg. fügen mit der zweiten Folioausg. von 1632 hinter that ein sure ein, was in der zweitfolgenden Zeile vorkommt. 7) Indem Olivia mit unverwandten Blicken den Cesario ansah, verlor sie bei diesem Anschauen die Herrschaft über ihre Zunge und sprach ohne zu wissen was. 8) Der gewandte, listige Feind, der Teufel. 9) proper-false = Männer, die zugleich hübsch und falsch sind, die mit ihrer schönen Aussenseite die Weiber täuschen und in deren weiche Herzen, gleichsam wie in Wachs, einen Abdruck ihres Bildes prägen. 10) Die Fol. liest For such as we are made, if such we be. Die Emendation des Textes rührt von Tyrwhitt her. Capell las e'en such we be. — In der vorigen Zeile hat die Fol. O frailty, was die zweite Folioausg. in our frailty verbessert. 11) to fadge = sich fügen, sich schicken. 12) Mit monster deutet Viola ihre jetzige Zwitterhaftigkeit, weder Mann, noch Weib, an, wie sie in dem Folgenden sagt as I am man und as I am woman. — to fond on = in Jemanden verliebt sein. — Für das folgende and liest Dyce as, im Anschluss an as much. 13) Als Mann bin ich in einer verzweifeltsten Lage, da ich meinen Herrn liebe, und keine Hoffnung habe, dieser Liebe theilhaftig zu werden. 14) So contrahirt schon die Fol. to untie.

1) Sh. fand das lateinische Sprichwort Diluculo surgere saluberrimum est, wie Malone vermuthet, in Lilly's Grammatik. 2) Die Fol. hat does not our liues, wofür die gewöhnliche Lesart do not our lives ist. — Rowe's Emendation does not our life stimmt besser überein mit Sir Andrew's Antwort it rather consists. — Die vier Elemente werden aufgezählt in K. Henry V. (A. 3, Sc. 7) he is pure air and fire; and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him. 3) stoop = ein Mass von zwei Quart, und = ein Gefäss, das

Enter Clown.

Sir And. Here comes the fool, i' faith.

Clo. How now, my hearts? Did you never see the picture of we three? ⁴

Sir To. Welcome, ass. Now let's have a catch.

Sir And. By my troth, the fool has an excellent breast. ⁵ I had rather than forty shillings I had such a leg, and so sweet a breath to sing, as the fool has. In sooth, thou wast in very gracious fooling last night, when thou spok'st of Pigrogromitus, of the Vapians passing the equinoctial of Quenbus: ⁶ 't was very good, i' faith. I sent thee sixpence for thy leman: ⁷ hadst it?

Clo. I did impetico thy gratillity, ⁸ for Malvolio's nose is no whipstock: my lady has a white hand, and the Myrmidons are no bottle-ale houses.

Sir And. Excellent! Why, this is the best fooling, when all is done. ⁹ Now, a song.

Sir To. Come on: there is sixpence for you; let's have a song.

Sir And. There's a testril of me too: if one knight give a — ¹⁰

Clo. Would you have a love-song, or a song of good life? ¹¹

Sir To. A love-song, a love-song.

Sir And. Ay, ay; I care not for good life.

SONG.

Clo. O mistress mine! where are you roaming?

O! stay and hear; your true love's coming,

That can sing both high and low.

Trip no further, pretty sweeting;

Journeys end in lovers' meeting,

Every wise man's son doth know.

Sir And. Excellent good, i' faith.

Sir To. Good, good.

Clo. What is love? 't is not hereafter;

Present mirth hath present laughter;

What's to come is still unsure:

In delay there lies no plenty;

Then come kiss me, sweet-and-twenty, ¹²

Youth's a stuff will not endure.

Sir And. A mellifluous voice, as I am true knight.

Sir To. A contagious breath.

Sir And. Very sweet and contagious, i' faith.

Sir To. To hear by the nose, it is dulcet in contagion. ¹³ But shall we make the welkin dance indeed? ¹⁴ Shall we rouse the night-owl in a catch, that will draw three souls out of one weaver? ¹⁵ shall we do that?

Sir And. An you love me, let's do 't: I am dog at a catch. ¹⁶

Clo. By 'r lady, Sir, and some dogs will catch well.

Sir And. Most certain. Let our catch be, >Thou knave. ¹⁷

Clo. >Hold thy peace, thou knave, < knight? I shall be constrain'd in 't to call thee knave, knight.

Sir And. 'T is not the first time I have constrain'd one to call me knave. Begin, fool: it begins, >Hold thy peace. <

Clo. I shall never begin, if I hold my peace.

Sir And. Good, i' faith. Come, begin.

[They sing a catch.]

Enter MARIA.

Mar. What a caterwauling do you keep here! If my lady have not called up her steward Malvolio and bid him turn you out of doors, never trust me.

Sir To. My lady's a Cataian; ¹⁸ we are politicians; Malvolio's a Peg-a-Ramsey, and >Three merry men be we. ¹⁹ Am not I consanguineous? am I not of her blood? Tilly-valley, lady! ²⁰ [Sings.] >There dwelt a man in Babylon, lady, lady! <

Clo. Beshrew me, the knight's in admirable fooling.

Sir And. Ay, he does well enough, if he be disposed, and so do I too: he does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.

so viel enthält. 4) Eine Anspielung auf Wirthshaus schilder der Zeit, welche entweder zwei zechende Narren oder zwei Esel darstellten, mit der den jedesmaligen Beschauer mit einbegreifenden Unterschrift We three logger-heads be oder auch We are three asses. An letztere hatte Sh. gedacht. 5) breast wird von der musikalischen Stimme gebraucht. 6) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 5, Anm. 7. 7) leman = Liebchen, Schätzchen, emendirt Theobald das Lemon der Fol. 8) impetico scherzhaft entstellt aus to impetticoat = auf den Unterrock verwenden oder in ihn hineinstecken. Ebenso scheint gratillity aus gratuity gebildet. — Im Folgenden schwatzt der Narr wieder solchen Unsinn, wie ihn Sir Andrew schon früher an ihm bewundert hatte. 9) when all is done im Sinne von after all = am Ende, Alles erwogen. 10) Der Narr, ohne auf Sir Andrew zu hören, wendet sich mit seiner Frage an Sir Toby. 11) Ein Lied, mit dem ein guter Lebenswandel eingepreßt wird, ein moralisches Lied. 12) sweet-and-twenty, eigentlich = süß und zwanzigmal süß, ein Liebesausdruck, der auch bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen erscheint. 13) Sir Toby erklärt mit diesen Worten, wie er contagious, das Sir Andrew gebraucht, ohne es zu verstehen, auffasst. — breath ist doppelsinnig = Athem, und = Stimme, daher to hear by the nose. 14) Sie wollen in solchen Taumel sich versetzen, dass es ihnen scheinen solle, als tanzte das Firmament um sie her. 15) Die Weber werden auch sonst bei Sh. als besonders musikalisch erwähnt; so in K. Henry IV. First Part (A. 2, Sc. 4) I would I were a weaver; I could sing psalms or anything. — three souls bezeichnet in komischer Hyperbel die dreifache Verzücung, in welche ein Weber bei dem von Sir Toby vorgeschlagenen Canon gerathen würde. 16) to be a dog at = sich auf Etwas verstehen. — Der Clown fasst dog in eigentlichem Sinne, und catch = Canon, fasst er = Fang. 17) In diesem alten Canon, dessen Text lautet: Hold thy peace, and I prithee hold thy peace, thou knave. Hold thy peace etc., besteht der Spass darin, dass jeder der drei Sänger nach der Reihe den andern thou knave nennt. 18) Cataian, eigentlich = Chinese, aus Catai, d. h. China, wird sonst, wie auch in Merry Wives of Windsor (A. 2, Sc. 1), = Betrüger, Spitzbube, gebraucht. Hier wendet Sir Toby das Wort ohne nachweisliche Beziehung an. — Eben so sinnlos spricht er von Peg-a-Ramsey, einer populären Ballade, von der sich jedoch nur der Titel und die Melodie erhalten haben. 19) Ein Bruchstück aus einem alten Liede, oder der Refrain zu vielen alten Liedern, da es in verschiedener Verbindung bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen vorkommt. 20) tilly-valley, eine Interjection der Verachtung = Larifari. — Das lady, das Maria von ihrer Herrin gebraucht hatte, bringt nun Sir Toby auf die alte Ballade Of the godly constant wife Susanna, welche beginnt: There dwelt a man in Babylon || Of reputation great by fame; || He took to wife a fair woman, || Susanna she was call'd

Sir To. [Sings.] »O! the twelfth day of December,²¹ —

Mar. For the love o' God, peace!

Enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. My masters, are you mad? or what are you? Have you no wit, manners, nor honesty, but to gabble like tinkers at this time of night? Do ye make an ale-house of my lady's house, that ye squeak out your coziers'²² catches without any mitigation or remorse of voice? Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time, in you?

Sir To. We did keep time,²³ Sir, in our catches. Sneek up!²⁴

Mal. Sir Toby, I must be round with you.²⁵ My lady bade me tell you, that, though she harbours you as her kinsman, she's nothing allied to your disorders. If you can separate yourself and your misdemeanours, you are welcome to the house; if not, an it would please you to take leave of her, she is very willing to bid you farewell.

Sir To. »Farewell, dear heart, since I must needs be gone.²⁶

Mar. Nay, good Sir Toby.

Clo. »His eyes do show, his days are almost done.²⁷

Mal. Is 't even so?

Sir To. »But I will never die.²⁸

Clo. Sir Toby, there you lie.

Mal. This is much credit to you.

Sir To. »Shall I bid him go?²⁹

Clo. »What an if you do?³⁰

Sir To. »Shall I bid him go, and spare not?³¹

Clo. »O! no, no, no, no, you dare not.³²

Sir To. Out o' time?³³ Sir, ye lie. Art any more than a steward? Dost thou think, because thou art virtuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale?³⁴

Clo. Yes, by Saint Anne; and ginger shall be hot i' the mouth too.³⁵

Sir To. Thou 'rt i' the right. — Go, Sir, rub your chain³⁶ with crumbs. — A stoop of wine, Maria!

Mal. Mistress Mary, if you prized my lady's favour at anything more than contempt, you would not give means for this uncivil rule:³⁷ she shall know of it, by this hand.³⁸ [Exit.]

Mar. Go shake your ears.

Sir And. 'T were as good a deed as to drink when a man's a-hungry, to challenge him to the field, and then to break promise with him, and make a fool of him.

Sir To. Do 't, knight: I'll write thee a challenge, or I'll deliver thy indignation to him by word of mouth.

Mar. Sweet Sir Toby, be patient for to-night. Since the youth of the count's was to-day with my lady, she is much out of quiet. For Monsieur Malvolio, let me alone with him: if I do not gull him into a nayword,³³ and make him a common recreation, do not think I have wit enough to lie straight in my bed. I know, I can do it.

Sir To. Possess us,³⁴ possess us: tell us something of him.

Mar. Marry, Sir, sometimes he is a kind of puritan.

Sir And. O! if I thought that, I'd beat him like a dog.

Sir To. What, for being a puritan? thy exquisite reason, dear knight?

Sir And. I have no exquisite reason for 't, but I have reason good enough.

Mar. The devil a puritan that he is, or anything constantly but a time-pleaser; an affectioned³⁵ ass, that cons state without book, and utters it by great swarths: the best persuaded of himself; so crammed, as he thinks, with excellences, that it is his ground of faith, that all that look on him love him; and on that vice in him will my revenge find notable cause to work.

Sir To. What wilt thou do?

Mar. I will drop in his way some obscure epistles of love; wherein, by the colour of his beard, the shape of his leg, the manner of his gait, the expressure of his eye, forehead, and complexion, he shall find himself most feelingly personated. I can write very like my lady, your niece: on a forgotten matter we can hardly make distinction of our hands.

Sir To. Excellent! I smell a device.

Sir And. I have 't in my nose too.

Sir To. He shall think, by the letters that thou wilt drop, that they come from my niece, and that she is in love with him?³⁶

Mar. My purpose is, indeed, a horse of that colour.

Sir And. And your horse, now, would make him an ass.³⁷

by name: || A woman fair and virtuous; || Lady, lady: || Why should we not of her learn thus || To live godly? 21) Das Lied, zu welchem dieser Vers gehört, hat sich nicht weiter nachweisen lassen. — Ueber das vorhergehende doppelstimmige natural vgl. A. 1, Sc. 3, Anm. 4. 22) cozier = Flickschneider, und = Flickschuster. 23) time versteht Malvolio = Zeit, d. h. Nachtzeit, späte Stunde; Sir Toby fasst es = Zeitmass, Takt beim Gesange. 24) sneek up oder snick up, eine Verwünschung, die synonym ist mit go hang. 25) round with you = gerade heraus gegen Euch, rückhaltlos. 26) Sir Toby singt mit dem Clown, einigermaßen modificirt, die ersten Strophen eines Liedes, das Percy in seinen Reliques of Ancient Poetry aus einer alten Liedersammlung The Golden Garland of Princely Delights mittheilt. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 483 u. 484. 27) So verbessert Theobald das out o' tune der Fol. — Sir Toby wendet sich, nachdem er ausgesungen, wieder entrüstet an Malvolio und kommt auf das früher Gesagte zurück. Vgl. oben Anm. 23. 28) Eine Anspielung auf die Puritaner, welche gegen die aus papistischer Zeit stammenden Heiligtage, Kirchweihen und andere Volksfeste eiferten, bei denen es Kuchen und Bier gab. 29) Der Clown will sagen: Es soll nicht nur Kuchen und Bier geben, sondern man soll auch Ingwer, der im Munde brennt, bei solchen Festen verzehren dürfen. 30) Eine goldene Kette bezeichnete den Rang des Haushofmeisters der übrigen Dienerschaft gegenüber. So in Webster's Dutchess of Malfi: the chippings of the buttry fly after him, to scour his gold chain. 31) uncivil rule = ungebührliche Lebensart. — rule ist die Art und Weise, wie man sein Leben einrichtet. 32) by this hand, eine Betheuerung, bei der man die Hand aufhebt. 33) Wenn ich ihn nicht so zum Besten habe, dass er zu einem Stichwort oder Neckwort wird. So erklärt Forby in seinem Vocabulary of East-Anglia: Nay-word — a bye-word, a laughing-stock. — Die Fol. hat an ayword, was Rowe verbesserte. 34) to possess = Jemanden von Etwas unterrichten, ihn mit Etwas bekannt machen. 35) Wie affection = Affectation, so ist affectioned = affectirt: Malvolio ist ein affectirter Esel, der das vornehme gespreizte Wesen auswendig lernt und es in grossen Schwaden wieder von sich giebt. — swarths hat die Fol. für das gewöhnlichere swaths. 36) Staunton fasst mit Recht diesen Satz als eine an Maria

Mar. Ass, I doubt not.

Sir And. O! 't will be admirable.

Mar. Sport royal, I warrant you: I know, my physie will work with him. I will plant you two, and let the fool make a third, where he shall find the letter: observe his construction of it.³⁸ For this night, to bed, and dream on the event. Farewell.

Sir To. Good night, Penthesilea.³⁹ [Exit MARIA.]

Sir And. Before me, she 's a good wench.

Sir To. She 's a beagle,⁴⁰ true-bred, and one that adores me: what o' that?⁴¹

Sir And. I was adored once too.

Sir To. Let 's to bed, knight. — Thou hadst need send for more money.

Sir And. If I cannot recover your niece, I am a foul way out.

Sir To. Send for money, knight: if thou hast her not i' the end, call me cut.⁴²

Sir And. If I do not, never trust me; take it how you will.

Sir To. Come, come: I'll go burn some sack, 't is too late to go to bed now. Come, knight; come, knight.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.

A Room in the DUKE's Palace.

Enter DUKE, VIOLA, CURIO, and Others.

Duke. Give me some music. — Now, good morrow, friends. —

Now, good Cesario, but that piece of song, That old and antique¹ song, we heard last night; Methought, it did relieve my passion much, More than light airs, and recollected terms,² Of these most brisk and giddy-paced times: Come; but one verse.

Cur. He is not here, so please your lordship, that should sing it.

Duke. Who was it?

Cur. Feste, the jester, my lord; a fool, that the lady Olivia's father took much delight in. He is about the house.

Duke. Seek him out, and play the tune the while.

[Exit CURIO. — Music.]

Come hither, boy: if ever thou shalt love, In the sweet pangs of it remember me; For such as I am all true lovers are: Unstaid and skittish in all motions else, Save in the constant image of the creature³ That is belov'd. — How dost thou like this tune?

Vio. It gives a very echo to the seat Where love is thron'd.⁴

Duke. Thou dost speak masterly. My life upon 't, young though thou art, thine eye Hath stay'd upon some favour that it loves; Hath it not, boy?

Vio. A little, by your favour.⁵

Duke. What kind of woman is 't?

Vio. Of your complexion.

Duke. She is not worth thee then. What years, i' faith?

Vio. About your years, my lord.

Duke. Too old, by heaven. Let still the woman take An elder than herself; so wears she to him,⁶ So sways she level⁷ in her husband's heart: For, boy, however we do praise ourselves, Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm, More longing, wavering, sooner lost and worn,⁸ Than women's are.

Vio. I think it well, my lord.

Duke. Then, let thy love be younger than thyself, Or thy affection cannot hold the bent; For women are as roses, whose fair flower, Being once display'd, doth fall that very hour.

Vio. And so they are: alas, that they are so; To die, even when they to perfection grow!

Re-enter CURIO and Clown.

Duke. O fellow! come, the song we had last night. — Mark it, Cesario; it is old, and plain: The spinsters and the knitters in the sun,⁹ And the free¹⁰ maids, that weave their thread with bones, Do use to chant it: it is silly sooth,¹¹ And dallies with the innocence of love, Like the old age.¹²

Clo. Are you ready, Sir?

Duke. Ay; pr'ythee, sing.

[Music.]

gerichtete Frage. — Die andern Hgg. setzen kein Fragezeichen, wie auch die Fol. nicht. 37) Tyrwhitt wollte diese Rede und die folgende des Sir Andrew eher dem Sir Toby, als in dessen Charakter liegend, zuschreiben. — Das folgende Ass, I doubt not lässt sich im Wortspiel auch lesen As I doubt not. 38) Ihr Drei mögt dann beobachten, wie Malvolio den Brief deuten wird. 39) Penthesilea, die Königin der Amazonen, die vor Troja erschien. — Sir Toby will der Maria mit dieser Benennung ein Compliment machen. 40) Als beagle = Spürhund, werden, jedoch in weniger vortheilhaftem Sinne, in Timon of Athens (A. 4, Sc. 3) die Begleiterinnen des Alcibiades bezeichnet: Get thee away, and take thy beagles with thee. 41) Daran liegt nicht viel, dass sie mich anbetet; daraus kann man ihr keinen Vorwurf machen. 42) call me cut = beschimpfe mich, eigentlich = nenne mich einen Stutzwanz. So sagt Falstaff in K. Henry IV. First Part (A. 2, Sc. 4) call me horse.

1) antique = altväterisch, altmodig. 2) recollected terms = gesuchte, zusammengestoppelte Worte zu den leichtfertigen Melodien, welche jetzt an der Tagesordnung sind. — to recollect = sammeln. — Johnson erklärt recollected mit recalled, repeated, und Knight vermuthet tunes für terms (termes in der Fol.). 3) Nur darin nicht, dass sie sich beständig das Wesen, das sie lieben, ausmalen und vorstellen. 4) Diese Melodie findet einen rechten Wiederhall im Herzen. So in Othello (A. 3, Sc. 3) Yield up, o Love, thy crown and hearted throne. 5) favour doppelsinnig = Antlitz, Miene, und = Gunst. 6) to wear eigentlich von Kleidern, die sich dem Körper durch den Gebrauch anpassen, also hier = sich dem Gatten anschmiegen, ihm anhängen. 7) level bezeichnet nicht die Zeitdauer, sondern den Platz, den die Frau bei dem Mann einnehmen muss: im Niveau seines Herzens, nicht darüber hinaus. 8) lost and worn = verloren und abgenutzt. — Hammer las ohne Noth lost and won. 9) Die Weiber, welche im Sonnenschein spinnen und stricken. 10) free = unbefangen, zwanglos. 11) silly sooth = einfältige, schlichte Wahrheit, keine aufgeputzte Dichtung. 12) Das Lied tändelt mit einer Unschuld, wie sie der Liebe in der guten alten Zeit eigen war. 13) Unter cypress versteht Malone einen Sarg aus Cypressenholz, Steevens ein Leichentuch von Flor oder Krepp, der in diesem Fall, wie auch sonst häufig, weiss war. Die

SONG.

Clo. Come away, come away, death,
And in sad cypress¹³ let me be laid;
Fly away, fly away,¹⁴ breath;
I am slain by a fair cruel maid.
My shroud of white, stuck all with yew,
O! prepare it:
My part of death, no one so true
Did share it.¹⁵

Not a flower, not a flower sweet,
On my black coffin let there be strown.
Not a friend, not a friend greet
My poor corse, where my bones shall be thrown
A thousand thousand sighs to save,
Lay me, O! where
Sad true lover never find my grave,¹⁶
To weep there.¹⁷

Duke. There 's for thy pains.

Clo. No pains, Sir: I take pleasure in singing, Sir.

Duke. I'll pay thy pleasure then.

Clo. Truly, Sir, and pleasure will be paid, one time or another.¹⁸

Duke. Give me now leave to leave thee.

Clo. Now, the melancholy god¹⁹ protect thee, and the tailor make thy doublet of changeable taffeta, for thy mind is a very opal!²⁰ — I would have men of such constancy put to sea, that their business might be every thing, and their intent every where; for that 's it, that always makes a good voyage of nothing.²¹ — Farewell.

[Exit.

Duke. Let all the rest give place. —

[Exeunt CURIO and Attendants.

Once more, Cesario,

Get thee to yond same sovereign cruelty:

Tell her, my love, more noble than the world,

Prizes not quantity of dirty lands:

The parts that fortune hath bestow'd upon her,

Tell her, I hold as giddily as fortune;²²
But 't is that miracle and queen of gems,
That nature pranks her in, attracts my soul.

Vio. But, if she cannot love you, Sir?

Duke. I²³ cannot be so answer'd.

Vio.

'Sooth, but you must.

Say, that some lady, as perhaps there is,
Hath for your love as great a pang of heart
As you have for Olivia: you cannot love her;
You tell her so; must she not then be answer'd?

Duke. There is no woman's sides²⁴
Can bide the beating of so strong a passion
As love doth give my heart; no woman's heart
So big to hold so much: they lack retention.²⁵

Alas! their love may be call'd appetite, —
No motion of the liver, but the palate, —

That suffer²⁶ surfeit, cloyment, and revolt;

But mine is all as hungry as the sea,

And can digest as much. Make no compare

Between that love a woman can bear me,²⁷

And that I owe Olivia.

Vio.

Ay, but I know —

Duke. What dost thou know?

Vio. Too well what love women to men may owe:

In faith, they are as true of heart as we.

My father had a daughter lov'd a man,

As it might be, perhaps, were I a woman,

I should your lordship.

Duke.

And what 's her history?

Vio. A blank, my lord. She never told her love, —

But let concealment, like a worm i' the bud,

Feed on her damask cheek: she pin'd in thought:²⁸

And, with a green and yellow²⁹ melancholy,

She sat like Patience on a monument,

Smiling at grief.³⁰ Was not this love indeed?

We men may say more, swear more; but, indeed,

Our shows are more than will,³¹ for still we prove

Much in our vows, but little in our love.

letztere Erklärung scheint die natürlichere zu sein. 14) So verbesserte Rowe das Fly away, fly away der Fol. 15) Keiner nahm seinen Antheil an dem Tode so hingebend und treu hin, wie ich. 16) Um dem Versmass aufzuhelfen, ist entweder lover oder, was plausibler erscheint, never einsylbig zu lesen. Manche Hgg. setzen willkürlich love für lover. 17) Staunton macht darauf aufmerksam, wie wenig dieses Lied zu der Charakteristik passe, welche vorher der Herzog dem Cesario davon giebt, und vermuthet deshalb, dass die Wahl des Liedes hier vom Dichter dem Schauspieler überlassen sei. 18) Man hat kein Vergnügen umsonst, sondern muss über kurz oder lang dafür bezahlen. 19) d. h. der Gott der Melancholie. 20) Der Narr vergleicht die immer wechselnde Stimmung des Herzogs mit dem Opal, der, in verschiedenem Lichte betrachtet, verschiedene Farben annimmt, und räth dem Herzog, ein dem entsprechendes Wamms von schillerndem Taffet zu tragen. 21) Eine Seereise schlägt am besten aus, wenn man kein bestimmtes Geschäft, keinen bestimmten Plan verfolgt, sondern sich auf Alles gefasst macht. 22) Die Güter, welche das Glück ihr gegeben hat, betrachte ich in so unzuverlässiger Weise, wie ich das Glück selbst betrachte. — Diesen Glücksgaben setzt dann der Herzog die Gabe der Natur entgegen. jenes Wunder und jene Königin unter den Juwelen, die Schönheit, mit der die Natur sie aufgeputzt hat. — miracle gehört wie queen zu of gems, und queen erklärt sich durch die Attraction des Objects der Vergleichung. — to prank in = aufputzen, in einen Putz kleiden. 23) Hammer's Verbesserung I für It der Fol. wird gerechtfertigt durch Viola's Antwort but you must: Ihr müsst diese Antwort hinnehmen, und durch das spätere must she not then be answer'd? — Die Lesart der Fol. erklärt Malone mit My suit cannot be so answered. 24) So in Antony and Cleopatra (A. 1, Sc. 3) the sides of nature will not sustain it ebenfalls von der Liebesleidenschaft, die den Menschen aufreißt. 25) Den Weibern fehlt die Fähigkeit, so viel Liebe in ihrem Herzen festzuhalten und zu bergen, wie ich sie hege. 26) that suffer bezieht sich auf das their love nach einer Sh. geläufigen Vertauschung des Numerus. Manche Hgg. ändern that suffers und verbinden das mit palate, scil. a motion of the palate, im Widerspruch mit dem folgenden but mine, scil. but my love. 27) Auf me liegt der Nachdruck: Vergleiche nicht die Liebe, die ein Weib möglicherweise für mich empfindet, mit der Liebe, die ich für Olivia hege. — to owe = sein eigen nennen, besitzen. 28) thought = Grübeleien, schwermüthiges Sinnen. 29) green and yellow ist nach Sh.'s Gebrauch der Copula zu einem Begriffe zu verbinden = grün-gelblich. Er versteht darunter die livide Farbe, die sonst auch einfach bei ihm green heisst. 30) Viola denkt an ein, die Geduld vorstellendes, weibliches Marmorbild auf einem Grabmal, das den Gram, dem es gewidmet ist, mit lächelnder Miene in Ergebung hinnimmt. 31) Die

Duke. But died thy sister of her love, my boy?

Vio. I am all the daughters of my father's house,
And all the brothers too; and yet I know not. —
Sir, shall I to this lady?

Duke. Ay, that's the theme.
To her in haste: give her this jewel; say,
My love can give no place, bide no denay.³² [Exeunt.

SCENE V.

OLIVIA's Garden.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH, Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK, and FABIAN.

Sir To. Come thy ways, Signior Fabian.

Fab. Nay, I'll come: if I lose a scruple of this sport, let me be boiled to death with melancholy.

Sir To. Wouldst thou not be glad to have the niggardly, rascally sheep-biter¹ come by some notable shame?

Fab. I would exult, man: you know, he brought me out o' favour with my lady about a bear-baiting here.

Sir To. To anger him we'll have the bear again,² and we will fool him black and blue; — shall we not, Sir Andrew?

Sir And. An we do not, it is pity of our lives.

Enter MARIA.

Sir To. Here comes the little villain. — How now, my metal of India?³

Mar. Get ye all three into the box-tree. Malvolio's coming down this walk: he has been yonder i' the sun, practising behaviour to his own shadow,⁴ this half hour.
Observe him, for the love of mockery; for, I know, this letter will make a contemplative idiot of him. Close, in the name of jesting! [The men hide themselves.] Lie thou there [throws down a letter]; for here comes the trout that must be caught with tickling.⁵ [Exit.

Enter MALVOLIO.

Mal. 'T is but fortune; all is fortune. Maria once told me, she⁶ did affect me; and I have heard herself come thus near, that, should she fancy, it should be one of my complexion. Besides, she uses me with a more exalted respect than any one else that follows her. What should I think on 't?

Sir To. Here's an overweening rogue!

Fab. O, peace! Contemplation makes a rare turkey-cock of him: how he jets under his advanced plumes!⁷

Sir And. 'Slight, I could so beat the rogue. —

Sir To. Peace! I say.

Mal. To be count Malvolio; —

Sir To. Ah, rogue!

Sir And. Pistol him, pistol him.

Sir To. Peace! peace!

Mal. There is example for 't: the lady of the Strachy⁸ married the yeoman of the wardrobe.

Sir And. Fie on him, Jezebel!

Fab. O, peace! now he's deeply in; look how imagination blows him.

Mal. Having been three months married to her, sitting in my state,⁹ —

Sir To. O, for a stone-bow,¹⁰ to hit him in the eye!

Mal. Calling my officers about me, in my branched velvet gown; having come from a day-bed,¹¹ where I have left Olivia sleeping: —

Sir To. Fire and brimstone!

Fab. O, peace! peace!

Mal. And then to have the humour of state:¹² and after a demure travel of regard,¹³ — telling them, I know my place, as I would they should do theirs, — to ask for my kinsman Toby. —

Sir To. Bolts and shackles!

Fab. O, peace, peace, peace! now, now.

Mal. Seven of my people, with an obedient start, make out for him. I frown the while; and, perchance, wind up my watch, or play with some rich jewel.¹⁴ Toby approaches; court sies there to me.

Sir To. Shall this fellow live?

Fab. Though our silence be drawn from us with cars,¹⁵ yet peace!

Mal. I extend my hand to him thus, quenching my familiar smile with an austere regard of control, — äusseren Kundgebungen der Männer in der Liebe gehen weiter als der eigentliche innere Trieb. 32) denay = abschlägige Antwort, Verneinung. So in Fairfax' Godfrey of Boulogne: Of mild denays, of tender scorns, of sweet || Repulses, war, peace, hope, despair, joy, fear.

1) sheep-biter, eigentlich = Dieb, Mäuser, steht hier allgemein als Schimpfwort = Spitzbube. 2) Malvolio soll gehetzt werden wie ein Bär in der Bärenhetze. 3) metal of India, d. h. Goldschatz, ist eine der vielen seltsamen Anreden, mit denen Sir Toby die Maria begrüsst. — Für Mettle der Fol., das in deren Drucke nicht von metal unterschieden wird, setzen manche Hgg. mit der zweiten Folioausg. nettle of India, eine im indischen Meere häufige Nessel, Urtica Marina genannt. 4) Malvolio übt feine Haltung und Manieren ein, indem er dabei seinen Schatten in der Sonne beobachtet. 5) Steevens citirt zur Erklärung folgende Stelle aus Cogan's Haven of Health (1595) This fish of nature loveth flatterie: for being in the water it will suffer it selfe to be rubbed and clawed, and so to be taken. 6) she scil. Olivia. 7) to jet = umher stolziren: wie er unter seinem emporgesträubten Gefieder prunkt! 8) Strachy druckt die Fol. cursiv, wie sie Eigennamen zu drucken pflegt.
Sh. verstand vielleicht darunter eine vornehme italienische Familie, deren Angehörige eine Missheirath gemacht hatte, indem sie einen Garderobenaufseher zum Gatten wählte. Ob ihm eine bestimmte Zeitanekdote vorschwebte, lässt sich jetzt nicht mehr nachweisen. 9) state = Staatssessel, Lehnstuhl. 10) stone-bow = ein Bogen, von dem man mit steinernen Kugeln, statt mit Pfeilen, schoss. 11) day-bed = Ruhebett für den Tag, im Gegensatz zu dem Bett, in dem man Nachts schläft. 12) humour of state = die Laune oder Stimmung, wie sie zum vornehmen Stande passt. 13) Nachdem ich nachdenklich meinen Blick von Einem zum Andern habe gehen lassen.
14) So die späteren Folioausgg. — Die Fol. hat with my some rich jewel, was Malone erklärt some rich jewel of my own, und was Collier interpungirt with my — some rich jewel. Wahrscheinlich ist das my von dem vorhergehenden my watch wiederholt. — Taschenuhren, die zuerst um das Jahr 1580 aus Deutschland nach England eingeführt wurden, waren damals noch eine Seltenheit. 15) Für with cars lesen die spätern Folioausgg. with cares, Hanmer by th' ears, Tyrwhitt with cables, Singer with tears, Sidney Walker with racks. Johnson's Emendation with carts, zu deren Unterstützung er auf Two Gentlemen of Verona (A. 3, Sc. 1) verweist:

Sir To. And does not Toby take you a blow o' the lips then?

Mal. Saying, »Cousin Toby, my fortunes, having cast me on your niece, give me this prerogative of speech,« —

Sir To. What, what?

Mal. »You must amend your drunkenness.«

Sir To. Out, scab!

Fab. Nay, patience, or we break the sinews of our plot.

Mal. »Besides, you waste the treasure of your time with a foolish knight,« —

Sir And. That's me, I warrant you.

Mal. »One Sir Andrew,« —

Sir And. I knew 't was I; for many do call me fool

Mal. [Seeing the letter] What employment have we here?¹⁶

Fab. Now is the woodcock near the gin.

Sir To. O, peace! and the spirit of humours intimate reading aloud to him!

Mal. [Taking up the letter.] By my life, this is my lady's hand! these be her very C's, her U's, and her T's; and thus makes she her great P's.¹⁷ It is, in contempt of question, her hand

Sir And. Her C's, her U's, and her T's: why that?

Mal. [Reads.] »To the unknown beloved, this, and my good wishes:« her very phrases! — By your leave, wax.¹⁸ — Soft! — and the impressure her Lucrece,¹⁹ with which she uses to seal: 't is my lady. To whom should this be?

Fab. This wins him, liver²⁰ and all.

Mal. [Reads.] »Jove knows, I love;

But who?

Lips, do not move:

No man must know.«

»No man must know.« — What follows? the numbers altered!²¹ — »No man must know.« — if this should be thee, Malvolio?

Sir To. Marry, hang thee, brock!²²

Mal. [Reads.] »I may command, where I adore;

But silence, like a Lucrece' knife,²³

With bloodless stroke my heart doth gore:

M, O, A, I, doth sway my life.«

Fab. A fustian riddle.

Sir To. Excellent wench, say I.

Mal. »M, O, A, I, doth sway my life.« — Nay, but first, let me see, — let me see

Fab. What a dish of poison has she dressed him!

Sir To. And with what wing the stannyl²⁴ checks at it!

Mal. »I may command, where I adore.« Why, she may command me: I serve her; she is my lady. Why, this is evident to any formal capacity.²⁵ There is no obstruction in this. — And the end, — what should that alphabetical position portend? if I could make that resemble something in me, — Softly! — M, O, A, I, —

Sir To. O! ay,²⁶ make up that He is now at a cold scent

Fab. Sowter²⁷ will cry upon 't, for all this, though it be as rank as a fox.

Mal. M, — Malvolio: — M. — why, that begins my name

Fab. Did not I say, he would work it out? the cur is excellent at faults.

Mal. M, — but then there is no consonancy in the sequel; that suffers under probation:²⁸ A should follow, but O does.

Fab. And O²⁹ shall end, I hope.

Sir To. Ay, or I'll cudgel him, and make him cry, O!

Mal. And then I comes behind.

Fab. Ay, an you had any eye behind you, you might see more detraction at your heels, than fortunes before you.

Mal. M, O, A, I: — this simulation is not as the former; — and yet, to crush this a little, it would bow to me, for every one of these letters are in my name. Soft! here follows prose. — [Reads.] »If this fall into thy hand, revolve. In my stars I am above thee; but be not afraid of greatness: some are born³⁰ great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them. Thy Fates open their hands; let thy blood and spirit embrace them. And, to inure thyself to what thou art like to be, cast thy humble slough, and appear fresh. Be opposite with³¹ a kinsman, surly with servants; let

I am in love; but a team of horse shall not pluck that from me, nor who 't is I love, giebt denselben Sinn wie die alte Lesart der Fol. — Hunter vermuthet with cart-ropes. 16) Was ist es, das uns hier in Anspruch nimmt, uns beschäftigt? 17) Steevens meint, dass auf der Adresse des Briefes sich weder ein C noch ein P finde. — Dagegen vermuthet Ritson, dass die ganze Aufschrift des Briefes nach dem Styl der Sh.'schen Zeit gelautet habe: To the Unknown belov'd, this, and my good wishes, with Care Present. 18) Er bittet das Siegel gleichsam um Verzeihung, dass er es erbricht. Dieselbe Wendung kehrt wieder in Cymbeline (A. 3, Sc. 2) und in K. Lear (A. 4, Sc. 6). — Das folgende soft, das Malone auf die Weichheit des Wachses, mit dem man siegelte, bezieht, erklärt Steevens plausibler als Interjection = sacht! 19) Eine Gemme mit dem eingeschnittenen Bilde der Lucretia, die sich den Dolch in die Brust stösst, diente der Olivia als Siegel und passte diesmal vorzüglich zu dem Inhalt des Verses But silence, like a Lucrece' knife. 20) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 12. 21) Die folgenden Verse sind in einem andern Versmass als die vorhergehenden. — Rowe las the number's altered. 22) brock, eigentlich = Dachs, dann = Geck. So in Peele's Merry Conceited Jests: This self-conceited brock had George invited. 23) Lucrece' als Genitiv für Lucrece's steht auch in Titus Andronicus (A. 4, Sc. 1) That left the camp to sin in Lucrece' bed. — Die Fol. hat Lucesse, und kurz vorher Lucrece. 24) stannyl oder staniel = Steinfalke, ist Hanmer's Verbesserung für stallion der Fol. — to check ist technischer Ausdruck, den Latham in seinem Buche von der Falkenjagd so erklärt: crows, rooks, pies, or other birds coming in view of the hawk, she forsaketh her natural flight, to fly at them. 25) formal capacity = gehörige, ordentliche Fassungs-gabe. 26) O! ay klingt wie die von Malvolio gelesenen letzten Buchstaben. 27) Sowter eigentlich = Schuhflicker, Lump, hier der fingirte Name eines Jagdhundes, der auch auf einer kalten Fährte anschlägt und die ihm gestellte Falle nicht wittert, wenn sie auch noch so merklich ist. — Sh. wendet nach seiner Art das Gleichniss in doppelter widersprechender Manier an, da er mit cold scent auch as rank as a fox verbindet. — Hanmer verkannte diese Sh.'sche Lizenz, indem er not as rank las. 28) Das Folgende hält nicht Stand, wenn man die Probe anstellt. 29) d. h. der Wehlaut Oh. — So folgt das Wortspiel zwischen dem Buchstaben I und eye. 30) born änderte, in Uebereinstimmung mit einem spätern Citat dieser Worte, Rowe das become der Fol. 31) to be opposite with = thy tongue tang arguments of state; put thyself into the trick of singularity. She thus advises thee, that sighs for thee. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings, and wished to see thee ever cross-gartered:³² I say, remember. Go to, thou art made,³³ if thou desirest to be so; if not, let me see thee a steward still, the fellow of servants, and not worthy to touch Fortune's fingers. Farewell. She that would alter services with thee,

The fortunate-unhappy.³⁴

Day-light and champion discovers not more: this is open. I will be proud, I will read politic authors, I will baffle Sir Toby, I will wash off gross acquaintance, I will be point-device³⁵ the very man. I do not now fool myself, to let imagination jade me, for every reason excites to this, that my lady loves me. She did commend my yellow stockings of late; she did praise my leg being cross-gartered; and in this she manifests herself to my love, and with a kind of injunction drives me to these habits of her liking. I thank my stars, I am happy. I will be strange, stout,³⁶ in yellow stockings, and cross-gartered, even with the swiftness of putting on. Jove and my stars be praised! — Here is yet a postscript. [Reads.] »Thou canst not choose but know who I am. If thou entertainest my love, let it appear in thy smiling: thy smiles become thee well; therefore in my presence still smile, dear my sweet, I pr'ythee. — Jove, I thank thee. — I will smile: I will do every thing that thou wilt have me. [Exit.]

Fab. I will not give my part of this sport for a pension of thousands to be paid from the Sophy.³⁷

Sir To. I could marry this wench for this device.

Sir And. So could I too.

Sir To. And ask no other dowry with her, but such another jest.

Sir And. Nor I neither.

Fab. Here comes my noble gull-catcher.

Re-enter MARIA.

Sir To. Wilt thou set thy foot o' my neck?

Sir And. Or o' mine either?

Sir To. Shall I play my freedom at tray-trip,³⁸ and become thy bond-slave?

Sir And. I' faith, or I either?

Sir To. Why, thou hast put him in such a dream, that when the image of it leaves him, he must run mad.

Mar. Nay, but say true: does it work upon him?

Sir To. Like aqua-vitæ with a midwife.

Mar. If you will then see the fruits of the sport, mark his first approach before my lady: he will come to her in yellow stockings, and 't is a colour she abhors; and cross-gartered, a fashion she detests; and he will smile upon her, which will now be so unsuitable to her disposition, being addicted to a melancholy as she is, that it cannot but turn him into a notable contempt. If you will see it, follow me.

Sir To. To the gates of Tartar,³⁹ thou most excellent devil of wit!

Sir And. I'll make one too.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.

OLIVIA's Garden.

Enter VIOLA, and Clown with a tabor.

Vio. 'Save thee, friend, and thy music.¹ Dost thou live by thy tabor?

Clo. No, Sir, I live by the church.²

Vio. Art thou a churchman?

Clo. No such matter, Sir: I do live by the church; for I do live at my house, and my house doth stand by the church.

Vio. So thou may'st say, the king lies by a beggar,³ if a beggar dwell near him; or, the church stands by thy tabor, if thy tabor stand by the church.

Clo. You have said, Sir. — To see this age! A sentence is but a cheveril glove⁴ to a good wit: how quickly the wrong side may be turned outward!

Vio. Nay, that 's certain: they, that dally nicely with words, may quickly make them wanton.

Clo. I would therefore, my sister had had no name, Sir.

Vio. Why, man?

Clo. Why, Sir, her name 's a word; and to dally with that word, might make my sister wanton. But, indeed, words are very rascals, since bonds disgraced them.

Vio. Thy reason, man?

Clo. Troth, Sir, I can yield you none without words; and words are grown so false, I am loath to prove reason with them.

Jemandem entgegentreten, ihm opponiren. 32) Die kreuzweise gebundenen Kniegürtel waren wie die gelben Strumpfhosen eine Zeitlang eine neue, auffallende Mode. 33) Du bist ein gemachter Mann. 34) Die Fol. verbindet diese Worte mit dem Folgenden, und Rowe und Warburton lasen deshalb The fortunate and happy day-light, and champion discovers not more. — champion = offnes Feld, ändert Dyce in das gewöhnlichere champain um. Doch findet sich champion ground bei Skinner. — champion haben auch die dritte und vierte Folioausg. — Ein bekanntes Lehrgedicht von Tusser (1586) hat folgenden Titel: Five hundred points of good Husbandrie as well for the Champion or open countrie, as also for the Woodland or Sevecall etc. 35) point-device = pedantisch, affectirt genau in Costüm oder Haltung. 36) strange = zurückhaltend, stout = stolz, d. h. gegen die Dienerschaft und gegen Sir Toby. 37) Der Sophi von Persien, von dessen fabelhaften Reichthümern damals Berichte nach England gelangt waren. 38) tray-trip = eine Art von Bretspiel, in welchem Sir Toby seine Freiheit an Maria verspielen will. 39) Tartar = Tartarus, die Hölle, deshalb gleich nachher devil of wit.

1) Aus diesen Worten ergibt sich, dass der Narr die Trommel schlägt. Eine solche Trommel war das charakteristische Attribut des Haus- und Hofnarren zu Sh.'s Zeit. 2) to live by the tabor = von der Trommel leben, und = neben einem Hause wohnen, das das Schild einer Trommel hat. Nach Steevens wurde damit ein Musikladen bezeichnet. Das Wortspiel wird dann fortgeführt in to live by the church = von der Kirche leben, und = neben der Kirche wohnen. 3) to lie by = neben Jemandem logiren, und = bei ihm schlafen. Bei king und beggar dachte Sh. wahrscheinlich an die mehrfach von ihm erwähnte Ballade vom König Cophetua und der Bettlerin Zenelophon. 4) Eine Sentenz ist in diesem Zeitalter für einen guten und witzigen Kopf so dehnbar und so leicht umzudrehen, wie ein Handschuh von Ziegenleder. So in Romeo and Juliet (A. 2, Sc. 4) here 's a wit of cheveril, Vio. I warrant, thou art a merry fellow, and carest for nothing.

Clo. Not so, Sir, I do care for something; but in my conscience, Sir, I do not care for you: if that be to care for nothing, Sir, I would it would make you invisible.

Vio. Art not thou the lady Olivia's fool?

Clo. No, indeed, Sir; the lady Olivia has no folly: she will keep no fool, Sir, till she be married; and fools are as like husbands, as pilchards are to herrings, the husband's the bigger. I am, indeed, not her fool, but her corrupter of words.

Vio. I saw thee late at the count Orsino's.

Clo. Foolery, Sir, does walk about the orb, like the sun: it shines every where. I would be sorry, Sir, but the fool should be as oft with your master, as with my mistress.⁵ I think I saw your wisdom there.

Vio. Nay, an thou pass upon me, I'll no more with thee. Hold, there's expenses for thee.⁶

Clo. Now Jove, in his next commodity of hair,⁷ send thee a beard.

Vio. By my troth, I'll tell thee: I am almost sick for one, though I would not have it grow on my chin. Is thy lady within?

Clo. Would not a pair of these have bred, Sir?⁸

Vio. Yes, being kept together, and put to use.⁹

Clo. I would play Lord Pandarus of Phrygia, Sir, to bring a Cressida to this Troilus.

Vio. I understand you, Sir, 't is well begg'd.

Clo. The matter, I hope, is not great, Sir, begging but a beggar: Cressida was a beggar.¹⁰ My lady is within, Sir. I will construe¹¹ to them whence you come; who you are, and what you would, are out of my welkin:¹² I might say, element, but the word is overworn. [Exit.]

Vio. This fellow's wise enough to play the fool, And to do that well craves a kind of wit:

He must observe their mood on whom he jests,

The quality of persons, and the time,

And, like the haggard, check at every feather

That comes before his eye.¹³ This is a practice

As full of labour as a wise man's art;

For folly, that he wisely shows, is fit,
But wise men, folly-fallen, quite taint their wit.¹⁴

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH and Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Sir To. 'Save you, gentleman.

Vio. And you, Sir.

Sir And. Dieu vous garde, monsieur.

Vio. Et vous aussi: votre serviteur.

Sir And. I hope, Sir, you are; and I am yours.

Sir To. Will you encounter the house? my niece is desirous you should enter, if your trade¹⁵ be to her.

Vio. I am bound to your niece, Sir: I mean, she is the list of my voyage.

Sir To. Taste¹⁶ your legs, Sir: put them to motion.

Vio. My legs do better understand me, Sir, than I understand¹⁷ what you mean by bidding me taste my legs.

Sir To. I mean, to go, Sir, to enter.

Vio. I will answer you with gait and entrance. But we are prevented.¹⁸

Enter OLIVIA and MARIA.

Most excellent accomplished lady, the heavens rain odours on you!

Sir And. That youth's a rare courtier. »Rain odours!« well.

Vio. My matter hath no voice, lady, but to your own most pregnant and vouchsafed ear.¹⁹

Sir And. »Odours,« »pregnant,« and »vouchsafed«: — I'll get 'em all three all ready.²⁰

Oli. Let the garden door be shut, and leave me to my hearing. [Exeunt Sir TOBY, Sir ANDREW, and MARIA.]
Give me your hand, Sir.

Vio. My duty, Madam, and most humble service.

Oli. What is your name?

Vio. Cesario is your servant's name, fair princess.

Oli. My servant, Sir? 'T was never merry world, Since lowly feigning was call'd compliment.

You're servant to the count Orsino, youth.

that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad. 5) Mit dem Nebensinn: wenn nicht Dein Herr eben so oft thöricht wäre, wie meine Herrin. 6) Hier ist Geld für Dich, das Du ausgeben kannst. 7) Wenn er das nächste Mal einen Vorrath von Haaren hat. 8) Der Narr möchte zu dem einen Geldstück ein zweites haben, und meint, dass ein solches Paar dann zusammen ihrer mehrere erzeugt haben würde. Das Bild von einem durch Kuppelei zusammenzubringenden Paar setzt er auch in der folgenden, Sh. sehr geläufigen, Anspielung auf Pandarus fort, der den Troilus mit der Cressida zusammenbrachte. 9) Wenn man sie beisammen behielte und auf Zinsen ausliehe. So in Venus and Adonis: But gold that's put to use more gold begets. 10) Es war der Fluch, der die Cressida wegen ihrer Treulosigkeit traf, dass sie als Bettlerin sterben sollte. So in Chaucer's Testament of Cressida: great penurye || Thou suffer shalt, and as a beggar dye. 11) Die Fol. hat conster hier und anderswo. — Zu to them vgl. A. 1, Sc. 4, Anm. 3. 12) welkin, mit einem Schein von Affectation wie hier, hat Sh. auch in Merry Wives of Windsor (A. 1, Sc. 3) By welkin, and her star, und wiederholt in Armado's Munde in Love's Labour's Lost (A. 1, Sc. 1 u. A. 3, Sc. 1). — Der Narr will sagen: ausser meiner Sphäre. 13) Der geschickte und berufene Narr muss, zugleich mit der gehörigen Beobachtung der Personen und der Zeit, wie ein wilder Falke auf Alles, was ihm im Fluge vorkommt, losschiessen, jede Gelegenheit benutzen, um seinen Witz zu zeigen. — Johnson schlug vor Not like the haggard zu lesen, also das Gegentheil der obigen Erklärung: der Narr darf nicht jede Gelegenheit benutzen. 14) Der Vers lautet in der Fol. But wisemens folly falne, quite taint their wit, was Heath erklärt: But wise men's folly, when it is once fallen into extravagance, overpowers their discretion. — Die Emendation rührt von Tyrwhitt her. 15) trade = Verkehr, Geschäft. — Viola fasst den gesuchten Ausdruck wörtlich und spricht von ihrem Besuche bei Olivia wie von einer Seereise in Handelsgeschäften, daher bound und voyage. — list of my voyage = Bezirk, Schranke der Reise, d. h. Inbegriff derselben. 16) to taste = erproben, in geflissentlich affectirter Sprache, die Sir Toby überhaupt hier gebraucht, um dem Cesario zu imponiren. 17) to understand doppelsinnig = unter Jemandem stehen, ihn stützen, und = verstehen. Dasselbe Wortspiel in Two Gentlemen of Verona (A. 2, Sc. 5) my staff understands me. 18) to prevent = Jemandem zuvorkommen. 19) pregnant = bereit aufzunehmen, auffassend; vouchsafed ear = ein gnädig bewilligtes Ohr oder Gehör. 20) Die Fol. hat already für all ready. Manche Hgg. lesen mit den spätern Folioausgg. ready

Vio. And he is yours, and his must needs be yours:
Your servant's servant is your servant, Madam.

Oli. For him, I think not on him: for his thoughts,
'Would they were blanks, rather than fill'd with me!

Vio. Madam, I come to whet your gentle thoughts
On his behalf: —

Oli. O! by your leave, I pray you:
I bade you never speak again of him;
But, would you undertake another suit,
I had rather hear you to solicit that,
Than music from the spheres.

Vio. Dear lady, —

Oli. Give me leave, 'beseech you. I did send
After the last enchantment you did here.²¹
A ring in chase of you: so did I abuse
Myself, my servant, and, I fear me, you.
Under your hard construction must I sit,
To force that on you, in a shameful cunning.²²
Which you knew none of yours: what might you think?
Have you not set mine honour at the stake,
And baited it with all the unmuzzled thoughts
That tyrannous heart can think?²³ To one of your receiving²⁴

Enough is shown; a cyprus, not a bosom,
Hides my heart.²⁵ So, let me hear you speak.

Vio. I pity you.

Oli. That 's a degree to love.

Vio. No, not a grise;²⁶ for 't is a vulgar proof,
That very oft we pity enemies.

Oli. Why then, methinks, 't is time to smile again.
O world, how apt the poor are to be proud!
If one should be a prey, how much the better
To fall before the lion than the wolf! [Clock strikes.
The clock upbraids me with the waste of time. —
Be not afraid, good youth, I will not have you;
And yet, when wit and youth is come to harvest,
Your wife is like to reap a proper man.
There lies your way due west.

Vio. Then westward-ho!²⁷
Grace, and good disposition attend²⁸ your ladyship
You 'll nothing, Madam, to my lord by me?

Oli. Stay:

I pr'ythee, tell me what thou think'st of me

Vio. That you do think, you are not what you are

Oli. If I think so, I think the same of you

Vio. Then think you right: I am not what I am.

Oli. I would, you were as I would have you be!

Vio. Would it be better, Madam, than I am?
I wish it might; for now I am your fool.

Oli. O! what a deal of scorn looks beautiful
In the contempt and anger of his lip!
A murderous guilt shows not itself more soon,
Than love that would seem hid: love's night is noon.
Cesario, by the roses of the spring,

By maidhood, honour, truth, and every thing,
I love thee so, that, maugre all thy pride,
Nor wit, nor reason, can my passion hide.²⁹
Do not extort thy reasons from this clause,
For that I woo, thou therefore hast no cause;³⁰
But rather, reason thus with reason fetter:
Love sought is good, but given unsought is better.

Vio. By innocence I swear, and by my youth,
I have one heart, one bosom, and one truth,
And that no woman has;³¹ nor never none
Shall mistress be of it, save I alone.³²
And so adieu, good Madam: never more
Will I my master's tears to you deplore.³³

Oli. Yet come again, for thou perhaps may'st move
That heart, which now abhors, to like his love.³⁴

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.

A Room in OLIVIA'S House.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH, Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK, and FABIAN.

Sir And. No, faith, I 'll not stay a jot longer.

Sir To. Thy reason, dear venom:¹ give thy reason.

Fab. You must needs yield your reason, Sir Andrew.

Sir And. Marry, I saw your niece do more favours to the count's serving-man, than ever she bestowed upon me: I saw 't i' the orchard.

Sir To. Did she see thee² the while, old boy? tell me that.

Sir And. As plain as I see you now.

Fab. This was a great argument of love in her toward you.

Sir And. 'Slight! will you make an ass o' me?

Fab. I will prove it legitimate, Sir, upon the oaths of judgment and reason.

dafür. 21) Nachdem Ihr bei Eurem letzten Besuche einen solchen Zauber auf mich ausübtet. — Warburton setzte zuerst here für hear (heare) der Fol. 22) shameful cunning ist vielleicht in Sh.'s Sinne hier nicht = eine schmachvolle List, sondern eine verschämte List, eine Verstellung, der Scham zum Grunde liegt. So steht in All's well that ends well (A. 5, Sc. 3) shameful hate. 23) Das Bild ist von einer Bärenhetze entlehnt, wo Olivia's Ehre, an den Pfahl gebunden, von den losgelassenen Hunden gehetzt wird. — tyrannous = grausam, von der Natur des Wütherichs. 24) receiving = Auffassungsgabe, Verstand. — Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 2, Anm. 3. 25) Mein Herz liegt offen dar, da nur ein durchsichtiger Flor, kein undurchsichtiger Busen es vor Euch verdeckt. — Manche Hgg. fügen mit der Folioausg. von 1632 vor heart ein poor ein. Vielleicht wäre hideth zu lesen. 26) grise = die einzelne Stufe, der Theil von degree = eine ganze Stufenfolge. 27) eastward-ho! und westward-ho! waren die herkömmlichen Rufe der Fährschiffer auf der Themse, je nachdem nach der City oder nach Westminster, ostwärts oder westwärts, gefahren werden sollte. 28) So die Fol. Manche Hgg. verkürzen des Verses wegen attend zu tend. 29) Ich liebe Dich so, dass selbst Deine stolze Sprödigkeit meinem Verstande und Geiste vergebens räth. meine Leidenschaft zu bergen. 30) Der Nachdruck liegt auf I und auf thou: entnimm nicht Deine Rechtfertigungsgründe aus der Schlussfolgerung, dass Du keine Ursache hast zu werben, weil ich es schon thue. 31) Dieses mein Herz u. s. w. hat kein Weib im Besitz, es ist an kein Weib verschenkt. 32) Hanmer verkannte diese versteckte Hindeutung der Viola auf ihr wirkliches Geschlecht, wenn er save I alone der Olivia beilegen wollte. 33) to deplore in Verbindung mit my master's tears steht hier in ungewöhnlichem Sinne: meines Herrn Thränen Euch vorklagen, klagend vorstellen. 34) his love ist Object zu abhors wie zu to like.

1) venom redet Sir Toby den Sir Andrew scherzhaft an, weil er ihn in so giftiger Erbitterung sieht.
2) thee, das in der Fol. zufällig ausgefallen war, schieben die spätern Folioausgg. ein, nicht erst Rowe, wie Ma-

Sir To. And they have been grand-jurymen, since before Noah was a sailor.

Fab. She did show favour to the youth in your sight only to exasperate you, to awake your dormouse valour, to put fire in your heart, and brimstone in your liver. You should then have accosted her, and with some excellent jests, fire-new from the mint, you should have banged the youth into dumbness. This was looked for at your hand, and this was balked: the double guilt of this opportunity you let time wash off, and you are now sailed into the north of my lady's opinion;³ where you will hang like an icicle on a Dutchman's beard, unless you do redeem it by some laudable attempt, either of valour, or policy.

Sir And. An't be any way, it must be with valour, for policy I hate: I had as lief be a Brownist⁴ as a politician.

Sir To. Why then, build me thy fortunes upon the basis of valour: challenge me the count's youth to fight with him; hurt him in eleven places: my niece shall take note of it; and assure thyself, there is no love-broker⁵ in the world can more prevail in man's commendation with woman, than report of valour.

Fab. There is no way but this, Sir Andrew.

Sir And. Will either of you bear me a challenge to him?

Sir To. Go, write it in a martial hand;⁶ be curst and brief; it is no matter how witty, so it be eloquent, and full of invention: taunt him with the license of ink;⁷ if thou thou'st⁸ him some thrice, it shall not be amiss; and as many lies as will lie in thy sheet of paper, although the sheet were big enough for the bed of Ware⁹ in England, set 'em down. Go, about it. Let there be gall¹⁰ enough in thy ink, though thou write with a goose-pen, no matter. About it.

Sir And. Where shall I find you?

Sir To. We'll call thee at the cubiculo.¹¹ Go.

[Exit Sir ANDREW.]

Fab. This is a dear manakin to you, Sir Toby.

Sir To. I have been dear to him,¹² lad; some two thousand strong, or so.

Fab. We shall have a rare letter from him; but you'll not deliver it?

Sir To. Never trust me then; and by all means stir on the youth to an answer. I think, oxen and wainropes cannot hale them together. For Andrew, if he were opened, and¹³ you find so much blood in his liver as will clog the foot of a flea, I'll eat the rest of the anatomy.

Fab. And his opposite,¹⁴ the youth, bears in his visage no great presage of cruelty.

Enter MARIA.

Sir To. Look, where the youngest wren of nine¹⁵ comes.

Mar. If you desire the spleen, and will laugh yourselves into stitches, follow me. Yond gull Malvolio is turned heathen, a very renegado; for there is no Christian, that means to be saved by believing rightly, can ever believe such impossible passages of grossness.¹⁶ He's in yellow stockings.

Sir To. And cross-gartered?

Mar. Most villanously; like a pedant that keeps a school i' the church. — I have dogged him like his murderer.¹⁷ He does obey every point of the letter that I dropped to betray him: he does smile his face into more lines, than are in the new map, with the augmentation of the Indies.¹⁸ You have not seen such a thing as 't is; I can hardly forbear hurling things at him. I know, my lady will strike him: if she do, he'll smile, and take 't for a great favour.

Sir To. Come, bring us, bring us where he is.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

A Street.

Enter SEBASTIAN and ANTONIO.

Seb. I would not, by my will, have troubled you; But, since you make your pleasure of your pains, I will no further chide you.

Ant. I could not stay behind you: my desire, More sharp than filed steel, did spur me forth; And not all love to see you (though so much, As might have drawn one to a longer voyage), lone meint. 3) d. h. Olivia ist in ihren Empfindungen für Euch erkaltet, frostig geworden. 4) So hiessen die Anhänger von Robert Browne, der um das Jahr 1580 sich von der englischen Kirche lossagte und eine puritanische Secte bildete. — Anspielungen darauf kommen bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen öfter vor; so in dem alten Drama Sir Thomas More: Tom Barber that makes me thus look like a Brownist. — Die Secte nannte sich später Independents. 5) love-broker = Liebesmäkler, Kuppler. Dieselbe Bedeutung hat bei Sh. schon das einfache broker. 6) Wie ein Soldat zu schreiben pflegt. — Das Folgende geht dann auf die Abfassung des Briefes: grimmig und kurz angebunden. 7) Lass Dich so in Kränkung seiner Ehre gehen, wie es die Tinte Dir nur verstattet. 8) to thou = Jemanden dutzen, galt als eine geflissentliche Demüthigung und Herabwürdigung. 9) Auf dieses grosse Bett, das in Ware in der Grafschaft Hartfordshire zu sehen war, weist auch Ben Jonson's Epicoene als auf eine bekannte und sprichwörtlich gewordene Merkwürdigkeit hin: Why, we have been — || In the great bed of Ware together in our time. Es sollten zugleich zwölf Männer und zwölf Weiber darin liegen können. 10) gall = Galle, ist doppelsinnig, da die Tinte aus Ochsgalle bereitet wurde. So in Cymbeline (A. 1, Sc. 2) though ink be made of gall. — Daher der Gegensatz zu goose-pen. 11) Malone vermuthete at thy cubiculo. 12) Auf I liegt der Nachdruck: vielmehr komme ich ihm theuer zu stehen, ich habe ihm schon einige Tausende gekostet. Vgl. A. 2. Sc. 3 am Schluss, wo Sir Toby dem Sir Andrew sagt Thou hadst need send for more money und dieser erwiedert If I cannot recover your niece, I am a foul way out. 13) Das and der Fol. ist vielleicht hier, wie an vielen andern Stellen, in an = wenn, zu ändern. — Die blutlose Leber ist ein Symptom der Feigherzigkeit. 14) opposite = Gegner. 15) nine emendirte Theobald das mine der Fol. — Steevens citirt dazu aus R. Chester's A dialogue of the Phoenix: The little wren that many young ones brings. — Es ist eine Anspielung auf die kleine Figur der Maria. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 5, Anm. 41. 16) such impossible passages of grossness = solches handgreiflich unsinnige oder undenkbare Zeug, wie es Malvolio glaubt. — Vielleicht ist aber die Construction verwirrt, und Sh. wollte eigentlich sagen: Von keinem Christen kann man solchen Unsinn glauben, wie ihn Malvolio in sich darstellt. 17) Ich bin ihm nachgeschlichen, als ob ich ihn morden wollte. 18) Eine Anspielung, wie

But jealousy¹ what might befall your travel,
Being skillless in these parts; which to a stranger,
Unguided, and unfriended, often prove
Rough and unhospitable: my willing love,
The rather by these arguments of fear,²
Set forth in your pursuit.

Seb. My kind Antonio,
I can no other answer make, but, thanks,
And thanks, and ever thanks; and oft good turns³
Are shuffled off with such uncurrent pay;
But, were my worth,⁴ as is my conscience, firm,
You should find better dealing. What's to do?
Shall we go see the reliques⁵ of this town?

Ant. To-morrow, Sir: best first go see your lodging.

Seb. I am not weary, and 't is long to night.
I pray you, let us satisfy our eyes
With the memorials, and the things of fame,
That do renown this city.

Ant. 'Would, you 'd pardon me:
I do not without danger walk these streets.
Once, in a sea-fight 'gainst the count his galleys,⁶
I did some service; of such note, indeed,
That, were I ta'en here, it would scarce be answer'd.

Seb. Belike, you slew great number of his people.

Ant. The offence is not of such a bloody nature,
Albeit the quality of the time, and quarrel,
Might well have given us bloody argument.
It might have since been answer'd in repaying
What we took from them; which, for traffic's sake,
Most of your city did: only myself stood out;
For which, if I be lapsed in this place,⁷
I shall pay dear.

Seb. Do not then walk too open.

Ant. It doth not fit me. Hold, Sir; here's my purse.
In the south suburbs, at the Elephant,
Is best to lodge: I will bespeak our diet,
Whiles you beguile the time, and feed your knowledge,
With viewing of the town: there shall you have me.

Seb. Why I your purse?

Ant. Haply your eye shall light upon some toy
You have desire to purchase; and your store,
I think, is not for idle markets, Sir.

Seb. I'll be your purse-bearer,⁸ and leave you for an hour.

Ant. To the Elephant. —

Seb. I do remember. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

OLIVIA'S Garden.

Enter OLIVIA and MARIA.

Oli. I have sent after him: he says, he'll come;¹
How shall I feast him? what bestow of him?
For youth is bought more oft, than begg'd, or borrow'd.
I speak too loud. —

Where is Malvolio? — he is sad, and civil,²
And suits well for a servant with my fortunes. —
Where is Malvolio?³

Mar. He's coming, Madam; but in very strange manner. He is sure possess'd, Madam.

Oli. Why, what's the matter? does he rave?

Mar. No, Madam; he does nothing but smile: your ladyship were best to have some guard about you, if he come, for sure the man is tainted in his wits.

Oli. Go call him hither. — I am as mad as he,
If sad and merry madness equal be. —

Enter MALVOLIO.

How now, Malvolio?

Mal. Sweet lady, ho, ho.

Oli. Smil'st thou?

I sent for thee upon a sad occasion.

Mal. Sad, lady? I could be sad.⁴ This does make some obstruction in the blood, this cross-gartering; but what of that? if it please the eye of one, it is with me as the very true sonnet is, 'Please one, and please all.'⁵

Oli. Why, how dost thou, man? what is the matter with thee?

Mal. Not black in my mind, though yellow in my legs. It did come to his hands, and commands shall be executed: I think we do know the sweet Roman hand.⁶

Oli. Wilt thou go to bed, Malvolio?

Mal. To bed? ay, sweet-heart, and I'll come to thee.

Steevens vermuthet, auf eine Erdkarte, die 1598 mit der englischen Uebersetzung von Linschoten's Reisen erschien, auf welcher zuerst die Inseln des ostindischen Archipelagus gezeichnet waren. Die Karte ist von Strichen zur Orientirung nach allen Seiten hin durchzogen.

1) jealousy = argwöhnische Sorge um das, was Euch auf Eurer Reise zustossen könnte, da Ihr unerfahren, unkundig in diesen Gegenden seid. 2) Um so eher wegen dieser Gründe der Besorgniss. 3) So vervollständigt Theobald den Vers, der in der Fol. so steht: And thanks: and ever oft good turnes. — Steevens setzte often für and oft. Die spätern Folioausgg. lassen diese Zeile und die folgende aus. 4) my worth = was ich in pecuniärer Hinsicht werth bin, meine finanzielle Geltung. So in Ben Jonson's Cynthia's Revels: Such as the satyrists paints truly forth || That only to his crimes owes all his worth. 5) Steevens erklärt reliques mit Heiligenreliquien oder mit Ueberbleibseln alter Gebäude. Wahrscheinlich meinte Sh. die Sehenswürdigkeiten aus alter Zeit überhaupt, dasselbe, was gleich nachher the memorials, and the things of fame etc. heisst. 6) the count his galleys für the count's galleys oder the county's galleys, wie nach Malone's Vermuthung Sh. geschrieben. Diese Paraphrase des Genitivs ist bei Sh. nicht selten, meistens jedoch da, wo ein Zusammenstossen des s mit einem andern s vermieden werden soll, wie Mars his heart in Troilus and Cressida (A. 5, Sc. 2). 7) Wenn ich mich betreffen lasse, wenn ich nicht auf meiner Hut bin an diesem Platze. So in Hamlet (A. 3, Sc. 4) laps'd in time and passion. 8) purse-bearer doppelsinnig = Seckelmeister, und: ich will Eure Börse mit mir herumtragen.

1) Olivia setzt voraus, dass er sagen werde, er wolle kommen, und überlegt, wie sie ihn bewirthen und was sie ihm schenken will. — bestow of him, wie Sh. oft of für on gebraucht. — Pope änderte bestow on him. 2) sad = ernst; civil = ehrbar im Benehmen, manierlich, wie es ehrbaren Bürgern geziemt. 3) Die drei folgenden Reden, die in der Fol. als Prosa gedruckt sind, hat Steevens, indem er willkürlich mehrere Worte, wie very, Madam, to und some, auslässt, zu Versen umgearbeitet. 4) Olivia fasst sad = ernst, Malvolio fasst es = niedergeschlagen, verstimmt. 5) Das Gedicht mit dem Refrain Please one, and please all war verloren gegangen

Oli. God comfort thee! Why dost thou smile so, and kiss thy hand so oft? ⁷

Mar. How do you, Malvolio?

Mal. At your request? Yes; nightingales answer daws.

Mar. Why appear you with this ridiculous boldness before my lady?

Mal. »Be not afraid of greatness:« — 't was well writ.

Oli. What meanest thou by that, Malvolio?

Mal. »Some are born great,« ⁸ —

Oli. Ha?

Mal. »Some achieve greatness,« —

Oli. What say'st thou?

Mal. »And some have greatness thrust upon them.«

Oli. Heaven restore thee!

Mal. »Remember, who commended thy yellow stockings,« —

Oli. Thy yellow stockings?

Mal. »And wished to see thee cross-gartered.«

Oli. Cross-gartered?

Mal. »Go to, thou art made, if thou desirest to be so:« —

Oli. Am I made?

Mal. »If not, let me see thee a servant still.«

Oli. Why, this is very midsummer madness. ⁹

Enter Servant.

Serv. Madam, the young gentleman of the count Orsino's is returned. I could hardly entreat him back: he attends your ladyship's pleasure.

Oli. I'll come to him. [Exit Servant.] Good Maria, let this fellow be looked to. Where's my cousin Toby? Let some of my people have a special care of him. I would not have him miscarry for the half of my dowry.

[Exeunt OLIVIA and MARIA.]

Mal. Oh, ho! do you come near me now? ¹⁰ no worse man than Sir Toby to look to me? This concurs directly with the letter: she sends him on purpose, that I may appear stubborn to him; for she incites me to that in the letter. »Cast thy humble slough,« says she; — »be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants, — let thy tongue tang ¹¹ with arguments of state, put thyself into the trick of singularity;« — and consequently sets down the manner how; as, a sad face, a reverend carriage, a slow tongue, in the habit of some sir of note, and so forth. I have limed ¹² her; but it is Jove's doing, and Jove make me thankful! And when she went away now, »Let this fellow be looked to:« fellow! not Malvolio, nor after my degree, but fellow. ¹³ Why, every thing adheres together, that no drachm of a scruple, no scruple of a scruple, no obstacle, no incredulous ¹⁴ or unsafe circumstance — What can be said? Nothing that can be, can come between me and the full prospect of my hopes. Well, Jove, not I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Re-enter MARIA, with Sir TOBY BELCH and FABIAN.

Sir To. Which way is he, in the name of sanctity? If all the devils in hell be drawn in little, and Legion ¹⁵ himself possessed him, yet I'll speak to him.

Fab. Here he is, here he is. — How is 't with you, Sir? how is 't with you, man?

Mal. Go off; I discard you: let me enjoy my private; ¹⁶ go off.

Mar. Lo, how hollow the fiend speaks within him! did not I tell you? — Sir Toby, my lady prays you to have a care of him.

Mal. Ah, ha! does she so?

Sir To. Go to, go to: peace! peace! we must deal gently with him; let me alone. — How do you, Malvolio? how is 't with you? What, man! defy the devil: consider, he's an enemy to mankind.

Mal. Do you know what you say?

Mar. La you! an you speak ill of the devil, how he takes it at heart! Pray God, he be not bewitched!

Fab. Carry his water to the wise-woman. ¹⁷

Mar. Marry, and it shall be done to-morrow morning, if I live. My lady would not lose him for more than I'll say.

Mal. How now, mistress?

Mar. O Lord!

Sir To. Pr'ythee, hold thy peace: this is not the way. Do you not see you move him? let me alone with him.

Fab. No way but gentleness; gently, gently: the fiend is rough, and will not be roughly used.

Sir To. Why, how now, my bawcock? how dost thou, chuck?

Mal. Sir!

Sir To. Ay, Biddy, come with me. ¹⁸ What, man! 't is not for gravity to play at cherry-pit ¹⁹ with Satan. Hang him, foul collier! ²⁰

Mar. Get him to say his prayers: good Sir Toby, get him to pray.

Mal. My prayers, minx!

Mar. No, I warrant you; he will not hear of godliness.

und ist erst vor einigen Jahren wieder entdeckt. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 484. — Die folgende Rede theilt die Fol. irrig dem Malvolio zu; die Fol. von 1632 verbessert den Fehler. 6) Er meint die lateinische Handschrift der Olivia in dem aufgefundenen Briefe. 7) Auf diese Sitte spielt Sh. auch sonst an; so in K. Henry VI. First Part (A. 5, Sc. 3) I kiss these fingers for eternal peace, || And lay them gently on thy tender side. 8) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 5, Anm. 30. 9) Steevens citirt dazu aus Ray's Sprichwörtersammlung: 'T is midsummer moon with you im Sinne von: Ihr seid toll. 10) Rückt Ihr mir nun näher? macht Ihr es mir nun deutlicher, was Ihr wollt? 11) Für tang hat die Fol. langer, was die zweite Folioausg. verbessert. In dem Briefe (vgl. A. 2, Sc. 5) stand tang arguments ohne with. 12) to lime = Jemanden mit Vogelleim fangen. 13) fellow, das Olivia in vertraulicher Weise = Gesell, Mensch, gebraucht hat, fasst Malvolio im ursprünglichen Sinn = Gefährte, Gleichgestellter. 14) incredulous steht hier mit Sh.'s Lizenz = was Einen ungläubig oder zweifelhaft machen könnte. 15) Legion ist der Name eines Teufels. 16) private = Einsamkeit, Fürsichsein, wie es scheint aus in private gebildet. Sonst kommt das substantivische private nur vereinzelt = geheimes Geschäft, oder = geheime Botschaft, vor. 17) wise-woman = ein Weib, das sich mit Quacksalberei, Besprechung von Besessenen, Wahrsagerei u. s. w. befasste. Hier soll sie aus Malvolio's Urin die Natur seines Uebels ergründen. 18) Collier vermuthet ein Stück aus einem Liede darin. — Biddy ist abgekürzt aus Bridget = Brigitte. — Die Fol. hat I biddy, come with me. 19) to play a cherry-pit = ein Kinderspiel, wobei mit Kirschkernen in ein kleines Loch geworfen wurde. Ein so ehrbarer Mann, wie Sir Toby, darf mit dem Satan nicht so vertraulich verkehren. 20) collier heisst der Teufel wegen

Mal. Go, hang yourselves all! you are idle shallow things: I am not of your element. You shall know more hereafter. [Exit.]

Sir To. Is 't possible?

Fab. If this were played upon a stage now, I could condemn it as an improbable fiction.

Sir To. His very genius hath taken the infection of the device, man.

Mar. Nay, pursue him now, lest the device take air, and taint.²¹

Fab. Why, we shall make him mad, indeed.

Mar. The house will be the quieter.

Sir To. Come, we 'll have him in a dark room,²² and bound. My niece is already in the belief that he 's mad: we may carry it thus, for our pleasure, and his penance, till our very pastime, tired out of breath, prompt us to have mercy on him; at which time we will bring the device to the bar, and crown thee for a finder²³ of madmen. But see, but see.

Enter Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Fab. More matter for a May morning.²⁴

Sir And. Here 's the challenge; read it: I warrant, there 's vinegar and pepper in 't.

Fab. Is 't so saucy?²⁵

Sir And. Ay, is 't, I warrant him: do but read.

Sir To. Give me. [Reads.] »Youth; whatsoever thou art, thou art but a scurvy fellow.«

Fab. Good, and valiant.

Sir To. »Wonder not, nor admire not in thy mind, why I do call thee so, for I will show thee no reason for 't.«

Fab. A good note, that keeps you from the blow of the law.

Sir To. »Thou comest to the lady Olivia; and in my sight she uses thee kindly: but thou liest in thy throat; that is not the matter I challenge thee for.«

Fab. Very brief, and to²⁶ exceeding good sense — less.

Sir To. »I will waylay thee going home; where, if it be thy chance to kill me,« —

Fab. Good.

Sir To. »Thou killest me like a rogue and a villain.«

Fab. Still you keep o' the windy side of the law: good.²⁷

Sir To. »Fare thee well; and God have mercy upon one of our souls! He may have mercy upon mine,²⁸ but my hope is better; and so look to thyself. Thy friend, as thou usest him, and thy sworn enemy, ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.« — If this letter move him not, his legs cannot.²⁹ I 'll give 't him.

Mar. You may have very fit occasion for 't: he is now in some commerce with my lady, and will by and by depart.

Sir To. Go, Sir Andrew; scout me for him at the corner of the orchard, like a bum-bailie.³⁰ So soon as ever thou seest him, draw, and, as thou drawest, swear horrible;³¹ for it comes to pass oft, that a terrible oath, with a swaggering accent, sharply twanged off, gives manhood more approbation than ever proof itself would have earned him. Away!

Sir And. Nay, let me alone for swearing. [Exit.]

Sir To. Now will not I deliver his letter: for the behaviour of the young gentleman gives him out to be of good capacity and breeding: his employment between his lord and my niece confirms no less; therefore this letter, being so excellently ignorant, will breed no terror in the youth: he will find it comes from a clodpole. But, Sir, I will deliver his challenge by word of mouth; set upon Ague-cheek a notable report of valour, and drive the gentleman (as, I know, his youth will aptly receive it) into a most hideous opinion of his rage, skill, fury, and impetuosity. This will so fright them both, that they will kill one another by the look, like cockatrices.³²

Fab. Here he comes with your niece. Give them way, till he take leave, and presently after him.

Sir To. I will meditate the while upon some horrid message³³ for a challenge.

[Exeunt Sir TOBY, FABIAN, and MARIA]

Re-enter OLIVIA, with VIOLA.

Oli. I have said too much unto a heart of stone, And laid mine honour too unchary out:³⁴ There 's something in me that reproves my fault, But such a headstrong potent fault it is, That it but mocks reproof.

Vio. With the same 'haviour that your passion bears, Goes on my master's grief.³⁵

Oli. Here; wear this jewel³⁶ for me: 't is my picture. Refuse it not, it hath no tongue to vex you;

seines schwarzen Gesichtes. So das Sprichwort Like will to like, quoth the devil to the collier. 21) to taint bezieht sich auf infection: Malvolio soll in Gewahrsam gebracht werden, damit sein Uebel nicht an die Luft komme und ansteckend wirke. 22) Damit soll Malvolio als ein erklärter Wahnsinniger behandelt werden. — dark room ist, wie dark house = Irrenhaus, so = die Zelle eines Wahnsinnigen. 23) to find im gerichtlichen Sinne von Richtern oder Geschwornen, die den fraglichen Wahnsinn eines vor Gericht Gestellten zu constatiren hatten. 24) Am Morgen des ersten Mai ergötzte man sich mit allerlei Spass und komischen Aufzügen, in denen auch der närrische Sir Andrew eine Stelle versehen konnte. 25) saucy = dreist, unverschämt, erinnert zugleich an sauce, in Beziehung auf vinegar and pepper. 26) Manche Hgg. lassen stillschweigend to weg. 27) Mit dieser Fassung, da like a rogue and a villain sich, je nach der Deutung der Worte, auf thou wie auf me beziehen lässt, stellt Sir Andrew sich auf die Windseite des Gesetzes, stellt sich so, dass das Gesetz ihm nichts anhaben kann. — Nach Staunton's Deutung ist unter law hier das spitzfindige Gesetzbuch über das Duell zu verstehen, demzufolge die Beleidigung like a rogue ohne Zweikampf sich abmachen liess. Erst mit dem Zusatze like a rogue, as thou art musste sie mit Blut gebüsst werden. 28) d. h. wenn ich im Zweikampf falle, so wird Gott sich meiner armen Seele erbarmen. 29) to move = rühren, reizen, und = aus der Stelle bringen. 30) bum-bailie = Häscher. Manche Hgg. setzen bum-bailiff dafür. 31) Sh. gebraucht die Adjectiva auf —ble häufig statt der Adverbia auf —bly. 32) Als ob sie zwei Basiliken wären, die mit dem Blicke tödten. Genauer sollte es heissen: dass Jeder vom blossen Anschauen des Andern sterben wird, wie von dem Blicke eines Basiliken. 33) Eine haarsträubende Botschaft als Herausforderung, die er mündlich dem Cesario im Namen Sir Andrew's bestellen will. 34) out ist Theobald's Emendation für on't der Fol. — to lay out = blosslegen. Dyce citirt dazu aus dem Drama Every Woman in her Humour: For there is blushing modesty laid out. 35) Mit derselben unaufhaltsamen Gewalt wie Eure Leidenschaft geht auch der Liebesschmerz meines Herrn seinen Weg weiter. — Die Fol. hat goes

And, I beseech you, come again to-morrow.

What shall you ask of me, that I'll deny,

That honour, sav'd, may upon asking give? ³⁷

Vio. Nothing but this; your true love for my master.

Oli. How with mine honour may I give him that,
Which I have given to you?

Vio. I will acquit you.

Oli. Well, come again to-morrow. Fare thee well:
A fiend like thee might bear my soul to hell. [Exit.]

Re-enter Sir TOBY BELCH, and FABIAN.

Sir To. Gentleman, God save thee.

Vio. And you, Sir.

Sir To. That defence thou hast, betake thee to 't: of what nature the wrongs are thou hast done him, I know not; but thy interceptor, ³⁸ full of despite, bloody as the hunter, attends thee at the orchard-end. Dismount thy tuck; be yare ³⁹ in thy preparation, for thy assailant is quick, skilful, and deadly.

Vio. You mistake, Sir: I am sure, no man hath any quarrel to me. My remembrance is very free and clear from any image of offence done to any man.

Sir To. You'll find it otherwise, I assure you: therefore, if you hold your life at any price, betake you to your guard; for your opposite hath in him what youth, strength, skill, and wrath, can furnish man withal.

Vio. I pray you, Sir, what is he?

Sir To. He is knight, dubbed with unhatch'd rapier, and on carpet consideration; ⁴⁰ but he is a devil in private brawl; souls and bodies hath he divorced three, and his incensement at this moment is so implacable, that satisfaction can be none but by pangs of death and sepulchre. Hob, nob, ⁴¹ is his word: give 't, or take 't.

Vio. I will return again into the house, and desire some conduct of the lady: I am no fighter. I have heard of some kind of men, that put quarrels purposely on others to taste ⁴² their valour; belike, this is a man of that quirk.

Sir To. Sir, no; his indignation derives itself out of a very competent ⁴³ injury: therefore, get you on, and give him his desire. Back you shall not to the house, unless you undertake that with me, which with as much safety you might answer him: therefore, on, or strip your sword stark naked; for meddle ⁴⁴ you must, that's certain, or forswear to wear iron about you.

Vio. This is as uncivil, as strange. I beseech you, do me this courteous office, as to know of the knight what my offence to him is: it is something of my negligence, nothing of my purpose.

Sir To. I will do so. Signior Fabian, stay you by this gentleman till my return. [Exit.]

Vio. Pray you, Sir, do you know of this matter?

Fab. I know, the knight is incensed against you, even to a mortal arbitrement, but nothing of the circumstance more.

Vio. I beseech you, what manner of man is he?

Fab. Nothing of that wonderful promise, to read him by his form, ⁴⁵ as you are like to find him in the proof of his valour. He is, indeed, Sir, the most skilful, bloody, and fatal opposite that you could possibly have found in any part of Illyria. Will you walk towards him? I will make your peace with him, if I can.

Vio. I shall be much bound to you for 't: I am one, that would rather go with sir priest, than sir knight: ⁴⁶ I care not who knows so much of my mettle. [Exeunt.]

Re-enter Sir TOBY, with Sir ANDREW. ⁴⁷

Sir To. Why, man, he's a very devil, I have not seen such a firago. ⁴⁸ I had a pass with him, rapier, scabbard, and all, and he gives me the stuck-in ⁴⁹ with such a mortal motion, that it is inevitable; and on the answer, he pays you ⁵⁰ as surely as your feet hit the ground they step on. They say, he has been fencer to the Sophy. ⁵¹

Sir And. Pox on 't, I'll not meddle with him.

Sir To. Ay, but he will not now be pacified: Fabian can scarce hold him yonder.

Sir And. Plague on 't; an I thought he had been valiant, and so cunning in fence, I'd have seen him damned ere I'd have challenged him. Let him let the matter slip, and I'll give him my horse, grey Capilet.

und greefes, von Rowe verbessert. Malone setzte dafür go und griefs. 36) jewel = Kleinod im Allgemeinen, hier ein reich gefasstes Miniaturbild der Olivia. 37) Ihr könnt nichts von mir verlangen, was ich verweigerte oder was die Ehre, wenn sie dabei bewahrt wird, nicht auf Verlangen gewähren könnte. — Collier interpungirt That, honour sav'd, may upon asking give und supplirt also wohl I als Subject aus dem Vorhergehenden: was ich geben kann, indem die Ehre bewahrt wird. 38) thy interceptor affectirt = Dein Gegner, eigentlich = der Dir auflauert auf Deinem Wege. — Eben so affectirt sagt Sir Toby dismount thy tuck = demontire Deinen Stossdegen, für = ziehe Deinen Degen. 39) yare = gewandt, behende. 40) unhatched gebraucht Sh. hier für unhacked = unzerhackt, nicht schartig, was manche Hgg. in den Text setzen. — Malone vermuthete an hatch'd rapier = ein Schwert mit reich eingelegtem Griff. — on carpet consideration geht auf die sogenannten carpet knights = Ritter, welche diese Würde nicht auf dem Schlachtfeld wegen bewiesener Tapferkeit, sondern auf dem Teppich eines königlichen Staatszimmers wegen Verdienste des Friedens empfangen. Das Wort erhielt dann einen verächtlichen Nebensinn, an den freilich Sir Toby hier nicht denkt; so in Harrington's Epigrams: That captains in those days were not regarded, || That only carpet-knights were well rewarded. 41) hob, nob, oder auch hab, nab, = entweder, oder; triff oder fehl', auf gut Glück. 42) Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 1, Anm. 16. 43) competent = zuständig, berechtigt. Die Fol. hat computent. 44) to meddle = handgemein werden mit Jemandem. 45) Wenn man ihn nach seinem Aeussern betrachtet, so verspricht er durchaus nicht so viel Wunderbares, wie ihr bei der Erprobung seiner Tapferkeit finden werdet. 46) Geistliche und Ritter erhielten zu Sh.'s Zeit ein Sir vor ihren Namen. — Viola meint, wenn sie einmal mit einem Sir zu schaffen haben sollte, so sollte es lieber ein Geistlicher als ein Ritter sein. 47) Dyce und Staunton beginnen hier eine neue, fünfte Scene, die sie überschreiben A street adjoining Olivia's garden. Indess ist es, wegen der Uebereinstimmung im Citiren, rathsamer, nicht von der herkömmlichen Scenenabtheilung abzuweichen. — Die Fol., welche sonst überall in diesem Drama die Scenen angiebt, hat an dieser Stelle keine neue Bezeichnung. 48) Sir Toby will, wenngleich in verkehrtem Sinne, das Wort virago gebrauchen und sagt dafür firago, weil er wahrscheinlich dabei an fire denkt. 49) stuck-in für das gewöhnliche stuck oder stock = Stoss im Gefecht, vom italienischen stoccata. 50) Nachdem er Euren Stoss parirt hat, so vergilt er ihn Euch, so trifft er Euch so sicher, wie Eure Füße den Boden treffen. 51) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 5,

Sir To. I'll make the motion. Stand here; make a good show on 't. This shall end without the perdition of souls. [Aside.] Marry, I'll ride your horse as well as I ride you.

Re-enter FABIAN and VIOLA.

[To FABIAN.] I have his horse to take up the quarrel. I have persuaded him, the youth's a devil.

Fab. [To Sir TOBY.] He is as horribly conceited of him;⁵² and pants, and looks pale, as if a bear were at his heels.

Sir To. [To VIOLA.] There's no remedy, Sir: he will fight with you for 's oath sake. Marry, he hath better bethought him of his quarrel, and he finds that now scarce to be worth talking of: therefore draw for the supportance of his vow:⁵³ he protests, he will not hurt you.

Vio. [Aside.] Pray God defend me! A little thing would make me tell them how much I lack of a man.⁵⁴

Fab. Give ground, if you see him furious.

Sir To. Come, Sir Andrew, there's no remedy: the gentleman will, for his honour's sake, have one bout with you: he cannot by the duello⁵⁵ avoid it; but he has promised me, as he is a gentleman and a soldier, he will not hurt you. Come on; to 't.

Sir And. Pray God, he keep his oath! [Draws.]

Vio. I do assure you, 't is against my will. [Draws.]

Enter ANTONIO.

Ant. Put up your sword. — If this young gentleman Have done offence, I take the fault on me: If you offend him, I for him defy you. [Drawing.]

Sir To. You, Sir? why, what are you?

Ant. One, Sir, that for his love dares yet do more, Than you have heard him brag to you he will.

Sir To. Nay, if you be an undertaker,⁵⁶ I am for you. [Draws.]

Fab. O good Sir Toby, hold! here come the officers.

Sir To. I'll be with you anon.

Vio. Pray, Sir, put your sword up, if you please.

Sir And. Marry, will I, Sir: — and, for that I promised you, I'll be as good as my word. He will bear you easily,⁵⁷ and reins well.

Enter Two Officers.

1. Off. This is the man: do thy office.

2. Off. Antonio, I arrest thee at the suit Of count Orsino.

Ant. You do mistake me, Sir.

1. Off. No, Sir, no jot: I know your favour well, Though now you have no sea-cap⁵⁸ on your head. — Take him away: he knows, I know him well.

Ant. I must obey. — [To VIOLA.] This comes with seeking you;

But there's no remedy: I shall answer it.

What will you do? Now my necessity

Makes me to ask you for my purse. It grieves me

Much more for what I cannot do for you,

Than what befalls myself. You stand amaz'd;

But be of comfort.

2. Off. Come, Sir, away.

Ant. I must entreat of you some of that money.

Vio. What money, Sir?

For the fair kindness you have show'd me here,

And part, being prompted by your present trouble,

Out of my lean and low ability

I'll lend you something. My having⁵⁹ is not much:

I'll make division of my present with you.

Hold, there is half my coffer.

Ant. Will you deny me now?

Is 't possible, that my deserts to you

Can lack persuasion? Do not tempt my misery,

Lest that it make me so unsound a man,

As to upbraid you with those kindnesses

That I have done for you.

Vio. I know of none;

Nor know I you by voice, or any feature.

I hate ingratitude more in a man,

Than lying vainness, babbling drunkenness,⁶⁰

Or any taint of vice, whose strong corruption

Inhabits our frail blood.

Ant. O heavens themselves!

2. Off. Come, Sir: I pray you, go.

Ant. Let me speak a little. This youth, that you see here,

I snatch'd one half⁶¹ out of the jaws of death,

Reliev'd him with such sanctity of love,

And to his image, which, methought, did promise

Most venerable worth, did I devotion.

1. Off. What's that to us? The time goes by: away!

Ant. But, O, how vile an idol proves this god! —

Thou hast, Sebastian, done good feature shame.

In nature there's no blemish, but the mind;⁶²

None can be call'd deform'd, but the unkind;⁶³

Virtue is beauty; but the beauteous-evil⁶⁴

Are empty trunks,⁶⁵ o'erflourish'd by the devil.

Anm. 37. 52) Cesario ist mit eben so fürchterlichen Vorstellungen von Sir Andrew erfüllt, wie dieser von ihm. — some horrible conceit steht in Othello (A. 3, Sc. 3). 53) Zieht also nur Euer Schwert, damit Sir Andrew sein Gelübde, mit Euch zu fechten, halten kann. 54) In demselben Sinne sagt Portia in Merchant of Venice (A. 3, Sc. 4) accomplished with that we lack. 55) by the duello = nach dem Duellgesetz, wie es, spitzfindig raffiniert, in ein System gebracht und in Büchern verzeichnet war. Diese Vorschriften stammten aus Italien und Frankreich, daher der ausländische Name. So in Love's Labour's Lost (A. 1, Sc. 2) the duello he regards not. 56) undertaker eigentlich = der es mit Jemandem aufnimmt, sich mit ihm einlässt, wie in Othello (A. 4, Sc. 1) and for Cassio, let me be his undertaker; daher = Händelsucher, Raufbold. 57) Er meint das Pferd, von dem er vorher gesprochen. 58) sea-cap = die Mütze, die er in dem Seegefechte trug. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 3, Anm. 6. — Der Gerichtsdienner deutet damit an, dass er den Antonio wohl erkannt hat. 59) Auf my having = mein Besitzthum, bezieht sich das folgende my present = mein gegenwärtiges Vermögen. 60) So Rowe's plausible Interpunction. Die meisten Hgg. coordiniren vier Begriffe: lying, vainness, babbling, drunkenness und die Fol. drei: lying, vainness, babbling drunkenness. 61) Als er schon mit einer Hälfte in dem Rachen des Todes steckte, riss ich ihn heraus. 62) in nature = in der körperlichen Bildung, ist Gegensatz zu in the mind = im Geiste. 63) unkind = abnorm, der natürlichen Art und Gesittung widersprechend. 64) beauteous-evil = die äusserlich schön und innerlich schlecht sind, ist ein Compositum wie proper-false (vgl. A. 2, Sc. 2, Anm. 9). 65) Steevens findet darin eine Anspielung auf die schön verzierten Kasten und Truhen, deren reicher Aussenseite

1. Off. The man grows mad: away with him!
Come, come, Sir.

Ant. Lead me on. [Exeunt Officers with ANTONIO.]

Vio. Methinks, his words do from such passion fly,
That he believes himself; so do not I.⁶⁶
Prove true, imagination, O, prove true,
That I, dear brother, be now ta'en for you!

Sir To. Come hither, knight; come hither, Fabian:
we'll whisper o'er a couplet or two of most sage saws.

Vio. He nam'd Sebastian: I my brother know
Yet living in my glass;⁶⁷ even such, and so,
In favour was my brother; and he went
Still in this fashion, colour, ornament,
For him I imitate. O! if it prove,
Tempests are kind, and salt waves fresh⁶⁸ in love!

[Exit.]

Sir To. A very dishonest paltry boy, and more a coward than a hare. His dishonesty appears in leaving his friend here in necessity, and denying him; and for his cowardship, ask Fabian.

Fab. A coward, a most devout coward, religious in it.

Sir And. 'Slid, I'll after him again, and beat him.

Sir To. Do; cuff him soundly, but never draw thy sword.

Sir And. An I do not, —⁶⁹ [Exit.]

Fab. Come, let's see the event.

Sir To. I dare lay any money 't will be nothing yet.
[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.

The Street before OLIVIA's House.

Enter SEBASTIAN and Clown.

Clo. Will you make me believe that I am not sent for you?

Seb. Go to, go to; thou art a foolish fellow:
Let me be clear of thee.

Clo. Well held out; i' faith! No, I do not know you;
nor I am not sent to you by my lady to bid you come speak with her; nor your name is not Master Cesario; nor this is not my nose neither. — Nothing, that is so,
is so.

Seb. I pr'ythee, vent thy folly somewhere else:
Thou know'st not me.

Clo. Vent my folly! He has heard that word of some great man, and now applies it to a fool. Vent my folly!
I am afraid this great lubber, the world, will prove a cockney.² I pr'ythee now, ungird thy strangeness,³ and tell me what I shall vent to my lady. Shall I vent to her that thou art coming?

Seb. I pr'ythee, foolish Greek,⁴ depart from me.
There's money for thee: if you tarry longer,
I shall give worse payment.

Clo. By my troth, thou hast an open hand. — These wise men, that give fools money, get themselves a good report after fourteen years' purchase.⁵

Enter Sir ANDREW.

Sir And. Now, Sir, have I met you again? there's for you. [Striking SEBASTIAN.]

Seb. Why, there's for thee, and there, and there.
Are all the people mad? [Beating Sir ANDREW.]

Enter Sir TOBY and FABIAN.

Sir To. Hold, Sir, or I'll throw your dagger o'er the house.⁶

Clo. This will I tell my lady straight. I would not be in some of your coats for twopence. [Exit.]

Sir To. Come on, Sir: hold.

Sir And. Nay, let him alone; I'll go another way to work with him: I'll have an action of battery against him, if there be any law in Illyria. Though I struck him first, yet it's no matter for that.

Seb. Let go thy hand.

Sir To. Come, Sir, I will not let you go. Come, my young soldier, put up your iron: you are well fleshed.
Come on.

Seb. I will be free from thee. What wouldst thou now?
If thou dar'st tempt me further, draw thy sword.

Sir To. What, what! Nay, then I must have an ounce or two of this malapert blood from you. [Draws.]

Enter OLIVIA.

Oli. Hold, Toby! on thy life I charge thee, hold!

Sir To. Madam!

Oli. Will it be ever thus? Ungracious wretch!
Fit for the mountains, and the barbarous caves,⁷ die innere Leere nicht entspricht. — by the devil bezieht sich nicht eigentlich auf trunks, sondern auf beauteous-evil. 66) Viola zweifelt noch, woran Antonio glaubt, an dem Leben ihres Bruders Sebastian, aber sie wünscht, dass diese Einbildung, in welcher sie für den Sebastian gehalten wird, sich als richtig erweise, insofern das Dasein Sebastian's überhaupt eine solche Verwechslung erklärlich macht. 67) Ich kenne meinen Bruder noch in meinem Spiegelbilde; gerade so wie mein Spiegel mich zeigt, sah mein Bruder aus, und gerade so trug er sich. 68) Gegensatz zwischen salt water und fresh water = Süßwasser, zugleich fresh in love = jung, frisch in der Liebe. 69) d. h. ich werde doch mein Schwert ziehen; wenn ich es nicht thue, so will ich verwünscht sein. — Die Fol. druckt And I do not. als vollständigen Satz.

1) Ihr führt Eure Rolle gut durch. 2) Der Narr moquirt sich über das affectirte to vent thy folly = Deine Narrheit äussern, laut werden lassen, und drückt die Besorgniss aus, dass Jedermann am Ende ein solcher Zierbengel werden, solche affectirte Redeweise sich aneignen möchte. — lubber = ein ungeschlachter Grobian, steht im Gegensatz zu cockney = affectirter Zierbengel. — Douce wollte lesen this great lubberly word will prove a cockney. — Das Wort to vent als ein affectirt gebrauchtes wird auch in Ben Jonson's Volpone persiflirt: Pray you, what news, Sirs, vents our climate? 3) strangeness = Fremdthun, reservirte Haltung. 4) foolish Greek dasselbe was sonst merry Greek = Spassmacher. Sebastian hält die Aufforderung des Narren, dass er zur Olivia kommen solle, für Spass. 5) Sie erhalten den guten Leumund erst in vierzehn Jahren, nachdem sie dafür bezahlt haben; es ist also ein ziemlich unvortheilhafter Handel, den die Weisen mit den Narren abschliessen. — Im Folgenden lassen die meisten Hgg. mit der Fol. die Drei zugleich auftreten. — Dyce hat das Richtige, dass erst Sir Andrew erscheint und nachher Sir Toby und Fabian. 6) Sir Toby droht dem Sebastian, den er für den leicht einzuschüchternden Cesario hält, den Dolch zu entreissen und über's Haus zu werfen. 7) barbarous caves =

Where manners ne'er were preach'd. Out of my sight! —
Be not offended, dear Cesario. —
Rudesby, be gone!

[Exeunt Sir TOBY, Sir ANDREW, and FABIAN.]

I pr'ythee, gentle friend,
Let thy fair wisdom, not thy passion, sway
In this uncivil and unjust extent⁸
Against thy peace. Go with me to my house;
And hear thou there how many fruitless pranks
This ruffian hath botch'd up,⁹ that thou thereby May'st smile at this. Thou shalt not choose but go:
Do not deny. Beshrew his soul for me,
He started one poor heart¹⁰ of mine in thee.

Seb. What relish is in this?¹¹ how runs the stream?
Or I am mad, or else this is a dream.
Let fancy still my sense in Lethe steep;
If it be thus to dream, still let me sleep.

Oli. Nay; come, I pr'ythee. 'Would thou 'dst be rul'd by me!

Seb. Madam, I will.

Oli. O! say so, and so be. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A Room in OLIVIA's House.

Enter MARIA and Clown.

Mar. Nay, I pr'ythee, put on this gown, and this beard: make him believe thou art Sir Topas the curate:
do it quickly; I'll call Sir Toby the whilst. [Exit.]

Clo. Well, I'll put it on, and I will dissemble myself in 't: and I would I were the first that ever dissembled in such a gown.¹ I am not tall² enough to become the function well, nor lean enough to be thought a good student; but to be said an honest man, and a good housekeeper, goes as fairly as to say a careful man, and a great scholar. The competitors³ enter.

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH and MARIA.

Sir To. Jove bless thee, master parson.

Clo. Bonos dies, Sir Toby: for as the old hermit of Prague,⁴ that never saw pen and ink, very wittily said to a niece of king Gorboduc, »That, that is, is;« so I, being master parson, am master parson, for what is that,

but that? and is, but is?

Sir To. To him, Sir Topas.

Clo. What, ho! I say. — Peace in this prison.

Sir To. The knave counterfeits well; a good knave.

Mal. [Within.] Who calls there?

Clo. Sir Topas, the curate, who comes to visit Malvolio the lunatic.

Mal. Sir Topas, Sir Topas, good Sir Topas, go to my lady.

Clo. Out, hyperbolical⁵ fiend! how vexest thou this man! Talkest thou nothing but of ladies?

Sir To. Well said, master parson.

Mal. Sir Topas, never was man thus wronged. Good Sir Topas, do not think I am mad: they have laid me here in hideous darkness.

Clo. Fie, thou dishonest Satan! I call thee by the most modest terms; for I am one of those gentle ones, that will use the devil himself with courtesy. Sayest thou, that house is dark?⁶

Mal. As hell, Sir Topas.

Clo. Why, it hath bay-windows transparent as barricades,⁷ and the clear-stories⁸ towards the south-north are as lustrous as ebony; and yet complainest thou of obstruction?

Mal. I am not mad, Sir Topas. I say to you, this house is dark.

Clo. Madman, thou errest: I say, there is no darkness but ignorance, in which thou art more puzzled than the Egyptians in their fog.⁹

Mal. I say, this house is as dark as ignorance, though ignorance were as dark as hell; and I say, there was never man thus abused. I am no more mad than you are:
make the trial of it in any constant question.¹⁰

Clo. What is the opinion of Pythagoras concerning wild-fowl?¹¹

Mal. That the soul of our grandam might haply inhabit a bird.

Clo. What thinkest thou of his opinion?

Höhlen, die den Wilden zur Wohnung dienen. — Die Berge werden bei Sh. auch sonst als Sitze der Rohheit und Barbarei bezeichnet; so wird mountaineer in Cymbeline (A. 4, Sc. 2) wiederholt als ein Schimpfwort gebraucht. 8) extent, sonst = Confiscation, im gerichtlichen Sinne, fasst Johnson hier = Gewaltsamkeit, Gewaltthat. Vielleicht ist es einfach = Demonstration, Darlegung. 9) Wie viel unnütze Streiche dieser Raufbold schon zusammengeflickt, ungeschickt fertig gebracht hat. — Das folgende thereby bezieht sich darauf: nach Massgabe jener Streiche. 10) heart wird hier, wie to start = ein Wild aufjagen, zeigt, im Doppelsinne mit hart = Hirsch, gebraucht, ein Wortspiel, das Sh. auch in Julius Cæsar (A. 3, Sc. 1) hat. 11) Wonach schmeckt das? wie erklärt sich das? insofern eine Sache sich durch den Geschmackssinn ergründen lässt.

1) to dissemble one's self = sich verkleiden, und to dissemble = heucheln. 2) tall, wofür Tyrwhitt pale, und Farmer, dem die meisten Hgg. folgen, fat setzte, ist = stattlich von Wuchs. 3) competitor = Verbündeter, Genosse. 4) Wie Steevens meint, bezieht sich das auf eine wirkliche Person. Es ist indess wahrscheinlich, dass der Narr diesen Eremiten von Prag eben so gut fingirt, wie er sonst allerlei Namen und Geschichten erfindet (vgl. A. 1, Sc. 5, Anm. 7 und A. 2, Sc. 3, Anm. 6), und wie er gleich nachher dem alten britannischen Könige Gorboduc, den das Publicum aus Sackville's und Norton's gleichnamigem Drama kannte, eine sonst durchaus unbekannte Nichte zuschreibt. 5) hyperbolical = der sich in Uebertreibungen gefällt. Das Wort gebraucht der Narr vielleicht für diabolical. 6) Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 4, Anm. 22. 7) bay-window = ein breites, oft in einen Erker vorspringendes Fenster, das den ganzen Raum (bay) zwischen zwei Querbalken des Hauses einnimmt. — barricades sind Läden, womit man Fenster oder Luftlöcher schliesst und verdeckt. — Der Widerspruch zwischen beiden liegt ebenso zu Tage wie in den folgenden Reden des Narren. 8) clear-stories = obere Fensterreihen in einer Kirche oder Halle, die sich über dem Gewölbe im Mittelschiff erheben. — Aus clear stores der Fol. macht die zweite Folioausg. clear stones, was manche Hgg. beibehalten. 9) Anspielung auf eine der Plagen Aegyptens vor dem Auszuge der Kinder Israel. 10) constant question = ein zusammenhängendes Gespräch. Wenn Malvolio ein solches führen kann, so ist er nicht wahnsinnig. 11) Die Lehre des Pythagoras von der Seelenwanderung wird auch in As you like it (A. 3, Sc. 2) scherzhaft behandelt. — woodcock = Schnepfe, wird sodann beispielsweise

Mal. I think nobly of the soul, and no way approve his opinion.

Clo. Fare thee well: remain thou still in darkness. Thou shalt hold the opinion of Pythagoras, ere I will allow of thy wits, and fear to kill a woodcock, lest thou dispossess the soul of thy grandam. Fare thee well.

Mal. Sir Topas! Sir Topas! —

Sir To. My most exquisite Sir Topas!

Clo. Nay, I am for all waters.¹²

Mar. Thou mightst have done this without thy beard and gown: he sees thee not.

Sir To. To him in thine own voice, and bring me word how thou findest him: I would, we were well rid of this knavery. If he may be conveniently delivered, I would he were; for I am now so far in offence with my niece, that I cannot pursue with any safety this sport to the upshot. Come by and by to my chamber.

[Exeunt Sir TOBY and MARIA.]

Clo. [Singing.] »Hey Robin, jolly Robin,
Tell me how thy lady does.«¹³

Mal. Fool, —

Clo. »My lady is unkind, perdy.«

Mal. Fool, —

Clo. »Alas, why is she so?«

Mal. Fool, I say; —

Clo. »She loves another« — Who calls, ha?

Mal. Good fool, as ever thou wilt deserve well at my hand, help me to a candle, and pen, ink, and paper. As I am a gentleman, I will live to be thankful to thee for 't.

Clo. Master Malvolio!

Mal. Ay, good fool.

Clo. Alas, Sir, how fell you besides your five wits?¹⁴

Mal. Fool, there was never man so notoriously abused: I am as well in my wits, fool, as thou art.

Clo. But as well? then you are mad indeed, if you be no better in your wits than a fool.

Mal. They have here propertied¹⁵ me; keep me in darkness, send ministers to me, asses! and do all they can to face me out of my wits.

Clo. Advise you what you say: the minister is here.¹⁶ — Malvolio, Malvolio, thy wits the heavens restore! endeavour thyself to sleep, and leave thy vain bibble babble.

Mal. Sir Topas, —

Clo. Maintain no words with him, good fellow. — Who, I, Sir? not I, Sir. God b' wi' you, good Sir Topas. — Marry, amen. — I will, Sir, I will.¹⁷

Mal. Fool, fool, fool, I say.

Clo. Alas, Sir, be patient. What say you, Sir? I am shent¹⁸ for speaking to you.

Mal. Good fool, help me to some light, and some paper: I tell thee, I am as well in my wits, as any man in Illyria.

Clo. Well-a-day, that you were, Sir!¹⁹

Mal. By this hand, I am. Good fool, some ink, paper, and light, and convey what I will set down to my lady: it shall advantage thee more than ever the bearing of letter did.

Clo. I will help you to 't. But tell me true, are you not mad indeed? or do you but counterfeit?²⁰

Mal. Believe me, I am not: I tell thee true.

Clo. Nay, I'll ne'er believe a madman, till I see his brains. I will fetch you light, and paper, and ink.

Mal. Fool, I'll requite it in the highest degree: I pr'y-thee, be gone.

Clo.

I am gone, Sir,

And anon, Sir,

I'll be with you again.

In a trice,

Like to the old Vice,²¹

Your need to sustain;

Who with dagger of lath,

In his rage and his wrath,

Cries, Ah, ha! to the devil:

Like a mad lad,

Pare thy nails, dad,

Adieu, goodman drivell.²²

[Exit.]

SCENE III.

OLIVIA'S Garden.

Enter SEBASTIAN.

Seb. This is the air; that is the glorious sun; This pearl she gave me, I do feel 't, and see 't; And though 't is wonder that enwraps me thus, Yet 't is not madness. Where 's Antonio then?

angeführt als ein Vogel, der für besonders dumm gilt, daher auch = Einfaltspinsel. 12) Sprichwörtlich: ich bin in allen Sätteln gerecht. — M. Mason's Deutung auf water = Farbe und Glanz der Edelsteine, in Verbindung mit Topas = Topas, der Edelstein, scheint zu weit hergeholt. 13) Dieses Citat und die folgenden sind aus einer alten Ballade von Wyatt. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 485. — In der vorhergehenden Rede fügte zuerst Rowe vor the upshot das unentbehrliche to ein. 14) So hiessen fünf verschiedene Seelenkräfte: common wit, imagination, fancy, estimation, memory. 15) to property = zu einem Eigenthum oder willenlosen Werkzeuge, zu einer Sache machen. So in K. John (A. 5, Sc. 2) I am too high-born to be propertied. 16) Das Folgende spricht der Narr mit der angenommenen Stimme des Sir Topas, wie auch die nächste Rede des Narren ein kurzes Zwiegespräch zwischen Sir Topas und ihm selber fingirt. 17) Mit diesen Worten verspricht der Narr auf die Mahnreden des Sir Topas, sich nicht weiter mit Malvolio befassen zu wollen. 18) to shend = ausschelten, Jemanden schlecht machen. — Die vorhergehenden Worte What say you, Sir? sind auch vielleicht als an den Sir Topas gerichtet zu verstehen, der den Narren straft, weil er noch immer mit Malvolio redet. 19) Wollte Gott, dass Ihr vernünftig wäret! 20) Oder thut Ihr nur so, als ob Ihr toll wäret? — Sh. hätte, wie Malone mit Recht bemerkt, entweder setzen müssen: are you mad indeed, or do you but counterfeit? oder aber: are you not mad indeed, and do you but counterfeit? 21) Der Narr will so behende verschwinden und wiederkommen, wie die stereotype komische Theaterfigur der vorshakspere'schen altenglischen Moralitäten, der Vice, verschwand und kam. In der folgenden Strophe giebt der Narr eine weitere Charakteristik von diesem seinem Vorgänger auf der englischen Bühne, wie er mit hölzernem Dolche seinem Gefährten, dem Teufel, auf die Finger klopft, als wolle er ihm die charakteristischen langen Nägel beschneiden. So heisst es von Pistol in K. Henry V. (A. 4, Sc. 4) this roaring devil i' the old play, that every one may pare his nails with a wooden dagger. — Auch das Ah, ha! ist die gewöhnliche Anrede des Vice an den Teufel. 22) drivel ist Rowe's Verbesserung für devil der Fol. — M. Mason las good mean-evil, eine Uebersetzung des Namens Malvolio oder Malivolo.

I could not find him at the Elephant;
 Yet there he was, and there I found this credit,¹
 That he did range the town to seek me out.
 His counsel now might do me golden service:
 For though my soul disputes well with my sense,²
 That this may be some error, but no madness,
 Yet doth this accident and flood of fortune
 So far exceed all instance, all discourse,³
 That I am ready to distrust mine eyes,
 And wrangle with my reason, that persuades me
 To any other trust but that I am mad,⁴ —
 Or else the lady's mad: yet, if 't were so,
 She could not sway her house, command her followers,
 Take and give back affairs, and their despatch,⁵
 With such a smooth, discreet, and stable bearing,
 As, I perceive, she does. There's something in 't.
 That is deceivable.⁶ But here the lady comes.

Enter OLIVIA and a Priest.

Oli. Blame not this haste of mine. If you mean well,
 Now go with me, and with this holy man,
 Into the chantry by; there, before him,
 And underneath that consecrated roof,
 Plight me the full assurance of your faith;
 That my most jealous and too doubtful soul
 May live at peace. He shall conceal it,
 Whiles⁷ you are willing it shall come to note,
 What time we will our celebration keep
 According to my birth. — What do you say?

Seb. I'll follow this good man, and go with you,
 And, having sworn truth, ever will be true.⁸

Oli. Then lead the way, good father; and heavens so shine,⁹
 That they may fairly note this act of mine! [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.

The Street before OLIVIA's House.

Enter Clown and FABIAN.

Fab. Now, as thou lov'st me, let me see his letter.

Clo. Good Master Fabian, grant me another request.

Fab. Anything.

Clo. Do not desire to see this letter.

Fab. This¹ is, to give a dog, and in recompense desire my dog again.

Enter DUKE, VIOLA, and Attendants.

Duke. Belong you to the lady Olivia, friends?

Clo. Ay, Sir; we are some of her trappings.

Duke. I know thee well: how dost thou, my good fellow?

Clo. Truly, Sir, the better for my foes, and the worse for my friends.

Duke. Just the contrary; the better for thy friends.

Clo. No, Sir, the worse.

Duke. How can that be?

Clo. Marry, Sir, they praise me, and make an ass of me; now, my foes tell me plainly I am an ass: so that by my foes, Sir, I profit in the knowledge of myself, and by my friends I am abused: so that, conclusions to be as kisses, if your four negatives make your two affirmatives,² why then, the worse for my friends, and the better for my foes.

Duke. Why, this is excellent.

Clo. By my troth, Sir, no; though it please you to be one of my friends.

Duke. Thou shalt not be the worse for me: there's gold.

Clo. But that it would be double-dealing,³ Sir, I would you could make it another.

Duke. O, you give me ill counsel.

Clo. Put your grace⁴ in your pocket, Sir, for this once; and let your flesh and blood obey it.

Duke. Well, I will be so much a sinner to be a double-dealer: there's another.

Clo. Primo, secundo, tertio, is a good play; and the old saying is, the third pays for all: the triplex, Sir, is a good tripping measure; or the bells of Saint Bennet, Sir, may put you in mind, — one, two, three.⁵

Duke. You can fool no more money out of me at this throw: if you will let your lady know, I am here to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.

Clo. Marry, Sir, lullaby⁶ to your bounty, till I come again. I go, Sir; but I would not have you to think, that my desire of having is the sin of covetousness; but, as you say, Sir, let your bounty take a nap, I will awake it anon. [Exit]

Vio. Here comes the man, Sir, that did rescue me.

Enter ANTONIO and Officers.

Duke. That face of his I do remember well;
 Yet when I saw it last, it was besmear'd,

1) credit = beglaubigte Kunde, oral intelligence, wie Steevens erklärt. — Collier und Knight fassen das Wort einfach = belief. 2) Sebastian's Sinne glauben an die Wahrheit des Erlebten, was sein Verstand, der es für Täuschung hält, ihnen abstreiten will. 3) instance = Beleg, Beispiel; discourse = Raisonnement. 4) Die Vernunft will ihm eher alles Andere glaublich machen, nur nicht, dass er toll sei. — trust ist dem vorhergehenden distrust entgegengesetzt. 5) Wenn sie wahnsinnig wäre, könnte sie nicht häusliche Geschäfte und deren Besorgung sich vorlegen lassen und darüber Bescheid ertheilen. 6) deceivable = geeignet zu täuschen, was täuschen kann. So in K. Richard II. (A. 2, Sc. 3) thy knee, || Whose duty is deceivable and false. 7) whiles = bis dass. — Für jealous hat die Fol. iealous. 8) truth = Treue, true = treu. 9) Steevens citirt dazu ein Sprichwort: Happy is the bride upon whom the sun shines, and blessed the corpse upon which the rain falls.

1) Für this der Fol. setzen manche Hgg. willkürlich that. 2) Farmer citirt dazu aus dem Drama Lust's Dominion folgende Stelle: Queen. Come, let's kiss. — Moor. Away, away. — Queen. No, no, says ay; and twice away, says stay. 3) double-dealing = Doppelzüngigkeit, und = doppeltes Thun, zweimal dasselbe Thun. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 1, Anm. 8. — Eben so zweideutig steht bald nachher double-dealer. 4) grace = Titel und Attribut des Herzogs, hier scherzhaft für your gracious hand. Zugleich ist grace = Frömmigkeit, die man beseitigt, indem man sie in die Tasche steckt. 5) Der Herzog soll dem Narren dreimal Geld geben, wie der Dreitakt in der Musik ein gutes, hüpfendes Zeitmass ist, und wie die Glocken des St. Benedictthurmes in London im Dreiklange anschlagen. 6) to lullaby = ein Wiegenlied singen, einschläfern, sagt der Narr in Bezug auf das vom

As black as Vulcan, in the smoke of war.
A bawbling vessel⁷ was he captain of,
For shallow draught and bulk unprizable,⁸
With which such scathful⁹ grapple did he make
With the most noble bottom of our fleet,
That very envy, and the tongue of loss,¹⁰
Cried fame and honour on him. — What's the matter?

1. Off. Orsino, this is that Antonio,
That took the Phoenix and her fraught from Candy;
And this is he, that did the Tiger board,
When your young nephew Titus lost his leg.
Here in the streets, desperate of shame and state,¹¹
In private brabble did we apprehend him.

Vio. He did me kindness, Sir, drew on my side,¹²
But, in conclusion, put strange speech upon me;
I know not what 't was but distraction.

Duke. Notable pirate, thou salt-water thief,¹³
What foolish boldness brought thee to their mercies,
Whom thou, in terms so bloody, and so dear,¹⁴
Hast made thine enemies?

Ant. Orsino, noble Sir,
Be pleas'd that I shake off these names you give me:
Antonio never yet was thief, or pirate,
Though, I confess, on base and ground enough,
Orsino's enemy. A witchcraft drew me hither:
That most ingrateful boy there, by your side,
From the rude sea's enrag'd and foamy mouth
Did I redeem; a wrack past hope he was:
His life I gave him, and did thereto add
My love, without retention, or restraint,
All his in dedication; for his sake
Did I expose myself, pure¹⁵ for his love,
Into the danger of this adverse town;
Drew to defend him, when he was beset:
Where being apprehended, his false cunning
(Not meaning to partake with me in danger)¹⁶
Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance,
And grew a twenty-years-removed thing,
While one would wink,¹⁷ denied me mine own purse,
Which I had recommended to his use
Not half an hour before.

Vio. How can this be?

Duke. When came he to this town?

Ant. To-day, my lord; and for three months before
(No interim, not a minute's vacancy),
Both day and night did we keep company.

Enter OLIVIA and Attendants.

Duke. Here comes the countess: now heaven walks on earth! —

But for thee, fellow; fellow, thy words are madness:
Three months this youth hath tended upon me;
But more of that anon. — Take him aside.

Oli. What would my lord, but that he may not have,
Wherein¹⁸ Olivia may seem serviceable? —
Cesario, you do not keep promise with me.

Vio. Madam?

Duke. Gracious Olivia, —

Oli. What do you say, Cesario? — Good my lord, —

Vio. My lord would speak, my duty hushes me.

Oli. If it be aught to the old tune, my lord,
It is as fat¹⁹ and fulsome to mine ear,
As howling after music.

Duke. Still so cruel?

Oli. Still so constant, lord.

Duke. What, to perverseness?²⁰ you uncivil lady,
To whose ingrate and un auspicious altars
My soul the faithfull'st offerings hath breath'd out,
That e'er devotion tender'd! What shall I do?

Oli. Even what it please my lord, that shall become him.

Duke. Why should I not, had I the heart to do it,
Like to the Egyptian thief at point of death,
Kill what I love?²¹ a savage jealousy,
That sometime savours nobly. — But hear me this:
Since you to non-regardance cast my faith,
And that I partly know the instrument
That screws me from my true place in your favour,
Live you, the marble-breasted tyrant, still;
But this your minion, whom, I know, you love,
And whom, by heaven I swear, I tender dearly,
Him will I tear out of that cruel eye,
Where he sits crowned in his master's spite. —
Come, boy, with me: my thoughts are ripe in mischief:
I'll sacrifice the lamb that I do love,
To spite a raven's heart within a dove.

Vio. And I, most jocund, apt, and willingly,
To do you rest, a thousand deaths would die.

Oli. Where goes Cesario?

Vio. After him I love,
More than I love these eyes, more than my life,
More, by all mores,²² than e'er I shall love wife.

If I do feign, you witnesses above,

Punish my life for tainting of my love!

Oli. Ah me! detested! how am I beguil'd!

Vio. Who does beguile you? who does do you wrong?

Oli. Hast thou forgot thyself? Is it so long?²³

Call forth the holy father! [Exit an Attendant.]

Duke. [To Viola.] Come away.

Oli. Whither, my lord? — Cesario, husband, stay.

Duke. Husband?

Oli. Ay, husband: can he that deny?

Duke. Her husband, sirrah?

Vio. No, my lord, not I.

Oli. Alas! it is the baseness of thy fear,

That makes thee strangle thy propriety.²⁴

Fear not, Cesario, take thy fortunes up;

Be that thou know'st thou art, and then thou art

As great as that thou fear'st.²⁵

Re-enter Attendant with the Priest.

O, welcome, father!

Father, I charge thee, by thy reverence,

Here to unfold (though lately we intended

To keep in darkness, what occasion now

Reveals before 't is ripe) what thou dost know

Hath newly pass'd between this youth and me.

Priest. A contract of eternal bond of love,

Confirm'd by mutual joinder of your hands,

Attested by the holy close of lips,

Strengthen'd by interchangement of your rings;

And all the ceremony of this compact²⁶

Seal'd in my function, by my testimony:

Since when, my watch hath told me, toward my grave
I have travelled but two hours.

Duke. O thou dissembling cub! what wilt thou be,

When time hath sow'd a grizzle on thy case?²⁷

Or will not else thy craft so quickly grow,

That thine own trip shall be thine overthrow?²⁸

Farewell, and take her; but direct thy feet,

Where thou and I henceforth may never meet.

Vio. My lord, I do protest, —

Oli. O! do not swear!

Hold little faith, though thou hast too much fear.

Enter Sir ANDREW AGUE-CHEEK.

Sir And. For the love of God, a surgeon! send one presently to Sir Toby.

Oli. What 's the matter?

Sir And. He has broke my head across, and has given Sir Toby a bloody coxcomb too. For the love of God, your help! I had rather than forty pound I were at home.

Oli. Who has done this, Sir Andrew?

Sir And. The count's gentleman, one Cesario: we took him for a coward, but he 's the very devil incardinate.²⁹

Duke. My gentleman, Cesario?

Sir And. Od's lifelings!³⁰ here he is. — You broke my head for nothing! and that that I did, I was set on to do 't by Sir Toby.

Vio. Why do you speak to me? I never hurt you:

You drew your sword upon me, without cause;

But I bespake you fair, and hurt you not.

Sir And. If a bloody coxcomb be a hurt, you have hurt me: I think you set nothing by a bloody coxcomb.³¹

Enter Sir TOBY BELCH and Clown.

Here comes Sir Toby halting; you shall hear more: but if he had not been in drink, he would have tickled you othergates than he did.

Duke. How now, gentleman? how is 't with you?

Sir To. That 's all one: he has hurt me, and there 's the end on 't. — Sot,³² didst see Dick surgeon, sot?

Clo. O! he 's drunk, Sir Toby, an hour ago: his eyes were set at eight i' the morning.

Sir To. Then he 's a rogue, and a passy-measures pavin.³³ I hate a drunken rogue.

Oli. Away with him! Who hath made this havoc with them?

Sir And. I 'll help you, Sir Toby, because we 'll be dressed together.³⁴

Sir To. Will you help? — an ass-head, and a coxcomb, and a knave, a thin-faced knave, a gull!³⁵

Oli. Get him to bed! and let his hurt be look'd to.

[Exeunt Clown, Sir TOBY, and Sir ANDREW.]

Underdown erschien. 22) Sh. bildet hier einen Plural von more, wie er in K. Richard III. (A. 3, Sc. 4) einen Plural von if bildet. 23) d. h. ist es so lange her, dass Du Dich mit mir vermählt hast? 24) strangle thy propriety erklärt Malone mit disown thy property. Es ist aber wohl eher = Dein eigentliches, geziemendes, gehöriges Wesen unterdrücken, wie in Othello (A. 2, Sc. 3) Silence that dreadful bell! it frights the isle || From her propriety. 25) Dann stehst Du als mein Gemahl dem Herzog an Rang gleich. 26) Sh. betont compact auf der letzten Sylbe. 27) case steht, wie Johnson sagt, hier verächtlich für skin = Fell. Der Herzog gebraucht das Wort, weil er den Cesario als dissembling cub angeredet hat. 28) Dass Du stürzest, indem Du Dir selber ein Bein stellst. 29) incardinate, scherzhaft entstellt aus incarnate, wie in Measure for Measure (A. 2, Sc. 1) cardinally given für carnally given. 30) Od's lifelings für God's life, mit der Diminutivsyllbe ling. 31) Ihr legt kein Gewicht auf einen blutigen Kopf, und zugleich: Ihr habt nichts einem blutigen Kopf zur Seite zu stellen. — coxcomb, eigentlich = Narrenmütze, steht auch sonst scherzhaft = Kopf, oder = Schädel. 32) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 5, Anm. 24. 33) Sir Toby erfindet für den Wundarzt einen Schimpfnamen, indem er die Namen zweier ihm wegen ihrer Feierlichkeit und Würde verhassten Tänze combinirt und entstellt. — passy-measures wird hergeleitet aus dem italienischen passa-mezzo, und pavin ist gewöhnlich pavan. — Indess hat Collier in einem Verzeichniss alter Tänze, das er in die Zeit 1580—1590 setzt, auch folgende Angabe gefunden: The passinge measure Pavyon mit dieser Beschreibung: two singles and a double forward, and two singles syde. Reprynce back. — Wie Collier erklärt, will Sir Toby zunächst sagen: Dick surgeon has passed his measures in getting drunk, und kommt so auf den Namen des erwähnten Tanzes. — Die Fol. hat paryn, was manche Hgg. paynim = Heide, lesen. Andere Hgg. ziehen die Lesart der zweiten Folioausg. vor: after a passy-measures pavin und verbinden das mit dem Folgenden: After a passy-measure or a pavin I hate a drunken rogue. 34) to dress von wundärztlichem Verbands. 35) Malone bezieht alle diese Schimpfreden auf den Wundarzt oder auf Sebastian, Steevens mit grösserer Wahrscheinlichkeit auf Sir Andrew. Andere lesen mit der Fol. Will you help an ass-head etc., als ob Sir Toby sich selber meine. 36) Wenn ich bei Verstand war und mich sicherstellen wollte.

Enter SEBASTIAN.

Seb. I am sorry, Madam, I have hurt your kinsman;
But had it been the brother of my blood,
I must have done no less, with wit and safety.³⁶
You throw a strange regard³⁷ upon me, and by that I do perceive it hath offended you:
Pardon me, sweet one, even for the vows
We made each other but so late ago.

Duke. One face, one voice, one habit, and two persons;
A natural perspective,³⁸ that is, and is not!

Seb. Antonio? O my dear Antonio!
How have the hours rack'd and tortur'd me,
Since I have lost thee!

Ant. Sebastian are you?

Seb. Fear'st thou that,³⁹ Antonio?

Ant. How have you made division of yourself? —
An apple cleft in two is not more twin Than these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?

Oli. Most wonderful

Seb. Do I stand there? I never had a brother;
Nor can there be that deity in my nature,
Of here and every where.⁴⁰ I had a sister,
Whom the blind waves and surges have devour'd. —
[To Viola.] Of charity,⁴¹ what kin are you to me?
What countryman? what name? what parentage?

Vio. Of Messaline: Sebastian was my father;
Such a Sebastian was my brother too,
So went he suited⁴² to his watery tomb.
If spirits can assume both form and suit,
You come to fright us.

Seb. A spirit I am indeed;
But am in that dimension grossly clad,
Which from the womb I did participate.
Were you a woman, as the rest goes even,
I should my tears let fall upon your cheek,
And say — Thrice welcome, drowned Viola!

Vio. My father had a mole upon his brow, —

Seb. And so had mine.

Vio. And died that day, when Viola from her birth
Had number'd thirteen years.

Seb. O! that record is lively in my soul.
He finished, indeed, his mortal act
That day that made my sister thirteen years.

Vio. If nothing lets⁴³ to make us happy both,
But this my masculine usurp'd attire,
Do not embrace me, till each circumstance
Of place, time, fortune, do cohere, and jump,
That I am Viola: which to confirm,
I'll bring you to a captain in this town,

Where lie my maiden weeds: by whose gentle help
I was preserv'd,⁴⁴ to serve this noble count.
All the occurrence of my fortune since
Hath been between this lady and this lord.

Seb. [To OLIVIA.] So comes it, lady, you have been mistook;

But nature to her bias drew in that.⁴⁵

You would have been contracted to a maid,

Nor are you therein, by my life, deceiv'd.

You are betroth'd both to a maid and man.

Duke. Be not amaz'd; right noble is his blood. —

If this be so, as yet the glass seems true,

I shall have share in this most happy wrack.⁴⁶

[To VIOLA.] Boy, thou hast said to me a thousand times,
Thou never shouldst love woman like to me.

Vio. And all those sayings will I over-swear,

And all those swearings keep as true in soul,

As doth that orb'd continent, the fire

That severs day from night.⁴⁷

Duke.

Give me thy hand;

And let me see thee in thy woman's weeds.

Vio. The captain, that did bring me first on shore,

Hath my maid's garments: he, upon some action,⁴⁸

Is now in durance at Malvolio's suit.

A gentleman, and follower of my lady's.

Oli. He shall enlarge him. — Fetch Malvolio hither. —

And yet, alas, now I remember me,

They say, poor gentleman, he's much distract.

A most extracting⁴⁹ frenzy of mine own

From my remembrance clearly banish'd his. —

Re-enter Clown, with a letter, and FABIAN.

How does he, sirrah?

Clo. Truly, Madam, he holds Belzebub at the stave's end, as well as a man in his case may do. He has here writ a letter to you: I should have given it you to-day morning; but as a madman's epistles are no gospels, so it skills not much when they are delivered.

Oli. Open it, and read it.

Clo. Look then to be well edified, when the fool delivers the madman. — [Reads.] »By the Lord, Madam,« —

Oli. How now! art thou mad?

Clo. No, Madam, I do but read madness: an your lady-ship will have it as it ought to be, you must allow vox.⁵⁰

Oli. Pr'ythee, read i' thy right wits.

Clo. So I do, madonna; but to read his right wits, is to read thus: therefore perpend, my princess, and give ear.

Oli. [To FABIAN.] Read it you, sirrah.

37) Ihr seht mich an, als kenntet Ihr mich nicht. 38) perspective = optischer Betrug, eigentlich = Ocularglas, und was man durch ein solches sieht. — natural = leibhaftig, das nicht bloss auf dem Schein beruht, sondern körperlich verwirklicht ist. 39) Bist Du in Zweifel darüber, dass ich Sebastian bin? Hast Du Bedenken deshalb? 40) In meiner Natur kann nicht die göttliche Begabung stecken, dass ich zugleich hier und überall sein könnte. 41) of charity = aus Menschenliebe. So in Marlowe's Dido: vouchsafe, of ruth. 42) so suited = in solcher Tracht, so gekleidet. 43) to let = hinderlich sein, im Wege stehen. 44) Theobald, der in der vorigen Zeile maid's weeds ändert, setzt hier mit grösserer Plausibilität preserv'd für preserv'd, insofern der Schiffscapitain den Cesario dem Herzog als Diener empfohlen hatte. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2 zum Schluss. — Staunton vermuthet, dass he vor by whose gentle help ausgefallen sei. 45) In Eurem Irrthum ist die Natur doch ihrem rechten Zuge gefolgt. 46) wrack = das gestrandete Gut, im bildlichen Sinne zugleich mit der Anspielung auf den Schiffbruch, in welchem Sebastian und Viola getrennt wurden. 47) Viola will ihre Schwüre so treu bewahren, wie das Himmels- gewölbe die Sonne bewahrt. 48) action = Process, Gerichtsklage. 49) extracting erklärt Knight mit absorbing. Hanmer setzte distracting dafür. Rowe las exacting mit den spätern Folioausgg. — In der His- torie of Hamlet steht, wie Malone citirt: to try if men of great account be extract out of their wits. 50) Eine Tollheit muss auch in übertriebener Redeweise vorgetragen werden, deshalb müsst Ihr mir die gehörige

Fab. [Reads.] By the Lord, Madam, you wrong me, and the world shall know it: though you have put me into darkness, and given your drunken cousin rule over me, yet have I the benefit of my senses as well as your ladyship. I have your own letter that induced me to the semblance I put on; with the which I doubt not but to do myself much right, or you much shame. Think of me as you please. I leave my duty a little unthought of, and speak out of my injury.

The madly-used MALVOLIO.◀

Oli. Did he write this?

Clo. Ay, Madam.

Duke. This savours not much of distraction.

Oli. See him deliver'd, Fabian: bring him hither.

[Exit FABIAN.]

My lord, so please you, these things further thought on, To think me as well a sister as a wife, One day shall crown the alliance on 't,⁵¹ so please you, Here at my house, and at my proper cost.

Duke. Madam, I am most apt to embrace your offer. — [To VIOLA.] Your master quits you; and, for your service done him,

So much against the mettle⁵² of your sex, So far beneath your soft and tender breeding, And since you call'd me master for so long, Here is my hand: you shall from this time be Your master's mistress.

Oli. A sister! — you are she.

Re-enter FABIAN, with MALVOLIO.

Duke. Is this the madman?

Oli. Ay, my lord, this same.

How now, Malvolio?

Mal. Madam, you have done me wrong, Notorious wrong.

Oli. Have I, Malvolio? no.

Mal. Lady, you have. Pray you, peruse that letter. You must not now deny it is your hand: Write from it,⁵³ if you can, in hand, or phrase; Or say, 't is not your seal, nor your invention: You can say none of this. Well, grant it then, And tell me, in the modesty of honour, Why you have given me such clear lights of favour, Bade me come smiling and cross-garter'd to you, To put on yellow stockings, and to frown Upon Sir Toby, and the lighter people?⁵⁴ And, acting this in an obedient hope, Why have you suffer'd me to be imprison'd,

Kept in a dark house, visited by the priest, And made the most notorious geck and gull That e'er invention play'd on?⁵⁵ tell me why.

Oli. Alas! Malvolio, this is not my writing, Though, I confess, much like the character; But, out-of question, 't is Maria's hand: And now I do bethink me, it was she First told me thou wast mad; then cam'st⁵⁶ in smiling, And in such forms which here were presuppos'd Upon thee in the letter. Pr'ythee, be content: This practice⁵⁷ hath most shrewdly pass'd upon thee; But when we know the grounds and authors of it, Thou shalt be both the plaintiff and the judge Of thine own cause.

Fab. Good Madam, hear me speak; And let no quarrel, nor no brawl to come, Taint the condition of this present hour, Which I have wonder'd at. In hope it shali not, Most freely I confess, myself, and Toby, Set this device against Malvolio here, Upon some stubborn and uncourteous parts We had conceiv'd against him.⁵⁸ Maria writ The letter at Sir Toby's great importance:⁵⁹ In recompense whereof, he hath married her. How with a sportful malice it was follow'd, May rather pluck on laughter than revenge, If that the injuries be justly weigh'd, That have on both sides pass'd.

Oli. Alas, poor fool,⁶⁰ how have they baffled thee!

Clo. Why, some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrown⁶¹ upon them.◀ I was one, Sir, in this interlude;⁶² one Sir Topas, Sir; but that 's all one. — By the Lord, fool, I am not mad.◀ — But do you remember? Madam, why laugh you at such a barren rascal? an you smile not, he 's gagg'd:⁶³ and thus the whirligig of time brings in his revenges.

Mal. I'll be reveng'd on the whole pack of you. [Exit.]

Oli. He hath been most notoriously abus'd.

Duke. Pursue him, and entreat him to a peace.⁶⁴ He hath not told us of the captain yet: When that is known and golden time convents,⁶⁵ A solemn combination shall be made Of our dear souls. — Meantime, sweet sister, We will not part from hence. — Cesario, come; For so you shall be, while you are a man; But when in other habits you are seen, Orsino's mistress, and his fancy's queen.

[Exeunt all, except Clown.]

Stimme dazu verstaten. — vox sagt der Narr pathetisch = Stimme. 51) Der Bund, der die Olivia zu einer Schwester des Herzogs macht, indem der Herzog sich mit der Viola, und Olivia sich mit deren Bruder vermählt. — Henley wollte lesen the alliance an 't so please you. A. 2, Sc. 5 und A. 3, Sc. 4). 62) Ich spielte eine Rolle in diesem Possenspiel. 63) Der Narr bezieht sich auf Malvolio's Worte (A. 1, Sc. 5): I marvel your ladyship takes delight in such a barren rascal und: unless you laugh and minister occasion to him, he is gagged. 64) Steevens citirt dazu aus Fletcher's Two Noble Kinsmen: Go, take her || And fluently persuade her to a peace. 65) to convent erklärt Steevens mit to assemble, Douce mit to agree, to be convenient; es ist wohl = anberaumen, d. h. den Zeitpunkt unserer Vermählung.

Clown sings.⁶⁶

THE WINTER'S TALE.

Einleitung.

Das nachfolgende Drama ist zuerst gedruckt in der Gesamtausgabe der Shakspeare'schen Schauspiele in Folio (1623). Es steht daselbst unter dem Titel The Winters Tale als das letzte Stück in der Reihe der Comedies, in Acte und Scenen eingetheilt und mit einem Personenverzeichniss, das mit der herkömmlichen Bezeichnung The Names of the Actors auf der letzten Seite seinen Platz gefunden hat.

Die erste Notiz von The Winter's Tale findet sich in dem Tagebuche eines gewissen Dr. Simon Forman, der das Drama am 15. Mai 1611 auf dem Globustheater aufführen sah und darüber so berichtet:

Observe ther howe Lyontes the Kinge of Cicillia was overcom with jelosy of his wife with the Kinge of Bohemia, his frind, that came to see him, and howe he contrived his death, and wold have had his cup-berer to have poisoned, who gave the Kinge of Bohemia warning thereof and fled with him to Bohemia.

Remember also howe he sent to the orakell of Apollo, and the aunsuer of Apollo that she was gilltless, and that the kinge was jelouse, &c., and howe, except the child was found againe that was loste, the kinge should die without yssue: for the child was caried into Bohemia, and there laid in a forrest, and brought up by a sheppard, and the Kinge of Bohemia, his sonn married that wentch: and howe they fled into Cicillia to Leontes, and the sheppard having showed [by] the letter of the nobleman whom Leontes sent, it was that child, and [by] the jewells found about her, she was knowen to be Leontes daughter, and was then 16. yers old.

Remember also the rog [rogue] that cam in all tottered like roll pixci and howe he fayned him sicke and to have him robbed of all that he had, and howe he cosoned the por man of all his money, and after cam to the shop ther [sheep sheer?] with a pedlers packe, and ther cosened them again of all their money; and how he changed apparell with the Kinge of Bomia, his sonn, and then how he turned courtier, &c. Beware of trustinge feined beggars or fawninge fellouse.

In demselben Jahre wurde das Drama auch bei Hofe im Palaste zu Whitehall dargestellt, wie aus einem Vermerk des damaligen Master of the Revels, Sir George Buc, unterm 5. November, erhellt: A play called the winters nightes Tayle. — Obwohl der Titel hier etwas modificirt erscheint und der Name des Verfassers nicht angegeben ist, sondern nur die Shakspeare'sche Schauspielergesellschaft (the kings players), die das Stück spielte, so kann doch wohl kein Zweifel sein, dass das Shakspeare'sche Drama gemeint ist. — Der Name des Sir George Buc, als Desjenigen, der das Stück zuerst in seiner amtlichen, vom October 1610 an bekleideten, Eigenschaft als Master of the Revels und Theatercensor zur öffentlichen Aufführung zuließ, wird auch in dem Buche seines spätern Nachfolgers, Sir Henry Herbert, erwähnt: For the kings players. An olde playe called Winters Tale, formerly allowed of by Sir George Bucke and likewyse by mee on Mr. Hemminges his worde that there was nothing prophane added or reformed, thogh the allowed booke was missing: and therefore I returned it without a fee, this 19th of August, 1623. — Zu diesen äusserlichen Gründen, welche es höchst wahrscheinlich machen, dass Dr. Simon Forman das Stück, als ein damals erst kürzlich zur Aufführung gelangtes, im Globustheater kennen lernte, kommen noch stylistische und metrische Merkmale, die unserm Drama ein verhältnissmässig spätes Datum unter den Dramen Shakspeare's vindiciren.

The Winter's Tale ist, in ähnlicher Weise wie As you like it auf eine Novelle von Thomas Lodge, so auf eine Novelle von Robert Greene begründet, die zuerst im Jahre 1588 unter folgendem Titel erschien: Pandosto The Triumph of Time. Wherein is Discovered by a pleasant Historie, that although by the meanes of sinister fortune, Truth may be concealed yet by Time in spight of fortune it is most manifestly revealed. Pleasant for a geto avoyde drowsie thoughts, profitable for youth to eschue other wanton pastimes, and bringing to both a desired content. Temporis filia veritas. By Robert Greene, Maister of Artes in Cambridge. Omne tulit punctum qui miscuit utile dulci. Imprinted at London by Thomas Orwin for Thomas Cadman, dwelling at the Signe of the Bible, neere unto the North doore of Paules, 1588. — Ein zweiter Titel: The Historie of Dorastus and Fawnia, der in dieser ersten Auflage nur als Nebentitel figurirt, ist in den meisten, sehr zahlreichen späteren Auflagen der eigentliche Titel geworden. — Aus den reichlichen Auszügen, die wir mit fortlaufender Bezugnahme auf die Acte und Scenen des Shakspeare'schen Dramas folgen lassen, wird sich die Verwandtschaft zwischen der Novelle und dem darauf begründeten Drama am leichtesten ergeben. — Zuvor sei nur noch bemerkt, wie die in Greene's Novelle auftretenden Personen sich zu denen in The Winter's Tale verhalten: Pandosto, König von Böhmen, = Leontes, König von Sicilien; Bellaria = Hermione; Garinter = Mamillius; Egistus, König von Sicilien, = Polixenes, König von Böhmen; Dorastus = Florizel; Fawnia = Perdita; Franion im ersten Theile der Novelle und Capnio im zweiten = Camillo; Porrus = der alte Schäfer. — Die übrigen Figuren seines Dramas fügte Shakspeare aus seiner eigenen Erfindung hinzu, wie auch der Schluss von The Winter's Tale, das Wiedererscheinen der todtgeglaubten Hermione, ganz und gar ihm selbst angehört und in der Novelle nichts Entsprechendes hat.

A. 1, Sc. 1 und 2. In the countrey of Bohemia, there raygned a king called Pandosto, whose fortunate successe in warres against his foes, and bountifull curtesie towards his friendes in peace, made him to be greatly feared and loved of all men. This Pandosto had to wife a ladie called Bellaria, by birth royall, learned by education, faire by nature, by vertues famous, so that it was hard to judge whether her beautie, fortune, or vertue wanne the greatest commendations. These two, lincked together in perfect love, led their lives with such fortunate content that their subjects greatly rejoyced to see their quiet disposition. They had not beene married long, but Fortune (willing to increase their happines) lent them a sonne, so adorned with the gifts of nature, as the perfection of the childe greatly augmented the love of the parentes, and the joy of their commons; in so much that the Bohemians, to shewe their inward joyes by outward actions, made bonfires and triumphs throughout all the kingdome, appointing justes and turneyes for the honour of their young prince: whether resorted not only his nobles, but also divers kings and princes which were his neighbours, willing to shewe their friendship they ought to Pandosto, and to win fame and glory by their prowesse and valour. Pandosto, whose minde was fraught with princely liberality, enter-tayned the kings, princes, and noble men with such submissee curtesie and magnifical bounty, that they all sawe how willing he was to gratifie their good wils, making a generall feast for subjects, which continued by the space of twentie dayes; all which time the justes and turneyes were kept to the great content both of the lordes and ladies there present. This solemne tryumph being once ended, the assembly, taking their leave of Pandosto and Bellaria, the young sonne (who was called Garinter) was nursed up in the house to the great joy and content of the parents.

Fortune envious of such happy successe, willing to shewe some signe of her inconstancie, turned her wheele, and darkned their bright sunne of prosperitie with the mistie cloudes of mishap and misery. For it so happened that Egistus, king of Sycilia, who in his youth had bene brought up with Pandosto, desirous to shewe that neither tracte of time, nor distance of place could diminish their former friendship, provided a navie of ships and sayled into Bohemia to visite his old friend and companion; who hearing of his arrivall, went himselve in person, and his wife Bellaria accompanied with a great traine of lords and ladies, to meete Egistus; and espying him alighted from his horse, embraced him very lovingly, protesting that nothing in the world could have happened more acceptable to him then his comming, wishing his wife to welcome his olde friend and acquaintance: who (to shewe how she liked him whom her husband loved) intertayned him with such familiar curtesie as Egistus perceived himselve to bee verie well welcome. After they had thus saluted and embraced eche other, they mounted againe on horsbacke and rode toward the citie, devising and recounting howe being children they had passed their youth in friendly pastimes: where by the meanes of the citizens Egistus was receyved with triumphs and shewes, in such sort that he marvelled how on so small a warning they could make such preparation.

Passing the streetes thus with such rare sightes they rode on to the pallace, where Pandosto entertained Egistus and his Sycilians with such banqueting and sumptuous cheare, so royally as they all had cause to commend his princely liberality; yea, the verie basest slave that was knowne to come from Sycilia was used with such curtesie, that Egistus might easily perceive how both he and his were honored for his friendes sake. Bellaria (who in her time was the flower of curtesie), willing to shew how unfaynedly shee looved her husband by his friends intertainement, used him likewise so familiarly that her countenance bewraied how her minde was affected towards him, oftentimes comming her selfe into his bed chamber to see that nothing should be amis to mislike him. This honest familiarity increased dayly more and more betwixt them; for Bellaria, noting in Egistus a princely and bountifull minde, adorned with sundrie and excellent qualities, and Egistus, finding in her a vertuous and curteous disposition, there grew such a secret uniting of their affections, that the one could not well be without the company of the other: in so much, that when Pandosto was busied with such urgent affaires that hee could not bee present with his friend Egistus, Bellaria would walke with him into the garden, where they two in privat and pleasant devises would passe away the time to both their contents. This custome still continuing betwixt them, a certaine melancholy passion entring the minde of Pandosto drave him into sundry and doubtfull thoughts. First, he called to minde the beauty of his wife Bellaria, the comelines and braverie of his friend Egistus, thinking that love was above all lawes and therefore to be staid with no law; that it was hard to put fire and flaxe together without burning; that their open pleasures might breede his secrete displeasures. He considered with himselve that Egistus was a man and must needes love, that his wife was a woman and therefore subject unto love, and that where fancy forced friendship was of no force.

These and such like doubtfull thoughtes, a long time smothering in his stomacke, beganne at last to kindle in his minde a secret mistrust, which, increased by suspition, grewe at last to a flaming jealousie that so tormented him as he could take no rest. He then began to measure all their actions, and to misconstrue of their too private familiaritie, judging that it was not for honest affection, but for disordinate fancy, so that hee began to watch them more narrowly to see if he could gette any true or certaine prooffe to confirme his doubtfull suspition. While thus he noted their lookes and gestures and suspected their thoughtes and meaninges, they twoo seely soules, who doubted nothing of this his treacherous intent, frequented daily eache others companie, which drave him into such a franticke passion, that he beganne to beare a secret hate to Egistus and a lowering countenance to Bellaria; who marreiling at such unaccustomed frowns, began to cast beeyond the moone, and to enter into a thousand sundrie thoughtes, which way she should offend her husband: but finding in her selfe a cleare conscience ceassed to muse, until such time as she might find fit opportunitie to demaund the cause of his dumps. In the meane time Pandostoes minde was so farre charged with jealousy, that he did no longer doubt, but was assured, (as he thought) that his friend Egistus had entered a wrong pointe in his tables, and so had played him false play: whereupon, desirous to revenge so great an injury, he thought best to dissemble the grudge with a faire and friendly countenance, and so under the shape of a friend to shew him the tricke of a foe. Devising with himselfe a long time how he might best put away Egistus without suspition of treacherous murder, hee concluded at last to poyson him; which opinion pleasing his humour he became resolute in his determination, and the better to bring the matter to passe he called unto him his cupbearer, with whom in secret he brake the matter, promising to him for the performance thereof to geve him a thousande crownes of yearely revenues.

His cupbearer, eyther being of a good conscience or willing for fashion sake to deny such a bloody request, began with great reasons to perswade Pandosto from his determinate mischief, shewing him what an offence murther was to the Gods; how such unnaturall actions did more displease the heavens than men, and that causelesse cruelty did seldome or never escape without revenge: he layd before his face that Egistus was his friend, a king, and one that was come into his kingdome to confirme a league of perpetuall amitie betwixt them; that he had and did shew him a most friendly countenance; how Egistus was not onely honoured of his owne people by obedience, but also loved of the Bohemians for his curtesie, and that if he now should without any just or manifest cause poyson him, it would not onely be a great dishonour to his majestie, and a meanes to sow perpetuall enmity between the Sycilians and the Bohemians, but also his owne subjects would repine at such treacherous cruelty. These and such like perswasions of Franion (for so was his cupbearer called) could no whit prevaile to dissuade him from his divellish enterprize, but remaining resolute in his determination (his fury so fired with rage as it could not be appeased with reason), he began with bitter taunts to take up his man, and to lay before him two bailes, preferment and death; saying that if he would poyson Egistus, he would advance him to high dignities; if he refused to doe it of an obstinate minde, no torture should be too great to requite his disobedience. Franion, seeing that to perswade Pandosto any more was but to strive against the streame, consented as soone as an opportunity would give him leave to dispatch Egistus; wherewith Pandosto remained somewhat satisfied, hoping now he should be fully revenged of such mistrusted injuries, intending also as soon as Egistus was dead to give his wife a sop of the same sawce, and so be rid of those which were the cause of his restles sorrow. — Die Flucht des Polixenes unter Camillo's Beistand findet sich in der Novelle ebenso.

A. 2, Sc. 1. Whereupon he began to imagine that Franion and his wife Bellaria had conspired with Egistus, and that the fervent affection shee bare him was the onely meanes of his secret departure: in so much that incensed with rage he commaundes that his wife should be carried straight to prison untill they heard further of his pleasure. The garde, unwilling to lay their hands on such a vertuous princesse and yet fearing the kings fury, went very sorrowfull to fulfill their charge. Comming to the queenes lodging they found her playing with her yong sonne Garinier, unto whom with teares doing the message, Bellaria, astonished at such a hard censure and finding her cleere conscience a sure advocate to pleade in her cause, went to the prison most willingly, where with sighes and teares shee past away the time till she might come to her triall.

But Pandosto, whose reason was suppressed with rage and whose unbridled follie was incensed with fury, seeing Franion had bewrayed his secrets, and that Egistus might well be rayled on, but not revenged, determined to wreake all his wrath on poore Bellaria. He therefore caused a generall proclamation to be made through all his realme that the Queene and Egistus had, by the helpe of Franion, not onely committed most incestuous adultery, but also had conspired the kings death; whereupon the traitor Franion was fled away with Egistus, and Bellaria was most justly imprisoned. This proclamation being once blazed through the country, although the vertuous disposition of the queene did halfe discredit the contents, yet the suddaine and speedy passage of Egistus, and the secret departure of Franion, induced them (the circumstances thoroughly considered) to thinke that both the proclamation was true, and the king greatly injured: yet they pittied her case, as sorrowful that so good a lady should be crossed with such adverse fortune. But the king, whose restlesse rage would remit no pittie, thought that although he might sufficiently requite his wives falshood with the bitter plague of pinching penury, yet his minde should never be glutted with revenge till he might have fit time and opportunity to repay the trechery of Egistus with a totall injury. But a curst cow hath oftentimes short hornes, and a willing minde but a weake arme; for Pandosto, al hough he felt that revenge was a spurre to warre, and that envy alwaies proffereth steele, yet he saw that Egistus was not onely of great puissance and prowess to withstand him, but had also many kings of his alliance to ayde him, if neede should serve, for he married the Emperours daughter of Russia.

A. 2, Sc. 2 und 3. For Bellaria was brought to bed of a faire and beautifull daugh'er, which no sooner Pandosto heard, but he determined that both Bellaria and the young infant should be burnt with fire. His nobles hearing of the kings cruell sentence sought by perswasions to divert him from his bloodie determination, laying before his face the innocencie of the childe, and vertuous disposition of his wife, how she had continually loved and honoured him so tenderly that without due prooffe he could not, nor ought not to appeach her of that crime. And if she had faulted, yet it were more honourable to pardon with mercy then to punish with extremity, and more kingly to be commended of pittie than accused of rigour: and as for the childe, if he should punish it for the mothers offence, it were to strive against nature and justice; and that unnatural actions doe more offend the gods then men; how causelesse cruelty, nor innocent blood never scapes without revenge. These and such like reasons could not appease his rage, but he rested resolute in this, that Bellaria being an adultresse the childe was a bastard, and he would not suffer that such an infamous brat should call him father. Yet at last (seeing his noble men were importunate upon him) he was content to spare the childe's life, and yet to put it to a worse death. For he found out this devise, that seeing (as he thought) it came by fortune, so he would commit it to the charge of fortune, and therefore caused a little cock-boat to be provided, wherein he meant to put the babe, and then send it to the mercies of the seas and the destenies. From this his peeres in no wise could perswade him, but that he sent presently two of his guard to fetch the childe; who being come to the prison, and with weeping teares recounting their maisters message, Bellaria no sooner heard the rigorous resolution of her mercilesse husband, but she fell downe in a swoond, so that all thought she had bin dead: yet at last being come to her selfe, shee cryed and screeched out in this wise.

Alas, sweete infortunate babe, scarce borne, before envied by fortune! would the day of thy birth had beene the terme of thy life; then shouldest thou have made an ende to care and prevented thy fathers rigour. Thy faults cannot yet deserve such hatefull revenge; thy dayes are too short for so sharpe a doome, but thy untimely death must pay thy mothers debts, and her guiltlesse crime must bee thy gastly curse. And shalt thou, sweete babe, be committed to fortune, when thou art already spited by fortune? Shall the seas be thy harbour and the hard boate thy cradle? Shall thy tender mouth, in steede of sweete kisses, be nipped with bitter stormes? Shalt thou have the whistling windes for thy lullabie, and the salt sea fome in steede of sweete milke? Alas, what destinies would assigne such hard hap? What father would be so cruell, or what gods will not revenge such rigor? Let me kisse thy lippes (sweete infant) and wet thy tender cheekes with my teares, and put this chayne about thy little necke, that if fortune save thee, it may helpe to succour thee. Thus, since thou must goe to surge in the gastfull seas, with a sorrowfull kisse I bid thee farewell, and I pray the gods thou maist fare well.

Such, and so great was her grieve, that her vitall spirits being suppressed with sorrow, she fell againe downe into a trance, having her sences so sotted with care that after shee was revived yet shee lost her memorie, and lay for a great time without moving, as one in a trance. The guard left her in this perplexitie, and carried the child to the king, who quite devoide of pity commanded that without delay it should bee put in the boat, having neither saile nor rudder to guid it, and so to be carried into the midst of the sea, and there left to the wind and wave as the destinies please to appoint. The very ship-men, seeing the sweete countenance of the yong babe, began to accuse the king of rigor, and to pity the child's hard fortune; but feare constrayned them to that which their nature did abhorre, so that they placed it in one of the ends of the boat, and with a few greene bows made a homely cabben to shrowd it as they could from wind and weather. Having thus trimmed the boat they tied it to a ship and so haled it into the mayne sea, and then cut in sunder the coarde; which they had no sooner done, but there arose a mighty tempest, which tossed the little boate so vehemently in the waves that the shipmen thought it could not continue long without sincking; yea, the storme grewe so great, that with much labour and perill they got to the shoare.

A. 3, Sc. 1 und 2. But leaving the childe to her fortunes, againe to Pandosto, who not yet glutted with sufficient revenge devised which way he should best increase his wives calamitie. But first assembling his nobles and counsellors, hee called her for the more reproch into open court, where it was objected against her that she had committed adulterie with Egistus, and conspired with Franion to poyson Pandosto her husband, but their pretence being partely spyed, she counselled them to flie away by night for their better safety. Bellaria, who standing like a prisoner at the barre, feeling in her selfe a cleare conscience to withstand her false accusers, seeing that no lesse than death could pacifie her husbands wrath, waxed bolde and desired that she might have lawe and justice, for mercy shee neyther craved nor hoped for; and that those perjured wretches which had falsely accused her to the king might be brought before her face to give in evidence. But Pandosto, whose rage and jealousie was such as no reason nor equitie could appease, tolde her, that for her accusers they were of such credite as their wordes were sufficient witnesse, and that the sodaine and secret flight of Egistus and Franion confirmed that which they had confessed; and as for her, it was her parte to deny such a monstrous crime, and to be impudent in forswearing the fact, since shee had past all shame in committing the fault: but her stale countenaunce should stand for no coyne, for as the bastard which she bare was served, so she should with some cruell death be requited. Bellaria, no whit dismayed with this rough reply, tolde her husband Pandosto that he spake upon choller and not conscience, for her vertuous life had beene ever such as no spot of suspicion could ever staine. And if she had borne a frendly countenaunce to Egistus, it was in respect he was his friende, and not for any lusting affection; therefore, if she were condemned without any further prooffe it was rigour and not law.

The noble men which sate in judgement said that Bellaria spake reason, and intreated the king that the accusers might be openly examined and sworne, and if then the evidence were such as the jury might finde her guilty, (for seeing she was a prince she ought to be tryed by her peeres) then let her have such punishment as the extremitie of the law will assigne to such malefactors. The king presently made answer that in this case he might and would dispence with the law, and that the jury being once panneld they should take his word for sufficient evidence otherwise he would make the proudest of them repent it. The noble men seeing the king in choler were all whist; but Bellaria, whose life then hung in the ballaunce, fearing more perpetuall infamie then momentarie death, tolde the king if his furie might stand for a law that it were vaine to have the jury yeeld their verdic; and therefore she fell downe upon her knees, and desired the king that for the love he bare to his young sonne Garinter, whome she brought into the world, that hee woulde graunt her a request; which was this, that it would please his majestie to send sixe of his noble men whome he best trusted to the Isle of Delphos, there to enquire of the oracle of Apollo whether she had committed adultery with Egistus, or conspired to poyson him with Franion? and if the god Apollo, who by his devine essence knew al secrets, gave answer that she was guiltie, she were content to suffer any torment were it never so terrible. The request was so reasonable that Pandosto could not for shame deny it, unlesse he would bee counted of all his subjects more wilfull than wise: he therefore agreed that with as much speede as might be there should be certaine Embassadors dispatched to the Ile of Delphos, and in the meane season he commanded that his wife should be kept in close prison.

Bellaria having obtained this graunt was now more carefull for her little babe that floated on the seas then sorrowful for her owne mishap, for of that she doubted: of her selfe shee was assured, knowing if Apollo should give oracle according to the thoughts of the hart, yet the sentence should goe on her side, such was the clearenes of her minde in this case. But Pandosto (whose suspitious head still remained in one song) chose out six of his nobility whom hee knew were scarce indifferent men in the queenes behalfe, and providing all things fit for their journey sent them to Delphos: they willing to fulfill the kinges commaund, and desirous to see the situation and custome of the iland, dispatched their affaires with as much speede as might be, and embarked themselves to this voyage, which (the wind and weather serving fit for their purpose) was soone ended. For within three weekes they arrived at Delphos, where they were no sooner set on lande but with great devotion they went to the temple of Apollo, and there offering sacrifice to the God and giftes to the priest, as the custome was, they humbly craved an aunswere of their demaund. They had not long kneeled at the altar, but Apollo with a loude voice saide: Bohemians, what you finde behinde the altar take and depart. They forthwith obeying the oracle founde a scroule of parchment, wherein was written these words in letters of golde, —

THE ORACLE.

SUSPITION IS NO PROOFE: JEALOUSIE IS AN UNEQUALL JUDGE: BELLARIA IS CHAST; EGISTUS BLAMELESSE: FRANION
A TRUE SUBJECT; PANDOSTO TREACHEROUS: HIS BABE INNOCENT, AND THE KING SHALL LIVE WITHOUT AN HEIRE,
IF THAT WHICH IS LOST BE NOT FOUNDE.

As soone as they had taken out this scroule the priest of the God commaunded them that they should not presume to read it before they came in the presence of Pandosto, unlesse they would incurre the displeasure of Apollo. The Bohemian lords carefully obeying his commaund, taking their leave of the priest with great reverence, departed out of the temple, and went to their ships, and as soon as wind would permit them sailed toward Bohemia, whither in short time they safely arrived; and with great triumph issuing out of their ships went to the kinges pallace, whom they found in his chamber accompanied with other noble men. Pandosto no sooner saw them but with a merrie countenance he welcomed them home, asking what newes? they told his majestie that they had received an aunswere of the God written in a scroule, but with this charge, that they should not reade the contents before they came in the presence of the king, and with that they delivered him the parchment: but his noble men entreated him that, sith therein was containd either the safetie of his wives life and honesty or her death and perpetuall infamy, that he would have his nobles and commons assembled in the judgment hall, where the queene, brought in as prysoner, should heare the contents. If shee were found guilty by the oracle of the God, then all should have cause to thinke his rigour proceeded of due desert: if her grace were found faultlesse, then shee should bee cleared before all, sith she had been accused openly. This pleased the king so, that he appointed the day, and assembled al his lords and commons, and caused the queene to be brought in before the judgements seate, commaunding that the inditement shoulde bee read wherein she was accused of adultery with Egistus and of conspiracy with Franion. Bellaria hearing the contentes was no whit astonished, but made this chearefull aunswer: —

If the devine powers bee privy to humane actions (as no doubt they are) I hope my patience shall make fortune blushe, and my unspotted life shall staine spightful discredit. For although lying report hath sought to appeach mine honor, and suspition hath intended to soyle my credit with infamie, yet where vertue keepeth the forte, report and suspition may assaile, but never sack: how I have led my life before Egistus comming, I appeale, Pandosto, to the gods and to thy conscience. What hath passed betwixt him and me, the gods onely know, and I hope will presently reveale: that I loved Egistus I can not denie; that I honored him I shame not to confesse: to the one I was forced by his vertues, to the other for his dignities. But as touching lascivious lust, I say Egistus is honest, and hope my selfe to be found without spot: for Franion, I can neither accuse him nor excuse him, for I was not privie to his departure; and that this is true which I have heere rehearsed I referre myselfe to the devine oracle.

Bellaria had no sooner sayd but the king commaunded that one of his dukes should reade the contentes of the scroule, which after the commons had heard they gave a great shout rejoycing and clapping their hands that the queene was cleare of that false accusation. But the king, whose conscience was a witnessse against him of his witlesse furie and false suspected jealousie, was so ashamed of his rashe folly that he entreated his nobles to perswade Bellaria to forgive and forget these injuries: promising not onely to shew himselfe a loyall and loving husband, but also to reconcile himselfe to Egistus and Franion; revealing then before them all the cause of their secrete flighte, and how treacherously hee thought to have practised his death, if the good minde of his cupbearer had not prevented his purpose. As thus he was relating the whole ma'ter, there was worde brought him that his young sonne Garinter was sodainly dead, which newes so soone as Bellaria heard, surcharged before with extreame joy and now suppressed with heavie sorrowe, her vitall spirites were so stopped that she fell downe presently dead, and could never be revived. This sodaine sight so appalled the kinges senses, that he sanck from his seate in a sound, so as he was sayne to be carried by his nobles to his pallace, where hee lay by the space of three dayes without speache. His commons were, as men in dispaire, diversly distressed: there was nothing but mourning and lamentation to be heard throughout al Bohemia: their young prince dead, their vertuous queene bereaved of her life, and their king and soveraigne in great hazard. This tragicall discourse of fortune so daunted them, as they went like shadowes, not men; yet somewhat to comfort their heavie hearts, they heard that Pandosto was come to himselfe, and had recovered his speache, who as in a fury brayed out these bitter speeches:

O miserable Pandosto! what surer wnesse then conscience? what thoughts more sower then suspicion? what plague more bad then jealousie? unnaturall actions offend the gods more than men, and causelesse crueltie never scapes without revenge. I have committed such a bloudy fact, as repent I may, but recall I cannot. Ah, jealousie! a hell to the minde, and a horror to the conscience, suppressing reason, and inciting rage; a worse passion than phrensie, a greater plague than madnesse. Are the gods just? then let them revenge such brutishe crueltie. My innocent babe I have drowned in the seas; my loving wife I have slaine with slaunderous suspition; my trusty friend I have sought to betray, and yet the gods are slack to plague such offences. Ah, unjust Apollo! Pandosto is the man that hath committed the faulte, why should Garinter, seely childe, abide the paine? Well, sith the gods meane to prolong my dayes to increase my dolour, I will offer my guiltie bloud a sacrifice to those sackles soules whose lives are lost by my rigorous folly.

And with that he reached at a rapier to have murdered himselfe, but his peeres being present stayed him from such a bloudy acte, perswading him to think that the commonwealth consisted on his safetie, and that those sheepe could not but perish that wanted a shepheard; wishing that if hee would not live for himselfe, yet he should have care of his subjects, and to put such fancies out of his minde, sith in sores past help salves doe not heale but hurt, and in thinges past cure, care is a corrosive. With these and such like perswasions the kinge was overcome, and began somewhat to quiet his minde; so that as soone as he could goe abroad hee caused his wife to bee embalmed, and wrapt in lead with her young sonne Garinter; erecting a rich and famous sepulchre wherein hee intombed them both, making such solemne obsequies at her funeral as al Bohemia might perceiue he did greatly repent him of his forepassed folly; causing this epitaph to be ingraven on her tombe in letters of golde: —

THE EPITAPH.

HERE LYES ENTOMBEDE BELLARIA FAIRE,
FALSLY ACCUSED TO BE UNCHASTE:
CLEARED BY APOLLOS SACRED DOOME,
YET SLAINE BY JEALOUSIE AT LAST.
WHAT ERE THOU BE THAT PASSEST BY,
CURSSE HIM THAT CAUSDE THIS QUEENE TO DIE.

This epitaph being ingraven, Pandosto would once a day repaire to the tombe, and there with watty plaintes bewaile his misfortune, coveting no o'ther companion but sorrowe, nor no other harmonie but repentance.

A. 3, Sc. 3. But leaving him to his dolorous passions, at last let us come to shewe the tragicall discourse of the young infant. Who beeing tossed with winde and wave floated two whole daies without succour, readie at every puffe to bee drowned in the sea, till at last the tempest ceased and the little boate was driven with the tyde into the coast of Syccilia, where sticking uppon the sandes it rested. Fortune minding to be wanton, willing to shewe that as she hath wrinckles on her browes so shee hath dimples in her cheekes, thought after so many sower lookes to lend a fayned smile, and after a puffing storme to bring a pretty calme, shee began thus to dally. It fortun'd a poore mercenary shepheard that dwelled in Syccilia, who got his living by other mens flockes, missed one of his sheepe, and thinking it had strayed into the covert that was hard by, sought very diligently to find that which he could not see, fearing either that the wolves or eagles had undone him (for he was so poore as a sheepe was halfe his substaunce), wandered downe toward the sea cliffes to see if perchaunce the sheepe was browsing on the sea ivy, whereon they greatly doe feede; but not finding her there, as he was ready to returne to his flocke hee heard a child crie, but knowing there was no house nere, he thought he had mistaken the sound and that it was the bleatynge of his sheepe. Wherefore looking more narrowly, as he cast his eye to the sea he spyed a little boate, from whence, as he attentively listened, he might heare the cry to come. Standing a good while in a maze, at last he went to the shoare, and wading to the boate, as he looked in he saw the little babe lying al alone ready to die for hunger and colde, wrapped in a mantle of scarlet richely imbrodered with golde, and having a chayne about the necke. The sheepeheard, who before had never seene so faire a babe nor so riche jewels, thought assuredly that it was some little god, and began with great devocion to knock on his breast. The babe, who wrythed with the head to seeke for the pap, began againe to cry a fresh, whereby the poore man knew that it was a childe, which by some sinister meanes was driven thither by distresse of weather; marvailing how such a seely infant, which by the mantle and the chayne could not be but borne of noble parentage, should be so hardly crossed with deadly mishap. The poore shepheard, perplexed thus with divers thoughts, tooke pittie of the childe, and determined with himselfe to carry it to the king, that there it might be brought up according to the worthinesse of birth, for his ability could not afforde to foster it, though his good minde was willing to further it. Taking therefore the chylde in his armes, as he foulded the mantle together the better to defende it from colde there fell downe at his foote a very faire and riche purse, wherein he founde a great summe of golde; which sight so revived the shepheard's spirits, as he was greatly ravished with joy and daunted with feare; joyfull to see such a summe in his power, and feareful if it should be knowne that it might breede his further daunger.

In den beiden letzten Acten weicht Shakspeare mehr als in den drei ersten von der Novelle ab. Die erste Begegnung der Liebenden schildert Greene so: It happened not long after this that there was a meeting of all the farmers daughters in Syccilia, whither Fawnia was also bidden as the mistres of the feast, who having attired her selfe in her best garments, went among the rest of her companions to the merry meeting, there spending the day in such homely pastimes as shepheards use. As the evening grew on and their sportes ceased, ech taking their leave at other, Fawnia, desiring one of her companions to beare her companie, went home by the flocke to see if they were well folded, and as they returned it fortunied that Dorastus (who all that daye had bene hawking, and kilde store of game) incountred by the way these two mayds, and casting his eye sodenly on Fawnia he was halfe afraid, fearing that with Acteon he had seene Diana; for he thought such exquisite perfection could not be founde in any mortall creature. As thus he stoode in a maze one of his pages told him that the maide with the garland on her head was Fawnia, the faire shepheard whose beauty was so much talked of in the court. Dorastus, desirous to see if nature had adorned her minde with any inward qualities, as she had decked her body with outward shape, began to question with her whose daughter she was, of what age, and how she had bin trained up? who answered him with such modest reverence and sharpnesse of witte, that Dorastus thought her outward beautie was but a counterfai to darken her inward qualities, wondring how so courtly behaviour could be found in so simple a cottage, and cursing fortune. As thus he held her a long while with chat, beauty seeing him at discover thought not to lose the vantage, but strooke him so deeply with an invenomed shafte, as he wholly lost his libertie, and became a slave to love, which before contemned love, glad now to gaze on a poore shepheard, who before refused the offer of a riche princesse; for the perfection of Fawnia had so fired his fancie as he felt his minde greatly chaunged, and his affections altered, cursing love that had wrought such a chaunge, and blaming the basenesse of his mind that would make such a choice; but thinking that these were but passionat toies that might be thrust out at pleasure, to avoid the syren that inchaunted him he put spurs to his horse, and bad this faire shepheard farwell.

Fawnia (who all this while had marked the princely gesture of Dorastus) seeing his face so wel featured, and each lim so perfectly framed, began greatly to praise his perfection, commending him so long till she found her selfe faultie, and perceived, that if she waded but a little further she might slippe over her shooes: shee therefore, seeking to quench that fier which never was put out, went home and faining her selfe not well at ease got her to bed; where casting a thousand thoughts in her head she could take no rest: for if she waked, she began to call to minde his beautie, and thinking to beguile such thoughts with sleepe, she then dreamed of his perfection. Pestered thus with these unacquained passions, she passed the night as she could in short slumbers. — Auch folgender Monolog des als Schäfer verkleideten Prinzen ist stellenweise von Shakspeare benutzt: Well, said Dorastus, thou keepest a right decorum; base desires and homely attires: thy thoughts are fit for none but a shepheard, and thy apparel such as only becomes a shepheard. A strange change from a prince to a peasant! what, is it thy wretched fortune or thy wilful folly? Is it thy cursed destinies, or thy crooked desires that appointeth thee this penance? Ah, Dorastus, thou canst but love, thou art like to perish for love. Yet, fond foole, choose flowers, not weedes; diamonds, not peables; ladies which may honor thee not shepheards which may disgrace thee. Venus is painted in silkes, not in ragges; and Cupid treadeth on disdain when he reacheth at dignitie. And yet, Dorastus, shame not at thy shepheards weede: the heavenly godes have sometime earthly thoughtes. Neptune became a ram, Jupiter a bul, Apollo a shepheard: they gods, and yet in love; and thou a man appointed to love.

Dorastus und Fawnia fliehen, ohne dass der königliche Vater ihre Liebe vorher entdeckt hätte. — Der alte Schäfer, welcher bei dem Egistus sich über dessen Sohn Dorastus beklagen will, wird durch Dorastus' Diener Capnio auf das Schiff gebracht, das die Liebenden aus Sicilien wegführen soll. So erfährt Egistus erst durch die Frau des Schäfers von der Flucht seines Sohnes mit der Fawnia; er sendet ihnen Boten nach, welche die Beiden in Böhmen finden. Dort lebt Dorastus als unbekannter Ritter mit der Fawnia, in welche der König Pandosto sich verliebt, und vergebens um ihre Gunst, die er als Tochter nicht erkennt, sich bewirbt. Die Entdeckung wird endlich in folgender Weise herbeigeführt: Pandosto commaunded that Fawnia, Porrus, and Capnio, should bee brought to his presence; who were no sooner come, but Pandosto, having his former love turned to a disdainful hate, began to rage against Fawnia in these tearmes.

Thou disdainfull vassal, thou currish kite, assigned by the destinies to base fortune, and yet with an aspiring minde gazing after honor, how durst thou presume, being a beggar, to match with a prince? by thy alluring lookes to inchant the sonne of a king to leave his owne countrie to fulfill thy disordinate lusts? O despightfull minde! a proud heart in a beggar is not unlike to a great fire in a smal cottage, which warmeth not the house, but burneth it: assure thy selfe that thou shalt die. And thou, old doating foole, whose follie hath bene such as to suffer thy daughter to reach above thy fortune, looke for no other meede but the like punishment. But Capnio, thou which hast betrayed the king, and hast consented to the unlawfull lust of thy lord and maister, I know not how justly I may plague thee: death is too easie a punishment for thy falsehood, and to live (if not in extreme miserie) were not to shew thee equitie. I therefore award that thou shalt have thine eyes put out, and continually while thou diest, grinde in a mil like a brute beast. The feare of death brought a sorrowfull silence upon Fawnia and Capnio, but Porrus seeing no hope of life burst forth into these speeches.

Pandosto, and ye noble embassadours of Sicilia, seeing without cause I am condemned to die, I am yet glad I have opportunitie to disburden my conscience before my death. I will tel you as much as I know, and yet no more than is true. Whereas I am accused that I have bene a supporter of Fawnias pride, and shee disdained as a vilde begger, so it is, that I am neither jasher unto her, nor she daughter unto me. For so it happened, that I beeing a poore shepheard in Sicilia, living by keeping other mens flockes, one of my sheepe straying downe to the sea side, as I went to seeke her, I saw a little boat driven upon the shoare, wherein I found a babe of sixe daies olde, wrapped in a mantle of skarlet, having about the necke this chaine. I pittying the child, and desirous of the treasure, carried it home to my wife, who with great care nursed it up and set it to keepe sheepe. Heere is the chaine and the jewels, and this Fawnia is the childe whome I found in the boate. What shee is, or of what parentage I knowe not, but this I am assured that shee is none of mine.

Pandosto would scarce suffer him to tell out his tale, but that he enquired the time of the yeere, the manner of the boate and other circumstaunces; which when he found agreeing to his count he sodainelie leapt from his seate and kissed Fawnia, wetting her tender cheeks with his teares, and crying, my daughter Fawnia! ah sweete Fawnia! I am thy father, Fawnia. This sodaine passion of the king had brea'hed himselve a while in this newe joy, hee rehearsed before the embassadours the whole matter, how hee had entreated his wife Bellaria for jealousie, and that this was the childe whome hee had sent to floate in the seas.

Fawnia was not more joyfull that she had found such a father, then Dorastus was glad he should get such a wife. The embassadors rejoyced that their yong prince had made such a choice, that those kingdomes, which through enmitie had long time been dissevered, should now through perpetual amitie be united and reconciled. The citizens and subjects of Bohemia (hearing that the king had found againe his daughter, which was supposed dead, joyfull that there was an heire apparent to his kingdome) made bonfires and shoves throughout the cittie. The courriers and knights appointed justs and turneis to signifie their willing mindes in gratifying the kings hap.

Eightene daies being past in these princely sports, Pandosto, willing to recompence old Porrus, of a shepheard made him a knight; which done, providing a sufficient navie to receive him and his retinue, accompanied with Dorastus, Fawnia, and the Sicilian embassadours, he sailed towards Sicilia, where he was most princelie entertained by Egistus; who hearing this most comicall event, rejoyced greatly at his sonnes good happe, and without delay (to the perpetuall joy of the two yong lovers) celebrated the marriage; which was no sooner ended, but Pandosto (calling to mind how first he betraied his friend Egistus, how his jealousie was the cause of Bellarias death, that contrarie to the law of nature hee had lusted after his owne daughter) moved with these desperate thoughts, he fell into a melancholie fit, and to close up the comedie with a tragicall stratageme, hee slewe himselve; whose death being many daies bewailed of Fawnia, Dorastus, and his deere friend Egistus, Dorastus, taking his leave of his father, went with his wife and the dead corps into Bohemia, where after they were sumptuouslie intoombed, Dorastus ended his daies in contented quiet.

ACT I.

SCENE I.

Sicilia. An Antechamber in LEONTES' Palace.

Enter CAMILLO and ARCHIDAMUS.

Arch. If you shall chance, Camillo, to visit Bohemia, on the like occasion whereon my services are now on foot,¹ you shall see, as I have said, great difference betwixt our Bohemia and your Sicilia.

Cam. I think, this coming summer, the king of Sicilia means to pay Bohemia² the visitation which he justly owes him.

Arch. Wherein our entertainment shall shame us, we will be justified in our loves:³ for, indeed, —

Cam. 'Beseech you, —

Arch. Verily, I speak it in the freedom of my knowledge:⁴ we cannot with such magnificence — in so rare⁵ — I know not what to say. — We will give you sleepy drinks,⁶ that your senses, unintelligent of our insufficiency, may, though they cannot praise us, as little accuse us.

Cam. You pay a great deal too dear for what's given freely.

Arch. Believe me, I speak as my understanding instructs me, and as mine honesty puts it to utterance.

Cam. Sicilia⁷ cannot show himself over-kind to Bohemia. They were trained together in their childhoods; and there rooted betwixt them then such an affection, which cannot choose but branch now. Since their more mature dignities, and royal necessities,⁸ made separation of their society, their encounters, though not personal, have been royally attorney'd,⁹ with interchange of gifts, letters, loving embassies, that they have seemed to be together, though absent, shook hands, as over a vast,¹⁰ and embraced, as it were, from the ends of opposed winds. The heavens continue their loves!

Arch. I think, there is not in the world either malice, or matter, to alter it.¹¹ You have an unspeakable comfort of your young prince Mamillius: it is a gentleman of the greatest promise that ever came into my note.

Cam. I very well agree with you in the hopes of him. It is a gallant child; one that, indeed, physics the subject,¹² makes old hearts fresh: they that went on crutches ere he was born, desire yet their life to see him a man.

Arch. Would they else be content to die?

Cam. Yes; if there were no other excuse why they should desire to live.

Arch. If the king had no son, they would desire to live on crutches till he had one. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The Same. A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter LEONTES, POLIXENES, HERMIONE, MAMILLIUS, CAMILLO, and Attendants.

Pol. Nine changes of the watery star have been¹
The shepherd's note, since we have left our throne
Without a burden: time as long again
Would be fill'd up, my brother, with our thanks;
And yet we should for perpetuity
Go hence in debt: and therefore, like a cipher,
Yet standing in rich place,² I multiply
With one »We thank you« many thousands more
That go before it.

Leon. Stay your thanks awhile,
And pay them when you part.

Pol. Sir, that's to-morrow.
I am question'd by my fears, of what may chance,
Or breed upon our absence; that may blow
No sneaping winds at home, to make us say:
»This is put forth too truly!«³ Besides, I have stay'd
To tire your royalty.

Leon. We are tougher, brother,
Than you can put us to 't.

Pol. No longer stay.

Leon. One sevensnight longer.

Pol. Very sooth, to-morrow.

Leon. We'll part the time between's then; and in that
I'll no gainsaying.

Pol. Press me not, 'beseech you, so.
There is no tongue that moves, none, none i' the world,
So soon as yours, could win me: so it should now,
Were there necessity in your request, although
'T were needful I denied it. My affairs
Do even drag me homeward; which to hinder,
Were in your love a whip to me, my stay
To you a charge, and trouble: to save both,
Farewell, our brother.

Leon. Tongue-tied, our queen? speak you.

Her. I had thought, Sir, to have held my peace, until You had drawn oaths from him, not to stay. You, Sir,
Charge him too coldly: tell him, you are sure
All in Bohemia's well: this satisfaction

The by-gone day proclaim'd. Say this to him,
He's beat from his best ward.

Leon. Well said, Hermione.

Her. To tell he longs to see his son were strong:
But let him say so then, and let him go;
But let him swear so, and he shall not stay,
We'll thwack him hence with distaffs.⁴ —

[To POLIXENES.] Yet of your royal presence I'll adventure

The borrow of a week. When at Bohemia
You take my lord, I'll give him my commission,
To let him there a month behind the gest
Prefix'd for 's parting:⁵ yet, good deed,⁶ Leontes,
I love thee not a jar o' the clock behind
What lady she her lord.⁷ — You'll stay?

Pol. No, Madam.

Her. Nay, but you will?

Pol. I may not, verily.

Her. Verily!

You put me off with limber vows; but I,
Though you would seek to unsphere the stars with oaths,
Should yet say, »Sir, no going.« Verily,
You shall not go: a lady's »verily« is
As potent as a lord's. Will you go yet?
Force me to keep you as a prisoner,
Not like a guest: so you shall pay your fees,
When you depart, and save your thanks. How say you?
My prisoner, or my guest? by your dread »verily«,
One of them you shall be.

Pol. Your guest then, Madam:
To be your prisoner should import offending;
Which is for me less easy to commit,
Than you to punish.

Her. Not your gaoler then,
But your kind hostess. Come, I'll question you
Of my lord's tricks, and yours, when you were boys;
You were pretty lordings then.

Pol. We were, fair queen,
Two lads, that thought there was no more behind,
But such a day to-morrow as to-day,
And to be boy eternal.

Her. Was not my lord the verier wag o' the two?

Pol. We were as twinn'd lambs, that did frisk i' the sun,
And bleat the one at the other: what we chang'd,

1) hath been in der Fol., nach einer bei Sh. gewöhnlichen Attraction: der Schäfer hat den Mond, das wasseranziehende Gestirn, neunmal wechseln sehen; neun Monate sind vergangen. Als Beobachter solcher Himmelserscheinungen hat Sh. den Schäfer auch in K. Henry VI. Third Part (A. 2, Sc. 5) What time the shepherd, blowing of his nails, || Can neither call it perfect day, nor night. 2) Die Null, die an sich nichts bedeutet, doch an der rechten Stelle, d. h. hinter einer andern Ziffer, dieselbe reich macht, wird mit einem »Ich danke Euch« verglichen, das alle vorhergehenden Danksagungen vervielfältigt. 3) Mich beschäftigen meine Besorgnisse wegen dessen, was in Folge meiner Abwesenheit vorkommen oder sich vorbereiten mag, dass daheim böse Winde wehen mögen, welche mich dann eingestehen lassen, dass dies nur zu wahr sich offenbart, dass die Besorgnisse nur zu sehr eingetroffen sind. — that no sneaping winds etc. scheint von my fears abzuhängen, und daher auch die Negation zu erklären. — Andere beginnen mit that einen neuen Satz des Wunsches: Möchte doch nicht u. s. w. — Für truly wollte Hanmer early, Capell tardily lesen. 4) Selbst wir Weiber wollen ihn dann mit unsern Waffen, den Spinnrocken, von hier wegtreiben, wenn er als Motiv seiner Abreise die Sehnsucht nach seinem Sohne angeben kann. 5) Ich will ihn dann ermächtigen, dass Ihr ihn dort halten dürft einen Monat länger, als die für seine Abreise vorgeschriebene Reiseroute. — gest bezeichnet nicht nur das Verzeichniss der Nachtquartiere auf der Reise, sondern auch des Aufenthaltes auf jeder einzelnen Station. — to let him fassen die Hgg. als reflexives Verbum, ohne Beziehung auf Polixenes, im Sinne von to detain himself. 6) good deed = fürwahr, in der That. — Manche Hgg. lesen mit der zweiten Folioausg. good heed. 7) Ich bleibe in meiner Liebe zu Dir nicht um das geringste Zeitmass, um ein einzelnes Picken der Uhr, hinter der Liebe irgend einer Frau zu ihrem Manne zurück. — what lady she erklärt Grant White als Ellipse: welche Frau sie auch sein mag. Natürlicher fasst Staunton lady-she als Compositum = eine Frau, die eine Dame ist. — Collier setzt aus einer Correctur, die er in dem Egerton'schen

Was innocence for innocence; we knew not
The doctrine of ill-doing, nor dream'd⁸
That any did. Had we pursu'd that life,
And our weak spirits ne'er been higher rear'd
With stronger blood, we should have answer'd heaven
Boldly, »not guilty;« the imposition clear'd,
Hereditary ours.⁹

Her. By this we gather,
You have tripp'd since.

Pol. O! my most sacred lady,
Temptations have since then been born to 's; for
In those unfledg'd days was my wife a girl:
Your precious self had then not cross'd the eyes
Of my young playfellow.

Her. Grace to boot!¹⁰
Of this make no conclusion, lest you say,
Your queen and I are devils; yet, go on:
The offences we have made you do, we 'll answer;
If you first sinn'd with us, and that with us
You did continue fault, and that you slipp'd not
With any but with us.

Leon. Is he won yet?¹¹

Her. He 'll stay, my lord.

Leon. At my request he would not.
Hermione, my dearest, thou never spok'st
To better purpose.

Her. Never?

Leon. Never, but once.

Her. What? have I twice said well? when was 't before?
I pr'ythee, tell me. Cram 's with praise, and make 's
As fat as tame things:¹² one good deed, dying tongue-less,

Slaughters a thousand waiting upon that.
Our praises are our wages: you may ride 's
With one soft kiss a thousand furlongs, ere
With spur we heat¹³ an acre. But to the goal: —
My last good deed was to entreat his stay:

What was my first? it has an elder sister,
Or I mistake you: O, 'would her name were Grace!
But once before I spoke to the purpose: when?
Nay, let me have 't; I long.

Leon. Why, that was when
Three crabbed months had sour'd themselves to death,
Ere I could make thee open thy white hand,
And clap thyself my love:¹⁴ then didst thou utter,
»I am yours for ever.«

Her. 'T is Grace, indeed.¹⁵ —
Why, lo you now, I have spoke to the purpose twice:
The one for ever earn'd a royal husband,
The other for some while a friend.

[Giving her hand to POLIXENES.¹⁶

Leon. [Aside.] Too hot, too hot!
To mingle friendship far is mingling bloods.
I have *tremor cordis*¹⁷ on me: — my heart dances,
But not for joy, not joy. — This entertainment
May a free face put on, derive a liberty
From heartiness, from bounty, fertile bosom,¹⁸
And well become the agent: 't may, I grant;
But to be paddling palms, and pinching fingers,
As now they are; and making practis'd smiles,
As in a looking-glass;¹⁹ — and then to sigh, as 't were
The mort o' the deer;²⁰ O! that is entertainment
My bosom likes not, nor my brows.²¹ — Mamillius,
Art thou my boy?

Mam. Ay, my good lord.

Leon. I fecks?²²
Why, that 's my bawcock. What! hast smutch'd thy nose? —

They say, it 's a copy out of mine. Come, captain,
We must be neat;²³ not neat, but cleanly, captain:
And yet the steer, the heifer, and the calf,
Are all call'd neat. — Still virginalling²⁴
Upon his palm? — How now, you wanton calf!²⁵
Art thou my calf?

Mam. Yes, if you will, my lord.

Lear (A. 2, Sc. 4) O, how this mother swells up toward my heart! || Hysterica passio! 18) Hammer änderte ohne Noth bounty's fertile bosom: diese Freundlichkeit der Hermione gegen Polixenes darf sich ein unbefangenes Ansehen geben und diese Unbefangenheit schöpfen aus Herzlichkeit, Güte und freigebig mittheilsamer Empfindung. 19) practis'd ist mit as in a looking-glass zu verbinden: sich gegenseitig anlächeln, wie wenn man das Lächeln vor einem Spiegel einstudirt. 20) Senfzen so melancholisch wie die Melodie, welche man auf der Jagd bei dem Fallen des Wildes auf dem Jagdhorn bläst. 21) brows = die Stirn, welche mit dem Horn des Hahnreis durch solche zuvorkommende Freundlichkeit der Hermione gegen den Polixenes bedroht ist. 22) i fecks entstellt aus i faith. 23) neat = rein, schmuck, in Bezug auf hast smutch'd thy nose, und dann im Wortspiel = Rind, wobei Leontes wieder an die Hörner denkt. Vgl. Anm. 21. 24) to virginal = auf dem Spinett spielen, die Tasten anschlagen, von dem substantivischen virginals. 25) Leontes knüpft wieder an seine vorhergehenden Worte an: And yet the steer etc. und denkt auch bei dem folgenden rough pash = unebene Stirn, und shoots = Sprossen, an die Hörner, welche

Leon. Thou want'st a rough pash, and the shoots that I have,
To be full²⁶ like me: — yet, they say, we are Almost as like as eggs; women say so,
That will say anything: but were they false
As o'er-dyed blacks,²⁷ as wind, as waters; false
As dice are to be wish'd, by one that fixes
No bourn²⁸ 'twixt his and mine; yet were it true
To say this boy were like me. — Come, sir page,
Look on me with your welkin eye:²⁹ sweet villain!
Most dear'st! my collop!³⁰ — Can thy dam? — may 't be? —

Affection! thy intention stabs the centre:³¹
Thou dost make possible things not so held,
Communicat'st with dreams; — (how can this be?) —
With what's unreal thou co-active art,
And fellow'st nothing.³² Then, 't is very credent,
Thou may'st co-join with something; and thou dost. —
And that beyond commission; and I find it,
And that to the infection of my brains,
And hardening of my brows.

Pol. What means Sicilia?

Her. He something seems unsettled.

Pol. How, my lord!

What cheer? how is 't with you, best brother?³³

Her. You look,

As if you held a brow of much distraction:
Are you mov'd, my lord?

Leon. No, in good earnest. —

How sometimes nature will betray its folly,
Its tenderness, and make itself a pastime
To harder bosoms!³⁴ Looking on the lines
Of my boy's face, methoughts I did recoil

Twenty-three years, and saw myself unbreech'd.
In my green velvet coat; my dagger muzzled,
Lest it should bite its master,³⁵ and so prove,
As ornaments oft do, too dangerous.
How like, methought, I then was to this kernel,
This squash,³⁶ this gentleman. — Mine honest friend,
Will you take eggs for money?³⁷

Mam. No, my lord, I'll fight.

Leon. You will? why, happy man be 's dole! — My brother,

Are you so fond of your young prince, as we Do seem to be of ours?

Pol. If at home, Sir,
He 's all my exercise, my mirth, my matter:
Now my sworn friend, and then mine enemy;
My parasite, my soldier, statesman, all.
He makes a July's day short as December;
And with his varying childness cures in me
Thoughts that would thicken my blood.

Leon. So stands this squire
Offic'd with me.³⁸ We two will walk, my lord,
And leave you to your graver steps.³⁹ — Hermione,
How thou lov'st us, show in our brother's welcome:
Let what is dear in Sicily, be cheap.
Next to thyself, and my young rover, he 's
Apparent to my heart.⁴⁰

Her. If you would seek us,
We are yours i' the garden: shall 's attend you there?

Leon. To your own bents dispose you: you 'll be found,
Be you beneath the sky. — [Aside.] I am angling now,
Though you perceive me not how I give line.
Go to, go to!
How she holds up the neb,⁴¹ the bill to him;

das Kalb noch nicht besitzt, wohl aber er als Hahnrei. 26) full = ganz und gar. 27) o'er-dyed blacks scheint nach einer Sh.'schen Ideenassociation die nur äusserlich aufgetragene, übertünchte Trauer zu bezeichnen. Andere erklären = Trauerzeug, dessen ursprüngliche schwarze Farbe durch eine andere aufgetragene hindurchscheint. Mit einer Deutung Hanmer's: blacks dyed too much, and therefore rotten stimmt eine Conjectur Staunton's überein: oft-dyed blacks, was auch in Webster's Dutchess of Malfi vorkommt. 28) bound = Scheidegrenze. 29) welkin eye = ein Auge blau wie der Himmel. 30) So in K. Henry VI. First Part (A. 5, Sc. 4) God knows, thou art a collop of my flesh. 31) Nachdem Leontes sich die Frage vorgelegt, ob Hermione wirklich ihm untreu sein könne (Can thy dam? — may 't be?), antwortet er mit einer Apostrophe an die Leidenschaft des Affects, deren Streben bis in den Mittelpunkt, das Herz, vernichtend eindringen könne und Dinge möglich mache, die man sonst nicht für möglich halten sollte, wie die Untreue der Hermione. — Die meisten Hgg. fassen affection hier als imagination = Einbildungskraft, und Andere verbinden sogar in diesem Sinne may 't be affection? 32) Du gesellst Dich einem Nichts zu. — Die Leidenschaft macht sogar aus einem Nichts Etwas. — Dem nothing steht in dem Folgenden something gegenüber: es ist also sehr glaublich, dass Du Dich zu einem Etwas gesellst, und zwar über die Berechtigung hinaus, in unerlaubter Weise. Leontes spricht auch hier von dem Liebesaffect, welcher die Hermione dem Polixenes entgegentreibt, und fügt dann hinzu: ich merke das, so dass mein Gehirn darunter leidet und meine Stirn hart wird von den mir aufgesetzten Hörnern. — credent für credible gebraucht Sh. auch in Measure for Measure (A. 4, Sc. 4) credent bulk. — Der Deutlichkeit wegen ist in der vorhergehenden Zeile co-active zu schreiben, wie in der folgenden co-join, um das Wort von coactive = zwingend, zu unterscheiden. Der Sinn ist: Du wirkst mit bei dem, was unwirklich ist. 33) Die Fol. theilt diese Zeile dem Leontes zu. Die Verbesserung rührt von Hanmer her. — Für How, my lord! vermuthet Dyce Ho, my lord! da die Fol. auch an andern Stellen how für ho setzt. 34) Diesen Satz will Staunton von Leontes beiseit gesprochen haben. — In der folgenden Zeile behalten auch die Cambridge Edd. und Dyce aus der Fol. methoughts bei, das sich neben methought öfter in der Fol. wie in andern alten Drucken findet. 35) Das Bild in muzzled und bite ist von einem Hunde, dem man einen Maulkorb anlegt. 36) squash = Knirps, eigentlich = unreife Bohne oder Erbse. So in Twelfth-Night (A. 1, Sc. 5) as a squash is before 't is a peascod. 37) to take eggs for money oder gewöhnlicher for his money = an Zahlungsstatt Eier annehmen, ist eine sprichwörtliche Redensart: sich leicht zufrieden stellen lassen, sich viel bieten lassen. — Eben so sprichwörtlich ist das folgende Happy man be his dole! = Möge ein glücklicher Mann sein Theil sein! Möge es ihm gut gehen! 38) Alle diese Verrichtungen (my sworn friend etc.) hat dieser Junker bei mir zu versehen. 39) your graver steps = Eure Schritte, die gemessener sind, als die meinigen mit meinem Knaben. — Vielleicht aber ist der Satz We two — — steps eine Rede der Hermione, welche mit dem Polixenes lustwandeln und ihren Gemahl seinen Staatsgeschäften überlassen will. 40) Er steht meinem Herzen als nächster Erbe nahe. So steht apparent in K. Henry VI. Third Part (A. 2, Sc. 2) I'll draw it as apparent to the crown. 41) neb =

And arms her with the boldness of a wife
To her allowing husband!⁴²

[Exeunt POLIXENES, HERMIONE, and Attendants.]

Gone already;⁴³

Inch-thick, knee-deep, o'er head and ears a fork'd one! —
Go play, boy, play; — thy mother plays, and I
Play too, but so disgrac'd a part, whose issue
Will hiss⁴⁴ me to my grave: contempt and clamour
Will be my knell. — Go play, boy, play. — There have been,

Or I am much deceiv'd, cuckolds ere now;
And many a man there is, (even at this present,⁴⁵
Now, while I speak this) holds his wife by the arm,
That little thinks she has been sluic'd in 's absence,
And his pond fish'd by his next neighbour,⁴⁶ by Sir Smile, his neighbour. Nay, there 's comfort in 't,
Whiles other men have gates, and those gates open'd,
As mine, against their will. Should all despair
That have revolted wives, the tenth of mankind
Would hang themselves. Physic for 't there is none:
It is a bawdy planet,⁴⁷ that will strike
Where 't is predominant; and 't is powerful, think it,
From east, west, north, and south: be it concluded,
No barricado for a belly: know 't;
It will let in and out the enemy,
With bag and baggage. Many a thousand on 's⁴⁸
Have the disease, and feel 't not. — How now, boy?

Mam. I am like you, they⁴⁹ say.

Leon. Why, that 's some comfort. —
What! Camillo there?

Cam. Ay, my good lord.

Leon. Go play, Mamillius; thou 'rt an honest man. —

[Exit MAMILLIUS.]

Camillo, this great sir will yet stay longer.

Cam. You had much ado to make his anchor hold:
When you cast out, it still came home.⁵⁰

Leon.

Didst note it?

Cam. He would not stay at your petitions; made
His business more material.⁵¹

Leon.

Didst perceive it? —

They 're here with me already;⁵² whispering, rounding,
»Sicilia is a — so-forth.« 'T is far gone,
When I shall gust⁵³ it last. — How came 't, Camillo,
That he did stay?

Cam.

At the good queen's entreaty.

Leon. At the queen's, be 't: good should be pertinent;
But so it is, it is not.⁵⁴ Was this taken
By any understanding pate but thine?

For thy conceit is soaking;⁵⁵ will draw in
More than the common blocks: — not noted, is 't,
But of the finer natures? by some severals,
Of head-piece extraordinary? lower messes,⁵⁶
Perchance, are to this business purblind: say.

Cam. Business, my lord? I think, most understand
Bohemia stays here longer.

Leon.

Ha?

Cam.

Stays here longer.

Leon. Ay, but why?

Cam. To satisfy your highness, and the entreaties
Of our most gracious mistress.

Leon.

Satisfy?

The entreaties of your mistress? — satisfy? —

Let that suffice. I have trusted thee, Camillo,
With all the nearest things to my heart, as well
My chamber-councils, wherein, priest-like, thou
Hast cleans'd my bosom:⁵⁷ I from thee departed
Thy penitent reform'd; but we have been Deceiv'd in thy integrity, deceiv'd
In that which seems so.⁵⁸

Cam.

Be it forbid, my lord!

Leon. To bide upon 't,⁵⁹ — thou art not honest; or,
If thou inclin'st that way, thou art a coward,

Schnabel, wie das folgende bill für Mund gebraucht. 42) a wife to her husband = eine Frau ihres Gatten wie sie sich bewehrt mit der Dreistigkeit eines Weibes, das einen zustimmenden, geduldigen Gatten hat. 43) gone already = es ist schon mit mir vorbei, ist mit dem Folgenden zu verbinden: ich stecke schon zolldick, knietief darin, bin ein Gehörnter über Kopf und Ohren. — In diesem Sinne steht forked vom Hahnrei auch in Othello (A. 3, Sc. 3) Even then this forked plague is fated to us, || When we do quicken. — Der Weggang des Polixenes u. s. w., der in der Fol. nicht bezeichnet ist, wäre vielleicht schon vorher, nach beneath the sky, zu setzen. 44) to hiss von dem Schauspieler, der in seiner Rolle ausgezischt wird; wie to play und a part. 45) present = Gegenwart. 46) Das Bild von einem Teiche, der abgelassen und dann ausgefischt wird, schwebte dem Dichter schon bei sluic'd vor, noch ehe his pond erwähnt ist. Aehnlich steht in Measure for Measure (A. 1, Sc. 2) But what 's his offence? — Groping for trouts in a peculiar river. — Sir Smile ist eine Personification, wie Sir Prudence in Tempest (A. 2, Sc. 1). 47) Wie hier die Kuppelei planetarischem Einflusse zugeschrieben wird, so das Versemachen in Much Ado about Nothing (A. 5, Sc. 2) I was not born under a rhyming planet. — Sonst haben die Planeten nur in einer bestimmten Stellung ihre Einwirkung auf die Menschen, aber dieser kupplerische Planet wirkt nach allen Seiten hin, aus jeder Himmelsgegend. 48) on 's für of us, was manche Hgg. dafür in den Text setzen. 49) they, das in der Fol. fehlt, supplirt die zweite Folioausg. von 1632. 50) Als Ihr den Anker auswarft, wollte er nicht festhaken, sondern kam unverrichteter Sache zurück; Eure Bemühung, den Polixenes zu längerem Bleiben zu bewegen, war vergeblich. 51) Als Ihr ihn batet, machte er das Geschäft, das ihn zur Abreise trieb, nur um so wesentlicher, dringlicher. 52) they 're here with me already ist nach Staunton's Erklärung eine familiäre Redeweise: die Leute machen schon das Zeichen des Hahnreis, wenn sie von mir sprechen. Vielleicht besagt es bloss: die Leute wissen bei mir schon Bescheid, wissen schon, wie es bei mir steht, und flüstern und raunen sich in's Ohr (rounding): der König von Sicilien ist ein — u. s. w. — so-forth steht für a cuckold oder etwas Aehnliches, was die Leute nicht geradezu aussprechen, sondern nur pantomimisch ausdrücken. 53) to gust = kosten, schmecken. 54) scil. it is not pertinent: die Sache verhält sich so, dass das Beiwort good zu queen nicht passend ist. 55) soaking wird erklärt durch will draw in: Dein Verstand zieht, wie ein Schwamm, in sich, fasst mehr auf als gemeine Klötze. 56) lower messes eigentlich = Leute, die bei Tisch einen niedrigen Platz bekommen oder an einer geringeren Tafel speisen, dann allgemein = Leute von niedrigem Range. 57) Leontes hat den Camillo sowohl mit den seinem Herzen am nächsten liegenden Dingen als auch mit seinen vertraulichsten Berathungen betraut, wie man sein Herz gegen einen Priester als Beichtvater ausschüttet. So in Macbeth (A. 5, Sc. 3) Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff, || Which weighs upon the heart. 58) scil. which seems

Which hoxes⁶⁰ honesty behind, restraining
From course requir'd; or else thou must be counted
A servant grafted in my serious trust,
And therein negligent; or else a fool,
That seest a game play'd home, the rich stake drawn,
And tak'st it all for jest.

Cam. My gracious lord,
I may be negligent, foolish, and fearful:
In every one of these no man is free,
But that his negligence, his folly, fear,
Amongst the infinite doings of the world,
Sometime puts forth.⁶¹ In your affairs, my lord,
If ever I were wilful-negligent,
It was my folly; if industriously
I play'd the fool, it was my negligence,
Not weighing well the end; if ever fearful
To do a thing, where I the issue doubted,
Whereof the execution did cry out
Against the non-performance,⁶² 't was a fear
Which oft infects⁶³ the wisest. These, my lord,
Are such allow'd infirmities, that honesty
Is never free of: but, 'beseech your grace,
Be plainer with me: let me know my trespass
By its⁶⁴ own visage; if I then deny it,
'T is none of mine.

Leon. Ha' not you seen, Camillo,
(But that 's past doubt; you have: or your eye-glass
Is thicker than a cuckold's horn) or heard,
(For, to a vision so apparent, rumour
Cannot be mute) or thought, (for cogitation
Resides not in that man that does not think)⁶⁵
My wife is slippery? If thou wilt confess,
(Or else be impudently negative,
To have nor⁶⁶ eyes, nor thought) then say
My wife 's a hobbyhorse,⁶⁷ deserves a name
As rank as any flax-wench, that puts to
Before her troth-plight: say 't, and justify 't.

Cam. I would not be a stander-by, to hear
My sovereign mistress clouded so, without

My present vengeance taken. 'Shrew my heart,
You never spoke what did become you less
Than this; which to reiterate, were sin
As deep as that, though true.⁶⁸

Leon. Is whispering nothing?
Is leaning cheek to cheek? is meeting noses?
Kissing with inside lip? stopping the career
Of laughter with a sigh? (a note infallible
Of breaking honesty) horsing foot on foot?
Skulking in corners? wishing clocks more swift?
Hours, minutes? noon, midnight? and all eyes
Blind with the pin and web,⁶⁹ but theirs, theirs only,
That⁷⁰ would unseen be wicked? is this nothing?
Why, then the world, and all that is in 't, is nothing;
The covering sky is nothing; Bohemia nothing;
My wife is nothing; nor nothing have these nothings,
If this be nothing.

Cam. Good my lord, be cur'd
Of this diseas'd opinion, and betimes;
For 't is most dangerous.

Leon. Say, it be; 't is true.⁷¹

Cam. No, no, my lord.

Leon. It is; you lie, you lie:
I say, thou liest, Camillo, and I hate thee;
Pronounce thee a gross lout, a mindless slave,
Or else a hovering temporizer;⁷² that
Canst with thine eyes at once see good and evil,
Inclining to them both: were my wife's liver
Infected as her life, she would not live
The running of one glass.⁷³

Cam. Who does infect her?

Leon. Why, he that wears her like her medal, hanging
About his neck,⁷⁴ Bohemia: who — if I
Had servants true about me, that bare eyes
To see alike mine honour as their profits,
Their own particular thrifts, they would do that
Which should undo more doing:⁷⁵ ay, and thou,
His cupbearer, — whom I from meaner form
Have bench'd, and rear'd to worship;⁷⁶ who may'st see thy integrity. 59) to bide upon 't = um dabei zu bleiben, um es noch einmal zu sagen. So in Beaumont und Fletcher's King and no King: Captain, thou art a valiant gentleman; || To abide upon 't, a very valiant man. 60) to hox = die Fersensehne abschneiden, lähmen. Die gewöhnliche Schreibweise ist to hocks. — honesty wird hier als ein Pferd gefasst, dem die Feigheit hinterlistig die Sehne zerschneidet und so die Kraft zum Rennen benimmt. 61) Kein Mensch ist so frei davon, dass seine Nachlässigkeit, Thorheit, Bangigkeit sich nicht in dem unendlichen Getriebe der Welt bisweilen zeigt. 62) Malone bemerkt mit Recht, dass Sh. entweder against the performance oder for the non-performance habe setzen müssen, und citirt andere Stellen, wo Sh. in ähnlicher Weise in der Häufung negirender Begriffe die Construction verwirrt hat. 63) Für infects der Fol. setzen manche Hgg. stillschweigend affects. 64) Staunton weist auf das häufigere Vorkommen von its, it's in der Fol. in diesem Drama, wofür in den meisten andern Sh.'schen Schauspielen gewöhnlich his steht, als auf ein Zeichen der späten Abfassung von Winter's Tale hin. 65) So die Fol.; Theobald think it. — think ist, an das vorhergehende or thought anknüpfend, mit dem Folgenden, obgleich durch ein Parenthesezeichen davon getrennt, in Sh.'s Constructionsweise zu verbinden. 66) nor verstärkt das vorhergehende negative: sonst musst Du unverschämt ableugnen, dass Du Augen, Ohren und Gedanken habest. 67) hobbyhorse = eine ausgelassene Person, wahrscheinlich von der so benannten stehenden Charaktermaske im Mohrentanze. — Die Fol. hat holy horse, was Rowe zuerst verbesserte. 68) Die Wiederholung Eurer Worte schon wäre eine Sünde so schwer wie die von Euch behauptete der Hermione, selbst wenn sie nicht bloss behauptet, sondern wahr wäre. 69) pin = Staar im Auge, web = Fell im Auge, zusammengefasst in der Bezeichnung cataract. — So in K. Lear (A. 3, Sc. 4) he gives the web and the pin. 70) that bezieht sich auf ein in theirs steckendes they. 71) Gesetzt auch, dass diese krankhafte Einbildung gefährlich sei, so ist sie doch wahr, begründet. 72) Ein schwankender Achselträger. — temporizer = der sich nach der Zeit richtet, bald so bald so handelt und redet. 73) So würde sie keine Stunde leben, nicht so lange leben, wie der Sand in einem Stundenglase läuft. — one gehört dem Sinne nach eher zu running als zu glass. — So in K. Henry VI. First Part (A. 4, Sc. 2) ere the glass, that now begins to run, || Finish the process of his sandy hour. 74) Polixenes hegt die Hermione, als ob es ein Bild, ein Medaillon von ihr wäre, das er am Halse trägt. — Manche Hgg. lesen his medal. 75) doing steht hier in obscönem Sinne, wie Sh. to do auch an andern Stellen gebraucht: die heimliche Wegräumung des Polixenes würde dem ferneren unkeuschen Verkehr

Plainly, as heaven sees earth, and earth sees heaven,
How I am galled, — mightst bespice a cup,
To give mine enemy a lasting wink;⁷⁷
Which draught to me were cordial.

Cam. Sir, my lord,
I could do this, and that with no rash potion,
But with a lingering dram, that should not work
Maliciously, like poison:⁷⁸ but I cannot Believe this crack to be in my dread mistress,
So sovereignly being honourable.
I have lov'd thee, —

Leon. Make that thy question, and go rot!⁷⁹
Dost think, I am so muddy, so unsettled,
To appoint myself in this vexation? sully
The purity and whiteness of my sheets, —
Which to preserve is sleep; which, being spotted,
Is goads, thorns, nettles, tails of wasps, —
Give⁸⁰ scandal to the blood o' the prince, my son,
(Who, I do think, is mine, and love as mine)
Without ripe moving to 't? Would I do this?
Could man so blench?⁸¹

Cam. I must believe you, Sir:
I do; and will fetch off Bohemia for 't;⁸²
Provided, that when he's remov'd, your highness
Will take again your queen, as yours at first,
Even for your son's sake; and thereby⁸³ for sealing
The injury of tongues, in courts and kingdoms
Known and allied to yours.

Leon. Thou dost advise me,
Even so as I mine own course have set down.
I'll give no blemish to her honour, none.

Cam. My lord,
Go then; and with a countenance as clear
As friendship wears at feasts, keep with Bohemia,
And with your queen. I am his cupbearer;
If from me he have wholesome beverage,
Account me not your servant.

Leon. This is all:
Do 't, and thou hast the one half of my heart;
Do 't not, thou splitt'st thine own.⁸⁴

Cam. I'll do 't, my lord.

Leon. I will seem friendly, as thou hast advis'd me.

[Exit.

Cam. O miserable lady! — But, for me,
What case stand I in? I must be the poisoner

Of good Polixenes; and my ground to do 't
Is the obedience to a master; one,
Who, in rebellion with himself, will have
All that are his, so too.⁸⁵ — To do this deed,
Promotion follows. If I could find example
Of thousands that had struck anointed kings,
And flourish'd after, I'd not do 't; but since
Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment, bears not one,
Let villany itself forswear 't.⁸⁶ I must Forsake the court: to do 't, or no, is certain
To me a break-neck. Happy star, reign now!
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter POLIXENES.

Pol. This is strange. Methinks,
My favour here begins to warp. Not speak? —
Good day, Camillo.

Cam. Hail, most royal Sir!

Pol. What is the news i' the court?

Cam. None rare, my lord.

Pol. The king hath on him such a countenance,
As he had lost some province, and a region
Lov'd as he loves himself: even now I met him
With customary compliment, when he,
Wafting his eyes to the contrary, and falling
A lip of much contempt,⁸⁷ speeds from me, and
So leaves me to consider what is breeding,
That changes thus his manners.

Cam. I dare not know, my lord.

Pol. How! dare not? do not! Do you know, and dare not

Be intelligent to me?⁸⁸ 'T is thereabouts;
For, to yourself, what you do know, you must,
And cannot say, you dare not. Good Camillo,
Your chang'd complexions are to me a mirror,
Which shows me mine chang'd too; for I must be A party in this alteration, finding Myself thus alter'd with 't.

Cam. There is a sickness
Which puts some of us in distemper; but I cannot name the disease, and it is caught
Of you, that yet are well.

Pol. How caught of me?
Make me not sighted like the basilisk:⁸⁹
I have look'd on thousands, who have sped the better

zwischen ihm und der Hermione ein Ende machen. 76) bench'd ist mit rear'd to worship zu verbinden und bezieht sich auf meaner form: ich habe Dich von einem niedrigeren Sitze zu einem andern, angeseheneren erhoben. — to bench = auf eine Bank setzen. Vgl. oben Anm. 56. 77) Du könntest einen Becher so würzen, dass mein Feind davon die Augen dauernd zumachte. — Derselbe Euphemismus für Tod kehrt wieder in Tempest (A. 2, Sc. 1) To the perpetual wink for aye might put || This ancient morsel. 78) Dem schnell wirkenden Gifte wird ein langsam zehrender Trunk ohne sichtliche schlimme Wirkung entgegengesetzt. — Wie hier rash potion, steht in K. Henry IV. Second Part (A. 4, Sc. 4) rash gunpowder. 79) Mit dieser Verwünschung unterbricht der ungeduldige König nicht die Ergebenheitsbetheurungen des Camillo, auf die er gar nicht hört, sondern dessen Zweifel an der Schuld der Königin: Wenn Du das, was so klar vor Augen liegt, noch bezweifeln, noch in Frage stellen willst, so magst Du zu Grunde gehen! 80) give ist wie sully dem vorhergehenden to appoint coordinirt. 81) to blench = abspringen, abirren vom rechten Wege. 82) Ich will deshalb den Polixenes wegschaffen. 83) thereby = daneben, ausserdem, bezieht sich auf for your son's sake: und auch um die bösen Zungen zum Schweigen zu bringen an Höfen und in Reichen, die mit Eurem Hof und Reich bekannt und verknüpft sind. 84) Thust Du es nicht, so bist Du selbst die Veranlassung, dass ich Dein Herz durchbohre. 85) scil. in rebellion with themselves. 86) Zu not one ist example zu suppliren, und forswear 't bezieht sich auf to do 't in I'd not do 't. 87) Indem er seine Augen nach der entgegengesetzten Seite richtete und die Lippe voll Verachtung hängen liess. — to fall = senken. 88) intelligent = die Kundschaft mittheilend, einverstanden mit Jemandem. — Darauf bezieht sich das Folgende: denn Euch selber müsst Ihr doch, was Ihr wisst, mittheilen, und könnt nicht sagen, dass Ihr es nicht dürft. 89) Sage nicht, dass mein Anblick tödte, wie der des Basilisken, versetzt Polixenes auf Camillo's Ausrede, dass die grassirende Krankheit von ihm ausgehe. 90) clerk-like experienc'd = voll Erfahrungs-Wissen wie ein

By my regard, but kill'd none so. Camillo, —
As you are certainly a gentleman; thereto
Clerk-like experienc'd,⁹⁰ which no less adorns
Our gentry than our parents' noble names,
In whose success we are gentle,⁹¹ — I beseech you,
'f you know aught which does behove my knowledge
Thereof to be inform'd, imprison 't not
In ignorant concealment.⁹²

Cam. I may not answer.

Pol. A sickness caught of me, and yet I well?
I must be answer'd. — Dost thou hear, Camillo,
I conjure thee, by all the parts of man
Which honour does acknowledge, — whereof the least
Is not this suit of mine, — that thou declare
What incidency thou dost guess of harm
Is creeping toward me; how far off, how near;
Which way to be prevented, if to be:⁹³
If not, how best to bear it.

Cam. Sir, I will tell you;
Since I am charg'd in honour, and by him
That I think honourable. Therefore, mark my counsel.
Which must be even as swiftly follow'd, as
I mean to utter it, or both yourself and me⁹⁴
Cry »lost«, and so good night.

Pol. On, good Camillo.

Cam. I am appointed him⁹⁵ to murder you.

Pol. By whom, Camillo?

Cam. By the king.

Pol. For what?

Cam. He thinks, nay, with all confidence he swears,
As he had seen 't, or been an instrument
To vice you to 't,⁹⁶ — that you have touch'd his queen Forbiddenly.

Pol. O, then my best blood turn
To an infected jelly, and my name
Be yok'd with his that did betray the Best!⁹⁷
Turn then my freshest reputation to
A savour that may strike the dullest nostril
Where I arrive; and my approach be shunn'd,

Nay, hated too, worse than the great'st infection
That e'er was heard, or read!

Cam. Swear his thought over⁹⁸

By each particular star in heaven, and
By all their influences, you may as well
Forbid the sea for to obey the moon,
As, or by oath, remove, or counsel, shake,
The fabric of his folly, whose foundation
Is pil'd upon his faith, and will continue
The standing of his body.⁹⁹

Pol. How should this grow?

Cam. I know not; but, I am sure, 't is safer to Avoid what's grown, than question how 't is born.
If therefore you dare trust my honesty,
That lies enclosed in this trunk,¹⁰⁰ which you
Shall hear along impawn'd, away to-night!
Your followers I will whisper to the business;
And will, by twos and threes, at several posterns, Clear them o' the city. For myself, I'll put
My fortunes to your service, which are here
By this discovery lost. Be not uncertain;
For, by the honour of my parents, I
Have utter'd truth, which if you seek to prove,
I dare not stand by; nor shall you be safer
Than one condemn'd by the king's own mouth, thereon
His execution sworn.¹⁰¹

Pol. I do believe thee:

I saw his heart in 's face.¹⁰² Give me thy hand:
Be pilot to me, and thy places shall Still neighbour mine.¹⁰³ My ships are ready, and
My people did expect my hence departure
Two days ago. — This jealousy
Is for a precious creature: as she's rare,
Must it be great; and, as his person's mighty,
Must it be violent; and, as he does conceive
He is dishonour'd by a man which ever
Profess'd to him,¹⁰⁴ why, his revenges must
In that be made more bitter. Fear o'ershades me:
Good expedition be my friend, and comfort

Gelehrter. — Die Pol. setzt mit Recht kein Comma zwischen die beiden zusammengehörenden Wörter, wie die meisten Hgg. thun. 91) In deren Geschlechtsfolge wir adlig sind. — success für succession gebraucht auch Spenser in Faerie Queene: All the sons of these five brethren reigned || By due success. 92) ignorant concealment = eine Verhehlung, welche thut, als ob sie nichts wisse. 93) if to be = wenn es sich überhaupt vermeiden lässt. — Vielleicht wäre zu lesen if it be scil. to be prevented. 94) me für I. 95) him fassen die meisten Hgg. als he = der Mann: ich bin bestimmt als der Mann, der Euch ermorden soll. — Boswell erklärt es mit by him. — Vielleicht ist der Sinn: Ich bin ihm ansersehen oder bestimmt, Euch zu morden. — Rowe streicht das him und Hanmer setzt sir als Anrede dafür. 96) to vice in Bezug auf instrument: als ob er selbst das Werkzeug gewesen wäre, Euch daran fest zu schrauben, Euch mit der Königin fest zusammenzuketten. 97) d. h. mit dem Namen des Judas Ischarioth. — Douce citirt dazu aus einer Excommunicationsformel: let them have part with Judas that betrayed Christ. 98) swear his thought over erklärt Steevens richtig mit over-swear his thought: wenn Ihr auch der falschen Meinung des Leontes Trotz bietet mit Bethörungen und Schwüren. — Zu swear gehört dann by each particular star etc.: wenn Ihr auch bei jedem einzelnen Sterne am Himmel und bei aller Sterne gesamtem Einfluss auf Welt und Menschen schwört. — Theobald wollte lesen swear this, though, over. — Sh. gebraucht to swear over wie er sonst (z. B. in Merchant of Venice A. 4, Sc. 2) to outswear gebraucht. 99) Das Gebäude seines Wahns ist gegründet auf seinen festen Glauben daran und wird bestehen während der Dauer seiner Person, so lange er selbst besteht. 100) trunk = Rumpf, Leib, und = Truhe, in der Etwas aufbewahrt wird. 101) thereon bezieht sich auf condemned etc.: so dass seine Hinrichtung in Folge der Verurtheilung eidlich feststeht. 102) Polixenes hatte dem Leontes schon angesehen, wie er gesinnt war. Vgl. oben Anm. 87. 103) places wird mit honours erklärt. — Vielleicht ist der Sinn aber nur: Du sollst überall mir nahe bleiben; Dein Platz, wie er auch wechseln mag, soll immer meinem Platze nahe sein. 104) to profess to him = sich zu Jemandem bekennen. 105) Glückliche Förderung meiner Flucht begünstige mich und gereiche durch meine Entfernung auch der Königin zum Trost, welche die Gedanken ihres Gemahls beschäftigt, aber durchaus nicht an seinem unbegründeten Verdachte Theil hat. — Warburton, der comfort als Substantiv fasste, wollte the queen's lesen, und Hanmer Heaven comfort für and comfort. — theme ist der Gegenstand, mit dem sich Leontes beschäftigt, von dem er spricht.

The gracious queen, part of his theme, but nothing
Of his ill-ta'en suspicion!¹⁰⁵ Come, Camillo:
I will respect thee as a father, if Thou bear'st my life off hence. Let us avoid.
Cam. It is in mine authority to command
The keys of all the posterns. Please your highness
To take the urgent hour. Come, Sir: away! [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.

The Same.

Enter HERMIONE, MAMILLIUS, and Ladies.

Her. Take the boy to you: he so troubles me,
'T is past enduring.

1. Lady. Come, my gracious lord:
Shall I be your playfellow?

Mam. No, I'll none of you.

1. Lady. Why, my sweet lord?

Mam. You'll kiss me hard, and speak to me as if I were a baby still. — I love you better.

2. Lady. And why so, my lord?

Mam. Not for because
Your brows are blacker; yet black brows, they say,
Become some women best, so that there be not Too much hair there, but in a semicircle,
Or a half-moon made with a pen.

2. Lady. Who taught ye this?¹

Mam. I learn'd it out of women's faces. — Pray now,
What colour are your eyebrows?

1. Lady. Blue, my lord.

Mam. Nay, that's a mock: I have seen a lady's nose
That has been blue, but not her eyebrows.

2. Lady. Hark ye.

The queen, your mother, rounds² apace: we shall Present our services to a fine new prince,
One of these days; and then you'd wanton with us,
If we would have you.

1. Lady. She is spread of late nto a goodly bulk: good time³ encounter her!

Her. What wisdom stirs amongst you? Come, Sir;
now

I am for you again: pray you, sit by us,
And tell's a tale.

Mam. Merry, or sad, shall't be?

Her. As merry as you will.

Mam. A sad tale's best for winter.⁴
I have one of sprites and goblins.

Her. Let's have that, good Sir.
Come on, sit down: come on, and do your best
To fright me with your sprites: you're powerful at it.

Mam. There was a man, —

Her. Nay, come, sit down; then on.

Mam. Dwelt by a churchyard. — I will tell it softly;
Yond crickets⁵ shall not hear it.

Her. Come on then,
And give't me in mine ear.

Enter LEONTES, ANTIGONUS, Lords, and Others.⁶

Leon. Was he met there? his train? Camillo with him?

1. Lord. Behind the tuft of pines I met them: never Saw I men scour so on their way. I ey'd them
Even to their ships.

Leon. How blest am I

In my just censure,⁷ in my true opinion! —
Alack! for lesser knowledge!⁸ — how accurs'd,
In being so blest! — There may be in the cup
A spider steep'd,⁹ and one may drink, depart,¹⁰
And yet partake no venom, for his knowledge
Is not infected; but if one present
The abhorr'd ingredient to his eye, make known
How he hath drunk, he cracks his gorge, his sides,
With violent hefts.¹¹ — I have drunk, and seen the spider.

Camillo was his help in this, his pander. —
There is a plot against my life, my crown:
All's true that is mistrusted;¹² — that false villain,
Whom I employ'd, was pre-employ'd by him.
He has discover'd my design,¹³ and I
Remain a pinch'd thing; yea, a very trick
For them to play at will. — How came the posterns
So easily open?

1. Lord. By his great authority;
Which often hath no less prevail'd than so;
On your command.

Leon. I know't too well. —
Give me the boy. [To HERMIONE.] I am glad, you did not nurse him:
Though he does bear some signs of me, yet you
Have too much blood in him.

Her. What is this? sport?

Leon. Bear the boy hence; he shall not come about her.
Away with him; and let her sport herself

1) So erklärt Dyce das Who taught 'this? der Fol. — Die meisten Hgg. fügen mit Rowe you für ye ein.
2) to round = rund werden, an Leibesumfang zunehmen, hier in Bezug auf die Schwangerschaft. 3) time = Zeit der Niederkunft. 4) Eine Anspielung auf den Titel dieses Dramas. — a winter's tale scheint schon lange vorher für eine wunderbare, ergreifende Geschichte gebraucht zu sein. So in Marlowe's Dido Queen of Car- thage: Who would not undergo all kind of toil, || To be well stored with such a winter's tale? 5) crickets nennt er die Hofdamen, wegen ihrer Munterkeit, nach dem sprichwörtlichen as merry as a cricket. 6) In der Fol. wird das Auftreten des Leontes u. s. w. gleich zu Anfang der Scene verzeichnet, wie die Fol. häufig alle erst im Verlaufe der Scene erscheinenden Personen gleich zu Anfang namhaft macht. 7) censure = Urtheil. — blest = gesegnet, und = begabt mit Etwas. In ersterem Sinne folgt als Gegensatz accursed. 8) Ach, wäre mein Wissen doch geringer! wüsste ich weniger, wie ich betrogen bin! 9) Die Spinnen galten zu Sh.'s Zeit für giftig, nach Leontes' Auffassung hier jedoch nur dann, wenn der Trinker sie bemerkte. So in Middleton's No Wit, no
Help like a Woman's: Even when my lips touch'd the contracting cup, || Even then to see the spider.
10) Staunton vermuthet sinnreich drink deep on't. Indess ist jede Aenderung überflüssig: Einer kann trinken und davon gehen ohne Gift mitzunehmen. 11) heft = Hebung, Drang zum Erbrechen, von to heave = Etwas emporheben. 12) Jedes Misstrauen erweist sich als wahr, jeder Verdacht ist begründet. 13) Camillo hat meinen Plan dem Polixenes enthüllt, und ich stehe jetzt da wie ein Ding oder Geschöpf, das man ungestraft zwicket, ja, wie ein Spielzeug, mit dem sie nach Belieben spielen. — Heath fasst a pinch'd thing wohl zu speciell als a mere

With that she 's big with, for 't is Polixenes
Has made thee swell thus.

Her. But I 'd say he had not,
And, I 'll be sworn, you would believe my saying,
Howe'er you lean to the nayward.¹⁴

Leon. You, my lords,
Look on her, mark her well; be but about
To say, »she is a goodly lady,« and
The justice of your hearts will thereto add,
»'T is pity she 's not honest, honourable:«
Praise her but for this her without-door form
(Which, on my faith, deserves high speech), and straight
The shrug, the hum, or ha; these petty brands,
That calumny doth use: — O, I am out!¹⁵ —
That mercy does, for calumny will sear
Virtue itself: — these shrugs, these hums, and ha's,
When you have said, »she 's goodly,« come between,
Ere you can say, »she 's honest.« But be 't known,
From him that has most cause to grieve it should be,
She 's an adult'ress.

Her. Should a villain say so,
The most replenish'd¹⁶ villain in the world,
He were as much more villain: you, my lord,
Do but mistake.

Leon. You have mistook, my lady,
Polixenes for Leontes. O thou thing,
Which I 'll not call a creature of thy place,¹⁷
Lest barbarism, making me the precedent,
Should a like language use to all degrees,
And mannerly distinguishment leave out
Betwixt the prince and beggar! — I have said
She 's an adult'ress; I have said with whom:
More, she 's a traitor; and Camillo is
A federary with her,¹⁸ and one that knows
What she should shame to know herself,
But with her most vile principal, that she 's
A bed-swerver, even as bad as those
That vulgars give bold'st titles; ay, and privy
To this their late escape.¹⁹

Her. No, by my life,
Privy to none of this. How will this grieve you,
When you shall come to clearer knowledge, that
You thus have publish'd me? Gentle my lord,

You scarce can right me thoroughly then, to say
You did mistake.

Leon. No;²⁰ if I mistake
In those foundations which I build upon,
The centre is not big enough to bear
A school-boy's top.²¹ — Away with her to prison!
He, who shall speak for her, is afar off guilty,
But that he speaks.²²

Her. There 's some ill planet reigns:
I must be patient, till the heavens look
With an aspect²³ more favourable. — Good my lords,
I am not prone to weeping, as our sex
Commonly are; the want of which vain dew,
Perchance, shall dry your pities; but I have
That honourable grief lodg'd here,²⁴ which burns
Worse than tears drown. 'Beseech you all, my lords,
With thoughts so qualified as your charities
Shall best instruct you, measure me; — and so
The king's will be perform'd.

Leon. Shall I be heard?²⁵

Her. Who is 't, that goes with me? — 'Beseech your highness,

My women may be with me; for, you see,
My plight requires it. Do not weep, good fools;
There is no cause: when you shall know, your mistress
Has deserv'd prison, then abound in tears,
As I come out: this action, I now go on,
Is for my better grace.²⁶ — Adieu, my lord:
I never wish'd to see you sorry; now,
I trust, I shall. — My women, come; you have leave.

Leon. Go, do our bidding: hence!

[Exeunt Queen and Ladies.]

1. Lord. 'Beseech your highness, call the queen again.

Ant. Be certain what you do, Sir, lest your justice
Prove violence; in the which three great ones suffer,
Yourself, your queen, your son.

1. Lord. For her, my lord,
I dare my life lay down, and will do 't, Sir,
Please you to accept it, that the queen is spotless
I' the eyes of heaven, and to you: I mean,
In this which you accuse her.

Ant. If it prove
She 's otherwise, I 'll keep my stables where child's baby, a thing pinch'd out of clouts. 14) Wie sehr Ihr Euch auch zum Nein, zur Verneinung neigen mögt. — to the nayward ist gebildet wie to bedward in Coriolanus (A. 1, Sc. 6). 15) Ich komme aus dem Concept, ich irre mich. Leontes, der eben gesagt hatte, dass die Verläumdung solche Brandmarke gebrauche, verbessert sich nun und sagt, dass die Milde, die Nächstenliebe vielmehr sie gebrauche. — 16) replenished = vollkommen, vollendet. So in K. Richard III. (A. 4, Sc. 3) The most replenished sweet work of nature. 17) O Du Ding, dessen rechten Namen ich nicht anwenden will auf ein Geschöpf Deines hohen Ranges. Der eigentliche Name wäre ein Wort wie a whore, welches Leontes nicht gebrauchen will, damit nicht die rohe Unwissenheit, sich auf sein Beispiel berufend, fernerhin solch eine schimpfliche Bezeichnung ohne Unterschied auf alle Stände anwende. 18) Für federary, das sonst nirgendwo vorkommt, wollte Malone feodary lesen. Indess ist der Sinn von federary klar: confederate = verbündet, Helfershelfer. — federary steht im Gegensatze zu dem folgenden principal: Einer, der weiss, was sie sich schämen sollte selbst zu wissen, nur zugleich mit ihrem elenden ausschliesslichen Theilhaber, d. h. Polixenes. — but = nur, einzig. 19) their late escape ist die Flucht des Polixenes und des Camillo, bei der die Hermione im Einverständniss war. 20) Einige Hgg. setzen no, no: des Verses wegen. 21) So ist das Centrum, um das die Erde sich dreht, nicht stark genug, den Kreisel eines Knaben zu tragen. — centre = der Mittelpunkt der Erde, wird als die feste Grundlage des ganzen Erdballs gefasst. — In demselben Sinne, wie hier, ist the centre vielleicht auch an einer früheren Stelle (A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 31) zu verstehen. 22) Wer zu ihren Gunsten spricht, der hat einen entfernten Antheil an ihrer Schuld, der ist entfernt schuldig, bloss dadurch, dass er spricht. 23) aspect, von Sh. auf der letzten Sylbe betont, ist ein astrologischer Ausdruck, wie auch ill planet. 24) Hier, in meinem Herzen. 25) Der König richtet diese Worte an die Diener, welche bisher zögerten, seinen schon vorher ausgesprochenen Befehl, Away with her to prison! zu vollziehen. 26) Diese Anklage, oder diese Rechtssache, auf Grund deren ich jetzt gehe, d. h. in's Gefängniss, dient zu meinem grösseren Heil oder Schmuck. — go ist dem come out entgegengestellt. 27) Von den verschiedenen Deutungen, welche

I lodge my wife; I'll go in couples with her;²⁷
 Than²⁸ when I feel, and see her, no further trust her;
 For every inch of woman in the world,
 Ay, every dram of woman's flesh, is false,
 If she be.

Leon. Hold your peaces!

1. Lord. Good my lord, —

Ant. It is for you we speak, not for ourselves.
 You are abus'd, and by some putter-on,²⁹
 That will be damn'd for 't; 'would I knew the villain,
 I would land-damn³⁰ him. Be she honour-flaw'd, —
 I have three daughters; the eldest is eleven.
 The second, and the third, nine, and some five;³¹
 If this prove true, they'll pay for 't: by mine honour.
 I'll geld them all: fourteen they shall not see,³²
 To bring false generations: they are co-heirs;
 And I had rather glib myself, than they Should not produce fair issue.

Leon. Cease! no more.
 You smell this business with a sense as cold
 As is a dead man's nose; but I do see 't, and feel 't,
 As you feel doing thus, and see withal
 The instruments that feel.³³

Ant. If it be so,
 We need no grave to bury honesty:
 There's not a grain of it the face to sweeten
 Of the whole dungy earth.

Leon. What! lack I credit?

1. Lord. I had rather you did lack, than I, my lord,
 Upon this ground; and more it would content me
 To have her honour true, than your suspicion;
 Be blam'd for 't how you might.³⁴

Leon.

Why, what need we
 Commune with you of this, but rather follow
 Our forceful instigation? Our prerogative
 Calls not your counsels, but our natural goodness
 Imparts this; which, if you (or stupified,
 Or seeming so in skill) cannot, or will not,
 Relish a truth³⁵ like us, inform yourselves,
 We need no more of your advice: the matter,
 The loss, the gain, the ordering on 't,³⁶ is all Properly ours.

Ant. And I wish, my liege,
 You had only in your silent judgment tried it,
 Without more overture.

Leon. How could that be?
 Either thou art most ignorant by age,
 Or thou wert born a fool. Camillo's flight,
 Added to their familiarity
 (Which was as gross as ever touch'd conjecture,³⁷
 That lack'd sight only, nought for approbation,
 But only seeing, all other circumstances
 Made up to the deed), doth push on this proceeding:
 Yet, for a greater confirmation,
 (For in an act of this importance 't were Most piteous to be wild) I have despatch'd in post,
 To sacred Delphos, to Apollo's temple,
 Cleomenes and Dion, whom you know
 Of stuff'd sufficiency.³⁸ Now, from the oracle
 They will bring all; whose spiritual counsel had,
 Shall stop, or spur me.³⁹ Have I done well?

1. Lord. Well done, my lord.

Leon. Though I am satisfied,⁴⁰ and need no more Than what I know, yet shall the oracle

diese Stelle erfahren hat, ist diejenige die unwahrscheinlichste, welche stables oder stable, oder gar stablestand wie emendirt worden ist, einfach = Aufenthalt, Standort, fasst, als ob Antigonus nur sagen wolle: ich will immer da mich aufhalten, wo meine Frau wohnt. Dass Sh. stables = Stall für Pferde, fasst, dafür spricht das folgende I'll go in couples = ich will gekoppelt, wie Jagdhunde, mit ihr gehen. Der Sinn der ganzen Stelle ist dann: Wenn die Königin unkeusch ist, so will ich auch alle Weiber für eben so schlecht halten, und demgemäss meine Frau nicht anders behandeln, und ihr nicht mehr freien Willen lassen, als meinen Pferden und Hunden. 28) Malone vermuthet, dass than, was die Fol. für than und then setzt, hier nicht than, sondern then sei. Indess scheint than von further abzuhängen, obwohl es vorhergeht: ich will ihr nicht weiter trauen, ihr keinen weiteren Spielraum gewähren, als wenn ich sie fühle und sehe. 29) putter-on = Anstifter. 30) land-damn (Land-damne in der Fol.) scheint eine unheilbare Corruption des Textes, deren zweiter Theil durch das gerade darüber stehende damn'd der vorigen Zeile noch verdächtiger wird. — Malone wollte land-dam lesen und dieses eben so auffallende Compositum erklären mit bury him in earth. — Collier vermuthete lamback i. e. beat. 31) Die zweite Folioausg. liest and sons five, was auch Rowe noch beibehält im Widerspruch mit dem folgenden they are co-heirs. — some five = etwa fünf Jahre alt, bezieht sich auf the third, wie sich nine auf the second bezieht. 32) fourteen they shall not see ist nicht für sich allein, sondern in Verbindung mit dem vorhergehenden I'll geld them all aufzufassen: ich will sie verschneiden, ehe sie noch vierzehn Jahre alt werden und dann unkeusche Kinder gebären können. — to geld wird von dem Verschneiden weiblicher Thiere, wie to glib von dem männlicher Thiere gebraucht. 33) Johnson fügt hier die erklärende Bühnenweisung Striking his brows, Hammer Laying hold of his arm hinzu. Jedenfalls sind the instruments that feel die Finger des Leontes, welche den Antigonus anpacken. 34) Möchtet Ihr wegen Eures ungegründeten Verdachtes auch noch so sehr getadelt oder blossgestellt werden. 35) Rowe änderte ohne Grund as truth: wenn Ihr in dem, was unsere angeborne Güte Euch mittheilt, nicht, wie wir es thun, eine Wahrheit erkennen könnt, da Ihr entweder verdummt seid, oder nicht erkennen wollt, da Ihr mit Bedacht dumm scheinen wollt, so macht Euch selbst damit bekannt, dass wir Eures Rathes nicht mehr bedürfen. 36) Die Regelung der Sache, was in dieser Sache anzuordnen, zu thun ist. — Das folgende properly verstärkt ours: in unserm eigenen Besitz. 37) conjecture = Argwohn, Misstrauen. So in Much Ado about Nothing (A. 4, Sc. 1) And on my eyelids shall conjecture hang, || To turn all beauty into thoughts of harm. — Von conjecture hängt das folgende that ab: ein Argwohn, dem nur der Augenschein fehlte, dem nichts zum Beweise fehlte, als das Sehen, da alle andern Umstände genugsam vorhanden waren für die That, für den verbrecherischen Verkehr zwischen Polixenes und Hermione. — Staunton interpungirt That lack'd, sight only, nought for approbation; || But only seeing: welchem, den Augenschein abgerechnet, nichts zum Beweise fehlte, nur der Augenschein. 38) stuffed sufficiency = volle, ausreichende Tüchtigkeit. 39) Vom Orakel werden sie alles Erforderliche zurückbringen; des Orakels geistlicher Rath, wenn er erlangt ist, soll mich in meinem Verfahren anhalten oder zum Weitergehen anspornen. — Bei Greene trägt die Königin auf die Sendung nach Delphi an. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 524 u. 525.

Give rest to the minds of others; such as he,
Whose ignorant credulity will not Come up to the truth. So have we thought it good,
From our free⁴¹ person she should be confin'd,
Lest that the treachery of the two fled hence
Be left her to perform. Come, follow us:
We are to speak in public; for this business
Will raise us all.

Ant. [Aside.] To laughter, as I take it,
If the good truth were known.⁴² [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The Same. The outer Room of a Prison.

Enter PAULINA and Attendants.

Paul. The keeper of the prison, call to him:
Let him have knowledge who I am. — Good lady!
[Exit an Attendant.]

No court in Europe is too good for thee;
What dost thou then in prison? —

Re-enter Attendant, with the Gaoler.¹

Now, good Sir,

You know me, do you not?

Gaoler. For a worthy lady,
And one whom much I honour.

Paul. Pray you then,
Conduct me to the queen.

Gaoler. I may not, Madam: to the contrary
I have express commandment.

Paul. Here's ado,
To lock up honesty and honour from
The access of gentle visitors! — Is 't lawful,
Pray you, to see her women? any of them?
Emilia?

Gaoler. So please you, Madam,
To put apart these your attendants, I Shall bring Emilia forth.

Paul. I pray now, call her. — Withdraw yourselves. [Exeunt Attendants.]

Gaoler. And, Madam,
I must be present at your conference.

Paul. Well, be 't so, pr'ythee. [Exit Gaoler.]
Here's such ado to make no stain a stain,
As passes colouring.²

Re-enter Gaoler, with EMILIA.

Dear gentlewoman,
How fares our gracious lady?

Emil. As well as one so great, and so forlorn,
May hold together. On her frights, and griefs,
(Which never tender lady hath borne greater)
She is, something before her time, deliver'd.

Paul. A boy?

Emil. A daughter; and a goodly babe,

Lusty, and like to live: the queen receives
Much comfort in 't, says, »My poor prisoner,
I am innocent as you.«

Paul. I dare be sworn: —
These dangerous, unsafe lunes i' the king,³ beshrew them!

He must be told on 't, and he shall: the office
Becomes a woman best; I 'll take 't upon me.
If I prove honey-mouth'd, let my tongue blister,
And never to my red-look'd anger be
The trumpet any more. — Pray you, Emilia,
Commend my best obedience to the queen:
If she dares trust me with her little babe,
I 'll show 't the king, and undertake to be
Her advocate to the loud'st. We do not know
How he may soften at the sight o' the child:
The silence often of pure innocence
Persuades, when speaking fails.

Emil. Most worthy Madam,
Your honour, and your goodness, is so evident,
That your free undertaking cannot miss
A thriving issue: there is no lady living
So meet for this great errand. Please your ladyship
To visit the next room, I 'll presently
Acquaint the queen of your most noble offer,
Who, but to-day, hammer'd of this design,
But durst not tempt a minister of honour,
Lest she should be denied.⁴

Paul. Tell her, Emilia,
I 'll use that tongue I have: if wit flow from 't,
As boldness from my bosom, let 't not be doubted
I shall do good.

Emil. Now, be you blest for it!
I 'll to the queen. — Please you, come something nearer.

Gaoler. Madam, if 't please the queen to send the babe,
I know not what I shall incur to pass it,⁵
Having no warrant.

Paul. You need not fear it, Sir:
The child was prisoner to the womb, and is,
By law and process of great nature, thence Freed and enfranchis'd; not a party to
The anger of the king, nor guilty of,
If any be,⁶ the trespass of the queen.

Gaoler. I do believe it.

Paul. Do not you fear: upon mine honour, I
Will stand betwixt you and danger. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter LEONTES, ANTIGONUS, Lords, and other Attendants.

Leon. Nor night nor day, no rest. It is but weakness
To bear the matter thus, mere weakness. If

40) Der Nachdruck liegt auf I: wenn ich auch meiner Sache gewiss bin. 41) free = frei sich bewegend, zugänglich für Jedermann. Hermione ist von dem Zutritt zum König abgesperrt worden, damit nicht der hochverrätherische Anschlag des Polixenes und Camillo gegen das Leben des Leontes ihr zur Vollführung überlassen bleibe. 42) Diese Sache wird uns, wie ich meine, dem Gelächter preisgeben, wenn die Wahrheit kund wäre.

1) Manche Hgg. bezeichnen ihn als Keeper, nach Paulina's ersten Worten. 2) Hier ist ein solches Bemühen, die Fleckenlosigkeit befeuchtet erscheinen zu lassen, das über alle Uebertünchung, alle Färbekunst hinausgeht. 3) lunes = Anfälle von Wahnsinn. — Das Wort kommt nur bei Sh. vor. — Steevens ändert unnöthig o' the king. 4) Die Königin fürchtete eine abschlägige Antwort zu erhalten, wenn sie einen Mann von Ansehen um diesen Dienst anspräche. 5) to pass it = wenn ich das Kind passiren lasse. 6) if any be bezieht sich auf das folgende trespass: wenn die Königin wirklich gefehlt hat.

The cause were not in being, ¹ — part o' the cause,
 She, the adult'ress; for the harlot king
 Is quite beyond mine arm, out of the blank
 And level of my brain, ² plot-proof; but she
 I can hook to me: — say, that she were gone,
 Given to the fire, a moiety of my rest
 Might come to me again. — Who's there? ³

1. Atten.

My lord.

Leon. How does the boy?

1. Atten. He took good rest to-night;
 'T is hop'd, his sickness is discharg'd.

Leon. To see his nobleness!
 Conceiving the dishonour of his mother,
 He straight declin'd, droop'd, took it deeply,
 Fasten'd and fix'd the shame on 't in himself,
 Threw off his spirit, his appetite, his sleep,
 And downright languish'd. — Leave me solely: ⁴ — go, See how he fares. [Exit Attendant.] — Fie, fie! no thought of him: ⁵

The very thought of my revenges that way
 Recoil ⁶ upon me: in himself too mighty,
 And in his parties, his alliance; ⁷ — let him be,
 Until a time may serve: for present vengeance,
 Take it on her. Camillo and Polixenes
 Laugh at me; make their pastime at my sorrow:
 They should not laugh, if I could reach them; nor Shall she, within my power.

Enter PAULINA, with a Child. ⁸

1. Lord. You must not enter.

Paul. Nay, rather, good my lords, be second to me.
 Fear you his tyrannous passion more, alas,
 Than the queen's life? ⁹ a gracious innocent soul,
 More free ¹⁰ than he is jealous.

Ant. That's enough.

1. Atten. Madam, he hath not slept to-night; commanded
 None should come at him.

Paul. Not so hot, good Sir:
 I come to bring him sleep. 'T is such as you, —
 That creep like shadows by him, and do sigh
 At each his needless heavings, ¹¹ — such as you
 Nourish the cause of his awaking: I

Do come with words as med'cinal as true,
 Honest as either, to purge him of that humour,
 That presses him from sleep.

Leon. What ¹² noise there, ho?

Paul. No noise, my lord; but needful conference,
 About some gossips for your highness.

Leon. How? —

Away with that audacious lady. Antigonus,
 I charg'd thee, that she should not come about me:
 I knew she would.

Ant. I told her so, my lord,
 On your displeasure's peril, and on mine,
 She should not visit you.

Leon. What! canst not rule her?

Paul. From all dishonesty he can: in this,
 (Unless he take the course that you have done, Commit me for committing honour) ¹³ trust it,
 He shall not rule me.

Ant. Lo you now! you hear.
 When she will take the rein, I let her run;
 But she'll not stumble.

Paul. Good my liege, I come, —
 And, I beseech you, hear me, who professes ¹⁴
 Myself your loyal servant, your physician,
 Your most obedient counsellor, yet that dares
 Less appear so in comforting your evils, ¹⁵
 Than such as most seem yours, — I say, I come
 From your good queen.

Leon. Good queen!

Paul. Good queen, my lord, good queen: I say, good queen;

And would by combat make her good, so were I
 A man, the worst about you. ¹⁶

Leon. Force her hence.

Paul. Let him that makes but trifles of his eyes
 First hand me. On mine own accord I'll off,
 But first I'll do my errand. — The good queen,
 For she is good, hath brought you forth a daughter:
 Here 't is; commends it to your blessing.

[Laying down the Child.]

Leon. Out!

A mankind witch! ¹⁷ Hence with her, out o' door:
 A most intelligencing bawd!

1) Manche Hgg. interpungiren mit der Fol. mere weakness, if || The cause were not in being. Indess beginnt mit if ein Vordersatz, zu dem der durch Parenthesen verzögerte Nachsatz erst mit a moiety of my rest etc. folgt, nachdem der Vordersatz noch einmal resümiert ist in say, that she were gone, given to the fire = gesetzt, dass sie fort wäre, dem Feuertode übergeben. 2) blank = Ziel des Schusses, level = Richtung des Schusses. — brain = das Gehirn, das Pläne zum Verderben des Polixenes ersinnt, wird näher bestimmt durch plot-proof = gegen solche Anschläge gesichert. 3) Der König, der bis jetzt, in Gedanken versunken, ein Selbstgespräch geführt, wird nun erst die im Hintergrunde wartenden Hofleute gewahr. 4) Lasst mich allein. 5) him scil. Polixenes. — Der König nimmt den Faden seines Selbstgesprächs da wieder auf, wo er ihn hatte fallen lassen, als er die Anwesenheit der Hofleute bemerkte und sich nach dem Befinden seines Sohnes erkundigte. 6) recoil steht im Plural wegen des vorhergehenden pluralischen revenges: schon der blosser Gedanke an Rache, die ich nach dieser Richtung hin, an dem Polixenes, nehmen könnte, geschweige denn die Rache selbst, fällt auf mich zurück, indem Gedanke oder Ausführung des Gedankens von dem Feinde abprallt. 7) Der in sich selbst und in seiner Bundesgenossenschaft und Verwandtschaft zu mächtig ist. Vgl. die entsprechende Stelle bei Greene, Einleitung pag. 523. 8) with a Child ist erst von Rowe hinzugefügt. 9) to fear mit dem Accusativ = sich vor Etwas scheuen, und = um Etwas besorgt sein. 10) free = frei von Schuld. So in Hamlet (A. 2, Sc. 2) Make mad the guilty, and appal the free. 11) Bei jedem überflüssigen Stossseufzer, den er laut werden lässt. 12) what verbessert die zweite Folioausg. das who der ersten Fol. 13) to commit = begehen, sonst nur von einem Verbrechen, steht mit honour verbunden = ehrenvoll handeln, wegen des vorhergehenden to commit = verhaften. 14) So die Fol. — Manche Hgg. setzen profess wegen des vorhergehenden me; und ebenso dare für dares in der zweitfolgenden Zeile. 15) Ich wage es weniger Euer Arzt und Rathgeber zu erscheinen, in der Hegung Eures Uebels, weniger, als Diejenigen, die Euch scheinbar am meisten ergeben sind; ich schmeichle Euren Gebrechen nicht und erscheine deshalb nicht als Euer Rath und Arzt. 16) Ich würde im Zweikampf die Tugend der Königin

Paul. Not so:
I am as ignorant in that, as you
In so entitling me, and no less honest
Than you are mad: which is enough, I'll warrant,
As this world goes, to pass for honest.

Leon. Traitors!
Will you not push her out? Give her the bastard. —
[To ANTIGONUS.] Thou, dotard, thou art woman-tir'd,¹⁸ unroosted
By thy dame Partlet here. — Take up the bastard:
Take 't up, I say; give 't to thy crone.¹⁹

Paul. For ever
Unvenerable be thy hands, if thou
Tak'st up the princess by that forced baseness
Which he has put upon 't!²⁰

Leon. He dreads his wife.

Paul. So I would you did; then 't were past all doubt
You'd call your children yours.

Leon. A nest of traitors!

Ant. I am none, by this good light.

Paul. Nor I; nor any,
But one that 's here, and that 's himself; for he
The sacred honour of himself, his queen's,
His hopeful son's, his babe's, betrays to slander, Whose sting is sharper than the sword's,²¹ and will not
(For, as the case now stands, it is a curse
He cannot be compell'd to 't) once²² remove
The root of his opinion, which is rotten
As ever oak, or stone, was sound.

Leon. A callat,
Of boundless tongue, who late hath beat her husband,
And now baits me! — This brat is none of mine:
It is the issue of Polixenes.
Hence with it; and, together with the dam,
Commit them to the fire.

Paul. It is yours;
And, might we lay the old proverb to your charge,
So like you, 't is the worse.²³ — Behold, my lords,
Although the print be little, the whole matter
And copy of the father: eye, nose, lip,
The trick of 's frown, his forehead; nay, the valley,
The pretty dimples of his chin and cheek; his smiles;
The very mould and frame of hand, nail, finger. —
And thou, good goddess Nature, which hast made it
So like to him that got it, if thou hast
The ordering of the mind too, 'mongst all colours

No yellow in 't;²⁴ lest she suspect, as he does,
Her children not her husband's.

Leon. A gross hag! —
And, lozel,²⁵ thou art worthy to be hang'd,
That wilt not stay her tongue.

Ant. Hang all the husbands
That cannot do that feat, you'll leave yourself
Hardly one subject.

Leon. Once more, take her hence.
Paul. A most unworthy and unnatural lord
Can do no more.²⁶

Leon. I'll have thee burn'd.

Paul. I care not:
It is an heretic that makes the fire,
Not she which burns in 't. I'll not call you tyrant;
But this most cruel usage of your queen
(Not able²⁷ to produce more accusation
Than your own weak-hing'd fancy) something savours
Of tyranny, and will ignoble make you,
Yea, scandalous to the world.

Leon. On your allegiance,
Out of the chamber with her! Were I a tyrant,
Where were her life? she durst not call me so,
If she did know me one. Away with her!

Paul. I pray you, do not push me; I'll be gone.
Look to your babe, my lord; 't is yours: Jove send her
A better guiding spirit! — What needs these hands?²⁸ —
You, that are thus so tender o'er his follies,
Will never do him good, not one of you.
So, so: — farewell; we are gone. [Exit.]

Leon. Thou, traitor, hast set on thy wife to this. —
My child? away with 't! — even thou, that hast
A heart so tender o'er it, take it hence,
And see it instantly consum'd with fire:
Even thou, and none but thou. Take it up straight.
Within this hour bring me word 't is done
(And by good testimony), or I'll seize thy life,
With what thou else call'st thine.²⁹ If thou refuse,
And wilt encounter with my wrath, say so;
The bastard brains with these my proper hands
Shall I dash out. Go, take it to the fire,
For thou sett'st on thy wife.

Ant. I did not, Sir:
These lords, my noble fellows, if they please,
Can clear me in 't.

1. Lord. We can: my royal liege,
He is not guilty of her coming hither.

vertreten, wenn ich nur ein Mann wäre, selbst der geringste oder schlechteste aus Eurer Umgebung. 17) a mankind witch = eine Hexe von unweiblicher, männlicher Art, ein Manuweib. So in Fletcher's Monsieur Thomas: A plaguy mankind girl. 18) woman-tired = unter dem Pantoffel stehend. — to tire wird von einem Raubvogel gebraucht, der seine Beute hin und her zerzt, sich mit seinem Frasse zu schaffen macht. — Bei dem folgenden unroosted etc. denkt Sh. an einen Hahn, der von der Henne von seinem Platze verjagt wird. — Partlet, wie die Henne in dem englischen Reynart the Fox heisst, kommt auch in K. Henry IV. First Part (A. 3, Sc. 3) vor: How now, dame Partlet the hen? 19) crone, verächtliche Bezeichnung eines alten Weibes = alte Vettel. 20) Die ungerechte Schmach oder Erniedrigung, welche der König dem Kinde angethan hat, ist die Bezeichnung Bastard. — base und baseness waren zu Sh.'s Zeit synonym mit bastard und bastardy. 21) So in Cymbeline (A. 3, Sc. 4) slander, whose edge is sharper than the sword. — In der vorigen Zeile liest Capell this babe's. 22) once = ein für alle Mal, kurz und gut. 23) Staunton findet dieses alte Sprichwort citirt in Overbury's Characters: The devil calls him his white son: he is so like him that he is the worse for it, and he looks after his father. 24) yellow als die Farbe der Eifersucht: wende unter allen Farben kein Gelb an, wenn Du ihr Gemüth bildest. 25) lozel = Lump. 26) Paulina's Rede knüpft an ihre vorhergehende an: ein so unnatürlicher Herr oder Gemahl kann consequenter Weise nicht anders handeln, als dass er alle Männer, die nicht eben so tyrannisch sind, hängen lässt. 27) not able etc. bezieht sich auf das you in your queen: da Ihr nicht fähig seid u. s. w. 28) Für needs der Fol. setzen manche Hgg. mit den spätern Folioausgg. need: Was bedarf es dieser Hände? sagt Paulina zu den Hofleuten, die auf Befehl des Königs Hand an sie legen und sie aus dem Zimmer schaffen wollen.

Leon. You are liars all.

1. Lord. 'Beseech your highness, give us better credit. We have always truly serv'd you, and beseech³⁰ So to esteem of us; and on our knees we beg (As recompense of our dear services,³¹ Past, and to come), that you do change this purpose; Which, being so horrible, so bloody, must Lead on to some foul issue. We all kneel.

Leon. I am a feather for each wind that blows. — Shall I live on, to see this bastard kneel And call me father? Better burn it now, Than curse it then. But, be it; let it live: — It shall not neither. — [To ANTIGONUS.] You, Sir, come you hither;

You, that have been so tenderly officious With Lady Margery,³² your midwife, there, To save this bastard's life, — for 't is a bastard, So sure as this³³ beard's grey, — what will you adventure To save this brat's life?

Ant. Anything, my lord, That my ability may undergo, And nobleness impose:³⁴ at least, thus much: I'll pawn the little blood which I have left, To save the innocent: anything possible.

Leon. It shall be possible. Swear by this sword, Thou wilt perform my bidding.

Ant. I will, my lord.

Leon. Mark, and perform it, seest thou? for the fail Of any point in 't shall not only be Death to thyself, but to thy lewd-tongued wife, Whom for this time we pardon. We enjoin thee, As thou art liegeman to us, that thou carry This female bastard hence; and that thou bear it To some remote and desert place, quite out Of our dominions; and that there thou leave it, Without more mercy,³⁵ to its own protection, And favour of the climate. As by strange fortune It came to us,³⁶ I do in justice charge thee, On thy soul's peril and thy body's torture, That thou commend it³⁷ strangely to some place, Where chance may nurse, or end it. Take it up.

Ant. I swear to do this, though a present death Had been more merciful. — Come on, poor babe: Some powerful spirit instruct the kites and ravens, To be thy nurses! Wolves, and bears, they say,

Casting their savageness aside, have done Like offices of pity. — Sir, be prosperous In more than this deed doth require! — And blessing Against this cruelty fight on thy side, Poor thing, condemn'd to loss!³⁸

[Exit with the Child.

Leon.

No; I'll not rear

Another's issue.

1. Atten. Please your highness, posts From those you sent to the oracle are come An hour since: Cleomenes and Dion, Being well arriv'd from Delphos, are both landed, Hasting to the court.

1. Lord. So please you, Sir, their speed Hath been beyond account.

Leon. Twenty-three days They have been absent: 't is good speed, foretells, The great Apollo suddenly will have The truth of this appear. Prepare you, lords: Summon a session, that we may arraign Our most disloyal lady; for, as she hath Been publicly accus'd, so shall she have A just and open trial. While she lives, My heart will be a burden to me. Leave me, And think upon my bidding. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.

The Same. A Street in some Town.

Enter CLEOMENES and DION.

Cleo. The climate's delicate, the air most sweet, Fertile the isle,¹ the temple much surpassing The common praise it bears.

Dion. I shall report, For most it² caught me, the celestial habits (Methinks, I so should term them), and the reverence Of the grave wearers. O, the sacrifice! How ceremonious, solemn, and unearthly It was i' the offering!

Cleo. But, of all, the burst And the ear-deafening voice o' the oracle, Kin to Jove's thunder, so surpris'd my sense, That I was nothing.

29) Ich will Dein Leben nehmen und Alles, was Du sonst Dein nennst. 30) Die Fol. hat beseech, wie vorher taught 'this (vgl. A. 2, Sc. 1, Anm. 1). — Indess lässt sich you hier sehr wohl aus dem vorhergehenden serv'd you leicht hinzudenken, ohne dass man mit Rowe beseech you liest. 31) dear services = eifrige, angelegentliche Dienste. 32) Lady Margery = Dame Grete, eine verächtliche Bezeichnung für Paulina. 33) *thy beard*s verbessert ein Corrector in Lord Ellesmere's Exemplar der Fol. das *this beard*s der Fol. — Indess lässt sich die alte Lesart rechtfertigen, wenn man annimmt, dass Leontes auf den Bart des Antigonus hindeutet oder denselben anfasst. 34) nobleness geht auf den König: was Ihr im Einklang mit Eurer Würde mir auferlegen könnt. 35) So die Fol. — Die zweite Folioausg. hat without much mercy, was auch Rowe noch beibehielt. — Die Fol. hat to it own protection, erst die dritte Folioausg. hat its. — it als Possessivpronomen kommt etwa ein Dutzend Mal in der Fol., und fast eben so oft its oder it's vor. Es scheint, dass Sh. selbst entweder geschwankt hat in der Schreibung und Anwendung dieses Possessivpronomen, für welches er gewöhnlich his gebraucht, oder dass die Abschreiber und Drucker schwankten. Die Cambridge Edd. sagen: On the whole we think it most probable that Shakespeare would not deliberately have written it for its or his, except when imitating the language of rustics or children. Vgl. jedoch weiterhin A. 3, Sc. 2, Anm. 18. 36) So bei Greene: For he found out this devise, that seeing (as he thought) it came by fortune, so he would commit it to the charge of fortune. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 524. 37) to commend = anheimgeben, anvertrauen. 38) condemn'd to loss = verurtheilt, verloren zu gehen. So in einer spätern Scene (A. 3, Sc. 3) expos'd to loss, and what may follow.

1) Cleomenes spricht von Delphi, das Sh. sich, nach Greene's Vorgange, auf einer Insel gelegen denkt. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 525. — Es ist also überflüssig, mit Warburton soil für isle zu lesen. 2) it bezieht sich

Dion. If the event o' the journey
Prove as successful to the queen, — O, be 't so! —
As it hath been to us rare, pleasant, speedy,
The time is worth the use on 't.³

Cleo. Great Apollo
Turn all to the best! These proclamations,⁴
So forcing faults upon Hermione,
I little like.

Dion. The violent carriage of it
Will clear, or end, the business: when the oracle
(Thus⁵ by Apollo's great divine seal'd up)
Shall the contents discover, something rare
Even then will rush to knowledge. — Go, fresh horses; —
And gracious be the issue! [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The Same. A Court of Justice.

Enter LEONTES, Lords, and Officers.

Leon. This sessions (to our great grief we pronounce)
Even pushes 'gainst our heart: the party tried,
The daughter of a king, our wife, and one
Of us too much belov'd. — Let us be clear'd
Of being tyrannous, since we so openly
Proceed in justice, which shall have due course,
Even¹ to the guilt, or the purgation. —
Produce the prisoner.

Off. It is his highness' pleasure, that the queen
Appear in person here in court. — Silence!²

Enter HERMIONE, guarded; PAULINA and Ladies attending.

Leon. Read the indictment.

Off. »Hermione, queen to the worthy Leontes, king of Sicilia, thou art here accused and arraigned of high treason, in committing adultery with Polixenes, king of Bohemia, and conspiring with Camillo to take away the life of our sovereign lord the king, thy royal husband:

the pretence³ whereof being by circumstances partly laid open, thou, Hermione, contrary to the faith and allegiance of a true subject, didst counsel and aid them, for their better safety, to fly away by night.«

Her. Since what I am to say, must be but that Which contradicts my accusation, and
The testimony on my part no other
But what comes from myself, it shall scarce boot me
To say, »Not guilty:« mine integrity,
Being counted falsehood, shall, as I express it,
Be so receiv'd. But thus: — if powers divine
Behold our human actions (as they do),
I doubt not then, but innocence shall make False accusation blush, and tyranny
Tremble at patience.⁴ — You, my lord, best know, (Who⁵ least will seem to do so) my past life
Hath been as continent, as chaste, as true,
As I am now unhappy; which⁶ is more
Than history can pattern, though devis'd
And play'd to take spectators. For behold me,
A fellow of the royal bed, which owe
A moiety of the throne,⁷ a great king's daughter,
The mother to a hopeful prince, here standing
To prate and talk for life and honour 'fore
Who please to come and hear. For life, I prize it
As I weigh grief, which I would spare:⁸ for honour,
'T is a derivative from me to mine,
And only that I stand for. I appeal
To your own conscience, Sir, before Polixenes
Came to your court, how I was in your grace,
How merited to be so; since he came,
With what encounter so uncurrent I
Have strain'd, to appear thus:⁹ if one jot beyond
The bound of honour, or, in act or will,
That way inclining, harden'd be the hearts
Of all that hear me, and my near'st of kin
Cry »Fie!« upon my grave!

Leon. I ne'er heard yet,
That any of these bolder vices wanted auf das Folgende zusammengefasst: the celestial habits etc. 3) So ist die Zeit den Gebrauch werth, den wir von ihr gemacht haben, so haben wir unsere Zeit mit der Reise nach Delphi nicht verloren. 4) So bei Greene: He therefore caused a generall proclamation to be made etc. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 523. 5) thus ist hinweisend auf das versiegelte Orakel, das Dion in der Hand hält.

1) even will Roderick hier adjectivisch als equal oder indifferent fassen. Indess steht even to wohl eher im gewöhnlichen Sinne: das Recht, dem sein gebührender Lauf bis zur Schuldigerklärung oder bis zur Freisprechung gelassen sein soll. 2) Die Fol. druckt Silence als Bühnenweisung. — D y c e theilt, nach Capell's Vorgange, diesen Ruf einem besondern Crier zu, die meisten Hgg. aber mit R o w e einfacher demselben Officer, der die vorhergehenden Worte spricht. — Das Auftreten der Hermione und ihres Gefolges ist in der Fol. nicht an dieser Stelle verzeichnet, sondern gleich zu Anfang der Scene: Hermione, as to her trial; Ladies. Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 1, Anm. 6. 3) pretence = Anschlag. So in Macbeth (A. 2, Sc. 3) Against the undivulg'd pretence I fight || Of treasonous malice. — Sh. fand das Wort an der entsprechenden Stelle bei Greene: but their pretence being partely spyed, she counselled them to flee away by night for their better safety. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 524. 4) Auch für diese Rede der Hermione hat Sh. Greene's Novelle theilweise fast wörtlich benutzt. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 525. 5) whom in der Fol., von R o w e verbessert. 6) which bezieht sich auf ein Wort wie unhappiness, das aus unhappy zu entlehnen ist: mein Unglück ist grösser, als die Geschichte ein Muster davon aufstellen kann, selbst wenn sie dramatisirt sein sollte, um die Zuschauer zu fesseln. — history ist sowohl = Geschichte, als = geschichtliches Drama. — So in K. Henry V. (A. 1, Chorus) Admit me chorus to this history. 7) Die ich den Thron zur Hälfte mein eigen nennen kann. 8) Was das Leben betrifft, so schätze ich es wie ich ein Leid schätze, das ich mir gern ersparen möchte; das Leben ist mir solch ein Leid, dass ich es gern verliere und dafür nicht das Wort ergreife. 9) Der Satz since he came etc. hängt noch ab von I appeal to your own conscience: ich frage Euch auf Euer Gewissen, mit welchem unrechtmässigen Entgegenkommen oder Zusammenkommen, seit dem Besuche des Polixenes, ich mich vergangen habe, dass ich so hier vor Gericht erscheinen muss. — encounter kommt in demselben Sinne von verbotenen Zusammenkünften vor in Much Ado about Nothing (A. 4, Sc. 1) Who hath — || Confess'd the vile encounters they have had || A thousand times in secret. — uncurrent, eigentlich von Münzen, die keinen Cours haben, = ungültig. — to strain = über das rechte Mass oder Geleis hinausgehen,

Less¹⁰ impudence to gainsay what they did,
Than to perform it first.

Her. That 's true enough;
Though 't is a saying, Sir, not due to me.

Leon. You will not own it.

Her. More than mistress of Which comes to me in name of fault, I must not
At all acknowledge.¹¹ For Polixenes
(With whom I am accus'd), I do confess,
I lov'd him, as in honour he requir'd,
With such a kind of love as might become
A lady like me; with a love, even such,
So and no other, as yourself commanded:
Which not to have done, I think, had been in me
Both disobedience and ingratitude
To you, and toward your friend,¹² whose love had spoke,
Even since it could speak from an infant, freely
That it was yours. Now, for conspiracy,
I know not how it tastes, though it be dish'd
For me to try how: all I know of it
Is, that Camillo was an honest man;
And why he left your court, the gods themselves,
Wotting¹³ no more than I, are ignorant.

Leon. You knew of his departure, as you know
What you have underta'en to do in 's absence.

Her. Sir,
You speak a language that I understand not:
My life stands in the level¹⁴ of your dreams,
Which I'll lay down.

Leon. Your actions are my dreams:
You had a bastard by Polixenes,
And I but dream'd it. — As you were past all shame,
(Those of your fact¹⁵ are so) so past all truth,
Which to deny concerns more than avails;¹⁶ for as Thy brat hath been cast out, like to itself,¹⁷
No father owning it (which is, indeed,
More criminal in thee than it), so thou
Shalt feel our justice, in whose easiest passage
Look for no less than death.

Her. Sir, spare your threats:
The bug, which you would fright me with, I seek.
To me can life be no commodity:
The crown and comfort of my life, your favour,
I do give lost; for I do feel it gone,

But know not how it went. My second joy,
And first-fruits of my body, from his presence
I am barr'd, like one infectious. My third comfort,
Starr'd most unluckily, is from my breast,
The innocent milk in its¹⁸ most innocent mouth,
Haled out to murder: myself on every post¹⁹
Proclaim'd a strumpet: with immodest hatred,
The child-bed privilege denied, which 'longs
To women of all fashion: lastly, hurried
Here to this place, i' the open air, before
I have got strength of limit.²⁰ Now, my liege,
Tell me what blessings I have here alive,
That I should fear to die? Therefore, proceed.
But yet hear this; mistake me not; — no life, —²¹
I prize it not a straw; but for mine honour
(Which I would free), if I shall be condemn'd
Upon surmises, all proofs sleeping else
But what your jealousies awake, I tell you,
'T is rigour, and not law.²² — Your honours all,²³
I do refer me to the oracle:
Apollo be my judge.

1. Lord. This your request
Is altogether just. Therefore, bring forth,
And in Apollo's name, his oracle.

[Exeunt several Officers.]

Her. The emperor of Russia was my father:²⁴
O! that he were alive, and here beholding
His daughter's trial; that he did but see
The flatness of my misery,²⁵ yet with eyes
Of pity, not revenge!

Re-enter Officers, with CLEOMENES and DION.

Off. You here shall swear upon this sword of justice,
That you, Cleomenes and Dion, have Been both at Delphos; and from thence have brought
This seal'd-up oracle, by the hand deliver'd
Of great Apollo's priest; and that, since then,
You have not dar'd to break the holy seal,
Nor read the secrets in 't.

Cleo., Dion. All this we swear.

Leon. Break up the seals, and read.

Off. [Reads.] »Hermione is chaste, Polixenes blameless, Camillo a true subject, Leontes a jealous tyrant, his zu weit gehen. So in K. Henry IV. First Part (A. 4, Sc. 1) You strain too far. 10) less für more, in Verbindung mit wanted, ist eine neue Probe von der Sh.'schen Lizenz in der gehäuften Anwendung negativer Wörter. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 62. Ebenso in Cymbeline (A. 1, Sc. 5) for taking a beggar without less quality. 11) Ich brauche von dem, was mir als Vergehen naht, nicht mehr als mein anzuerkennen, als das, was davon mir wirklich gehört. 12) disobedience gehört zu to you, und ingratitude zu toward your friend. 13) wotting, von dem veralteten to wot, hat Sh. nur an dieser Stelle: wenn sie nicht mehr davon wissen als ich. 14) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 3, Anm. 2. 15) fact = Unthat: Die, welche sich so vergehen wie Ihr, sind über alle Scham hinaus. — Sh. fand fact und past all shame in der Novelle von Greene. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 524. 16) Es liegt Dir mehr nahe, als es Dir frommt, es abzuleugnen. 17) Wie es sich für einen solchen Balg geziemt, den kein Vater ihn sein eigen nennt. 18) Die Fol. hat it für its, das an dieser Stelle sich erst bei Rowe findet. Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 3, Anm. 35. — Staunton, der an beiden Stellen it im Text stehen lässt, hält das Wort für den Vorgänger von its, wofür früher his gebraucht wurde. — starr'd most unluckily = der sehr ungünstige Sterne hat, unter solchen Sternen stehend; wie in Othello (A. 5, Sc. 2) ill-starr'd. 19) post = der Pfosten, an den die Anklageacte der Königin angeschlagen ist. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 1, Anm. 4. 20) strength of limit = die vorschriftsmässige Stärke, die den Kinderbettern bedungen oder bestimmt ist, ehe sie sich in die freie Luft wagen dürfen. — Die späteren Folioausgg. setzen limbs für limit. 21) So die Fol. — Manche Hgg. interpungiren: No! life, || I prize it etc. — Der Sinn ist: ich bitte um kein Leben, es handelt sich nicht um mein Leben. 22) Fast wörtlich aus Greene's Novelle: if she were condemned without any further prooffe it was rigour and not law. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 524. 23) your honours all ist der Ehrentitel, mit dem sie die Richter anredet. 24) Greene macht nicht die Gemahlin des Leontes, sondern die des Polixenes (Egistus) zu einer Tochter des Kaisers von Russland. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 523. 25) Sähe er nur, wie mich das Elend zu Boden geworfen, dahingestreckt hat. 26) Vgl. damit den innocent babe truly begotten; and the king shall live without an heir, if that which is lost be not found!«²⁶

Lords. Now, blessed be the great Apollo!

Her. Praised!

Leon. Hast thou read truth?

Off. Ay, my lord; even so

As it is here set down.

Leon. There is no truth at all i' the oracle.

The sessions shall proceed: this is mere falsehood.

Enter a Servant, hastily.

Serv. My lord the king, the king!

Leon. What is the business?

Serv. O Sir! I shall be hated to report it:

The prince your son, with mere conceit and fear
Of the queen's speed,²⁷ is gone.

Leon. How! gone?

Serv. Is dead.

Leon. Apollo's angry, and the heavens themselves
Do strike at my injustice. [HERMIONE faints.] How now
there!

Paul. This news is mortal to the queen. — Look down,

And see what death is doing.

Leon. Take her hence:

Her heart is but o'ercharg'd; she will recover. —

I have too much believ'd mine own suspicion: —

'Beseech you, tenderly apply to her

Some remedies for life. —

[Exeunt PAULINA and Ladies, with HERMIONE.]

Apollo, pardon

My great profaneness 'gainst thine oracle! —

I'll reconcile me to Polixenes,

New woo my queen, recall the good Camillo,

Whom I proclaim a man of truth, of mercy;

For, being transported by my jealousies

To bloody thoughts and to revenge, I chose

Camillo for the minister to poison

My friend Polixenes: which had been done,

But that the good mind of Camillo tardied

My swift command;²⁸ though I with death and with

Reward did threaten and encourage him.

Not doing it, and being done:²⁹ he, most humane,

And fill'd with honour, to my kingly guest

Unclasp'd my practice,³⁰ quit his fortunes here,

Which you knew great, and to the certain³¹ hazard

Of all incertainties himself commended,

No richer than his honour:³² — how he glisters

Thorough my rust!³³ and how his piety

Does my deeds make the blacker!

Re-enter PAULINA.

Paul.

Woe the while!

O, cut my lace, lest my heart, cracking it,

Break too!

1. Lord. What fit is this, good lady?

Paul. What studied torments, tyrant, hast for me?

What wheels? racks? fires? what flaying? boiling,³⁴

In leads, or oils? what old, or newer torture

Must I receive, whose every word deserves

To taste of thy most worst?³⁵ Thy tyranny,

Together working with thy jealousies, —

Fancies too weak for boys, too green and idle

For girls of nine, — O! think, what they have done,

And then run mad, indeed; stark mad! for all

Thy by-gone fooleries were but spices of it.

That thou betray'dst Polixenes, 't was nothing;

That did but show thee, of a fool, inconstant,

And damnable ingrateful:³⁶ nor was 't much,

Thou wouldst have poison'd good Camillo's honour,

To have him kill a king;³⁷ poor trespasses,

More monstrous standing by! whereof I reckon

The casting forth to crows thy baby daughter,

To be or none, or little,³⁸ though a devil

Would have shed water out of fire, ere done 't:³⁹

Nor is 't directly laid to thee, the death

Of the young prince, whose honourable thoughts

(Thoughts high for one so tender) cleft the heart

That could conceive a gross and foolish sire

Blemish'd his gracious dam: this is not, no,

Laid to thy answer: but the last, — O lords!

When I have said, cry »woe!«⁴⁰ — the queen, the queen,

Orakelspruch bei Greene, Einleitung pag. 525. — Einige Auflagen der Novelle haben the king shall die without an heir. 27) Von blosser Einbildung und Besorgniss wegen des ferneren Ergehens der Königin, wegen des Ausgangs ihres Processes. — Bei Greene wird dem plötzlichen Tode des jungen Prinzen diese Veranlassung nicht zugeschrieben. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 525. 28) to tardy = verzögern: wenn nicht Camillo's gute Gesinnung meinen Befehl, der Eile gebot, verzögert hätte. Bei Greene steht: if the good minde of his cupbearer had not prevented his purpose. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 525. 29) Obgleich ich ihm mit dem Tode drohte, wenn er es nicht thue, und ihn mit Belohnungen ermuthigte, die er erhalten solle, wenn es gethan sei. — Die Fol. unterscheidet nicht zwischen human und humane. 30) practice = Anschlag, Nachstellung. 31) Mit certain vervollständigt die zweite Folioausg. den unvollständigen Vers der Fol. — Die Antithese von certain und incertainties ist ganz Sh.'sch. So in Comedy of Errors (A. 2, Sc. 2) Until I know this sure uncertainty. — Zu commended vgl. A. 2, Sc. 3, Anm. 37. 32) Indem er nichts besass als seine Ehre, indem er keinen andern Reichthum auf seine Flucht mitnahm als seine Ehre. — Staunton verbindet diese Worte mit dem Folgenden und beginnt mit no richer einen neuen Satz. 33) Für through my rust der Fol. setzt die zweite Folioausg. through my dark rust, was viele Hgg. beibehalten. Einfacher wird dem Verse aufgeholfen, wenn man mit Malone thorough für through liest, wie wohl auch in Merchant of Venice (A. 3, Sc. 2) Shall lose a hair thorough Bassanio's fault zu lesen ist. 34) Die zweite Folioausg. fügt zur Vervollständigung des Verses noch burning hinzu, was den Zusammenhang zwischen boiling und in leads ungeschickt zerreisst. 35) Jedes Wort, das ich spreche, ist so kränkend für Dich, dass ich das Aergste verdiene, was Du mir anthun kannst. 36) Staunton erklärt of a fool mit for a fool. Plausibler ist Johnson's Deutung: das zeigte nur, wie Du aus einem Narren unbeständig und undankbar wurdest. — damnable für damnably, wie Sh. die Adjectiva auf -ble häufig adverbialisch gebraucht. 37) Malone macht darauf aufmerksam, dass Leontes diesen Umstand erst so eben in Paulina's Abwesenheit bekannt habe, — eine Vergesslichkeit von Seiten des Dichters. 38) Ich rechne die Aussetzung Deiner Tochter für kein Vergehen oder doch nur für ein geringes Vergehen, im Vergleich mit dem, was noch kommt. 39) Ein Teufel würde eher aus dem Höllenfeuer, in dem er steckt, Thränenwasser vergossen haben, aus Feuer Wasser erzeugt

The sweet'st, dear'st creature's dead; and vengeance for 't
Not dropp'd down yet.

1. Lord. The higher powers forbid!

Paul. I say, she's dead; I'll swear 't: if word, nor oath,

Prevail not, go and see. If you can bring Tincture, or lustre, in her lip, her eye,⁴¹
Heat outwardly, or breath within, I'll serve you
As I would do the gods. — But, O thou tyrant!
Do not repent these things, for they are heavier
Than all thy woes can stir;⁴² therefore, betake thee
To nothing but despair. A thousand knees
Ten thousand years together, naked, fasting,⁴³
Upon a barren mountain, and still winter,
In storm perpetual, could not move the gods
To look that way thou wert.

Leon. Go on, go on;
Thou canst not speak too much: I have deserv'd
All tongues to talk their bitterest.

1. Lord. Say no more:
Howe'er the business goes, you have made fault
I' the boldness of your speech.

Paul. I am sorry for 't:⁴⁴
All faults I make, when I shall come to know them,
I do repent. Alas! I have show'd too much
The rashness of a woman. He is touch'd
To the noble heart. — What's gone, and what's past help,

Should be past grief: do not receive affliction
At my petition;⁴⁵ I beseech you rather,
Let me be punish'd, that have minded you
Of what you should forget. Now, good my liege,
Sir, royal Sir, forgive a foolish woman:
The love I bore your queen, — lo, fool again! —
I'll speak of her no more, nor of your children;
I'll not remember you of my own lord,
Who is lost too. Take your patience to you,
And I'll say nothing.

Leon. Thou didst speak but well,
When most the truth, which I receive much better,
Than to be pitied of thee. Pr'ythee, bring me
To the dead bodies of my queen, and son.
One grave shall be for both: upon them⁴⁶ shall
The causes of their death appear, unto
Our shame perpetual. Once a day I'll visit
The chapel where they lie; and tears shed there

Shall be my recreation: so long as nature
Will bear up with this exercise, so long
I daily vow to use it. Come, and lead me
To these sorrows.⁴⁷ [Exit.

SCENE III.

Bohemia. A desert Country near the Sea.

Enter ANTIGONUS, with the Babe; and a Mariner.

Ant. Thou art perfect¹ then, our ship hath touch'd upon

The deserts of Bohemia?

Mar. Ay, my lord; and fear
We have landed in ill time: the skies look grimly,
And threaten present blusters. In my conscience,
The heavens with that we have in hand are angry,
And frown upon 's.

Ant. Their sacred wills be done! — Go, get aboard;
Look to thy bark: I'll not be long, before
I call upon thee.

Mar. Make your best haste, and go not Too far i' the land: 't is like to be loud weather;
Besides, this place is famous for the creatures
Of prey that keep upon 't.

Ant. Go thou away:
I'll follow instantly.

Mar. I am glad at heart
To be so rid o' the business. [Exit

Ant. Come, poor babe: —
I have heard (but not believ'd), the spirits o' the dead
May walk again: if such thing be, thy mother
Appear'd to me last night, for ne'er was dream
So like a waking. To me comes a creature,
Sometimes her head on one side, some another;
I never saw a vessel of like sorrow,
So fill'd, and so becoming:² in pure white robes,
Like very sanctity, she did approach
My cabin where I lay, thrice bow'd before me,
And, gasping to begin some speech, her eyes
Became two spouts: the fury spent,³ anon
Did this break from her: — »Good Antigonus,
Since fate, against thy better disposition,
Hath made thy person for the thrower-out
Of my poor babe, according to thine oath,
Places remote enough are in Bohemia,
There weep, and leave it crying; and, for the babe haben, ehe er das gethan. 40) Wenn ich ausgesprochen habe, so sollt ihr Wehe rufen. 41) scil. tincture in her lip und lustre in her eye. 42) Diese Schuld lastet schwerer, als dass all Deine Klage und Reue sie bewegen, fortschaffen könnte. 43) naked, fasting bezieht sich auf Diejenigen, welche etwa knien wollten, um die Götter zu rühren und die Schuld des Leontes zu sühnen. — and still winter = und indem es stets Winter wäre. 44) Dieser plötzliche Wechsel in Paulina's Reden und Gedanken ist nicht aus den Worten des ersten Hofmannes zu erklären, sondern aus dem Anblick des ganz vernichteten Leontes. 45) Paulina bezieht sich auf ihre früheren Worte betake thee to nothing but despair, die sie hiermit zurücknimmt: lässt die Verzweiflung nicht an Euch kommen, weil ich Euch darum ersuche, dazu auffordere. — at my petition, wofür Singer at my relation vermuthet, scheint gesichert durch das folgende I beseech you rather = ich bitte Euch vielmehr u. s. w. 46) upon them geht auf one grave, weil es das Grab Beider sein soll, daran in Grabschriften die Ursache ihres Todes verkündet wird. — Vgl. damit die Grabschrift in Greene's Novelle, Einleitung pag. 526. 47) So ist die Versabtheilung der Fol., welche Collier, Knight, Dyce und Staunton wieder herstellen. Die frühern Hgg. theilen ab: So long as || Nature will bear up with this exercise, || So long I daily vow to use it. Come, || And lead me to these sorrows.

1) perfect = seiner Sache gewiss, sicher. 2) Ich sah nie ein Gefäss solcher Trauer, das so erfüllt war von der Trauer, und dem diese zugleich so wohl anstand. — Das Bild von vessel wird fortgesetzt in fill'd, während bei becoming der Dichter mehr an sorrow dachte. 3) fury geht auf die Gewalt, mit der die Thränen aus den Augen, wie aus Wasserröhren, sich ergiessen: als dieser Sturm und Drang erschöpft war. — Drei Zeilen weiter hat die Fol

Is counted lost for ever, Perdita,
 I pr'ythee, call 't: for this ungentle business,
 Put on thee by my lord, thou ne'er shalt see
 Thy wife Paulina more: — and so, with shrieks,
 She melted into air. Affrighted much,
 I did in time collect myself, and thought
 This was so,⁴ and no slumber. Dreams are toys;
 Yet for this once, yea, superstitiously,
 I will be squar'd by this. I do believe,
 Hermione hath suffer'd death; and that
 Apollo would, this being indeed the issue
 Of king Polixenes, it should here be laid,
 Either for life or death, upon the earth
 Of its right father. — Blossom, speed thee well!

[Laying down the babe.

There lie; and there thy character:⁵ there these,

[Laying down a bundle.

Which may, if fortune please, both breed thee, pretty,⁶
 And still rest thine. — The storm begins. — Poor wretch!
 That for thy mother's fault art thus expos'd
 To loss,⁷ and what may follow. — Weep I cannot,
 But my heart bleeds, and most accurs'd am I,
 To be by oath enjoin'd to this. — Farewell!
 The day frowns more and more: thou art like to have
 A lullaby too rough.⁸ I never saw
 The heavens so dim by day. A savage clamour!⁹ —
 Well may I get aboard! — This is the chase;
 I am gone for ever. [Exit, pursued by a bear.¹⁰

Enter an old Shepherd.

Shep. I would there were no age between ten and three-and-twenty, or that youth would sleep out the rest;¹¹ for there is nothing in the between but getting wenches with child, wronging the ancientry,¹² stealing, fighting. — Hark you now! — Would any but these boiled-brains of nineteen, and two-and-twenty, hunt this weather? They have scared away two of my best sheep; which, I fear, the wolf will sooner find than the master:
 if any where I have them, 't is by the sea-side, browsing of ivy.¹³ Good luck, an 't be thy will! — What have we here? [Taking up the babe.] Mercy on 's, a barn;¹⁴ a very pretty barn! A boy, or a child,¹⁵ I wonder? A pretty one; a very pretty one. Sure some scape:¹⁶ though I am not bookish, yet I can read waiting-gentlewoman in the scape. This has been some stair-work, some trunk-work, some behind-door-work: they were warmer that got this, than the poor thing is here. I'll take it up for pity; yet I'll tarry till my son come: he hollaed¹⁷ but even now. — Whoa, ho ho!

Clo. [Without.] Hilloa, loa!

Shep. What! art so near? If thou 'lt see a thing to talk on when thou art dead and rotten, come hither.

Enter Clown.

What ail'st thou, man?

Clo. I have seen two such sights, by sea, and by land
 — but I am not to say it is a sea, for it is now the sky:
 betwixt the firmament and it you cannot thrust a bodkin's point.

Shep. Why, boy, how is it?

Clo. I would you did but see how it chafes, how it rages, how it takes up the shore!¹⁸ but that 's not to the point. O, the most piteous cry of the poor souls!
 sometimes to see 'em, and not to see 'em; now the ship boring the moon with her mainmast, and anon swallowed with yest and froth, as you 'd thrust a cork into a hogs-head. And then for the land-service:¹⁹ — to see how the bear tore out his shoulder-bone; how he cried to me for help, and said, his name was Antigonus, a nobleman.
 — But to make an end of the ship: — to see how the sea flap-dragoned it;²⁰ — but, first, how the poor souls roared, and the sea mocked them; — and how the poor gentleman roared, and the bear mocked him, both roaring louder than the sea or weather.

Shep. Name of mercy! when was this, boy?

Clo. Now, now; I have not winked since I saw these sights: the men are not yet cold under water, nor the bear half-dined²¹ on the gentleman: he 's at it now.

Shep. 'Would I had been by, to have helped the old man!²²

Clo. I would you had been by the ship's side, to have helped her: there your charity would have lacked footing.

Shep. Heavy matters! heavy matters! but look thee here, boy. Now bless thyself: thou mettest with things

Thower-out, was die zweite Folioausg. verbessert. 4) Auf was liegt der Nachdruck: ich dachte, dass dies wirklich so geschehen sei, und dass ich das nicht im Schlafe geträumt. 5) character = die Kennzeichen des Kindes, zugleich mit seinem Namen. — Unter these sind das Gold und die Kostbarkeiten verstanden, die, wenn es dem Schicksal gefällt, zur Auferziehung des Kindes dienen, sein Eigenthum bleiben, ihm nicht geraubt sein sollen. 6) pretty, wofür Rowe pretty one setzt, ist Vocativ der Anrede an das Kind. 7) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 3, Anm. 38. 8) So sagt bei Greene die Königin: shalt thou have the whistling windes for thy lullabie? Vgl. Einleitung pag. 524. 9) Der Lärm der Jagd. — Als er den Bären kommen sieht, ruft er: This is the chase etc. = das ist das gejagte Thier. 10) Diese Bühnenweisung ist aus der Fol. 11) Die Frist zwischen dem zehnten Jahre und dem dreiundzwanzigsten. — So ist the between = die Zwischenzeit. — Die Cambridge Edd. vermuthen sixteen für ten, da, in Ziffern geschrieben, der Drucker leicht 10 und 16 verwechseln konnte. 12) ancientry = das Alter, die alten Leute, collectiv gefasst, wie peasantry u. A. 13) browsing on the sea ivy bei Greene. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 526. 14) barn = Kind, ein provinzielles Wort. 15) Steevens' Bemerkung, dass in einigen Grafschaften child für ein weibliches Kind gebraucht werde, bestätigt Halliwell aus einem älteren Glossary of Devonshire Words, in dem es heisst: A child, a female infant. 16) scape = Fehltritt. Das Kind ist die Frucht eines Fehltritts, wie der Schäfer meint, und, wie er weiter vermuthet, mit einer Zofe auf einer Treppe, auf einem Koffer oder hinter der Thür gezeugt. 17) hallow'd in der Fol. 18) to take up = Jemanden hart anfahren, hier von dem Anstürmen der See gegen die Küste, wie sonst to chide davon gebraucht wird bei Sh. 19) land-service, das in K. Henry IV. Second Part (A. 1, Sc. 2) in seinem eigentlichen Sinne vorkommt, steht hier scherzhaft für das, was auf dem Lande geschah, im Gegensatz zur See. 20) to flap-dragon = Etwas zu einem flap-dragon machen, als solches verschlucken. — flap-dragon ist irgend ein brennbarer Stoff, der angezündet und mit dem Getränk zusammen verschluckt wurde. So in Love's Labour's Lost (A. 5, Sc. 1) thou art easier swallowed than a flap-dragon. 21) half-dined = der sich halb satt gegessen hat. So in Troilus and Cressida (A. 5, Sc. 9) My half-suppt sword, that frankly would have fed. 22) Für old man wollte Theobald nobleman lesen, dying, I with things new-born. Here 's a sight for thee: look thee, a bearing-cloth²³ for a squire's child! Look thee here: take up, take up, boy; open 't. So, let 's see. It was told me, I should be rich by the fairies: this is some changeling.²⁴ — Open 't: what 's within, boy?

Clo. You 're a made²⁵ old man: if the sins of your youth are forgiven you, you 're well to live. Gold! all gold!

Shep. This is fairy gold,²⁶ boy, and 't will prove so: up with 't, keep it close; home, home, the next way. We are lucky, boy; and to be so still requires nothing but secrecy. — Let my sheep go. — Come, good boy, the next way home.

Clo. Go you the next way with your findings: I 'll go see if the bear be gone from the gentleman, and how much he hath eaten: they are never curst, but when they are hungry.²⁷ If there be any of him left, I 'll bury it.

Shep. That 's a good deed. If thou may'st discern by that which is left of him, what he is, fetch me to the sight of him.

Clo. Marry, will I; and you shall help to put him i' the ground.

Shep. 'T is a lucky day, boy, and we 'll do good deeds on 't. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

Enter TIME, as Chorus.

Time. I, that please some, try all; both joy, and terror,
Of good and bad;¹ that make, and unfold error: —
Now take upon me, in the name of Time,
To use my wings. Impute it not a crime
To me, or my swift passage, that I slide
O'er sixteen years, and leave the growth untried
Of that wide gap;² since it is in my power

To o'erthrow law, and in one-self-born hour³
To plant and o'erwhelm custom. Let me pass
The same I am, ere ancient'st order was,
Or what is now receiv'd:⁴ I witness to
The times that brought them in; so shall I do
To the freshest things now reigning, and make stale
The glistening of this present, as my tale
Now seems to it.⁵ Your patience this allowing,
I turn my glass, and give my scene such growing,
As you had slept between. Leontes leaving. —
The effects of his fond jealousies so grieving,
That he shuts up himself; — imagine me,
Gentle spectators, that I now may be
In fair Bohemia;⁶ and remember well,
I mention'd a son o' the king's, which Florizel
I now name to you; and with speed so pace
To speak of Perdita, now grown in grace
Equal with wondering:⁷ what of her ensues,
I list not prophesy; but let Time's news
Be known, when 't is brought forth: — a shepherd's daughter,
And what to her adheres, which follows after,
Is the argument of Time.⁸ Of this allow,
If ever you have spent time worse ere now:
If never, yet⁹ that Time himself doth say,
He wishes earnestly you never may. [Exit.]

SCENE I.

Bohemia. A Room in the Palace of POLIXENES.

Enter POLIXENES and CAMILLO.

Pol. I pray thee, good Camillo, be no more importunate: 't is a sickness denying thee anything, a death to grant this.

Cam. It is fifteen¹ years, since I saw my country: though I have, for the most part, been aired abroad, weil der Schäfer von dem Alter des Antigonus nichts wissen konnte. Vgl. aber A. 3, Sc. 2, Anm. 37. 23) bearing-cloth = der Mantel, mit dem das Kind auf dem Wege zur Taufe bedeckt wird. 24) changeling = ein Kind, das die Feen geraubt oder vertauscht haben. So in Midsummer-Night's Dream (A. 2, Sc. 1) A lovely boy, stol'n from an Indian king: || She never had so sweet a changeling. 25) made verbesserte Theobald das mad der Fol.: ein alter Mann, dessen Glück gemacht ist. — Sh. fand das Wort bei Greene: The good man desired his wife to be quiet; if she would hold her peace, they were made for ever. 26) fairy gold = Gold, das von den Feen Einem in den Weg gestreut wird und Glück bringt, wenn man nichts davon verlauten lässt. — Darauf bezieht sich and 't will prove so. 27) Die Bären sind nur böseartig, wenn sie hungrig sind.

1) Die Zeit erfreut die Guten, und schreckt die Bösen, insofern sie Beiden den Lohn ihrer Thaten bringt. — Die Idee zu dieser Personification der Zeit als Chorus fand Sh. wahrscheinlich in dem Titel der Greene'schen Novelle. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 521. — Die Cambridge Edd. stellen aus der Fol. makes und unfolds wieder her, was schon Rowe in make und unfold verbessert hatte. 2) Und dass ich nicht untersuche, was in dieser weiten Kluft eines Zeitraumes von sechzehn Jahren erwachsen ist. 3) one ist mit self zu verbinden: in einer und derselben Stunde, die ich geboren habe, kann ich ein Herkommen begründen und vernichten. So in Twelfth-Night (A. 1, Sc. 1) one self king. 4) or what is now receiv'd bezieht sich auf ancient'st order: oder zur Zeit derjenigen Ordnung, die jetzt gilt. — Auf order geht das folgende them: ich kann als Zeuge dienen für die Zeiten, welche diese Ordnung einführten. 5) Mit der Zeit wird der Glanz dieser Gegenwart so fahl und glanzlos sein, wie meine Erzählung schon jetzt im Vergleich damit erscheint. 6) Diese Stelle ist erst durch Staunton's Interpunction in das rechte Licht gesetzt: indem wir Leontes verlassen, der die Früchte seiner thörichten Eifersucht so betrauert, dass er sich einschliesst, denkt Euch, liebe Zuschauer, dass ich nun im schönen Böhmen bin. — Die frühern Ausgg. interpungiren: Leontes leaving || The effects of his fond jealousies; so grieving, || That he shuts up himself; imagine me etc. — Das me zu imagine ist ethischer Dativ. 7) Perdita ist in einer Anmuth gediehen, die eben so gross ist wie die Bewunderung, welche sie erregt. 8) Eine Schäfertochter und was zu ihr gehört, was sich weiter daraus ergibt, das ist der Stoff, den ich, die Zeit, zu verhandeln habe. — Darauf bezieht sich dann Of this allow etc.: Gestattet mir das, wenn u. s. w. 9) Manche Hgg. interpungiren: If never yet, that Time etc. — Der Sinn ist aber: wenn ihr niemals die Zeit schlechter anwendetet, so sagt nurmehr jene selbe Zeit, d. h. der Chorus, der hier spricht, u. s. w.

1) Hammer wollte sixteen lesen. Vgl. den obigen Chorus: that I slide o'er sixteen years. 2) Oder ich bin doch so dreist mir einzubilden, dass ich seinem tief eindringenden Kummer zur Beseitigung gereichen desire to lay my bones there. Besides, the penitent king, my master, hath sent for me; to whose feeling sorrows I might be some allay, or I o'erween to think so,² — which is another spur to my departure.

Pol. As thou lovest me, Camillo, wipe not out the rest of thy services, by leaving me now. The need I have of thee, thine own goodness hath made: better not to have had thee, than thus to want thee. Thou, having made me businesses, which none without thee can sufficiently manage, must either stay to execute them thyself, or take away with thee the very services thou hast done; which if I have not enough considered (as too much I cannot), to be more thankful to thee shall be my study, and my profit therein, the heaping friendships.³ Of that fatal country, Sicilia, pr'ythee speak no more, whose very naming punishes me with the remembrance of that penitent, as thou call'st him, and reconciled king, my brother; whose loss of his most precious queen and children are even now to be afresh lamented. Say to me, when saw'st thou the prince Florizel, my son? Kings are no less unhappy, their issue not being gracious, than they are in losing them when they have approved their virtues.⁴

Cam. Sir, it is three days, since I saw the prince. What his happier affairs may be, are to me unknown; but I have, missingly,⁵ noted, he is of late much retired from court, and is less frequent to his princely exercises than formerly he hath appeared.

Pol. I have considered so much, Camillo, and with some care; so far, that I have eyes under my service, which look upon his removedness: from whom I have this intelligence, that he is seldom from the house of a most homely shepherd; a man, they say, that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbours,⁶ is grown into an unspeakable estate.

Cam. I have heard, Sir, of such a man, who hath a daughter of most rare note: the report of her is extended more than can be thought to begin from such a cottage.

Pol. That's likewise part of my intelligence, but, I fear, the angle that plucks our son thither.⁷ Thou shalt accompany us to the place, where we will, not appearing what we are, have some question⁸ with the shepherd; from whose simplicity I think it not uneasy to get the cause of my son's resort thither. Pr'ythee, be my present partner in this business, and lay aside the thoughts of Sicilia.

Cam. I willingly obey your command.

Pol. My best Camillo! — We must disguise ourselves.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The Same. A Road near the Shepherd's Cottage.

Enter AUTOLYCUS, singing.

When daffodils begin to peer, —

With, heigh! the doxy¹ over the dale, —

Why, then comes in the sweet o' the year;

For the red blood reigns in the winter's pale.²

The white sheet bleaching on the hedge, —

With heigh! the sweet birds, O, how they sing! —

Doth set my pugging tooth on edge;³

For a quart of ale is a dish for a king.

The lark, that tirra-lirra chants, —

With heigh! with heigh!⁴ the thrush and the jay,

Are summer songs for me and my aunts,⁵

While we lie tumbling in the hay.

I have served prince Florizel, and, in my time, wore three-pile;⁶ but now I am out of service:

But shall I go mourn for that, my dear?

The pale moon shines by night;

And when I wander here and there,

I then do most go right.

If tinkers may have leave to live,

And bear the sow-skin budget,

Then my account I well may give,

And in the stocks avouch it.⁷

My traffic is sheets; when the kite builds, look to lesser linen.⁸ My father named me Autolycus; who being, as I am, littered under Mercury,⁹ was likewise a snapper-up of unconsidered trifles. With die, and drab, I purchased this caparison,¹⁰ and my revenue is the silly cheat.¹¹ könnte. 3) Wenn ich Deine Dienste bisher nicht genugsam anerkannt habe, so soll es mein Bestreben sein, Dir meinen Dank besser zu erweisen, und mein Vortheil soll darin bestehen, dass ich Freundschaftsdienste, die Du mir leistest, sammle, zu meinem Nutzen aufhäufe. 4) Wenn diese Kinder bereits Proben ihrer Tüchtigkeit abgelegt haben. 5) missingly = in vermissender Weise, indem ich ihn vermisste. Weniger einleuchtend erklärt Steevens missingly mit at intervals, not constantly. — Hanmer schlug musingly vor. 6) Mehr als seine Nachbarn es sich vorstellen oder denken können. 7) Manche Hgg. interpungiren: But I fear the angle etc. — but the angle, durch das parenthetische I fear getrennt, ist zu verbinden: das nur ist die Angel, wie ich befürchte. 8) question = Unterredung.

1) doxy = die liederliche Dirne, die es mit einem Landstreicher hält. — Autolycus schildert in dem Liede die Reize seines Vagabundenlebens, wie er im Beginn des Frühlings mit seiner Dirne über Land zieht. 2) pale = Bezirk, Bereich. 3) Das weisse Leinen, das an der Hecke zum Bleichen aufgehängt wird, schärft den Diebeszahn, regt das diebische Gelüste an. — to pug = stehlen, aus der Diebessprache, synonym mit dem gewöhnlicheren to prig. — In Dekker's Drama The Roaring Girl kommt puggards als Bezeichnung einer bestimmten Classe von Gaunern oder Dieben vor. 4) So die zweite Folioausg. In der Fol. steht with heigh nur einmal. 5) aunt, sonst ein gemeiner Ausdruck für bawd, scheint von Autolycus hier gebraucht, wie vorher doxy. 6) three-pile = feiner Sammet. 7) Wenn die Kesselflicker mit ihrem Ranzén frei durch's Land ziehen dürfen, so kann ich auch mein Vagabundiren vertreten, selbst wenn ich deshalb in den Fussblock, die gewöhnliche Strafe der Landstreicher, gesetzt werde. 8) Autolycus' Geschäft ist Leinenzeug, das er stiehlt. (Vgl. oben Anm. 3.) Er empfiehlt also scherzhaft den Leuten, auf ihre kleinere Wäsche zu achten, dass der Habicht sie nicht von der Hecke weghole, um sein Nest, das er baut, damit auszustatten. 9) Mercury = der Planet, unter dessen Einfluss Autolycus geboren war, zugleich = Mercur, der Gott der Diebe. — who bezieht sich auf Autolycus. Sh. denkt dabei an den mythischen Sohn des Mercur dieses Namens, den er als gewandten Dieb wahrscheinlich aus Golding's Uebersetzung des Ovid kennen gelernt hatte. 10) Das Würfelspiel und der Verkehr mit liederlichen Dirnen haben mich

Gallows, and knock, are too powerful on the highway: beating, and hanging, are terrors to me: for the life to come, I sleep out the thought of it. — A prize! a prize!

Enter Clown.

Clo. Let me see: — every 'leven wether tods;¹² every tod yields — pound and odd shilling: fifteen hundred shorn, — what comes the wool to?

Aut. [Aside.] If the springe hold, the cock's¹³ mine.

Clo. I cannot do 't without counters. — Let me see; what am I to buy for our sheep-shearing feast? »Three pound of sugar; five pound of currants; rice,« — what will this sister of mine do with rice? But my father hath made her mistress of the feast, and she lays it on.¹⁴ She hath made me four-and-twenty nosegays for the shearers; three-man song-men all,¹⁵ and very good ones, but they are most of them means and bases:¹⁶ but one Puritan amongst them, and he sings psalms to horn-pipes. I must have saffron, to colour the warden pies; mace, — dates, — none; that's out of my note:¹⁷ »nutmegs, seven: a race or two of ginger;« but that I may beg: — »four pound of prunes, and as many of raisins o' the sun.«

Aut. O, that ever I was born!

[Groveling on the ground.]

Clo. I' the name of me, —

Aut. O, help me, help me! pluck but off these rags, and then, death, death!

Clo. Alack, poor soul! thou hast need of more rags to lay on thee, rather than have these off.

Aut. O, Sir! the loathsomeness of them offend¹⁸ me more than the stripes I have received, which are mighty ones, and millions.

Clo. Alas, poor man! a million of beating may come to a great matter.

Aut. I am robbed, Sir, and beaten; my money and apparel ta'en from me, and these detestable things put upon me.

Clo. What, by a horseman, or a footman?

Aut. A footman, sweet Sir, a footman.

Clo. Indeed, he should be a footman, by the garments he hath left with thee: if this be a horseman's coat, it hath seen very hot service. Lend me thy hand, I'll help thee: come, lend me thy hand. [Helping him up.]

Aut. O! good Sir, tenderly, O!

Clo. Alas, poor soul!

Aut. O, good Sir; softly, good Sir. I fear, Sir, my shoulder-blade is out.

Clo. How now? canst stand?

Aut. Softly, dear Sir: [picks his pocket] good Sir, softly. You ha' done me a charitable office.

Clo. Dost lack any money? I have a little money for thee.

Aut. No, good, sweet Sir: no, I beseech you, Sir. I have a kinsman not past three quarters of a mile hence, unto whom I was going: I shall there have money, or anything I want. Offer me no money, I pray you! that kills my heart.

Clo. What manner of fellow was he that robbed you?

Aut. A fellow, Sir, that I have known to go about with trol-my-dames:¹⁹ I knew him once a servant of the prince. I cannot tell, good Sir, for which of his virtues it was, but he was certainly whipped out of the court.

Clo. His vices, you would say: there's no virtue whipped out of the court: they cherish it, to make it stay there, and yet it will no more but abide.²⁰

Aut. Vices, I would say, Sir. I know this man well: he hath been since an ape-bearer; then a process-server, a bailiff; then he compassed a motion of the Prodigal Son,²¹ and married a tinker's wife within a mile where my land and living lies; and, having flown over many knavish professions, he settled only in rogue: some call him Autolycus.

Clo. Out upon him! Prig,²² for my life, prig: he haunts wakes, fairs, and bear-baitings.

Aut. Very true, Sir; he, Sir, he: that's the rogue, that put me into this apparel.

Clo. Not a more cowardly rogue in all Bohemia: if you had but looked big, and spit at him, he'd have run.

Aut. I must confess to you, Sir, I am no fighter: I am false of heart that way,²³ and that he knew, I warrant him.

Clo. How do you now?

Aut. Sweet Sir, much better than I was: I can stand, and walk. I will even take my leave of you, and pace softly towards my kinsman's.

Clo. Shall I bring thee on the way?

Aut. No, good-faced Sir; no, sweet Sir.

Clo. Then fare thee well. I must go buy spices for our sheep-shearing.

Aut. Prosper you, sweet Sir! [Exit Clown.] — Your purse is not hot enough to purchase your spice.²⁴ I'll be so zerlumpt gemacht, wie ich jetzt erscheine. 11) silly cheat = kleiner Taschendiebstahl, im Gegensatz zu dem gefährlichen Gewerbe eines Strassenräubers, bei dem es nicht ohne heftige Stösse abgeht und am Ende auf den Galgen hinausläuft. 12) to tod von dem substantivischen tod = ein Gewicht von 28 Pfund Wolle: je elf Widder liefern so viele Pfund Wolle. 13) cock ist hier woodcock, wie aus springe hervorgeht. 14) to lay it on = loslegen, Etwas tüchtig betreiben. 15) Leute, die sich auf dreistimmige, lustige Lieder verstehen. So in Heywood's K. Edward IV.: call Dudgeon and his fellows, we'll have a three-man song. 16) Der Clown scheint den eigentlichen Sinn von means and bases = Tenor und Bass, nicht zu verstehen, da er sie mit one Puritan zusammenstellt. — warden = eine Art grosser Birne, die vorzugsweise zum Backen gebraucht wurde. 17) Das steht nicht auf meinem Verzeichniss. 18) So die Fol., nach der Sh.'schen Construction, wegen of them. — Manche Hgg. lesen offends mit der zweiten Folioausg. 19) trol-my-dames, aus dem französischen trou-madame, ein Spiel, dessen eigentlicher englischer Name pigeon-holes war, weil es darauf ankam, durch die den Oeffnungen eines Taubenschlages ähnlichen Löcher eines Brettes Kugeln zu rollen. Farmer citirt dazu aus einer Abhandlung von Dr. Jones über die Bäder in Buckstone folgende Beschreibung des Spieles: The ladyes, gentle women, wyves, maydes, if the weather be not agreeable, may have in the ende of a benche, eleven holes made, into the which to troule pummits, either vyolent or softe, after their own discretion: the pastyme troule in madame is termed. 20) Die Hgg. nehmen einen Gegensatz zwischen to stay = bleibend verweilen, und to abide = vorübergehend sich aufhalten, an. Staunton erklärt plausibler: es will sich nur eben, es will sich kaum aufhalten. 21) Ein Marionettenspiel, mit dem er die Geschichte vom verlorenen Sohne im Evangelium aufführte. 22) prig = Beutelschneider, Taschendieb. Vgl. oben Anm. 3. 23) Man kann sich in der Beziehung nicht auf mich oder auf meinen with you at your sheep-shearing too. If I make not this cheat²⁵ bring out another, and the shearers prove sheep, let me be unrolled,²⁶ and my name put in the book of virtue!

Jog on, jog on, the foot-path way,²⁷

And merrily hent²⁸ the stile-a:

A merry heart goes all the day,

Your sad tires in a mile-a.

SCENE III.

The Same. A Lawn before a Shepherd's Cottage.

Enter FLORIZEL and PERDITA.

Flo. These your unusual weeds to each part of you Do¹ give a life: no shepherdess, but Flora Peering in April's front. This your sheep-shearing Is as a meeting of the petty gods, And you the queen on 't.

Per. Sir, my gracious lord, To chide at your extremes it not becomes me: O! pardon, that I name them.² — Your high self, The gracious mark o' the land,³ you have obscur'd With a swain's wearing, and me, poor lowly maid, Most goddess-like prank'd up.⁴ But that our feasts In every mess have folly, and the feeders Digest it with a custom,⁵ I should blush To see you so attired, swoon,⁶ I think, To show myself a glass.

Flo. I bless the time, When my good falcon made her flight across Thy father's ground.⁷

Per. Now, Jove afford you cause! To me the difference⁸ forges dread; your greatness Hath not been us'd to fear. Even now I tremble To think, your father, by some accident,

Should pass this way, as you did. O, the Fates! How would he look, to see his work, so noble, Vilely bound up?⁹ What would he say? Or how Should I, in these my borrow'd flaunts, behold The sternness of his presence?

Flo.

Apprehend

Nothing but jollity. The gods themselves, Humbling their deities to love,¹⁰ have taken The shapes of beasts upon them: Jupiter Became a bull, and bellow'd; the green Neptune A ram, and bleated; and the fire-rob'd god, Golden Apollo, a poor humble swain, As I seem now. Their transformations Were never for a piece of beauty rarer, Nor in a way so chaste,¹¹ since my desires Run not before mine honour, nor my lusts Burn hotter than my faith.

Per.

O! but, Sir,¹²

Your resolution cannot hold, when 't is Oppos'd, as it must be, by the power of the king. One of these two must be necessities, Which then will speak, — that you must change this purpose, Or I my life.

Flo.

Thou dearest Perdita, With these forc'd thoughts,¹³ I pr'ythee, darken not The mirth o' the feast: or I 'll be thine, my fair, Or not my father's; for I cannot be Mine own, nor anything to any, if I be not thine: to this I am most constant, Though destiny say, no. Be merry, gentle;¹⁴ Strangle such thoughts as these with anything That you behold the while.¹⁵ Your guests are coming: Lift up your countenance, as it were the day Of celebration of that nuptial, which We two have sworn shall come.

Muth verlassen. 24) Eine Anspielung auf den heissen Geschmack des Gewürzes, das der Clown mit dem ausgeleerten Geldbeutel nicht kaufen kann. So in Twelfth-Night (A. 2, Sc. 3) ginger shall be hot i' the mouth too. 25) Vgl. oben Anm. 11. 26) unrolled ist antithetisch aus dem folgenden and my name etc. zu erklären: so lasst mich aus der Rolle, in der mein Name bisher stand, streichen, d. h. aus der Rolle der Spitzbuben, und lasst meinen Namen in das Buch der Tugend eintragen. — Für unrolled vermuthet ein Anonymus unrogued. 27) Diese Strophe findet sich mit noch zwei folgenden als Canon in einer Gedichtsammlung, gedruckt 1661 unter dem Titel An Antidote against Melancholy. 28) to hent oder to hend, eigentlich = ergreifen, steht hier und an einer andern Stelle bei Sh., in Measure for Measure (A. 4, Sc. 6), von einem Platze, den man erreicht.

1) Die Fol. hat do's. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 1. — Vgl. mit dem Anfang dieser Scene das Entsprechende bei Greene, Einleitung pag. 527. 2) Verzeiht, dass ich es so nenne, nämlich extremes = auffallendes, zu weit gehendes Thun und Treiben. 3) Worauf das ganze Land sein Auge richtet. 4) Und mich armes, niederes Mädchen habt Ihr ganz wie eine Göttin aufgeputzt. — Sie meint die phantastische Tracht, in der sie bei dem Feste der Schafschur erscheint, wie Florizel schon vorher sagte These your unusual weeds etc. 5) Wenn nicht unsere ländlichen Feste in jedem Theil ihrer Mahlzeiten einige Thorheit mit sich brächten, welche die Gäste dann mit verdauen, weil sie herkömmlich ist. — Zu mess vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 56. — it zu digest ergänzt die zweite Folioausg. 6) swoon ist Hammer's plausible Emendation für sworn der Fol.: ich würde erröthen, dass ich Euch in so niedriger Hirtentracht sähe, ja ich würde in Ohnmacht fallen, glaube ich, wenn ich in meinem Putz mich in einem Spiegel betrachtete, mir einen Spiegel vorhielte. — Die Hgg., welche sworn beibehalten, beziehen das Wort auf you: als ob Ihr geschworen hättet, mir einen Spiegel vorzuhalten. — In Timon of Athens (A. 4, Sc. 3) sagt Timon zu Apemantus: I swoon to see thee. 7) Auch dieser Zug ist aus Greene entlehnt. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 527. 8) difference = der Standesunterschied zwischen Florizel und Perdita. 9) Das Gleichniss von einem Buche und seinem Einbände ist Sh. sehr geläufig. So in Romeo and Juliet (A. 3, Sc. 2) Was ever book containing such vile matter || So fairly bound? — Perdita denkt wieder an Florizel's Schäfertracht. 10) Vgl. damit die entsprechende Stelle bei Greene, Einleitung pag. 527. 11) Noch hatten sie bei ihrer Verwandlung eine so keusche Tendenz, wie ich habe. — so chaste ist Epitheton zu way. — Ritson las nor any way so chaste. 12) So die Fol. — Die späteren Folioausgg. fügen dear vor Sir ein. 13) forced thoughts = Gedanken, die sich nicht von selbst ergeben; unnatürliche, ungehörige Gedanken. So kam vorher forced baseness vor. Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 3, Anm. 20. 14) gentle ist Vocativ der Anrede: Du Holde! — So stand pretty für pretty one. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 3, Anm. 6. 15) Vergesst solche Gedanken in der Beschäftigung mit Allem, was Euch gerade vor die Augen

Per. O lady Fortune,
Stand you auspicious!
Flo. See, your guests approach:
Address yourself to entertain them sprightly,
And let 's be red with mirth.¹⁶

Enter Shepherd, with POLIXENES and CAMILLO, disguised; Clown, MOPSA, DORCAS, and Others.

Shep. Fie, daughter! when my old wife liv'd, upon
This day she was both pantler, butler, cook;¹⁷
Both dame and servant; welcom'd all, serv'd all;
Would sing her song, and dance her turn; now here,
At upper end o' the table, now i' the middle;
On his shoulder, and his;¹⁸ her face o' fire
With labour, and the thing she took to quench it,¹⁹
She would to each one sip. You are retir'd,
As if you were a feasted one, and not
The hostess of the meeting: 'pray you, bid
These unknown friends to us welcome; for it is
A way to make us better friends, more known.²⁰
Come; quench your blushes, and present yourself
That which you are, mistress o' the feast:²¹ come on,
And bid us welcome to your sheep-shearing,
As your good flock shall prosper.

Per. [To POLIXENES.] Sir, welcome.²²
It is my father's will, I should take on me
The hostess-ship o' the day. [To CAMILLO.] You're welcome, Sir. —

Give me those flowers there, Dorcas. — Reverend Sirs,
For you there's rosemary, and rue; these keep Seeming and savour all the winter long:
Grace, and remembrance,²³ be to you both,
And welcome to our shearing!

Pol. Shepherdess
(A fair one are you), well you fit our ages
With flowers of winter.

Per. Sir, the year growing ancient, —
Not yet on summer's death, nor on the birth
Of trembling winter, — the fairest flowers o' the season
Are our carnations, and streak'd gillyvors,²⁴
Which some call nature's bastards: of that kind
Our rustic garden's barren, and I care not
To get slips of them.

Pol. Wherefore, gentle maiden,
Do you neglect them?

Per. For²⁵ I have heard it said,
There is an art which, in their piedness, shares
With great creating nature.

Pol. Say, there be;
Yet nature is made better by no mean,
But nature makes that mean: so, o'er that art,
Which, you say, adds to nature, is an art
That nature makes. You see, sweet maid, we marry
A gentler scion to the wildest stock,
And make conceive a bark of baser kind
By bud of nobler race: this is an art
Which does mend nature, — change it rather; but
The art itself is nature.

Per. So it is.

Pol. Then make your garden rich in gillyvors,
And do not call them bastards.

Per. I'll not put
The dibble²⁶ in earth to set one slip of them:
No more than, were I painted, I would wish
This youth should say, 't were well, and only therefore Desire to breed by me. — Here's flowers for you;
Hot lavender, mints, savory, marjoram;
The marigold, that goes to bed wi' the sun,
And with him rises weeping:²⁷ these are flowers
Of middle summer, and, I think, they are given
To men of middle age. You are very welcome.

Cam. I should leave grazing, were I of your flock,
And only live by gazing.²⁸

Per. Out, alas!
You'd be so lean, that blasts of January
Would blow you through and through. — Now, my fair'st friend,

I would, I had some flowers o' the spring, that might Become your time of day; and yours, and yours,
That wear upon your virgin branches yet
Your maidenheads growing: — O Proserpina!
For the flowers now, that, frightened, thou lett'st fall
From Dis's waggon!²⁹ daffodils,
That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty; violets dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes,

kommt, wie z. B. jetzt bei dem Empfange der Gäste. 16) So dass uns die Wangen glühen von munterer Lust. 17) both gebraucht Sh. auch von der Aufzählung von mehr als zwei Dingen. — Die Frau des alten Schäfers heisst bei Greene Mopsa, und Sh. nennt daher eine der Schäferinnen so. 18) Indem sie beim Tanzen ihren Arm bald auf die Schulter des Einen, bald des Andern legte, indem sie mit Diesem und mit Jenem tanzte. 19) quench it bezieht sich auf fire: was sie trank, um die Gluth ihres Angesichtes zu löschen, das trank sie Jedem nach der Reihe zu. 20) Denn das ist ein Weg, uns mit einander besser befreundet und bekannt zu machen. 21) mistress of the feast fand Sh. bei Greene. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 527. 22) Manche Hgg. stellen stillschweigend und willkürlich um: Welcome, Sir! 23) grace ist die symbolische Deutung, die zu rue gehört, wie remembrance zu rosemary. So in Hamlet (A. 4, Sc. 5) there's rosemary, that's for remembrance; there's rue for you: we may call it herb of grace. — remembrance ist, wie oft bei Sh., viersylbig (rememberance) zu lesen. 24) gillyvors in der Fol. Die meisten Hgg. setzen hier und weiterhin die gewöhnlichere Form gillyflowers dafür. 25) for = weil: Perdita verschmäht die gestreiften Nelken, weil ihre bunten Farben nicht von der Natur herühren, sondern von der Kunst des Gärtners. — Wie aus dem Folgenden erhellt, denkt Perdita dabei an die Kunst der Schminke, welcher die eiteln Weiber sich bedienen: were I painted etc. 26) dibble = Pflanzstock, ein Werkzeug um ein Loch in der Erde zu machen, in das man die Pflanzen setzt. 27) marigold oder sun-flower. Von dieser Blume heisst es in Lupton's Book of Notable Things: Some call it Sponsus Solis, the Spouse of the Sun, because it sleeps and is awakened with him. — weeping bezeichnet den Morgenthau in der Blume. 28) Wortspiel zwischen grazing und gazing. 29) Diesen Zug, wie Proserpina, vom Pluto in die Unterwelt entführt, die eben gepflückten Blumen fallen liess, entlehnte Sh. aus Golding's Uebersetzung des Ovid. Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 2, Anm. 9. — Dis's (Dysses in der Fol.) waggon = der Wagen Pluto's, fand Sh. in Barnaby Barnes' Devil's Charter (1607) From the pale horror of eternal fire || Am I sent with the waggon of black Dis. 30) Die unscheinbare Farbe der Veilchen (dim) wird gegenübergestellt ihrem Wohlgeruch, in welchem sie die

Or Cytherea's breath;³⁰ pale primroses,
That die unmarried ere they can behold
Bright Phœbus in his strength,³¹ a malady
Most incident to maids; bold oxlips,³² and
The crown-imperial; lilies of all kinds,
The flower-de-luce being one. O, these I lack,
To make you garlands of, and my sweet friend,
To strew him o'er and o'er.

Flo. What, like a corse?

Per. No, like a bank, for love to lie and play on,
Not like a corse; or if, — not to be buried,
But quick, and in mine arms. Come, take your flowers.
Methinks, I play as I have seen them do
In Whitsun-pastorals:³³ sure, this robe of mine
Does change my disposition.

Flo. What you do
Still betters what is done. When you speak, sweet,
I'd have you do it ever: when you sing,
I'd have you buy and sell so; so give alms;
Pray so; and, for the ordering your affairs,
To sing them too: when you do dance, I wish you
A wave o' the sea, that you might ever do
Nothing but that; move still, still so,
And own no other function: each your doing,
So singular in each particular,
Crowns what you are doing in the present deeds,
That all your acts are queens.³⁴

Per. O Doricles!
Your praises are too large: but that your youth,
And the true blood, which peeps fairly through it,³⁵
Do plainly give you out an unstain'd shepherd
With wisdom I might fear, my Doricles,
You woo'd me the false way.

Flo. I think, you have
As little skill³⁶ to fear, as I have purpose
To put you to 't. — But, come; our dance, I pray.
Your hand, my Perdita: so turtles pair,
That never mean to part.

Per. I'll swear for 'em.³⁷

Pol. This is the prettiest low-born lass, that ever
Ran on the green-sward:³⁸ nothing she does, or seems,³⁹
But smacks of something greater than herself;
Too noble for this place.

Cam. He tells her something,
That makes her blood look out.⁴⁰ Good sooth, she is
The queen of curds and cream.

Clo. Come on, strike up.

Dor. Mopsa must be your mistress: marry, garlic,
To mend her kissing with!

Mop. Now, in good time!

Clo. Not a word, a word: we stand upon our manners.⁴¹ —

Come, strike up.

[Music.

[Here a dance of Shepherds and Shepherdesses.

Pol. Pray, good shepherd, what fair swain is this,
Which dances with your daughter?

Shep. They call him Doricles, and boasts himself
To have a worthy feeding;⁴² but I have it
Upon his own report, and I believe it:
He looks like sooth.⁴³ He says, he loves my daughter:
I think so too; for never gaz'd the moon
Upon the water, as he'll stand, and read,
As 't were, my daughter's eyes; and, to be plain,
I think, there is not half a kiss to choose,
Who loves another best.⁴⁴

Pol. She dances featly.

Shep. So she does anything, though I report it,
That should be silent. If young Doricles
Do light upon her, she shall bring him that
Which he not dreams of.⁴⁵

Enter a Servant.

Serv. O master! if you did but hear the pedlar at the door, you would never dance again after a tabor and pipe; no, the bagpipe could not move you. He sings several tunes faster than you'll tell money; he utters them as

Augenlider der Juno und den Athem der Venus übertreffen. 31) Die blassen Primeln sterben unvermählt, insofern sie blühen und vergehen, ehe die Sommersonne in ihrer Kraft sie bescheint und färbt. Damit wird das Schicksal junger Mädchen verglichen, welche früh hinschwinden. 32) bold heisst die grosse Schlüsselblume entweder wegen ihrer grellen, gelben Farbe oder wegen ihres gerade aufstrebenden Wuchses. 33) Auf diese theatralischen Spiele mit Verkleidungen deutet Sh. ausführlicher hin in Two Gentlemen of Verona (A. 4, Sc. 4) at Pentecost, || When all our pageants of delight were play'd, || Our youth got me to play the woman's part, und weiterhin: For I did play a lamentable part. || Madam, 't was Ariadne, passioning || For Theseus' perjury etc. 34) Die Art, wie Du jedes Ding thust, so einzig in jeder Einzelheit, setzt Allem, was Du thust, in dem was Du gerade vornimmst, die Krone auf, so dass jede Deiner Handlungen als gekrönt, als eine Königin erscheint. — Den Namen Doricles scheint Sh. aus Dorastus, dem Florizel bei Greene, gebildet zu haben. 35) Malone citirt dazu aus Marlowe's Hero and Leander: Through whose white skin, softer than soundest sleep, || With damask eyes the ruby blood doth peep. 36) skill = Interesse, Ursache. — Diese zu Sh.'s Zeit schon seltnere Bedeutung, die früher gewöhnlich war, belegt Dyce mit einem Citat aus Warner's Continuance of Albion's England (1606) Hence England's heirs apparent have of Wales been princes, till || Our queen deceas'd conceal'd her heir, I wot not for what skill. 37) Ritson wollte for one lesen, aber for 'em bezieht sich auf that never mean to part: Ich will es eidlich versichern, dass diese Turteltauben, d. h. Florizel und Perdita, sich niemals zu trennen vorhaben. 38) greene-sord in der Fol. 39) nothing lässt sich nur in freierer Construction mit seems verbinden: Alles, was sie thut oder worin sie erscheint, hat einen Beigeschmack von etwas Grösserem als sie selber ist. 40) out ist Theobald's Emendation für on 't der Fol. Vgl. oben Anm. 35. — out und on 't werden auch sonst im Drucke der Fol. verwechselt. 41) Wir halten auf unsern Anstand und lassen uns, in Gegenwart der Fremden, in kein Gezänk ein. 42) a worthy feeding = eine Weide für seine Schafe, die ihren Werth hat. So in Drayton's Polyolbion: so much that do rely || Upon their feeding, flocks, and their fertility. — Das folgende but ist = nur: ich weiss es nur von ihm. Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 1, Anm. 7. 43) Er sieht aus wie die Wahrhaftigkeit selbst. So vorher good sooth = wahrhaftig! 44) Es macht kaum einen halben Kuss in ihrer gegenseitigen Zärtlichkeit aus, zu entscheiden, wer von den Beiden den Andern am meisten liebt. 45) Der alte Schäfer meint ihre Mitgift, das Gold, das in dem Bündel sich neben dem ausgesetzten Kinde fand. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 3, Anm. 5. 46) Doppelsinnig = als ob alle Ohren an seinen Melodien festwüchsen, und = als ob alle Ohren lang würden bei

he had eaten ballads, and all men's ears grew to his tunes.⁴⁶

Clo. He could never come better: he shall come in. I love a ballad but even too well; if it be doleful matter, merrily set down, or a very pleasant thing indeed, and sung lamentably.

Serv. He hath songs, for man, or woman, of all sizes: no milliner⁴⁷ can so fit his customers with gloves. He has the prettiest love-songs for maids: so without bawdry, which is strange; with such delicate burdens of »dildos« and »fadings«,⁴⁸ »jump her and thump her;« and where some stretch-mouth'd rascal would, as it were, mean mischief, and break a foul gap⁴⁹ into the matter, he makes the maid to answer. »Whoop, do me no harm, good man;« puts him off, slights him with »Whoop, do me no harm, good man.«

Pol. This is a brave fellow.

Clo. Believe me, thou talkest of an admirable-conceited fellow. Has he any unbraided wares?⁵⁰

Serv. He hath ribands of all the colours i' the rainbow; points,⁵¹ more than all the lawyers in Bohemia can learnedly handle, though they come to him by the gross; inkles, caddisses,⁵² cambrics, lawns; why, he sings them over, as they were gods or goddesses. You would think a smock were a she-angel, he so chants to the sleeve-hand, and the work about the square on 't.⁵³

Clo. Pr'ythee, bring him in, and let him approach singing.

Per. Forewarn him, that he use no scurrilous words in 's tunes. [Exit Servant.]

Clo. You have of these pedlars, that have more in them than you 'd think, sister.

Per. Ay, good brother, or go about to think.

Enter AUTOLYCUS, singing.

*Lawn, as white as driven snow;
Cyprus, black as e'er was crow;
Gloves, as sweet as damask roses;
Masks for faces, and for noses;
Bugle-bracelet, necklace-amber,
Perfume⁵⁴ for a lady's chamber;
Golden quoifs, and stomachers,
For my lads to give their dears;*

*Pins and poking-sticks⁵⁵ of steel;
What maids lack from head to heel:
Come, buy of me, come; come buy, come buy;
Buy, lads, or else your lasses cry:
Come, buy.*

Clo. If I were not in love with Mopsa, thou shouldst take no money of me; but being enthrall'd as I am, it will also be the bondage of certain ribands and gloves.

Mop. I was promised them against the feast, but they come not too late now.

Dor. He hath promised you more than that, or there be liars.

Mop. He hath paid you all he promised you: may be, he has paid you more, which will shame you to give him again.

Clo. Is there no manners left among maids? will they wear their plackets, where they should bear their faces? Is there not milking-time, when you are going to bed, or kiln-hole,⁵⁶ to whistle off these secrets, but you must be tittle-tattling before all our guests? 'T is well they are whispering. Clamour your tongues,⁵⁷ and not a word more.

Mop. I have done. Come, you promised me a tawdry lace,⁵⁸ and a pair of sweet gloves.

Clo. Have I not told thee, how I was cozened by the way, and lost all my money?

Aut. And, indeed, Sir, there are cozeners abroad; therefore it behoves men to be wary.

Clo. Fear not thou, man, thou shalt lose nothing here.

Aut. I hope so, Sir; for I have about me many parcels of charge.

Clo. What hast here? ballads?

Mop. 'Pray now, buy some: I love a ballad in print, o' life,⁵⁹ for then we are sure they are true.

Aut. Here's one to a very doleful tune, how a usurer's wife was brought to bed of twenty money-bags at a burden; and how she longed to eat adders' heads, and toads carbonadoed.

Mop. Is it true, think you?

Aut. Very true; and but a month old.

Dor. Bless me from marrying a usurer!

Aut. Here's the midwife's name to 't, one Mistress Taleporter, and five or six honest wives' that were present. Why should I carry lies abroad?

seinen Melodien. 47) milliner = Modehändler, zu Sh.'s Zeit immer männlichen Geschlechts. 48) dilda und fading kommen als sinnlose Refrains von Liedern vor; fading ausserdem auch als der Name eines irischen Tanzes. — Von den beiden folgenden Citaten jump her and thump her und whoop, do me no harm, good man, hat sich nur das zweite nachweisen lassen als zu einer bekannten Melodie gehörig. 49) a foul gap = eine unanständige Parenthese, hier mit obscönem Nebensinn. 50) unbraided wares = ächte Waaren, Waaren, die nicht verschossen oder verschlissen (braided) sind. — braided ware kommt so in Marston's Scourge of Villainy vor. 51) points = juristische Spitzfindigkeiten, und = Nestel an den Beinkleidern. 52) inkle = Zwirnband, caddis = Wollenband. 53) sleeve-hand = Aufschlag am Aermel; work about the square = die gestickte Vorderseite, das Bruststück des Hemdes. — on 't, d. h. of it, bezieht sich auf smock. — Für sleeve-hand wollte Han mer sleeve-band lesen, indess ist jenes Wort hinlänglich belegt. 54) perfume ist Apposition zu necklace-amber = Bernstein, aus dem man Halsbänder macht und der auch als Wohlgeruch für das Zimmer einer Dame dient. 55) poking-stick = ein eisernes oder stählernes Werkzeug, das heiss gemacht zum Fälteln der gesteiften Halskrausen u. s. w. diente. So in Middleton's Blurt Master Constable: your ruff must stand in print, and for that purpose get poking-sticks with fair long handles, lest they scorch your hands. 56) kiln-hole = Oeffnung des Ofens, der zum Backen oder Malzdörren dient. 57) Han mer las dafür charm your tongues. Indess citirt Hunter aus Taylor's Werken: He thus began: Cease friendly cutting throats; || Clamour the promulgation of your tongue, || And yield to Demagorgon's policy. — Der Sinn = schweigt still, ist klarer als die Erklärung der Phrase. 58) tawdry lace = Halsschnur. — tawdry ist entstellt aus Saint Audrey, wie aus der lateinischen Erklärung bei Skinner erhellt: Tawdrie lace, astrigmenta, timbriae seu fasciolae emtae nundinis Stae-Ethelredae celebratis. — sweet gloves = parfümirte Handschuhe, werden bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen häufig erwähnt; so vorher Gloves, as sweet as damask roses, neben den Masken, welche die Damen beim Ausgehen statt der Schleier tragen. 59) o' life = bei meinem Leben, eine Betheuerung. 60) Beschreibungen und Balladen

Mop. 'Pray you now, buy it.

Clo. Come on, lay it by: and let 's first see more ballads; we 'll buy the other things anon.

Aut. Here 's another ballad, of a fish,⁶⁰ that appeared upon the coast, on Wednesday the fourscore of April, forty thousand fathom above water, and sung this ballad against the hard hearts of maids: it was thought she was a woman, and was turned into a cold fish, for she would not exchange flesh⁶¹ with one that loved her. The ballad is very pitiful, and as true.

Dor. Is it true too, think you?

Aut. Five justices' hands⁶² at it, and witnesses more than my pack will hold.

Clo. Lay it by too: another.

Aut. This is a merry ballad, but a very pretty one.

Mop. Let 's have some merry ones.

Aut. Why, this is a passing⁶³ merry one, and goes to the tune of 'Two maids wooing a man'. There 's scarce a maid westward but she sings it: 't is in request, I can tell you.

Mop. We can both sing it: if thou 'lt bear a part, thou shalt hear; 't is in three parts.⁶⁴

Dor. We had the tune on 't a month ago.

Aut. I can bear my part; you must know, 't is my occupation: have at it with you.

SONG.

Aut. *Get you hence, for I must go,
Where it fits not you to know.*

Dor. Whither?

Mop. O! whither?

Dor. Whither?

Mop. *It becomes thy oath full well,
Thou to me thy secrets tell.*

Dor. Me too: let me go thither.

Mop. Or thou go'st to the grange, or mill.

Dor. If to either, thou dost ill.

Aut. Neither.

Dor. What, neither?

Aut. Neither.

Dor. Thou hast sworn my love to be.

Mop. *Thou hast sworn it more to me:
Then, whither go'st? say, whither?*

Clo. We 'll have this song out anon by ourselves. My father and the gentlemen are in sad⁶⁵ talk, and we 'll not trouble them: come, bring away thy pack after me. Wenches, I 'll buy for you both. Pedlar, let 's have the first choice. — Follow me, girls.

Aut. [Aside.] And you shall pay well for 'em.

*Will you buy any tape,
Or lace for your cape,
My dainty duck, my dear-a?
Any silk, any thread,
Any toys for your head,
Of the new'st, and fin'st, fin'st wear-a?
Come to the pedlar;
Money 's a medler,
That doth utter⁶⁶ all men's ware-a.*

[Exeunt Clown, AUTOLYCUS, DORCAS, and MOPSA.

Re-enter Servant.

Serv. Master, there is three carters, three shepherds, three neat-herds, three swine-herds, that have made themselves all men of hair: they call themselves Saltiers;⁶⁷ and they have a dance, which the wenches say is a gallimaufry of gambols,⁶⁸ because they are not in 't; but they themselves are o' the mind, (if it be not too rough for some, that know little but bowling)⁶⁹ it will please plentifully.

Shep. Away! we 'll none on 't: here has been too much homely foolery already. — I know, Sir, we weary you.

Pol. You weary those that refresh us. Pray, let 's see these four threes of herdsmen.

Serv. One three of them, by their own report, Sir, hath danced before the king; and not the worst of the three, but jumps twelve foot and a half by the squire.⁷⁰

Shep. Leave your prating. Since these good men are pleased, let them come in: but quickly now.

Serv. Why, they stay at door, Sir.

[Exit.

Re-enter Servant, with Twelve Rustics habited like Satyrs. They dance, and then exeunt.⁷¹

Pol. O father! you 'll know more of that hereafter.⁷² — Is it not too far gone? — 'T is time to part them. — He 's simple, and tells much. How now, fair shepherd? Your heart is full of something, that does take Your mind from feasting. Sooth, when I was young, And handed love as you do, I was wont To load my she⁷³ with knacks: I would have ransack'd The pedlar's silken treasury, and have pour'd it To her acceptance; you have let him go, And nothing marted with him. If your lass Interpretation should abuse, and call this Your lack of love or bounty,⁷⁴ you were straited For a reply, at least, if you make a care Of happy holding her.

Flo. Old Sir, I know
She prizes not such trifles as these are.

von solchen wunderbaren Fischen kommen zu Sh.'s Zeit häufig vor. So wurde im Jahre 1604 in die Register der Buchhändler eingetragen: A strange report of a monstrous fish that appeared in the form of a woman from her waist upward, seen in the sea. — Wie Malone vermuthet, spielte Sh. gerade auf dieses Buch an. Indess erwähnt Halliwell u. A. auch eine frühere Ballade: The discription of a rare or rather most mon-trous fishe, taken on the east coast of Holland the 16. of November, anno 1566. 61) Weil sie sich nicht fleischlich vermischen wollte. — flesh und fish werden hier scherzhaft zusammengestellt. 62) Handschriftliche Zeugnisse von fünf Gerichtspersonen sind dabei. 63) passing = ausnehmend. 64) Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 2, Anm. 15. 65) sad = ernst. 66) to utter = veräußern, feilbieten. 67) Er meint Satyrs. Als solche erscheinen sie ganz behaart, in Thierfelle gekleidet. — men of hair = Leute, die ganz aus Haaren bestehen, ganz behaart sind. 68) Als einen Mischmasch von Luftsprüngen bezeichnen die Mädchen verächtlich diesen Satyrtanz, weil sie dabei nicht mittanzen. 69) to bowl = tanzen, wie eine Kugel über den glatten Boden wegschleift, ohne dabei so hoch zu springen, wie die verkleideten Satyrn. 70) by the squire = nach dem Winkelmaß gemessen, also in die Breite. 71) Die Fol. hat Here a dance of twelve Satyrs. 72) Mit diesen Worten bricht Polixenes ein mit dem alten Schäfer während des Tanzes gepflogenes Gespräch ab, um sich nach seinem Sohne umzusehen, der unterdess sich mit Perdita unterhalten hatte. 73) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 7. 74) Wenn Euer Mädchen die Deutung übel anwenden und dies als Mangel an Liebe oder an Freigebigkeit bei Euch bezeichnen sollte, so würdet Ihr in Verlegenheit wegen einer Antwort sein.

The gifts she looks from me are pack'd and lock'd
Up in my heart, which I have given already,
But not deliver'd. — O! hear me breathe my life
Before this ancient Sir, who,⁷⁵ it should seem,
Hath sometime lov'd: I take thy hand; this hand,
As soft as dove's down, and as white as it,
Or Ethiopian's tooth, or the fann'd snow
That's bolted⁷⁶ by the northern blasts twice o'er.

Pol. What follows this? —

How prettily the young swain seems to wash
The hand, was fair before!⁷⁷ — I have put you out. —
But, to your protestation: let me hear
What you profess.

Flo. Do, and be witness to 't.

Pol. And this my neighbour too?

Flo. And he, and more
Than he, and men; the earth, the heavens, and all;
That, were I crown'd the most imperial monarch,
Thereof most worthy, were I the fairest youth
That ever made eye swerve, had force, and knowledge,
More than was ever man's, I would not prize them,
Without her love: for her, employ them all,
Commend them, and condemn them to her service,
Or to their own perdition.⁷⁸

Pol. Fairly offer'd.

Cam. This shows a sound affection.

Shep. But, my daughter,
Say you the like to him?

Per. I cannot speak
So well, nothing so well; no, nor mean better:
By the pattern of mine own thoughts I cut out
The purity of his.

Shep. Take hands; a bargain: —
And, friends unknown, you shall bear witness to 't:
I give my daughter to him, and will make
Her portion equal his.

Flo. O! that must be
I' the virtue of your daughter: one being dead,
I shall have more than you can dream of yet;
Enough then for your wonder.⁷⁹ But, come on;
Contract us 'fore these witnesses.

Shep. Come, your hand;
And, daughter, yours.

Pol. Soft, swain, awhile, 'beseech you.
Have you a father?

Flo. I have; but what of him?

Pol. Knows he of this?

Flo. He neither does, or shall.

Pol. Methinks, a father
Is at the nuptial of his son a guest
That best becomes the table. Pray you, once more,

Is not your father grown incapable
Of reasonable affairs? is he not stupid
With age, and altering rheums? can he speak? hear?
Know man from man? dispute his own estate?⁸⁰
Lies he not bed-rid? and again, does nothing,
But what he did being childish?

Flo.

No, good Sir:

He has his health, and ampler strength, indeed,
Than most have of his age.

Pol.

By my white beard,

You offer him, if this be so, a wrong
Something unfilial. Reason,⁸¹ my son
Should choose himself a wife; but as good reason,
The father (all whose joy is nothing else
But fair posterity) should hold some counsel
In such a business.

Flo.

I yield all this;

But for some other reasons, my grave Sir,
Which 't is not fit you know, I not acquaint
My father of this business.

Pol.

Let him know 't.

Flo. He shall not.

Pol.

Pr'ythee, let him.

Flo.

No, he must not.

Shep. Let him, my son: he shall not need to grieve
At knowing of thy choice.

Flo.

Come, come, he must not. —

Mark our contract.

Pol.

Mark your divorce, young Sir,

[Discovering himself.]

Whom son I dare not call: thou art too base⁸²
To be acknowledg'd. Thou a sceptre's heir,
That thus affects⁸³ a sheep-hook! — Thou old traitor,
I am sorry, that by hanging thee I can but Shorten thy life one week. — And thou, fresh piece
Of excellent witchcraft, who, of force,⁸⁴ must know
The royal fool thou cop'st with, —

Shep.

O, my heart!

Pol. I'll have thy beauty scratch'd with briars, and made

More homely than thy state. — For thee, fond boy,
If I may ever know, thou dost but sigh,
That thou no more shalt⁸⁵ see this knack (as never
I mean thou shalt), we'll bar thee from succession;
Not hold thee of our blood, no, not our kin,
Far than Deucalion off:⁸⁶ — mark thou my words;
Follow us to the court. — Thou, churl, for this time,
Though full of our displeasure, yet we free thee
From the dead blow of it. — And you, enchantment,⁸⁷ —
Worthy enough a herdsman; yea, him too,
That makes himself, but for our honour therein,⁸⁸

75) whom in der Fol.; von der zweiten Folioausg. verbessert. 76) bolted = gesiebt. — Dasselbe Gleichniss findet sich in Midsummer-Night's Dream (A. 3, Sc. 2) That pure congealed white, high Taurus' snow, || Fann'd with the eastern wind, turns to a crow, || When thou hold'st up thy hand. 77) Die Hand, die schon vorher blank war, also der Wäsche nicht bedurfte. 78) Ich würde alle glänzenden Gaben, die ich besäße, dem Dienste der Perdita widmen, oder, wenn dies nicht möglich wäre, dieselben zu ihrer Vernichtung durch sich selbst verurtheilen. 79) Ich werde dann genug besitzen, dass Ihr darüber erstannen werdet. — then ist der Gegensatz zu yet = jetzt noch. 80) Ist er noch im Stande, sein Besitzthum zu vertreten? 81) reason elliptisch = es ist vernünftig und billig; ebenso das folgende as good reason = es ist eben so billig. 82) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 3, Anm. 20. — Zu dieser und der folgenden Strafrede des Polixenes hat Sh. Manches aus einer Rede des Pandosto (Leontes) bei Greene entlehnt. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 527. 83) affects in der Fol.; von Pope in affect'st corrigirt. 84) of force = nothgedrungen. — Für who hat auch hier die Fol. whom. Vgl. oben Anm. 75. 85) Rowe strich never nach shalt, das wahrscheinlich aus Versehen von dem folgenden never in der Fol. an diese Stelle gerieth. 86) far steht für farther, in älterem Englisch ferre: weiter entfernt in der Verwandtschaft, als von Deukalion, dem gemeinsamen Stammvater, her. Die Fol. hat deshalb farre. 87) enchantment, personificirt = Zauberin, Hexe. —

Unworthy thee, — if ever henceforth thou
These rural latches to his entrance open,
Or hoop⁸⁹ his body more with thy embraces,
I will devise a death as cruel for thee,
As thou art tender to 't.

Per. Even here undone!⁹⁰
I was not much afeard; for once, or twice,
I was about to speak, and tell him plainly,
The self-same sun that shines upon his court,
Hides not his visage from our cottage, but Looks on alike.⁹¹ — [To FLORIZEL.] Will 't please you,
Sir, be gone?

I told you what would come of this. 'Beseech you,
Of your own state take care: this dream of mine,
Being now awake, I 'll queen it no inch further,⁹²
But milk my ewes, and weep.

Cam. Why, how now, father?
Speak, ere thou diest.

Shep. I cannot speak, nor think,
Nor dare to know that which I know. — [To FLORIZEL.]
O Sir!

You have undone a man of fourscore-three,
That thought to fill his grave in quiet; yea,
To die upon the bed my father died,
To lie close by his honest bones: but now
Some hangman must put on my shroud, and lay me
Where no priest shovels in dust.⁹³ — [To PERDITA.]
O cursed wretch!

That knew'st this was the prince, and wouldst adventure
To mingle faith with him. — Undone! undone!
If I might die within this hour, I have liv'd
To die when I desire.

Flo. Why look you so upon me?
I am but sorry, not afeard; delay'd,
But nothing alter'd. What I was, I am:
More straining on, for plucking back;⁹⁴ not following
My leash unwillingly.

Cam. Gracious my lord,
You know your father's⁹⁵ temper: at this time
He will allow no speech (which, I do guess,
You do not purpose to him), and as hardly
Will he endure your sight as yet, I fear:
Then, till the fury of his highness⁹⁶ settle,
Come not before him.

Flo. I not purpose it.
I think, Camillo?⁹⁷

Cam. Even he, my lord.

Per. How often have I told you 't would be thus!

How often said, my dignity would last
But till 't were known!

Flo. It cannot fail, but by
The violation of my faith;⁹⁸ and then,
Let nature crush the sides o' the earth together,
And mar the seeds within! — Lift up thy looks: —
From my succession wipe me, father; I
Am heir to my affection.

Cam. Be advis'd.

Flo. I am; and by my fancy:⁹⁹ if my reason
Will thereto be obedient, I have reason;
If not, my senses, better pleas'd with madness,
Do bid it welcome.

Cam. This is desperate, Sir.

Flo. So call it; but it does fulfil my vow,¹⁰⁰
I needs must think it honesty. Camillo,
Not for Bohemia, nor the pomp that may Be thereat¹⁰¹ glean'd, for all the sun sees, or
The close earth wombs,¹⁰² or the profound seas hide
In unknown fathoms, will I break my oath
To this my fair belov'd. Therefore, I pray you,
As you have ever been my father's honour'd friend,
When he shall miss me (as, in faith, I mean not
To see him any more), cast your good counsels
Upon his passion: let myself and fortune
Tug for the time to come. This you may know,
And so deliver. — I am put to sea
With her, whom¹⁰³ here I cannot hold on shore;
And, most opportune to our need,¹⁰⁴ I have
A vessel rides fast by, but not prepar'd
For this design. What course I mean to hold,
Shall nothing benefit your knowledge, nor Concern me the reporting.

Cam. O my lord!

I would your spirit were easier for advice,
Or stronger for your need.

Flo. Hark, Perdita. — [Takes her aside.]
[To CAMILLO.] I 'll hear you by and by.

Cam. He's irremovable¹⁰⁵
Resolv'd for flight. Now were I happy, if
His going I could frame to serve my turn,
Save him from danger, do him love and honour,
Purchase the sight again of dear Sicilia,
And that unhappy king, my master, whom
I so much thirst to see.

Flo. Now, good Camillo,
I am so fraught with curious¹⁰⁶ business, that I leave out ceremony.¹⁰⁷ [Going.]

So in K. John (A. 3, Sc. 4) O fair affliction, peace! 88) Wenn nicht meine königliche Ehre dabei betheiligt wäre. 89) hoop verbessert Pope das hope der Fol. 90) even here undone = ich bin schon jetzt, schon hier vernichtet, bezieht sich auf die letzten Drohungsworte des Königs. — Staunton hält es für denkbar, dass zu interpungiren wäre: Even here undone, || I was not much afeard etc. 91) to look on = herblicken. 92) Ich will keine Spanne weiter die Königin spielen. 93) Wo ich kein christliches Begräbniss erhalte, wo kein Priester eine Schaufel Erde auf mein Grab schüttet, indem er die Einsegnungsworte dabei spricht. — Auf ein ehrliches Begräbniss geht auch by his honest bones. 94) Ich strebe nur um so mehr vorwärts, weil man mich zurückreißen will. 95) my father's in der Fol.; von der zweiten Folioausg. verbessert. 96) his highness ist nicht bloss der Titel des Königs, sondern die Majestät des Polixenes, die durch die Liebschaft Florizel's gekränkt ist. 97) Florizel erkennt erst jetzt den Camillo in der Verkleidung und ist dessen noch nicht ganz sicher. 98) Die Würde, welche Perdita schon für verloren giebt, kann ihr nur entgehen, wenn Florizel sein Gelübde bricht. 99) Ich lasse mir von meiner Liebe rathen. — be advised = seid bedächtig, und = lasst Euch rathen. 100) Staunton erklärt: but as it does fulfil my vow etc. — Vielleicht ist es eher: wenn es nur meinen Eid erfüllt, so muss ich es für Redlichkeit halten. 101) thereat d. h. bei dem Besitze Böhmens. 102) Oder was die Erde still in ihrem Schosse hegt. 103) who in der Fol.; verbessert von der zweiten Folioausg. 104) our need setzt Theobald für her need der Fol. — opportune betont Sh. auf der zweiten Sylbe. 105) Staunton verbindet plausibel irremovable als Adverbium mit resolved. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 2, Anm. 36. — Die andern Hgg. trennen die beiden Wörter als Adjectiva

Cam. Sir, I think,
You have heard of my poor services, i' the love
That I have borne your father?

Flo. Very nobly
Have you deserv'd: it is my father's music,
To speak your deeds; not little of his care,
To have them recompens'd, as thought on.

Cam. Well, my lord,
If you may please to think I love the king.
And thorough him, what 's nearest ¹⁰⁸ to him, which is
Your gracious self, embrace but my direction
(If your more ponderous and settled project
May suffer alteration), on mine honour
I'll point you where you shall have such receiving
As shall become your highness; where you may Enjoy your mistress (from the whom, I see,
There 's no disjunction to be made, but by,
As heavens forefend, your ruin); marry her;
And (with my best endeavours in your absence)
Your discontenting father strive to qualify, ¹⁰⁹
And bring him up to liking.

Flo. How, Camillo,
May this, almost a miracle, be done,
That I may call thee something more than man,
And, after that, trust to thee.

Cam. Have you thought on
A place whereto you 'll go?

Flo. Not any yet;
But as the unthought-on accident is guilty
To what we wildly do, ¹¹⁰ so we profess
Ourselves to be the slaves of chance, and flies
Of every wind that blows.

Cam. Then list to me:
This follows: — if you will not change your purpose,
But undergo this flight, make for Sicilia,
And there present yourself, and your fair princess
(For so, I see, she must be), 'fore Leontes:
She shall be habited, as it becomes
The partner of your bed. Methinks, I see
Leontes, opening his free arms, ¹¹¹ and weeping
His welcomes forth; asks thee, the son, ¹¹² forgiveness,
As 't were i' the father's person; kisses the hands
Of your fresh princess; o'er and o'er divides him

'Twixt his unkindness and his kindness: ¹¹³ the one
He chides to hell, and bids the other grow
Faster than thought, or time.

Flo. Worthy Camillo,
What colour for my visitation shall I
Hold up before him?

Cam. Sent by the king, your father,
To greet him, and to give him comforts. Sir,
The manner of your bearing towards him, with
What you, as from your father, shall deliver,
Things known betwixt us three, I'll write you down:
The which shall point you forth at every sitting ¹¹⁴
What you must say; that he shall not perceive,
But that you have your father's bosom there, ¹¹⁵
And speak his very heart.

Flo. I am bound to you.
There is some sap ¹¹⁶ in this.

Cam. A course more promising
Than a wild dedication of yourselves
To unpath'd waters, undream'd shores; most certain,
To miseries enough: no hope to help you,
But, as you shake off one, to take another; ¹¹⁷
Nothing so certain as your anchors, who
Do their best office, if they can but stay you
Where you 'll be loath to be. Besides, you know,
Prosperity 's the very bond of love,
Whose fresh complexion, and whose heart together,
Affliction alters.

Per. One of these is true:
I think affliction may subdue the cheek,
But not take in ¹¹⁸ the mind.

Cam. Yea, say you so?
There shall not, at your father's house, these seven years,
Be born another such.

Flo. My good Camillo,
She is as forward of her breeding, as
She is i' the rear our birth. ¹¹⁹

Cam. I cannot say, 't is pity
She lacks instructions, for she seems a mistress
To most that teach.

Per. Your pardon, Sir; for this
I'll blush you thanks. ¹²⁰

durch ein Comma. 106) curious = was viele Sorgfalt erheischt, häklich. 107) ceremony = die Förmlichkeiten des Abschiedes, den er eigentlich von Camillo nehmen sollte. 108) Die meisten Hgg. lesen what is nearest für what 's nearest der Fol. — Da der Nachdruck auf him liegen muss, so ist eher mit Theobald thorough für through der Fol. und der Hgg. zu lesen. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 2, Anm. 33. 109) Malone hält strive für den Imperativ, als ob Florizel aus der Ferne seinen Vater zu beschwichtigen suchen solle. — Wahrscheinlich aber verlor Sh., wie es ihm in längeren, durch Parenthesen unterbrochenen Sätzen leicht widerfährt, den Faden der Construction und fuhr nach with my best endeavours in your absence fort, als ob Camillo, nicht Florizel, das Subject wäre. — Rowe setzte I'll strive, dem Sinne und Zusammenhange nach richtig, wenn auch nicht Sh.'s Worten gemäss. — discontenting von dem intransitiven to discontent = missvergnügt sein; so in Ph. Fletcher's Eliza: Religion blames impatient discontenting. 110) Wie der unerwartete Zufall schuld ist an dem, was wir unüberlegt thun. — guilty findet sich auch in Comedy of Errors (A. 3, Sc. 2) But, lest myself be guilty to self-wrong. 111) his free arms = seine Arme, die Euch bereitwillig umfassen. 112) So verbessern die spätern Folioausgg. das asks thee there son der beiden ersten. — Ritson dagegen schlug vor asks there the son. 113) Er spricht wechselweise von seiner ehemaligen Härte und von seiner jetzigen Freundlichkeit, er kommt immer wieder auf den Gegensatz beider zurück. 114) at every sitting = so oft Ihr mit dem König im Gespräch zusammensitzt. 115) Dass Ihr mit Eurem Vater vollkommen einverstanden seid, im Sinne Eures Vaters redet. 116) sap = Saft und Kraft. So in Antony and Cleopatra (A. 3, Sc. 11) there 's sap in 't yet. 117) one und another bezieht sich auf miseries enough: es ist keine andere Hoffnung auf Hülfe für Euch, als die, dass Ihr, wie Ihr ein Elend abschüttelt, ein anderes dafür auf Euch nehmt. — Zwischen shake und take scheint ein Gleichklang beabsichtigt. 118) to take in = unterwerfen, bezwingen. 119) Die Fol. schreibt our birth, als solle das Apostrophzeichen das ausgefallene of andeuten: sie ist an feiner Bildung eben so weit voraus, wie sie an Geburt mir nachsteht. 120) Diese Interpunction schlug zuerst Malone vor. Die meisten Hgg. setzen Your pardon, Sir, for this; || I'll

Flo. My prettiest Perdita! —
But, O, the thorns we stand upon! — Camillo,
Preserver of my father, now of me,
The medicine¹²¹ of our house, how shall we do?
We are not furnish'd like Bohemia's son,
Nor shall appear in Sicilia.¹²²

Cam. My lord,
Fear none of this. I think, you know, my fortunes
Do all lie there: it shall be so my care
To have you royally appointed, as if
The scene you play were mine. For instance, Sir,
That you may know you shall not want, one word.
[They talk aside.]

Aut. Ha, ha! what a fool Honesty is! and Trust, his sworn brother, a very simple gentleman! I have sold all my trumpery: not a counterfeit stone, not a riband, glass, pomander,¹²³ brooch, table-book,¹²⁴ ballad, knife, tape, glove, shoe-tie, bracelet, horn-ring, to keep my pack from fasting: they throng who should buy first; as if my trinkets had been hallowed, and brought a benediction to the buyer: by which means I saw whose purse was best in picture,¹²⁵ and what I saw, to my good use
I remembered. My clown (who wants but something to be a reasonable man) grew so in love with the wenches' song, that he would not stir his pettitoes, till he had both tune and words; which so drew the rest of the herd to me, that all their other senses stuck in ears: you might have pinched a placket, it was senseless; 't was nothing to geld a codpiece of a purse:¹²⁶ I would have filed keys off, that hung in chains: no hearing, no feeling, but my sir's song,¹²⁷ and admiring the nothing of it; so that, in this time of lethargy, I picked and cut most of their festival purses; and had not the old man come in with a whoobub¹²⁸ against his daughter and the king's son, and scared my choughs from the chaff, I had not left a purse alive in the whole army.

[CAMILLO, FLORIZEL, and PERDITA come forward.]

Cam. Nay, but my letters, by this means being there
So soon as you arrive, shall clear that doubt.

Flo. And those that you'll procure from king Leon-tes¹²⁹ —

Cam. Shall satisfy your father.

Per. Happy be you!

All that you speak shows fair.

Cam. [Seeing AUTOLYCUS.] Who have we here? —

We'll make an instrument of this: omit

Nothing, may give us aid.

Aut. If they have overheard me now, — why, hanging.

Cam. How now, good fellow? Why shakest thou so?
Fear not, man; here's no harm intended to thee.

Aut. I am a poor fellow, Sir.

Cam. Why, be so still; here's nobody will steal that from thee: yet, for the outside of thy poverty, we must make an exchange; therefore, discase thee instantly, (thou must think, there's a necessity in 't) and change garments with this gentleman. Though the pennyworth on his side be the worst, yet hold thee, there's some boot.¹³⁰

Aut. I am a poor fellow, Sir. — [Aside.] I know ye well enough.

Cam. Nay, pr'ythee, despatch: the gentleman is half flayed already.¹³¹

Aut. Are you in earnest, Sir? — [Aside.] I smell the trick of it.

Flo. Despatch, I pr'ythee.

Aut. Indeed, I have had earnest;¹³² but I cannot with conscience take it.

Cam. Unbuckle, unbuckle. —

[FLORIZEL and AUTOLYCUS exchange garments.]

Fortunate mistress, (let my prophecy¹³³

Come home to you!) you must retire yourself

Into some covert: take your sweet-heart's hat,

And pluck it o'er your brows; muffle your face;

Dismantle you, and, as you can, disliken¹³⁴

The truth of your own seeming, that you may

(For I do fear eyes over you)¹³⁵ to shipboard

Get undescried.

Per. I see, the play so lies,
That I must bear a part.

Cam. No remedy. —

Have you done there?¹³⁶

Flo. Should I now meet my father
He would not call me son.

blush you thanks. 121) medicine = Arzt. So in Macbeth (A. 5, Sc. 2) Meet we the medicine of the sickly weal. 122) Und wir werden in Sicilien auch nicht erscheinen als Sohn des Königs von Böhmen. — Die meisten Hgg. setzen hinter Sicilia einen Strich, als ob Camillo Florizel's Rede unterbräche. — Staunton vermuthet sehr wahrscheinlich, dass hinter appear zufällig ein so ausgefallen sei. 123) pomander = eine aus verschiedenen wohlriechenden Stoffen bereite Kugel, die man in der Tasche oder am Halse trug, um daran zu riechen. 124) table-book = Notizbuch, aus kleinen Schreiftafeln bestehend. 125) Wessen Börse sich am besten gemalt ausnehmen würde, am besten gefüllt wäre. — Für picture, das allerdings hier ein seltsamer Ausdruck ist, schlägt ein Anonymus, den die Cambridge Edd. citiren, sinnreich pasture vor. 126) Aus einem Hosenlatz die Börse entwenden, sie ihm abschneiden. Zugleich mit obscöner Nebensinn. Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 1, Anm. 32. 127) my sir's ist eine ironische Bezeichnung für den Clown: das Lied, in das sich der Rüpel so verliebt hatte. — the nothing of it = die Nichtigkeit, Werthlosigkeit dieses Liedes. 128) whoobub = lauter Lärm, Geschrei, gewöhnlich hubbub. 129) Die Briefe, welche der beim Polixenes zurückbleibende Camillo von Leontes erhalten wird, werden durch ihre Verwendung für Florizel und Perdita den Polixenes zufrieden stellen, ihn mit seinem Sohne aussöhnen. — Natürlicher erschiene es, wenn auch dieser Vers, wie die beiden vorigen und der folgende, dem Camillo in den Mund gelegt würde, dass also Florizel die Briefe von Leontes beschaffte. 130) Obgleich Florizel sich bei diesem Kleidertausch, dem Geldwerthe nach, am schlechtesten steht, so nimm doch dies hier als Zugabe. — Bei hold thee = halt her, sieh, giebt er dem Autolycus Geld, das er als boot = Zugabe, bezeichnet. 131) Florizel hat seine Kleider schon halb abgelegt. — flayed, eigentlich von der abgezogenen Haut, ist nur ein stärkerer Ausdruck als das vorhergehende discase thee = streife Deine Hülle, Deine Haut ab. — Die Fol. hat fled für flayed, nach der alten Orthographie des Verbums to flea für to flay. 132) earnest = Handgeld, im Wortspiel mit in earnest = im Ernst. 133) Die Prophezeiung, die in der Anrede fortunate mistress liegt. 134) to disliken = unähnlich, unkenntlich machen. 135) you fügte Rowe ein. — Für over fand Collier in Lord Ellesmere's Exemplar

Cam. Nay, you shall have no hat.¹³⁷ —
Come, lady, come. — Farewell, my friend.

Aut. Adieu, Sir.

Flo. O Perdita, what have we twain forgot!¹³⁸
Pray you, a word.

[They converse apart.]

Cam. What I do next shall be to tell the king

Of this escape, and whither they are bound;

Wherein, my hope is, I shall so prevail,

To force him after: in whose company

I shall review Sicilia, for whose sight

I have a woman's longing.¹³⁹

Flo. Fortune speed us! —

Thus we set on, Camillo, to the sea-side.

Cam. The swifter speed, the better.

[Exeunt FLORIZEL, PERDITA, and CAMILLO.]

Aut. I understand the business; I hear it. To have an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is necessary for a cut-purse: a good nose is requisite also, to smell out work for the other senses. I see, this is the time that the unjust man doth thrive. What an exchange had this been without boot! what a boot is here with this exchange!¹⁴⁰ Sure, the gods do this year connive at us, and we may do anything extempore.¹⁴¹ The prince himself is about a piece of iniquity; stealing away from his father, with his clog at his heels. If I thought it were a piece of honesty to acquaint the king withal, I would not do 't:¹⁴² I hold it the more knavery to conceal it, and therein am I constant to my profession. Aside, aside: — here is more matter for a hot brain. Every lane's end, every shop, church, session, hanging, yields a careful man work.

Enter Clown and Shepherd.

Clo. See, see, what a man you are now! There is no other way, but to tell the king she's a changeling, and none of your flesh and blood.

Shep. Nay, but hear me.

Clo. Nay, but hear me.

Shep. Go to, then.

Clo. She being none of your flesh and blood, your flesh and blood has not offended the king; and so your flesh and blood is not to be punished by him. Show those things you found about her; those secret things, all but what she has with her.¹⁴³ This being done, let the law go whistle: I warrant you.

Shep. I will tell the king all, every word, yea, and his son's pranks too; who, I may say, is no honest man neither to his father, nor to me, to go about to make me the king's brother-in-law.

Clo. Indeed, brother-in-law was the furthest off you could have been to him; and then your blood had been the dearer, by I know¹⁴⁴ how much an ounce.

Aut. [Aside.] Very wisely, puppies!

Shep. Well, let us to the king: there is that in this fardel¹⁴⁵ will make him scratch his beard.

Aut. [Aside.] I know not what impediment this complaint may be to the flight of my master.

Clo. Pray heartily he be at palace.

Aut. [Aside.] Though I am not naturally honest, I am so sometimes by chance: — let me pocket up my pedlar's excrement.¹⁴⁶ [Takes off his false beard.] How now, rustics? whither are you bound?

Shep. To the palace, an it like your worship.

Aut. Your affairs there? what? with whom? the condition of that fardel, the place of your dwelling, your names, your ages, of what having,¹⁴⁷ breeding, and anything that is fitting to be known? discover.

Clo. We are but plain fellows, Sir.

Aut. A lie: you are rough and hairy. Let me have no lying; it becomes none but tradesmen, and they often give us soldiers the lie; but we pay them for it with stamped coin, not stabbing steel: therefore, they do not give us the lie.¹⁴⁸

Clo. Your worship had like to have given us one, if you had not taken yourself with the manner.

Shep. Are you a courtier, an 't like you, Sir?

Aut. Whether it like me, or no, I am a courtier. Seest thou not the air of the court in these enfoldings? hath not my gait in it¹⁴⁹ the measure of the court? receives not thy nose court-odour from me? reflect I not on thy baseness court-contempt? Think'st thou, for that I insinuate, or toze¹⁵⁰ from thee thy business, I am therefore no courtier? I am courtier, cap-a-pè; and one that will either push on, or pluck back thy business there: whereupon I command thee to open thy affair.

Shep. My business, Sir, is to the king.

der Fol. ever verbessert. 136) Seid Ihr dort mit dem Kleiderwechsel fertig? fragt Camillo den Florizel. 137) Florizel's Hut, den er wieder aufsetzen will, muss jetzt die Perdita tragen, wie Camillo schon vorher sagte take your sweet-heart's hat, so dass sich Florizel ohne Hut behelfen muss. 138) Sh. lässt die Beiden irgend etwas Verab-säumtes bei Seite besprechen, damit Camillo zu dem folgenden kurzen Monologe Gelegenheit finde. 139) Ein krankhaftes Gelüste wie das einer Schwangeren. So in Troilus and Cressida (A. 3, Sc. 3) I have a woman's longing, || An appetite that I am sick withal. 140) Er betrachtet die prinzhlichen Kleider, die er angezogen hat, und das Geld, das er noch dazu bekommen. Vgl. oben Anm. 130. — Sh. scheint bei diesem Kleiderwechsel ausser Acht gelassen zu haben, dass er den Prinzen nicht in seinem eigentlichen Costüm, sondern in Schäfertracht auftreten liess. 141) Die Götter sehen uns Spitzbuben dieses Jahr Alles nach und wir können ungestraft aus dem Stegreif stehlen, was uns in den Weg kommt. 142) Hanmer ändert: it were not a piece of honesty und: I would do it. Aber a piece of honesty knüpft an a piece of iniquity an und Beides geht auf Florizel: Wenn ich glauben könnte, es sei ein redliches Stück vom Prinzen, das ich seinem Vater verrathen könnte, so würde ich es nicht thun, weil ich mit der Redlichkeit, meiner Profession gemäss, nichts zu schaffen habe. 143) Ausser dem, was sie an sich trägt. — Zugleich liegt aber eine frivole Zweideutigkeit in secret things = die geheimen Theile des Körpers, und = die verborgen gehaltenen Stücke, welche mit dem Findelkinde gefunden waren. 144) Hanmer wollte lesen I know not. 145) fardel = Bündel. 146) Den falschen Bart, den er als Hausirer trug und den die Beiden, der Schäfer und sein Sohn, kennen. — excrement = Haar, sowohl Haupthaar als Barthaar. 147) having = Besitzthum. 148) Wortspiel zwischen to give the lie = Jemanden Lügen strafen, und to give = Etwas geben, umsonst geben, in Bezug auf we pay them etc. — Daran schliesst sich der Gegensatz zwischen to give und to take im Folgenden. — to take with the manner = Jemanden auf frischer That ertappen, eigentlich mit dem gestohlenen Gute in der Hand. 149) in it bezieht sich vielleicht ungenau auf these enfoldings = diese Umhüllungen, diese Kleider: hat nicht mein Gang darin den feierlichen Tanzschritt (measure) des Hofes? — Doch lässt sich auch in it

Aut. What advocate hast thou to him?

Shep. I know not, an 't like you.

Clo. Advocate 's the court-word for a pheasant: ¹⁵¹ say, you have none.

Shep. None, Sir: I have no pheasant, cock, nor hen.

Aut. How bless'd are we that are not simple men! Yet nature might have made me as these are, Therefore I 'll not disdain.

Clo. This cannot be but a great courtier.

Shep. His garments are rich, but he wears them not handsomely.

Clo. He seems to be the more noble in being fantastical: a great man, I 'll warrant; I know by the picking on 's teeth. ¹⁵²

Aut. The fardel there? what 's i' the fardel? Wherefore that box?

Shep. Sir, there lies such secrets in this fardel and box, which none must know but the king; and which he shall know within this hour, if I may come to the speech of him.

Aut. Age, thou hast lost thy labour.

Shep. Why, Sir?

Aut. The king is not at the palace: he is gone aboard a new ship to purge melancholy, and air himself: for, if thou be'st capable of things serious, thou must know, the king is full of grief.

Shep. So 't is said, Sir; about his son, that should have married a shepherd's daughter.

Aut. If that shepherd be not in hand-fast, ¹⁵³ let him fly: the curses he shall have, the tortures he shall feel, will break the back of man, the heart of monster.

Clo. Think you so, Sir?

Aut. Not he alone shall suffer what wit can make heavy, and vengeance bitter; but those that are germane ¹⁵⁴ to him, though removed fifty times, shall all come under the hangman: which, though it be great pity, yet it is necessary. An old sheep-whistling rogue, a ram-tender, to offer to have his daughter come into grace! Some say, he shall be stoned; but that death is too soft for him, say I. Draw our throne into a sheep-cote! all deaths are too few, the sharpest too easy.

Clo. Has the old man e'er a son, Sir, do you hear, an 't like you, Sir?

Aut. He has a son, who shall be flayed alive; then, 'nointed over with honey, set on the head of a wasp's nest; then ¹⁵⁵ stand, till he be three quarters and a dram dead; then recovered again with aqua-vitæ, or some other hot infusion; then, raw as he is, and in the hottest day prognostication ¹⁵⁶ proclaims, shall he be set against a brick-wall, the sun looking with a southward eye upon him, where he is to behold him with flies blown to death. But what talk we of these traitorly rascals, whose miseries are to be smiled at, their offences being so capital? Tell me, (for you seem to be honest plain men) what you have to the king? being something gently considered, ¹⁵⁷ I 'll bring you where he is aboard, tender your persons to his presence, whisper him in your behalfs; and, if it be in man, besides the king, to effect your suits, here is man shall do it.

Clo. He seems to be of great authority: close with him, give him gold; and though authority be a stubborn bear, yet he is oft led by the nose with gold. Show the inside of your purse to the outside of his hand, and no more ado. Remember, stoned, and flayed alive!

Shep. An 't please you, Sir, to undertake the business for us, here is that gold I have: I 'll make it as much more, and leave this young man in pawn, till I bring it you.

Aut. After I have done what I promised?

Shep. Ay, Sir.

Aut. Well, give me the moiety. — Are you a party in this business?

Clo. In some sort, Sir: but though my case ¹⁵⁸ be a pitiful one, I hope I shall not be flayed out of it.

Aut. O! that 's the case of the shepherd's son. — Hang him, he 'll be made an example.

Clo. Comfort, good comfort! We must to the king, and show our strange sights: he must know, 't is none of your daughter nor my sister; we are gone else. Sir, I will give you as much as this old man does, when the business is performed; and remain, as he says, your pawn, till it be brought you.

Aut. I will trust you. Walk before toward the seaside: go on the right hand; I will but look upon the hedge, ¹⁵⁹ and follow you.

Clo. We are blessed in this man, as I may say; even blessed.

Shep. Let 's before, as he bids us. He was provided to do us good. [Exeunt Shepherd and Clown.]

Aut. If I had a mind to be honest, I see, Fortune would not suffer me: she drops booties in my mouth. I am courted now with a double occasion — gold, and a means to do the prince my master good; which, who knows how that may turn back to my advancement? I will bring these two moles, these blind ones, aboard him: if he think it fit to shore ¹⁶⁰ them again, and that the complaint they reflexiv auf my gait beziehen. 150) Für or toze hat die Fol. at ioaze. — to toze ist dasselbe, was to touse: Glaubst Du, weil ich mir mit Dir zu schaffen mache und Deine Angelegenheiten aus Dir herauszerre, u. s. w. 151) Ein Fasan, mit dem man einen Hofmann als Vertreter beim König gewinnen, ihn bestechen könnte. — Malone vermuthet, dass der Clown a present sage, was dann der alte Schäfer missverstehe als pheasant. 152) Die Zähne sich mit einem Zahnstocher zu stochn, war eine aus der Fremde nach England hinübergebrachte Mode, die den vornehmen und weitgereisten Herrn bezeichnete. 153) to be in hand-fast = nur gegen Bürgschaft auf freiem Fusse sein, so dass man sich nicht entfernen darf. 154) Autolycus braucht hier in gesuchter Sprache germane = blutsverwandt, obgleich das Wort zu dem folgenden though removed fifty times nicht passen will. 155) Capell setzte there für then. 156) prognostication = die Vorherverkündigung des Wetters im Kalender. Solche Kalender führten z. B. den Titel An Almanack and Prognostication made for the year of our Lord God 1595. 157) Wenn ich eine anständige Anerkennung dafür finde, wenn ich anständig honorirt werde. Dieser Euphemismus für eine Bestechung kommt auch sonst vor, so in The Three Ladies of London: What, consider me? dost thou think that I am a bribe-taker? 158) case = Fall, Lage, und = Haut, Fell. — Ein ähnliches Wortspiel ist in Romeo and Juliet (A. 4, Sc. 5) This is a pitiful case. — Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended. 159) Euphemismus für: seine Nothdurft verrichten. 160) to shore = an's Land setzen. 161) rogue = Schelm, als Schimpfwort, und = Landstreicher, der eigentliche Charakter des Autolycus. 162) Es mag wichtig, förderlich sein, dass ich die Beiden dem Prinzen Florizel vorstelle.

have to the king concerns him nothing, let him call me rogue ¹⁶¹ for being so far officious; for I am proof against that title, and what shame else belongs to 't. To him will I present them: there may be matter in it. ¹⁶²

[Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.

Sicilia. A Room in the Palace of LEONTES.

Enter LEONTES, CLEOMENES, DION, PAULINA, and Others.

Cleo. Sir, you have done enough, and have perform'd A saint-like sorrow: no fault could you make, Which you have not redeem'd; indeed, paid down More penitence than done trespass. At the last, Do, as the heavens have done, forget your evil; With them, forgive yourself. ¹

Leon. Whilst I remember Her, and her virtues, I cannot forget My blemishes in them, and so still think of The wrong I did myself; which was so much, That heirless it hath made my kingdom, and Destroy'd the sweet'st companion that e'er man Bred his hopes out of.

Paul. True, ² too true, my lord: If one by one you wedded all the world, Or from the all that are took something good, To make a perfect woman, she you kill'd Would be unparallel'd.

Leon. I think so. Kill'd! She I kill'd! ³ I did so; but thou strik'st me Sorely, to say I did: it is as bitter Upon thy tongue, as in my thought. Now, good now, Say so but seldom.

Cleo. Not at all, good lady: You might have spoken a thousand things that would Have done the time more benefit, ⁴ and grac'd Your kindness better.

Paul. You are one of those, Would have him wed again.

Dion. If you would not so, You pity not the state, nor the remembrance Of his most sovereign name, ⁵ consider little, What dangers, by his highness' fail of issue, May drop upon his kingdom, and devour

Incertain lookers-on. ⁶ What were more holy Than to rejoice the former queen is well? ⁷ What holier than for royalty's repair, For present comfort, and for future good, — To bless the bed of majesty again With a sweet fellow to 't?

Paul. There is none worthy, Respecting her that 's gone. Besides, the gods Will have fulfill'd their secret purposes; For has not the divine Apollo said, Is 't not the tenour of his oracle, That king Leontes shall not have an heir, Till his lost child be found? ⁸ which, that it shall, Is all as monstrous to our human reason, As my Antigonus to break his grave, And come again to me; who, on my life, Did perish with the infant. 'T is your counsel, My lord should to the heavens be contrary, Oppose against their wills. — Care not for issue; The crown will find an heir: great Alexander Left his to the worthiest, so his successor Was like to be the best. ⁹

Leon. Good Paulina, — Who hast the memory of Hermione, I know, in honour, — O, that ever I Had squar'd me to thy counsel! — then, even now, I might have look'd upon my queen's full eyes, Have taken treasure from her lips, —

Paul. And left them More rich, for what they yielded.

Leon. Thou speak'st truth. No more such wives; therefore, no wife: ¹⁰ one worse, And better us'd, would make her sainted spirit Again possess her corse, and on this stage (Where we offenders now) appear, soul-vex'd, And begin, »Why to me?« ¹¹

Paul. Had she such power, She had just cause. ¹²

Leon. She had; and would incense ¹³ me To murder her I married.

Paul. I should so: Were I the ghost that walk'd, I 'd bid you mark Her eye, and tell me for what dull part in 't You chose her: then I 'd shriek, that even your ears Should rift to hear me, and the words that follow'd Should be, »Remember mine.« ¹⁴

1) Wie der Himmel Euch verziehen hat, so verzeiht Euch selbst Eure Schuld. 2) Die Fol. fügt dieses true noch der Rede des Leontes bei: bred his hopes out of, true, und lässt Paulina antworten Too true, my lord. — Die richtige Vertheilung rührt von Theobald her. 3) Leontes wiederholt Paulina's Worte: Die, welche ich tödtete. 4) Die dem jetzigen Augenblicke besser gefrommt, besser dazu gepasst hätten. 5) Für name = Leontes' Name, der auf seine Kinder übergehen muss, setzen viele Hgg. stillschweigend dame. 6) Und welche Diejenigen mit in's Verderben reissen können, die müssig zuschauen, und unentschlossen, was sie bei solchen Gefahren zu thun haben. 7) Denselben Euphemismus, nach dem Sprichwort The dead are well, gebraucht Balthasar in Romeo and Juliet (A. 5, Sc. 1) Then she is well, and nothing can be ill. 8) Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 2, Anm. 26. 9) Indem Alexander der Grosse seine Krone dem Würdigsten hinterliess, ohne diesen namhaft zu machen, war es wahrscheinlich, dass sein Nachfolger der Beste sein würde. 10) Es giebt keine solche Weiber mehr, deshalb will ich auch kein Weib mehr haben. 11) Die Fol. hat and on this Stage || (Where we offenders now appeare) Soule-vext, || And begin, why to me? — Theobald setzt in die Parenthese: where we offend her now, und Heath: were we offenders now, während Steevens die Parenthese der Fol. beibehält und nur in der folgenden Zeile umstellt: Begin, And why to me? — Das Einfachste scheint, appear aus der Parenthese herauszurücken und es doch zugleich mit einer Sh.'schen Lizenz zu where we offenders now hinzuzudenken. — Vielleicht wäre auch move für now zu lesen. — Why to me? = Warum wurde mir eine so ganz andere Behandlung zu Theil? oder: Warum wurde mir eine Nachfolgerin gegeben? 12) just such cause in der Fol. — Das aus der vorigen Zeile herübergenommene such streicht die dritte Folioausg. mit Recht. 13) to incense = anreizen, erbittern zu einer That. 14) mine bezieht sich, wie aus dem folgenden stars, stars! hervorgeht, auf das vorhergehende her eye: Gedenke meiner

Leon. Stars, stars!
And all eyes else dead coals. — Fear thou no wife;
I'll have no wife, Paulina.

Paul. Will you swear
Never to marry, but by my free leave?

Leon. Never, Paulina: so be bless'd my spirit!

Paul. Then, good my lords, bear witness to his oath.

Cleo. You tempt him overmuch.

Paul. Unless another,
As like Hermione as is her picture,
Affront his eye.¹⁵

Cleo. Good Madam, —

Paul. I have done.¹⁶

Yet, if my lord will marry, — if you will, Sir,
No remedy, but you will,¹⁷ — give me the office
To choose you a queen. She shall not be so young
As was your former; but she shall be such
As, walk'd your first queen's ghost, it should take joy
To see her in your arms.¹⁸

Leon. My true Paulina,
We shall not marry, till thou bidd'st us.

Paul. That
Shall be when your first queen's again in breath:
Never till then.

*Enter a Gentleman.*¹⁹

Gent. One that gives out himself prince Florizel, Son of Polixenes, with his princess (she
The fairest I have yet beheld), desires access
To your high presence.

Leon. What with him? he comes not
Like to his father's greatness;²⁰ his approach,
So out of circumstance and sudden, tells us
'T is not a visitation fram'd, but forc'd
By need and accident. What train?

Gent. But few,
And those but mean.

Leon. His princess, say you, with him?

Gent. Ay, the most peerless piece of earth, I think,
That e'er the sun shone bright on.

Paul. O Hermione!
As every present time doth boast itself
Above a better, gone, so must thy grave²¹
Give way to what's seen now. Sir, you yourself
Have said and writ so,²² but your writing now
Is colder than that theme,²³ — »She had not been,
Nor was not to be equall'd;« — thus your verse
Flow'd with her beauty once: 't is shrewdly ebb'd,
To say you have seen a better.

Gent. Pardon, Madam:

The one I have almost forgot (your pardon);
The other, when she has obtain'd your eye,
Will have your tongue too. This is a creature,
Would she begin a sect, might quench the zeal
Of all professors else,²⁴ make proselytes
Of whom she but bid follow.

Paul. How! not women?

Gent. Women will love her, that she is a woman
More worth than any man; men, that she is
The rarest of all women.

Leon. Go, Cleomenes;

Yourself, assisted with your honour'd friends,
Bring them to our embracement. — Still 't is strange,
[Exeunt CLEOMENES, Lords, and Gentleman.]
He thus should steal upon us.

Paul. Had our prince
(Jewel of children) seen this hour, he had pair'd
Well with this lord: there was not full a month
Between their births.

Leon. Pr'ythee, no more: cease! thou know'st,
He dies to me again, when talk'd of: sure,
When I shall see this gentleman, thy speeches
Will bring me to consider that which may Unfurnish me of reason. — They are come. —

Re-enter CLEOMENES, with FLORIZEL, PERDITA, and Others.

Your mother was most true to wedlock, prince;
For she did print your royal father off,
Conceiving you. Were I but twenty-one,
Your father's image is so hit in you,
His very air, that I should call you brother.
As I did him; and speak of something, wildly
By us perform'd before. Most dearly welcome!
And your²⁵ fair princess, goddess! — O, alas!
I lost a couple, that 'twixt heaven and earth
Might thus have stood, begetting wonder as You, gracious couple, do. And then I lost
(All mine own folly) the society,
Amity too, of your brave father; whom,
Though bearing misery, I desire my life
Once more to look on him.²⁶

Flo. By his command
Have I here touch'd Sicilia; and from him
Give you all greetings, that a king, at friend,²⁷
Can send his brother: and, but infirmity
(Which waits upon worn times) hath something seiz'd
His wish'd ability, he had himself

Augen, als ob dafür her eyes, und in them für in 't stände. 15) to affront = entgegengetreten, begegnen. So in Hamlet (A. 3, Sc. 1) That he, as 't were by accident, may here || Affront Ophelia. 16) I have done theilt die Fol. noch dem Cleomenes zu, weshalb Rowe änderte: Good madam, pray, have done. — Die plausible Verteilung rührt von Capell her. Paulina versetzt auf die wiederholte Mahnung des Cleomenes: Ich bin fertig. Sie nimmt aber den Faden ihrer Rede noch einmal auf mit Yet, if my lord etc. 17) Wenn nichts hilft, dass ihr durchaus heirathen wollt. 18) So würde Hermione's Geist Freude empfinden, diese zweite Gemahlin in Euren Armen zu sehen. 19) Die Fol. giebt ihm einen zu niedrigen Rang: Enter a Servant. — Vgl. Paulina's spätere Worte Sir, you yourself have said and writ so etc. 20) Gemäss dem hohen Range seines Vaters. 21) thy grave = Du in Deinem Grabe. — Lord Ellesmere's Exemplar der Fol. hat die handschriftliche Verbesserung thy grace. 22) so bezieht sich auf das folgende She had not been, nor was not to be equall'd. 23) that theme scil. Hermione, die jetzt eine kalte Leiche ist. 24) Sie ist ein Wesen, das, wenn es eine Secte stiften wollte, den religiösen Eifer Aller, die sich zu einer andern Lehre bekennen, ersticken würde. 25) Boswell ändert stillschweigend you für your. 26) Wie Sh. bisweilen das zu Anfang stehende Relativpronomen zum Schlusse des Satzes wiederholt, so hat er hier das Personalpronomen gesetzt, obwohl das vorhergegangene whom dasselbe überflüssig machte. 27) at friend ist in Verbindung mit dem folgenden his brother aufzufassen, als ob at friend with him stände: ein König, der mit seinem Bruder gut Freund ist. — Manche Hgg. schlagen dafür as friend, andere a friend vor.

The lands and waters 'twixt your throne and his Measur'd to look upon you, whom he loves
(He bade me say so) more than all the sceptres
And those that bear them living.

Leon. O my brother!
Good gentleman, the wrongs I have done thee stir
Afresh within me; and these thy offices,
So rarely kind, are as interpreters²⁸
Of my behind-hand slackness. — Welcome hither,
As is the spring to the earth. And hath he too
Expos'd this paragon to the fearful usage
(At least ungentle)²⁹ of the dreadful Neptune,
To greet a man not worth her pains, much less
The adventure of her person?

Flo. Good my lord,
She came from Libya.

Leon. Where the warlike Smalus,
That noble, honour'd lord, is fear'd and lov'd?

Flo. Most royal Sir, from thence; from him, whose daughter

His tears proclaim'd his,³⁰ parting with her: thence (A prosperous south-wind friendly) we have cross'd,
To execute the charge my father gave me,
For visiting your highness. My best train
I have from your Sicilian shores dismiss'd,
Who for Bohemia bend, to signify
Not only my success in Libya, Sir,
But my arrival, and my wife's, in safety
Here, where we are.

Leon. The blessed gods
Purge all infection from our air, whilst you
Do climate³¹ here! You have a holy³² father,
A graceful gentleman, against whose person,
So sacred as it is, I have done sin;
For which the heavens, taking angry note,
Have left me issueless; and your father's bless'd
(As he from heaven merits it) with you,
Worthy his goodness. What might I have been,
Might I a son and daughter now have look'd on,
Such goodly things as you!

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Most noble Sir,
That which I shall report will bear no credit,
Were not the proof so nigh. Please you, great Sir,
Bohemia greets you from himself by me;
Desires you to attach his son, who has (His dignity and duty both cast off)
Fled from his father, from his hopes,³³ and with A shepherd's daughter.

Leon. Where's Bohemia? speak.

Lord. Here in your city; I now came from him:
I speak amazedly, and it becomes
My marvel, and my message.³⁴ To your court
Whiles he was hastening (in the chase, it seems,
Of this fair couple), meets he on the way
The father of this seeming lady, and
Her brother, having both their country quitted
With this young prince.

Flo. Camillo has betray'd me,
Whose honour, and whose honesty, till now
Endur'd all weathers.

Lord. Lay 't so to his charge:
He's with the king your father.

Leon. Who? Camillo?

Lord. Camillo, Sir: I spake with him, who now
Has these poor men in question.³⁵ Never saw I
Wretches so quake: they kneel, they kiss the earth,
Forswear themselves as often as they speak:
Bohemia stops his ears, and threatens them
With divers deaths in death.³⁶

Per. O my poor father! —
The heaven sets spies upon us, will not have
Our contract celebrated.

Leon. You are married?

Flo. We are not, Sir, nor are we like to be;
The stars, I see, will kiss the valleys first:
The odds for high and low's alike.³⁷

Leon. My lord,
Is this the daughter of a king?

Flo. She is,
When once she is my wife.

Leon. That once, I see, by your good father's speed,³⁸
Will come on very slowly. I am sorry,
Most sorry, you have broken from his liking,
Where you were tied in duty; and as sorry,
Your choice is not so rich in worth as beauty,³⁹
That you might well enjoy her.

Flo. Dear, look up:
Though Fortune, visible⁴⁰ an enemy,
Should chase us with my father, power no jot
Hath she to change our loves. — 'Beseech you, Sir,
Remember since you ow'd no more to time⁴¹
Than I do now; with thought of such affections,
Step forth mine advocate: at your request,
My father will grant precious things as trifles.

Leon. Would he do so, I'd beg your precious mistress,
Which he counts but a trifle.

Paul. Sir, my liege,
Your eye hath too much youth in 't: not a month

28) interpreter = Einer, der Etwas deutlich macht, Etwas in's rechte Licht setzt. 29) Mit ungentle modificirt er den zu starken Ausdruck fearful. 30) Die Construction ist ungenau, da der Sinn nur sein kann: von ihm, dessen Thränen sie als Tochter, als die Seinige, erklärten, da er von ihr Abschied nahm. 31) to climate = unter einem Himmelsstriche wohnen. — Das Verbum scheint von Sh. gebildet zu sein. 32) holy = ehrwürdig. — graceful = mit allen guten Gaben ausgestattet. 33) Von dem, was er als Erbprinz in Böhmen zu erwarten hatte. 34) Wenn ich in verwirrter Weise rede, so passt das zu meiner Verwunderung und zu der Botschaft, die ich zu überbringen habe. — Zwei Zeilen vorher setzt Reed here in the city. 35) question = Verhör. 36) Sie sollen nicht mit Einem Male sterben, sondern verschiedene Todesarten erleiden. 37) alike bezieht sich auf die vorige Zeile: so wenig wie die Sterne sich zu den Thälern herablassen, so wenig können Hochgeborne sich mit Niedriggebornen paaren. — Douce will in high and low zugleich eine Anspielung auf das Spiel mit den so benannten falschen Würfeln finden. 38) Dieses Einst wird, bei oder vermöge der Eile, mit welcher Polixenes Euch eingeholt hat, sehr langsam herankommen. — Antithese zwischen speed und slowly. 39) Es thut mir leid, dass Eure erwählte Braut nicht so reich mit Würde, hoher Abkunft, wie mit Schönheit ausgestattet ist. 40) visible für visibly. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 2, Anm. 36 und A. 4, Sc. 3, Anm. 105. 41) Gedenkt daran, wie Ihr noch so wenig Jahre zählet, wie ich; erinnert Euch, wie Ihr der Zeit für kein längeres Leben verpflichtet waret, als ich jetzt. — Darauf

'Fore your queen died, she was more worth such gazes
Than what you look on now.

Leon. I thought of her,
Even in these looks I made. — [To FLORIZEL.] But your petition

Is yet unanswer'd.⁴² I will to your father:
Your honour not o'erthrown by your desires,
I am friend to them and you; upon which errand
I now go toward him. Therefore, follow me,
And mark what way I make:⁴³ come, good my lord.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter AUTOLYCUS and a Gentleman.

Aut. 'Beseech you, Sir, were you present at this relation?

1. Gent. I was by at the opening of the fardel, heard the old shepherd deliver the manner how he found it: whereupon, after a little amazedness, we were all commanded out of the chamber; only this, methought, I heard the shepherd say, he found the child.

Aut. I would most gladly know the issue of it.

1. Gent. I make a broken delivery of the business; but the changes I perceived in the king and Camillo, were very notes of admiration: they seemed almost, with staring on one another, to tear the cases of their eyes; there was speech in their dumbness, language in their very gesture; they looked, as they had heard of a world ransomed, or one destroyed. A notable passion of wonder appeared in them; but the wisest beholder, that knew no more but seeing, could not say, if the importance¹ were joy or sorrow, but in the extremity of the one² it must needs be.

Enter Another Gentleman.

Here comes a gentleman, that, haply, knows more. The news, Rogero?

2. Gent. Nothing but bonfires. The oracle is fulfilled; the king's daughter is found: such a deal of wonder is broken out within this hour, that ballad-makers³ cannot be able to express it. Here comes the lady Paulina's steward: he can deliver you more.

Enter a Third Gentleman.

How goes it now, Sir? this news, which is called true, is so like an old tale,⁴ that the verity of it is in strong suspicion. Has the king found his heir?

3. Gent. Most true, if ever truth were pregnant⁵ by circumstance: that which you hear you'll swear you see, there is such unity in the proofs. The mantle of queen Hermione;⁶ — her jewel about the neck of it;⁷ — the letters of Antigonus found with it, which they know to be his character;⁸ — the majesty of the creature, in resemblance of the mother; — the affection of nobleness, which nature shows above her breeding,⁹ and many other evidences, proclaim her with all certainty to be the king's daughter. Did you see the meeting of the two kings?

2. Gent. No.

3. Gent. Then you have lost a sight, which was to be seen, cannot be spoken of. There might you have beheld one joy crown another; so, and in such manner, that, it seemed, sorrow wept to take leave of them, for their joy waded in tears. There was casting up of eyes, holding up of hands, with countenance of such distraction, that they were to be known by garment, not by favour.¹⁰ Our king, being ready to leap out of himself for joy of his found daughter, as if that joy were now become a loss, cries, »O, thy mother, thy mother!« then asks Bohemia forgiveness; then embraces his son-in-law; then again worries he his daughter with clipping her;¹¹ now he thanks the old shepherd, which stands by like a weather-bitten¹² conduit of many kings' reigns. I never heard of such another encounter, which lames report to follow it, and undoes description to do it.¹³

2. Gent. What, pray you, became of Antigonus, that carried hence the child?

3. Gent. Like an old tale still,¹⁴ which will have matter to rehearse, though credit be asleep, and not an ear open. He was torn to pieces with a bear: this avouches the shepherd's son, who has not only his innocence (which seems much)¹⁵ to justify him, but a handkerchief, and rings of his, that Paulina knows.

1. Gent. What became of his bark, and his followers?

3. Gent. Wracked, the same instant of their master's death, and in the view of the shepherd: so that all the instruments, which aided to expose the child were even bezieht sich das Folgende: indem Ihr der Empfindungen denkt, die Ihr damals hegtet. 42) Ich habe, in den Anblick der Perdita versunken, Euer Gesuch noch unbeantwortet gelassen. 43) Seht zu, wie weit ich mit Eurem Vater komme.

1) importance = Bedeutung, Sinn, von to import = bedeuten, bezieht sich auf a notable passion of wonder: der klügste Zuschauer, der nicht mehr von der Sache wusste als er sah, hätte nicht sagen können, ob dieser auffällige Ausdruck des Staunens Freude oder Leid bedeute. 2) the one = das eine von Beiden. 3) Die Balladendichter der Zeit hatten es vorzugsweise mit wunderbaren Begebenheiten zu thun, die sie in ihren Balladen noch wunderbarer herausstrichen. Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 3, Anm. 60. 4) an old tale = ein Märchen aus alter Zeit. 5) pregnant = klar, voll Beweiskraft. So in Othello (A. 2, Sc. 1) as it is a most pregnant and unforced position. 6) Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 3, Anm. 23. 7) Dieses it, so wie das folgende with it, bezieht sich auf ein Wort wie the child, das in Sh.'s Gedanken vorhergegangen sein musste. 8) Darin sie seine Schriftzüge erkennen. 9) affection = Aneignung, Annahme: die edle Haltung, die Perdita sich angeeignet hatte, und welche eine Art oder Herkunft zeigt, die über ihre Erziehung hinausgeht. 10) Die Mienen waren so verzückt, dass man die beiden Könige nur an ihren Kleidern, nicht an ihren Gesichtszügen erkennen konnte. 11) to clip = umarmen. 12) weather-bitten = vom Wetter angefressen, verwittert. — Manche Hgg. lesen weather-beaten mit den spätern Folioausgg. — Denselben Vergleich einer weinenden Person mit einem Brunnenbilde hat Sh. in Romeo and Juliet (A. 3, Sc. 5) How now! a conduit, girl? what! still in tears? || Evermore showering? 13) to do wird hier von dem Malen eines Bildes gebraucht, wie in Merchant of Venice (A. 3, Sc. 2) but her eyes! — how could he see to do them? — und steht im Gegensatz zu to undo = vernichten, unfähig machen. 14) Auch das klingt noch wie ein altes Märchen. — Er bezieht sich auf die frühern Worte des zweiten Edelmanns: like an old tale. Vgl. oben Anm. 4. 15) Seine Harmlosigkeit, seine Einfalt, die gross erscheint. — to justify = ausweisen. 16) So in Hamlet then lost, when it was found. But, O! the noble combat, that 'twixt joy and sorrow was fought in Paulina! She had one eye declined for the loss of her husband, another elevated¹⁶ that the oracle was fulfilled: she lifted the princess from the earth, and so locks her in embracing, as if she would pin her to her heart, that she might no more be in danger of losing.

1. Gent. The dignity of this act was worth the audience of kings and princes, for by such was it acted.

3. Gent. One of the prettiest touches of all, and that which angled for mine eyes (caught the water, though not the fish), was, when at the relation of the queen's death, with the manner how she came to 't (bravely¹⁷ confessed and lamented by the king), how attentiveness wounded¹⁸ his daughter; till, from one sign of dolour to another, she did, with an alas! I would fain say, bleed tears, for, I am sure, my heart wept blood. Who was most marble there,¹⁹ changed colour; some swooned, all sorrowed: if all the world could have seen it, the woe had been universal.

1. Gent. Are they returned to the court?

3. Gent. No; the princess hearing of her mother's statue, which is in the keeping of Paulina, — a piece many years in doing,²⁰ and now newly performed by that rare Italian master, Julio Romano; who, had he himself eternity and could put breath into his work, would beguile nature of her custom,²¹ so perfectly he is her ape: he so near to Hermione hath done Hermione,²² that, they say, one would speak to her, and stand in hope of answer: thither, with all greediness of affection, are they gone; and there they intend to sup.

2. Gent. I thought, she had some great matter there in hand, for she hath privately, twice or thrice a day, ever since the death of Hermione, visited that removed house. Shall we thither, and with our company piece the rejoicing?

1. Gent. Who would be thence, that has the benefit of access? every wink of an eye, some new grace will be born:²³ our absence makes us unthrifty to our knowledge.²⁴ Let's along. [Exeunt Gentlemen.]

Aut. Now, had I not the dash of my former life in me, would preferment drop on my head. I brought the old man and his son aboard the prince; told him I heard them talk of a fardel, and I know not what; but he at that time, over-fond of the shepherd's daughter (so he then took her to be), who began to be much sea-sick, and himself little better, extremity of weather continuing, this mystery remained undiscovered. But 't is all one to me; for had I been the finder-out of this secret, it would not have relished among my other discredits.²⁵ — Here come those I have done good to against my will, and already appearing in the blossoms of their fortune.²⁶

Enter Shepherd and Clown.

Shep. Come, boy: I am past more children; but thy sons and daughters will be all gentlemen born.

Clo. You are well met, Sir. You denied to fight with me this other day, because I was no gentleman born: see you these clothes? say, you see them not, and think me still no gentleman born: you were best say, these robes are not gentlemen born. Give me the lie, do, and try whether I am not now a gentleman born.

Aut. I know, you are now, Sir, a gentleman born.

Clo. Ay, and have been so any time these four hours.

Shep. And so have I, boy.

Clo. So you have; — but I was a gentleman born before my father, for the king's son took me by the hand, and called me, brother; and then the two kings called my father, brother; and then the prince, my brother, and the princess, my sister, called my father, father; and so we wept: and there was the first gentleman-like tears that ever we shed.

Shep. We may live, son, to shed many more.

Clo. Ay; or else 't were hard luck, being in so preposterous²⁷ estate as we are.

Aut. I humbly beseech you, Sir, to pardon me all the faults I have committed to your worship, and to give me your good report to the prince my master.

Shep. 'Pr'ythee, son, do; for we must be gentle, now we are gentlemen.

Clo. Thou wilt amend thy life?

Aut. Ay, an it like your good worship.

Clo. Give me thy hand: I will swear to the prince, thou art as honest a true fellow as any is in Bohemia.

Shep. You may say it, but not swear it.

Clo. Not swear it, now I am a gentleman? Let boors and franklins say it,²⁸ I'll swear it.

Shep. How if it be false, son?

Clo. If it be ne'er so false, a true gentleman may swear it in the behalf of his friend: — and I'll swear to the prince, thou art a tall fellow of thy hands,²⁹ and that thou wilt not be drunk; but I know, thou art no tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt be drunk: but I'll swear it, and I would thou wouldst be a tall fellow of thy hands.

(A. 1, Sc. 2) With one auspicious, and one dropping eye. 17) bravely = in schöner, stattlicher Weise. -- Der Edelmann spricht auch hier von dem Wiedersehen wie von einem Schauspiel. 18) to wound in diesem weiteren, uneigentlichen Sinne findet sich so in Hamlet (A. 5, Sc. 1) wonder-wounded hearers. 19) Wer da noch so hart und kalt wie Marmor war, wechselte die Farbe. — Das folgende swooned ist in der Fol. swounded. 20) Ein Kunstwerk, das viele Jahre in Arbeit gewesen und das erst kürzlich vollendet ist von jenem ausgezeichneten italienischen Meister u. s. w. — Da Giulio Romano nur als Maler, nicht als Bildhauer bekannt ist, so haben einige Commentatoren angenommen, dass Sh. ihn nur die von einem andern Künstler geformte Statue der Hermione coloriren lässt. Indess erhellt nicht, dass Sh. einen solchen Unterschied gemacht habe, obwohl er unzweifelhaft sich die Statue der Hermione als eine mit Farben bemalte denkt, wie solche Bildsäulen und Büsten, die das Leben genauer nachahmen sollten, zu Sh.'s Zeit gebräuchlich waren. 21) Giulio Romano's Kunst würde die Natur um ihre Kundschaft bringen; er würde eben so gut und besser Menschen schaffen können als sie. 22) Er hat die Hermione ihr selber so ähnlich gebildet. Vgl. oben Anm. 13. 23) In jedem Zucken der Augen, in jedem Augenblick kann ein neuer schöner Zug, ein neuer Reiz entstehen oder vorkommen. Vgl. oben Anm. 17. 24) Unser Wegbleiben lässt uns als unbekümmert in Bezug auf unsere Kunde, unser Wissen erscheinen. 25) Bei dem schlechten Ruf, in dem ich stehe, würde man mir die Entdeckung dieses Geheimnisses doch nicht Dank gewusst, sie mir nicht angemerkt haben. 26) Autolycus meint damit die neuen, schönen Kleider, in denen der alte Schäfer und sein Sohn auftreten. 27) Er meint prosperous. 28) Bauern und Freisassen müssen sich mit einer einfachen Versicherung oder Erklärung begnügen, während Edelleute eine solche auf ihre Ehre bethuern und eidlich erhärten können. 29) a tall fellow of thy hands = ein tüchtiger Mann, der gleich bei der Hand ist, der tüchtig anpackt. So in Merry Wives of Windsor (A. 1, Sc. 4) he is as tall a man of his hands, as any is between this and his head. 30) Wir wollen Deine Gönner sein.

Aut. I will prove so, Sir, to my power.

Clo. Ay, by any means prove a tall fellow: if I do not wonder how thou darest venture to be drunk, not being a tall fellow, trust me not. — Hark! the kings and the princes, our kindred, are going to see the queen's picture. Come, follow us: we'll be thy good masters.³⁰ [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The Same. A Chapel in PAULINA'S House.

Enter LEONTES, POLIXENES, FLORIZEL, PERDITA, CAMILLO, PAULINA, Lords, and Attendants.

Leon. O grave and good Paulina, the great comfort That I have had of thee!

Paul. What, sovereign Sir, I did not well, I meant well. All my services You have paid home; but that you have vouchsaf'd With your crown'd brother, and these your contracted Heirs of your kingdoms, my poor house to visit, It is a surplus of your grace, which never My life may last to answer.

Leon. O Paulina! We honour you with trouble. But we came To see the statue of our queen: your gallery Have we pass'd through, not without much content In many singularities,¹ but we saw not That which my daughter came to look upon, The statue of her mother.

Paul. As she liv'd peerless, So her dead likeness, I do well believe, Excels whatever yet you look'd upon, Or hand of man hath done; therefore I keep it Lonely,² apart. But here it is: prepare To see the life as lively mock'd,³ as ever Still sleep mock'd death: behold! and say, 't is well.

[*PAULINA undraws a curtain, and discovers HERMIONE as a statue.*⁴

I like your silence: it the more shows off Your wonder; but yet speak: — first you, my liege. Comes it not something near?

Leon. Her natural posture! —

Chide me, dear stone, that I may say, indeed, Thou art Hermione; or, rather, thou art she In thy not chiding, for she was as tender As infancy, and grace. — But yet, Paulina, Hermione was not so much wrinkled; nothing So aged, as this seems.

Pol. O! not by much.

Paul. So much the more our carver's excellence; Which lets go by some sixteen years, and makes her As she liv'd now.⁵

Leon. As now she might have done, So much to my good comfort, as it is Now piercing to my soul. O! thus she stood, Even with such life of majesty (warm life, As now it coldly stands), when first I woo'd her. I am asham'd: does not the stone rebuke me, For being more stone than it? — O royal piece! There's magic in thy majesty, which has My evils conjur'd to remembrance, and From thy admiring daughter took the spirits, Standing like stone with thee.⁶

Per. And give me leave, And do not say 't is superstition, that I kneel, and then implore her blessing. — Lady, Dear queen, that ended when I but began, Give me that hand of yours to kiss.

Paul. O, patience! The statue is but newly fix'd, the colour's Not dry.

Cam. My lord, your sorrow was too sore laid on, Which sixteen winters cannot blow away, So many summers dry:⁸ scarce any joy Did ever so long live; no sorrow, But kill'd itself much sooner.

Pol. Dear my brother, Let him that was the cause of this have power To take off so much grief from you, as he Will piece up in himself.

Paul. Indeed, my lord, If I had thought, the sight of my poor image Would thus have wrought you⁹ (for the stone is mine), I'd not have show'd it.

Leon. Do not draw the curtain.

Paul. No longer shall you gaze on 't, lest your fancy May think anon it moves.

Leon. Let be, let be! Would I were dead, but that, methinks, already —¹⁰

1) singularity = Seltenheit, Rarität. 2) lovely (lovely) in der Fol., von Hammer verbessert. 3) to mock = nachäffen, wie zur Täuschung des Anschauers. So in Timon of Athens (A. 1, Sc. 1) It is a pretty mocking of the life. 4) Diese Bühnenweisung ist modern. Die Fol. zählt dafür schon zu Anfang unter den auftretenden Personen Hermione (like a Statue) auf. 5) Und der sie so bildet, als ob sie jetzt lebte; wie sie jetzt aussehen würde, wenn sie lebte. — Daran knüpft Leontes mit den folgenden Worten an: Wie sie auch jetzt noch hätte leben können, eben so sehr zu meinem Troste, wie es jetzt mir in die Seele schneidet, dass sie nicht mehr lebt. 6) So dass sie dasteht, versteint wie Du. 7) O, patience! erklärt Johnson mit stay a while, be not so eager. — Es ist aber eher = verzeiht! ein Ausruf, mit welchem zugleich Paulina die Perdita von der Berührung der Statue zurückzieht. — patience = Nachsicht, Verzeihung, ist bei Sh. häufig, namentlich in der Phrase by your patience. — In der folgenden Zeile vermuthet Sidney Walker sehr plausibel colours für colour's. 8) Ein Schmerz, den die Stürme von sechzehn Wintern nicht verwehen, und die Gluthen von eben so vielen Sommern nicht trocknen können. 9) Dass der Anblick meines armen Bildes auf Euch solche Wirkung ausübte. — Das parenthetische for the stone is mine bezieht sich auf my poor image und soll den König darauf hinweisen, dass er nicht die wirkliche Hermione vor sich habe, sondern nur ein steinernes Bild von ihr im Besitze der Paulina. Zugleich ist Paulina im Begriff, den Vorhang vor der Statue wieder zuzuziehen, woran Leontes sie verhindert. 10) Warburton ergänzt den Schluss des Satzes, den Leontes in seiner grossen Bewegung unvollendet lässt, so: but that, methinks, I already converse with the dead. — Plausibler ist die Ergänzung Staunton's, der in Anknüpfung an Paulina's Worte lest your fancy may think anon it moves den Leontes sagen lässt: May I die,

What was he that did make it?¹¹ — See, my lord,
Would you not deem it breath'd, and that those veins
Did verily bear blood?

Pol. Masterly done:
The very life seems warm upon her lip.

Leon. The fixure¹² of her eye has motion in 't,
As we are mock'd with art.¹³

Paul. I'll draw the curtain.
My lord's almost so far transported, that He'll think anon it lives.

Leon. O sweet Paulina!
Make me to think so twenty years together:
No settled senses of the world can match
The pleasure of that madness. Let 't alone.¹⁴

Paul. I am sorry, Sir, I have thus far stirr'd you: but I could afflict you further.

Leon. Do, Paulina;
For this affliction has a taste as sweet
As any cordial comfort. — Still, methinks,
There is an air comes from her: what fine chisel
Could ever yet cut breath?¹⁵ Let no man mock me,
For¹⁶ I will kiss her.

Paul. Good my lord, forbear.
The ruddiness upon her lip is wet:
You'll mar it, if you kiss it; stain your own
With oily painting.¹⁷ Shall I draw the curtain?

Leon. No, not these twenty years.

Per. So long could I Stand by, a looker-on.

Paul. Either forbear,
Quit presently the chapel, or resolve you
For more amazement.¹⁸ If you can behold it,
I'll make the statue move indeed, descend
And take you by the hand; but then you'll think,
(Which I protest against) I am assisted
By wicked powers.

Leon. What you can make her do,
I am content to look on: what to speak,
I am content to hear; for 't is as easy
To make her speak, as move.

Paul. It is requir'd,
You do awake your faith. Then, all stand still;
Or¹⁹ those that think it is unlawful business
I am about, let them depart.

Leon. Proceed:
No foot shall stir.

Paul. Music, awake her, strike! — [Music.
'T is time; descend; be stone no more: approach;
Strike all that look upon with marvel. Come;
I'll fill your grave up:²⁰ stir; nay, come away;
Bequeath to death your numbness, for from him
Dear life redeems you. — You perceive, she stirs.

[HERMIONE descends from the pedestal.
Start not: her actions shall be holy, as
You hear my spell is lawful:²¹ do not shun her,
Until you see her die again, for then
You kill her double.²² Nay, present your hand:
When she was young you woo'd her; now, in age,
Is she become the suitor!

Leon. [Embracing her.] O! she's warm.
If this be magic, let it be an art
Lawful as eating.

Pol. She embraces him.

Cam. She hangs about his neck.
If she pertain to life, let her speak too.

Pol. Ay; and make it manifest where she has liv'd,
Or, how stol'n from the dead.

Paul. That she is living,
Were it but told you, should be hooted at
Like an old tale;²³ but it appears she lives,
Though yet she speak not. Mark a little while. —
Please you to interpose, fair Madam: kneel,
And pray your mother's blessing. — Turn, good lady;
Our Perdita is found. [PERDITA kneels to HERMIONE.

Her. You gods, look down,
And from your sacred vials pour your graces
Upon my daughter's head! — Tell me, mine own,
Where hast thou been preserv'd? where liv'd? how found
Thy father's court? for thou shalt hear, that I,
Knowing by Paulina that the oracle
Gave hope thou wast in being, have preserv'd
Myself to see the issue.

Paul. There's time enough for that,
Lest they desire, upon this push, to trouble
Your joys with like relation.²⁴ — Go together,
You precious winners all:²⁵ your exultation
Partake to every one.²⁶ I, an old turtle,
Will wing me to some wither'd bough, and there

if I do not think, it moves already. — would I were dead als eine verwünschte Betheuerung findet sich so in Ben Jonson's Tale of a Tub: Would I were dead — — if I do know, und ähnlich in Two Gentlemen of Verona (A. 4, Sc. 4) and 'would I might be dead, || If I in thought etc. — Die Fol. druckt den Satz als einen vollständigen, wie ihn Sh. vielleicht auch beabsichtigte: Ich will sterben, wenn mir das nicht jetzt schon so vor- kommt, d. h. dass die Statue sich bewegt. — that, methinks, already entspräche dann dem vorhergehenden think anon it moves. 11) Wer war ein solcher Künstler, dass er ein so vollendetes, täuschendes Bild darstellen konnte? 12) fixure = feste Stellung; steht im Gegensatz zu motion = Bewegung. 13) Malone hält auch hier, wie an so vielen andern Stellen, as für as if, und Rowe wollte were für are lesen; as scheint aber hier im gewöhnlichen Sinne zu stehen: wie die Kunst uns täuscht, indem die Kunst uns täuscht. 14) Lass das Bild wie es ist; ziehe den Vorhang nicht davor. 15) Welcher Meissel war je so künstlerisch, dass er den Athem in Stein aushauen konnte? 16) Auch hier ist for = because: Möge Niemand mich verspotten, weil ich sie küssen will. 17) Vgl. KING JOHN.

Einleitung.

Shakspeare's King John erschien zuerst in der Folioausgabe vom Jahre 1623 und eröffnet unter dem Titel The Life and Death of King John die zweite Abtheilung dieses Bandes, welche die Histories, die Dramen aus der englischen Geschichte, enthält. Die Acte sind angegeben, aber in so nachlässiger und willkürlicher Weise, dass die späteren Herausgeber sich mit Recht veranlasst sahen, von dieser ursprünglichen Anordnung mehrfach abzuweichen. Der von Malone und Collier u. A. hervorgehobene Umstand, dass King John nicht ausdrücklich von den Verlegern der Folioausgabe in die Register der Buchhändlergilde eingetragen ist, lässt allerdings die Möglichkeit bestehen, dass schon vor dem Jahre 1623 von anderer Seite irgend ein Verlagsrecht auf das Drama beansprucht, dass vielleicht sogar das Drama selbst gedruckt erschienen war. Indess hat sich bisher keine Notiz von einer solchen Einzelausgabe in Quarto auffinden lassen, und der ziemlich reine, im Ganzen wenig Schwierigkeiten darbietende Text der Folio muss die alleinige und genügende Grundlage jedes späteren Abdruckes und jeder neuen Textrecension bilden.

Für die chronologische Bestimmung des King John gewährt allein einen festern Anhalt die Erwähnung dieses Schauspiels bei Francis Meres in dessen Palladis Tamia, Wits Treasury: being the Second Part of Wits Commonwealth. London 1598. *) So wenig stichhaltig auch die aus äusserlichen, vagen Beziehungen entlehnten Gründe sind, welchen zufolge Malone das Drama in das Jahr 1596, und Chalmers in das Jahr 1598 selbst setzt, so wird dasselbe doch nach allen innern Merkmalen des Styls und Verses nicht lange vor 1596 zu setzen sein, und jedenfalls der mittlern Periode in Shakspeare's dramatischer Laufbahn angehören. So mag King John nach der Zeit seiner Abfassung unter den Histories des Dichters in der Mitte stehen zwischen dem theilweise umgearbeiteten Cyklus der vier Dramen King Henry VI. — King Richard III. und dem ebenfalls in vier Dramen zerfallenden Cyklus King Richard II. — King Henry IV. — King Henry V., doch so, dass unser Schauspiel in allen wesentlichen Kennzeichen der Shakspeare'schen Künstentwicklung dem spätern Cyklus näher steht und verwandter ist, als dem früheren.

Dem Shakspeare'schen King John liegt ein älteres Drama desselben Inhalts zu Grunde, das im Jahre 1591 ohne Namen des Verfassers erschien, betitelt: The first and second part of the troublesome Raigne of John King of England. With the Discovery of King Richard Cordelion's base Sonne (Vulgarly named the Bastard Fauconbridge). Also the Death of King John at Swinstead Abbey. As it was (sundry times) publikely acted by the Queenes Majesties Players in the honourable Cittie of London. — Bei der genauen, durch alle Acte und Scenen hindurch gehenden Bezugnahme, mit welcher Shakspeare dieses ältere Drama benutzt hat, wird es, um die Uebereinstimmung in der Anlage beider Werke hervorzuheben, genügen, auf die einzelnen Abweichungen aufmerksam zu machen, zu welchen Shakspeare in der äusserlichen Construction seines Schauspiels sich veranlasst fühlte. Da der ältere King John, abgesehen von der Eintheilung in zwei gesonderte Dramen, weder Acte noch Scenen notirt, so ist es rathsam, zur Orientirung des Lesers nach der von den Herausgebern beliebten Eintheilung des Shakspeare'schen Dramas anzugeben, was aus jenem älteren Buche in dem Gange der Handlung und in der scenischen Darstellung des Stoffes von unserm Dichter etwa nicht beibehalten, sondern entsprechend geändert ist.

Dem ersten Theil des alten King John ist folgende Widmung To the Gentlemen Readers vorangesetzt:

*You that with friendly grace of smoothed brow
Have entertain'd the Scythian Tamburlaine,
And given applause unto an infidel;
Vouchsafe to welcome with like curtesie,
A warlike Christian, and your countryman.*

*) Die auf Shakspeare bezügliche Stelle dieses Buchs, der bedeutendste auf uns gekommene Fingerzeig für die Chronologie seiner Werke, lautet im Zusammenhange: As the soule of Euphorbus was thought to live in Pythagoras, so the sweete worthe soule of Ovid lives in mellifluous and honytongued Shakespeare; witnes his Venus and Adonis, his Lucrece, his sugred sonnets among his private friends, etc.

As Plautus and Seneca are accounted the best for comedy and tragedy among the Latines, so Shakespeare among the English is the most excellent in both kinds for the stage; for comedy witnes his Gentlemen of Verona, his Errors, his Love Labors Lost, his Love Labours Wonne, his Mid-ummers Night Dreame, and his Merchant of Venice: for tragedy, his Richard the 2., Richard the 3., Henry the 4., King John, Titus Andronicus, and his Romeo and Juliet.

As Epius Stolo said that the muses would speake with Plautus tongue, if they would speake Latin, so I say that the muses would speake with Shakespeares fine filed phrase, if they would speake English.

EINLEITUNG.

*For Christ's true faith indur'd he many a storm
And set himselfe against the man of Rome
Until base treason by a damned weight
Did all his former triumphs put to flight,
Accept of it, sweet gentles, in good sort,
And thinke it was prepar'd for your disport.*

A. 1, Sc. 1. Im alten King John beginnt die erste Scene mit der Thronbesteigung des Königs, auf die unmittelbar die Botschaft Chatillon's folgt. — Mit den beiden Brüdern Faulconbridge tritt zugleich deren Mutter auf, die mithin bei den Verhandlungen über die Unächtheit des einen Sohnes zugegen ist. — Den Schluss des Acts bildet das Zwiegespräch zwischen Philipp und seiner Mutter.

A. 2, Sc. 1 und 2 ganz wie bei Shakspere, nur dass im alten King John vor dem Auftreten der Herolde der Bastard auf der Bühne den Herzog von Oesterreich im Kampfe verfolgt, ihm die Löwenhaut abjagt und dann einen bombastischen Monolog hält. — Mit den Königen und ihrem Gefolge treten auch Constanze und Arthur auf, die im alten King John also Zeugen der Verlobung des Dauphins mit Lady Blanch werden. — Ein Monolog des Bastards zum Schlusse dieses Acts fehlt im alten King John, ebenso wie dessen vorhergehender Monolog zum Schlusse des ersten Acts.

A. 3, Sc. 1. Constanze und Arthur bleiben nach dem Weggange der Uebrigen auf der Bühne. Den Verwünschungen und Klagen, welche Erstere bei Shakspere gegen Salisbury und die Könige äussert, macht sie im alten King John nur im Gespräch mit ihrem Sohne Luft. — Die Könige und ihr Gefolge treten erst nach dem Weggange Arthur's und seiner Mutter auf. — Die Dazwischenkunft des Cardinals erfolgt wie bei Shakspere. — Sc. 2 und 3. Der Bastard erlegt den Herzog von Oesterreich auf der Bühne; Eleonore wird auf der Bühne gefangen genommen und ebenso von ihrem Sohne befreit. — Das Uebrige wie bei Shakspere. — Sc. 4. Die Klagen der Constanze, sowie die politischen Verhandlungen zwischen dem Cardinal und dem Dauphin erscheinen im alten King John im Verhältniss zu der Weitschweifigkeit vieler andrer Parteen skizzenhaft und flüchtig behandelt. — Daran schliesst sich im alten King John eine Scene der frivolsten, niedrigsten Komik, wo der nach England zurückgekehrte Bastard ein Mönchskloster und dann ein Nonnenkloster nach verborgenen Schätzen durchsucht und in jenem eine Nonne, in diesem einen Mönch, in einer Kiste versteckt, findet. — Endlich tritt noch der Prophet Peter von Pomfret, begleitet von einem Volkshaufen, auf, und wird im Verlauf einer ziemlich plumpen Volksscene vom Bastard verhaftet.

A. 4, Sc. 1 und 2. Der Gang der Handlung ist wie bei Shakspere, nur dass im alten King John der König zuerst den Lords seine Absicht mittheilt, sich noch einmal krönen zu lassen, und dass dann diese Krönung auf der Bühne vor sich geht. — Ebenso werden die Wundererscheinungen am Himmel, von denen bei Shakspere nur berichtet wird, hier sichtbar dem Publicum vorgeführt. — Mit dem Auftrage des Königs an Hubert, den Lords zu sagen, dass Arthur noch lebe, schliesst der erste Theil des alten King John; und dem zweiten Theil, der mit Arthur's Erscheinung auf der Mauer (A. 4, Sc. 3) beginnt, geht ein zweiter orientirender Prolog To the Gentlemen Readers voraus. — Der alte King John lässt die Lords, nachdem sie Arthur's Leichnam gefunden, nur mit Hubert, nicht mit dem Bastard, zusammentreffen und verhandeln, weshalb auch das Zwiegespräch zwischen den beiden Letzteren sich nur bei Shakspere findet.

A. 5, Sc. 1. Der Scene zwischen dem König und dem Cardinal geht im alten King John eine Scene zwischen dem König und Peter von Pomfret voraus, die damit schliesst, dass der König den Propheten aufhängen lässt. Der Bastard bringt gleich darauf die Nachricht von den letzten Augenblicken des Gehängten und wird von dem König an die abtrünnigen Lords abgesandt. — Sc. 2. Die Zusammenkunft des Dauphins mit den englischen Grossen, in Saint Edmund's Bury, führt der alte King John auf der Bühne in ihrem ganzen Verlaufe von Anfang an vor. — Vor das Auftreten des Cardinals im Lager des Dauphins setzt der alte King John noch eine kurze, von Shakspere bereits mit Sc. 1 verschmolzene Zwischenscene, in welcher der Cardinal dem König Johann die Krone wiedergiebt. — Sc. 3. 4. 5. Melun spielt im alten King John dieselbe Rolle wie bei Shakspere. -- Vor Sc. 5 bei Shakspere hat der alte King John den heuchlerisch freundlichen Empfang des kranken Königs von Seiten der Mönche in Swinstead Abbey. Ein Mönch beschliesst, den König zu vergiften, und erhält in einem Zwiegespräch mit dem Abt, der den Anschlag billigt, im Voraus die Absolution für seine That. — Sc. 6 fehlt im alten King John. Dafür geht das Mahl des Königs und dessen Vergiftung im Klostergarten auf der Bühne vor sich. Der Mönch stirbt unmittelbar auf den Trunk, und der Bastard ersticht den Abt; Beides vor den Augen des Zuschauers. — Auf den Tod des Königs, der mit der Zerstörung von Swinstead Abbey gerächt werden soll, folgt noch eine Scene der Unterhandlung zwischen dem jungen König Heinrich und dem Dauphin. Letzterer erklärt sich zum Frieden und zum Abzug nach Frankreich geneigt, und Ersterem wird die Krone aufgesetzt.

Die aus obiger Analyse sich deutlich ergebende stoffliche Aehnlichkeit beider Dramen veranlasste im Jahre 1611 einen andern Verleger, in Ermangelung des Shakspere'schen King John, dessen er nicht habhaft werden konnte, das ältere Schauspiel von Neuem drucken zu lassen und mit der Angabe auf dem Titelblatt: Written by W. Sh. auf Shakspere als den Verfasser hinzuweisen; ohne Zweifel, um das Publicum glauben zu machen, es erhalte in diesem verschollenen Drama Shakspere's bekanntes Werk. Ein dritter, nach dem Tode unseres Dichters, aber vor der Veröffentlichung seines King John in der Folioausgabe, erschienener Abdruck des älteren Dramas, im Jahre 1622, machte dann geradezu in derselben betrügerischen Absicht W. Shakespeare auf dem Titelblatte als Autor namhaft. Auch später hat es nicht an einzelnen, englischen wie deutschen, Kritikern gefehlt, welche den älteren King John für eine Jugendarbeit unseres Dichters gelten lassen wollten, oder ihm doch eine Betheiligung daran im Verein mit andern Dichtern zuzuschreiben geneigt waren. Sowohl um das Unhaltbare dieser Meinung nachzuweisen, als auch um an einer Probe zu zeigen, wie Shakspere das Werk seines anonymen Vorgängers benutzt hat, mögen ein paar Scenen aus dem alten King John, der nach der Bezugnahme auf Marlowe's Tamburlaine im Prolog um das Jahr 1590 gespielt sein muss, hier ihren Platz finden. Das erste hier citirte Stück entspricht der zweiten Hälfte des ersten Acts bei Shakspere.

Enter the Shriue and whispers the Earle of Salisbury in the eare.

Sals. Please it your Maiesty, here is the Shriue of Northamptonshire with certaine persons that of late committed a riot, and haue appeald to your Maiestie, beseeching your Highnesse for speciall cause to heare them.

K. John. Will them come neere, and while wee heare the cause,

Goe Salisbury and make prouision,
We meane with speed to passe the Sea to Fraunce.
Say Shriue, what are these men, what haue they done?

Or whereto tends the course of this appeale?

Shriue. Please it your Maiestie, these two brethren vnnaturally falling at odds about their fathers living, haue broken your highnesse peace, in seeking to right their owne wrongs without course of Lawe, or order of Justice; and unlawfully assembled themselves in mutinous maner, having committed a riot, appealing from triall in their country to your Highness: and here I Thomas Nidigate Shriue of Northamptonshire do deliuer them ouer to their triall.

K. John. My Lord of Essex, will thoffenders to stand forth, and tell the cause of their quarrell.

Essex. Gentlemen, it is the Kings pleasure that you discouer your griefs, and doubt not but you shal haue iustice.

Phil. Please it your Maiesty the wrong is mine: yet will I abide all wrongs, before I once open my mouth t'vnrup the shamefull slander of my parents, the dishonor of my self, and the bad dealing of my brother in this princely assemblie.

Robert. Then, by my Prince his leaue, shall Robert speake,

And tell your Maiestie what right I haue
To offer wrong, as he accounteth wrong.
My father (not vnknowne vnto your Grace)
Recei'd his spurres of Knighthood in the Field,
At kingly Richard hands in Palestine,
Whenas the walls of Acon gaue him way:
His name sir Robert Fauconbridge of Mountbery.
What by succession from his Ancestors,
And warlike seruice vnder Englands Armes,
His living did amount to at his death
Two thousand markes reuenew euery yeare:
And this (my Lord) I challenge for my right,
As lawfull heire to Robert Fauconbridge.

Phil. If first-borne sonne be heire indubitate
By certaine right of Englands auntient Lawe,
How should my selfe make any other doubt,
But I am heire to Robert Fauconbridge?

K. John. Fond youth, to trouble these our princely eares,

Or make a question in so plaine a case:
Speake, is this man thine elder brother borne?

Robert. Please it your Grace with patience for to heare?

I not deny but he mine elder is,
Mine elder brother too: yet in such sort,
As he can make no title to the land.

K. John. A doubtfull tale as euer I did heare,
Thy brother, and thine elder, and no heire:
Explaine this darke Ænigma.

Robert. I grant (my Lord) he is my mothers sonne,

Base borne, and base begot, no Fauconbridge.
Indeede the world reputes him lawfull heire,
My father in his life did count him so,
And here my mother stands to proue him so:
But I (my Lord) can proue, and doe auerre
Both to my mothers shame, and his reproach.
He is no heire, nor yet legitimate.

Then (gracious Lord) let Fauconbridge enjoy
The living that belongs to Fauconbridge.

And let not him possesse anothers right.

K. John. Proue this, the land is thine by Englands lawe.

Qu. Elian. Vngracious youth, to rip thy mothers shame,

The wombe from whence thou didst thy being take,
All honest eares abhorre thy wickednesse,
But Gold I see doth beate downe Natures lawe.

Mother. My gracious Lord, and you thrice reuerend Dame,

That see the teares distilling from mine eies,
And scalding sighes blowne from a rented heart:
For honour and regard of womanhood,
Let me intreate to be commaunded hence.

Let not these eares heere receiue the hissing sound
Of such a viper, who with poysoned words
Doth masserate the bowels of my soule.

K. John. Lady, stand up, be patient for awhile:
And fellow, say, whose bastard is thy brother?

Philip. Not for my selfe, nor for my mother now;
But for the honour of so braue a man,
Whom hee accuseth with adulterie:

Heere I beseech your Grace vpon my knees,
To count him mad, and so dismisse vs hence.

Robert. Nor mad, nor mazde, but well aduised, I
Charge thee before this royall presence here
To be a bastard to King Richards selfe,
Sonne to your Grace, and brother to your Maiestie.
Thus bluntly, and —

Qu. Elian. Yong man, thou needst not be ashamed of thy kin,

Nor of thy Sire. But forward with thy prooffe.

Robert. The prooffe so plain, the argument so strong,

As that your Highnesse and these noble Lords,
And all (saue those that haue no eies to see)
Shall sweare him to be bastard to the King.

First, when my Father was Embassador
In Germanie vnto the Emperour,
The King lay often at my fathers house:
And all the realme suspected what befell:
And at my fathers back-returue agen
My mother was deliuered, as tis sed,

Sixe weeks before the account my father made.
But more than this: looke but on Philips face,

His features, actions, and his lineaments,
And all this princely presence shall confesse,

He is no other but King Richards sonne.

Then gracious Lord, rest he King Richards sonne,
And let me rest safe in my Fathers right,

That am his rightfull sonne and only heire.

K. John. Is this thy prooffe, and all thou hast to say?

Robert. I haue no more, nor neede I greater prooffe.

K. John. First, where thou saidst in absence of thy Sire

My brother often lodged in his house:

And what of that? base groome to slaunders him,
That honoured his Ambassador so much,
In absence of the man to cheere the wife?
This will not hold, proceede vnto the next.

Qu. Elian. Thou saist she teemde sixe weekes before her time.

Why good sir Squire, are you so cunning growen,
To make account of womens reckonings?
Spit in your hand and to your other proofes:
Many mischances happen in such affaires,
To make a woman come before her time.

K. John. And where thou saist, he looketh like the King,
In action, feature and proportion:
Therein I hold with thee, for in my life
I neuer saw so liuely counterfet
Of Richard Cordelion, as in him.

Robert. Then good my Lord, be you indifferent Judge,
And let me haue my liuing and my right.

Qu. Elian. Nay, heare you sir, you runne away too fast:

Know you not, Omne simile non est idem?
Or haue read in. Hark yee, good sir,
Twas thus I warrant, and no otherwise,
Shee lay with sir Robert your father, and thought vpon King Richard my sonne, and so your brother was formed in this fashion.

Robert. Madame, you wrong me thus to iest it out,
I craue my right: King John, as thou art King,
So be thou iust, and let me haue my right.

K. John. Why (foolish boy) thy proofes are friuolous,
Nor canst thou challenge any thing thereby.
But thou shalt see how I will helpe thy claime:
This is my doome, and this my doome shall stand
Irreuocable, as I am King of England.
For thou know'st not, weele aske of them that know,
His mother and himselfe shall end this strife:
And as they say, so shall thy liuing passe.

Robert. My Lord, herein I challenge you of wrong,
To giue away my right, and put the doome
Vnto themselves. Can there be likelihood That shee will loose?
Or he will giue the liuing from himselfe?
It may not be, my Lord. Why should it be?

K. John. Lords, keep him back, and let him heare the doom. Essex, first ask the mother thrice, who was his Sire?

Essex. Lady Margaret, widow of Fauconbridge,
Who was Father to thy Sonne Philip?

Mother. Please it your Maiesty, Sir Robert Fauconbridge.

Robert. This is right, aske my fellow there if I be a thiefe.

K. John. Aske Philip whose sonne he is.

Essex. Philip, who was thy father?

Philip. Was my Lord, and that's a question: and you had not taken some paines with her before, I should haue desired you to aske my mother.

K. John. Say, who was thy Father?

Philip. Faith (my Lord) to answere you, sure hee is my father that was nearest my mother when I was begotten, and him I think to be Sir Robert Fauconbridge.

K. John. Essex, for fashions sake demand agen,
And so an end to this contention.

Robert. Was ever man thus wronged as Robert is?

Essex. Philip speake I say, who was thy father?

K. John. Young man how now, what art thou in a trance?

Qu. Elian. Philip awake, the man is in a dreame.

Philip. Philippus atavis edite Regibus.

What saist thou Philip, sprung of auncient Kings?

— Quo me rapit tempestas?

What winde of honour blowes this furie forth?

Or whence proceede these fumes of Maiestie?

Methinkes I hear a hollow Ecchoe sound;

That Philip is the sonne vnto a King:

The wistling leaues vpon the trembling trees,

Whistle in consort I am Richards sonne:

The bubling murmur of the waters fall

Records Philippus Regius filius:

Birds in their flight make musicke with their wings,

Filling the aire with glorie of my birth:

Birds, bubbles, leaues, and mountaines, Ecchoe, all

Ring in mine eares, that I am Richards sonne.

Fond man! ah whither art thou carried?

How are thy thoughts yurapt in Honors heauen?

Forgetfull what thou art, and whence thou camst.

Thy Fathers land cannot maintain these thoughts,

These thoughts are farre vnfitting Fauconbridge:

And well they may; for why this mounting minde

Doth soare too high to stoupe to Fauconbridge.

Why how now? knowest thou where thou art?

And knowest thou whor expects thine answer here?

Wilt thou vpon a frantick madding vaine

Goe loose thy land, and say thy selfe base borne?

No, keep thy land, though Richard were thy Sire,

What ere thou thinkst, say thou art Fauconbridge.

K. John. Speake man, be sodaine, who thy Father was.

Philip. Please it your Maiestie, Sir Robert.

Philip, that Fauconbridge cleaues to thy iawes:

It will not out; I cannot for my life

Say I am sonne vnto a Fauconbridge.

Let land and liuing goe, this Honors fire

That makes me sweare King Richard was my Sire.

Base to a King addes title of more State,

Than Knights begotten, though legitimate.

Please it your Grace, I am King Richards Sonne.

Robert. Robert reuiue thy heart, let sorrow die,

His faltring tongue not suffers him to lie.

Mother. What head-strong furie doth enchant my sonne?

Philip. Philip cannot repent, for he hath done.

K. John. Then Philip blame not me, thy selfe hast lost

By wilfulnesse, thy liuing and thy land.

Robert, thou art the heire of Fauconbridge,

God giue thee ioy, greater than thy desert.

Qu. Elian. Why how now Philip, giue away thine own?

Philip. Madame, I am bold to make myselfe your nephew,

The poorest kinsman that your Highnesse hath:

And with this Prouerb gin the world anew,

Help hands, I haue no lands, Honor is my desire;

Let Philip liue to shew himselfe worthy so great a Sire.

Qu. Elian. Philip I think thou knewst thy Grandams minde:

*But cheere thee Boy, I will not see thee want
As long as Elianor hath foote of land:
Henceforth thou shalt be taken for my sonne,
And waite on me and on thine vncle heere,
Who shall giue honour to thy noble mind.*

K. John. Philip kneele down, that thou maist throughly know

*How much thy resolution pleaseth vs,
Rise up Sir Richard Plantaginet King Richards Sonne.*

Philip. Grant heauens that Philip once may shew himselfe

*Worthy the honour of Plantaginet,
Or basest glorie of a Bastards name.*

K. John. Now, Gentlemen, we will away to Fraunce,

*To checke the pride of Arthur and his mates:
Essex, thou shalt be Ruler of my Realme,
And toward the maine charges of my warres,
He ceaze the lasie Abbey lubbers lands
Into my hands to pay my men of warre.
The Pope and Popelings shall not grease themselves
With gold and groates, that are the souldiers due.
Thus forward Lords, let our commaund be done,
And march we forward mightily to Fraunce.*

[Exeunt.]

Manent Philip and his Mother.

Philip. Madame, I beseech you deigne me so much leasure as the hearing of a matter that I long to impart to you.

Mother. What's the matter Philip? I think your suit in secret tends to some money matter, which you suppose burns in the bottom of my chest.

Philip. No Madame, it is no such suit as to beg or borrow,

*But such a suit, as might some other grant,
I would not now have troubled you withall.*

Mother. A Gods name let vs heare it.

*Philip. Then Madame thus, your Ladiship sees
well,*

*How that my scandal growes by meanes of you,
In that report hath rumord vp and downe,
I am a bastard, and no Fauconbridge.*

*This grosse attaint so tilteth in my thoughts,
Maintaining combat to abridge mine ease,
That field and towne, and company alone,
What so I do, or wheresoere I am,
I cannot chase the slaunder from my thoughts.*

*If it be true, resolute me of my sire,
For pardon, Madame, if I think amisse.*

*Be Philip Philip, and no Fauconbridge:
His father doubtlesse was as braue a man.*

*To you on knees, as sometime Phaeton,
Mistrusting sielly Merop for his sire,
Straining a little bashfull modestie,*

I beg some instance whence I am extraught.

*Mother. Yet more adoe to haste me to my graue,
And wilt thou too become a mothers crosse?*

*Must I accuse my selfe to close with you?
Slaunder my selfe, to quiet your affects?*

*Thou moust me Philip with this idle talke,
Which I remit, in hope this mood will die.*

*Philip. Nay, Lady mother, heare me further yet,
For strong conceit drives duty hence awhile:*

Your husband, Fauconbridge, was father to that sonne,

*That carries markes of nature like the sire,
The sonne that blotteth you with wedlockes breach,
And holds my right as lineal in descent
From him whose forme was figured in his face.*

*Can Nature so dissemble in her frame,
To make the one so like as like may be,
And in the other print no character*

To challenge any marke of true descent?

*My brothers mind is base, and too too dull,
To mount where Philip lodgeth his affects*

*And his externall graces that you viewe,
(Though I report it) counterpoise not mine:*

*His constitution plaine debilitie,
Requires the chaire, and mine the seat of steele.*

Nay, what is he, or what am I to him?

*When any one that knoweth how to carpe,
Will scarcely iudge us both one countrey borne.*

This, Madame, this, hath droue me from my selfe.

*And here by heauens eternal lampes I sweare,
As cursed Nero with his mother did,*

So I with you, if you resolute me not.

Mother. Let mothers teares quench out thy angers fire,

And vrge no further what thou doest require.

*Phil. Let sonnes intreatie sway the mother now,
Or else she dies: He not infringe my vow.*

*Moth. Vnhappy taske: must I recount my shame.
Blab my misdeeds, or by concealing die?*

*Some power strike me speechless for a time,
Or take from him awhile his hearings use.*

Why wish I so, vnhappy as I am?

*The fault is mine, and he the faultie fruit,
I blush, I faint, oh would I might be mute.*

Phil. Mother be briefe, I long to know my name.

Moth. And longing die, to shroud thy mothers shame.

Phil. Come Madame come, you need not be so loath,

The shame is shared equall twixt vs both.

*Ist not a slackenesse in me, worthy blame,
To be so old, and cannot write my name?*

Good mother resolute me.

Moth. Then Philip heare thy fortune, and my griefe,

*My honours losse by purchase of thy selfe,
My shame, thy name, and husbands secret wrong,
All maimd and staind by youths unruly sway.*

And when thou know'st from whence thou art ex-traught,

Or if thou knew'st what suites, what threats, what feares,

*To moue by loue, or massacre by death,
To yeeld with loue, or end by loues contempt*

*The mightinesse of him that courted me,
Who tempered terror with his wanton talke,*

That something may extenuate the guilt.

But let it not aduantage me so much:

*Vpbraid me rather with the Romane dame
That shed her blood to wash away her shame.*

Why stand I to expostulate the crime

With pro et contra, now the deed is done?

When to conclude two words may tell the tale,

That Philips father was a princes sonne:

Rich Englands rule, worlds onely terror he,

For honors losse left me with child of thee:

Whose sonne thou art, then pardon me the rather,

For fair King Richard was thy noble father.

*Philip. Then Robin Fauconbridge I wish thee ioy,
My sire a King, and I a landlesse boy.
Gods lady mother, the world is in my debt,
There's something owing to Plantaginet.
I marry sir, let me alone for game,*

*Ile act some wonders now I know my name.
By blessed Mary Ile not sell that pride
For Englands wealth, and all the world beside.
Sit fast the proudest of my fathers foes,
Away good mother, there the comfort goes. [Exeunt.*

Die bei Shakspeare den vierten Act beginnende Scene zwischen Arthur und Hubert lautet im alten King John so:

Enter Hubert de Burgh with three men.

Hub. My masters, I haue shewed you what warrant I haue for this attempt; I perceiue by your heavy countenances, you had rather be otherwise imployed, and for my owne part, I would the King had made choice of some other executioner: only this is my comfort, that a King commaunds, whose precepts neglected or omitted, threatneth torture for the default. Therefore in brieft, leaue me, and be ready to attend the aduventure: stay within that entry, and when you heare me crie, God saue the King, issue sodainely forth, lay hands on Arthur, set him in this chaire, wherein (once fast bound) leaue him with me to finish the rest.

Attendants. We goe, though loath. [Exeunt.

Hub. My Lord, will it please your honor to take the benefit of the faire euening?

Enter Arthur to Hubert de Burgh.

*Arth. Gramercie Hubert for thy care of me,
In or to whom restraint is newly knowne,
The ioy of walking is small benefit,
Yet will I take thy offer with small thanks,
I would not loose the pleasure of the eie.
But tell me courteous Keeper if thou can,
How long the King will haue me tarrie heere.*

*Hub. I know not Prince, but as I gesse, not long.
God send you freedome, and God saue the King.*

They issue forth.

Arth. Why how now sirs, what may this outrage meane?

*O helpe me Hubert, gentle keeper help:
God send this sodaine mutinous approach
Tend not to reauce a wretched guiltles life.*

Hub. So sirs, depart, and leaue the rest for me.

Arth. Then Arthur yeeld, death frowneth in thy face,

What meaneth this? good Hubert pleade the case.

Hub. Patience yong Lord, and listen words of woe,

*Harmefull and harsh, hells horror to be heard:
A dismall tale fit for a furies tongue.*

I fainte to tell, deepe sorrow is the sound.

Arth. What, must I die?

*Hub. No newes of death, but tidings of more hate,
A wrathfull doome, and most unluckie fate:
Deaths dish were daintie at so fell a feast,
Be deafe, hear not, its hell to tell the rest.*

Arth. Alas, thou wrongst my youth with words of feare,

*Tis hell, tis horror, not for one to heare:
What is it man if it must needes be done,
Act it, and end it, that the paine were gone.*

Hub. I will not chaunt such dolour with my tongue,

Yet must I act the outrage with my hand.

My heart, my head, and all my powers beside,

To aide the office haue at once denide.

Peruse this letter, lines of trebble woe,

Reade ore my charge, and pardon when you know.

"Hubert, these are to commaund thee, as thou tenderest our quiet in minde, and the estate of our person, that presently upon the receipt of our commaund, thou put out the eies of Arthur Plantaginet."

Arth. Ah monstrous damned man! his very breath infects the elements.

Contagious venome dwelleth in his heart,

Effecting meanes to poyson all the world.

Vnreuerent may I be to blame the heauens

Of great iniustice, that the miscreant

Liues to oppresse the innocents with wrong.

Ah Hubert! makes he thee his instrument,

To sound the trump that causeth hell triumph?

Heauen weepes, the saints do shed celestiall teares,

They feare thy fall, and cite thee with remorse,

They knocke thy conscience, mouing pitie there,

Willing to fence thee from the rage of hell:

Hell Hubert, trust me all the plagues of hell

Hang on performance of this damned deede.

This seale, the warrant of the bodies blisse,

Ensureth Satan chieftaine of thy soule:

Subscribe not Hubert, giue not Gods part away.

I speake not only for eies priuilege,

The chief exterior that I would enioy:

But for thy perill, farre beyond my paine,

Thy sweet soules losse, more than my eies raine lacke:

A cause internall, and eternall too.

Adwise thee Hubert, for the case is hard,

To loose saluation for a Kings reward.

Hub. My Lord, a subiect dwelling in the land

Is tied to execute the Kings commaund.

Arth. Yet God commaunds whose power reacheth further,

That no commaund should stand in force to murder.

*Hub. But that same Essence hath ordaind a law,
A death for guilt, to keepe the world in awe.*

Arth. I pleade, not guilty, treasonlesse and free.

Hub. But that appeale my Lord concernes not me.

Arth. Why thou art he that maist omit the perill.

Hub. I, if my soueraigne would omit his quarrell.

Arth. His quarrell is unhallowed false and wrong.

Hub. Then be the blame to whom it doth belong.

*Arth. Why thats to thee if thou as they proceede,
Conclude their iudgment with so vile a deede.*

*Hub. Why then no execution can be lawfull,
If Judges doomes must be reputed doubtfull.*

Arth. Yes where in form of law in place and time,

The offender is convicted of the crime.

Hub. My Lord, my Lord, this long expostulation, Heapes up more griefe, than promise of redresse;

For this I know, and so resolute I end,

That subiects liues on Kings commands depend.

*I must not reason why he is your foe,
But do his charge since he commaunds it so.
Arth. Then do thy charge, and charged be thy soul,
With wrongfull persecution done this day.
You rowling eyes, whose superficies yet
I doe behold with eies that nature lent:
Send forth the terror of your Mouers frowne,
To wreake my wrong vpon the murtherers
That rob me of your faire reflecting view:
Let hell to them (as earth they wish to me)
Be darke and direfull guerdon for their guilt,
And let the blacke tormenters of deep Tartary
Vpbraide them with this damned enterprise,
Inflicting change of tortures on their soules.
Delay not Hubert, my orisons are ended,
Begin I pray thee, reauce me of my sight:
But to performe a tragedie indeede,
Conclude the period with a mortall stab.
Constance farewell, tormenter come away,
Make my dispatch the Tyrants feasting day.*

Ganz besonders zu einer Vergleichung des Shakspeare'schen Styls mit dem seines Vorgängers geeignet erscheint die Scene, welche Arthur's Todessprung enthält (bei Sh. A. 4, Sc. 3).

Enter yong Arthur on the walls.

*Now help good hap to further mine entent,
Crosse not my youth with any more extremes:
I venter life to gaine my libertie,
And if I die, worlds troubles haue an end.
Feare gins dissuade the strength of my resolute,
My holde will faile, and then alas I fall,
And if I fall, no question death is next:
Better desist, and liue in prison still.
Prison said I? nay, rather death than so:
Comfort and courage come againe to me,
He venter sure: tis but a leape for life.
He leapes, and brusing his bones, after he wakes from his traunce, speakes thus:
Hoe, who is nigh? some bodie take me vp.*

Von Holinshed's Chroniken, welche Shakspeare für seine übrigen historischen Dramen sowie für seinen Macbeth in so ausgedehntem Masse benutzt hat, scheint er bei dem King John nur einen sehr spärlichen Gebrauch gemacht zu haben; wenigstens hat er in allen Fällen eines Zwiespalts zwischen den historischen Ueberlieferungen Holinshed's einerseits und den ungeschichtlichen Versionen seines dramatischen Vorgängers andererseits, obwohl ihm die ersteren ohne Zweifel aus der Chronik sehr wohl bekannt sein mussten, doch die letzteren unbedenklich sich in seiner eigenen Auffassung angeeignet, und die Abweichungen, die er sich von dem älteren King John verstattet, sind überall nur im Interesse der dramatischen Kunst, nirgends im Interesse der geschichtlichen Wahrheit vorgenommen.

*Hub. I faint, I feare, my conscience bids desist:
Faint did I say? feare was it that I named:
My King commaunds, that warrant sets me free:
But God forbids, and he commaundeth Kings,
That great Commaunder countercheckes my charge,
He stayes my hand, he maketh soft my heart.
Goe cursed tooles, your office is exempt,
Cheere thee yong Lord, thou shalt not loose an eie,
Thogh I should purchase it with losse of life.
Ile to the King, and say his will is done
And of the langor tell him thou art dead,
Goe in with me, for Hubert was not borne
To blinde those lampes that nature polisht so.
Arth. Hubert, if euer Arthur be in state,
Looke for amends of this receiued gift,
I tooke my eiesight by thy curtesie,
Thou lentst them me, I will not be ingrate.
But now procrastination may offend
The issue that thy kindnesse undertakes:
Depart we Hubert to preuent the worst.*

[Exeunt.

*Where is my mother? let me speake with her.
Who hurts me thus? speake hoe, where are you gone?
Ay me poore Arthur, I am heere alone.
Why calld I mother, how did I forget?
My fall, my fall, hath killd my mothers sonne.
How will she weepe at tidings of my death?
My death indeed, O God, my bones are burst.
Sweete Iesu saue my soule, forgiue my rash attempt,
Comfort my mother, shield her from despaire,
When she shall heare my tragycke ouerthrowe.
My heart controuls the office of my tongue,
My vital powers forsake my brused trunk,
I die, I die, heauen take my fleeting soule,
And lady mother all good hap to thee.* [He dies.

SCENE, sometimes in England, and sometimes in France.

ACT I.

SCENE I.

Northampton.² A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter King JOHN, Queen ELINOR, PEMBROKE, ESSEX, SALISBURY, and Others, with CHATILLON.

K. John. Now, say, Chatillon, what would France³ with us?

Chat. Thus, after greeting, speaks the king of France, In my behaviour,⁴ to the majesty, The borrow'd majesty of England here.

Eli. A strange beginning; — borrow'd majesty!

K. John. Silence, good mother: hear the embassy.

Chat. Philip of France, in right and true behalf⁵ Of thy deceased brother Geoffrey's son, Arthur Plantagenet, lays most lawful claim To this fair island, and the territories,⁶ To Ireland, Poitiers, Anjou, Touraine, Maine; Desiring thee to lay aside the sword Which sways usurpingly these several titles,

And put the same into young Arthur's hand, Thy nephew and right royal sovereign.

K. John. What follows, if we disallow of this?

Chat. The proud control⁷ of fierce and bloody war, To enforce these rights so forcibly withheld.

K. John. Here have we war for war, and blood for blood,

Controlment for controlment: so answer France.

Chat. Then take my king's defiance from my mouth, The farthest limit of my embassy.⁸

K. John. Bear mine to him, and so depart in peace.

Be thou as lightning⁹ in the eyes of France;

For ere thou canst report I will be there, The thunder of my cannon shall be heard.

So, hence! Be thou the trumpet of our wrath,

And sullen presage¹⁰ of your own decay. —

An honourable conduct let him have:

Pembroke, look to 't. Farewell, Chatillon.¹¹

[Exeunt CHATILLON and PEMBROKE.]

Eli. What now, my son? have I not ever said, How that ambitious Constance would not cease,

1) Das Personenverzeichniss fügte zuerst Rowe in seiner Ausgabe (1709) hinzu. 2) Diese in den alten Ausgg. fehlende Ortsbezeichnung ergibt sich nicht aus Sh.'s Texte und ist erst von den spätern Hgg., den Chroniken gemäss, notirt. 3) France ist der König von Frankreich, Philipp, hier in familiärer Sprache so genannt, worauf der Gesandte mit um so grösserem Nachdruck dessen königliche Würde betont in the king of France. 4) in my behaviour, eigentlich = in meiner Haltung oder Vorstellung, durch mich repräsentirt. 5) behalf = Interesse. — Sh. fand in dem alten King John schon: in the behalf of the said Arthur. 6) territories, die ausser der britischen Insel (this fair island) in Anspruch genommenen Landgebiete werden in der folgenden Zeile genauer angegeben. Die Fol. hat ein Colon hinter territories. 7) proud control ist hier der imposante kriegserische Zwang, der dem König Johann angethan werden soll. In demselben Sinne, = Zwang, Gewalt, steht auch bald nachher controlment. — Der Gleichklang zwischen enforce und forcibly ist von Sh. offenbar beabsichtigt. 8) Bis zur Herausforderung, Kriegserklärung geht die Vollmacht (limit) des französischen Botschafters. — In der vorhergehenden Rede des Königs ist, wie die Cambridge Edd. vermuthen, controlment zuerst dreisylbig und dann viersylbig zu lesen. Die Fol. setzt beide Mal controlement. 9) So rasch wie dem Blitz der Donnerschlag folgt, so rasch wird auf die durch Chatillon überbrachte Kriegserklärung der Anfang des Kriegs selbst folgen. 10) sullen presage = finstere Weissagung, ist eigentlich Apposition zu trumpet of our wrath, wobei Sh. an die Trompete des Weltuntergangs gedacht hat, und nach einer unserm Dichter geläufigen Construction durch die Copula and mit dem Hauptwort verbunden. 11) Chatillon in der Fol., viersylbig gesprochen, giebt einen vollständigen Vers. 12) manage = Rüstung, kriegserische Aufbietung zweier Reiche, ist hier den freundlichen Unterhandlungen

Till she had kindled France, and all the world,
Upon the right and party of her son?
This might have been prevented, and made whole,
With very easy arguments of love,
Which now the manage¹² of two kingdoms must
With fearful bloody issue arbitrate.

K. John. Our strong possession, and our right, for us.¹³

Eli. Your strong possession much more than your right,
Or else it must go wrong with you and me:
So much my conscience whispers in your ear,
Which none but heaven, and you, and I, shall hear.

*Enter the Sheriff of Northamptonshire, who whispers ESSEX.*¹⁴

Essex. My liege, here is the strangest controversy,
Come from the country to be judg'd by you,
That e'er I heard: shall I produce the men?

K. John. Let them approach. — [Exit Sheriff.]
Our abbeyes, and our priories, shall pay
This expedition's charge. —

Re-enter Sheriff, with ROBERT FAULCONBRIDGE, and PHILIP, his Bastard Brother.

What men are you?

Bast. Your faithful subject I, a gentleman
Born in Northamptonshire, and eldest son,
As I suppose, to Robert Faulconbridge,
A soldier, by the honour-giving hand
Of Cordelion¹⁵ knighted in the field.

K. John. What art thou?

Rob. The son and heir to that same Faulconbridge.

K. John. Is that the elder, and art thou the heir?
You came not of one mother then, it seems.

Bast. Most certain of one mother, mighty king;
That is well known: and, as I think, one father:
But, for the certain knowledge of that truth
I put you o'er¹⁶ to heaven, and to my mother:
Of that I doubt, as all men's children may.

Eli. Out on thee, rude man! thou dost shame thy mother,

And wound her honour with this diffidence.

Bast. I, Madam? no, I have no reason for it:
That is my brother's plea and none of mine:

The which if he can prove, 'a¹⁷ pops me out
At least from fair five hundred pound a year.
Heaven guard my mother's honour, and my land!

K. John. A good blunt fellow. — Why, being younger born,

Doth he lay claim to thine inheritance?

Bast. I know not why, except to get the land.

But, once,¹⁸ he slander'd me with bastardy:
But whe'r I be as true-begot,¹⁹ or no,
That still I lay upon my mother's head;
But, that I am as well-begot, my liege,
(Fair fall²⁰ the bones that took the pains for me!)
Compare our faces, and be judge yourself.

If old Sir Robert did beget us both,
And were our father, and this son like him; —

O old Sir Robert, father, on my knee
I give heaven thanks, I was not like to thee!

K. John. Why, what a madcap hath heaven lent us
here!

Eli. He hath a trick²¹ of Cordelion's face;
The accent of his tongue affecteth²² him.

Do you not read some tokens of my son
In the large composition of this man?

K. John. Mine eye hath well examined his parts,
And finds them perfect Richard. — Sirrah, speak:
What doth move you to claim your brother's land?

Bast. Because he hath a half-face, like my father!²³
With half that face would he have all my land,
A half-fac'd groat five hundred pound a year!

Rob. My gracious liege, when that my father liv'd,
Your brother did employ my father much, —

Bast. Well, Sir; by this you cannot get my land:
Your tale must be, how he employ'd my mother.

Rob. And once despatch'd him in an embassy
To Germany, there, with the emperor,
To treat of high affairs touching that time.
The advantage²⁴ of his absence took the king,
And in the mean time sojourn'd at my father's;
Where how he did prevail I shame to speak,
But truth is truth: large lengths of seas and shores
Between my father and my mother lay,
As I have heard my father speak himself,
When this same lusty gentleman was got.

(arguments of love) gegenübergestellt. So in K. Richard II. (A. 1, Sc. 4) for the rebels — || Expedient manage must be made, my liege. 13) scil. our right is for us. 14) Diese Bühnenweisung rührt von Capellher; sie folgt einer im alten King John: Enter the Shrive and whispers the Earle of Salisbury in the eare. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 573. — Die Fol. hat nur Enter a Sheriff und bezeichnet dessen nächstes exit und re-enter nicht. 15) So die Fol., deren Schreibung Rowe noch beibehielt. — Die späteren Hgg. französiren den Namen in Coeur-de-lion. — Auch der alte K. John nennt den König Richard Löwenherz einfach Cordelion, ohne den eigentlichen Namen hinzuzusetzen. 16) Ich verweise Euch, wegen der sichern Erkenntniss dieser Wahrheit, an den Himmel und an meine Mutter. 17) 'a für he, aus der Sprache des gemeinen Lebens, die der Bastard hier und im Folgenden anklingen lässt. 18) once ist hier schwerlich eine Zeitbestimmung, sondern = kurz und gut, einmal für allemal. So in Coriolanus (A. 2, Sc. 3) Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him. 19) whe'r aus whether zusammengezogen; in der Fol. where. — Dem true-begot = recht erzeugt, ebenbürtig, ist well-begot = gut oder glücklich erzeugt, entgegengestellt. 20) scil. fair fall to the bones = gut ergehe es den Gebeinen. — fall ist abgekürzt aus befall, wie bei Sh. öfter fair befall in diesem Sinne vorkommt. 21) trick = individueller Zug, charakteristische Eigenheit. So in All's well that ends well (A. 1, Sc. 1) every line and trick of his sweet favour. — Wie die Cambridge Edd. notiren, ist trick in der Wappensprache so viel wie copy. 22) to affect = zur Schau tragen, sich äusserlich Etwas aneignen. — him geht auf Cordelion. 23) Diese Zeile enthält die Antwort auf die Frage des Königs, indem der Bastard statt seines Bruders das Wort nimmt. — Dann vergleicht er. auf Robert's mageres Gesicht deutend, dieses halbe Gesicht — half that face steht im Gegensatz zu all my land — mit einer Silbermünze, die das Bild nur im Profil zeigt. — Solche half-faced groats kamen erst unter Heinrich VII. in England vor, während man vorher die Königsköpfe en face, also ganz, auf den Münzen darstellte. — Für half that face lesen die meisten Hgg. mit Theobald that half face, und verbinden auch wohl den ersten Vers mit den beiden folgenden zu einem Satze. 24) Der König ergriff die günstige Gelegenheit, dass mein Vater

Upon his death-bed he by will bequeath'd
His lands to me; and took it on his death,²⁵
That this, my mother's son, was none of his;
An if²⁶ he were, he came into the world
Full fourteen weeks before the course of time.²⁷
Then, good my liege, let me have what is mine,
My father's land, as was my father's will.

K. John. Sirrah, your brother is legitimate;
Your father's wife did after wedlock bear him;
And if she did play false, the fault was hers,
Which fault lies on the hazards of all husbands
That marry wives. Tell me, how if my brother,
Who, as you say, took pains to get this son,
Had of your father claim'd this son for his?
In sooth, good friend, your father might have kept
This calf, bred from his cow, from all the world;
In sooth, he might: then, if he were my brother's,
My brother might not claim him, nor your father,
Being none of his, refuse him. This concludes:²⁸
My mother's son did get your father's heir;
Your father's heir must have your father's land.

Rob. Shall then my father's will be of no force
To dispossess that child which is not his?

Bast. Of no more force to dispossess me, Sir,
Than was his will to get me, as I think.

Eli. Whether hadst thou rather be a Faulconbridge,
And, like thy brother, to²⁹ enjoy thy land,
Or the reputed son of Cordelion,
Lord of thy presence,³⁰ and no land beside?

Bast. Madam, an if my brother had my shape,
And I had his, Sir Robert his,³¹ like him;
And if my legs were two such riding-rods,
My arms such eel-skins stuff'd, my face so thin,

That in mine ear I durst not stick a rose,
Lest men should say, »Look, where three-farthings goes;«³²

And, to his shape, were heir to all this land,³³
(Would I might never stir from off this place)
I'd give it every foot to have this face:

I would not be³⁴ Sir Nob in any case.

Eli. I like thee well. Wilt thou forsake thy fortune,
Bequeath thy land to him, and follow me?

I am a soldier, and now bound to France.

Bast. Brother, take you my land, I'll take my chance.
Your face hath got five hundred pounds a year,
Yet sell your face for five pence, and 't is dear. —
Madam, I'll follow you unto the death.

Eli. Nay, I would have you go before me thither.

Bast. Our country manners give our betters way.³⁵

K. John. What is thy name?

Bast. Philip, my liege; so is my name begun;
Philip, good old Sir Robert's wife's eldest son.

K. John. From henceforth bear his name whose form thou bearest:

Kneel thou down Philip, but arise more great;³⁶
Arise Sir Richard, and Plantagenet.

Bast. Brother by the mother's side, give me your hand:
My father gave me honour, yours gave land. —
Now blessed be the hour, by night or day,
When I was got, Sir Robert was away!

Eli. The very spirit of Plantagenet!
I am thy grandam, Richard: call me so.

Bast. Madam, by chance, but not by truth; what though?³⁷

Something about, a little from the right,
In at the window, or else o'er the hatch:

abwesend war. 25) Staunton citirt zur Vergleichung Merry Wives of Windsor (A. 2, Sc. 2) when Mistress Bridget lost the handle of her fan, I took't upon mine honour thou hadst it not und Beaumont und Fletcher's The Lover's Progress: Upon my death || I take it uncompelled that they were guilty. — Demnach müsste to take it = to take oath stehen. 26) Das alterthümliche an if schreibt die Fol. hier and if, wie in einer folgenden Zeile dieser Scene: Madam, and if my brother had my shape. — Die Hgg., welche dort an if setzen, lesen hier and, if = und, wenn. Nur Hanmer hat an if. 27) course of time = der regelmässige Verlauf der Schwangerschaft und Niederkunft. So kommt time öfter vor, z. B. in Merchant of Venice (A. 1, Sc. 1) Nature hath fram'd strange fellows in her time. — Der alte K. John hat hier: Six weeks before the account my father made. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 573. 28) This concludes erklärt Johnson mit ausschliesslicher Beziehung auf das Vorhergehende als This is a decisive argument. Nach der Interpunction der Fol. ist es jedoch auch mit dem Folgenden zu verbinden = Dies ergiebt folgenden Schluss, dies lässt schliessen u. s. w. 29) to ist eingeschoben, weil auf hadst thou rather nicht unmittelbar der dazu gehörige Infinitiv folgt. Manche Hgg. construiren dagegen hadst thou rather be like thy brother (in order) to enjoy thy land. 30) Als der Besitzer Deiner selbst, Deiner Person, wie Du Dich als der geachtete Sohn des Löwenherz darstellst, und als Besitzer keiner liegenden Gründe daneben. 31) Sir Robert his steht für Sir Robert's shape: wenn ich meines Bruders Gestalt, die des alten Sir Robert hätte, wie mein Bruder. — Sh. wendet sonst diese der familiären Sprache angehörige Umschreibung des Genitivs mit his nur bei Substantiven, die auf s auslauten, an; so Mars his gauntlet in Troilus and Cressida (A. 4, Sc. 5). 32) Anspielung auf die dünnen Silberrünzen, zum Werthe von drei Heller, mit dem Bildniss der Königin Elisabeth, an deren Ohr, nach der Mode der Zeit, eine Bandschleife in Gestalt einer Rose angebracht war. Davon hiess die Münze selbst, mit der der Bastard das schmale Gesicht seines Bruders vergleicht, three-farthings-rose. 33) Zu were ist aus dem Vorhergehenden ein I zu suppliren: wenn ich zu seiner Gestalt noch all dies Land besässe, so würde ich jeden Quadratfuss dieses Landes dahingeben, um nur dies mein eigenes Gesicht zu bekommen. — Die parenthetische Zeile 'Would I might never etc. dient zur Betheuerung des Gesagten. 34) Die Fol. hat It would not be, was die zweite Folioausg. von 1632 verbessert. — Nob ist das hier verächtlich gebrauchte Diminutiv von Robert. 35) Der Bastard, obwohl auf dem Lande erzogen, hat doch Lebensart genug gelernt, um Vornehmeren den Vortritt zu lassen, also hier scherzhaft: die Königin eher sterben zu lassen, als er selbst stirbt. — Wie hier country manners = ländliche, bäuerische Manieren, so kommt in Hamlet (A. 3, Sc. 2) country matters vor. 36) arise setzt Steevens, um den Vers zu reguliren, für rise der alten Ausgg. — Als Ritter soll der bisher Philip Genannte Sir Richard Plantagenet heissen, also als Angehöriger der königlichen Familie der Plantagenets anerkannt werden. 37) Was macht es doch, dass Ihr nur von ungefähr, nicht rechtmässig meine Grossmutter seid? — Dieses by chance wird in den folgenden Versen humoristisch umschrieben, mit Bezugnahme auf die Heimlichkeit seiner Erzeugung. — in at the window und o'er the hatch sind sprichwörtliche Bezeichnungen für

Who dares not stir by day, must walk by night,
And have is have, however men do catch.
Near or far off, well won is still well shot,
And I am I, howe'er I was begot.

K. John. Go, Faulconbridge: now hast thou thy desire;
A landless knight makes thee a landed squire.³⁸—
Come, Madam, and come, Richard: we must speed
For France, for France, for it is more than need.

Bast. Brother, adieu: good fortune come to thee,
For thou wast got i' the way of honesty.³⁹—

[Exeunt all but Bastard.

A foot of honour better than I was,
But many a many foot⁴⁰ of land the worse.

Well, now can I make any Joan a lady.

»Good den, Sir Richard.«⁴¹ — »God-a-mercy, fellow;«

And if his name be George, I'll call him Peter;

For new-made honour doth forget men's names:

'T is too respective, and too sociable,

For your conversion.⁴² Now your traveller,

He and his toothpick at my worship's mess;⁴³

And when my knightly stomach is suffic'd,

Why then I suck my teeth, and catechise

My picked man of countries:⁴⁴ — »My dear Sir,«

Thus leaning on mine elbow I begin,

»I shall beseech you« — that is question now;

And then comes answer like an absey-book:⁴⁵

»O Sir,« says answer, »at your best command;

At your employment; at your service, Sir:«

»No, Sir,« says question, »I, sweet Sir, at yours:«

And so, ere answer knows what question would,

Saving in dialogue of compliment,⁴⁶

And talking of the Alps, and Apennines,

The Pyrenean,⁴⁷ and the river Po,

It draws toward supper in conclusion so.

But this is worshipful society,

And fits the mounting spirit, like myself;

For he is but a bastard to the time,⁴⁸

That doth not smack of observation;

(And so am I, whether I smack, or no;)

And not alone in habit and device,

Exterior form, outward accoutrement,

But from the inward motion to deliver

Sweet, sweet, sweet poison for the age's tooth:

Which,⁴⁹ though I will not practise to deceive,

Yet, to avoid deceit, I mean to learn;

For it shall strew the footsteps of my rising. —

But who comes in such haste, in riding-robcs?

What woman-post is this? hath she no husband,

That will take pains to blow a horn before her?⁵⁰

Enter Lady FAULCONBRIDGE and JAMES GURNEY.

O me! it is my mother. — How now, good lady?

What brings you here to court so hastily?

Lady F. Where is that slave, thy brother? where is he,

That holds in chase mine honour up and down?

Bast. My brother Robert? old Sir Robert's son?

Colbrand the giant, that same mighty man?⁵¹

Is it Sir Robert's son, that you seek so?

Lady F. Sir Robert's son! Ay, thou unreverent boy,

Sir Robert's son: why scorn'st thou at Sir Robert?

He is Sir Robert's son, and so art thou.

Bast. James Gurney, wilt thou give us leave awhile?

Gur. Good leave, good Philip.

Bast. Philip! sparrow!⁵² James,

There's toys abroad:⁵³ anon I'll tell thee more. —

[Exit GURNEY.

uneheliche Kinder. 38) Der begüterte Junker Robert (squire) wird hier dem im Range höheren, unbegüterten Ritter Philipp oder Richard gegenüber gestellt. 39) Nach dem Sprichwort Bastards are born lucky muss dem rechtmässig erzeugten Robert das ihm nicht angeborne Glück erst ausdrücklich angewünscht werden. 40) Wortspiel zwischen foot = Schritt, Tritt, und = Quadratfuss. 41) Seitdem er zum Ritter geschlagen ist und als solcher mit Sir Richard angeredet wird, kann er jedes gewöhnliche Bauernmädchen zur Lady machen, indem er sie heirathet. — Joan = Hanne, gebraucht Sh. auch sonst = Bauernmädchen; so in Love's Labour's Lost (A. 3, Sc. 1) Some men must love my lady, and some Joan. 42) Den Namen eines Geringeren im Gedächtniss zu behalten, ist für die mit dem Bastard vorgegangene Verwandlung zu rücksichtsvoll und zu leutselig. — 't is too respective bezieht sich in poetischer Lizenz auf forget men's names, als ob dafür not remember men's names stünde. — your conversion = eine Umwandlung, wie sie mit Euch, d. h. mit irgend Jemandem, vorgeht. In demselben allgemeineren Sinne steht gleich darauf your traveller = so ein weitgereister Mann, wie er Euch vorkommt. 43) Der Zahnstocher charakterisirt auch bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen die Affectation ausländischer Manieren. So in Beaumont und Fletcher's Drama The Honest Man's Fortune: You have travell'd like a fiddler to make faces || And brought home nothing but a case of toothpicks. — Unter my worship = meine ritterliche Würde, versteht der Bastard sich selbst als den Wirth eines solchen feinen Reisenden. 44) Meinen auserlesenen Ländermann, der in vielen Ländern gewesen ist. — Dagegen wollte Steevens of countries mit catechise verbinden. — picked = gesucht, geziert, kommt auch in Love's Labour's Lost (A. 5, Sc. 1) vor. 45) So die Fol. — Die meisten Hgg. machen im Widerspruch mit dem Verse ABC-book daraus. — Es ist der aus Fragen und Antworten bestehende Katechismus gemeint, der so heisst, weil er zugleich zum Lesenlernen diene. 46) Bloss in einem Zwiegespräch, das ganz aus Complimenten besteht. — and talking ist dem in dialogue coordinirt. 47) scil. the Pyrenean mountains. — Sh. gebraucht das Adjectiv als Substantiv. 48) Den sieht die Gegenwart, die Mitwelt, nur für einen Bastard, für einen Unebenbürtigen an, der keinen Beischmack von Weltsitte (observation) hat. — smack verbesserte Theobald das smoak der Fol. 49) which, das den ganzen Satz zusammenfasst, gehört sowohl zu practise = üben, hinterlistig üben, als auch zu learn. 50) Anspielung auf das Horn des Hahnreis und das Posthorn, das der reitende Eilbote (post) bläst oder vor sich her blasen lässt. — woman-post = weiblicher Eilbote. 51) Den schwächtigen, unansehnlichen Bruder nennt er hier ironisch Colbrand, den dänischen Riesen, welchen der englische Recke Guy von Warwick in einem Zweikampfe erlegte. Auf diese beiden spielen die englischen Balladen häufig an, und Sh. stellt sie auch an einer anderen Stelle als sprichwörtliche Repräsentanten gewaltiger Körperkraft zusammen, in K. Henry VIII. (A. 5, Sc. 3) I am not Samson, nor Sir Guy, nor Colbrand, || To mow them down before me. 52) Gurney, mit der Standeserhöhung des Bastards noch unbekannt, redet ihn noch vertraulich mit seinem alten Namen an, und erhält dafür die Zurechtweisung: Philipp heisst der Sperling, nicht ich. — Philip oder Phip ist eine gewöhnliche ältere Bezeichnung des Sperlings. 53) Es sind seltsame Dinge in der

Madam, I was not old Sir Robert's son:
Sir Robert might have eat his part in me
Upon Good-Friday, and ne'er broke his fast.⁵⁴
Sir Robert could do well: marry, to confess,⁵⁵
Could he get me? Sir Robert could not do it:
We know his handiwork. — Therefore, good mother,
To whom am I beholding⁵⁶ for these limbs?
Sir Robert never help to make this leg.

Lady F. Hast thou conspired with thy brother too,
That for thine own gain shouldst defend mine honour?
What means this scorn, thou most untoward knave?

Bast. Knight, knight, good mother, — Basilisco-like.⁵⁷
What! I am dubb'd; I have it on my shoulder.

But, mother, I am not Sir Robert's son;
I have disclaim'd Sir Robert, and my land;
Legitimation,⁵⁸ name, and all is gone.
Then, good my mother, let me know my father:
Some proper man, I hope; who was it, mother?

Lady F. Hast thou denied thyself a Faulconbridge?

Bast. As faithfully as I deny the devil.⁵⁹

Lady F. King Richard Cordelion was thy father.
By long and vehement suit I was seduc'd
To make room for him in my husband's bed. —

Heaven lay not my transgression to my charge! —
Thou art the issue of my dear offence,⁶⁰

Which was so strongly urg'd, past my defence.

Bast. Now, by this light, were I to get again,⁶¹
Madam, I would not wish a better father.

Some sins do bear their privilege on earth,
And so doth yours; your fault was not your folly:
Needs must you lay your heart at his dispose,

Subjected tribute⁶² to commanding love,
Against whose fury and unmatched force
The awless lion could not wage the fight,
Nor keep his princely heart from Richard's hand.⁶³

He that perforce robs lions of their hearts,
May easily win a woman's. Ay, my mother,
With all my heart I thank thee for my father!
Who lives and dares but say thou didst not well
When I was got, I'll send his soul to hell.
Come, lady, I will show thee to my kin;

And they shall say, when Richard me begot,
If thou hadst said him nay, it had been sin:
Who says it was, he lies: I say, 't was not. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.¹

France. Before the Walls of Angiers.

*Enter, on one side, the Duke of AUSTRIA, and Forces;
on the other, PHILIP, King of France, and Forces;
LEWIS, CONSTANCE, ARTHUR, and Attendants.*

Lew. Before Angiers well met, brave Austria.² —

Arthur, that great forerunner of thy blood,
Richard, that robb'd the lion of his heart,³

And fought the holy wars in Palestine,
By this brave duke came early to his grave:

And, for amends to his posterity,
At our importance⁴ hither is he come,

To spread his colours, boy, in thy behalf,
And to rebuke the usurpation

Of thy unnatural uncle, English John.
Embrace him, love him, give him welcome hither.

Arth. God shall forgive you Cordelion's death,
The rather, that you give his offspring⁵ life,

Shadowing their right under your wings of war.
I give you welcome with a powerless hand,

But with a heart full of unstained love:
Welcome before the gates of Angiers, duke.

Lew. A noble boy! Who would not do thee right?

Aust. Upon thy cheek lay I this zealous kiss,
As seal to this indenture of my love,

That to my home I will no more return,
Till Angiers, and the right thou hast in France,

Together with that pale, that white-fac'd shore,⁶
Whose foot spurns back the ocean's roaring tides,

And coops from other lands her islanders,
Even till that England, hedg'd in with the main,

That water-walled bulwark,⁷ still secure
And confident from foreign purposes,⁸

Luft. Damit meint er seine eigenen letzten Erlebnisse. 54) Er hätte kein Fleisch gegessen, und also nicht die Fasten gebrochen, wenn er seinen Antheil an mir am Charfreitag verzehrt hätte. 55) to confess = um ein Bekenntniß abzulegen, die Wahrheit zu gestehen. — In der folgenden Zeile lässt die Fol. he, auf dem, wie auf me, der Nachdruck liegt, zufällig aus: Pope supplirte es. 56) beholding = verpflichtet. Die Hgg. setzen für dieses Sh.'sche Wort meistens das synonyme beholden. 57) Dem knave = Bube, und = Knappe, stellt der Bastard sich als knight = Ritter, gegenüber: Ich bin ein Ritter, so gut wie Basilisco. — Basilisco ist ein Renommist in dem alten Drama Soliman and Perseda, der ebenfalls sich knight nennt, von dem Clown des Stückes jedoch als knave bezeichnet wird. 58) legitimation = Ebenbürtigkeit, rechtmässige Geburt. 59) to deny ist im Munde der Mutter = verleugnen, im Munde des Sohnes = absagen Einem, sich von Einem lossagen. 60) thou art verbessert die vierte Folioausg. das that art der ersten — eine Emendation, welcher vielleicht Staunton's sinnreiche Conjectur vorzuziehen ist: Heaven lay not my transgression to thy charge, || That art the issue of my dear offence. 61) Wäre ich noch einmal zu erzeugen. 62) subjected tribute ist Apposition zu heart, so dass das folgende Relativpronomen whose sich wieder auf his dispose = die Verfügung Desjenigen, bezieht. 63) Der Löwe konnte nicht verwehren, dass König Richard ihm das Herz aus dem Leibe riss. — Sh. kannte die Sage von dem Zweikampfe König Richard's mit dem Löwen aus einer altenglischen Ballade. — awless = furchtlos.

1) Die in der Angabe von Acten und Scenen sehr ungenaue Fol. beginnt hier eine zweite Scene des ersten Actes und schliesst dieselbe erst mit dem durch die späteren Hgg. so bezeichneten Schlusse des zweiten Actes. 2) Austria ist der Herzog von Oesterreich, den die Hgg. als Archduke bezeichnen. Sh. kennt ihn nur als Duke. — Dyce theilt, einer Conjectur Theobald's folgend, diese Rede dem König Philipp zu. 3) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Ann. 63. — Sh. identificirt hier, dem alten K. John folgend, den Herzog von Oesterreich mit dem Vicomte von Limoges, in dessen Bekämpfung Richard Löwenherz bei der Belagerung von Chaluz seinen Tod fand. 4) importance = Anliegen, dringendes Gesuch. So gebraucht Sh. das adjectivische important = dringend, angelegentlich bittend. 5) Mit his offspring meint Arthur nicht sich selbst, sondern die Nachkommen oder die Familie Richard's collectiv gefasst, wie das folgende their right zeigt. 6) Es sind die Kreidefelsen Englands, welche der französischen

Even till that utmost corner of the west
Salute thee for her king: till then, fair boy,
Will I not think of home, but follow arms.

Const. O! take his mother's thanks, a widow's thanks,
Till your strong hand shall help to give him strength,
To make a more requital⁹ to your love.

Aust. The peace of heaven is theirs that lift their swords

In such a just and charitable war.

K. Phi. Well then, to work. Our cannon shall be bent
Against the brows of this resisting town.

Call for our chiefest men of discipline,

To cull the plots of best advantages.¹⁰

We'll lay before this town our royal bones,
Wade to the market-place in Frenchmen's blood,
But we will make it subject to this boy.

Const. Stay for an answer to your embassy,
Lest unadvis'd you stain your swords with blood.
My lord Chatillon may from England¹¹ bring
That right in peace, which here we urge in war;
And then we shall repent each drop of blood,
That hot rash haste so indirectly¹² shed.

Enter CHATILLON.

K. Phi. A wonder, lady! — lo, upon thy wish,
Our messenger, Chatillon, is arriv'd. —
What England says, say briefly, gentle lord;
We coldly pause for thee: Chatillon, speak.

Chat. Then turn your forces from this paltry siege,
And stir them up against a mightier task.
England, impatient of your just demands,
Hath put himself in arms. The adverse winds,
Whose leisure I have stay'd,¹³ have given him time
To land his legions all as soon as I.
His marches are expedient¹⁴ to this town,
His forces strong, his soldiers confident.
With him along is come the mother-queen,
An Até, stirring him to blood and strife;
With her her niece, the lady Blanch of Spain;
With them a bastard of the king's deceas'd:¹⁵
And all the unsettled humours¹⁶ of the land,

Rash, inconsiderate, fiery voluntaries,
With ladies' faces, and fierce dragons' spleens,
Have sold their fortunes at their native homes,
Bearing their birthrights proudly on their backs,¹⁷
To make a hazard of new fortunes here.
In brief, a braver choice of dauntless spirits,
Than now the English bottoms have waft¹⁸ o'er,
Did never float upon the swelling tide,
To do offence and scath¹⁹ in Christendom.

[Drums heard within.]

The interruption of their churlish drums
Cuts off more circumstance:²⁰ they are at hand,
To parley, or to fight; therefore, prepare.

K. Phi. How much unlook'd for is this expedition!

Aust. By how much unexpected, by so much
We must awake endeavour for defence,
For courage mounteth with occasion:
Let them be welcome then, we are prepar'd.

Enter King JOHN, ELINOR, BLANCH, the Bastard,
Pembroke, and Forces.

K. John. Peace be to France, if France in peace permit
Our just and lineal entrance to our own;
If not, bleed France, and peace ascend to heaven,
Whiles we, God's wrathful agent, do correct
Their proud contempt that beat²¹ his peace to heaven.

K. Phi. Peace be to England, if that war return
From France to England, there to live in peace.
England we love; and, for that England's sake,
With burden of our armour here we sweat:
This toil of ours should be a work of thine;
But thou from loving England art so far,
That thou hast under-wrought²² his lawful king,
Cut off the sequence of posterity,
Outfaced infant state,²³ and done a rape
Upon the maiden virtue of the crown.
Look here upon thy brother Geoffrey's face:
These eyes, these brows, were moulded out of his!
This little abstract doth contain that large²⁴
Which died in Geoffrey, and the hand of time
Shall draw this brief into as huge a volume.

Küste gleichsam ihr Angesicht zukehren, gemeint. 7) So heisst England in K. Richard II. (A. 2, Sc. 1) This precious stone set in the silver sea, || Which serves it in the office of a wall. 8) secure and confident ist, nach dem Sh.'schen Gebrauch der Copula and, so viel wie confidently secure. 9) more ist hier schwerlich mit Steevens = greater zu fassen, sondern als Compositum mit requital zu verbinden = eine Vergeltung, die den geleisteten Liebesdienst übertrifft. So in Venus and Adonis: Her best is better'd with a more delight. 10) Die ersten Männer der Kriegskunde sollen die günstigsten Angriffspläne auswählen. 11) England ist hier und im Folgenden = König von England. 12) indirectly = ungerecht, ungerechtfertigt. 13) Chatillon hat in England so lange warten müssen, bis die conträren Winde ihm die Ueberfahrt gestatteten. 14) expedient = fördernd, rasch. So gebraucht Sh. auch das Substantiv expedience = Förderung, Eile, in K. Richard II. (A. 2, Sc. 1) three thousand men of war || Are making hither with all due expedience. 15) Im alten K. John stand Next them a bastard of the king's deceased. — Die doppelte Bezeichnung des Genitivs ist also in diesem Falle nicht Sh. allein eigenthümlich. — Zwei Zeilen vorher hat die Fol. an Ace, was Rowe in an Até verbesserte. 16) humours = Launen, Stimmungen, steht hier für die mit solchen Launen Behafteten. 17) Für den Ertrag ihres ererbten Besitzes haben sie sich stolz zum Feldzug ausgerüstet. So in K. Henry VIII. (A. 1, Sc. 1) many || Have broke their backs with laying manors on them. 18) waft = wafted, Particip von to waft, wie Sh. von den auf t auslautenden Verben sie mehrfach bildet. 19) scath = Schaden, Verderben. Sh. hat dies veraltete Substantiv noch an drei andern Stellen: K. Henry VI. Second Part (A. 2, Sc. 4), K. Richard III. (A. 1, Sc. 3) und Titus Andronicus (A. 5, Sc. 1). 20) circumstance = Weitschweifigkeit, ausführlicher Bericht. — Im alten K. John steht an dieser Stelle: More circumstance the season intercepts. 21) Das beats der Fol. hat Hammer mit Recht in beat verbessert; das Relativum bezieht sich auf their: den stolzen Uebermuth Derjenigen u. s. w. 22) Particip von to under-work = untergraben. 23) infant state ist der dem Kinde Arthur gebührende Königsrang, dem Johann Trotz geboten hat. — Ebenso bezeichnet maiden virtue of the crown die jugendliche Unschuld der Krone, die Arthur tragen sollte. 24) Zu large ist ein entsprechendes Substantiv aus abstract zu suppliren: das grosse Urbild zu dem kleinen Abbild. — Ebenso entspricht zwei Zeilen weiter brief dem huge volume: der kurze

That Geoffrey was thy elder brother born,
And this his son; England was Geoffrey's right,
And this²⁵ is Geoffrey's. In the name of God,
How comes it then, that thou art call'd a king,
When living blood doth in these temples beat,
Which owe the crown that thou o'ermasterest?

K. John. From whom hast thou this great commission, France,

To draw my answer from thy articles?²⁶

K. Phi. From that supernal judge, that stirs good thoughts

In any breast of strong authority,
To look into the blots and stains of right.²⁷
That judge hath made me guardian to this boy:
Under whose warrant I impeach thy wrong,
And by whose help I mean to chastise²⁸ it.

K. John. Alack! thou dost usurp authority.

K. Phi. Excuse: it is to beat usurping down.

Eli. Who is it, thou dost call usurper, France?

Const. Let me make answer: — thy usurping son.

Eli. Out, insolent! thy bastard shall be king,
That thou may'st be a queen, and check the world!

Const. My bed was ever to thy son as true,
As thine was to thy husband, and this boy
Liker in feature to his father Geoffrey,
Than thou and John, in manners being as like
As rain to water, or devil to his dam.
My boy a bastard! By my soul, I think,
His father never was so true-begot:

It cannot be, an if thou wert his mother.²⁹

Eli. There's a good mother, boy, that blots thy father.

Const. There's a good grandam, boy, that would blot thee.

Aust. Peace!

Bast. Hear the crier.³⁰

Aust. What the devil art thou?

Bast. One that will play the devil, Sir, with you,
An 'a may catch your hide³¹ and you alone.

You are the hare of whom the proverb goes,
Whose valour plucks dead lions by the beard.
I'll smoke your skin-coat,³² an I catch you right.
Sirrah, look to 't; i' faith, I will, i' faith.

Blanch. O! well did he become that lion's robe,
That did disrobe the lion of that robe.

Bast. It lies as sightly on the back of him,
As great Alcides' shows upon an ass.³³ —

But, ass, I'll take that burden from your back,
Or lay on that shall make your shoulders crack.

Aust. What cracker is this same, that deafs our ears
With this abundance of superfluous breath? —

King. — Lewis, determine what we shall do straight.³⁴

Lew. Women and fools, break off your conference. —

King John. this is the very sum of all:

England, and Ireland, Anjou,³⁵ Touraine, Maine,
In right of Arthur do I claim of thee.

Wilt thou resign them, and lay down thy arms?

K. John. My life as soon: I do defy thee, France. —

Arthur of Bretagne,³⁶ yield thee to my hand,

And, out of my dear love, I'll give thee more
Than e'er the coward hand of France can win.

Submit thee, boy.

Eli. Come to thy grandam, child.

Const. Do, child, go to it³⁷ grandam, child;

Give grandam kingdom, and it grandam will Give it a plum, a cherry, and a fig:

There's a good grandam.

Arth. Good my mother, peace!

I would that I were low laid in my grave:

I am not worth this coil that's made for me.

Eli. His mother shames him so, poor boy, he weeps.

Const. Now shame upon you, whe'r she does, or no!³⁸

His grandam's wrongs, and not his mother's shames,

Draw those heaven-moving pearls from his poor eyes,

Which heaven shall take in nature of a fee:

Ay, with these crystal beads heaven shall be brib'd

To do him justice, and revenge on you.

Auszug dem ganzen, grossen Buche. 25) this ist hinweisend auf den daneben stehenden Arthur. — Die Fol. verbindet in the name of God mit dem Vorhergehenden. 26) Von wem hast Du die Vollmacht, vermöge der von Dir articulirten Rechtsansprüche eine Antwort aus mir herauszubringen? — Hammer las to thy articles. 27) to look hängt von strong authority ab: die Brust Jemandes, der mächtig und befugt ist, die Verletzungen und Befleckungen des Rechts zu untersuchen. — breast in der vorigen Zeile verbessert die zweite Folioausg. das beast der ersten. 28) to chastise betont Sh. auf der ersten Sylbe. 29) Anspielung auf die Untreue, welche sich Eleonore gegen ihren ersten Gemahl, König Ludwig VII. von Frankreich, hatte zu Schulden kommen lassen. — In der vorhergehenden Rede der Eleonore will Staunton eine Anspielung auf das Schachspiel finden. 30) Als öffentlichen Ausrufer verhöhnt der Bastard den Herzog von Oesterreich, weil er wie ein solcher Peace! = Still! ruft. 31) your hide ist die Löwenhaut, die der Herzog als eine dem Richard Löwenherz abgenommene Beute trägt. Vgl. A. I, Sc. 1, Anm. 63. — Das Sprichwort, worauf die folgende Zeile zielt, lautet in der Sammlung des Erasmus, die Sh. kannte: Mortuo leoni et lepores insultant. — Sh. entlehnte die Worte beinahe genau aus Kyd's Spanish Tragedy: So hares may pull dead lions by the beard. 32) to smoke = ausräuchern, hier von einem Pelzrock zur Vertilgung der Motten. — So will der Bastard den Herzog selbst aus der Löwenhaut heraustreiben. 33) Die von König Richard getragene Löwenhaut nimmt sich auf dem Rücken des Herzogs so stattlich aus, wie die Löwenhaut des Hercules auf dem Rücken des Esels. — Alcides' shows verbesserte Theobald das Alcides shoes der Fol. Sh. dachte wohl dabei an die Fabel vom Esel in der Löwenhaut. 34) So die Fol., nur dass zwischen King und Lewis das Comma fehlt. — Der Herzog bricht das Gezänk mit dem Bastard ab, indem er den König von Frankreich und dessen Sohn zu rascher Entscheidung auffordert. — Malone fasste das King als Bezeichnung des Redenden und legte so den Vers Lewis, determine etc. dem König Philipp (K. Phil.) bei. Die Fol. bezeichnet den Letzteren jedoch fast überall mit Fra. oder Fran., d. h. France; nur in den drei ersten Reden dieser Scene vor Johann's Auftreten wird er als King bezeichnet; und Lewis wird an allen anderen Stellen nur einsylbig gebraucht. — Staunton liest mit Theobald den obigen Vers folgendermassen: King Philip, determine what we shall do straight und theilt die Antwort nicht dem Dauphin, sondern dessen Vater zu. 35) So verbessert Theobald das Angiers der Fol. 36) Britaine in der Fol., wie auch im alten K. John. 37) Constanze ahmt hier und im Folgenden ironisch die unvollkommene Sprache der Kinder nach. — Staunton hält dagegen it in dieser Rede, ohne solche Bezugnahme, für die ältere Form von its, die auch sonst bei Sh. vorkommt. 38) she scil. his

Eli. Thou monstrous slanderer of heaven and earth!

Const. Thou monstrous injurer of heaven and earth!
Call not me slanderer: thou, and thine, usurp
The dominations, royalties, and rights
Of this oppressed boy. This is thy eldest son's son,
Infortunate in nothing but in thee:
Thy sins are visited in this poor child;
The canon of the law is laid on him,³⁹
Being but the second generation
Removed from thy sin-conceiving womb.

K. John. Bedlam, have done.

Const. I have but this to say,⁴⁰ —
That he is not only plagued for her sin,
But God hath made her sin and her the plague
On this removed issue, plagu'd for her,
And with her plague, her sin; his injury
Her injury, the beadle to her sin,
All punish'd in the person of this child,
And all for her. A plague upon her!

Eli. Thou unadvised⁴¹ scold, I can produce
A will, that bars the title of thy son.

Const. Ay, who doubts that? a will!⁴² a wicked will;
A woman's will; a canker'd grandam's will!

K. Phi. Peace, lady! pause, or be more temperate.

It ill beseems this presence, to cry aim⁴³

To these ill-tuned repetitions. —

Some trumpet summon hither to the walls

These men of Angiers: let us hear them speak,

Whose title they admit, Arthur's or John's.

*Trumpets sound. Enter Citizens upon the walls.*⁴⁴

Cit. Who is it, that hath warn'd us to the walls?

K. Phi. 'T is France, for England.

K. John. England, for itself.

You men of Angiers, and my loving subjects, —

K. Phi. You loving men of Angiers, Arthur's subjects,
Our trumpet call'd you to this gentle parle, —

K. John. For our advantage,⁴⁵ therefore, hear us first. —

These flags of France, that are advanced here

Before the eye and prospect of your town,

Have hither march'd to your endamage:ment:

The cannons have their bowels full of wrath,

And ready mounted are they to spit forth

Their iron indignation 'gainst your walls:

All preparation for a bloody siege

And merciless proceeding by these French,

Confront⁴⁶ your city's eyes, your winking gates;

And, but for our approach, those sleeping stones,

That as a waist do girdle you about,

By the compulsion of their ordnance⁴⁷

By this time from their fixed beds of lime

Had been dishabited,⁴⁸ and wide havoc made

For bloody power to rush upon your peace.

But, on the sight of us, your lawful king,

Who painfully, with much expedient march,

Have brought a countercheck before your gates,

To save unscratch'd your city's threaten'd cheeks,

Behold, the French amaz'd vouchsafe a parle;

And now, instead of bullets wrapp'd in fire,

To make a shaking fever in your walls,

They shoot but calm words, folded up in smoke,

To make a faithless error in your ears:⁴⁹

Which trust accordingly,⁵⁰ kind citizens,

And let us in, your king, whose labour'd spirits,

Forwearied⁵¹ in this action of swift speed,

Crave harbourage within your city walls.

K. Phi. When I have said, make answer to us both.

Lo! in this right hand, whose protection

Is most divinely vow'd upon the right

Of him it holds, stands young Plantagenet,

Son to the elder brother of this man,

And king o'er him, and all that he enjoys.

For this down-trodden equity, we tread⁵²

In warlike march these greens before your town,

Being no further enemy to you,

Than the constraint of hospitable zeal,

In the relief of this oppressed child,

Religiously provokes. Be pleased then

To pay that duty which you truly owe,

To him that owes⁵³ it, namely, this young prince;

mother: Ich mag ihn beschämen oder nicht, die Scham oder Schmach deshalb komme über Euch! 39) Eine Anspielung auf die alttestamentliche Satzung, dass die Sünden der Eltern an den Kindern bis in's vierte Glied heimgesucht werden. 40) Constanze's folgende Worte knüpfen unmittelbar an sin-conceiving womb an, nur dass mit einem Sh.'schen kühnen Uebergang von der Eleonore nicht mehr in der zweiten Person, sondern in der dritten gesprochen wird: Arthur wird nicht bloss wegen der Sünde seiner Grossmutter gestraft, sondern diese Sünde und die Sünderin selbst sind die Geissel, das Strafwerkzeug an dem nicht unmittelbar von Eleonore abstammenden Arthur (on this removed issue), der an ihrer Statt und mit ihrer Geissel, nämlich ihrer Sünde, gestraft wird; so dass das ihm geschehende Unrecht (his injury) das Unrecht ist, welches von ihr, die gleichsam so zum Büttel ihrer eigenen Sünde wird, ausgeht. — the beadle muss sich auf das in her injury steckende she beziehen, worauf all punish'd Apposition zu injury und headle ist. — Staunton interpungirt und liest diese schwierige Stelle in den fünf letzten Versen so: On this removed issue; — plagued for her, || And with her plagued; her sin, his injury || Her injury the beadle to her sin; || All punish'd in the person of this child, || And all for her. A plague upon her! 41) unadvised ist nach dem Sh.'schen Gebrauche negativer Adjective = der sich nicht rathen, nicht mit sich sprechen lässt. 42) will = Testament, und = Gelüst, Trieb. 43) to cry aim, eigentlich = rufen: Ziele! schiess los! nach einem vom Schiessplatz entlehnten Bilde, ist dann allgemein = durch Zuruf ermuntern; beistimmen. 44) Die Fol. hat Enter a Citizen etc., weil nur ein Bürger das Wort führt. 45) Johann setzt, Philipp's Unterbrechung nicht beachtend, die oben begonnene Rede fort. 46) confront ist Rowe's Emendation für comfort in der Fol. Capell setzte dafür confronts. — Die sich schliessenden Thore erhalten, als Augen der Stadt gefasst, das Epitheton winking. 47) their ordnance = das Geschütz der Franzosen. ordnance ist dreisylbig, wie die Fol. denn auch ordinance liest. 48) to dishabit = aus der gewohnten Lage bringen, ein von Sh., wie es scheint, in diesem Sinne gebildetes Wort. Carew, ein Zeitgenosse, spricht in dem Survey of Cornwall von dishabited towns = entvölkerte Städte. 49) Die Worte der Franzosen sollen in Euren Ohren eine Verirrung zur Untreue anstiften, sie sollen, indem Ihr sie hört, Euch zum Abfall verleiten. 50) Traut ihnen demgemäss, d. h. misstraut ihnen. 51) forwearied = abgemattet, eine Verstärkung des einfachen wearied. 52) Wortspiel zwischen tread und down-trodden. 53) to owe = schulden, und = in Anspruch

And then our arms, like to a muzzled bear,
 Save in aspect,⁵⁴ have all offence seal'd up.
 Our cannons' malice vainly shall be spent
 Against the invulnerable clouds of heaven;
 And with a blessed and unvex'd retire,
 With unhack'd swords, and helmets all unbruis'd,
 We will bear home that lusty blood again,
 Which here we came to spout against your town,
 And leave your children, wives, and you, in peace.
 But if you fondly pass our proffer'd offer,
 'T is not the roundure⁵⁵ of your old-fac'd walls
 Can hide you from our messengers of war,
 Though all these English, and their discipline,
 Were harbour'd in their rude circumference.
 Then, tell us, shall your city call us lord,
 In that behalf which we have challeng'd it,⁵⁶
 Or shall we give the signal to our rage,
 And stalk in blood to our possession?

Cit. In brief, we are the king of England's subjects:
 For him, and in his right, we hold this town.

K. John. Acknowledge then the king, and let me in.

Cit. That can we not; but he that proves the king,⁵⁷
 To him will we prove loyal: till that time
 Have we ramm'd up our gates against the world.

K. John. Doth not the crown of England prove the king?

And if not that, I bring you witnesses,
 Twice fifteen thousand hearts of England's breed, —

Bast. Bastards, and else.

K. John. To verify our title with their lives.

K. Phi. As many, and as well-born bloods as those, —

Bast. Some bastards too.

K. Phi. Stand in his face to contradict his claim.

Cit. Till you compound whose right is worthiest,
 We for the worthiest hold the right from both.

K. John. Then God forgive the sin of all those souls,
 That to their everlasting residence,
 Before the dew of evening fall, shall fleet,
 In dreadful trial of our kingdom's king!

K. Phi. Amen, Amen. — Mount, chevaliers! to arms!

Bast. Saint George, that swing'd the dragon, and e'er since

Sits on his horseback at mine hostess' door,⁵⁸

Teach us some fence! — [To AUSTRIA.] Sirrah, were I at home,

At your den, sirrah, with your lioness,
 I would set an oxhead⁵⁹ to your lion's hide,
 And make a monster of you.

Aust. Peace! no more.

Bast. O! tremble, for you hear the lion roar.

K. John. Up higher to the plain; where we 'll set forth

In best appointment all our regiments.

Bast. Speed then, to take advantage of the field.

K. Phi. It shall be so; — [to LEWIS] and at the other hill

Command the rest to stand. — God, and our right!

[*Exeunt.*⁶⁰

SCENE II.

The Same.

Alarums and excursions; then a retreat. Enter a French Herald, with trumpets, to the gates.

F. Her. You men of Angiers, open wide your gates,
 And let young Arthur, duke of Bretagne, in,
 Who by the hand of France this day hath made
 Much work for tears in many an English mother,
 Whose sons lie scatter'd on the bleeding ground;
 Many a widow's husband grovelling lies,
 Coldly embracing the discolour'd earth;¹
 And victory, with little loss, doth play
 Upon the dancing banners of the French.
 Who are at hand, triumphantly display'd,
 To enter conquerors, and to proclaim
 Arthur of Bretagne England's king, and yours.

Enter an English Herald, with trumpets.

E. Her. Rejoice, you men of Angiers, ring your bells:
 King John, your king and England's, doth approach,
 Commander of this hot malicious day.²
 Their armours, that march'd hence so silver-bright,
 Hither return all gilt with Frenchmen's blood.³
 There stuck no plume in any English crest,
 That is removed by a staff of France;
 Our colours do return in those same hands,
 That did display them when we first march'd forth;
 And, like a jolly troop of huntsmen, come
 Our lusty English, all with purpled hands,
 Dy'd in the dying slaughter of their foes.⁴
 Open your gates, and give the victors way.

*Cit.*⁵ Heralds, from off our towers we might behold,
 From first to last, the onset and retire
 Of both your armies; whose equality
 By our best eyes cannot be censured:⁶
 Blood hath bought blood, and blows have answer'd blows;
 Strength match'd with strength, and power confronted power:

Both are alike; and both alike we like.⁷

nehmen als rechtmässigen Besitz. 54) aspect wird bei Sh. stets auf der zweiten Sylbe betont. 55) roundure = das Rund, der Kreis. In den Sonnets (21) hat Sh. das eben so seltene rondure in demselben Sinne. — Die Fol. liest rounder. 56) Vor which ist das nach einer Sh.'schen Lizenz ausgelassene in zu suppliren aus in that behalf. 57) Derjenige, der sich als den König erweist. 58) Anspielung auf die englischen Wirthshauschilder, die den St. Georg darstellen, wie er zu Pferde den Drachen bekämpft. 59) Er wollte ihm Hörner aufsetzen und ihn so zu einem Wunderthier machen. 60) In Uebereinstimmung mit der Fol. setzen einige neuere Hgg. im Folgenden diese erste Scene noch fort.

1) Die Erde ist entfärbt, missfarbig, von dem vergossenen Blute, wie sie selbst ebenvorher deshalb bleeding ground hiess. 2) Johann ist Sieger dieses heissen, bösen Schlachttages geblieben. 3) So in Macbeth (A. 2, Sc. 3) here lay Duncan, || His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood. 4) Wortspiel zwischen to dye = färben, und to die = sterben. 5) Die Fol. legt diese Rede und die folgenden des Bürgers von Angers dem Hubert in den Mund, wahrscheinlich weil auf dem Sh.'schen Theater derselbe Schauspieler beide Rollen übernahm. — Im alten K. John spricht der Citizen, dem die Worte offenbar auch zukommen. 6) Die gleiche Stellung oder Stärke beider Heere können auch die besten Augen nicht bekritteln. Den Bürgern von Angers scheint während des Kampfes, dem sie zusahen, Gewinn und Verlust auf beiden Seiten gleich vertheilt gewesen zu sein. 7) Wortspiel zwischen alike und

One must prove greatest: while they weigh so even,
We hold our town for neither, yet for both.

*Enter, at one side, King JOHN, with his power, ELINOR, BLANCH, and the Bastard; at the other, King PHILIP,
LEWIS, AUSTRIA, and forces.*⁸

K. John. France, hast thou yet more blood to cast away?

Say, shall the current of our right roam on?
Whose passage, vex'd with thy impediment,
Shall leave his native channel, and o'erswell
With course disturb'd even thy confining shores,
Unless thou let his silver water keep
A peaceful progress to the ocean.

K. Phi. England, thou hast not sav'd one drop of blood,

In this hot trial, more than we of France;
Rather, lost more: and by this hand I swear,
That sways the earth this climate overlooks,
Before we will lay down our just-borne arms,
We'll put thee down, 'gainst whom these arms we bear,
Or add a royal number to the dead,⁹
Gracing the scroll,¹⁰ that tells of this war's loss,
With slaughter coupled to the name of kings.

Bast. Ha! majesty, how high thy glory towers,
When the rich blood of kings is set on fire!
O! now doth death line his dead chaps with steel;
The swords of soldiers are his teeth, his fangs;
And now he feasts, mousing¹¹ the flesh of men,
In undetermin'd differences of kings. —

Why stand these royal fronts amazed thus?
Cry, havoc, kings! back to the stained field,
You equal-potents,¹² fiery-kindled spirits!

Then let confusion of one part confirm
The other's peace; till then, blows, blood, and death!

K. John. Whose party do the townsmen yet admit?

K. Phi. Speak, citizens, for England; who's your king?

Cit. The king of England, when we know the king.

K. Phi. Know him in us, that here hold up his right.

K. John. In us, that are our own great deputy,
And bear possession of our person here.
Lord of our presence,¹³ Angiers, and of you.

Cit. A greater power than we denies all this;
And, till it be undoubted, we do lock
Our former scruple in our strong-barr'd gates,
Kings, of our fear;¹⁴ until our fears, resolv'd,
Be by some certain king purg'd and depos'd.

Bast. By heaven, these scroyles¹⁵ of Angiers flout you, kings,

And stand securely on their battlements,
As in a theatre, whence they gape and point
At your industrious¹⁶ scenes and acts of death.
Your royal presences be rul'd by me:
Do like the mutines of Jerusalem,¹⁷
Be friends awhile, and both conjointly bend
Your sharpest deeds of malice on this town.
By east and west let France and England mount
Their battering cannon charged to the mouths,
Till their soul-fearing¹⁸ clamours have brawl'd down
The flinty ribs of this contemptuous city:
I'd play incessantly upon these jades,
Even till unfenced desolation
Leave them as naked as the vulgar air.

That done, dissever your united strengths,
And part your mingled colours once again;
Turn face to face, and bloody point to point;¹⁹
Then, in a moment, Fortune shall cull forth
Out of one side her happy minion,
To whom in favour she shall give the day,
And kiss him with a glorious victory.
How like you this wild counsel, mighty states?²⁰
Smacks it not something of the policy?

K. John. Now, by the sky that hangs above our heads,

I like it well. — France, shall we knit our powers,
And lay this Angiers even with the ground,
Then, after, fight who shall be king of it?

Bast. An if thou hast the mettle of a king,
Being wrong'd as we are by this peevish²¹ town,
Turn thou the mouth of thy artillery,
As we will ours, against these saucy walls;
And when that we have dash'd them to the ground,
Why, then defy each other, and, pell-mell,
Make work upon ourselves, for heaven, or hell.²²

like. 8) Die einfachere Bühnenweisung der Fol. lautet Enter the two Kings with their powers, at several doors. — In der zweiten Zeile lesen viele Hgg. mit der Folioausg. von 1632 run statt roam. 9) Zu den bereits Gefallenen soll noch eine Königsnummer kommen; die Todten sollen unter sich noch einen König zählen. 10) scroll ist das Verzeichniss der in der Schlacht Gebliebenen; so in K. Henry V. (A. 4, Sc. 8) Where is the number of our English dead? 11) to mouse = zerreißen, zerfetzen, von Raubvögeln gebraucht. 12) equal-potent = gleichmächtig, ist gewiss als Compositum zu fassen, obwohl die Hgg., der Fol. folgend, die Worte trennen. 13) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 30. — Die folgende Antwort des Bürgers ertheilt die Fol. irrtümlich dem König von Frankreich zu. 14) So die Fol., nur dass sie hinter gates ein Colon, hinter kings kein Comma setzt. kings ist Vocativ, die häufig wiederkehrende Anrede an beide Könige, welche eingeschoben ist in das zusammengehörige our strong-barr'd gates of our fear, d. h. our gates strong-barred of our fear = unsere von oder vermöge unserer Furcht stark verrammelten Thore. — Die meisten Hgg. lesen mit Tyrwhitt king'd of our fears. — Vielleicht ist auch in der Fol. fear aus Verwechslung mit dem gleich darauf folgenden fears an die Stelle eines andern Wortes getreten, und Sh. schrieb vielleicht kings of ourselves. — Wie im Text steht, liest auch Staunton, fasst aber kings als Apposition zu strong-barr'd gates. 15) scroyle, eigentlich Skrophel, wird hier als Schimpfwort auf Personen ebenso angewandt, wie bei Sh. anderswo scab = Lump. — scroyle, das bei Sh. sonst nicht vorkommt, hat Ben Jonson in seinem Every Man in his Humour in demselben Sinne. 16) industrious = mit Eifer betrieben, geflissentlich. 17) mutine = Meuterer, Aufrührer. — Sh. hat dasselbe seltene Substantiv in Hamlet (A. 5. Sc. 2). — Die Meuterer in dem von Titus belagerten Jerusalem vereinigten sich, obwohl in drei Parteien einander befehdend, doch zu einem gemeinschaftlichen Ausfalle gegen die römischen Belagerer. 18) soul-fearing = die Seele erschreckend, von to fear = in Furcht oder Schrecken versetzen. 19) point = Schwert- oder Lanzenspitze, wie in Macbeth (A. 1, Sc. 2) Point against point, rebellious arm 'gainst arm. 20) states = Regierende, Staatenlenker. 21) peevish = unlenksam, widerwillig, in Sh.'s Sprachgebrauch. 22) So dass wir fallen und so in den Himmel oder in die Hölle kommen. So in Macbeth (A. 2, Sc. 1) it is a knell, || That summons thee to heaven, or to hell.

K. Phi. Let it be so. — Say, where will you assault?

K. John. We from the west will send destruction
Into this city's bosom.

Aust. I from the north.

K. Phi. Our thunder from the south
Shall rain their drift of bullets on this town.

Bast. [Aside.] O prudent discipline! From north to south,

Austria and France shoot in each other's mouth.

I'll stir them to it. — Come, away, away!

Cit. Hear us, great kings: vouchsafe awhile to stay.

And I shall show you peace, and fair-fac'd league;

Win you this city without stroke, or wound;

Rescue those breathing lives to die in beds,

That here come sacrifices for the field.

Persever²³ not, but hear me, mighty kings.

K. John. Speak on, with favour: we are bent to hear.

Cit. That daughter there of Spain, the lady Blanch,

Is niece²⁴ to England. Look upon the years

Of Lewis the Dauphin, and that lovely maid.

If lusty love should go in quest of beauty,

Where should he find it fairer than in Blanch?

If zealous love²⁵ should go in search of virtue,

Where should he find it purer than in Blanch?

If love ambitious sought a match of birth,

Whose veins bound richer blood than Lady Blanch?

Such as she is, in beauty, virtue, birth,

Is the young Dauphin every way complete:

If not complete of,²⁶ say, he is not she;

And she again wants nothing, to name want,²⁷

If want it be not, that she is not he:

He is the half part of a blessed man,

Left to be finished by such as she;²⁸ —

And she a fair divided excellence,

Whose fulness of perfection lies in him.

O! two such silver currents, when they join,

Do glorify the banks that bound them in;

And two such shores to two such streams made one,

Two such controlling bounds shall you be, kings,

To these two princes, if you marry them.

This union shall do more than battery can

To our fast-closed gates; for, at this match,

With swifter spleen²⁹ than powder can enforce,

The mouth of passage shall we fling wide ope,
And give you entrance; but, without this match,

The sea enraged is not half so deaf,

Lions more confident, mountains and rocks

More free from motion: no, not death himself

In mortal fury half so peremptory,

As we to keep this city.

Bast.

Here's a stay,³⁰

That shakes the rotten carcase of old death

Out of his rags! Here's a large mouth, indeed,

That spits forth death, and mountains, rocks, and seas

Talks as familiarly of roaring lions,

As maids of thirteen do of puppy-dogs.

What cannoneer begot this lusty blood?

He speaks plain cannon, fire, and smoke, and bounce;

He gives the bastinado with his tongue;

Our ears are cudgell'd: not a word of his,

But buffets better than a fist of France.

'Zounds! I was never so bethump'd with words,

Since I first call'd my brother's father, dad.

Eli. Son, list to this conjunction, make this match.

Give with our niece a dowry large enough;

For by this knot thou shalt so surely tie

Thy now unsur'd assurance³¹ to the crown.

That yon green boy shall have no sun to ripe

The bloom that promiseth a mighty fruit.

I see a yielding in the looks of France:

Mark, how they whisper: urge them, while their soul

Are capable of this ambition,

Lest zeal, now melted, by the windy breath

Of soft petitions, pity, and remorse,³²

Cool and congeal again to what it was.

Cit. Why answer not the double majesties

This friendly treaty of our threaten'd town?

K. Phi. Speak England first, that hath been forward first

To speak unto this city: what say you?

K. John. If that the Dauphin there, thy princely son

Can in this book of beauty read, I love,

Her dowry shall weigh equal with a queen:

For Anjou,³³ and fair Touraine, Maine, Poitiers,

And all that we upon this side the sea

(Except this city now by us besieg'd)

23) to persevere, mit betonter zweiter Sylbe, ist das Sh.'sche Wort für das moderne to persevere. -- Zu der vorigen Rede des Bastards hat Capell das Aside hinzugefügt. 24) neere in der Fol., was leicht aus neece verdruckt werden konnte. -- Die meisten Hgg. lesen near; niece ist eine Emendation von Singer. -- Der alte K. John hat an der entsprechenden Stelle: let him take to wife || The beauteous daughter of the king of Spain, || Niece to King John, the lovely Lady Blanch. 25) Dem lusty love = sinnliche Liebe, wird zealous love = ernste, von frommem Eifer getragene Liebe, entgegengestellt. -- So kommt zealous contemplation in K. Richard III. (A. 3, Sc. 7) vor, und vielleicht ist zealous kiss in A. 2, Sc. 1 in demselben Sinne zu fassen. 26) of ist hier zur Ergänzung statt des vorhergehenden in hinzugefügt, da sich sowohl complete of wie complete in = vollkommen in oder an Etwas, sagen lässt. -- Die meisten Hgg. lesen mit Hamner If not complete, O say, etc. -- Der Sinn ist: Wenn der Dauphin nicht daran, d. h. an den genannten Eigenschaften, vollkommen ist, so nehmt an, dass er nicht sie ist, dass er also zu grösserer Vollkommenheit der Vereinigung mit der Lady Blanch bedarf. 27) Ihr fehlt nichts, was man als Mangel namhaft machen könnte, wenn es nicht ein Mangel ist, dass sie nicht er ist. 28) Durch eine Solche wie sie ist. -- Die meisten Hgg. lesen mit Thirlby such a she. 29) spleen = stürmischer Eifer, Befeuerung, hat Sh. in diesem Sinne auch sonst; z. B. in K. Richard III. (A. 5, Sc. 3) Inspire us with the spleen of fiery dragons. 30) stay, eigentlich = Hemmniss, Unterbrechung, wird hier = Unterbrecher, gebraucht, insofern der Bürger von Angers mit seinen Vorschlägen den eben gefassten Beschlüssen der Könige entgegentritt. -- Sieben Zeilen weiter hat die Fol. kein Comma zwischen cannon und fire. Manche Hgg. lesen daher cannon-fire als Compositum. 31) So wird sure und assurance verbunden in Macbeth (A. 4, Sc. 1) I'll make assurance double sure. 32) remorse = Erbarmen, Zartgefühl. -- Die Königin versteht darunter den Einfluss, den Constanzens und Arthur's Bitten zur Kräftigung des Eifers bei König Philipp wiedergewinnen möchten, nachdem dieser Eifer für den Augenblick geschwächt, zerschmolzen ist. -- by the windy breath ist nicht mit melted, sondern mit dem folgenden cool and congeal zu verbinden. 33) Auch hier hat die Fol. Angiers, wofür Theobald Anjou setzte. --

Find liable to our crown and dignity,
Shall gild her bridal bed, and make her rich
In titles, honours, and promotions,
As she in beauty, education, blood,
Holds hand with any princess of the world.

K. Phi. What say'st thou, boy? look in the lady's face.

Lew. I do, my lord; and in her eye I find
A wonder, or a wondrous miracle,
The shadow of myself form'd in her eye,
Which, being but the shadow of your son,
Becomes a sun,³⁴ and makes your son a shadow.
I do protest, I never lov'd myself,
Till now infixed I beheld myself,
Drawn in the flattering table³⁵ of her eye.

[Whispers with BLANCH.]

Bast. Drawn in the flattering table of her eye,
Hang'd in the frowning wrinkle of her brow,
And quarter'd in her heart, he doth espy
Himself love's traitor: this is pity now,
That hang'd, and drawn, and quarter'd, there should be,
In such a love, so vile a lout as he.

Blanch. My uncle's will in this respect is mine.
If he see aught in you, that makes him like,
That anything³⁶ he sees, which moves his liking,
I can with ease translate it to my will;
Or if you will, to speak more properly,
I will enforce it easily to my love.
Further I will not flatter you, my lord,
That all I see in you is worthy love,
Than this, — that nothing do I see in you,
Though churlish thoughts themselves should be your judge,

That I can find should merit any hate.

K. John. What say these young ones? What say you, my niece?

Blanch. That she is bound in honour still to do
What you in wisdom still vouchsafe to say.

K. John. Speak then, prince Dauphin: can you love this lady?

Lew. Nay, ask me if I can refrain from love;
For I do love her most unfeignedly.

K. John. Then do I give Volquessen,³⁷ Touraine, Maine,
Poitiers, and Anjou, these five provinces,

With her to thee; and this addition more,
Full thirty thousand marks of English coin. —
Philip of France, if thou be pleas'd withal,
Command thy son and daughter to join hands.

K. Phi. It likes us well. — Young princes, close your hands.

Aust. And your lips too; for I am well assur'd,
That I did so, when I was first assur'd.³⁸

K. Phi. Now, citizens of Angiers, ope your gates,
Let in that amity which you have made;
For at Saint Mary's chapel presently
The rites of marriage shall be solemniz'd. —
Is not the lady Constance in this troop?³⁹
I know, she is not; for this match, made up,
Her presence would have interrupted much.

Where is she and her son? tell me, who knows.

Lew. She is sad and passionate⁴⁰ at your highness' tent.

K. Phi. And, by my faith, this league, that we have made,

Will give her sadness very little cure. —
Brother of England, how may we content
This widow lady? In her right we came,
Which we, God knows, have turn'd another way,
To our own vantage.

K. John. We will heal up all;
For we'll create young Arthur duke of Bretagne,
And earl of Richmond, and this rich fair town
We make him lord of. — Call the lady Constance:
Some speedy messenger bid her repair
To our solemnity.⁴¹ — I trust, we shall,
If not fill up the measure of her will,
Yet in some measure satisfy her so,
That we shall stop her exclamation.
Go we, as well as haste will suffer us,
To this unlook'd-for unprepared pomp.

[Exeunt all but the Bastard. — The Citizens retire from the walls.]

Bast. Mad world! mad kings! mad composition!
John, to stop Arthur's title in the whole,
Hath willingly departed with a part;⁴²
And France, whose armour conscience buckled on,
Whom zeal⁴³ and charity brought to the field,
As God's own soldier, rounded⁴⁴ in the ear

Vgl. A. 2. Sc. 1, Anm. 35. 34) Vielleicht ist ein Wortspiel zwischen sun und son beabsichtigt, das auch sonst bei Sh. vorkommt. 35) table ist die Tafel, auf die ein Gemälde aufgetragen wird. — Der Dauphin findet sein Bild in dem Auge der Lady Blanch; der Bastard führt dann diesen Vergleich ironisch weiter aus, und fasst to draw = zeichnen, to hang = hängen, to quarter = einquartieren, zugleich doppelsinnig, indem er die Strafe des Hängens, zur Richtstätte Schleifens und Viertelens auf den Dauphin als Hochverräter (love's traitor) bezieht. — Im alten K. John spricht der Bastard seine Liebe zur Lady Blanch und seine Verachtung gegen den Dauphin noch deutlicher aus. — Die Bühnenweisung Whispers etc. ist aus der Fol. 36) Mit that anything = dieses Etwas, was es auch sein mag, beginnt der Nachsatz: I can translate that anything to my will. — Den Ausdruck translate steigert sie dann mit enforce. 37) Im alten K. John sagt der französische König Then I demand Volquessen, Touraine, Maine, || Poitiers and Anjou, these five provinces, und der englische König fügt, indem er dies bewilligt, noch unaufgefordert And thirty thousand marks of stipend coin hinzu. 38) assured, doppelsinnig = sicher, gewiss, und = verlobt. In letzterem, ungewöhnlicherem Sinne steht das Wort in Comedy of Errors (A. 3, Sc. 2) call'd me Dromio; swore, I was assured to her. 39) Im alten K. John ist Constanze mit ihrem Sohn bei dieser Scene zugegen. 40) passionate ist, wer seinem schmerzlichen Affecte (passion) sich hingiebt und demselben in Wort und Geberden Luft macht. So in Sh.'s True Tragedie of Richard Duke of Yorke, der ersten Bearbeitung des Third Part of K. Henry VI.: Tell me, good Madam, || Why is your grace so passionate of late? — In demselben Sinne ist auch der Titel der Sh.'schen Gedichtsammlung Passionate Pilgrim zu fassen. 41) solemnity ist die Hochzeitfeier des Dauphins und der Lady Blanch, die in Angers begangen werden soll. Dieselbe bezeichnet er nachher mit unprepared pomp. 42) Wortspiel zwischen part = Theil eines Ganzen, und to depart with = Etwas fahren lassen, sich von Etwas trennen. 43) zeal = religiöser Eifer, Frömmigkeit. — Vgl. Anm. 25 dieser Scene. 44) to round in the ear = Jemandem in's Ohr raunen, wird, wie to whisper, mit

With that same purpose-changer, that sly devil,
That broker that still breaks the pate of faith,⁴⁵
That daily break-vow, he that wins of all,
Of kings, of beggars, old men, young men, maids, —
Who⁴⁶ having no external thing to lose
But the word maid, cheats the poor maid of that; —
That smooth-fac'd gentleman, tickling commodity,⁴⁷
Commodity, the bias of the world;
The world, who of itself is peised well,
Made to run even, upon even ground,
Till this advantage, this vile-drawing bias,
This sway of motion, this commodity,
Makes it take head from all indifferency,⁴⁸
From all direction, purpose, course, intent:
And this same bias, this commodity,
This bawd, this broker,⁴⁹ this all-changing word,
Clapp'd on the outward eye of fickle France,
Hath drawn him from his own determin'd aid,⁵⁰
From a resolv'd and honourable war,
To a most base and vile-concluded peace. —
And why rail I on this commodity?
But for because⁵¹ he hath not woo'd me yet.
Not that I have the power to clutch my hand,
When his fair angels⁵² would salute my palm;
But for my hand, as unattempted yet,
Like a poor beggar, raileth on the rich.
Well, whiles I am a beggar, I will rail,
And say, there is no sin but to be rich;
And being rich, my virtue then shall be,
To say, there is no vice but beggary.
Since kings break faith upon commodity,
Gain, be my lord, for I will worship thee!⁵³ [Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.

The Same. The French King's Tent.

Enter CONSTANCE, ARTHUR, and SALISBURY.¹

Const. Gone to be married! gone to swear a peace!

False blood to false blood join'd! gone to be friends!
Shall Lewis have Blanch, and Blanch those provinces?
It is not so; thou hast misspoke, misheard;
Be well advis'd, tell o'er thy tale again:
It cannot be; thou dost but say, 't is so.
I trust, I may not trust² thee, for thy word
Is but the vain breath of a common man:
Believe me, I do not believe thee, man;
I have a king's oath to the contrary.
Thou shalt be punish'd for thus frightening me;
For I am sick, and capable of³ fears;
Oppress'd with wrongs, and therefore full of fears;
A widow, husbandless, subject to fears;
A woman, naturally born to fears;
And though thou now confess thou didst but jest,
With my vex'd spirits I cannot take a truce,⁴
But they will quake and tremble all this day.
What dost thou mean by shaking of thy head?
Why dost thou look so sadly on my son?
What means that hand upon that breast of thine?
Why holds thine eye that lamentable rheum,
Like a proud river peering o'er his bounds?
Be these sad signs⁵ confirmers of thy words?
Then speak again; not all thy former tale,
But this one word, whether thy tale be true.
Sal. As true as, I believe, you think them⁶ false,
That give you cause to prove my saying true.
Const. O! if thou teach me to believe this sorrow,
Teach thou this sorrow how to make me die;
And let belief and life encounter so,
As doth the fury of two desperate men,
Which in the very meeting fall, and die. —
Lewis marry Blanch! O boy! then where art thou?
France friend with England, what becomes of me?⁷
Fellow, be gone; i cannot brook thy sight:
This news hath made thee a most ugly man.
Sal. What other harm have I, good lady, done,
But spoke the harm that is by others done?
Const. Which harm within itself so heinous is,
As it makes harmful all that speak of it.
Arth. I do beseech you, Madam, be content.

dem Accusativ der Person construirt: jener selbige Vorsatzänderer, jener schlaue Teufel, der vom Bastard humoristisch personifizierte commodity = Eigennutz, hat den König von Frankreich heimlich beschwätzt. — rounded ist Particip und Apposition zu France. 45) Scherzhafte Erweiterung des einfachen break faith, gleichsam: der Treue den Schädel spalten. 46) Die Construction ist anakolutisch, da sich who zunächst auf maids bezieht, und dann mit einem bei Sh. nicht seltenen Wechsel zu cheats zu ergänzen ist, in Bezug auf that daily break-vow etc. 47) Der Vortheil oder Eigennutz weiss die Leute zu kitzeln, sie angenehm aufzuregen. — bias of the world heisst er, weil er der Welt eine verkehrte Richtung giebt, sie aus ihrem natürlichen Gleichgewichte bringt. — Im Folgenden wird die Welt mit einer rollenden Kugel verglichen. — to peise = im Gleichgewicht halten. 48) Dass die Welt abfällt von aller Unparteilichkeit, allem Gleichgewicht. 49) broker ist in Sh.'s Sprache dem bawd synonym, = Kuppler. — word = Losung, Parole. 50) Hat ihn der Unterstützung Arthur's, zu der er fest entschlossen war, abspenstig gemacht. — own = selbständig, ihm eigenthümlich. — Für aid schlug M. Mason aim vor. 51) Da for auch allein = because gebraucht wird, so steht eins von beiden hier überflüssig. — In der folgenden Zeile tritt that an die Stelle von because: Nicht weil ich stark genug bin, meine Hand fest zuzumachen, wenn u. s. w. — Endlich folgt for = weil, noch einmal allein: But for my hand etc. 52) angel = Engel, und = eine Goldmünze zum Werthe von zehn Schillingen, die genauer bezeichnet wird in Merchant of Venice (A. 2, Sc. 7) they have in England || A coin, that bears the figure of an angel || Stamped in gold. — Dasselbe Wortspiel kehrt in A. 3, Sc. 3 wieder. 53) Die Fol. schliesst hier den ersten Act. — Die neuere Eintheilung rührt von Theobald her.

1) Salisbury ist von König Johann an die Constanze mit der Nachricht von der Verlobung des Dauphins abgesandt und hat seinen Auftrag eben ausgerichtet. 2) to trust = gewiss sein, und = Jemandem trauen. — Ein ähnliches Wortspiel kehrt gleich nachher wieder: believe me, I do not believe thee. 3) capable of = empfänglich für Etwas. — Wie hier in vier auf einander folgenden Versen das Wort fears urgirt und deshalb am Schlusse jeder Zeile wiederholt wird, so das Wort ring in Merchant of Venice (A. 5, Sc. 1) If you did know to whom I gave the ring etc. 4) Nach Rowe's Interpunction, welche truce mit with my vex'd spirits verbindet, wie in Beaumont und Fletcher's The Coxcomb vorkommt: Take truce awhile with these immoderate mournings.

Const. If thou, that bidd'st me be content, wert grim,
Ugly, and slanderous to thy mother's womb,⁸
Full of unpleasing blots and sightless⁹ stains,
Lame, foolish, crooked, swart, prodigious,¹⁰
Patch'd with foul moles, and eye-offending marks,
I would not care, I then would be content;
For then I should not love thee; no, nor thou
Become thy great birth, nor deserve a crown.
But thou art fair; and at thy birth, dear boy,
Nature and Fortune join'd to make thee great:
Of Nature's gifts thou may'st with lilies boast,
And with the half-blown rose. But Fortune, O!
She is corrupted, chang'd, and won from thee:
She adulterates¹¹ hourly with thine uncle John;
And with her golden hand¹² hath pluck'd on France
To tread down fair respect of sovereignty,
And made his majesty the bawd to theirs.¹³
France is a bawd to Fortune, and king John;
That strumpet Fortune, that usurping John! —
Tell me, thou fellow, is not France forsworn?
Envenom him with words,¹⁴ or get thee gone,
And leave those woes alone, which I alone
Am bound to underbear.

Sal. Pardon me, Madam,
I may not go without you to the kings.

Const. Thou may'st, thou shalt: I will not go with thee.

I will instruct my sorrows to be proud,
For grief is proud, and makes his owner stoop.¹⁵
To me, and to the state of my great grief,
Let kings assemble; for my grief's so great,
That no supporter but the huge firm earth¹⁶

Can hold it up: here I and sorrows sit;
Here is my throne, bid kings come bow to it.
[Seats herself on the ground.]

Enter King JOHN, King PHILIP, LEWIS, BLANCH, ELINOR, Bastard, AUSTRIA, and Attendants.

K. Phi. 'Tis true, fair daughter;¹⁷ and this blessed day
Ever in France shall be kept festival:
To solemnize this day, the glorious sun
Stays in his course, and plays the alchymist,¹⁸
Turning, with splendour of his precious eye,
The meagre cloddy earth to glittering gold:
The yearly course, that brings this day about,
Shall never see it but a holiday.

Const. [Rising.] A wicked day, and not a holy day!¹⁹
What hath this day deserv'd? what hath it done,
That it in golden letters should be set,
Among the high tides,²⁰ in the calendar?
Nay, rather, turn this day out of the week;
This day of shame, oppression, perjury:
Or if it must stand still, let wives with child
Pray, that their burdens may not fall this day,
Lest that their hopes prodigiously²¹ be cross'd.
But on this day let seamen fear no wrack;²²
No bargains break, that are not this day made;
This day all things begun come to ill end;²³
Yea, faith itself to hollow falsehood change!

K. Phi. By heaven, lady, you shall have no cause
To curse the fair proceedings of this day.
Have I not pawn'd to you my majesty?

Const. You have beguil'd me with a counterfeit,²⁴
Resembling majesty, which, being touch'd and tried,

— Viele Hgg. verbinden, wie die Fol., jest with my vex'd spirits. 5) sad signs = Merkmale von Trauer, sind die vorher erwähnten, von shaking of thy head bis zu lamentable rheum = wehklagendes Nass, d. h. Thränen. 6) them geht auf die jetzt verbündeten Fürsten, welche Constance für falsch und treulos hält, und welche ihr Veranlassung geben, die Wahrheit des von Salisbury Berichteten zu prüfen, näher zu ergründen. 7) Wenn der König von Frankreich mit dem englischen König befreundet ist, was wird dann aus mir? — So interpungiren, in Uebereinstimmung mit der Fol., auch die Cambridge Edd. Die meisten Hgg. setzen France friend with England! what becomes of me? 8) So dass Arthur's Aeussere einen bösen Schein auf die Mutter, die ihn gebär, werfen müsste. 9) sightless = was sich nicht wohl anblicken lässt, was sich dem Anblick entzieht, hässlich. 10) swart = schwärzlich, geschwärzt, mit dem Nebenbegriffe des Widerlichen, Schmutzigen. — prodigious ist alles Abnorme, aus dem gewohnten Gleise Heraustretende und deshalb von übler Vorbedeutung, daher besonders = missgeboren. 11) Zu deutlicherer Bezeichnung des Verses schreibt die Fol. Sh' adulterates. 12) golden hand ist die mit Gold gefüllte Hand, womit sie den König von Frankreich hinreißt, so dass er die der angeborenen Herrscherwürde Arthur's geziemende Ehrfurcht oder Rücksicht (fair respect) mit Füßen tritt und seine eigne Majestät dazu hergiebt, der Majestät Johann's und der Majestät der Fortuna kupplerische Dienste zu leisten. 13) theirs scil. their majesties erhält seine nähere Erklärung in den beiden nächsten Zeilen. 14) Sprich mit giftigen Worten von dem König von Frankreich, mit Worten, die wie Gift auf ihn wirken. 15) Der personificirt gedachte Gram ist übermüthig und unterwirft sich Diejenigen, die ihn innehaben; er drückt sie in seinem Uebermuth zu Boden, so dass sie also keinem anderen Gebote als dem seinigen Folge leisten können. — Damit motivirt Constance ihre Weigerung, der Aufforderung der Könige zu gehorchen, die vielmehr zu ihr kommen sollen. — Viele Hgg. lesen mit Hammer stout für stoop. 16) Im Einklang mit dieser Stelle fügten die späteren Hgg. die Bühnenweisung hinzu: She throws herself on the ground; passender ist dafür von Theobald gesetzt Sits down on the floor. — Mit dieser Rede der Constance schliesst die Fol., offenbar verkehrt, den zweiten Act. Die richtigere Eintheilung rührt von Theobald her. Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 2, Anm. 53. 17) Philipp tritt auf im Gespräch mit Blanch. 18) Die Goldmacherkunst, an die Sh.'s Zeit allgemein glaubte, dient auch sonst zu Vergleichen für die vergoldende Wirkung der Sonnenstrahlen; z. B. in Sh.'s Sonnets (33) Full many a glorious morning — — Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchymy. 19) Das Wortspiel holiday = Festtag, und holy day = ein frommer, heiliger Tag, verwischen die meisten Hgg., indem sie zweimal holiday setzen. — Die Bühnenweisung Rising rührt von Theobald her. 20) high tides sind die hohen Kirchenfeste, die im Kalender mit goldenen Buchstaben verzeichnet stehen. 21) d. h. durch ein missgestaltetes, abnormes Kind, durch eine Missgeburt. — Vgl. Anm. 10 dieser Scene. 22) Ausser an diesem Tage, soll kein Schiffbruch gefürchtet werden, alle Schiffbrüche sollen auf diesen einen Tag fallen; ebenso alle Contractbrüche (no bargains break). 23) Die Construction ist: all things that are begun this day shall come to ill end. 24) counterfeit ist eine falsche Münze, die, obwohl das Bild der Majestät als Gepräge zeigend, sich doch bei der Prüfung (touch'd) und Untersuchung (and tried) als werthlos erweist.

Proves valueless. You are forsworn, forsworn;
 You came in arms to spill mine enemies' blood,
 But now in arms²⁵ you strengthen it with yours:
 The grappling vigour and rough frown of war
 Is cold in amity and painted peace,²⁶
 And our oppression hath made up this league. —
 Arm, arm, you heavens, against these perjur'd kings!
 A widow cries; be husband to me, heavens!
 Let not the hours of this ungodly day
 Wear out the day²⁷ in peace; but, ere sunset,
 Set armed discord 'twixt these perjur'd kings!
 Hear me, O, hear me!

Aust. Lady Constance, peace!

Const. War! war! no peace!²⁸ peace is to me a war.
 O Limoges! O Austria!²⁹ thou dost shame
 That bloody spoil: thou slave, thou wretch, thou coward;

Thou little-valiant,³⁰ great in villany!
 Thou ever strong upon the stronger side!
 Thou Fortune's champion, that dost never fight
 But when her humorous ladyship³¹ is by
 To teach thee safety! thou art perjur'd too,
 And sooth'st up³² greatness. What a fool art thou,
 A ramping fool, to brag, and stamp, and swear,
 Upon my party! Thou cold-blooded slave,
 Hast thou not spoke like thunder on my side?
 Been sworn my soldier? bidding me depend
 Upon thy stars, thy fortune, and thy strength?
 And dost thou now fall over to my foes?
 Thou wear a lion's hide! doff it for shame,
 And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.³³

Aust. O, that a man should speak those words to me!

Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

Aust. Thou dar'st not say so, villain, for thy life.

Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on those recreant limbs.

K. John. We like not this; thou dost forget thyself.

Enter PANDULPH.

K. Phi. Here comes the holy legate of the pope.

Pand. Hail, you anointed deputies of heaven! —
 To thee, king John, my holy errand is.
 I, Pandulph, of fair Milan cardinal,
 And from pope Innocent the legate here,
 Do in his name religiously demand,
 Why thou against the church, our holy mother,
 So wilfully dost spurn; and, force perforce,
 Keep Stephen Langton, chosen archbishop

Of Canterbury, from that holy see?
 This, in our foresaid holy father's name,
 Pope Innocent, I do demand of thee.

K. John. What earthly³⁴ name to interrogatories
 Can task the free breath of a sacred king?
 Thou canst not, cardinal, devise a name
 So slight, unworthy, and ridiculous,
 To charge me to an answer, as the pope.
 Tell him this tale; and from the mouth of England
 Add thus much more, — that no Italian priest
 Shall tithe or toll³⁵ in our dominions;
 But as we under heaven are supreme head,
 So, under him, that great supremacy,
 Where we do reign, we will alone uphold,
 Without the assistance of a mortal hand:
 So tell the pope; all reverence set apart
 To him, and his usurp'd authority.

K. Phi. Brother of England, you blaspheme in this.

K. John. Though you, and all the kings of Christendom,

Are led so grossly by this meddling priest,
 Dreading the curse that money may buy out,
 And, by the merit of vile gold, dross, dust,
 Purchase corrupted pardon of a man,
 Who, in that sale, sells pardon from himself;³⁶
 Though you, and all the rest, so grossly led,
 This juggling witchcraft³⁷ with revenue cherish:
 Yet I alone, alone³⁸ do me oppose
 Against the pope, and count his friends my foes.

Pand. Then, by the lawful power that I have,
 Thou shalt stand curs'd, and excommunicate:³⁹
 And blessed shall he be that doth revolt
 From his allegiance to an heretic;
 And meritorious shall that hand be call'd,
 Canonized,⁴⁰ and worshipp'd as a saint,
 That takes away by any secret course
 Thy hateful life.

Const. O! lawful let it be,
 That I have room with Rome⁴¹ to curse awhile.
 Good father cardinal, cry thou amen
 To my keen curses; for, without my wrong,
 There is no tongue hath power to curse him right.

Pand. There's law and warrant, lady, for my curse.

Const. And for mine too: when law can do no right,
 Let it be lawful that law bar no wrong.
 Law cannot give my child his kingdom here,
 For he that holds his kingdom holds the law:

25) Wortspiel zwischen arms = Waffen, und = Arme, Umarmung. 26) Der Friede ist ein falscher, nur äusserlich mit einer Schminke aufgetragener. — So wird hier der mit geschminkten Wangen gleissende Friede dem finstern Stirnrunzeln des Krieges entgegengestellt. 27) day emendirte Theobald das days der Fol. 28) peace als Interjection = still! als Substantiv = Friede. 29) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 1, Anm. 3. — In dem alten K. John heisst es: Limoges, the Austrich duke. — that bloody spoil ist hinweisend auf das Löwenfell, das er trägt und dem Könige Richard im blutigen Kampfe abgenommen hatte. — Zu dieser Trophäe will die erbärmliche Rolle, die er jetzt spielt, wenig passen. 30) little-valiant ist als Compositum zu fassen. 31) Die Glücksgöttin wird hier als eine launische, wetterwendische Dame gedacht. 32) to sooth up = durch Schmeicheleien in den genorigen Zustand bringen. 33) Das Kalbsfell, sonst eine gewöhnliche Tracht der Hausnarren zu Sh.'s Zeit, soll in diesem Falle den Herzog von Oesterreich zugleich dem Gespötte und der Verachtung preisgeben. — recreant limbs sind eigentlich limbs of a recreant = die Glieder eines abtrünnigen Feiglings. 34) earthly verbesserte Pope das earihly der Fol., und in der folgenden Zeile änderte Theobald das tast der Fol. in task um. 35) to tithe ist das Besondere, = den Zehnten erheben, to toll das Allgemeiner, = Abgaben oder Steuern jeder Art auflegen. 36) Der Papst, indem er einen durch Bestechung zu gewinnenden Ablass verkauft, bringt sich durch diesen Verkauf um die Sündenverzeihung, deren er für sich selber bedarf. 37) witchcraft ist hier das Papstthum selbst, eigentlich eine Hexenkunst, die auf Blendwerk beruht. 38) Das erste alone gehört zu I, das zweite zu me. 39) Für excommunicated. — Sh. bildet die Participia der Verba auf —ate häufig so. 40) to canonize betont Sh. bald auf der ersten, bald auf der zweiten Sylbe. 41) Das Wortspiel zwischen room und Rome hat Sh. auch sonst; so in Julius Caesar (A. 1, Sc. 2)

Therefore, since law itself is perfect wrong,
How can the law forbid my tongue to curse?

Pand. Philip of France, on peril of a curse,
Let go the hand of that arch-heretic,
And raise the power of France upon his head,
Unless he do submit himself to Rome.

Eli. Look'st thou pale, France? do not let go thy hand.

Const. Look to that, devil, lest that France repent,
And, by disjoining hands, hell lose a soul.⁴²

Aust. King Philip, listen to the cardinal.

Bast. And hang a calf's-skin on his recreant limbs.

Aust. Well, ruffian, I must pocket up these wrongs, —
Because —

Bast. Your breeches best may carry them.⁴³

K. John. Philip, what say'st thou to the cardinal?

Const. What should he say, but as the cardinal?

Lew. Bethink you, father; for the difference
Is, purchase of a heavy curse from Rome,
Or the light loss of England for a friend:
Forego the easier.⁴⁴

Blanch. That 's the curse of Rome.

Const. O Lewis, stand fast! the devil tempts thee here,
In likeness of a new-uptrimmed⁴⁵ bride.

Blanch. The lady Constance speaks not from her faith,
But from her need.

Const. O! if thou grant my need,
Which only lives but by the death of faith,⁴⁶
That need must needs⁴⁷ infer this principle,
That faith would live again by death of need;
O! then, tread down my need, and faith mounts up;
Keep my need up, and faith is trodden down.

K. John. The king is mov'd, and answers not to this.

Const. O! be remov'd⁴⁸ from him, and answer well.

Aust. Do so, king Philip: hang no more in doubt.

Bast. Hang nothing but a calf's-skin, most sweet lout.

K. Phi. I am perplex'd, and know not what to say.

Pand. What canst thou say, but will perplex thee more,
If thou stand excommunicate, and curs'd?

K. Phi. Good reverend father, make my person yours,
And tell me how you would bestow yourself.⁴⁹
This royal hand and mine are newly knit,
And the conjunction of our inward souls

Married in league, coupled and link'd together
With all religious strength of sacred vows;
The latest breath that gave the sound of words,
Was deep-sworn faith, peace, amity, true love,
Between our kingdoms, and our royal selves;
And even before this truce, but new before,⁵⁰
No longer than we well could wash our hands,
To clap this royal bargain up of peace,
Heaven knows, they were besmear'd and overstain'd
With slaughter's pencil; where revenge did paint
The fearful difference of incensed kings:
And shall these hands, so lately purg'd of blood,
So newly join'd in love, so strong in both,⁵¹
Unyoke this seizure, and this kind regret?⁵²
Play fast and loose⁵³ with faith? so jest with heaven,
Make such unconstant children of ourselves,
As now again to snatch our palm from palm,
Unswear faith sworn, and on the marriage-bed
Of smiling peace to march⁵⁴ a bloody host,
And make a riot on the gentle brow
Of true sincerity?⁵⁵ O! holy Sir,
My reverend father, let it not be so.

Out of your grace, devise, ordain, impose
Some gentle order, and then we shall be bless'd
To do your pleasure, and continue friends.

Pand. All form is formless, order orderless,
Save what is opposite to England's love.
Therefore, to arms! be champion of our church,
Or let the church, our mother, breathe her curse,
A mother's curse,⁵⁶ on her revolting son.

France, thou may'st hold a serpent by the tongue
A chafed lion⁵⁷ by the mortal paw,

A fasting tiger safer by the tooth,
Than keep in peace that hand which thou dost hold.

K. Phi. I may disjoin my hand, but not my faith.

Pand. So mak'st thou faith an enemy to faith;
And, like a civil war, sett'st oath to oath,
Thy tongue against thy tongue. O! let thy vow,
First made to heaven, first be to heaven perform'd;
That is, to be the champion of our church.

What since thou swor'st is sworn against thyself,
And may not be performed by thyself:

Now is it Rome indeed, and room enough. 42) Der Teufel muss es verhüten, dass der König von Frankreich seine Hand abziehe von dem englischen Bündnisse, weil damit der Hölle die Seele verloren ginge, welche ihr durch den päpstlichen Bannfluch verfallen muss. 43) Der Bastard fasst to pocket up = einstecken, wörtlich = in die Tasche stecken, und knüpft pocket an breeches an. So kommt in dem alten Schauspiel King Leir vor: Well, I have a pair of slops for the nonce || Will hold all your mocks. 44) Der Verlust von Englands Freundschaft ist leichter zu ertragen, als der Erwerb (purchase) eines römischen Bannfluchs. 45) new-uptrimmed = frisch angeputzt, eben erst mit dem bräutlichen Schmucke angethan. So steht to trim up in Romeo and Juliet (A. 4, Sc. 4) Go, waken Juliet; go, and trim her up. — Die Fol. hat new untrimmed, wofür manche Hgg. mit Theobald new and trimmed lesen. 46) Die Noth der Constanze rührt eben von der Wortbrüchigkeit und Treulosigkeit her, deren Opfer sie hat werden müssen. 47) Wortspiel zwischen need und needs. 48) Gegensatz zwischen moved und removed = abwärts bewegt, und = entfernt, abgebracht von Einem. 49) to bestow one's self = sich stellen, eine sichere, geschützte Stellung einnehmen. 50) but new before = nur eben vorher. — Der Satz bleibt, in Folge der eingeschobenen Zwischensätze, unvollendet, wie solche Anakoluthien bei Sh. häufig sind. 51) strong in both ist entweder Apposition zu love: Freundschaft, die in Beiden, Philipp und Johann, so stark ist; oder es bezieht sich strong auf hands, both auf blood und love. — Die letztere Deutung scheint die vorzüglichere zu sein. 52) regreet, eigentlich ein Gegengruss, ist dann = Austausch von Begrüßungen, oder auch einfach = Begrüßung. 53) to play fast and loose ist = ein Spiel treiben, das auf Sinnentäuschung beruht, indem der Getäuschte das, was er festzuhalten glaubt, in der That nicht festhält. — Eine Anspielung auf ein solches Spiel, das mit Bindfäden oder Bändern auf den Jahrmärkten gespielt wurde, kommt auch in Antony and Cleopatra (A. 4, Sc. 10) vor. 54) to march ist hier transitiv = marschiren lassen. 55) Das freundliche Aussehen ächter Herzlichkeit soll durch Hader und wilde Leidenschaft getrübt werden. 56) Der Fluch der Kirche erhält dadurch sein Gewicht, dass er der Fluch einer Mutter ist. 57) chafed lion ist eine Conjectur Theobald's, wie in K. Henry VIII. (A. 3, Sc. 2) so looks the chafed lion || Upon the daring huntsman that has gall'd him. — Andere versuchen

For that which thou hast sworn to do amiss,
Is not amiss when it is truly done:⁵⁸
And being not done, where doing tends to ill,
The truth is then most done not doing it.
The better act of purposes mistook
Is, to mistake again: though indirect,⁵⁹
Yet indirection thereby grows direct,
And falsehood falsehood cures; as fire cools fire.
Within the scorched veins of one new-burn'd.⁶⁰
It is religion that doth make vows kept;
But thou hast sworn against religion
By what thou swear'st, against the thing thou swear'st,⁶¹
And mak'st an oath the surety for thy truth
Against an oath: the truth, thou art unsure
To swear, swears only not to be forsworn;⁶²
Else, what a mockery should it be to swear!
But thou dost swear only to be forsworn;
And most forsworn, to keep what thou dost swear.
Therefore, thy later vows, against thy first,
Is⁶³ in thyself rebellion to thyself;
And better conquest never canst thou make,
Than arm thy constant and thy nobler parts
Against these giddy loose suggestions:⁶⁴
Upon which better part our prayers come in,
If thou vouchsafe them; but, if not, then know,
The peril of our curses light on thee
So heavy, as thou shalt not shake them off,
But in despair die under their black weight.
Aust. Rebellion, flat rebellion!
Bast. Will 't not be?⁶⁵
Will not a calf's-skin stop that mouth of thine?
Lew. Father, to arms!
Blanch. Upon thy wedding-day?
Against the blood that thou hast married?
What! shall our feast be kept with slaughter'd men?
Shall braying trumpets, and loud churlish drums,
Clamours of hell, be measures⁶⁶ to our pomp?
O husband, hear me! — ah, alack! how new

Is husband in my mouth! — even for that name,
Which till this time my tongue did ne'er pronounce,
Upon my knee I beg, go not to arms
Against mine uncle.

Const. O! upon my knee,
Made hard with kneeling, I do pray to thee,
Thou virtuous Dauphin, alter not the doom
Forethought by heaven!

Blanch. Now shall I see thy love. What motive may Be stronger with thee than the name of wife?

Const. That which upholdeth him that thee upholds,⁶⁷

His honour. O! thine honour, Lewis, thine honour.

Lew. I muse,⁶⁸ your majesty doth seem so cold,
When such profound respects do pull you on.

Pand. I will denounce a curse upon his head.

K. Phi. Thou shalt not need. — England, I'll fall from thee.

Const. O fair return of banish'd majesty!⁶⁹

Eli. O foul revolt of French inconstancy!⁷⁰

K. John. France, thou shalt rue this hour within this hour.

Bast. Old Time the clock-setter, that bald sexton
Time,⁷¹

Is it as he will? well then, France shall rue.

Blanch. The sun's o'ercast with blood: fair day, adieu!

Which is the side that I must go withal?

I am with both: each army hath a hand;

And in their rage, I having hold of both,

They whirl asunder, and dismember me.

Husband, I cannot pray that thou may'st win;

Uncle, I needs must pray that thou may'st lose;

Father, I may not wish the fortune thine;

Grandam, I will not wish thy wishes thrive:

Whoever wins, on that side shall I lose;

Assured loss, before the match be play'd.

Lew. Lady, with me, with me thy fortune lies.

die Lesart der Fol., cased lion, zu retten, indem sie cased = irritated by confinement erklären. 58) Das, was Du Unrechtes zu thun geschworen hast, ist kein Unrecht mehr, wenn Du es auf rechtliche Weise — nämlich in entgegengesetzter Art — ausführst. — Dass der Legat diesen versteckten Sinn mit seinen anscheinend widersprechenden Worten verbindet, geht aus den folgenden Zeilen hervor. 59) though indirect geht auf das to mistake again: obwohl es unrecht ist, fehlzugreifen, so wird doch die frühere Ungerechtigkeit durch ein solches abermaliges Fehlgreifen gerecht. 60) Anspielung auf die Heilung von Brandwunden durch ein wundärztliches Brennen. 61) Zu swear'st ist aus dem Vorigen ein by zu ergänzen, wie Sh. häufig eine Präposition, die am Schlusse des relativen Satzes noch folgen sollte, weglässt, als sei sie schon vorangegangen. — Unter against the thing by which thou swear'st ist eben religion zu verstehen. 62) to swear ist = schwören, beschwören, und = schwören lassen, eidlich verpflichten. Der Sinn der Stelle ist also: die Wahrheit, von der Du nicht gewiss bist, dass Du sie als solche beschwörst, verpflichtet Dich eidlich nur so weit und insofern, dass Du keinen Meineid thust. — Malone las swear only und construierte demnach: thou art unsure to swear the truth; swear (Imperativ) only not to be forsworn. Damit würde aber der in den folgenden Versen fortgeführte Gedankengang unterbrochen. — Staunton schlägt folgende Lesung der schwierigen Stelle vor: By that, thou swear'st against the thing thou swear'st, || And mak'st an oath, the surety for thy truth, || Against an oath, the proof thou art unsure. || Who swears swears only not to be forsworn, || Else what a mockery should it be to swear! 63) is bezieht sich nicht auf ein bestimmtes Wort, sondern auf das Ganze: thy later vows against thy first. Die späteren Gelübde (d. h. die dem König Johann geleisteten) gegen Deine früheren Gelübde (d. h. die der Kirche geleisteten) festzuhalten oder entgegenzustellen, das ist in Dir eine Empörung gegen Dich selbst. 64) suggestion = Einflüsterung, Versuchung. So gebraucht Sh. to suggest = to tempt. 65) Will 't not be? bezieht sich auf das Folgende, und ist ein Ausruf der Ungeduld. 66) measures to our pomp sind die feierlichen Töne und Melodien, nach denen der Hochzeitszug sich bewegt. — Im alten K. John steht Drums shall be music to this wedding-day. 67) Vielleicht wäre hier eine Bühnenweisung zu suppliren, nach welcher der Dauphin die knieende Lady Blanch vom Boden aufhebt. 68) to muse = Betrachtungen anstellen, sich wundern über Etwas. 69) Indem König Philipp das ihn beschimpfende englische Bündniss eingegangen war, hatte er gleichsam seine Herrscherwürde verbannt. 70) So sagt bei dem Abfall des Herzogs von Burgund die Pucelle in K. Henry VI. First Part (A. 3, Sc. 3) Done like a Frenchman, turn, and turn again! 71) Die Zeit wird hier humoristisch als ein alter Küster personificirt, der Blanch. There where my fortune lives, there my life dies.

K. John. Cousin, go draw our puissance together. —
[Exit Bastard.]

France, I am burn'd up with inflaming wrath;
A rage, whose heat hath this condition,
That nothing can allay, nothing but blood,
The blood² and dearest-valu'd blood, of France.

K. Phi. Thy rage shall burn thee up, and thou shalt turn.

To ashes, ere our blood shall quench that fire.

Look to thyself, thou art in jeopardy. —

K. John. No more than he that threatens. — To arms let's hie! [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The Same. Plains near Angiers.

*Alarums; excursions. Enter the Bastard, with AUSTRIA'S head.*¹

Bast. Now, by my life, this day grows wondrous hot;
Some airy devil² hovers in the sky,
And pours down mischief. Austria's head, lie there,
While Philip breathes.³

Enter King JOHN, ARTHUR, and HUBERT.

K. John. Hubert, keep this boy. — Philip, make up:
My mother is assailed in our tent,
And ta'en, I fear.

Bast. My lord, I rescu'd her;
Her highness is in safety, fear you not:
But on, my liege; for very little pains
Will bring this labour to an happy end. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The Same.

*Alarums; excursions; retreat. Enter King JOHN,
ELINOR, ARTHUR, the Bastard, HUBERT, and Lords.*

K. John. [To ELINOR.] So shall it be; your grace shall stay behind,

So strongly guarded.⁴ — [To ARTHUR.] Cousin, look not sad:

Thy grandam loves thee, and thy uncle will
As dear be to thee as thy father was.

Arth. O! this will make my mother die with grief.

K. John. [To the Bastard.] Cousin, away for England: haste before;

And, ere our coming, see thou shake the bags
Of hoarding abbots; imprisoned angels⁵

Set at liberty: the fat ribs of peace

Must by the hungry now⁶ be fed upon:

Use our commission in his utmost force.⁴

Bast. Bell, book, and candle,⁵ shall not drive me back,
When gold and silver beckons me to come on.

I leave your highness. — Grandam, I will pray
(If ever I remember to be holy)⁶

For your fair safety: so I kiss your hand.

Eli. Farewell,⁷ gentle cousin.

K. John. Coz, farewell. [Exit Bastard.]

Eli. Come hither, little kinsman; hark, a word.

[She takes ARTHUR aside.]

K. John. Come hither, Hubert. O my gentle Hubert,
We owe thee much: within this wall of flesh

There is a soul, counts thee her creditor,

And with advantage⁸ means to pay thy love:

And, my good friend, thy voluntary oath

Lives in this bosom, dearly cherished.

Give me thy hand. I had a thing to say, —

But I will fit it with some better tune.⁹

By heaven, Hubert, I am almost asham'd

To say what good respect I have of thee.

Hub. I am much bounden to your majesty.

K. John. Good friend, thou hast no cause to say so yet;

But thou shalt have: and creep time ne'er so slow,

Yet it shall come for me to do thee good.

I had a thing to say, — but let it go:

The sun is in the heaven, and the proud day.

Attended with the pleasures of the world,

Is all too wanton, and too full of gawds,¹⁰

To give me audience: — if the midnight bell

Did, with his iron tongue and brazen mouth, die Thurmuhre regulirt und die Glocke läutet. 72) Sidney Walker vermuthet sinnreich the best für the blood.

1) Im alten K. John fällt der Herzog von Oesterreich auf der Bühne: Excursions. The Bastard pursues Austria and kills him. 2) Die Teufel werden in den dämonologischen Schriften zu Sh.'s Zeit nach den Elementen unterschieden, in denen sie ihr Wesen treiben. So schüttet hier ein böser Luftgeist aus der Höhe das Unheil herab, das in der Schlacht vor sich geht. — Für airy wollte Theobald fiery lesen. 3) to breathe = Luft schöpfen, sich ausruhen von einer Anstrengung, hier von der Arbeit des Kampfes. — Mit Philip bezeichnet der Bastard sich selbst, wie ihn König Johann ebenfalls gleich nachher anredet, ohne zu beachten, dass der Bastard, seit er zum Ritter geschlagen war, Richard hiess. — Im alten K. John wird der Bastard durchgehends Philip genannt.

1) Die Königin soll mit starker Besatzung in Frankreich bleiben, während Johann nach England zurückkehren will. 2) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 2, Anm. 52. — Malone änderte, um den Vers regelmässiger zu bilden, als er überall bei Sh. erscheint: angels imprisoned || Set thou at liberty. — Plausibler ist Sidney Walker's Umstellung: Of hoarding abbots; set at liberty || Imprison'd angels: the fat ribs of peace etc. 3) Für now wollte Warburton war, Hammer maw lesen. Indess steht das Wort nicht so müssig, wie die Emendatoren meinen: die im Frieden fett gewordenen Rippen (d. h. die Güter der Geistlichen), die man bisher verschonte, müssen jetzt zur Nahrung dienen, da die Männer des Krieges hungrig sind. 4) Gebräuche die von uns ertheilte Vollmacht in ihrer ganzen Wirksamkeit, so weit sie reicht. 5) Anspielung auf die Excommunication der katholischen Kirche, wo bei der Verkündigung des Bannes die Glocke geläutet, eine Bibel emporgehalten und drei brennende Kerzen ausgelöscht wurden. 6) Wenn es mir jemals in den Sinn kommt, fromm zu sein. 7) Die meisten Hgg. setzen zur Vervollständigung des Verses my gentle cousin. 8) advantage = Ueberschuss. 9) tune liest die Fol. mit verständlichem Sinne. Was der König zu sagen hat, will er, ehe er es sagt, mit einer besseren Melodie ausstatten: er will erst eine bessere Tonweise dafür erfinden, um es dem Hubert besser beizubringen. — Die meisten Hgg. lesen mit Pope time für tune. 10) Der Tag ist zu vergnügungslustig und zu sehr mit buntem Tand (gawds) beschäftigt,

Sound on ¹¹ into the drowsy race of night;
 If this same were a churchyard where we stand,
 And thou possessed with a thousand wrongs;
 Or if that surly spirit, melancholy,
 Had bak'd thy blood, and made it heavy-thick,
 (Which, else, runs tickling up and down the veins,
 Making that idiot, laughter, keep men's eyes, ¹²
 And strain their cheeks to idle merriment,
 A passion hateful to my purposes;) Or if that thou couldst see me without eyes,
 Hear me without thine ears, and make reply
 Without a tongue, using conceit alone, ¹³
 Without eyes, ears, and harmful sound of words:
 Then, in despite of brooded-watchful day, ¹⁴ —
 I would into thy bosom pour my thoughts.
 But, ah! I will not: — yet I love thee well;
 And, by my troth, I think, thou lov'st me well.

Hub. So well, that what you bid me undertake,
 Though that my death were adjunct to my act,
 By heaven, I would do it.

K. John. Do not I know, thou wouldst?
 Good Hubert! Hubert, — Hubert, throw thine eye
 On yon young boy. I'll tell thee what, my friend,
 He is a very serpent in my way;
 And wheresoe'er this foot of mine doth tread,
 He lies before me. Dost thou understand me?
 Thou art his keeper.

Hub. And I'll keep him so,
 That he shall not offend your majesty.

K. John. Death.

Hub. My lord. ¹⁵

K. John. A grave.

Hub. He shall not live.

K. John.

Enough.

I could be merry now. Hubert, I love thee;
 Well, I'll not say what I intend for thee:
 Remember ¹⁶ — Madam, fare you well:
 I'll send those powers o'er to your majesty. ¹⁷
 Eli. My blessing go with thee!

K. John. For England, cousin: go.
 Hubert shall be your man, attend on you
 With all true duty. — On toward Calais, ho! [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

The Same. The French King's Tent.

Enter King PHILIP, LEWIS, PANDULPH, and Attendants.

K. Phi. So, by a roaring tempest on the flood,
 A whole armado ¹ of connected ² sail
 Is scatter'd, and disjoin'd from fellowship.

Pand. Courage and comfort! all shall yet go well.

K. Phi. What can go well, when we have run so ill? ³
 Are we not beaten? Is not Angiers lost?
 Arthur ta'en prisoner? divers dear friends slain?
 And bloody England into England ⁴ gone,
 O'erbearing interruption, spite of France?

Lew. What he hath won, that hath he fortified:
 So hot a speed with such advice dispos'd,
 Such temperate order in so fierce a cause, ⁵
 Doth want example. Who hath read, or heard,
 Of any kindred action ⁶ like to this?

K. Phi. Well could I bear that England had this praise,
 So we could find some pattern of our shame.

Enter CONSTANCE.

Look, who comes here? a grave unto a soul;
 Holding the eternal spirit, against her will,
 In the vile prison of afflicted breath. ⁷ —
 I prythee, lady, go away with me.

Const. Lo now, now see the issue of your peace!

K. Phi. Patience, good lady: comfort, gentle Constance!

Const. No, I defy ⁸ all counsel, all redress,
 But that which ends all counsel, true redress,
 Death, death. — O amiable lovely death!
 Thou odoriferous stench! sound rottenness!

als dass er den Reden Johann's Gehör leihen könnte. 11) to sound on bezeichnet das fortgesetzte Tönen der Mitternachtglocke bis zu zwölf Schlägen. So tönt die Glocke, gleichsam zur Beschleunigung, in den trägen, langsamen Verlauf (drowsy race) der Nacht hinein. Vielleicht wäre auch zu lesen sound: On! — Die meisten Hgg. setzen mit Theobald one für on, andere sogar ear für race. 12) Das Lachen ist hier personificirt als ein Einfaltspinsel gedacht, der in den Augen der Menschen sitzt und ihre Wangen zu albernem Spass verzerrt. — eine Aeusserung des Affects (passion), die sich mit Johann's finstern Plänen nicht verträgt. 13) conceit ist eine Auffassung, die nicht durch die Sinnesorgane vermittelt zu werden braucht. 14) Der Tag liegt über ihnen so wachsam, wie ein Vogel über seiner Brut im Neste. Für brooded-watchful, das M. Mason mit Recht als Compositum auffasste, wollte Pope broad-ey'd, watchful lesen. Sollte überflüssiger Weise geändert werden, so läge Mitford's Conjectur broad and watchful jedenfalls näher, in dem Sinne, wie Sh. die Copula and häufig anwendet = broadly watchful. 15) Die Hgg. setzen hier ein Fragezeichen, die Fol. richtiger einen Punkt. 16) Johann unterdrückt, was er weiter sagen will: denke, was ich Dir auftrag. 17) Vgl. Anm. 1 dieser Scene.

1) armado ist eine Anspielung auf die Armada, die spanische Flotte, welche, gegen England ausgesandt, im Jahre 1588 zu Grunde ging. — In dem Pseudo-Sh.'schen Drama Edward III. kommt ebenso vor: The proud armado of king Edward's ships. 2) Die Fol. hat convicted, was die Hgg. = besiegt, erklären, eine Bedeutung, die kaum nachweislich ist, und, wenn auch, in den Zusammenhang hier wenig passen würde, da nicht von besieigten, sondern von durch Sturm zerstreuten Schiffen die Rede sein kann. Pope schlug collected vor; näher der ältern Lesart kommt jedoch connected sail: die zu einer Kriegsflotte verbundenen Schiffe, welche der Sturm aus dieser Bundesgenossenschaft zerstreut hat. — Damit vergleicht König Philipp seine jetzige Lage. — connected ist, wie die Cambridge Edd. angeben, auch eine Conjectur Malone's. 3) Wie ill dem well, ist run dem go gegenübergestellt. 4) England ist zuerst der König, dann das Land. — Johann ist nach England zurückgekehrt, allen vom König Philipp ihm entgegengesetzten Hindernissen zum Trotz. 5) Diese besonnene Ordnung ist um so auffallender, je mehr die Sache selbst, um die es sich handelte, zu wilder Hast fortriss. — So erklärt, bedarf cause nicht der Emendation course, welche Warburton vorschlug. 6) kindred action ist eine Schlacht oder Kriegsexpedition, die in ihrem Charakter der besprochenen verwandt, ähnlich ist. 7) Der Leib selbst wird hier als das Gefängniss aufgefasst, das den verkümmerten Lebenshauch, also das Leben, in sich festhält. 8) to defy = trotzen,

Arise forth from the couch of lasting night,
Thou hate and terror to prosperity,
And I will kiss thy detestable⁹ bones,
And put my eyeballs in thy vaulty brows,¹⁰
And ring these fingers with thy household worms,
And stop this gap of breath¹¹ with fulsome dust,
And be a carrion monster like thyself:
Come, grin on me; and I will think thou smil'st,
And buss thee as thy wife! Misery's love,¹²
O, come to me!

K. Phi. O fair affliction,¹³ peace!

Const. No, no, I will not, having breath to cry. —
O! that my tongue were in the thunder's mouth;
Then with a passion¹⁴ would I shake the world,
And rouse from sleep that fell anatomy,
Which cannot hear a lady's feeble voice,
Which scorns a modern invocation.

Pand. Lady, you utter madness, and not sorrow.

Const. Thou art unholy¹⁵ to belie me so.

I am not mad: this hair I tear, is mine;
My name is Constance; I was Geoffrey's wife;
Young Arthur is my son, and he is lost!

I am not mad: — I would to heaven, I were,
For then, 't is like I should forget myself:

O, if I could, what grief should I forget! —

Preach some philosophy¹⁶ to make me mad,

And thou shalt be canoniz'd,¹⁷ cardinal;

For, being not mad, but sensible¹⁸ of grief,

My reasonable part produces reason

How I may be deliver'd of these woes,

And teaches me to kill or hang myself:

If I were mad, I should forget my son,

Or madly think, a babe of clouts were he.

I am not mad: too well, too well I feel

The different plague of each calamity.

K. Phi. Bind up those tresses. O! what love¹⁹ I note
In the fair multitude of those her hairs!

Where but by chance a silver drop hath fallen,

Even to that drop ten thousand wiry friends²⁰

Do glue themselves in sociable grief;
Like true, inseparable, faithful loves,
Sticking together in calamity.

Const. To England, if you will.²¹

K. Phi. Bind up your hairs.

Const. Yes, that I will; and wherefore will I do it?

I tore them from their bonds, and cried aloud,

»O, that these hands could so redeem my son,

As they have given these hairs their liberty!«

But now I envy at their liberty,

And will again commit them to their bonds,

Because my poor child is a prisoner. —

And, father cardinal, I have heard you say,

That we shall see and know our friends in heaven.

If that be true, I shall see my boy again;

For, since the birth of Cain, the first male child,

To him that did but yesterday suspire,²²

There was not such a gracious²³ creature born.

But now will canker sorrow eat my bud,

And chase the native beauty from his cheek,

And he will look as hollow as a ghost,

As dim and meagre as an ague's fit,

And so he'll die; and, rising so again,

When I shall meet him in the court of heaven,

I shall not know him: therefore, never, never

Must I behold my pretty Arthur more.

Pand. You hold too heinous a respect of grief.²⁴

Const. He talks to me, that never had a son.

K. Phi. You are as fond of grief as of your child.

Const. Grief fills the room up of my absent child,

Lies in his bed, walks up and down with me,

Puts on his pretty looks, repeats his words,

Remembers me of all his gracious parts,

Stuffs out his vacant garments with his form:

Then, have I reason to be fond of grief.

Fare you well: had you such a loss as I,

I could give better comfort than you do. —

I will not keep this form upon my head,²⁵

When there is such disorder in my wit.

nichts mit einer Sache zu thun haben wollen. 9) detestable betont Sh. auf der ersten Sylbe. 10) In die leeren Augenhöhlen des Todes will Constanze ihre eigenen Augäpfel drücken, so zärtlich will sie ihn umschliessen. 11) gap of breath ist der Mund, die Oeffnung, aus der der Athem hervordringt. 12) Der Tod wird hier personifizirt als der Buhle der weiblich personificirten misery. — to buss hatte zu Sh.'s Zeit einen edleren Sinn als jetzt, und war völlig synonym mit to kiss. 13) Constanze wird angeredet als die verkörperte affliction. 14) passion ist jede äusserliche Darlegung eines leidenschaftlichen Affectes; damit wollte Constanze die Welt erschüttern, und den Tod, das grässliche Gerippe (anatomy), vom Schläfe aufrütteln, weil er auf eine so gewöhnliche, alltägliche Beschwörung (modern invocation), wie sie eine solche mit weiblich schwacher Stimme versucht hat, nicht achtet. — modern = herkömmlich, gewöhnlich, kommt oft bei Sh. vor. — Die Cambridge Edd. citiren die Vermuthung, dass in dieser Rede der Constanze der letzte Vers an Stelle des vorletzten habe treten sollen und nur aus Versehen beide in der Handschrift neben einander stehen geblieben seien. 15) unholy ist Steevens' Vermuthung; die meisten Hgg. lesen mit der Folioausg. von 1685 not holy, wofür die früheren Folioausgg. sinnlos holy hatten. 16) philosophy als vergebliche Trösterin im Leide kommt auch in Romeo and Juliet (A. 3, Sc. 3) vor: hang up philosophy. 17) Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 1, Anm. 40. 18) sensible = sinnbegabt, daher sowohl = vernünftig, im Gegensatz zu mad, als auch = empfänglich für Schmerz, in Verbindung mit of grief. 19) Die Liebe zeigt sich in dem treuen Zusammenhalten der einzelnen Haare, obgleich sie aufgelöst sind. 20) friends ist Rowe's Emen-dation für fiends der Fol. — Die Haare sind die gleichsam aus feinem Draht bestehenden Genossen, die, von einer darauf gefallenen Thräne, zusammenkleben in verbündetem Leidtragen, als Theilnehmer eines Schmerzes. 21) d. h. bringt mich nach England, wenn Ihr wollt. — Ihre Gedanken richten sich dahin, wo ihr Sohn gefangen ist, und in der Aufforderung, ihr Haar in Ordnung zu bringen, erkennt sie eine Aufforderung, sich zu einer Reise fertig zu halten. 22) to suspire = aufathmen, hier von dem ersten Athemzug eines neugeborenen Kindes. 23) gracious ist mehr als = graceful, wie Steevens erklärt. Es bezeichnet die Ausstattung mit allen geistigen und leiblichen Vorzügen, die als Geschenk des Himmels (grace) verliehen werden können. 24) Ihr nehmt Euch des Schmerzes in einer zu gehässigen, ruchlosen Weise an. — Der Cardinal spricht als Geistlicher, und als solchem antwortet ihm Constanze. 25) Constanze will ihre Haare nicht in dieser hergebrachten Ordnung halten, da ihr Geist in solcher Verwirrung ist. Sie bezieht sich damit auf die Art, wie sie vorhin schon ihr Haar auseinander

O Lord! my boy, my Arthur, my fair son!
My life, my joy, my food, my all the world!
My widow-comfort, and my sorrow's cure! [Exit.]

K. Phi. I fear some outrage,²⁶ and I'll follow her. [Exit.]

Lew. There's nothing in this world can make me joy:
Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale,
Vexing the dull ear of a drowsy man;
And bitter shame hath spoil'd the sweet world's²⁷ taste,
That it yields nought but shame and bitterness.

Pand. Before the curing of a strong disease,
Even in the instant of repair and health,
The fit is strongest: evils that take leave,
On their departure most of all show evil.

What have you lost by losing of this day?²⁸

Lew. All days of glory, joy, and happiness.

Pand. If you had won it, certainly, you had.

No, no: when Fortune means to men most good,
She looks upon them with a threatening eye.

'T is strange, to think how much king John hath lost
In this which he accounts so clearly won.

Are not you griev'd, that Arthur is his prisoner?

Lew. As heartily, as he is glad he hath him.

Pand. Your mind is all as youthful as your blood.

Now hear me speak with a prophetic spirit;
For even the breath of what I mean to speak
Shall blow each dust, each straw, each little rub,
Out of the path which shall directly lead
Thy foot to England's throne; and therefore mark.
John hath seiz'd Arthur; and it cannot be,
That whiles warm life plays in that infant's veins,
The misplac'd²⁹ John should entertain an hour,
One minute, nay, one quiet breath of rest.

A sceptre, snatch'd with an unruly hand,³⁰

Must be as boisterously maintain'd as gain'd;

And he that stands upon a slippery place,

Makes nice of no vile hold to stay him up:³¹

That John may stand, then Arthur needs must fall;

So be it, for it cannot be but so.

Lew. But what shall I gain by young Arthur's fall?

Pand. You, in the right of Lady Blanch your wife,
May then make all the claim that Arthur did.

Lew. And lose it, life and all, as Arthur did.

Pand. How green you are, and fresh in this old world!
John lays you plots;³² the times conspire with you;
For he that steeps his safety in true blood,

Shall find but bloody safety, and untrue.

This act, so evilly borne,³³ shall cool the hearts

Of all his people, and freeze up their zeal,

That none so small advantage shall step forth

To check his reign, but they will cherish it:³⁴

No natural exhalation in the sky,

No scope of nature,³⁵ no distemper'd day,

No common wind, no custom'd event,

But they will pluck away his natural cause,

And call them meteors, prodigies, and signs,

Abortives, presages, and tongues of heaven,

Plainly denouncing vengeance upon John.

Lew. May be, he will not touch young Arthur's life,

But hold himself safe in his prisonment.³⁶

Pand. O! Sir, when he shall hear of your approach,

If that young Arthur be not gone³⁷ already,

Even at that news he dies; and then the hearts

Of all his people shall revolt from him,

And kiss the lips of unacquainted change,³⁸

And pick strong matter of revolt, and wrath,

Out of the bloody fingers' ends of John.

Methinks, I see this hurly all on foot:

And, O! what better matter breeds for you,

Than I have nam'd! — The bastard Faulconbridge

Is now in England ransacking the church,

Offending charity: if but a dozen French

Were there in arms, they would be as a call³⁹

To train ten thousand English to their side;

Or as a little snow, tumbled about,

Anon becomes a mountain. O noble Dauphin,

Go with me to the king. 'T is wonderful,

What may be wrought out of their discontent,

Now that their souls are topful of offence.

For England, go; I will whet on the king.

Lew. Strong reasons make strong actions.⁴⁰ Let us go:

If you say, ay, the king will not say, no. [Exeunt.]

zerzte. Die Hgg. verstehen die Stelle und namentlich das Wort this form zu wörtlich, wenn sie die Bühnenweisung hinzufügen: Tearing off her head-dress. 26) d. h. eine Gewaltthat, die sie gegen sich selbst begehen könnte. 27) So emendirte Pope das words der Fol., und seine Conjectur wird sehr wahrscheinlich durch die vorhergehende erste Zeile in der Rede des Dauphins, sowie durch den Nachsatz: That it yields nought etc. — word's, wenn die alte Lesart beibehalten werden soll, muss sich auf life beziehen; indess würde Sh. sich schwerlich so seltsam ausgedrückt haben, oder er hätte doch mit deutlicherer Hinweisung that sweet word's gesagt. 28) day = Schlachttag, dann die Schlacht selbst; der Dauphin in seiner Antwort fasst day im gewöhnlichen Sinne. 29) misplac'd = der seinen Platz verkehrt, mit Unrecht, einnimmt. 30) unruly steht hier in ungewöhnlichem Sinne = nicht zur Herrschaft (rule) geeignet oder berechnet. — Diese Zeile erinnert an eine Stelle in Macbeth (A. 3, Sc. 1) put a barren sceptre in my gripe, || Thence to be wrench'd with an unlineal hand. 31) Der thut nicht spröde gegen irgend eine noch so schlechte Stütze, die ihm einen Halt gewährt. 32) Der Nachdruck liegt auf you: Johann intriguiert für Euch, seine Anschläge fallen zu Eurem Vortheil aus. 33) Da der Druck der Fol. zwischen born und borne nicht genau unterscheidet, so kann es zweifelhaft sein, ob Sh. hier von einer schlimm geborenen, oder einer schlecht durchgeführten That sprechen will. Die meisten Hgg. entscheiden sich für erstere Annahme, indem sie born setzen; indess scheint die letztere doch die vorzüglichere. — borne lesen auch Dyce und Staunton. 34) Die missvergnügten Unterthanen Johann's werden jede noch so geringfügige Gelegenheit (advantage) willkommen heissen, die sich zur Beeinträchtigung seiner Herrschaft darbieten mag. 35) scope of nature = ein freies Schalten und Walten der Natur, wie es sich in Wind und Wetter ausspricht; also das ganz Gewöhnliche und Natürliche, dem nur das aufgeregte Volk ungewöhnliche Deutungen zum Nachtheile Johann's unterlegt. — Die meisten Hgg. lesen mit Pope scape of nature = Fehltritt der Natur, was zu dem Folgenden wenig passt. 36) his prisonment ist Arthur's Gefangenhaltung. 37) gone euphemistisch für: weggeräumt, aus dem Wege geschafft. 38) Die Erscheinung des Dauphins in England ist ein Wechsel, den sie, ohne ihn zu kennen, doch mit vollen Herzen begrüßen werden. 39) call ist der Ruf des Lockvogels, der, obwohl von Einem ausgehend, doch eine Menge Vögel herbeilockt. 40) strong actions verbessert die Folioausg. von 1632 das strange actions der Fol.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.

Northampton.¹ A Room in the Castle.

Enter HUBERT and Two Attendants.

Hub. Heat me these irons hot; and look thou stand
Within the arras:² when I strike my foot
Upon the bosom of the ground,³ rush forth,
And bind the boy, which you shall find with me,
Fast to the chair: be heedful. Hence, and watch.

1. Atten. I hope, your warrant will bear out the deed.⁴

Hub. Uncleanly scruples! fear not you: look to 't. —
[Exeunt Attendants.]
Young lad, come forth; I have to say⁵ with you.

Enter ARTHUR.

Arth. Good morrow, Hubert.

Hub. Good morrow, little prince.

Arth. As little prince⁶ (having so great a title
To be more prince) as may be. — You are sad.

Hub. Indeed, I have been merrier.

Arth. Mercy on me!

Methinks, nobody should be sad but I:

Yet, I remember, when I was in France,
Young gentlemen would be as sad as night,
Only for wantonness.⁷ By my christendom,⁸

So I were out of prison, and kept sheep,
I should be as merry as the day is long;
And so I would be here, but that I doubt

My uncle practises more harm to me:

He is afraid of me, and I of him.

Is it my fault that I was Geoffrey's son?

No, indeed, is 't not; and I would to heaven,

I were your son, so you would love me, Hubert.

Hub. [Aside.] If I talk to him, with his innocent prate
He will awake my mercy, which lies dead:
Therefore I will be sudden, and despatch.

Arth. Are you sick, Hubert? you look pale to-day.
In sooth, I would you were a little sick,

That I might sit all night, and watch with you:

I warrant, I love you more than you do me.

Hub. [Aside.] His words do take possession of my bosom. —

Read here, young Arthur. [Showing a paper.]

[Aside.] How now, foolish rheum!⁹

Turning spiteous torture out of door!

I must be brief, lest resolution drop

Out at mine eyes, in tender womanish tears. —

Can you not read it? is it not fair writ?

Arth. Too fairly, Hubert, for so foul effect.¹⁰

Must you with hot irons burn out both mine eyes?

Hub. Young boy, I must.

Arth. And will you?

Hub. And I will.

Arth. Have you the heart? When your head did but ache,

I knit my handkerchief about your brows,

(The best I had, a princess wrought it me,)

And I did never ask it you again;

And with my hand at midnight held your head,

And, like the watchful minutes to the hour,

Still and anon cheer'd up the heavy time,¹¹

Saying, »What lack you?« and, »Where lies your grief?«

Or, »What good love may I perform for you?«

Many a poor man's son would have lain still,

And ne'er have spoke a loving word to you;

But you at your sick-service¹² had a prince.

Nay, you may think my love was crafty love,

And call it cunning: do, an if you will.

If heaven be pleas'd that you will use me ill,

Why, then you must. — Will you put out mine eyes?

These eyes, that never did, nor never shall,¹³

So much as frown on you?

Hub. I have sworn to do it.

And with hot irons must I burn them out.

Arth. Ah! none but in this iron age would do it.

The iron of itself, though heat¹⁴ red-hot,

Approaching near these eyes, would drink my tears,

And quench this¹⁵ fiery indignation

Even in the matter of mine innocence;¹⁶

Nay, after that, consume away in rust,¹⁷

1) Auch diese nähere Bestimmung der Localität rührt von den Hgg. her. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 2. — Die Fol. hat Enter Hubert and Executioners. — Hubert ertheilt die erste Weisung seiner Rede an den Einen, die zweite: look thou stand etc. an den Andern. 2) arras ist die gewirkte Tapete, die so aufgehängt wurde, dass zwischen ihr und der Wand ein Zwischenraum blieb, der auf dem Sh.'schen Theater häufig den Lauschern zum Versteckplatz dient. So in Hamlet (A. 3, Sc. 3) Behind the arras I'll convey myself. 3) bosom of the ground, eigentlich was den Grund in sich birgt, die Decke oder Oberfläche des Bodens. So in K. Richard II. (A. 3, Sc. 2) Write sorrow on the bosom of the earth. 4) Im alten K. John sagt Hubert selbst my masters, I have shewed you what warrant I have for this attempt. — Vgl. Einleitung pag. 576. 5) to say = sprechen. 6) little versteht Hubert adjectivisch von der Jugend und Kleinheit Arthur's, Arthur selbst adverbial von dem geringen Ansehen, das er als Prinz besitzt. 7) Aus Affectation melancholisch auszusehen, kommt auch bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen als charakteristisch für vornehme Herren vor. So in Lyly's Midas: melancholy is the crest of courtiers, and now every base companion etc. says he is melancholy. 8) christendom ist die Qualität eines Christen, wie sie durch die Taufe gewonnen wird. 9) Das thörichte Nass der Augen verjagt die mitleidlose Tortur, welche Hubert auszuüben im Begriffe steht. 10) Der hässliche Sinn oder Inhalt des Papiers wird der schönen Handschrift gegenübergestellt. 11) Wie die Minuten, die in ihrer steten Aufeinanderfolge immer wachsam sind, die Stunde hinhalten, so hielt Arthur immer wieder und von Neuem die Zeit hin, die dem kranken Hubert so schwer verstrich. — Vielleicht construirte Sh. aber minutes watchful to the hour. 12) sick-service = Krankendienst, ist ein Compositum, wie sick-bed u. a. 13) Dieselbe Wendung, mit derselben Sh.'schen Häufung der Negation, kehrt A. 5, Sc. 7 wieder: This England never did, nor never shall, || Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror. 14) heat, ein veraltetes Particip von to heat, kommt auch bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen noch vor; so in Webster's Northward Hoe: he's heat to the proof. 15) this weist auf das vorhergehende heat red-hot hin; die Hgg. ändern zum Theil his. 16) scil. my tears. Arthur's Thränen sind das Erzeugniss seiner Unschuld und Harmlosigkeit. 17) Das Eisen würde sich nachher in Rost verzehren, gleichsam aus Reue, dass es Feuer enthielt, um

But for containing fire to harm mine eye.
 Are you more stubborn-hard than hammer'd iron?
 An if an angel should have come to me,
 And told me Hubert should put out mine eyes,
 I would not have believ'd him; no tongue but Hubert's.¹⁸
Hub. Come forth. [*Stamps.*¹⁹

Re-enter Attendants, with cords, irons, etc.

Do as I bid you do.
Arth. O! save me, Hubert, save me! my eyes are out,
 Even with the fierce looks of these bloody men.
Hub. Give me the iron, I say, and bind him here.
Arth. Alas! what need you be so boisterous-rough?
 I will not struggle; I will stand stone-still.
 For heaven's sake, Hubert, let me not be bound.
 Nay, hear me, Hubert: drive these men away,
 And I will sit as quiet as a lamb;
 I will not stir, nor wince, nor speak a word,
 Nor look upon the iron angrily.
 Thrust but these men away, and I'll forgive you,
 Whatever torment you do put me to.
Hub. Go, stand within: let me alone with him.
1. Atten. I am best pleas'd to be from²⁰ such a deed.

[Exeunt Attendants.

Arth. Alas! I then have chid away my friend:
 He hath a stern look, but a gentle heart. —
 Let him come back, that his compassion may Give life to yours.

Hub. Come, boy, prepare yourself.

Arth. Is there no remedy?

Hub. None, but to lose your eyes.

Arth. O heaven! — that there were but a moth²¹ in yours,

A grain, a dust, a gnat, a wandering hair,
 Any annoyance in that precious sense!
 Then, feeling what small things are boisterous there,
 Your vile intent must needs seem horrible.

Hub. Is this your promise? go to, hold your tongue.

Arth. Hubert, the utterance of a brace of tongues
 Must needs want pleading for a pair of eyes:²²
 Let me not hold my tongue; let me not, Hubert:
 Or, Hubert, if you will, cut out my tongue,
 So I may keep mine eyes. O! spare mine eyes;
 Though to no use, but still to look on you.

Lo! by my troth, the instrument²³ is cold,
 And would not harm me.

Hub. I can heat it, boy.

Arth. No, in good sooth; the fire is dead with grief,
 Being create for comfort, to be us'd²⁴
 In undeserv'd extremes:²⁵ see else yourself;
 There is no malice in this burning coal;²⁶
 The breath of heaven hath blown his spirit out,
 And strew'd repentant ashes on his head.

Hub. But with my breath I can revive it, boy.

Arth. An if²⁷ you do, you will but make it blush,
 And glow with shame of your proceedings, Hubert:
 Nay, it, perchance, will sparkle in your eyes;
 And like a dog that is compell'd to fight,
 Snatch at his master that doth tarre²⁸ him on.
 All things that you should use to do me wrong,
 Deny their office: only you do lack
 That mercy which fierce fire and iron extends,
 Creatures of note for mercy-lacking uses.²⁹

Hub. Well, see to live;³⁰ I will not touch thine eyes
 For all the treasure that thine uncle owes:

Yet am I sworn, and I did purpose, boy,

With this same very iron³¹ to burn them out.

Arth. O! now you look like Hubert: all this while
 You were disguised.

Hub. Peace! no more. Adieu.

Your uncle must not know but you are dead:

I'll fill these dogged spies³² with false reports.

And, pretty child, sleep doubtless, and secure,

That Hubert, for the wealth of all the world,

Will not offend thee.

Arth. O heaven! — I thank you, Hubert.

Hub. Silence! no more. Go closely³³ in with me;
 Much danger do I undergo for thee. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.

The Same. A Room of State in the Palace.

Enter King JOHN, crowned; PEMBROKE, SALISBURY, and other Lords. The King takes his state.¹

K. John. Here once again we sit, once again² crown'd,
 And look'd upon, I hope, with cheerful eyes.

Pem. This once again, but that your highness pleas'd,
 Was once superfluous: you were crown'd before,

Arthur's Augen Schaden zu thun. 18) scil. I would have believed no tongue but Hubert's. Steevens dagegen setzte einen Gedankenstrich hinter Hubert's, als ob ein neuer Satz in Arthur's Rede durch Hubert unterbrochen würde. 19) Diese Bühnenweisung sowie die folgende fehlt in der Fol., wo vorher auch der Weggang der Executioners nicht bezeichnet wird. 20) from = fern von, weg von. 21) moth ist Sh.'s Wort für mote = Atom, Splitter. Die Hgg. setzen stillschweigend mote dafür, das sich doch nicht bloss in der Orthographie, sondern auch in der Aussprache davon unterscheidet. 22) Um für zwei gefährdete Augen das Wort zu führen, wären zwei Zungen nicht zu viel, geschweige denn meine einzelne Zunge. 23) d. h. das vorher glühend gemachte Eisen. 24) to be us'd ist mit grief zu verbinden, und die eingeschobene Parenthese being create etc. gehört zu fire. 25) undeserv'd extremes erklärt Johnson mit acts of cruelty, which I have not deserved. — Indess bezieht sich undeserved wohl genauer auf das mit menschlichen Empfindungen hier ausgestattete fire: Gewaltthaten, zu denen verwandt zu werden (to be used) das Feuer, das zu erfreulichern Zwecken geschaffen ist, nicht verdient hat. 26) Dafür wollte Grey lesen There is no malice burning in this coal. — Indess ist burning coal = eine zum Brennen bestimmte Kohle. 27) Das and if der Fol. behalten die Hgg. hier bei. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 26. — Auch Staunton setzt an if. 28) to tarre = zerren, hetzen. — Sh. gebraucht das Wort auch sonst vom Hetzen der Hunde. 29) Eisen und Feuer werden hier als belebte Wesen gedacht: Geschöpfe, die vorzugsweise und bekanntermassen zu unbarmherzigen Dienstleistungen vorhanden sind. 30) Sieh, damit Du lebest, insofern das Leben erst durch das Gesicht ein wirkliches Leben ist. — Steevens erklärt: continue to enjoy the means of life; und Malone: live, and live with the means of seeing. 31) iron ist im Verlauf dieser Scene abwechselnd ein- und zweisylbig. 32) Die ingrimmigen Späher sind die vorher entlassenen Executioners. 33) closely = heimlich, still.

And that high royalty was ne'er pluck'd off,
The faiths of men ne'er stained with revolt;
Fresh expectation troubled not the land
With any long'd-for change, or better state.

Sal. Therefore, to be possess'd with double pomp,
To guard³ a title that was rich before,
To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,
To smooth the ice, or add another hue⁴
Unto the rainbow, or with taper-light
To seek the beauteous eye of heaven⁵ to garnish,
Is wasteful, and ridiculous excess.

Pem. But that your royal pleasure must be done,
This act is as an ancient tale new-told,⁶
And in the last repeating troublesome,
Being urged at a time unseasonable.

Sal. In this, the antique and well-noted face
Of plain old form is much disfigured;
And, like a shifted wind unto⁷ a sail,
It makes the course of thoughts to fetch about,
Startles and frights consideration,
Makes sound opinion sick, and truth suspected,
For putting on so new a fashion'd⁸ robe.

Pem. When workmen strive to do better than well,
They do confound their skill in covetousness;
And, oftentimes, excusing of a fault
Doth make the fault the worse by the excuse:
As patches, set upon a little breach,
Discredit more in hiding of the fault,⁹
Than did the fault before it was so patch'd.

Sal. To this effect, before you were new-crown'd,
We breath'd our counsel: but it pleas'd your highness
To overbear it, and we are all well pleas'd;
Since all and every part of what we would,
Doth make a stand at what your highness will.¹⁰

K. John. Some reasons of this double coronation
I have possess'd you with, and think them strong;
And more, more strong, when lesser is my fear,¹¹
I shall indue you with: meantime, but ask
What you would have reform'd that is not well;
And well shall you perceive, how willingly
I will both hear and grant you your requests.

Pem. Then I, as one that am the tongue of these,
To sound¹² the purposes of all their hearts,
Both for myself and them, but, chief of all,
Your safety, for the which myself and them¹³
Bend their best studies, heartily request
The enfranchisement of Arthur; whose restraint
Doth move the murmuring lips of discontent
To break into this dangerous argument:¹⁴
If what in rest you have, in right you hold,
Why then your fears, which, as they say, attend
The steps of wrong, should move you to mew up
Your tender kinsman, and to choke his days
With barbarous ignorance, and deny his youth
The rich advantage of good exercise?¹⁵
That the time's¹⁶ enemies may not have this
To grace occasions, let it be our suit,
That you have bid us ask his liberty;
Which for our goods we do no further ask,
Than whereupon our weal, on you depending,
Counts it your weal, he have his liberty.

Enter HUBERT.

K. John. Let it be so: I do commit his youth
To your direction. — Hubert, what news with you?

[HUBERT whispers the King.¹⁷

Pem. This is the man should do the bloody deed:
He show'd his warrant¹⁸ to a friend of mine.
The image of a wicked heinous fault
Lives in his eye: that close aspect of his
Does show the mood of a much troubled breast;
And I do fearfully believe 't is done,
What we so fear'd he had a charge to do.

Sal. The colour of the king doth come and go,
Between his purpose and his conscience,
Like heralds' twixt two dreadful battles set.¹⁹
His passion is so ripe, it needs must break.

Pem. And when it breaks,²⁰ I fear, will issue thence
The foul corruption of a sweet child's death.

K. John. We cannot hold mortality's strong hand. —
Good lords, although my will to give is living,
The suit which you demand is gone and dead:
He tells us, Arthur is deceas'd to-night.

1) Dass der König seinen Thronsessel (state) einnimmt, findet sich nicht in der alten Bühnenweisung, und ist von den Hgg. hinzugefügt, Johann's ersten Worten gemäss. 2) Den Druckfehler against in der Fol. verbessert die dritte Folioausg. vom Jahre 1665. 3) to guard = verbrämen, mit einem Besatz verzieren. — Johann's Würde und Besitz (title) waren schon vorher reich genug, als dass sie noch eines nachträglichen Aufputzes bedurft hätten. 4) Eine andere Farbe, als die schon vorhandenen, also eine neu hinzukommende Farbe. — So in Romeo and Juliet (A. 1, Sc. 4) Then he dreams of another benefice. 5) d. h. die Sonne. 6) So sagte der Dauphin A. 3, Sc. 4: Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale, nur dass hier der Vergleich weiter ausgeführt wird. 7) unto hat hier in allgemeinerer Construction a sail als das Object nach sich, zu dem das Verbum makes to fetch about aus dem Folgenden zu suppliren ist: wie ein umgeschlagener Wind dem Schiff, so giebt diese neue Krönung dem Lauf der Gedanken eine andere Richtung. 8) Der Artikel a trennt das zusammengehörige new-fashioned. — So in Tempest (A. 4, Sc. 1) so rare a wonder'd father. 9) fault ist sowohl körperliches wie geistiges Gebrechen. 10) Der Gegensatz ist zwischen would und will: das, was wir wollten, geräth in Stillstand vor dem, was Eure Hoheit will. 11) when ist eine Emendation Tyrwhitt's für then der Fol. 12) to sound geht auf tongue: die Zunge, welche die Meinung der Herzen Aller laut werden lässt. 13) them für they, wie Sh. die Personalpronomina, des grösseren Nachdrucks wegen, oft vertauscht. 14) argument = das Thema der allgemeinen Besprechung, wird in den folgenden Zeilen auseinander gesetzt, daher steht this hinweisend: Wenn Ihr rechtmässig besitzt, was Ihr unangefochten besitzt, warum sollten denn Eure Besorgnisse, die sonst nur, wie man sagt, in Folge von begangenem Unrecht entstehen, Euch veranlassen u. s. w. — Der grösseren Deutlichkeit wegen stellt Theobald um: Why should your fears — — then move you to mew up etc. 15) exercise ist jede Uebung und Lehre, in der die Jugend erzogen wird, geistige wie leibliche. 16) the time = die jetzige Zeit, die Regierung Johann's. 17) Die Bühnenweisung ist modern. 18) Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 1, Anm. 4. 19) Der Mordanschlag des Königs und sein Gewissen werden zweien einander gegenübergestellten Schlachtreihen verglichen, zwischen denen die wechselnde Farbe seines Angesichts hin- und hergeht, wie Herolde. — Weil eigentlich zwei Farben, bald blass, bald

Sal. Indeed, we fear'd his sickness was past cure.

Pem. Indeed, we heard how near his death he was,
Before the child himself felt he was sick.

This must be answer'd, either here, or hence.²¹

K. John. Why do you bend such solemn brows on me?

Think you I bear the shears of destiny?

Have I commandment on the pulse of life?

Sal. It is apparent foul play; and 't is shame,

That greatness should so grossly offer it.

So thrive it in your game! and so farewell.

Pem. Stay yet, Lord Salisbury; I'll go with thee,

And find the inheritance of this poor child,

His little kingdom of a forced grave.

That blood which ow'd the breadth of all this isle,

Three foot of it doth hold. Bad world the while!

This must not be thus borne: this will break out

To all our sorrows,²² and ere long, I doubt.

[Exeunt Lords.]

K. John. They burn in indignation. I repent:

There is no sure foundation set on blood,

No certain life achiev'd by others' death.

Enter a Messenger.

A fearful eye thou hast. Where is that blood,

That I have seen inhabit in those cheeks?

So foul a sky clears not without a storm:

Pour down thy weather. — How goes all in France?

Mess. From France to England.²³ — Never such a power,

For any foreign preparation,

Was levied in the body of a land.

The copy of your speed is learn'd by them;²⁴

For, when you should be told they do prepare,

The tidings comes²⁵ that they are all arriv'd.

K. John. O! where hath our intelligence²⁶ been drunk?

Where hath it slept? Where is my mother's care,

That such an army could be drawn in France,

And she not hear of it?

Mess. My liege, her ear

Is stopp'd with dust: the first of April, died

Your noble mother; and, as I hear, my lord,

The lady Constance in a frenzy died

Three days before: but this from rumour's tongue

I idly²⁷ heard; if true, or false, I know not.

K. John. Withhold thy speed, dreadful occasion!²⁸

O! make a league with me, till I have pleas'd

My discontented peers. — What! mother dead!

How wildly then walks my estate in France!²⁹ —

Under whose conduct came those powers of France,

That thou for truth giv'st out are landed here?

Mess. Under the Dauphin.

Enter the Bastard, and PETER of Pomfret.

K. John. Thou hast made me giddy

With these ill tidings. — Now, what says the world

To your proceedings? do not seek to stuff

My head with more ill news, for it is full.

Bast. But, if you be afraid to hear the worst,

Then let the worst, unheard, fall on your head.

K. John. Bear with me, cousin, for I was amaz'd³⁰

Under the tide; but now I breathe again

Aloft the flood, and can give audience

To any tongue, speak it of what it will.

Bast. How I have sped among the clergymen,

The sums I have collected shall express.

But as I travell'd hither through the land,

I find the people strangely fantasied,³¹

Possess'd with rumours, full of idle dreams,

Not knowing what they fear, but full of fear.³²

And here 's a prophet, that I brought with me

From forth the streets of Pomfret, whom I found

With many hundreds treading on his heels;

To whom he sung, in rude harsh-sounding rhymes,

That, ere the next Ascension-day at noon,³³

Your highness should deliver up your crown.

K. John. Thou idle dreamer, wherefore didst thou so?

Peter. Foreknowing that the truth will fall out so.

K. John. Hubert, away with him: imprison him;

And on that day at noon, whereon, he says,

I shall yield up my crown, let him be hang'd.

Deliver him to safety,³⁴ and return,

For I must use thee. [Exit HUBERT, with PETER.] —

O my gentle cousin,

Hear'st thou the news abroad, who are arriv'd?

Bast. The French, my lord; men's mouths are full of it:

Besides, I met Lord Bigot, and Lord Salisbury,

With eyes as red as new-enkindled fire,

And others more, going to seek the grave

Of Arthur, whom³⁵ they say is kill'd to-night

On your suggestion.

K. John. Gentle kinsman, go,

And thrust thyself into their companies.³⁶

roth, kommen und gehen, so steht heralds im Plural, obwohl colour im Singular vorherging. 20) Das Bild ist von einem aufbrechenden Geschwür entlehnt. 21) Von Arthur's Tode muss Rechenschaft gegeben werden, entweder hienieden, oder fern von hier, d. h. jenseits. 22) Zu unser Aller Leidwesen. 23) scil. all in France goes from France to England: die Franzosen kommen in Masse herüber. 24) Die Eile, mit der Johann vorher (vgl. A. 2, Sc. 1) nach Frankreich zog, ist ein Muster, eine Vorschrift für die Franzosen gewesen, und sie haben davon gleiche Eile gelernt. 25) tidings ist bei Sh. oft, wie hier, ein Singular, daher hat die Fol. comes, wofür die späteren Folioausgg., mit dem Sh.'schen Sprachgebrauch weniger bekannt, come lesen. 26) our intelligence collectiv = unsere Kundschafter. — In dem folgenden Verse wollte Sidney Walker ear (care in alter Schreibweise) für care lesen. 27) idly gehört dem Sinne nach zu from rumour's tongue, nicht zu heard. 28) occasion ist das Zusammentreffen von Umständen, und wird hier personificirt wie eine furchtbare Schicksalsgöttin gedacht. 29) Johann's Regiment in Frankreich geht in der Irre, aus aller Bahn heraus, vermöge des Ablebens seiner Mutter, die dort Reichsverweserin war. 30) amazed = betäubt, der Fassung beraubt. — tide ist die Fluth böser Nachrichten, die ihn überstürzt. 31) strangely fantasied = mit seltsamen Einbildungen erfüllt. 32) So in Macbeth (A. 4, Sc. 2) when we hold rumour || From what we fear, yet know not what we fear. 33) Das umschreibt der alte K. John: ere Ascension-day || Have brought the sun unto his usual height. 34) to safety = in sichern Gewahrsam. 35) whom hat die Fol., nach Sh.'scher Construction mit they say verbunden: Arthur, von dem sie sagen, dass er u. s. w. — Die Hgg. emendiren mit Pope who, und fassen they say als Zwischensatz. 36) companies steht im Plural, weil von der Gesellschaft Mehrerer die Rede ist = into the company of them.

I have a way to win their loves again:
Bring them before me.

Bast. I will seek them out.

K. John. Nay, but make haste; the better foot before.
O! let me have no subject enemies,
When adverse foreigners affright my towns
With dreadful pomp of stout invasion.
Be Mercury, set feathers to thy heels,
And fly, like thought, from them to me again.

Bast. The spirit of the time shall teach me speed.

[Exit.]

K. John. Spoke like a spritful noble gentleman. —
Go after him; for he, perhaps, shall need
Some messenger betwixt me and the peers,
And be thou he.

Mess. With all my heart, my liege. [Exit.]

K. John. My mother dead!

Re-enter HUBERT.

Hub. My lord, they say five moons were seen tonight:³⁷
Four fixed; and the fifth did whirl about
The other four in wondrous motion.

K. John. Five moons?

Hub. Old men, and beldams, in the streets
Do prophesy upon it dangerously.
Young Arthur's death is common in their mouths;
And when they talk of him, they shake their heads,
And whisper one another in the ear;
And he that speaks doth gripe the hearer's wrist,
Whilst he that hears makes fearful action,³⁸
With wrinkled brows, with nods, with rolling eyes.
I saw a smith stand with his hammer, thus,
The whilst his iron did on the anvil cool,
With open mouth swallowing a tailor's news;
Who, with his shears and measure in his hand,
Standing on slippers (which his nimble haste
Had falsely thrust upon contrary feet),³⁹
Told of a many thousand warlike French,
That were embattled⁴⁰ and rank'd in Kent.
Another lean unwash'd artificer⁴¹
Cuts off his tale, and talks of Arthur's death.

K. John. Why seek'st thou to possess me with these fears?

Why urgest thou so oft young Arthur's death?
Thy hand hath murder'd him: I had a mighty cause
To wish him dead, but thou hadst none to kill him.

Hub. No had,⁴² my lord! why, did you not provoke me?

K. John. It is the curse of kings, to be attended
By slaves, that take their humours for a warrant
To break within the bloody house of life,⁴³
And, on the winking of authority,
To understand a law,⁴⁴ to know the meaning
Of dangerous majesty, when, perchance, it frowns
More upon humour than advis'd respect.⁴⁵

Hub. Here is your hand and seal for what I did.

K. John. O! when the last account 'twixt heaven and earth

Is to be made, then shall this hand and seal
Witness against us to damnation.

How oft the sight of means to do ill deeds
Makes deeds ill done!⁴⁶ Hadst not thou been by,
A fellow by the hand of nature mark'd.

Quoted,⁴⁷ and sign'd, to do a deed of shame,

This murder had not come into my mind;

But, taking note of thy abhorr'd aspect,

Finding thee fit for bloody villany,

Apt, liable, to be employ'd in danger,⁴⁸

I faintly broke with thee of Arthur's death;

And thou, to be endeared to a king,

Made it no conscience to destroy a prince.⁴⁹

Hub. My lord, —

K. John. Hadst thou but shook thy head, or made a pause,

When I spake darkly what I purposed,

Or turn'd an eye of doubt upon my face,

As bid⁵⁰ me tell my tale in express words,

Deep shame had struck me dumb, made me break off;

And those thy fears might have wrought fears in me:

But thou didst understand me by my signs,

And didst in signs again parley with sin;

Yea, without stop, didst let thy heart consent,

And consequently thy rude hand to act⁵¹

The deed which both our tongues held vile to name.

Out of my sight, and never see me more!

My nobles leave me, and my state is brav'd,

Even at my gates, with ranks of foreign powers:

37) In dem alten K. John erscheinen die fünf Monde sichtbar auf der Bühne, und der Prophet deutet die vier feststehenden auf Spanien, Dänemark, Deutschland und Frankreich, welche das römische Joch sich gefallen lassen; der fünfte Mond, der die übrigen umkreist, ist England, das sich von dem Papste lossagt. 38) fearful action ist eine Geberde, die Furcht verräth oder Furcht einflösst. So in dieser Scene vorher: A fearful eye thou hast.

39) Er hatte in der Eile den Pantoffel des rechten Fusses auf den linken, den des linken auf den rechten Fuss ge-worfen. 40) embattled and ranked ist als ein Begriff zu fassen = in Schlachtreihen aufgestellt. 41) artificer ist ein vornehmer Ausdruck, den Hubert hier wie humoristisch von einem simplen Handwerksmann gebraucht.

42) no had, wofür viele Hgg. Pope's Emendation had none setzen, ist richtig, wie Dyce diese und ähnliche elliptische Archaismen aus ältern Schriftstellern nachweist. Wie no had kommt no did, no does bei Fragen und Ausrufen der Verwunderung, die an eine angezweifelte Behauptung des Interlocutors anknüpfen, häufig vor.

43) bloody ist in Sh.'scher kühner Verbindung zu house of life gefügt, da es eigentlich adverbial mit break ver-bunden werden sollte. Vgl. Anm. 27 dieser Scene. — Dasselbe Bild findet sich in Macbeth (A. 2, Sc. 3) murder hath broke ope || The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence || The life o' the building. 44) Aus dem blossen Augenzudrücken des Machthabers deutet man ein Gesetz. 45) Die Majestät wird eben dadurch gefährlich, dass sie oft mehr aus Laune, als aus bedachtsamer Ueberlegung finster die Stirn runzelt und dann verkehrt verstanden wird. 46) Knight stellt dafür um: makes ill deeds done; indess lässt sich ill done mit deeds sehr wohl verbinden: Der Anblick von Mitteln, Uebelthaten zu verrichten, bewirkt oft übel verrichtete Thaten. 47) to quote eigentlich = die Summe von Jemandem ziehen, daher = Jemanden beurtheilen oder beobachten. 48) Geneigt und geeignet, in lebensgefährlichen Dingen gebraucht zu werden. 49) Der Gegensatz ist zwischen king und prince.

50) Elliptisch für as to bid, abhängig von eye of doubt. — Malone las dafür and bid. 51) to act hängt von let ab und steht statt des einfachen act, weil das Verbum nicht unmittelbar auf let folgt. 52) Der König spricht

Nay, in the body of this fleshly land,
This kingdom, this confine of blood and breath;⁵²
Hostility and civil tumult reigns
Between my conscience and my cousin's death.

Hub. Arm you against your other enemies,
I'll make a peace between your soul and you.
Young Arthur is alive: this hand of mine
Is yet a maiden⁵³ and an innocent hand,
Not painted with the crimson spots of blood.
Within this bosom never enter'd yet
The dreadful motion of a murderous thought;
And you have slander'd nature in my form,
Which, howsoever rude exteriorly,
Is yet the cover of a fairer mind,
Than to be butcher of an innocent child.

K. John. Doth Arthur live? O! haste thee to the peers,
Throw this report on their incensed rage,
And make them tame to their obedience.
Forgive the comment that my passion made
Upon thy feature; for my rage was blind,
And foul imaginary eyes of blood⁵⁴
Presented thee more hideous than thou art.
O! answer not; but to my closet bring
The angry lords, with all expedient haste.
I conjure thee but slowly; run more fast. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The Same. Before the Castle.

Enter ARTHUR, on the walls.

Arth. The wall is high; and yet will I leap down. —
Good ground, be pitiful, and hurt me not! —
There's few, or none, do know me; if they did,
This ship-boy's semblance hath disguis'd me quite.
I am afraid; and yet I'll venture it.
If I get down, and do not break my limbs,
I'll find a thousand shifts to get away:
As good to die and go, as die and stay. [Leaps down.]
O me! my uncle's spirit is in these stones. —
Heaven take my soul, and England keep my bones! [Dies.]

Enter PEMBROKE, SALISBURY, and BIGOT.

Sal. Lords, I will meet him¹ at Saint Edmund's Bury:
It is our safety, and we must embrace
This gentle offer of the perilous time.

Pem. Who brought that letter from the cardinal?

Sal. The count Melun, a noble lord of France;
Whose private with me,² of the Dauphin's love,
Is much more general than these lines import.

Big. To-morrow morning let us meet him then.

Sal. Or rather then set forward: for 't will be
Two long days' journey, lords, or e'er³ we meet.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. Once more to-day well met, distemper'd⁴ lords.
The king by me requests your presence straight.

Sal. The king hath dispossess'd himself of us.
We will not line his thin bestained cloak⁵
With our pure honours, nor attend the foot
That leaves the print of blood where'er it walks.
Return, and tell him so: we know the worst.

Bast. Whate'er you think, good words, I think, were best.

Sal. Our griefs, and not our manners, reason now.⁶

Bast. But there is little reason in your grief:
Therefore, 't were reason you had manners now.

Pem. Sir, Sir, impatience hath his privilege.

Bast. 'T is true; to hurt his master, no man else.⁷

Sal. This is the prison. — [Seeing ARTHUR.] What is he lies here?

Pem. O death, made proud with pure and princely beauty!

The earth had not a hole to hide this deed.⁸

Sal. Murder, as hating what himself hath done,
Doth lay it open to urge on revenge.

Big. Or when he doom'd this beauty to a grave,
Found it too precious-princely for a grave.

Sal. Sir Richard, what think you?⁹ Have you beheld,
Or have you read, or heard? or could you think?

Or do you almost think, although you see,
That you do see? could thought, without this object,
Form such another? This is the very top,
The height, the crest, or crest unto the crest,

hier von den Kämpfen, die er in sich selbst zu bestehen hat. — Die Person, das Individuum wird mit einem in Aufruhr begriffenen Staate auch in Julius Cæsar (A. 2, Sc. 1) verglichen: the state of a man, || Like to a little kingdom, suffers then || The nature of an insurrection. 53) scil. a maiden hand. 54) imaginary eyes of blood sind Augen, die in ihrer Einbildung voll Blut sind, die Blut zu sehen glauben; es sind also Johann's, nicht Hubert's Augen gemeint.

1) d. h. den Dauphin, der durch den Grafen Melun und den Cardinal Pandulph Unterhandlungen mit den englischen Lords angeknüpft hatte. 2) private ist = Privatverhandlung. Was ihm der Graf Melun privatim über die freundliche Gesinnung des Dauphins mitgetheilt hat, geht viel weiter, als was der Brief enthält. — In ähnlichem Sinne substantivisch gebraucht auch Ben Jonson das Wort private in seinem Catiline: Nor must I be un-mindful of my private, || For which I've call'd my brother and the tribunes. 3) or e'er ist = before ever, wofür in der ältern Sprache auch or allein gebraucht wird. So in dem Pseudo-Sh.'schen Drama Arden of Feversham: He shall be murder'd or the guests come in. 4) distempered ist mehr als = verstimmt, insofern es sich nicht auf die blosse Laune, sondern auf das ganze krankhaft afficirte, geistige oder körperliche Befinden bezieht. — once more met geht auf die früheren Worte des Bastards (A. 4, Sc. 2) Besides, I met Lord Bigot, and Lord Salisbury etc. 5) Johann's gefährdetes Ansehen wird einem abgetragenen, schmutzigen Mantel verglichen, den die Pairs mit ihrer reinen Würde nicht dicker oder stattlicher machen wollen. — Dem line ist das thin, dem bestained das pure gegenübergestellt. 6) grief = grievance, wie oft bei Sh. — Die Pairs reden, was ihre Beschwerden, nicht was die herkömmliche Höflichkeit ihnen eingiebt. — Daran knüpft sich das Wortspiel zwischen to reason = reden, und reason = Vernunft. 7) no man verbessert die zweite Folioausg. von 1632 das no mans der ersten Fol. 8) Deshalb liegt der Leichnam unbeerdigt da. 9) Auf you liegt der Nachdruck, weil der Bastard bisher seine Meinung noch nicht ausgesprochen, wie die Uebrigen. — have you beheld ist die Emendation der späteren Folioausgg.; die beiden ersten lesen you have beheld. 10) In Verbindung mit crest =

Of murder's arms: ¹⁰ this is the bloodiest shame,
The wildest savagery, the vildest ¹¹ stroke,
That ever wall-ey'd wrath, ¹² or staring rage,
Presented to the tears of soft remorse.

Pem. All murders past do stand excus'd in this:

And this, so sole and so unmatched,
Shall give a holiness, a purity,

To the yet unbegotten sin of times, ¹³

And prove a deadly bloodshed but a jest,

Exemplified by this heinous spectacle.

Bast. It is a damned and a bloody work;

The graceless action of a heavy hand,

If that it be the work of any hand.

Sal. If that it be the work of any hand? —

We had a kind of light what would ensue:

It is the shameful work of Hubert's hand;

The practice, and the purpose, of the king:

From whose obedience I forbid my soul,

Kneeling before this ruin of sweet life,

And breathing to his breathless excellence ¹⁴

The incense of a vow, a holy vow,

Never to taste the pleasures of the world,

Never to be infected with delight,

Nor conversant with ease and idleness,

Till I have set a glory to this hand,

By giving it the worship of revenge. ¹⁵

Pem., Big. Our souls religiously confirm thy words.

Enter HUBERT.

Hub. Lords, I am hot with haste in seeking you.

Arthur doth live: the king hath sent for you.

Sal. O! he is bold, and blushes not at death. —

Avaunt, thou hateful villain! get thee gone.

Hub. I am no villain.

Sal. Must I rob the law? ¹⁶

[Drawing his sword.]

Bast. Your sword is bright, Sir: put it up again. ¹⁷

Sal. Not till I sheathe it in a murderer's skin. ¹⁸

Hub. Stand back, Lord Salisbury, stand back, I say:

By heaven, I think, my sword 's as sharp as yours.

I would not have you, lord, forget yourself,

Nor tempt the danger of my true defence; ¹⁹

Lest I, by marking of your rage, forget

Your worth, your greatness, and nobility.

Big. Out, dunghill! dar'st thou brave a nobleman?

Hub. Not for my life; but yet I dare defend

My innocent life against an emperor.

Sal. Thou art a murderer.

Hub. Do not prove me so:

Yet, I am none. ²⁰ Whose tongue so'er speaks false,

Not truly speaks; who speaks not truly, lies.

Pem. Cut him to pieces.

Bast. Keep the peace, I say.

Sal. Stand by, or I shall gall you, Faulconbridge.

Bast. Thou wert better gall the devil, Salisbury:

If thou but frown on me, or stir thy foot,

Or teach thy hasty spleen to do me shame,

I'll strike thee dead. Put up thy sword betime,

Or I'll so maul you and your toasting-iron, ²¹

That you shall think the devil is come from hell.

Big. What wilt thou do, renowned Faulconbridge?

Second a villain, and a murderer?

Hub. Lord Bigot, I am none.

Big. Who kill'd this prince?

Hub. 'T is not an hour since I left him well:

I honour'd him, I lov'd him; and will weep

My date of life out for his sweet life's loss.

Sal. Trust not those cunning waters of his eyes.

For villany is not without such rheum;

And he, long traded in it, makes it seem

Like rivers of remorse ²² and innocency.

Away, with me, all you whose souls abhor

The uncleanly savours of a slaughter-house,

For I am stifled with this smell of sin.

Big. Away, toward Bury: ²³ to the Dauphin there!

Pem. There, tell the king, he may inquire us out.

[Exeunt Lords.]

Bast. Here 's a good world! — Knew you of this fair work?

Beyond the infinite and boundless reach

Of mercy, if thou didst this deed of death,

Art thou damn'd, Hubert.

Hub. Do but hear me, Sir.

Bast. Ha! I'll tell thee what;

Thou art damn'd as black — nay, nothing is so black;

Thou art more deep damn'd than prince Lucifer:

There is not yet so ugly a fiend of hell,

As thou shalt be, ²⁴ if thou didst kill this child.

Hub. Upon my soul, —

Bast. If thou didst but consent

Wappenhelm, ist arms = Wappen. 11) Nach der Orthographie der Fol. bilden wildest und vildest eine Assonanz, die in der modernen Orthographie vilest verloren geht. 12) Die Blindheit des Zorns wird näher dadurch bezeichnet, dass ihm ein wall-eye, ein Glasauge, eine Krankheit der Pferde, zugeschrieben wird. In Marston's Insatiate Countess steht so wall-ey'd jealousy. — remorse = Zartgefühl, Mitleid. 13) sin steht als Collectiv im Singular, und das hinzugefügte Epitheton yet unbegotten bestimmt näher times = die auf einander folgenden zukünftigen Zeiten. 14) his geht auf ruin of sweet life = die des Lebenshauchs beraubte Herrlichkeit dieses Ueberbleibels von holdem Leben. — to breathe = einhauchen, und = äussern, ist ein Wortspiel mit breathless. 15) Salisbury will seine Hand verherrlichen, indem er ihr die Würde zuwendet, Arthur's Tod zu rächen. — Nach M. Mason's weniger plausibler Erklärung ist this hand die Hand Arthur's, welche Salisbury, an der Leiche niederknieend, ergreift, während er sein Gelübde spricht. — Farmer, der den Sinn der Stelle missverstand, schlug head für hand vor. — Dyce citirt sehr passend dazu aus Chapman's Odyssey: Hast thou not decreed || That Ithacus should come and give this deed || The glory of revenge on these and theirs? 16) Indem er das Schwert gegen Hubert zieht, beraubt er das Gesetz, dem das Leben Hubert's als eines vermeintlichen Mörders verfallen ist. 17) So in Othello (A. 1, Sc. 2) Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them. 18) Anspielung auf die ledernen Degenscheiden. 19) Die Gefährdung, welche für Euch in meiner getrosten, gerechten Gegenwehr liegt. 20) Noch bin ich kein Mörder; macht mich zu keinem, indem Ihr mich zwingt, mich gegen Euch zu blutiger Wehr zu setzen. 21) toasting-iron = ein Eisen, um Käse darauf zu rösten, nennt er höhnisch Salisbury's Schwert. 22) Vgl. Anm. 12 dieser Scene. 23) scil. Saint Edmund's Bury. Vgl. Anm. 1 dieser Scene. 24) Steevens erinnert sich, ein zur Zeit Heinrich's VIII. gedrucktes Buch gelesen zu haben, worin es heisst, dass die Hässlichkeit der Verdammten in der Hölle sich nach den Graden ihrer Schuld richte.

To this most cruel act, do but despair;²⁵
And if thou want'st a cord, the smallest thread,
That ever spider twisted from her womb,
Will serve to strangle thee; a rush will be a beam
To hang thee on; or wouldst thou drown thyself,
Put but a little water in a spoon,
And it shall be as all the ocean,
Enough to stifle such a villain up.
I do suspect thee very grievously.

Hub. If I in act, consent, or sin of thought,
Be guilty of the stealing that sweet breath,
Which was embounded in this beauteous clay,
Let hell want pains enough to torture me.
I left him well.

Bast. Go, bear him in thine arms. —
I am amaz'd,²⁶ methinks, and lose my way
Among the thorns and dangers of this world. —
How easy dost thou take all England up!
From forth this morsel of dead royalty,
The life, the right, and truth of all this realm
Is fled to heaven; and England now is left
To tug and scramble, and to part by the teeth
The unowed interest of proud-swelling state.²⁷
Now for the bare-pick'd bone of majesty
Doth dogged war bristle his angry crest,
And snarleth in the gentle eyes of peace:
Now powers from home, and discontents at home,²⁸
Meet in one line; and vast confusion waits,
As doth a raven on a sick-fallen beast,
The imminent decay of wrested pomp.²⁹
Now happy he whose cloak and ceinter³⁰ can Hold out this tempest. — Bear away that child,
And follow me with speed: I'll to the king.
A thousand businesses are brief³¹ in hand,
And heaven itself doth frown upon the land. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.

The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King JOHN, PANDULPH with the crown, and Attendants.

K. John. Thus have I yielded up into your hand
The circle of my glory.

Pand. [Giving JOHN the crown.] Take again

From this my hand, as holding of the pope,
Your sovereign greatness and authority.

K. John. Now keep your holy word: go meet the French;

And from his holiness use all your power¹
To stop their marches, 'fore we are inflam'd.²
Our discontented counties³ do revolt,
Our people quarrel with obedience,
Swearing allegiance, and the love of soul,
To stranger blood, to foreign royalty.
This inundation of mistemper'd humour
Rests by you only to be qualified.
Then pause not; for the present time 's so sick,
That present medicine must be minister'd,
Or overthrow incurable ensues.

Pand. It was my breath that blew this tempest up,
Upon your stubborn usage of the pope;
But since you are a gentle convertite,⁴
My tongue shall hush again this storm of war,
And make fair weather in your blustering land.
On this Ascension-day, remember well,⁵
Upon your oath of service to the pope,
Go I to make the French lay down their arms. [Exit.]

K. John. Is this Ascension-day? Did not the prophet
Say, that before Ascension-day at noon
My crown I should give off? Even so I have.
I did suppose it should be on constraint;
But, heaven be thank'd, it is but voluntary.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. All Kent hath yielded; nothing there holds out
But Dover castle: London hath receiv'd,
Like a kind host, the Dauphin and his powers.
Your nobles will not hear you, but are gone
To offer service to your enemy;
And wild amazement hurries up and down⁶
The little number of your doubtful friends.

K. John. Would not my lords return to me again,
After they heard young Arthur was alive?

Bast. They found him dead, and cast into the streets;
An empty casket, where the jewel of life
By some damn'd hand was robb'd and ta'en away.

K. John. That villain Hubert told me he did live.

Bast. So, on my soul, he did, for aught he knew.
But wherefore do you droop? why look you sad?
Be great in act, as you have been in thought;
Let not the world see fear, and sad⁷ distrust,

25) Er denkt dabei an Judas Ischarioth, der in der Verzweiflung sich erhängte. 26) Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 2, Anm. 30.
27) Nach Arthur's Tode bleibt für England nichts übrig, als um den nunmehr herrenlosen Besitz seiner stolzen Herrschaft sich zu raufen und zu zerren, und denselben dabei mit den Zähnen zu zerreißen. — Das Bild ist hier ebenso von bissigen Hunden entlehnt, wie in den folgenden Zeilen, wo der Krieg selbst als solch ein grimmiger Hund personificirt wird. 28) Die auswärtigen Truppen und die einheimischen Missvergnügten begegnen sich in derselben Richtung. 29) Die Majestät, die ihrem rechtmässigen Besitzer Arthur entrissen ist. — Weniger gut erklärt Johnson wrested pomp mit greatness obtained by violence. 30) Die Fol. hat center, aus dem französischen ceinture, wie Chaucer seint in demselben Sinne = Gürtel, Umgürtung, hat. Die Hgg. setzen dafür seit Pope das aus dem Latein gebildete cincture. 31) brief ist = räumlich und zeitlich in eine kleine Spanne zusammengedrängt.

1) Alle Vollmacht und Autorität, die Ihr von Seiner Heiligkeit, von dem Papste empfangen habt. 2) Unter we versteht Johann sich selbst und sein Land: ehe Alles in Feuer steht. 3) counties = Grafen. Sonst bezeichnet Sh. nur ausländische Grafen mit diesem Namen, und nennt die englischen immer earls. — Dass aber counties hier nicht, wie einige Hgg. wollen, die gewöhnliche Bedeutung = Grafschaften, haben kann, geht sowohl aus dem Epitheton wie aus dem Gegensatz zu our people hervor. 4) convertite ist nicht = Convertit, sondern = ein innerlich Bekehrter, ein reuiger Sünder. 5) remember well = prägt es Euch wohl ein, bezieht sich auf das Folgende, nicht auf das Vorhergehende. 6) up and down ist Präposition, und to hurry intransitives Verbum. — Staunton vermuthet harries für hurries. 7) sad ist nach dem Sh.'schen wechselnden Gebrauche der Adjective nicht bloss

Govern the motion of a kingly eye:
 Be stirring as the time; be fire with fire;⁸
 Threaten the threatener, and outface the brow
 Of bragging horror: so shall inferior eyes,
 That borrow their behaviours from the great,
 Grow great by your example, and put on
 The dauntless spirit⁹ of resolution.
 Away! and glister like the god of war,
 When he intendeth to become the field:¹⁰
 Show boldness, and aspiring confidence.
 What, shall they seek the lion in his den,
 And fright him there? and make him tremble there?
 O! let it not be said. — Forage,¹¹ and run
 To meet displeasure further from the doors,
 And grapple with him,¹² ere he come so nigh.

K. John. The legate of the pope hath been with me,
 And I have made a happy peace with him;
 And he hath promis'd to dismiss the powers
 Led by the Dauphin.

Bast. O inglorious league!
 Shall we, upon the footing of our land,¹³
 Send fair-play orders, and make compromise,
 Insinuation, parley, and base truce,
 To arms invasive? shall a beardless boy,
 A cocker'd silken wanton, brave our fields;
 And flesh his spirit in a warlike soil,
 Mocking the air with colours idly spread,¹⁴
 And find no check? Let us, my liege, to arms:
 Perchance, the cardinal cannot make your peace;
 Or if he do, let it at least be said,
 They saw we had a purpose of defence.

K. John. Have thou the ordering of this present time.

Bast. Away then, with good courage; yet, I know,
 Our party may well meet a prouder foe.¹⁵ [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A Plain near Saint Edmund's Bury.

Enter in arms, LEWIS, SALISBURY, MELUN, PEMBROKE, BIGOT, and Soldiers.

Lew. My lord Melun, let this¹ be copied out,
 And keep it safe for our remembrance.

Return the precedent to these lords again;
 That, having our fair order written down,
 Both they, and we, perusing o'er these notes,
 May know wherefore we took the sacrament,
 And keep our faiths firm and inviolable.

Sal. Upon our sides it never shall be broken.
 And, noble Dauphin, albeit we swear
 A voluntary zeal, and² unurg'd faith,
 To your proceedings; yet, believe me, prince,
 I am not glad that such a sore of time
 Should seek a plaster by contemn'd revolt,³
 And heal the inveterate canker of one wound
 By making many. O! it grieves my soul,
 That I must draw this metal from my side
 To be a widow-maker;⁴ O! and there,
 Where honourable rescue, and defence,
 Cries out upon the name of Salisbury.
 But such is the infection of the time,
 That, for the health and physic of our right,
 We cannot deal but with the very hand
 Of stern injustice and confused wrong. —
 And is 't not pity, O my grieved friends,
 That we, the sons and children of this isle,
 Were born to see so sad an hour as this;
 Wherein we step after a stranger march⁵
 Upon her gentle bosom, and fill up
 Her enemies' ranks, (I must withdraw, and weep
 Upon the spot of this enforced cause,)⁶
 To grace the gentry of a land remote,
 And follow unacquainted colours here?
 What, here? — O nation, that thou couldst remove!
 That Neptune's arms, who clippeth thee about,⁷
 Would bear thee from the knowledge of thyself,
 And grapple⁸ thee unto a pagan shore,
 Where these two christian armies might combine
 The blood of malice in a vein of league,
 And not to⁹ spend it so unneighbourly!

Lew. A noble temper dost thou show in this;
 And great affections wrestling in thy bosom
 Do make an earthquake of nobility.
 O! what a noble combat hast thou fought,
 Between compulsion, and a brave respect!¹⁰
 Let me wipe off this honourable dew,

= traurig, niedergeschlagen, sondern auch = traurig machend, niederschlagend. 8) Seid dem Feuer des Feindes gegenüber selbst ein Feuer. 9) spirit ist bei Sh. gewöhnlich einsylbig. 10) to become = schmücken, sich einem Dinge anpassen. — Der Kriegsgott glänzt in seiner Rüstung, wenn er dem Schlachtfeld sich stellen will. 11) to forage = Streifzüge machen. 12) him geht auf das personifizierte displeasure. 13) Da wir den Fuss auf unser eignes Land setzen, auf unsern eignen Grund und Boden. 14) So in Macbeth (A. 1, Sc. 2) Where the Norweyan banners flout the sky. 15) Unsere Partei ist noch (yet) stark genug, um auch einem stolzeren Feinde, als der Dauphin es ist, entgegenzutreten.

1) this ist der mit den englischen Lords abgeschlossene Vertrag, der nach dem ersten Entwurf (precedent) abgeschrieben werden soll. — In der folgenden Zeile ist remembrance viersylbig = remembrance, wie in Macbeth (A. 3, Sc. 2) Let your remembrance apply to Banquo. 2) Die Fol. wiederholt nach and noch den Artikel an, wahrscheinlich durch ein Versehen des Druckers. 3) contemn'd revolt ist ein Abfall, der allgemein verabscheut wird. 4) So in Coriolanus (A. 4, Sc. 4) 't is I that made thy widows. 5) Wo wir im Gefolge eines fremden Kriegszuges auf dem lieben Boden dieser Insel einherschreiten. — stranger = fremd, ist bei Sh. häufig; so A. 5, Sc. 1: stranger blood. — Nach der Interpunction der Fol., welche hinter stranger ein Comma setzt, wäre stranger Substantiv und march Verbum. 6) Ich muss bei Seite gehen und weinen über den Flecken, den ich durch diese erzwungene Parteiergreifung an meiner Ehre erleide. 7) to clip about = rings umschliessen, von allen Seiten umfassen. 8) grapple emendirte Pope das cripple der Fol. — Wenn der Meergott so die Insel England an ein heidnisches Gestade festmachte, so würden die beiden christlichen Heere, die Engländer und die Franzosen, sich zum Kampfe gegen die Ungläubigen vereinigen, wie in den Kreuzzügen geschah. 9) to fügt Sh. öfter anakoluthisch ein, wo der einfache Infinitiv von dem Verbum, das ihn regiert, getrennt steht. So bezieht sich to spend auf might. Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 2, Anm. 51. — Steevens nimmt dagegen ein Compositum to-spend an, das sich nicht weiter belegen lässt. 10) compulsion ist der Drang der Umstände, der die Lords zu dem französischen

That silverly doth progress on thy cheeks.
 My heart hath melted at a lady's tears,
 Being an ordinary inundation;
 But this effusion of such manly drops,
 This shower, blown up by tempest of the soul,
 Startles mine eyes, and makes me more amaz'd
 Than had I seen the vaulty top of heaven
 Figur'd quite o'er with burning meteors.
 Lift up thy brow, renowned Salisbury,
 And with a great heart heave away this storm:
 Commend these waters to those baby eyes,
 That never saw the giant world¹¹ enrag'd,
 Nor met with fortune other than at feasts,
 Full warm of blood, of mirth, of gossiping.
 Come, come; for thou shalt thrust thy hand as deep
 Into the purse of rich prosperity,
 As Lewis himself: — so, nobles, shall you all,
 That knit your sinews to the strength of mine.

Enter PANDULPH, attended.

And even there, methinks, an angel spake:¹²
 Look, where the holy legate comes apace,
 To give us warrant from the hand of heaven,
 And on our actions set the name of right
 With holy breath.

Pand. Hail, noble prince of France!
 The next is this: — King John hath reconcil'd Himself to Rome; his spirit is come in,
 That so stood out¹³ against the holy church,
 The great metropolis and see of Rome.
 Therefore, thy threat'ning colours now wind up,
 And tame the savage spirit of wild war,
 That, like a lion foster'd up at hand,
 It may lie gently at the foot of peace,
 And be no further harmful than in show.

Lew. Your grace shall pardon me; I will not back:
 I am too high-born to be propertied,¹⁴
 To be a secondary at control,
 Or useful serving-man, and instrument,
 To any sovereign state throughout the world.
 Your breath first kindled the dead coal of wars
 Between this chastis'd kingdom and myself,
 And brought in matter that should feed this fire;
 And now 't is far too huge to be blown out
 With that same weak wind which enkindled it.
 You taught me how to know the face of right,

Acquainted me with interest to this land,¹⁵
 Yea, thrust this enterprise into my heart;
 And come ye now to tell me, John hath made
 His peace with Rome? What is that peace to me?
 I, by the honour of my marriage-bed,
 After young Arthur, claim this land for mine;
 And, now it is half-conquer'd, must I back,
 Because that John hath made his peace with Rome?
 Am I Rome's slave? What penny hath Rome borne,
 What men provided, what munition sent,
 To underprop this action? Is 't not I
 That undergo this charge?¹⁶ who else but I,
 And such as to my claim are liable,
 Sweat in this business, and maintain this war?
 Have I not heard these islanders shout out,
Vive le roy! as I have bank'd¹⁷ their towns?
 Have I not here the best cards for the game,
 To win this easy match play'd for a crown?
 And shall I now give o'er the yielded set?¹⁸
 No, no, on my soul, it never shall be said.

Pand. You look but on the outside of this work.

Lew. Outside or inside, I will not return
 Till my attempt so much be glorified,
 As to my ample hope was promised
 Before I drew this gallant head of war,¹⁹
 And cull'd these fiery spirits from the world,
 To outlook conquest,²⁰ and to win renown
 Even in the jaws of danger and of death. —

[Trumpet sounds.]

What lusty trumpet thus doth summon us?

Enter the Bastard, attended.

Bast. According to the fair play of the world,
 Let me have audience: I am sent to speak. —
 My holy lord of Milan, from the king
 I come, to learn how you have dealt for him;
 And, as you answer, I do know the scope
 And warrant limited unto my tongue.

Pand. The Dauphin is too wilful-opposite,
 And will not temporize²¹ with my entreaties:
 He flatly says, he 'll not lay down his arms.

Bast. By all the blood that ever fury breath'd,
 The youth says well. — Now, hear our English king;
 For thus his royalty doth speak in me.
 He is prepar'd; and reason too,²² he should:
 This apish and unmannerly approach,

Bündnisse veranlasste, und brave respect ist die adlige, ritterliche Erwägung ihrer Ehre, die solch einem Bündnisse entgegen war. — Das thou in der vorigen Zeile ergänzt erst die vierte Folioausg. vom Jahre 1635. 11) baby eyes und giant world werden einander entgegengestellt. Sh. dachte bei letzterem etwa an Titanenkämpfe, in denen sich das Spiel des Glücks ganz anders (other) zeigt, als bei festlichen Versammlungen und deren Lustbarkeiten. 12) Der Dauphin meint, die Worte, die er eben gesprochen, habe ein Engel ihm eingegeben, da sie durch die Dazwischenkunft des Cardinals die Bestätigung des Himmels erhalten würden. 13) Dem stood out ist das come in gegenübergestellt, dem feindlichen Heraustreten die versöhnliche Einkehr in sich selbst. 14) to property = zu einem Besitzthum machen, als eine Sache in Jemandes Besitz behandeln. 15) Ihr machtet mich mit dem Rechtsanspruch bekannt, den ich an dieses Land zu machen hätte. — So construiert Sh. interest auch in K. Henry IV. First Part (A. 3, Sc. 2) He hath more worthy interest to the state, || Than thou the shadow of succession. 16) charge ist hier der Aufwand zur Kriegführung an Geld und Menschen. 17) to bank, das Steevens mit to sail along the banks of the river erklärt, ist in Verbindung mit their towns wohl eher = anlegen, landen an den Uferstädten. Im alten K. John heisst es: And from the hollow holes of Thamesis || Echo apace replied. Vive le roi! — Eine andere Erklärung von to bank schlägt Staunton vor: einstecken, gewinnen, wie vom Gewinn beim Kartenspiel. Auf das Kartenspiel weisen deutlicher die folgenden Verse hin. 18) yielded set ist das Spiel, das schon so gut wie gewonnen ist. 19) Ehe ich diese tapfere Kriegsmacht zusammenzog. — In diesem Sinne gebraucht Sh. to draw auch sonst. So A. 4, Sc. 2: That such an army could be drawn in France. 20) Trotziger zu blicken als der Sieg selbst; dem Siege selbst trotzig in's Angesicht zu schauen. 21) to temporize with = Rücksicht nehmen auf Etwas. 22) So die Folioausg. von 1632. Die erste Fol. hat to. — reason steht

This harness'd masque, and unadvised revel,
 This unhair'd²³ sauciness, and boyish troops,
 The king doth smile at, and is well prepar'd
 To whip this dwarfish war, these pigmy arms,
 From out the circle of his territories.
 That hand, which had the strength, even at your door,
 To cudgel you, and make you take the hatch;²⁴
 To dive, like buckets, in concealed wells;²⁵
 To crouch in litter of your stable planks;
 To lie like pawns lock'd up in chests and trunks;
 To hug with swine; to seek sweet safety out
 In vaults and prisons; and to thrill, and shake,
 Even at the crying of your nation's crow,²⁶
 Thinking this voice an armed Englishman:
 Shall that victorious hand be feeble here,
 That in your chambers gave you chastisement?
 No! Know, the gallant monarch is in arms,
 And like an eagle o'er his aery towers,²⁷
 To souse annoyance that comes near his nest. —
 And you degenerate, you ingrate revolts,
 You bloody Neroes,²⁸ ripping up the womb
 Of your dear mother England, blush for shame:
 For your own ladies, and pale-visag'd maids,
 Like Amazons, come tripping after drums;
 Their thimbles into armed gauntlets change,
 Their needls²⁹ to lances, and their gentle hearts
 To fierce and bloody inclination.

Lew. There end thy brave,³⁰ and turn thy face in peace;

We grant thou canst outscold us: fare thee well;
 We hold our time too precious to be spent
 With such a brabblor.

Pand. Give me leave to speak.

Bast. No, I will speak.

Lew. We will attend to neither. —
 Strike up the drums! and let the tongue of war
 Plead for our interest, and our being here.³¹

Bast. Indeed, your drums, being beaten, will cry out;

And so shall you, being beaten. Do but start
 An echo with the clamour of thy drum,
 And even at hand a drum is ready brac'd,

That shall reverberate all as loud as thine;
 Sound but another, and another shall,
 As loud as thine, rattle the welkin's ear,
 And mock the deep-mouth'd thunder: for at hand
 (Not trusting to this halting³² legate here, Whom he hath us'd rather for sport than need)
 Is warlike John; and in his forehead sits
 A bare-ribb'd death,³³ whose office is this day
 To feast upon whole thousands of the French.

Lew. Strike up our drums, to find this danger out.

Bast. And thou shalt find it, Dauphin, do not doubt.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The Same. A Field of Battle.

Alarums. Enter King JOHN and HUBERT.

K. John. How goes the day¹ with us? O! tell me, Hubert.

Hub. Badly, I fear. How fares your majesty?

K. John. This fever, that hath troubled me so long,
 Lies heavy on me: O! my heart is sick.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, your valiant kinsman, Faulconbridge,
 Desires your majesty to leave the field,
 And send him word by me which way you go.

K. John. Tell him, toward Swinstead, to the abbey there.

Mess. Be of good comfort; for the great supply,²
 That was expected by the Dauphin here,
 Are wrack'd three nights ago on Goodwin sands.³
 This news was brought to Richard⁴ but even now.
 The French fight coldly, and retire themselves.

K. John. Ah me! this tyrant fever burns me up,
 And will not let me welcome this good news.
 Set on toward Swinstead; to my litter straight:
 Weakness possesseth me, and I am faint.

[Exeunt.]

allein für sich = it is reason. 23) So verbesserte Theobald das un-heard der Fol. — unhair'd, d. h. ohne Haare auf dem Kinn und auf der Lippe, wie in Macbeth (A. 5, Sc. 2) unrough youths, erhält seine Erklärung durch das folgende boyish troops. — hair und haired findet sich in Drucken der Zeit oft als hear und heard. 24) Nachdem König Johann sie an ihrer eignen Thür, d. h. in Frankreich, durchgepeitscht, sprangen sie, ohne die Thür zu öffnen, in aller Eile über die untere Halbthür (hatch) in's Haus zurück, statt sich zur Wehr zu setzen. — to take = Etwas im Sprunge nehmen, über Etwas wegsetzen. 25) concealed wells = zugedeckte Brunnen, darin sie sich verstecken konnten. 26) Der Bastard spricht mit einem Wortspiel von crow = Krähe, und = Gekrähe eines Hahns, verächtlich statt von dem gallischen Hahn, von der Krähe, als dem französischen Wahrzeichen. 27) Wie ein Adler in der Luft schwebt er über seinem Horst. — to tower = in die Luft steigen, ist der technische Ausdruck von Raubvögeln und Jagdfalken; ebenso to souse = auf Etwas niederschieszen, hier mit dem Accusativ construiert. 28) Eine Anspielung auf Nero als Muttermörder hat Sh. auch in Hamlet (A. 3, Sc. 2) let not ever // The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom. 29) Die Fol. hat needls, das sich schwerlich in einer Sylbe aussprechen lässt. — neeld ist eine zu Sh.'s Zeit gebräuchliche Form. — In der vorigen Zeile liest Dyce chang'd für change. 30) brave = Prahlerei, Trotzrede. 31) here gehört zu interest wie zu being: das Anrecht, das wir hier haben, und unser Sein hier, d. h. in England. 32) halting ist nicht im wörtlichen Sinne zu nehmen, sondern im übertragenen, = schwankend, nicht geradeaus gehend. 33) Er führt als Abzeichen und Symbol vorn an der Stirn oder an seinem Helm ein Todtengerippe mit sich.

1) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 2, Anm. 2. 2) supply = Verstärkung an Mannschaft, die aus Frankreich erwartet wurde, hat als Collectivum sowohl den Singular, wie den Plural nach sich; so hier was und are. 3) Von diesen an der englischen Küste gelegenen Sandbänken spricht Sh. ausführlicher in Merchant of Venice (A. 3, Sc. 1) a ship of rich lading wrack'd on the narrow seas; the Goodwins, I think they call the place: a very dangerous flat, and fatal etc. — Auch der alte K. John erwähnt sie an der entsprechenden Stelle. 4) scil. Sir Richard Faulconbridge.

SCENE IV.

The Same. Another Part of the Same.

Enter SALISBURY, PEMBROKE, BIGOT, and Others.

Sal. I did not think the king so stor'd with friends.

Pem. Up once again; put spirit in the French;
If they miscarry, we miscarry too.

Sal. That misbegotten devil, Faulconbridge,
In spite of spite, alone upholds the day.

Pem. They say, king John, sore sick, hath left the field.

Enter MELUN wounded, and led by Soldiers.

Mel. Lead me to the revolts of England here.

Sal. When we were happy, we had other names.

Pem. It is the count Melun.

Sal. Wounded to death.

Mel. Fly, noble English; you are bought and sold;¹
Unthread the rude eye of rebellion,²

And welcome home again discarded faith.

Seek out king John, and fall before his feet;

For if the French be lords of this loud day,

He means³ to recompense the pains you take,

By cutting off your heads. Thus hath he sworn,

And I with him, and many more with me,

Upon the altar at Saint Edmund's Bury;

Even on that altar, where we swore to you

Dear amity and everlasting love.

Sal. May this be possible? may this be true?

Mel. Have I not hideous death within my view,
Retaining but a quantity of life,

Which bleeds away, even as a form of wax

Resolveth from his figure 'gainst the fire?⁴

What in the world should make me now deceive,

Since I must lose the use of all deceit?

Why should I then be false, since it is true

That I must die here, and live hence by truth?⁵

I say again, if Lewis do win the day,

He is forsworn, if e'er those eyes of yours

Behold another day break in the east:

Put even this night, whose black contagious breath

Already smokes about the burning crest

Of the old, feeble, and day-wearied sun,
Even this ill night, your breathing shall expire,

Paying the fine of rated treachery⁶

Even with a treacherous fine of all your lives,

If Lewis by your assistance win the day.

Commend me to one Hubert, with your king;⁷

The love of him, — and this respect besides,

For that my grandsire was an Englishman,⁸ —

Awakes my conscience to confess all this.

In lieu whereof,⁹ I pray you, bear me hence

From forth the noise and rumour of the field;

Where I may think the remnant of my thoughts

In peace, and part this body and my soul

With contemplation and devout desires.

Sal. We do believe thee, — and beshrew my soul,

But I do love the favour¹⁰ and the form

Of this most fair occasion, by the which

We will untread the steps of damned flight;¹¹

And, like a bated and retired flood,

Leaving our rankness¹² and irregular course,

Stoop low within those bounds we have o'erlook'd,

And calmly run on in obedience,

Even to our ocean, to our great king John. —

My arm shall give thee help to bear thee hence,

For I do see the cruel pangs of death

Right¹³ in thine eye. — Away, my friends! New flight;

And happy newness, that intends old right.¹⁴

[Exeunt, leading off MELUN.]

SCENE V.

The Same. The French Camp.

Enter LEWIS and his Train.

Lew. The sun of heaven, methought, was loath to set,

But stay'd, and made the western welkin blush,

When the English measur'd¹ backward their own ground,

In faint retire. O! bravely came we off,

When with a volley of our needless shot,

After such bloody toil, we bid good night,

And wound our tattering colours clearly up,²

Last in the field, and almost lords of it!

1) bought and sold = verrathen und verkauft. So in K. Henry VI. First Part (A. 4, Sc. 4) from bought and sold Lord Talbot. 2) Die Verbindung von unthread und eye lässt vermuthen, dass Sh. bei eye an ein Nadelöhr dachte: macht Euch los von dem engen Gange finsterner Empörung. — rude ist dem Sinne nach mit rebellion zu verbinden. — to unthread ist das Gegentheil von to thread, das Sh. = sich in Etwas einlassen, durch Etwas durchgehen, gebraucht, in Coriolanus (A. 3, Sc. 1) they would not thread the gates, und in K. Lear (A. 2, Sc. 1) threading dark-ey'd night. — Vielleicht ist rude eye of rebellion auch nur = das finstere Aussehen der Empörung. — Theobald wollte Untread the rude way of rebellion lesen. 3) he means geht auf den Dauphin, für den in der vorigen Zeile die Franzosen im Allgemeinen genannt sind. — Für lords in der vorigen Zeile vermuthen die Cambridge Edd. lord, ohne jedoch den Text zu ändern. 4) Wie ein Wachsbild, an's Feuer gehalten, sich auflöst und seine Gestalt verliert. — Sh. dachte an solche sympathetische Wachsbilder, durch deren Auflösung man nach dem Aberglauben der Zeit zugleich das Leben der Personen, die sie darstellten, hinschwinden lassen konnte. 5) Jenseits kann er nur durch Wahrheit zu leben hoffen. — Der Gegensatz zwischen here und hence = diesseits und jenseits, ist Sh. sehr geläufig. Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 2, Anm. 21. 6) Sie werden den bedungenen, abgeschätzten Verrath mit der Busse ihres Lebens zu büßen haben. — treacherous ist = wie es Verräthern gebührt. 7) Einem gewissen Hubert, der bei Eurem König ist. 8) Der Vers ist aus dem alten K. John entlehnt. 9) in lieu whereof = dafür, zur Erstattung dessen. 10) favour in Verbindung mit form ist = Miene, Aussehen. 11) flight ist die Flucht aus dem Dienste des angestammten Herrn, und als solche sündhaft (damned). 12) rank gebraucht Sh. auch sonst von hochgehendem Wasser, in Venus and Adonis: Rain added to a river that is rank. 13) right ist adverbial = geradezu, unmittelbar. So in K. Henry VI. Second Part (A. 3, Sc. 2) Came he right now to sing a raven's note = gerade jetzt, eben jetzt. 14) Wie früher den König Johann, wollen sie jetzt den Dauphin im Stich lassen, und diese neue Flucht ist eine glückliche Nenerung, da sie das alte Recht bezweckt.

1) measur'd verbesserte Pope das measure der Fol. 2) tattering, nach der Orthographie der Fol. tottering, von to tatter = in Fetzen zerreißen, zerfetzt sein. — clearly bezeichnet die unbefleckte, ruhmvolle Art, wie

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Where is my prince, the Dauphin?

Lew. Here. — What news?

Mess. The count Melun is slain; the English lords,
By his persuasion, are again fall'n off;
And your supply, which you have wish'd so long,
Are cast away, and sunk, on Goodwin sands.³

Lew. Ah, foul shrewd news! — Beshrew thy very heart!

I did not think to be so sad to-night,
As this hath made me. — Who was he that said,
King John did fly an hour or two before
The stumbling⁴ night did part our weary powers?

Mess. Whoever spoke it, it is true, my lord.

Lew. Well; keep good quarter⁵ and good care to-night:
The day shall not be up so soon as I,
To try the fair adventure of to-morrow. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.

An open Place in the neighbourhood of Swinstead Abbey.

Enter the Bastard and HUBERT, severally.

Hub. Who's there? speak, ho! speak quickly, or I shoot.

Bast. A friend. — What art thou?

Hub. Of the part of England.

Bast. Whither dost thou go?

Hub. What's that to thee? why may not I demand
Of thine affairs, as well as thou of mine?

Bast. Hubert, I think.

Hub. Thou hast a perfect¹ thought:
I will, upon all hazards, well believe
Thou art my friend, that know'st my tongue so well.
Who art thou?

Bast. Who thou wilt: and, if thou please,
Thou may'st befriend me so much as to think
I come one way of the Plantagenets.²

Hub. Unkind remembrance!³ thou, and endless night,
Have done me shame: — brave soldier, pardon me,
That any accent breaking from thy tongue
Should scape the true acquaintance of mine ear.

Bast. Come, come; sans compliment,⁴ what news abroad?

Hub. Why, here walk I, in the black brow of night,
To find you out.

Bast. Brief then; and what's the news?

Hub. O! my sweet Sir, news fitting to the night,
Black, fearful, comfortless, and horrible.

Bast. Show me the very wound of this ill news:
I am no woman; I'll not swoond⁵ at it.

Hub. The king, I fear, is poison'd by a monk:

I left him almost speechless, and broke out
To acquaint you with this evil, that you might
The better arm you to the sudden time,
Than if you had at leisure⁶ known of this.

Bast. How did he take it? who did taste⁷ to him?

Hub. A monk, I tell you; a resolved villain,
Whose bowels suddenly burst out:⁸ the king
Yet speaks, and, peradventure, may recover.

Bast. Whom didst thou leave to tend his majesty?

Hub. Why, know you not? the lords are all come back,

And brought prince Henry in their company;
At whose request the king hath pardon'd them,
And they are all about his majesty.

Bast. Withhold thine indignation, mighty heaven,
And tempt us not to bear above our power!⁹

I'll tell thee, Hubert, half my power this night,
Passing these flats,¹⁰ are taken by the tide;

These Lincoln washes have devoured them:

Myself, well mounted, hardly have escap'd.

Away, before! conduct me to the king;

I doubt,¹¹ he will be dead or e'er I come. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.

The Orchard of Swinstead Abbey.

Enter Prince HENRY, SALISBURY, and BIGOT.

P. Hen. It is too late: the life of all his blood
Is touch'd corruptibly;¹ and his pure brain²
(Which some suppose the soul's frail dwelling-house)
Doth, by the idle comments that it makes,
Foretell the ending of mortality.

Enter PEMBROKE.

Pem. His highness yet doth speak; and holds belief,
That being brought into the open air, sie die zerfetzten Fahnen auf dem Schlachtfeld aufrollten. 3) Vgl. A. 5, Sc. 3, Anm. 3. 4) Die Nacht selbst wird als die ungeschickt hereintappende Störerin bezeichnet. So in Romeo and Juliet (A. 2, Sc. 2) What man art thou, that, thus bescreen'd in night, || So stumblest on my counsel? 5) Hütet Eure Posten.

1) perfect = seiner Sache gewiss, sicher. — thought bezieht sich auf das vorhergehende think. 2) Humorstische Anspielung auf die Abstammung des Bastards: Ich komme gewissermassen von den Plantagenets her. 3) Hubert beklagt sein schwaches Gedächtniss, das, unfreundlich, ihn seinen alten Bekannten nicht hat erkennen lassen. — endless night, wofür die meisten Hgg. mit Theobald eyeless night lesen, ist nicht so sehr die lange Nacht, sondern bezeichnet, wie unser »unendlich« und wie eternal bei Sh. in Julius Cæsar (A. 1, Sc. 2) und in Othello (A. 4, Sc. 2) in allgemeinerem Sinne: die tiefe, dunkle, grenzenlose Nacht. 4) sans = without, wendet Sh. sowohl in ernstem, wie in komischem Sinne an. 5) to swoond oder swoound ist das Sh.'sche Wort für das moderne to swoon. 6) at leisure = mit Musse, zu gelegener Zeit, ist der Gegensatz zu sudden time = der plötzliche Drang des Augenblicks. 7) to taste to = Einem vorkosten. Im alten K. John, wo das hier nur Berichtete auf der Scene dargestellt wird, sagt Johann zu dem Mönche, der ihm zum Willkomm den Becher credenzt: Begin, monk, and report hereafter, thou wast taster to a king. 8) d. h. in Folge des genossenen Gifts. 9) Führe uns nicht in Versuchung, indem Du uns mehr tragen lässtest, als wir vermögen. 10) these flats sind die gleich nachher genannten Lincoln washes = die flachen und morastigen Küsten von Lincolnshire, welche zur Fluthzeit tief unter Wasser stehen. 11) to doubt = besorgen, fürchten.

1) corruptibly = ansteckend, mit Ansteckung. — Die Adjective auf -ible haben bei Sh. öfter die Bedeutung der jetzigen Adjective auf -ive. So steht in Lucrece plausibly für plausively. 2) pure brain = das Gehirn, das sonst klar ist. — idle comments = faselnde, irre Deutungen oder Bemerkungen, die vom Gehirn gebildet

It would allay the burning quality
Of that fell poison which assaileth him.

P. Hen. Let him be brought into the orchard here. —
Doth he still rage? [Exit BIGOT.]

Pem. He is more patient
Than when you left him: even now he sung.

P. Hen. O vanity of sickness! fierce extremes
In their continuance will not feel themselves.
Death, having prey'd upon the outward parts,
Leaves them, invisible;³ and his siege is now
Against the mind, the which he pricks and wounds
With many legions of strange fantasies,
Which, in their throng and press to that last hold,
Confound themselves. 'T is strange that death should sing.

I am the cygnet⁴ to this pale faint swan,
Who chants a doleful hymn to his own death,
And, from the organ-pipe of frailty, sings
His soul and body to their lasting rest.

Sal. Be of good comfort, prince; for you are born
To set a form upon that indigest,⁵
Which he hath left so shapeless and so rude.

*Re-enter BIGOT and Attendants, who bring in King
JOHN in a chair.*⁶

K. John. Ay, marry, now my soul hath elbow-room:
It would not out at windows, nor at doors.
There is so hot a summer in my bosom,
That all my bowels crumble up to dust:
I am a scribbled form, drawn with a pen
Upon a parchment, and against this fire
Do I shrink up.

P. Hen. How fares your majesty?

K. John. Poison'd. — ill fare; — dead, forsook, cast off:
And none of you will bid the winter come,
To thrust his icy fingers in my maw;
Nor let my kingdom's rivers take their course
Through my burn'd bosom; nor entreat the north
To make his bleak winds kiss my parched lips,
And comfort me with cold. — I do not ask you much:
I beg cold comfort;⁷ and you are so strait,⁸
And so ingrateful, you deny me that.

P. Hen. O, that there were some virtue in my tears,
That might relieve you!

K. John. The salt in them is hot.
Within me is a hell; and there the poison
Is, as a fiend, confin'd to tyrannize
On unreprieveable-condemned⁹ blood.

Enter the Bastard.

Bast. O! I am scalded with my violent motion,
And spleen of speed¹⁰ to see your majesty.

K. John. O cousin! thou art come to set mine eye:
The tackle of my heart is crack'd and burn'd;
And all the shrouds, wherewith my life should sail,
Are turned to one thread, one little hair:
My heart hath one poor string to stay it by,
Which holds but till thy news be uttered,
And then all this thou seest is but a clod,
And module¹¹ of confounded royalty.

Bast. The Dauphin is preparing hitherward,
Where heaven he knows how we shall answer him:
For, in a night, the best part of my power,
As I upon advantage¹² did remove,
Were in the washes,¹³ all unwarily,
Devoured by the unexpected flood. [The King dies.]

Sal. You breathe these dead news¹⁴ in as dead an
ear. —

My liege! my lord! — But now a king, now thus.

P. Hen. Even so must I run on, and even so stop.
What surety of the world, what hope, what stay,
When this was now a king, and now is clay?

Bast. Art thou gone so? I do but stay behind,
To do the office for thee of revenge,
And then my soul shall wait on thee to heaven,
As it on earth hath been thy servant still. —
Now, now, you stars,¹⁵ that move in your right spheres,
Where be your powers? Show now your mended faiths,
And instantly return with me again,
To push destruction, and perpetual shame,
Out of the weak door of our fainting land.
Straight let us seek, or straight we shall be sought:
The Dauphin rages at our very heels.

Sal. It seems you know not then so much as we.
The cardinal Pandulph is within at rest.

Who half an hour since came from the Dauphin,
And brings from him such offers of our peace,
As we with honour and respect may take,
With purpose presently to leave this war.

Bast. He will the rather do it, when he sees Ourselves well sinewed to our defence.

Sal. Nay, it is in a manner done already;
For many carriages he hath despatch'd
To the sea-side, and put his cause and quarrel
To the disposing of the cardinal:
With whom yourself, myself, and other lords, werden. 3) invisible bezieht sich, vielleicht adverbial (vgl. unten Anm. 9 dieser Scene), auf death: Der Tod selbst wird unsichtbar, indem er sich von den äussern Theilen, an denen er bisher zehrte, auf die innern zurückzieht und den Geist angreift. Auf diesen letzten Halt, den Geist, dringen dann die Massen seltsamer Phantasieen ein, und vernichten einander in diesem Gedränge. — Für mind, Rowe's Emendation, hat die Fol. wind. 4) So verbesserte Rowe das sinnlose Symet der Fol. 5) indigest = wirre Masse, kommt als Substantiv kaum anderswo vor; als Adjectiv = wüst, formlos, hat Sh. das Wort in den Sonnets (114) und in K. Henry VI. Third Part (A. 5, Sc. 6). In dem Gedicht Ghost of K. Richard III. kommt ebenfalls chaos indigest vor. 6) Die alte Bühnenweisung ist einfach: John brought in. 7) cold comfort ist = kalter, nicht erwärmender Trost, und zugleich = Erquickung, welche die Kälte dem fieberheissen Könige gewähren würde. 8) strait = engherzig, eng von Gesinnung. 9) Das Adjectiv ist ein Compositum. — Sh. gebraucht die adjectivische Form auf —ble öfter im Sinne der adverbialen auf —bly. So in Winter's Tale (A. 3, Sc. 2) damnable ingrateful. 10) spleen of speed = Hitze der Eile. Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 2, Anm. 29. 11) module = model, die Form, in der einst die jetzt vernichtete Majestät gebildet lag. — Malone fasst es dagegen = Abbild. 12) Da sich eine günstige Gelegenheit darbot. 13) Vgl. KING RICHARD II.

Einleitung.

Die erste Ausgabe von Shakspeare's King Richard II. erschien im Jahre 1597 unter folgendem Titel: The Tragedie of King Richard the second. As it hath beene publikely acted by the right Honourable the Lorde Chamberlaine his Seruants. London. Printed by Valentine Simmes for Andrew Wise and are to be sold at his shop in Paules church yard at the signe of the Angel, 1597. — Der Verleger hatte am 29. August des genannten Jahres das Buch in die Stationers' Register eintragen lassen. — Diese älteste Quartausgabe (Q. A.) zeichnet sich vor den übrigen, denen sie zu Grunde liegt, durch grössere Correctheit aus. — Erst die zweite Ausgabe (Q. B.) vom Jahre 1598 fügt auf dem Titelblatte dem Namen der Shakspeare'schen Schauspielergesellschaft auch den Namen des Verfassers hinzu: By William Shakspeare. — Die folgenden beiden Quartos, vom Jahre 1608 und 1615 (Q. C. und Q. D.), bringen auf dem Titel die Notiz: With new additions of the Parliament Scene and the deposing of King Richard, und enthalten wirklich im vierten Act etwa anderthalb hundert auf Richard's Absetzung bezügliche Zeilen, welche zur Beeinträchtigung des innern Zusammenhangs wie des ganzen Dramas in den beiden ersten Quartos fehlen; ohne Zweifel, weil auch auf der Bühne diese Scene, obwohl nothwendig vom Dichter zugleich mit den übrigen geschrieben, nicht aufgeführt werden durfte, so lange die Königin Elisabeth regierte. — In die Gesammtausgabe der Shakspeare'schen Dramen in Folio (1623) ist dies Schauspiel aus der vierten Quarto übergegangen, mit einigen Kürzungen im Hinblick auf die Bühnendarstellung und mit Benutzung handschriftlicher Verbesserungen, die sich jedoch, wie auch die Varianten der verschiedenen Quartos, nur auf einzelne Wörter erstrecken. Die Folio, in welcher The life and death of King Richard the Second als zweites Drama in der Reihe der Histories steht, verzeichnet zuerst die Angabe der Acte und Scenen, die in den Quartausgaben fehlt.

Eine nähere chronologische Notiz als die Erscheinung der ersten Ausgabe im Jahre 1597 liegt nicht vor, doch machen innere Gründe es wahrscheinlich, dass King Richard II. nicht sehr lange vor dem Drucke geschrieben und aufgeführt war, vielleicht in unmittelbarem Anschluss an King John, mit dem es in Styl und Vers nahe verwandt ist. Jedenfalls gehört es der mittleren Periode unseres Dichters an, welche den mit diesem Drama eröffneten, mit King Henry V. sich abschliessenden, zweiten Cyklus der historischen Schauspiele Shakspeare's in sich begreift. Dass der Plan zu diesem ganzen Cyklus, in seinen allgemeinen Umrissen wenigstens, dem Verfasser schon vorschwebte, als er King Richard II. entwarf, ergiebt sich theils aus einzelnen Stellen (z. B. A. 5, Sc. 3), die nur im Zusammenhange mit den folgenden Dramen ihr rechtes Licht erhalten, theils auch daraus, dass, im Widerspruch mit dem Titel des Dramas in der Folio, nicht das Leben Richard's II., sondern nur sein Sturz und Tod und die Thronbesteigung seines Nachfolgers den eigentlichen Stoff des Schauspiels bildet. Demgemäss hat Shakspeare in seiner namhaftesten Quelle, Holinshed's History of England, mit Uebergang der früheren nur die Darstellung der beiden letzten Regierungsjahre Richard's mit Hinzuziehung des ersten Regierungsjahrs Heinrich's IV. benutzt. In welcher Weise der Dichter seinem Chronisten gefolgt ist, werden einige Auszüge mit Hinweisung auf die entsprechenden Acte und Scenen am besten darthun.

Zu A. 1, Sc. 1. Die gegenseitigen Beschuldigungen Bolingbroke's und Norfolk's berichtet Holinshed so: It so fell out that in this parliament holden at Shrewsbury, Henry duke of Hereford accused Thomas Mowbray duke of Norfolk of certain words which he should utter in talk had betwixt them, as they rode together lately before betwixt London and Brainford, sounding highly to the king's dishonour. And for further proof thereof he presented a supplication to the king, wherein he appealed the duke of Norfolk, in field of battle, for a traitor false and disloyal to the king: which done, the duke of Norfolk took upon him to answer it, declaring that whatsoever the duke of Hereford had said against him other than well, he lied falsely like an untrue knight as he was. And when the king asked the duke of Hereford what he said to it, he taking his hood off his head, said: „My sovereign lord, even as the supplication which I took you importeth, right so I say for truth that Thomas Mowbray is a traitor, false and disloyal to your royal majesty, your crown and to all the states of your realm.“ — Then the duke of Hereford being asked what he said to this, he answered: „Right dear lord, with your favour that I make answer unto your cousin here, I say, your reverence saved, that Henry of Lancaster duke of Hereford like a false and disloyal traitor as he is, doth lie in that he hath or shall say of me otherwise than well.“ — Die einzelnen Beschuldigungen Bolingbroke's werden dann bei einer ferner anberaumten Zusammenkunft in Windsor durch den Mund eines Ritters so angegeben: „Likewise the duke of Hereford saith, and I say for him that Thomas Mowbray duke of Norfolk hath received eight thousand nobles to pay the soldiers that keep your town of Calais, which he hath not done as he ought; and further more the said duke of Norfolk hath been the occasion of all the treason that hath been contrived in your realm for the space of eighteen years; and by his false suggestions and malicious counsel he hath caused to die and to be murdered your right dear uncle, the duke of Gloucester, son to King Edward."

Zu A. 1, Sc. 3. Der Zweikampf bei Coventry, dessen Unterbrechung durch den König, und die von ihm verhängte Verbannung der beiden Gegner hat Holinshed wie Shakspeare: The duke of Aumerle, that day, being high constable of England, and the duke of Surrey, marshal, placed themselves between them, well armed and appointed; and when they saw their time, they first entered into the lists with a great company of men apparelled in silk sendall, embroidered with silver, both richly and curiously, every man having a tipped staff to keep the field in order. About the hour of prime came to the barriers of the lists, the duke of Hereford, mounted on a white courser barded with green and blue velvet, embroidered sumptuously with swans and antelopes of goldsmith's work, armed at all points. The constable and marshal came to the barriers, demanding of him what he was, he answered: "I am Henry of Lancaster duke of Hereford, which am come hither to do mine endeavour against Thomas Mowbray duke of Norfolk, as a traitor untrue to God, the king, his realm, and me." Then, incontinently, he sware upon the holy evangelists, that his quarrel was true and just, and upon that point he required to enter the lists. Then he put by his sword, which before he held naked in his hand, and, putting down his visor, made a cross on his horse, and with spear in hand entered into the lists, and descended from his horse, and set him down in a chair of green velvet, at the one end of the lists, and there reposed himself, abiding the coming of his adversary.

Soon after him, entered into the field with great triumph, King Richard, accompanied with all the peers of the realm, and in his company was the Earl of St. Paul, which was come out of France in post to see this challenge performed. The king had there above ten thousand men in armour, least some fray or tumult might rise amongst his nobles, by quarrelling or partaking. When the king was set in his seat, which was richly hanged and adorned, a king-at-arms made open proclamation, prohibiting all men, in the name of the king, and of the high constable and marshal, to enterprise or attempt to approach, or touch any part of the lists upon pain of death, except such as were appointed to order or marshal the field. The proclamation ended, another herald cried: "Behold here Henry of Lancaster duke of Hereford appellant, which is entered into the lists royal to do his devoir against Thomas Mowbray duke of Norfolk defendant, upon pain to be found false and recreant."

The duke of Norfolk hovered on horseback at the entrance of the lists, his horse being barded with crimson velvet, embroidered richly with lions of silver and mulberry trees; and when he had made his oath before the constable and marshal that his quarrel was just and true, he entered the field manfully, saying aloud: "God aid him that hath the right," and then he departed from his horse, and sate him down in his chair, which was of crimson velvet, curtained about with white and red damask. The lord marshal viewed their spears, to see that they were of equal length, and delivered the one spear himself to the duke of Hereford, and sent the other unto the duke of Norfolk by a knight. Then the herald proclaimed that the traverses and chairs of the champions should be removed, commanding them on the king's behalf to mount on horseback, and address themselves to the battle and combat.

The duke of Hereford was quickly horsed, and closed his beaver, and cast his spear into the rest, and when the trumpet sounded, set forward courageously towards his enemy, six or seven paces. The duke of Norfolk was not fully set forward, when the king cast down his warder, and the heralds cried, "Ho, ho!" Then the king caused their spears to be taken from them, and commanded them to repair again to their chairs, where they remained two long hours, while the king and his council deliberately consulted what order was best to be had in so weighty a cause. Finally after they had devised and fully determined that should be done therein, the heralds cried silence; and Sir John Bushy, the king's secretary, read the sentence and determination of the king and his council, in a long roll, the effect whereof was, that Henry duke of Hereford should within fifteen days depart out of the realm, and not to return before the term of ten years were expired, except by the king he should be repealed again, and this upon pain of death; and that Thomas Mowbray duke of Norfolk, because he had sown sedition in the realm by his words, should likewise avoid the realm, and never to return again into England nor approach the borders or confines thereof, upon pain of death.

Zu A. 2, Sc. 1. Die Scene an Gaunt's Sterbebett ist Shakspeare's freie Schöpfung. Dagegen sind die folgenden Gewaltthätigkeiten Richard's, die Beeinträchtigung des verbannten Bolingbroke u. s. w., aus Holinshed entlehnt, der so erzählt: The death of this duke gave occasion of encreasing more hatred in the people of this realm toward the king, for he seized into his hands all the goods that belonged to him, and also received all the rents and revenues of his lands, which ought to have descended unto the duke of Hereford, by lawful inheritance, in revoking his letters patents, which he had granted to him before, by virtue whereof he might make his attornies general to sue livery for him, of any manner of inheritances or possessions that might from thenceforth fall unto him, and that his homage might be respited with making reasonable fine: whereby it was evident that the king meant his utter undoing. This hard dealing was much disliked of the nobility and cried out against of the meaner sort; but namely the duke of York was therewith sore moved, who before this time had borne things with so patient a mind as he could, though the same touched him very near, as the death of his brother, the duke of Gloucester, the banishment of his nephew, the said duke of Hereford, and other more injuries in great number, which for the slippery youth of the king, he passed over for the time and did forget as well as he might.

Zu A. 2, Sc. 4. Von der in Wales durch Salisbury zusammengebrachten Truppenmacht sagt der Chronist: But when they missed the king, there was about spread amongst them that the king was surely dead.

which wrought such an impression and evil disposition in the minds of the Welshmen and others that for any persuasion which the earl of Salisbury might use, they would not go forth with him till they saw the king; only they were contented to stay fourteen days to see if he should come or not; but when he came not, they would no longer abide, but scaled and departed away.

Zu A. 3, Sc. 3. Dem Schlusse dieser Scene entspricht bei Holinshed Folgendes: Forthwith as the duke got sight of the king, he shewed a reverend duty, as became him, in bowing his knee; and, coming forward, did so likewise the second and third time, till the king took him by the hand, and lift him up, saying, „Dear cousin, ye are welcome.“ The duke, humbly thanking him, said, „My sovereign lord and king, the cause of my coming at this present, is (your honor saved) to have again restitution of my person, my lands, and heritage, through your favourable license.“ The king hereunto answered, „Dear cousin, I am ready to accomplish your will, so that ye may enjoy all that is yours, without exceptoin.“

Zu A. 4, Sc. 1. Bagot's und Fitzwater's Anklagen gegen Aumerle hat Holinshed an einer spätern Stelle in der Regierungsgeschichte von Heinrich IV. Folgende Bruchstücke sind u. A. von Shakspeare ziemlich genau benutzt worden: *There was also contained in the said bill that Bagot had heard the duke of Aumerle say that he had rather than twenty thousand pounds, that the duke of Hereford were dead, not for any fear he had of him, but for the trouble and mischief that he was like to procure within the realm. — The lord Fitzwater herewith rose up and said to the king, that where the duke of Aumerle excuseth himself of the duke of Gloucester's death, „I say,“ quoth he, „that he was the very cause of his death;“ and so he appealed him of treason, offering by throwing down his hood as a gage to prove it with his body. There were twenty other lords also that threw down their hoods, as pledges to prove the like matter against the duke of Aumerle. — The duke of Surrey stood also up against the lord Fitzwater, avouching etc. etc. — Auch das energische Auftreten des Bischofs von Carlisle berichtet der Chronist erst in der Geschichte von Heinrich IV.: *Whereupon the bishop of Carlisle, a man both learned, wise and stout of stomach, boldly shewed forth his opinion concerning that demand; affirming that there was none amongst them worthy or meet to give judgment upon so noble a prince as King Richard was, whom they had taken for their sovereign and liege lord by the space of two and twenty years and more. „And, I assure you,“ said he, „there is not so rank a traitor, nor so errant a thief, nor so cruel a murtherer, but he shall be brought before the justice to hear his judgment; and will ye proceed to the judgment of an anointed king, hearing neither his answer nor excuse? I say that the duke of Lancaster whom ye call king, hath more trespassed to King Richard and his realm, than King Richard hath done either to him or us.“

Zu A. 5, Sc. 2 und 3. Die Verschwörung, welche unter der Leitung des Abts von Westminster gegen Heinrich IV. zu Stande kam, berichtet Holinshed in ähnlicher Art: *At length by the advice of the earl of Huntington it was devised that they should take upon them a solemn justs to be entertained between him and twenty on his part, and the earl of Salisbury and twenty with him at Oxford, to the which triumph King Henry should be desired, and when he should be most busily marking the martial pastime, he suddenly should be slain and destroyed. — Hereupon was an indenture sextipartite made, sealed with their seals, and signed with their hands, in the which each stood bound to other to do their whole endeavour for the accomplishing their purposed exploit. Moreover, they swore upon the holy evangelists to be true each to other, even to the hour and point of death. — Die Entdeckung des Complots durch die Unvorsichtigkeit Aumerle's erzählt der Chronist ebenso wie Shakspeare: *This earl of Rutland departing from Westminster to see his father the duke of York, as he sat at dinner, had his counterpane of his indenture of the confederacy in his bosom. The father espying it, would needs see what it was, and though the son humbly denied to show it, the father being more earnest to see it, by force took it out of his bosom; and perceiving the contents thereof, in a great rage, caused his horses to be saddled out of hand, and spitefully reproving his son of treason — he incontinently mounted on horseback to ride towards Windsor to the king, to declare unto him the malicious intent of his complices. The earl of Rutland seeing in what danger he stood, took his horse and rode another way to Windsor in post, so that he got thither before his father, and when he was alighted at the castle gate, he caused the gates to be shut, saying that he must needs deliver the keys to the king. When he came before the king's presence, he kneeled down on his knees, beseeching him of mercy and forgiveness, and, declaring the whole matter unto him in order as everything had passed, obtained pardon. Therewith came his father, and, being let in, delivered the indenture which he had taken from his son, unto the king, who thereby perceiving his son's words to be true, changed his purpose for his going to Oxenford, and despatched messengers forth to signify unto the earl of Northumberland his high constable, and to the earl of Westmoreland his high marshal and to other his assured friends of all the doubtful danger and perilous jeopardy.

Zu A. 5, Sc. 4 und 5. Nachdem Holinshed zwei verschiedene Versionen, wie sie über den Tod Richard's im Volke umliefen, gegeben hat, giebt er die dritte Version, welcher Shakspeare gefolgt ist, so: One writer which seemeth to have great knowledge of King Richard's doings, saith that King Henry sitting on a day at his table, sore sighing, said: „Have I no faithful friend which will deliver me of him whose life will be my death, and whose death will be the preservation of my life?“ This saying was much noted of them which were present, and especially of one called Sir Pearce of Exton. This knight incontinently departed from the court, with eight strong persons in his company, and came to Pomfret, commanding the esquire that was accustomed to sew and take the assay before King Richard, to do so no more, saying: „Let him eat now, for he shall not long eat.“ King Richard sat down to dinner without courtesy or assay, whereupon, much marvelling at the sudden change, he demanded of the esquire, why he did not do his duty: „Sir,“ said he, „I am otherwise commanded by Sir Pearce of Exton, which is newly come from King Henry.“ When King Richard heard that word, he took the carving knife to his hand, and stroke the esquire on the head, saying: „The devil take Henry of Lancaster and thee together!“ And with that word, Sir Pearce entered the chamber, well armed, with eight tall men likewise armed, every of them having a bill in his hand. King Richard perceiving this, put the table from him, and stepping to the foremost man, wrung the bill out of his hands, and so valiantly defended himself, that he slew four of those that thus came to assail him. Sir Pearce being half dismayed with it, leapt into the chair where King Richard was wont to sit, while the other four persons fought with him, and chased him about the chamber. And in conclusion, as King Richard traversed his ground, from one side of the chamber to another, and coming by the chair where Sir Pearce stood, he was felled with a stroke of a pollax which Sir Pearce gave him upon the head, and therewith rid him out of life, without giving him respite once to call to God for mercy of his past offences. It is said that Sir Pearce of Exton, after he had slain him, wept right bitterly, as one stricken with a guilty conscience, for murdering him whom he had so long obeyed as king.

Neben der durchgängig zu Grunde gelegten Chronik von Holinshed soll, nach einer Vermuthung von Ch. Knight, Shakspeare auch ein episches Gedicht über die Civil Wars von Samuel Daniel in der Entlehnung einzelner Phrasen benutzt haben. Die Aehnlichkeit zwischen beiden Werken ist nicht sehr auffallend, und da überdies der Theil des Daniel'schen Gedichts, welcher die Schicksale Richard's behandelt, im Jahre 1595 erschien, so bleibt wenigstens die Möglichkeit einer Priorität des Shakspeare'schen Dramas bestehen.

Eben so zweifelhaft erscheint es, ob zwei andre dramatische Behandlungen dieser Geschichte, von denen aus jener Zeit Notizen überliefert sind, dem Drama unseres Dichters vorangingen oder nachfolgten. — Als die von Essex gegen die Königin Elisabeth angezettelte Empörung zum Ausbruch kommen sollte, liess, im Februar 1601, um die Gemüther darauf vorzubereiten, dessen Parteigänger Sir Gilly Merrick von den Schauspielern die Entthronung und Ermordung Richard's II. aufführen. Lord Bacon sagt darüber in Merrick's Process Folgendes: The afternoon before the rebellion, Merrick, with a great company of others, that afterwards were all in the action, had procured to be played before them the play of deposing King Richard the Second; — when it was told him by one of the players, that the play was old and they should have loss in playing it, because few would come to it, there was forty shillings extraordinary given to play, and so thereupon played it was. Und in dem Processe gegen Merrick, wie ihn die State Trials haben, heisst es: The story of Henry IV. being set forth in a play, and in that play there being set forth the killing of the king upon a stage; the Friday before, Sir Gilly Merrick and some others of the earl's train having an humour to see a play they must needs have the play of Henry IV. The players told them that was stale; they should get nothing by playing that; but no play else would serve: and Sir Gilly Merrick gives forty shillings to Phillips the player to play this, besides whatsoever he could get. — Damit stimmt überein, dass Camden in seinen Annals das betreffende Schauspiel exoletam tragediam de tragica abdicatione regis Ricardi Secundi nennt. Alle diese Bezeichnungen passen wenig auf Shakspeare's Richard II., dessen fortdauernde Popularität durch vier auf einander folgende Quartausgaben bezeugt wird, dessen Aufführung zur Zeit der Elisabeth schon im Jahre 1597 mit Auslassung der Anstoss erregenden Absetzungsscene stattgefunden hatte. Wenn Phillips the player in dem Berichte der State Trials auch auf Augustine Philips, einen der Theilhaber des Shakspeare'schen Theaters, sich deuten lässt, so bleibt es doch unausgemacht, ob wirklich die Shakspeare'sche Schauspielertruppe und keine andre es gewesen, mit welcher Sir Gilly Merrick den bedenklichen Handel eingegangen war. Die politische Vorsicht, mit welcher dieselbe Gesellschaft des Blackfriarstheaters gerade die verfängliche Scene vorher bei der Darstellung weggelassen, spricht eher gegen als für die Vermuthung. — Dass dagegen die Shakspeare'sche Truppe zehn Jahre nachher neben dem Shakspeare'schen Richard II. noch ein anderes Drama desselben Titels von unbekanntem Verfasser aufgeführt hat, ergiebt sich aus dem in den Einleitungen zu The Winter's Tale, Macbeth und Cymbeline citirten Tagebuche des Dr. Simon Forman. Es heisst darin unter der Ueberschrift: in Richard II., at the Globe 1611, the 30 of April Thursday folgendermassen:

Remember therein how Jack Straw, by his overmuch boldness, not being politic nor suspecting anything, was suddenly, at Smithfield bars, stabbed by Walworth, the Mayor of London, and so he and his whole army was overthrown. Therefore, in such case, or the like, never admit any party without a bar between, for a man cannot be too wise, nor keep himself too safe.

Also remember how the Duke of Gloucester, the Earl of Arundel, Oxford, and others, crossing the king in his humour about the Duke of Erland (Ireland) and Bushy, were glad to fly and raise a host of men; and being in his castle, how the Duke of Erland came by night to betray him, with three hundred men; but, having privy warning thereof, kept his gates fast, and would not suffer the enemy to enter, which went back again with a fly in his ear, and after was slain by the Earl of Arundel in the battle.

Remember, also, when the Duke (i. e. of Gloucester) and Arundel came to London with their army, King Richard came forth to them and met them, and gave them fair words, and promised them pardon, and that all should be well, if they would discharge their army: upon whose promises and fair speeches they did it; and after, the king bid them all to a banquet, and so betrayed them and cut off their heads, etc., because they had not his pardon under his hand and seal before, but his word.

Remember therein also, how the Duke of Lancaster privily contrived all villany to set them all together by the ears, and to make the nobility to envy the king, and mislike him and his government; by which means he made his own son king, which was Henry Bolingbroke.

Remember, also, how the Duke of Lancaster asked a wise man whether himself should ever be king, and he told him no, but his son should be a king: and when he had told him, he hanged him up for his labour, because he should not bruit abroad, or speak thereof to others. This was a policy in the commonwealth's opinion, but I say it was a villain's part, and a Judas' kiss to hang the man for telling him the truth. Beware, by this example, of noblemen and their fair words, and say little to them, lest they do the like to thee for thy good will.

ACT I.

SCENE I.

London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King RICHARD, attended; JOHN OF GAUNT, and other Nobles, with him.

K. Rich. Old John of Gaunt, time-honour'd² Lancaster, Hast thou, according to thy oath and band,³ Brought hither Henry Hereford⁴ thy bold son, Here to make good the boisterous late appeal,⁵ Which then our leisure would not let us hear, Against the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

Gaunt. I have, my liege.

K. Rich. Tell me, moreover, hast thou sounded him, If he appeal the duke on ancient malice,⁶ Or worthily, as a good subject should, On some known ground of treachery in him?

Gaunt. As near as I could sift him on that argument, On some apparent danger seen in him, Aim'd at your highness, — no inveterate malice.

K. Rich. Then call them to our presence: face to face, And frowning brow to brow, ourselves will hear The accuser, and the accused, freely speak. —

[Exeunt some Attendants.]

High-stomach'd are they both, and full of ire,
In rage deaf as the sea, hasty as fire.⁷

Re-enter Attendants, with BOLINGBROKE and NORFOLK.

Boling. Many years of happy days befall
My gracious sovereign, my most loving liege!

Nor. Each day still better other's happiness;
Until the heavens, envying earth's good hap,
Add an immortal title to your crown!

K. Rich. We thank you both: yet one but flatters us,
As well appeareth by the cause you come;⁸
Namely, to appeal each other of high treason. —
Cousin of Hereford, what dost thou object
Against the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

Boling. First, (heaven be the record to my speech!)

In the devotion of a subject's love,
Tendering the precious safety of my prince,
And free from other misbegotten hate,
Come I appellant to this princely presence. —
Now, Thomas Mowbray, do I turn to thee,
And mark my greeting well; for what I speak,
My body shall make good upon this earth,
Or my divine soul answer it in heaven.⁹
Thou art a traitor, and a miscreant;
Too good¹⁰ to be so, and too bad to live;

Since the more fair and crystal is the sky,
The uglier seem the clouds that in it fly.
Once more, the more to aggravate the note,¹¹
With a foul traitor's name stuff I thy throat,
And wish, (so please my sovereign) ere I move,
What my tongue speaks, my right-drawn¹² sword may prove.

Nor. Let not my cold words here accuse my zeal.

'T is not the trial of a woman's war,
The bitter clamour of two eager tongues,
Can arbitrate this cause betwixt us twain:
The blood is hot that must be cool'd for this.
Yet can I not of such tame patience boast,
As to be hush'd, and nought at all to say.
First, the fair reverence of your highness curbs me
From giving reins and spurs¹³ to my free speech;
Which else would post, until it had return'd
These terms of treason doubled¹⁴ down his throat.
Setting aside his high blood's royalty,
And let him be no kinsman to my liege,
I do defy him, and I¹⁵ spit at him;
Call him a slanderous coward, and a villain:
Which to maintain I would allow him odds,
And meet him, were I tied to run afoot
Even to the frozen ridges of the Alps,
Or any other ground inhabitable,¹⁶
Where ever Englishman durst set his foot.
Meantime, let this defend my loyalty: —
By all my hopes, most falsely doth he lie.

Boling. Pale trembling coward, there I throw my gage,
Disclaiming here the kindred of the king;¹⁷

And lay aside my high blood's royalty,
Which fear, not reverence, makes thee to except:
If guilty dread have left thee so much strength,
As to take up mine honour's pawn, then stoop.
By that, and all the rites of knighthood else,
Will I make good against thee, arm to arm,
What I have spoke, or thou canst worse devise.¹⁸

Nor. I take it up; and by that sword I swear,
Which gently laid my knighthood on my shoulder,
I'll answer thee in any fair degree,
Or chivalrous design of knightly trial:

And, when I mount,¹⁹ alive may I not light,
If I be traitor, or unjustly fight!

K. Rich. What doth our cousin lay to Mowbray's charge?

It must be great, that can inherit²⁰ us
So much as of a thought of ill in him.

Boling. Look, what I said,²¹ my life shall prove it true: —

That Mowbray hath receiv'd eight thousand nobles,²²
In name of lendings for your highness' soldiers,
The which he hath detain'd for lewd²³ employments,
Like a false traitor, and injurious villain.
Besides, I say, and will in battle prove,
Or here, or elsewhere, to the furthest verge
That ever was survey'd by English eye,
That all the treasons, for these eighteen years
Complotted and contrived in this land,
Fetch from false Mowbray their first head and spring.
Further I say, and further will maintain
Upon his bad life to make all this good,²⁴
That he did plot the duke of Gloster's death,²⁵
Suggest²⁶ his soon-believing adversaries,
And, consequently, like a traitor coward,
Sluc'd out his innocent soul through streams of blood:
Which blood, like sacrificing Abel's, cries,
Even from the tongueless caverns of the earth,
To me for justice and rough chastisement;
And, by the glorious worth of my descent,
This arm shall do it, or this life be spent.

K. Rich. How high a pitch his resolution soars!²⁷
Thomas of Norfolk, what say'st thou to this?

Nor. O! let my sovereign turn away his face,
And bid his ears a little while be deaf,
Till I have told this slander of his blood,²⁸
How God, and good men, hate so foul a liar.

K. Rich. Mowbray, impartial are our eyes and ears:
Were he my brother, nay, our kingdom's²⁹ heir,
As he is but my father's brother's son,
Now by my sceptre's awe I make a vow,
Such neighbour nearness to our sacred blood
Should nothing privilege him, nor partialize
The unsteeping firmness of my upright soul.

seiner Herkunft und seines Adels ist er zum Verräther zu gut. 11) note = Kundthung; von Sh. wird das Wort in verschiedenem Sinne für das jetzige notice gebraucht. 12) right drawn erklärt Johnson mit drawn on a right or just cause. — Vielleicht soll es aber = stracks gezogen, sein. 13) to give reins = die Zügel schiessen lassen; to give spurs = anspornen. 14) Die Fol. hat doubly für das doubled der Qs. 15) I fehlt in den Qs. 16) inhabitable = unbewohnbar. In diesem Sinne kommt das Wort auch bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen vor, z. B. in Ben Jonson's Catiline: And pour'd on some inhabitable place. — Dass es aber schon damals auch = bewohnbar, stand, erhellt u. A. daraus, dass Sh. selbst in Tempest (A. 2, Sc. 1) uninhabitable = unbewohnbar, hat. 17) So Q. A.; die andern Qs. und die Fol. lesen allgemeiner of a king. — Drei Zeilen weiter hat die Fol. hath für das have der Qs. 18) Was Du an schlimmeren Beschimpfungen, als ich sie gegen Dich ausgesprochen, Dir nur ausdenken kannst. — worse steht nur in Q. A. Dafür setzt Q. C. spoke, or what thou canst devise; und die Fol. spoken, or thou canst devise. 19) Wenn ich mein Ross besteige für den Zweikampf, möge ich nicht lebendig wieder absteigen. 20) to inherit mit dem Accusativ der Person und of = Jemanden in Besitz von Etwas setzen, Jemanden einer Sache theilhaft machen. — Auch in anderm Sinne gebraucht Sh. to inherit = to possess. 21) So Qs. und Fol., mit Ausnahme von Q. A., welche speak hat. — said geht auf die Beschuldigungen, die er schon früher vorgebracht. Dem entspricht dann später das Präsens besides, I say: was er ausserdem jetzt vorbringt. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 615. 22) noble = Rosenobel, eine Goldmünze, zum Werthe von ungefähr 6 Schillingen. 23) lewd employments = nichtsnutzige Verwendungen. 24) Die Construction ist make good upon his bad life, was zugleich eine Antithese zwischen bad und good bildet. — Zwei Zeilen vorher hat nur Q. A. fetch, die übrigen Qs. und Fol. fetch'd. 25) Thomas Woodstock, Oheim Richard's II., jüngster Sohn Edward's III. 26) to suggest = anstiften, verleiten. 27) Die männliche Entschlossenheit Bolingbroke's ist gleichsam ein in die Luft steigender Jagdfalke. 28) Bolingbroke selbst ist eine Schmach für das königliche Geblüt, dem er entstammt. 29) So die Fol. — Die Qs. my kingdom's. — Zwei Zeilen weiter lassen die Qs. my vor sceptre's aus. 30) Norfolk schickt ihm die Lüge durch die Kehle, aus der sie gekommen war, in das Herz zurück, das sie eronnen hat; er straft ihn auf

He is our subject, Mowbray; so art thou:
Free speech and fearless I to thee allow.

Nor. Then, Bolingbroke, as low as to thy heart,
Through the false passage of thy throat, thou liest.³⁰
Three parts of that receipt I had for Calais,³¹
Disburs'd I duly to his highness' soldiers:
The other part reserv'd I by consent;
For that my sovereign liege was in my debt,
Upon remainder of a dear account,
Since last I went to France to fetch his queen.
Now swallow down that lie. — For Gloster's death,
I slew him not; but to mine own disgrace
Neglected my sworn duty in that case.³² —

For you, my noble lord of Lancaster,
The honourable father to my foe,
Once did I lay an ambush for your life,
A trespass that doth vex my grieved soul;
But, ere I last receiv'd the sacrament,
I did confess it, and exactly begg'd
Your grace's pardon, and, I hope, I had it.
This is my fault: as for the rest appeal'd,
It issues from the rancour of a villain,
A recreant and most degenerate traitor;
Which in myself I boldly will defend,
And interchangeably hurl down my gage
Upon this overweening traitor's foot,
To prove myself a loyal gentleman
Even in the best blood chamber'd in his bosom.
In haste³³ whereof, most heartily I pray
Your highness to assign our trial day.

K. Rich. Wrath-kindled gentlemen,³⁴ be rul'd by me.
Let's purge this choler without letting blood.
This we prescribe, though no physician;
Deep malice makes too deep incision:
Forget, forgive; conclude, and be agreed.
Our doctors say, this is no month to bleed.³⁵ —
Good uncle, let this end where it begun;
We'll calm the duke of Norfolk, you your son.

Gaunt. To be a make-peace shall become my age. —
Throw down, my son, the duke of Norfolk's gage.

K. Rich. And, Norfolk, throw down his.

Gaunt.

When, Harry, when?³⁶

Obedience bids, I should not bid again.

K. Rich. Norfolk, throw down, we bid; there is no boot.³⁷

Nor. Myself I throw, dread sovereign, at thy foot.
My life thou shalt command, but not my shame:
The one my duty owes; but my fair name,
Despite of death that lives upon my grave,³⁸
To dark dishonour's use thou shalt not have.
I am disgrac'd, impeach'd, and baffled here;
Pierc'd to the soul with slander's venom'd spear;
The which no balm can cure, but his heart-blood
Which breath'd this poison.³⁹

K. Rich. Rage must be withstood.
Give me his gage: — lions make leopards tame.⁴⁰

Nor. Yea, but not change his spots: take but my shame,

And I resign my gage. My dear, dear lord,
The purest treasure mortal times⁴¹ afford
Is spotless reputation; that away,
Men are but gilded loam, or painted clay.
A jewel in a ten-times-barr'd-up chest⁴²
Is a bold spirit in a loyal breast.
Mine honour is my life; both grow in one:
Take honour from me, and my life is done.
Then, dear my liege, mine honour let me try;
In that I live, and for that will I die.

K. Rich. Cousin, throw down your gage: do you begin.

Boling. O! God defend my soul from such deep sin!⁴³
Shall I seem crest-fall'n in my father's sight?
Or with pale beggar-fear impeach my height⁴⁴
Before this outdar'd dastard? Ere my tongue
Shall wound mine honour with such feeble wrong,
Or sound so base a parle, my teeth shall tear
The slavish motive of recanting fear,⁴⁵
And spit it bleeding in his high disgrace,⁴⁶
Where shame doth harbour, even in Mowbray's face.

[Exit GAUNT.]

K. Rich. We were not born to sue, but to command:
Which since we cannot do to make you friends,
Be ready, as your lives shall answer it,

die am meisten energische Art Lügen. 31) receipt geht auf die vorher erwähnten eight thousand nobles, die Summe, welche Mowbray erhalten, um sie als Sold an die englische Besatzung in Calais zu vertheilen. — In der folgenden Zeile hat nur Q. A. duly, das in den späteren Ausgg. fehlt. 32) Die Pflicht, den Tod seines Bruders zu rächen. 33) haste = Beschleunigung, wie to haste bei Sh. oft = beschleunigen, beeilen, ist. 34) So die Fol. mit Recht, da der König beide Gegner anredet, wie aus dem folgenden conclude, and be agreed erhellt. — Die Qs. lesen gentleman. 35) In den alten Almanachen wurden bestimmte Jahreszeiten als geeignet für Aderlässe, eine Cur, der sich auch Gesunde periodisch unterzogen, angegeben. — Die Fol. liest no time für no month. 36) Ein Ausruf der Ungeduld = nun? wird's bald? So in Julius Cæsar (A. 2, Sc. 1) when, Lucius, when? — In Qs. und Fol. steht obedience bids zweimal hinter einander. — M. Mason wollte lesen when || Obedience bids etc. 37) d. h. es frommt nichts, zu zögern; es hilft Dir nichts. 38) despite of death = trotz des Todes, gehört zu lives. — that ist das auf name bezügliche Relativpronomen. 39) Das Herzblut Dessen, der diese giftige Verläumdung aussprach. 40) Anspielung auf den goldnen Leopard, den die Norfolks im Wappen führten. — Dass Norfolk trotz des pluralischen leopards in seiner Antwort his spots sagt, ist Sh.'sche Lizenz. 41) mortal times = das irdische Leben, das Leben der Sterblichen. 42) Der sorgsame Verschluss in einem zehnfach verriegelten Kasten deutet auf die Kostbarkeit des Juwels hin. 43) So die Qs. — Die Fol. hat foul für deep, und heaven für God. — Letztere Emendation stammt aus dem Theatermanuscript, da nach einem Statute Jacob's I. aller Missbrauch des göttlichen Namens auf der Bühne verpönt war. Dieselbe Substitution von heaven in der Fol. für God in den Qs. kehrt im Verlauf des Dramas so oft wieder, dass es genügt, hier ein für alle Male darauf hinzuweisen. — In der vorhergehenden Zeile haben die Qs. throw up für throw down der Fol. 44) my height = meine Grösse, die hohe Stellung, die ich kraft meiner Abstammung einnehme. — Für beggar-fear = bettelhafte Furcht, die Lesart der Q. A. und der Fol., haben die andern Qs. beggar face. 45) Seine Zunge würde, wenn er sich zum Widerruf entschliesse, das niedrige Organ seiner Furcht sein. — In diesem Sinne steht motive auch in All's well that ends well (A. 4, Sc. 4) As it hath fated her to be my motive, || And helper to a husband. 46) in his high disgrace bezieht sich auf it; das folgende where shame etc. hängt von Mowbray's face ab.

At Coventry, upon Saint Lambert's day.
There shall your swords and lances arbitrate
The swelling difference of your settled hate.
Since we cannot atone you, we shall see⁴⁷
Justice design the victor's chivalry. —
Lord marshal, command our officers-at-arms⁴⁸
Be ready to direct these home-alarms.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The Same. A Room in the Duke of LANCASTER'S Palace.

Enter GAUNT and Duchess of GLOSTER.

Gaunt. Alas! the part I had in Gloster's blood¹
Doth more solicit me than your exclams,
To stir against the butchers of his life.
But since correction lieth in those hands,
Which made the fault² that we cannot correct,
Put we our quarrel to the will of heaven;
Who, when they see³ the hours ripe on earth,
Will rain hot vengeance on offenders' heads.

Duch. Finds brotherhood in thee no sharper spur?
Hath love in thy old blood no living fire?
Edward's seven sons, whereof thyself art one,
Were as seven phials of his sacred blood,
Or seven fair branches springing from one root:
Some of those seven are dried by nature's course,
Some of those branches by the Destinies cut;
But Thomas, my dear lord, my life, my Gloster, —
One phial full of Edward's sacred blood,
One flourishing branch of his most royal root, —
Is crack'd, and all the precious liquor spilt;
Is hack'd down, and his summer leaves all vaded,⁴
By envy's hand, and murder's bloody axe.
Ah! Gaunt, his blood was thine: that bed, that womb,
That mettle, that self mould,⁵ that fashion'd thee,
Made him a man; and though thou liv'st, and breath'st,
Yet art thou slain in him. Thou dost consent⁶
In some large measure to thy father's death,
In that thou seest thy wretched brother die,
Who was the model⁷ of thy father's life.

Call it not patience, Gaunt, it is despair:⁸
In suffering thus thy brother to be slaughter'd,
Thou show'st the naked pathway to thy life,
Teaching stern murder how to butcher thee.
That which in mean men we entitle patience,
Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts.
What shall I say? to safeguard thine own life,
The best way is to venge my Gloster's death.

Gaunt. God's is the quarrel; for God's substitute,⁹
His deputy anointed in his sight,
Hath caus'd his death; the which, if wrongfully,
Let heaven revenge, for I may never lift
An angry arm against his minister.

Duch. Where then, alas! may I complain myself?¹⁰

Gaunt. To God, the widow's¹¹ champion and defence.

Duch. Why then, I will. — Farewell, old Gaunt.
Thou go'st to Coventry, there to behold
Our cousin Hereford and fell Mowbray fight.
O! sit my husband's wrongs on Hereford's spear,
That it may enter butcher Mowbray's breast.
Or, if misfortune miss the first career,¹²
Be Mowbray's sins so heavy in his bosom,
That they may break his foaming courser's back,
And throw the rider headlong in the lists,
A caitiff recreant to my cousin Hereford.
Farewell, old Gaunt: thy sometimes brother's wife
With her companion grief must end her life.

Gaunt. Sister, farewell: I must to Coventry.

As much good stay with thee, as go with me!¹³

Duch. Yet one word more. — Grief boundeth where it falls,

Not with the empty hollowness, but weight:
I take my leave before I have begun,
For sorrow ends not when it seemeth done.
Commend me to my brother, Edmund York.
Lo! this is all: — nay, yet depart not so;
Though this be all, do not so quickly go;
I shall remember more. Bid him — O! what? —
With all good speed at Plashy visit me.
Alack! and what shall good old York there see,
But empty lodgings and unfurnish'd walls,¹⁴

47) Q. A. liest we shall see, die übrigen Qs. und die Fol. you shall see. — to design = bezeichnen, kundthun.
48) officers-at-arms sind die zur Ordnung des Zweikampfes bestellten Herolde. — marshal ist vielleicht dreisylbig = marishal zu lesen.

1) Mein Antheil an Gloster's Blut, meine Blutsverwandschaft mit ihm. — Die Qs. haben Woodstock's blood.
Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 25. 2) Gaunt deutet auf die Betheiligung Richard's an dem Morde des Herzogs von Gloster hin. 3) they bezieht sich auf das collectiv gefasste heaven = die himmlischen Mächte. — Die meisten Hgg.
ändern willkürlich he sees. — hours ist hier zweisylbig. 4) So die Fol. von to vade = verschwinden, hin-schwinden, ein auch bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen vorkommendes Wort, z. B. in Spenser's Ruins of Rome, als Reim auf fade: Her power, disperst through all the world, did vade, || To shew that all in the end to nought shall fade. — Die meisten Hgg. lesen mit den Qs. faded. — Nach Sh.'s Lizenz bezieht sich diese Zeile und die folgende auf die zweitvorhergehende One flourishing branch etc., und die dazwischenstehende Is crack'd etc. auf die Zeile
One phial full etc. 5) self mould ist nicht, wie die Hgg. nach dem Vorgange der Fol. thun, als Compositum zu schreiben, sondern self ist adjectivisch = same, also that self mould = ebendieselbe Form. So in Cymbeline
(A. 1, Sc. 7) that self exhibition which your own coffers yield. 6) to consent bezeichnet bei Sh. häufig kein bloss passives, sondern mitwirkendes Einstimmen in Etwas. So in Othello (A. 5, Sc. 2) Did you and he consent in Cassio's death? 7) model = Abbild, Repräsentant. So in K. Henry VIII. (A. 4, Sc. 2) The model of our chaste loves, his young daughter. 8) despair ist hier = Muthlosigkeit, feige Entsagung. 9) Die Fol. hat beide Male heaven's in dieser Zeile. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 43. — God's substitute ist König Richard. S. oben Anm. 2.
— Ebenso in Gaunt's nächster Rede hat die Fol. to heaven. 10) to complain one's self als reflexives Verbum kommt bei älteren Schriftstellern häufig vor. — alas! fehlt in Q. A. 11) Das widowes der alten Ausgg. ist viel-leicht widows' zu lesen. 12) Wenn das Missgeschick den Mowbray bei dem ersten Anlauf im Zweikampf verfehlt, ihm nicht trifft. 13) So viel Gutes bleibe bei Dir, wie mit mir fortgehe. 14) Wände, die nicht mit Tapeten be-hängt sind. — Solche gewirkte Tapeten waren nicht dauernd an den Wänden befestigt, sondern wurden lose an Haken aufgehängt, so oft die Zimmer benutzt werden sollten. 15) offices sind die Räume für die Dienerschaft, für Unpeopled offices,¹⁵ untrodden stones?

 And what hear¹⁶ there for welcome, but my groans?
 Therefore commend me; let him not come there,
 To seek out sorrow that dwells every where.¹⁷
 Desolate, desolate will I hence, and die:
 The last leave of thee takes my weeping eye. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Open Space near Coventry.

Lists set out, and a throne. Herald's etc. attending.
Enter the Lord Marshal¹ and Aumerle.

Mar. My lord Aumerle, is Harry Hereford arm'd?

Aum. Yea, at all points, and longs to enter in.

Mar. The duke of Norfolk, sprightly and bold,
 Stays but the summons of the appellant's trumpet.

Aum. Why then, the champions are prepar'd, and stay
 For nothing but his majesty's approach.

Flourish. Enter King RICHARD, who takes his seat on his throne; GAUNT, BUSHY, BAGOT, GREEN, and Others, who take their places. A trumpet is sounded, and answered by another trumpet within. Then enter NORFOLK, in armour, preceded by a Herald.

K. Rich. Marshal, demand of yonder champion
 The cause of his arrival here in arms:
 Ask him his name, and orderly proceed
 To swear him in the justice of his cause.²

Mar. In God's name, and the king's, say who thou art,
 And why thou com'st thus knightly clad in arms,
 Against what man thou com'st, and what thy quarrel.
 Speak truly, on thy knighthood, and thine oath;
 As so defend thee heaven and thy valour!

Nor. My name is Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk:
 Who hither come engaged by my oath,
 (Which God defend a knight should violate!)
 Both to defend my loyalty and truth
 To God, my king, and his³ succeeding issue,
 Against the duke of Hereford that appeals me;
 And, by the grace of God and this mine arm,
 To prove him, in defending of myself,
 A traitor to my God, my king, and me:
 And, as I truly fight, defend me heaven!

Trumpet sounds. Enter BOLINGBROKE, in armour,⁴ preceded by a Herald.

K. Rich. Marshal, ask yonder knight in arms,
 Both who he is, and why he cometh hither
 Thus plated in habiliments of war;
 And formally, according to our law,
 Depose⁵ him in the justice of his cause.

Mar. What is thy name, and wherefore com'st thou
 hither,

Before king Richard in his royal lists?
 Against whom comest thou? and what's thy quarrel?
 Speak like a true knight, so defend thee heaven!

Boling. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
 Am I; who ready here do stand in arms,
 To prove by God's grace, and my body's valour,
 In lists, on Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk,
 That he's a traitor, foul and dangerous,
 To God of heaven, king Richard, and to me:
 And, as I truly fight, defend me heaven!

Mar. On pain of death no person be so bold,
 Or daring-hardy, as to touch the lists,
 Except the marshal, and such officers⁶
 Appointed to direct these fair designs.

Boling. Lord marshal, let me kiss my sovereign's hand,
 And bow my knee before his majesty:
 For Mowbray and myself are like two men
 That vow a long and weary pilgrimage.
 Then let us take a ceremonious leave,
 And loving farewell of our several friends.

Mar. The appellant in all duty greets your highness,
 And craves to kiss your hand, and take his leave.

K. Rich. We will descend, and fold him in our arms.
 Cousin of Hereford, as thy cause is right,⁷
 So be thy fortune in this royal fight.
 Farewell, my blood; which if to-day thou shed,
 Lament we may, but not revenge thee dead.⁸

Boling. O! let no noble eye profane a tear
 For me, if I be gor'd with Mowbray's spear.
 As confident as is the falcon's flight
 Against a bird, do I with Mowbray fight. —
 My loving lord, I take my leave of you;
 Of you, my noble cousin, Lord Aumerle; —
 Not sick, although I have to do with death,
 But lusty, young, and cheerly drawing breath.

die Aufbewahrung der Lebensmittel und Getränke, sowie für die Zurichtung der Speisen, insofern das nicht in der Küche geschah. 16) Q. A. hat cheere. Indess ist die Lesart der übrigen Qs. und der Fol. hear vorzuziehen, wegen des von Sh. offenbar beabsichtigten Gegensatzes zu dem vorhergehenden see: scil. what shall old York hear there. 17) Da die Trauer überall wohnt, braucht York sie nicht in Plashy, dem Wittwensitze der Herzogin, aufzusuchen. — Whalley wollte interpungiren To seek out sorrow: — that dwells every where.

1) Es war der Herzog von Surrey, der bei dieser Gelegenheit das eigentlich dem Herzog von Norfolk zustehende Amt eines Lord Marschall von England versah. — Vgl. Einleitung pag. 616. 2) Lasst ihn der Ordnung gemäss über die Gerechtigkeit seiner Sache beeidigen. — In des Marschalls folgender Rede hat Q. A. and what thy quarrel, die übrigen Qs. und die Fol. and what's thy quarrel. 3) So die Fol. — Die von den meisten Hgg. adoptirte Lesart der Qs. my succeeding issue kann nach der Construction des Satzes kaum den hineingedeuteten Sinn geben, dass Norfolk seine Ehre für seine Nachkommen bewahren müsse. Vielmehr ist succeeding issue als Drittes mit God und my king coordinirt, da Norfolk seine Treue nicht nur dem jetzigen Könige, sondern auch dessen Nachkommen und Nachfolgern auf dem Throne schuldet. — Auch Dyce und Staunton lesen mit der Fol. and his succeeding issue. 4) Die Qs. haben appellant vor in armour, und vorher beim Auftreten Norfolk's defendant; Beides nach Holinshed's Chronik, welche übrigens erst den Bolingbroke und nach ihm Norfolk in die Schranken treten lässt. 5) to depose = aussagen lassen, vernehmen. Vgl. Anm. 2 dieser Scene. — In den beiden vorhergehenden Zeilen hat die Fol. irrthümlich placed für plated, und formerly für formally. 6) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 48. 7) So die Qs.; die Fol. hat just. 8) So die spätern Qs. und die Fol. — Q. A. und B. haben revenge the dead. 9) Wie bei einem englischen Gastmahl die süßen Leckereien als Nachtschiff zuletzt auf der Tafel erscheinen, so spart Bolingbroke sich den süßesten Abschied, den von seinem Vater, bis zuletzt auf. —

Lo! as at English feasts,⁹ so I regret
The daintiest last, to make the end most sweet:
O thou, the earthly author of my blood, —
Whose youthful spirit, in me regenerate,
Doth with a two-fold vigour lift me up
To reach at victory above my head,
Add proof unto mine armour with thy prayers,
And with thy blessings steel my lance's point,
That it may enter Mowbray's waxen coat,¹⁰
And furbish¹¹ new the name of John of Gaunt,
Even in the lusty haviour of his son.

Gaunt. God in thy good cause make thee prosperous!
Be swift like lightning in the execution;
And let thy blows, doubly redoubled,¹²
Fall like amazing¹³ thunder on the casque
Of thy adverse¹⁴ pernicious enemy:
Rouse up thy youthful blood, be valiant and live.

Boling. Mine innocence,¹⁵ and Saint George to thrive!

Nor. However God, or fortune, cast my lot,
There lives or dies, true to king Richard's throne,
A loyal, just, and upright gentleman.
Never did captive with a freer heart
Cast off his chains of bondage, and embrace
His golden uncontroll'd enfranchisement,
More¹⁶ than my dancing soul doth celebrate
This feast of battle with mine adversary. —
Most mighty liege, and my companion peers,
Take from my mouth the wish of happy years.
As gentle and as jocund, as to jest,¹⁷
Go I to fight. Truth hath a quiet breast.

K. Rich. Farewell, my lord: securely I espy
Virtue with valour couched in thine eye. —
Order the trial, marshal, and begin.

Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Receive thy lance; and God defend the right!¹⁸

Boling. Strong as a tower in hope, I cry, amen.

Mar. [To an Officer.] Go bear this lance to Thomas, duke of Norfolk.

1. Her. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Stands here for God, his sovereign, and himself,
On pain to be found false and recreant,
To prove the duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray,
A traitor to his God, his king, and him;
And dares him to set forward to the fight.

2. Her. Here standeth Thomas Mowbray, duke of Norfolk,

On pain to be found false and recreant,
Both to defend himself, and to approve
Henry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
To God, his sovereign, and to him, disloyal;
Courageously, and with a free desire,
Attending but the signal to begin.

Mar. Sound, trumpets; and set forward, combatants.
[A charge sounded.]

Stay, the king hath thrown his warder down.¹⁹

K. Rich. Let them lay by their helmets and their spears,

And both return back to their chairs again. —

Withdraw with us; and let the trumpets sound.

While we return these dukes what we decree. —
[A long flourish.]

Draw near,

And list, what with our council we have done.

For that our kingdom's earth should not be soil'd

With that dear blood which it hath fostered;

And for our eyes do hate the dire aspect

Of civil wounds plough'd up with neighbours' swords;²⁰

And for we think the eagle-winged pride

Of sky-aspiring and ambitious thoughts,

With rival-hating envy, set on you²¹

To wake our peace, which in our country's cradle

Draws the sweet infant breath of gentle sleep;

Which so rous'd up with boisterous untun'd drums,

With harsh resounding trumpets' dreadful bray,

And grating shock of wrathful iron arms,

Might from our quiet confines fright fair peace,

And make us wade even in our kindred's blood:

Therefore, we banish you our territories: —

You, cousin Hereford, upon pain of life,²²

Till twice five summers have enrich'd our fields,

Shall not regret our fair dominions,

But tread the stranger paths of banishment.

Boling. Your will be done. This must my comfort be:

That sun that warms you here shall shine on me;

And those his golden beams, to you here lent,

Shall point on me, and gild my banishment.

K. Rich. Norfolk, for thee remains a heavier doom,

Which I with some unwillingness pronounce:

to regret ist nicht bloss = wiederbegrüssen, sondern = begrüßen. 10) Dein Segen möge meine Lanzenspitze so stählen, dass sie in Mowbray eindringe, als ob er statt eines Harnisches nur einen Rock von Wachs, nachgiebig und weich wie Wachs, trüge. 11) So die Qs. — Das furnish der Fol. ist wohl nur ein Druckfehler, obwohl to furnish = ausrüsten, ausstatten, gebraucht wird. — Das Bild ist von frisch geputzten Waffen oder Metallplatten mit dem Namen Gaunt's entlehnt. 12) redoubled ist viersylbig = redoubeled zu lesen. — Dieselbe Zusammenstellung in Macbeth (A. 1, Sc. 2) doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe. 13) to amaze = betäuben, ist in der ältern Sprache häufig ein energischerer Ausdruck als jetzt. 14) adverse hat bei Sh. den Ton bald auf der ersten, bald auf der letzten Sylbe. — Die Fol. liest amaz'd für adverse. 15) So Qs. und Fol., von Capell, dem die meisten Hgg. folgen, dem Verse zu lieb in innocency emendirt. 16) more ist eine Wiederholung des comparativischen freer, das doppelsinnig = frei, als Gegensatz zu captive, und = bereitwillig, in Verbindung mit heart, steht. — So in Coriolanus (A. 4, Sc. 5) more dances my rapt heart. Hier begrüsst die Seele gleichsam vor Freude tanzend den Zweikampf, als ob es ein Festmahl wäre. 17) je.t ist jedes Possenspiel, jede Belustigung, namentlich in dramatischer Gestalt oder als Maskerade, wie sie bei Hofe von den Rittern aufgeführt wurden. An letztere scheint Norfolk zu denken. 18) So Q. A. — Die übrigen Qs. und die Fol. lesen thy right, weniger gut, da der Marschall vor der Entscheidung des Zweikampfes sich nicht über das Recht und Unrecht der Kämpfer aussprechen kann. 19) Der König wirft den Feldherrnstab in die Schranken zwischen die beiden Gegner, um den Kampf aufzuhalten. So hat Daniel in seinen Civil Wars: When, lo, the king suddenly chang'd his mind, Casts down his warder, and so stays them there. 20) So die Fol.; die Qs. sword. — Die folgenden fünf Verse fehlen in der Fol. Vielleicht waren sie im Bühnenmanuscript gestrichen, da sie den ohnehin langen Vordersatz in der Rede des Königs übermässig ausdehnen. Man beachtete dabei nicht, dass der Relativsatz Which so rous'd up etc. sich nur auf gentle sleep beziehen lässt. 21) Von Pope willkürlich verändert: set you on. 22) So die Qs.; die Fol.

The sly slow hours²³ shall not determinate
The dateless limit of thy dear exile.²⁴
The hopeless word of — never to return,
Breathe I against thee, upon pain of life.²⁵

Nor. A heavy sentence, my most sovereign liege,
And all unlook'd for from your highness' mouth.
A dearer merit,²⁶ not so deep a maim
As to be cast forth in the common air,
Have I deserved at your highness' hands.
The language I have learn'd these forty years,
My native English, now I must forego;
And now my tongue's use is to me no more
Than an unstringed viol, or a harp;
Or like a cunning instrument²⁷ cas'd up,
Or, being open, put into his hands
That knows no touch to tune the harmony.
Within my mouth you have engaul'd my tongue,
Doubly portcullis'd, with my teeth and lips;²⁸
And dull, unfeeling, barren ignorance
Is made my gaoler to attend on me.
I am too old to fawn upon a nurse,²⁹
Too far in years to be a pupil now;
What is thy sentence then³⁰ but speechless death,
Which robs my tongue from breathing native breath?

K. Rich. It boots thee not to be compassionate:³¹
After our sentence plaining comes too late.

Nor. Then thus I turn me from my country's light,
To dwell in solemn shades of endless night. [Retiring.]

K. Rich. Return again, and take an oath with thee.
Lay on our royal sword³² your banish'd hands;
Swear by the duty that ye owe to God,
(Our part therein³³ we banish with yourselves)
To keep the oath that we administer: —
You never shall (so help you truth and God!)
Embrace each other's love in banishment;
Nor never³⁴ look upon each other's face;
Nor never write regret,³⁵ nor reconcile

This lowering tempest of your home-bred hate;
Nor never by advised purpose meet,
To plot, contrive, or complot any ill,
Gainst us, our state, our subjects, or our land.

Boling. I swear.

Nor. And I. to keep all this.

Boling. Norfolk, so far, as to mine enemy;³⁶
By this time, had the king permitted us,
One of our souls had wander'd in the air,
Banish'd³⁷ this frail sepulchre of our flesh,
As now our flesh is banish'd from this land;
Confess thy treasons, ere thou fly the realm;
Since thou hast far to go, bear not along
The clogging burden of a guilty soul.

Nor. No, Bolingbroke; if ever I were traitor,
My name be blotted from the book of life,
And I from heaven banish'd, as from hence.
But what thou art, God, thou, and I do know;
And all too soon, I fear, the king shall rue.³⁸ —
Farewell, my liege. — Now no way can I stray:
Save back to England, all the world's my way.³⁹ [Exit.]

K. Rich. Uncle, even in the glasses of thine eyes
I see thy grieved heart: thy sad aspect
Hath from the number of his banish'd years
Pluck'd four away. — [To BOLINGBROKE.] Six frozen winters spent,

Return with welcome home from banishment.

Boling. How long a time lies in one little word!
Four lagging winters and four wanton springs
End in a word: such is the breath of kings.

Gaunt. I thank my liege, that in regard of me
He shortens four years of my son's exile;
But little vantage shall I reap thereby:
For, ere the six years that he hath to spend,
Can change their moons, and bring their times about,
My oil-dried lamp, and time-bewasted light,
Shall be extinct with age and endless night;

hat pain of death. 23) Die Stunden, wie sie heimlich und verstohlen dahinschleichen. — Einige Hgg. drucken als Compositum sly-slow. In Chapman's Homer steht and those sly hours, || That still surprise at length. — Für sly slow der übrigen alten Ausgg. entlehnt Pope aus der zweiten Folioausg. fly-slow, was auch Staunton adoptirt. 24) dear exile ist eine Verbannung, die dem Verbannten nahe geht. — exile betont Sh. auf der ersten wie auf der zweiten Sylbe. 25) So Qs. und Fol. Vgl. Anm. 22. 26) merit = Lohn. — maim = empfindliche Kränkung, Schaden, der Jemandem zugefügt wird. 27) a cunning instrument ist, wie in Cymbeline (A. 4, Sc. 2) ingenious instrument, = ein sinnreich zusammengesetztes musikalisches Instrument. — Dass Sh. an ein clavierähnliches Instrument denkt, ergiebt sich aus dem folgenden touch = Taste. 28) Die Zähne und die Lippen bilden gleichsam ein doppeltes Fallgitter vor der Zunge, die in fremdem Lande, unter Leuten fremder Sprache sich nicht hervorwagt. 29) Wie ein Kind von der Amme zuerst die Sprache lernt. 30) then fehlt in den Qs. 31) compassionate, von dem substantivischen compassion = Rührung, Mitleid, gebraucht Sh. hier in ungewöhnlichem Sinne = rührend, auf Rührung oder Mitleid berechnet. Es frommt Dir nichts, sagt der König, so kläglich Dich zu geberden. — Theobald vermuthet to become passionate. 32) Der Griff des Schwertes bildet ein Kreuz, auf das sie schwören, wie in Hamlet (A. 1, Sc. 5) die Freunde auf Hamlet's Schwert. 33) scil. our part in your duty: Richard verlangt für sich keine Pflichtergebenheit mehr von den Verbannten. 34) Die Fol. hat hier wie in der folgenden und in der vierten Zeile nor ever. — Doch ist die Häufung der Negationen in Sh.'s Manier. 35) Die gewöhnliche Interpunction write, regret fasst regree als Verbum, also: Ihr sollt nie (einander) schreiben noch begrüßen. Einfacher ist es, regreet = gegenseitige Begrüßung, von write abhängen zu lassen. So in K. John (A. 3, Sc. 1) Unyoke this seizure, and this kind regret. — Die Fol. liest or reconcile. 36) Diese Ellipse, die vielleicht zu erklären ist: so weit hatte ich mit Dir als Feind zu thun, würde durch irgend eine als Bühnenweisung hinzutretende Pantomime Bolingbroke's deutlicher werden, wie denn Hamner In salutation als solche hinzufügt. — Für far, in der alten Orthographie farre, lesen die Qs. und Fol. fare, was Tollet und Collier mit sehr gezwungener Deutung beibehalten. Schon die zweite Folioausg. von 1632 hat farre. — Staunton erklärt den elliptischen Satz: So far as I am now permitted to address an enemy. 37) banish'd ist Apposition zu one of our souls: verbannt aus diesem gebrechlichen Grabe unseres Fleisches. — sepulchre, das sonst bei Sh. die gewöhnliche Betonung hat, ist hier auf der zweiten Sylbe accentuirt, was häufiger bei dem verbalen to sepulchre der Fall ist. 38) scil. what thou art: der König wird es nur zu bald schmerzlich empfinden, was Du bist. 39) Ich kann in keiner Richtung, die ich einschlage, irre gehen, da mein Weg allenthalben hinweist, nur nicht nach England zurück.

My inch of taper will be burnt and done,
And blindfold death not let me see my son.

K. Rich. Why, uncle, thou hast many years to live.

Gaunt. But not a minute, king, that thou canst give:
Shorten my days thou canst with sullen sorrow,
And pluck nights from me, but not lend a morrow;
Thou canst help time to furrow me with age,
But stop no wrinkle in his pilgrimage;⁴⁰
Thy word is current with him for my death;
But, dead, thy kingdom cannot buy my breath.

K. Rich. Thy son is banish'd upon good advice,
Whereto thy tongue a party-verdict gave.⁴¹
Why at our justice seem'st thou then to lower?

Gaunt. Things sweet to taste prove in digestion sour.
You urg'd me as a judge; but I had rather,
You would have bid me argue like a father.⁴²
O! had it been a stranger, not my child,
To smooth his fault I should have been more mild.

A partial slander⁴³ sought I to avoid,
And in the sentence my own life destroy'd.
Alas! I look'd when some of you should say,
I was too strict, to make mine own away;
But you gave leave to my unwilling tongue,
Against my will, to do myself this wrong.

K. Rich. Cousin, farewell; — and, uncle, bid him so;⁴⁴

Six years we banish him, and he shall go.

[Flourish. Exeunt King RICHARD and Train.]

Aum. Cousin, farewell: what presence must not know,
From where you do remain, let paper show.

Mar. My lord, no leave take I; for I will ride,
As far as land will let me, by your side.

Gaunt. O! to what purpose dost thou hoard thy words,

That thou return'st no greeting to thy friends?

Boling. I have too few to take my leave of you,
When the tongue's office should be prodigal
To breathe the abundant dolour of the heart.

Gaunt. Thy grief is but thy absence for a time.

Boling. Joy absent, grief is present for that time.

Gaunt. What is six winters? they are quickly gone.

Boling. To men in joy; but grief makes one hour ten.

Gaunt. Call it a travel, that thou tak'st for pleasure.

Boling. My heart will sigh when I miscall it so,
Which finds it an enforced pilgrimage.

Gaunt. The sullen passage of thy weary steps
Esteem a foil, wherein thou art to set
The precious jewel of thy home-return.⁴⁵

Boling. Nay, rather, every tedious stride I make
Will but remember me, what a deal of world

I wander from the jewels that I love.

Must I not serve a long apprenticeship
To foreign passages, and in the end,
Having my freedom, boast of nothing else
But that I was a journeyman⁴⁶ to grief?

Gaunt. All places that the eye of heaven visits,
Are to a wise man ports and happy havens.

Teach thy necessity to reason thus;

There is no virtue like necessity.

Think not, the king did banish thee,

But thou the king. Woe doth the heavier sit,

Where it perceives it is but faintly borne.

Go, say I sent thee forth to purchase honour,

And not the king exil'd thee; or suppose,

Devouring pestilence hangs in our air,

And thou art flying to a fresher clime.

Look, what thy soul holds dear, imagine it

To lie that way thou go'st, not whence thou com'st.

Suppose the singing birds musicians,

The grass whereon thou tread'st the presence strew'd,⁴⁷

The flowers fair ladies, and thy steps no more

Than a delightful measure,⁴⁸ or a dance;

For gnarling sorrow hath less power to bite

The man that mocks at it, and sets it light.

Boling. O! who can hold a fire in his hand

By thinking on the frosty Caucasus?

Or cloy the hungry edge of appetite

By bare imagination of a feast?

Or wallow naked in December snow

By thinking on fantastic⁴⁹ summer's heat?

O! no: the apprehension of the good

Gives but the greater feeling to the worse:

Fell sorrow's tooth doth never rankle more,

Than when it bites,⁵⁰ but lanceth not the sore.

Gaunt. Come, come, my son, I'll bring thee on thy way.

Had I thy youth and cause, I would not stay.

Boling. Then, England's ground, farewell; sweet soil,
adieu:

My mother, and my nurse, that bears me yet!

Where'er I wander, boast of this I can,

Though banish'd, yet a true-born Englishman.

[*Exeunt.*⁵¹]

SCENE IV.

The Same. A Room in the King's Castle.

Enter King RICHARD, BAGOT, and GREEN, at one door;
AUMERLE at another.

K. Rich. We did observe.¹ — Cousin Aumerle,
How far brought you high Hereford on his way?

40) his pilgrimage, wie in der nächsten Zeile him, geht auf time. — Drei Zeilen vorher hat die Fol. sudden sorrow. 41) In der reiflichen Erwägung über die Verbannung Deines Sohnes gab Deine Zunge auch ihr Votum mit ab; Du stimmtest seiner Verbannung Deinerseits bei. 42) Die Fol. lässt die folgenden vier Zeilen aus. 43) partial slander = die üble Nachrede, dass ich parteiisch sei; eine Verbindung, wie steril curse in Julius Cæsar (A. 1, Sc. 2) und naked frailties in Macbeth (A. 2, Sc. 3). 44) scil. bid him farewell. 45) Die Heimkehr wird gegen die Zeit der Verbannung so glänzend abstechen, wie ein Juwel gegen die Einfassung, welche es trägt. — Die folgenden sechsundzwanzig Zeilen bis zum Schlusse der nächsten Rede Gaunt's fehlen in der Fol., wahrscheinlich weil sie bei der Aufführung weggelassen wurden. 46) journeyman ist hier zweideutig = Tagelöhner, und = Reisender, von journey = Reise. 47) Sieh den Rasen, den Du trittst, für ein mit Binsen bestreutes Prunkgemach (presence) an. — Auf die Sitte, solche Gemächer mit Binsen zu bestreuen, spielt Sh. auch sonst an; z. B. in Romeo and Juliet (A. 1, Sc. 4) let wantons, light of heart, || Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels. 48) measure = ein feierlicher Tanz und die Musik dazu. 49) fantastic heisst der Sommer hier, weil er kein wirklicher ist, sondern nur in der Einbildung besteht. — Für diese Rede und die vorhergehende Gaunt's entlehnte, wie es scheint, Sh. Einzelnes aus Lyly's 1579 erschienenem Euphues, in welchem ein Verbannter ähnliche Trostgründe empfängt und zurückweist. 50) he bites in Q. A., als ob es sich auf sorrow bezöge, während

Aum. I brought high Hereford, if you call him so,
But to the next highway,² and there I left him.

K. Rich. And, say, what store of parting tears were shed?

Aum. 'Faith, none for me;³ except the north-east
wind,

Which then blew bitterly against our faces,
Awak'd the sleeping rheum, and so by chance
Did grace our hollow parting with a tear.

K. Rich. What said our cousin, when you parted with him?

Aum. Farewell:

And, for my heart disdained that my tongue
Should so profane the word, that⁴ taught me craft
To counterfeit oppression of such grief,
That words seem'd buried in my sorrow's grave.
Marry, would the word »farewell« have lengthen'd hours,
And added years to his short banishment,
He should have had a volume of farewells;
But, since it would not, he had none of me.

K. Rich. He is our cousin, cousin; but 't is doubt,
When time shall call him home from banishment,
Whether our kinsman come to see his friends.
Ourself, and Bushy, Bagot here, and Green,⁵
Observ'd his courtship to the common people,
How he did seem to dive into their hearts,
With humble and familiar courtesy;
What reverence he did throw away on slaves,
Wooing poor craftsmen with the craft⁶ of smiles,
And patient underbearing of his fortune,
As 't were to banish their affects with him.
Off goes his bonnet to an oyster-wench;
A brace of draymen bid — God speed him well,
And had the tribute of his supple knee,⁷
With — »Thanks, my countrymen, my loving friends;« —
As were our England in reversion his,
And he our subjects' next degree in hope.

Green. Well, he is gone; and with him go these thoughts.

Now for the rebels, which stand out⁸ in Ireland; —
Expedient manage must be made, my liege,
Ere further leisure yield them further means,
For their advantage, and your highness' loss.

K. Rich. We will ourself in person to this war.

And, for our coffers with too great a court
And liberal largess are grown somewhat light,
We are enforc'd to farm our royal realm,⁹
The revenue whereof shall furnish us
For our affairs in hand. If that come short,
Our substitutes at home shall have blank charters;
Whereto, when they shall know what men are rich,
They shall subscribe them for large sums of gold,¹⁰
And send them after to supply our wants;
For we will make for Ireland presently.

Enter BUSHY.

Bushy, what news?

Bushy. Old John of Gaunt is grievous sick,¹¹ my lord,
Suddenly taken, and hath sent post-haste,
To entreat your majesty to visit him.

K. Rich. Where lies he?

Bushy. At Ely-house.

K. Rich. Now put it, God, in his physician's mind,
To help him to his grave immediately!
The lining of his coffers shall make coats
To deck our soldiers for these Irish wars. —
Come, gentlemen, let's all go visit him:
Pray God, we may make haste, and come too late!

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.

London. An Apartment in Ely-House.

GAUNT on a couch; the Duke of YORK and Others standing by him.¹

Gaunt. Will the king come, that I may breathe my last

In wholesome counsel to his unstaid youth?

York. Vex not yourself, nor strive not with your breath;

For all in vain comes counsel to his ear.

Gaunt. O! but they say, the tongues of dying men
Enforce attention like deep harmony.²
Where words are scarce, they are seldom spent in vain,
For they breathe truth that breathe their words in pain
He that no more must say is listen'd more, es doch auf tooth geht. 51) Johnson wollte hier den ersten Act schliessen; indess haben die Hgg. die alte Sceneneintheilung der Fol. beibehalten.

1) Diese Worte sind an Bagot und Green gerichtet, die den König darauf aufmerksam gemacht, wie Bolingbroke beim Abschiede noch nach Popularität gehascht habe. 2) Wortspiel zwischen high = hochmüthig, und highway, das die alten Ausgg. high way schreiben. 3) Keine Thräne, was mich betrifft. — In den folgenden Zeilen hat die Fol. grew für blew, face für faces, und sleepy für sleeping. 4) that beginnt den Nachsatz und resümiert in sich den ganzen Vordersatz: weil mein Herz verschmähte, dass meine Zunge so das Wort »Lebewohl!« missbrauchen sollte, so lehrte dieses Verschmähen mich die List u. s. w. 5) So liest eine spätere Q. von 1634. Die Fol. hat Whether our kinsman come to see his friends, || Ourself and Bushy: here Bagot and Green. Die früheren Qs. haben bloss Ourself and Bushy. 6) Wortspiel zwischen craft und craftsmen. — Ein ähnliches Wortspiel findet sich in Coriolanus (A. 4, Sc. 6) You and your crafts; you have crafted fair. — Die Fol. hat verkehrt craft of soules. 7) Er machte zum Dank für ihren Segenswunsch ihnen einen Knix, eine Begrüssung, die zu Sh.'s Zeit nicht bloss auf die Frauen beschränkt war. 8) Die im Felde stehen. — expedient manage = rasche Rüstung. 9) Er versteht darunter die Verpachtung der königlichen Einkünfte und Privilegien gegen baare Summen. 10) Reiche Leute sollen eingeschätzt werden auf grosse Geldsummen, die sie zu entrichten haben. 11) very sick in der Fol. — Bushy, what news? fehlt in den Qs., die dafür als Bühnenweisung setzen: Enter Bushy with news. — Zum Schluss dieser Scene steht in den Qs. Amen als zu Richard's letzter Rede gehörig. Staunton setzt dafür: All. Amen, als ob alle Anwesende damit des Königs letzte Worte bekräftigten. — Die Fol. lässt Amen aus, wahrscheinlich auf Veranlassung der Theaterzensur.

1) Enter Gaunt, sicke with Yorke ist die Bühnenweisung der Fol. 2) deep harmony = ernste, feierliche Musik, im Basston gehalten. 3) Die Sonne ist bei ihrem Untergange, die Musik beim Finale zuletzt am

Than they whom youth and ease have taught to glose;
More are men's ends mark'd than their lives before.
The setting sun, and music at the close,
As the last taste of sweets, is sweetest last,³
Writ in remembrance more than things long past.
Though Richard my life's counsel would not hear,
My death's sad tale may yet undeaf his ear.

York. No; it is stopp'd with other flattering sounds,
As praises of his state:⁴ then there are fond Lascivious metres,⁵ to whose venom sound
The open ear of youth doth always listen:
Report of fashions in proud Italy,
Whose manners still our tardy apish nation
Limps after in base imitation.⁶
Where doth the world thrust forth a vanity,
So it be new, there 's no respect how vile,⁷
That is not quickly buzz'd into his ears?
Then all too late comes counsel to be heard,
Where will doth mutiny with wit's regard.⁸
Direct not him whose way himself will choose:⁹
'T is breath thou lack'st, and that breath wilt thou lose.

Gaunt. Methinks, I am a prophet new inspir'd,
And thus, expiring, do foretell of him.
His rash fierce blaze of riot¹⁰ cannot last,
For violent fires soon burn out themselves;
Small showers last long, but sudden storms are short;
He tires betimes that spurs too fast betimes;
With eager feeding food doth choke the feeder:
Light vanity, insatiate cormorant,
Consuming means, soon preys upon itself.
This royal throne of kings, this scepter'd isle,
This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,
This other Eden, demi-paradise,¹¹
This fortress, built by nature for herself,

Against infection,¹² and the hand of war;
This happy breed of men, this little world,
This precious stone set in the silver sea,¹³
Which serves it in the office of a wall,
Or as a moat defensive to a house,
Against the envy of less happier¹⁴ lands;
This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this England,
This nurse, this teeming womb of royal kings,
Fear'd by their breed,¹⁵ and famous by their birth,
Renowned for their deeds as far from home
(For christian service¹⁶ and true chivalry),
As is the sepulchre in stubborn Jewry
Of the world's ransom,¹⁷ blessed Mary's son:
This land of such dear souls, this dear, dear land,
Dear for her reputation through the world,
Is now leas'd out, I die pronouncing it,
Like to a tenement, or pelting farm.¹⁸
England, bound in with the triumphant sea,
Whose rocky shore beats back the envious siege
Of watery Neptune, is now bound in with shame,
With inky blots, and rotten parchment bonds:¹⁹
That England, that was wont to conquer others,
Hath made a shameful conquest of itself.
Ah! would the scandal vanish with my life,
How happy then were my ensuing death!

Enter King RICHARD and QUEEN; AUMERLE, BUSHY,
GREEN, BAGOT, ROSS, and WILLOUGHBY.

York. The king is come: deal mildly with his youth;
For young hot colts, being rag'd, do rage²⁰ the more.

Queen. How fares our noble uncle, Lancaster?

K. Rich. What comfort, man? how is 't with aged Gaunt?

Gaunt. O, how that name befits my composition!

süßesten, wie der letzte Nachgeschmack von Süßigkeiten. — Knight liest nach M. Mason's Vorgange: (As the last taste of sweets is sweetest,) last, und bezieht also last als Verbum auf die Subjecte sun und music. Damit geht indess der von Sh. beabsichtigte Gegensatz verloren. 4) Mit andern Schmeicheltönen, wie mit Lobeserhebungen seiner Herrlichkeit. 5) then knüpft an das Vorige an: dann sind da leichtsinnige, üppige Verse, auf deren Giftlaut u. s. w. — Für fond steht in den spätern Qs. und in der Fol. found, was die Hgg. beibehalten, so seltsam found auch ausgedrückt wäre. Die Emendation fond wird unterstützt durch die Lesart der Q. A.: As praises of whose taste the wise are found, wo found offenbar fond sein soll. So lesen auch die Cambridge Edd., und Lettsom vermuthet th' unwise für the wise, was jedenfalls dem Sinne besser entspräche. 6) Die Nachahmung italienischer Moden verspottet Sh. als eine Thorheit seiner Landsleute auch in Merchant of Venice (A. 1, Sc. 2), wo es von Faulconbridge, the young baron of England u. A. heisst: he bought his doublet in Italy. 7) Wenn es nur neu ist, einerlei wie schlecht es sein mag. — Der Vers bildet eine parenthetisch eingeschobene Apposition zu vanity. 8) Wo das Gelüst sich empört gegen die Erwägung der Vernunft. — will und wit sind gewöhnliche Gegensätze bei Sh. 9) Weise Den nicht zurecht, der seinen Weg selbst sich erwählen will. — whose steht für who his, und ist möglicherweise daraus zusammengezogen. 10) Das jähe, heftige Aufflackern seiner Ausgelassenheit. 11) demi-paradise = eine Art von Paradies, ein anderes oder zweites Paradies. Die Composita mit demi haben bei Sh. oft die Bedeutung: derselben Eigenschaft mit einem Andern theilhaft. So the demi-Atlas of this earth in Antony and Cleopatra (A. 1, Sc. 5). 12) infection ist hier nicht = Pest, für sich allein, sondern, nach dem Sh.'schen Gebrauche der Copula and, in Verbindung mit the hand of war aufzufassen: das pestartige Verderben, das durch den Krieg herbeigeführt wird. — So erklärt, wird die von manchen Hgg. adoptirte Lesart Farmer's infe tion, ein sonst nirgendwo für infestation gebrauchtes Wort, überflüssig. — Die Cambridge Edd. bemerken, dass dieser ganze Passus This royal throne — — stubborn Jewry in der Gedichtsammlung England's Parnassus (1600) als von Drayton verfasst citirt wird. Für infection steht daselbst intestion. 13) Gleichsam ein in Silber gefasster Edelstein. 14) less happier für less happy, wie Sh. more happier für more happy sagt. 15) Gefürchtet vermöge des Geschlechts, dem sie entstammen, berühmt wegen ihrer Geburt. — breed ist das Collective, das den royal kings gemeinsam ist, birth das Individuelle, das jedem Einzelnen zukommt. — Die Fol. liest for their birth. 16) For christian service etc. hängt nicht von renowned, sondern von deeds ab = Thaten, die sie im christlichen Ritterdienst vollbrachten, so weit von Haus, wie das heilige Grab in dem verstockten Judäa. Die Anspielung geht auf die Kreuzzüge, an denen die englischen Könige Theil nahmen. 17) ransom ist hier der Erlöser selbst. 18) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 4, Anm. 9. — pelting = kleinlich, geringfügig, mit verächtlichem Nebensinne. 19) inky blots etc. bezeichnet verächtlich die schriftlichen Verträge, mittelst deren der König sein Reich verpfändet und in Pacht gegeben hatte. 20) to rage steht hier zuerst als transitives Verbum

Old Gaunt,²¹ indeed; and gaunt in being old.
 Within me grief hath kept a tedious fast;
 And who abstains from meat, that is not gaunt?
 For sleeping England long time have I watch'd;
 Watching breeds leanness, leanness is all gaunt.
 The pleasure that some fathers feed upon
 Is my strict fast, I mean my children's looks;
 And therein fasting hast thou made me gaunt.
 Gaunt am I for the grave, gaunt as a grave,
 Whose hollow womb inherits nought but bones.

K. Rich. Can sick men play so nicely²² with their names?

Gaunt. No; misery makes sport to mock itself.
 Since thou dost seek to kill my name in me,
 I mock my name, great king, to flatter thee.

K. Rich. Should dying men flatter with those²³ that live?

Gaunt. No, no; men living flatter those that die.

K. Rich. Thou, now a-dying, say'st, thou flatter'st me.

Gaunt. O! no; thou diest, though I the sicker be.

K. Rich. I am in health, I breathe, and see thee ill.

Gaunt. Now, He that made me knows I see thee ill;
 Ill in myself to see, and in thee seeing ill.²⁴

Thy death-bed is no lesser than thy land,
 Wherein thou liest in reputation sick:

And thou, too careless patient as thou art,
 Committ'st thy anointed body to the cure
 Of those physicians that first wounded thee.

A thousand flatterers sit within thy crown,
 Whose compass is no bigger than thy head;

And yet, incaged²⁵ in so small a verge,
 The waste is no whit lesser than thy land.

O! had thy grandsire, with a prophet's eye,
 Seen how his son's son should destroy his sons,
 From forth thy reach he would have laid thy shame,
 Deposing thee before thou wert possess'd,
 Which art possess'd²⁶ now to depose thyself.

Why, cousin, wert thou regent of the world,
 It were a shame to let this land by lease;

But, for thy world, enjoying but this land,
 Is it not more than shame to shame it so?

Landlord of England art thou now, not king:
 Thy state of law is bondsman to the law,²⁷
 And —

K. Rich. And thou a lunatic lean-witted fool,²⁸

Presuming on an ague's privilege,

Dar'st with thy frozen admonition

Make pale our cheek, chasing the royal blood

With fury from his native residence.

Now, by my seat's right royal majesty,

Wert thou not brother to great Edward's son,

This tongue, that runs so roundly²⁹ in thy head,

Should run thy head from thy unreverent shoulders.

Gaunt. O! spare me not, my brother Edward's son,
 For that I was his father Edward's son.

That blood already, like the pelican,³⁰

Hast thou tapp'd out, and drunkenly carous'd.

My brother Gloster, plain well-meaning soul,

(Whom fair befall in heaven 'mongst happy souls!)

May be a precedent and witness good,

That thou respect'st not spilling Edward's blood.

Join with the present sickness that I have,

And thy unkindness be like crooked age,³¹

To crop at once a too-long withered flower.

Live in thy shame, but die not shame with thee:

These words hereafter thy tormentors be! —

Convey me to my bed, then to my grave:

Love they to live,³² that love and honour have.

[Exit, borne out by his Attendants.]

K. Rich. And let them die, that age and sullens have;
 For both hast thou, and both become the grave.

York. I do beseech your majesty, impute his words

To wayward sickness and age in him:

He loves you, on my life, and holds you dear

As Harry, duke of Hereford,³³ were he here.

K. Rich. Right, you say true: as Hereford's love, so his;

As theirs, so mine; and all be as it is.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

North. My liege, old Gaunt commends him to your majesty.

= in Wuth versetzen, reizen, dann als intransitives = wüthen, toben. 21) Das Wortspiel zwischen Gaunt, dem Beinamen des Herzogs von Lancaster von seinem Geburtsorte Gent, und gaunt = hager, dürr, hat Sh. auch in K. Henry IV. Second Part (A. 3, Sc. 2) wo Falstaff von dem hageren Friedensrichter sagt: I saw it, and told John of Gaunt, he beat his own name. 22) nicely = spitzfindig. 23) Die Fol. lässt with aus. — to flatter with = den Schmeichler bei Jemandem spielen. 24) Das to see fand Steevens, wohl dem Verse zu lieb, überflüssig, so unentbehrlich es auch ist, = ich bin krank in mir selbst anzusehen, und darin krank, dass ich Dich krank sehe. — In der folgenden Zeile hat Q. A. thy land für the land der übrigen alten Ausgg. 25) So die Fol.; die Qs. haben inraged. 26) possessed ist zuerst = in Besitz des Thrones gesetzt, und dann = besessen, verrückt: der Du jetzt so wahnsinnig bist, Dich selbst zu entthronen, indem Du Dein Land verpachtest. 27) Indem Richard seine königlichen Attribute für Geld ausgeliehen hat, steht er nicht mehr als König über Alle da, sondern wie ein gewöhnlicher Grundbesitzer; und der Rang und Besitz, der ihm gesetzlich zukam, ist jetzt den Gesetzen des Pachtverhältnisses unterworfen, wie jeder andere nicht königliche Besitz. — Die Fol. liest art thou, and not king. 28) So die Fol. — Richard muss das thou, das sich auf Gaunt beziehen soll, natürlich selbst aussprechen, während nach der von den Hggn. vorgezogenen Lesart der Qs. Gaunt And thou sagt, und Richard darauf einfallend: A lunatic etc. die von Gaunt gegen ihn gerichteten Beschuldigungen ergänzt, also sich selbst für a lunatic etc. erklärt. 29) roundly = gerade heraus, ohne Umstände. — to run ist erst intransitiv = laufen, rasch gehen, dann transitiv = mit Gewalt oder Eile abreissen, abjagen. 30) Der Vergleich mit dem Pelikan, der sein eignes Blut hergiebt, ist hier so zu verstehen, dass Richard das Blut seines Geschlechts, also nur im weitern Sinne sein eigenes Blut, anzapft. — So auch in K. Lear (A. 3, Sc. 4) 't was this flesh begot those pelican daughters. 31) Wie das gebeugte Greisenalter den alten Gaunt wegrafft, so möge die Härte des Königs dasselbe thun. — crooked age, von der gekrümmten Haltung des Alters, ist ein gewöhnliches Epitheton; so in dem Pseudo-Sh.'schen Lochrine: Now yield to death, o'erlaid by crooked age. 32) Mögen Diejenigen Freude am Leben finden, gern leben, die Liebe und Ehre genießen. 33) In York's Munde ist Harry, duke of Hereford Accusativ: der alte Gaunt liebt Euch nicht weniger als seinen Sohn; Richard fasst es als Nominativ: er liebt mich so sehr, wie sein Sohn mich;

K. Rich. What says he?

North. Nay, ³⁴ nothing; all is said.

His tongue is now a stringless instrument;
Words, life, and all, old Lancaster hath spent.

York. Be York the next that must be bankrupt so!
Though death be poor, it ends a mortal woe.

K. Rich. The ripest fruit first falls, and so doth he:
His time is spent; our pilgrimage must be. ³⁵
So much for that. — Now for our Irish wars.
We must supplant those rough rug-headed kerns,
Which live like venom, where no venom else,
But only they, hath privilege to live. ³⁶
And for these great affairs do ask some charge,
Towards our assistance we do seize to us
The plate, coin, revenues, and moveables,
Whereof our uncle Gaunt did stand possess'd.

York. How long shall I be patient? Ah! how long
Shall tender duty make me suffer wrong?
Not Gloster's death, nor Hereford's banishment,
Not Gaunt's rebukes, nor England's private wrongs, ³⁷
Nor the prevention of poor Bolingbroke
About his marriage, ³⁸ nor my own disgrace,
Have ever made me sour my patient cheek,
Or bend one wrinkle on my sovereign's face.
I am the last of noble Edward's sons,
Of whom thy father, prince of Wales, was first;
In war was never lion rag'd more fierce,
In peace was never gentle lamb more mild,
Than was that young and princely gentleman.
His face thou hast, for even so look'd he,
Accomplish'd with the number of thy hours; ³⁹
But when he frown'd, it was against the French,
And not against his friends: ⁴⁰ his noble hand
Did win what he did spend, and spent not that
Which his triumphant father's hand had won:
His hands were guilty of no kindred blood,
But bloody with the enemies of his kin.
O Richard! York is too far gone with grief,
Or else he never would compare between.

K. Rich. Why, uncle, what 's the matter?

York.

O my liege,

Pardon me, if you please; if not, I, pleas'd
Not to be pardon'd, am content withal.
Seek you to seize, and gripe into your hands,
The royalties and rights of banish'd Hereford?
Is not Gaunt dead, and doth not Hereford live?
Was not Gaunt just, and is not Harry true?
Did not the one deserve to have an heir?
Is not his heir a well-deserving son?

Take Hereford's rights away, and take from time
His charters and his customary rights;
Let not to-morrow then ensue to-day; ⁴¹
Be not thyself; for how art thou a king,
But by fair sequence and succession?
Now, afore God, (God forbid, I say true!)
If you do wrongfully seize Hereford's rights,
Call in the letters-patents that he hath
By his attorneys-general to sue
His livery, ⁴² and deny ⁴³ his offer'd homage,
You pluck a thousand dangers on your head,
You lose a thousand well-disposed hearts,
And prick my tender patience to those thoughts,
Which honour and allegiance cannot think.

K. Rich. Think what you will: we seize into our hands

His plate, his goods, his money, and his lands.

York. I'll not be by the while. My liege, farewell:
What will ensue hereof, there 's none can tell;
But by bad courses may be understood,
That their events can never fall out good. [Exit.]

K. Rich. Go, Bushy, to the earl of Wiltshire straight:
Bid him repair to us to Ely-house,
To see this business. To-morrow next
We will for Ireland; and 't is time, I trow:
And we create, in absence of ourself,
Our uncle York lord governor of England,
For he is just, and always lov'd us well. —
Come on, our queen: to-morrow must we part;
Be merry, for our time of stay is short.

[Flourish. Exeunt KING, QUEEN, BUSHY, AUMERLE,
GREEN, and BAGOT.]

North. Well, lords, the duke of Lancaster is dead.

Ross. And living too; for now his son is duke.

Willo. Barely in title, not in revenue. ⁴⁴

North. Richly in both, if justice had her right.

Ross. My heart is great; ⁴⁵ but it must break with silence,

Ere 't be disburden'd with a liberal tongue.

North. Nay, speak thy mind; and let him ne'er speak
more,

That speaks thy words again to do thee harm!

Willo. Tends that thou 'dst speak to the duke of Hereford?

If it be so, out with it boldly, man;
Quick is mine ear to hear of good towards him.

Ross. No good at all that I can do for him,
Unless you call it good to pity him,
Bereft and gelded of his patrimony.

liebt, also gar nicht. 34) nay fehlt in den späteren Qs. und ist auch im Text vielleicht entbehrlich. 35) our pilgrimage is yet to come, erklärt M. Mason. Vielleicht ist eher spent zu must be zu suppliren. 36) Anspielung auf die Sage, dass St. Patrick Irland von allem giftigen Gewürm befreit habe. Als das einzige Gewürm des Landes betrachtet der König die aufrührerischen irischen Vagabunden und Bauern, die Kerns, die ähnlich wie hier auch anderswo charakterisirt werden. So in K. Henry VI. Second Part (A. 3, Sc. 1) the uncivil kerns of Ireland und like a shag-hair'd crafty kern. 37) Das Unrecht, das England insgeheim und still von Seiten Richard's erträgt. — Vgl. Einleitung pag. 616. 38) Der verbannte Bolingbroke hätte in Frankreich die Tochter des Herzogs von Berry, Oheims des französischen Königs, zur Gattin bekommen, wenn König Richard es nicht zu verhindern gewusst. 39) Als er ausgerüstet war mit der Zahl Deiner Stunden, als er so viele Stunden zählte, wie Du jetzt. — Die Qs. haben with a number. 40) Wortspiel zwischen dem ähnlich klingenden friends und French. 41) Dem Bolingbroke sein väterliches Erbtheil entziehen zu wollen, ist eben so unnatürlich, als wolle man auf den heutigen Tag nicht den morgigen folgen lassen. — his in der vorhergehenden Zeile bezieht sich auf time: die Privilegien und Rechte, die der Zeit angehören. 42) livery ist der lehnsrechtliche Ausdruck für den Anspruch, den ein majorennner Erbe auf die Uebertragung der bis dahin im Namen des Königs verwalteten Lehnsgüter des Erblassers an ihn selbst erhob. Dafür leistete er dann den Huldigungseid, den der König entgegennehmen musste. 43) scil. if you do wrongfully deny. 44) So die Fol.; die Qs. revenues. 45) great = voll, wie great with

North. Now, afore God, 't is shame such wrongs are borne

In him, a royal prince, and many more
Of noble blood in this declining land.
The king is not himself, but basely led
By flatterers; and what they will inform,
Merely in hate, 'gainst any of us all,
That will the king severely prosecute
'Gainst us, our lives, our children, and our heirs.

Ross. The commons hath he pill'd with grievous taxes,
And quite ⁴⁶ lost their hearts: the nobles hath he fin'd
For ancient quarrels, and quite lost their hearts.

Willo. And daily new exactions are devis'd;
As blanks, ⁴⁷ benevolences, and I wot not what:
But what, o' God's name, doth become of this?

North. Wars hath ⁴⁸ not wasted it, for warr'd he hath not,

But basely yielded upon compromise
That which his ancestors ⁴⁹ achiev'd with blows.
More hath he spent in peace than they in wars.

Ross. The earl of Wiltshire hath the realm in farm.

Willo. The king's grown bankrupt, like a broken man.

North. Reproach and dissolution hangeth over him.

Ross. He hath not money for these Irish wars,
His burdenous taxations notwithstanding,
But by the robbing of the banish'd duke.

North. His noble kinsman: most degenerate king!
But, lords, we hear this fearful tempest sing, ⁵⁰
Yet seek no shelter to avoid the storm;
We see the wind sit sore upon our sails,
And yet we strike ⁵¹ not, but securely perish.

Ross. We see the very wrack that we must suffer;
And unavoided ⁵² is the danger now,
For suffering so the causes of our wrack.

North. Not so: even through the hollow eyes of death,
I spy life peering; but I dare not say
How near the tidings of our comfort is.

Willo. Nay, let us share thy thoughts, as thou dost ours.

Ross. Be confident to speak, Northumberland:

We three are but thyself; and, speaking so,
Thy words are but as thoughts: therefore, be bold.

North. Then thus: — I have from Port le Blanc, a bay
In Brittany, receiv'd intelligence,
That Harry duke of Hereford, Rainold Lord Cobham, ⁵³
That late broke from the duke of Exeter,
His brother, archbishop late of Canterbury,
Sir Thomas Erpingham, Sir John Ramston,
Sir John Norbery, Sir Robert Waterton, and Francis
Quint, ⁵⁴

All these well furnish'd by the duke of Bretagne,
With eight tall ships, three thousand men of war,
Are making hither with all due expedience, ⁵⁵
And shortly mean to touch our northern shore.
Perhaps they had ere this, ⁵⁶ but that they stay
The first departing of the king for Ireland.
If then we shall shake off our slavish yoke,
Imp ⁵⁷ out our drooping country's broken wing,
Redeem from broking pawn the blemish'd crown,
Wipe off the dust that hides our sceptre's gilt, ⁵⁸
And make high majesty look like itself,
Away with me in post to Ravenspurg;
But if you faint, as fearing to do so,
Stay and be secret, ⁵⁹ and myself will go.

Ross. To horse, to horse! urge doubts to them that fear.

Willo. Hold out my horse, ⁶⁰ and I will first be there.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The Same. An Apartment in the Palace.

Enter QUEEN, BUSHY, and BAGOT.

Bushy. Madam, your majesty is too much sad:
You promis'd, when you parted with the king,
To lay aside life-harming ¹ heaviness,
And entertain a cheerful disposition.

Queen. To please the king, I did; ² to please myself,
I cannot do it; yet I know no cause
Why I should welcome such a guest as grief, child etc. 46) Pope strich das quite, das nach seiner Annahme aus der folgenden Zeile sich hierher verirrt. Die Wiederholung derselben Phrase ist wesentlicher, als die Regelmässigkeit des Verses. 47) blanks sind weisse Blätter, unter welche die Geistlichen, Edelleute und Gemeinden ihr Siegel setzen mussten und sich so zur Zahlung der nachträglich darüber eingezeichneten Steuern verpflichteten. — benevolences sind die ausserordentlichen Geldbewilligungen, die unter diesem Namen vom Parlamente erzwungen wurden. 48) So Qs. und Fol. nach dem Sh.'schen Gebrauche des collectivem wars als Singular = Heerwesen, Kriegsführung. Auch Staunton liest so; die meisten Hgg. setzen stillschweigend have dafür. 49) So die Fol.; die Qs. haben vor ancestors das müssige Epitheton noble. 50) to sing gebraucht Sh. auch sonst von dem leiseren Sausen, mit welchem ein Sturm sich ankündigt; so in Merry Wives of Windsor (A. 3, Sc. 2) a man may hear this shower sing in the wind. 51) to strike scil. the sails = die Segel streichen. — securely perish = wir gehen zu Grunde, ohne uns in unserer Zuversicht stören zu lassen. 52) unavoided = unvermeidlich. In diesem Sinne gebraucht Sh. die mit un- zusammengesetzten Participia häufig. 53) Malone fügt hierauf folgende Zeile ein: The son of Richard, earl of Arundel, wofür Ritson, in engerem Anschlusse an Holinshed's Chronik, vorschlug: The son and heir of the late earl of Arundel. Eine Vergleichung des Sh.'schen Textes mit seiner chronistischen Quelle macht es allerdings sehr wahrscheinlich, dass hier eine Zeile in den Qs. wie in der Fol. zufällig ausfiel, wenn nicht etwa der Dichter den Holinshed so unaufmerksam gelesen, dass er den Lord Cobham mit dem aus des Herzogs von Exeter Gewahrsam entkommenen Thomas Arundel verwechselt und einen andern Thomas Arundel, den Erzbischof von Canterbury, zu einem Bruder Cobham's gemacht haben sollte. 54) Die Qs. nennen ihn Coines. Die Fol. hat den Namen wie bei Holinshed. 55) expedience ist Sh.'s Wort für das jetzige expedition, in dessen verschiedenen Bedeutungen, hier = Eilfertigkeit. 56) scil. touched it: Vielleicht wären sie bereits gelandet, wenn sie nicht erst die Abreise des Königs nach Irland abwarteten. 57) to imp oder to imp out ist der technische Ausdruck für die künstliche Wiederherstellung des Gefieders bei einem Jagdfalken, wenn dasselbe beschädigt oder zerstört war. 58) gilt ist nicht bloss = Vergoldung, sondern = jedes bearbeitete, zur Verzierung dienende Gold. 59) d. h. verrathet meine Absicht nicht, wenn Ihr hier zurückbleiben wollt. 60) Wenn mein Ross nur den Ritt aushält, will ich zuerst dort sein.

Save bidding farewell to so sweet a guest
As my sweet Richard. Yet, again, methinks,
Some unborn sorrow, ripe in fortune's womb,
Is coming towards me; and my inward soul
With nothing trembles: at something³ it grieves
More than with parting from my lord the king.

Bushy. Each substance of a grief hath twenty shadows,
Which show like grief itself, but are not so.
For sorrow's eye, glazed with blinding tears,
Divides one thing entire to many objects;
Like perspectives,⁴ which, rightly gaz'd upon,
Show nothing but confusion; ey'd awry,
Distinguish form: so your sweet majesty,
Looking awry upon your lord's departure,
Finds shapes of grief more than himself to wail;
Which, look'd on as it is, is nought but shadows
Of what it is not. Then, thrice-gracious queen,
More than your lord's departure weep not: more's not seen;

Or if it be, 't is with false sorrow's eye,
Which for things true weeps things imaginary.

Queen. It may be so; but yet my inward soul
Persuades me, it is otherwise: howe'er it be,
I cannot but be sad, so heavy sad,
As — though, in thinking, on no thought I think⁵ —
Makes me with heavy nothing faint and shrink.

Bushy. 'T is nothing but conceit,⁶ my gracious lady.

Queen. 'T is nothing less: conceit is still deriv'd
From some forefather grief; mine is not so,
For nothing hath begot my something grief;
Or something hath the nothing that I grieve:⁷
'T is in reversion that I do possess;⁸
But what it is, that is not yet known; what
I cannot name: 't is nameless woe, I wot.

Enter GREEN.

Green. God save your majesty! — and well met, gentlemen. —

I hope, the king is not yet shipp'd for Ireland.

Queen. Why hop'st thou so? 't is better hope he is,
For his designs crave haste, his haste good hope:
Then wherefore dost thou hope he is not shipp'd?

Green. That he, our hope, might have retir'd⁹ his power,

And driven into despair an enemy's hope,
Who strongly hath set footing in this land.

The banish'd Bolingbroke repeals himself,
And with uplifted arms is safe arriv'd
At Ravenspurg.

Queen. Now, God in heaven forbid!

Green. Ah! Madam, 't is too true: and that is worse,
The lord Northumberland, his son, young¹⁰ Henry Percy,
The lords of Ross, Beaumont, and Willoughby,
With all their powerful friends, are fled to him.

Bushy. Why have you not proclaim'd Northumberland

And the rest of the revolted faction traitors?¹¹

Green. We have: whereupon the earl of Worcester
Hath broke his staff,¹² resign'd his stewardship,
And all the household servants fled with him
To Bolingbroke.

Queen. So, Green, thou art the midwife to my woe,
And Bolingbroke my sorrow's dismal heir:¹³

Now hath my soul brought forth her prodigy,¹⁴
And I, a gasping new-deliver'd mother,
Have woe to woe, sorrow to sorrow join'd.

Bushy. Despair not, Madam.

Queen. Who shall hinder me?

I will despair, and be at enmity
With cozening hope: he is a flatterer,
A parasite, a keeper-back of death,
Who gently would dissolve the bands of life,
Which false hope lingers in extremity.

Enter YORK.

Green. Here comes the duke of York.

Queen. With signs of war about his aged neck.¹⁵
O! full of careful business are his looks. —
Uncle, for God's sake, speak comfortable words.

York. Should I do so, I should belie my thoughts:¹⁶

Comfort's in heaven; and we are on the earth,
Where nothing lives but crosses, care, and grief.

Your husband, he is gone to save far off,
Whilst others come to make him lose at home:

1) So die beiden ersten Qs. — Aus dem Druckfehler der spätern Qs. half-harming machte die Fol. self-harming. 2) Genau genommen bezieht sich I did auf promis'd, und das folgende I cannot do it auf lay aside etc. 3) something ist das unbestimmte Etwas, das die Königin noch mehr bekümmert, als der Abschied von ihrem Gemahle. 4) perspective, mit betonter erster Sylbe, ist bei Sh. sowohl das Glas, durch das man blickt, als auch das erblickte Bild, Beides mit dem Nebensinn einer optischen Täuschung, die dem Beschauer von verschiedenen Seiten Verschiedenes zeigt. So ist das Auge des Schmerzes, mit dem die Königin den Abschied von ihrem Gemahl anblickt, solch ein optischer Betrug, der ihr den einen wirklichen Schmerz in täuschend vervielfältigter Gestalt zeigt, da sie den Gegenstand verkehrt betrachtet. 5) Johnson verbessert das on thinking der alten Ausgg. in in thinking: obgleich ich beim Denken an keinen bestimmten Gedanken denke. — Diesen unbestimmten Grund ihrer Schwermuth nennt sie dann heavy nothing = ein schwermüthiges Nichts. 6) conceit = Einbildung, Grille. 7) Mein Schmerz, der doch ein Etwas ist, ist entweder von einem Nichts erzeugt, oder das Nichts, das mich traurig stimmt, hat doch ein Etwas in sich. — the nothing that I grieve ist Subject, wozu something das Object bildet. 8) Der Schmerz, von dem die Königin nur ein Vorgefühl hat, ist ein Besitzthum, auf das sie nur eine Anwartschaft hat, ohne dass sie es schon angetreten hätte. 9) to retire = zurückziehen, zurückrufen, hier von den nach Irland bestimmten Truppen. 10) So die Qs.; die Fol. his young son. 11) So die Fol. — Q. A. und B. haben and all the rest; Q. C. und D. lassen all aus und setzen revolting für revolted. 12) d. h. den weissen Stab, den er als Oberhofmeister des königlichen Palastes trug, mit dessen Zerbrechung er andeutete, dass er sein Amt niederlegte. — Für broke der Q. A. haben die übrigen Qs. und die Fol. broke. 13) Ihr Schmerz war bisher ein Embryo, den sie als unbekanntes Etwas mit sich herumtrug; jetzt ist sie unter dem Beistande Green's, der die Hiobspost bringt, davon entbunden, und das zur Welt gebrachte Unglückskind heisst Bolingbroke. — heir = Sohn, gebraucht Sh. auch sonst; so wenn er in der Widmung an den Grafen Southampton sein Gedicht Venus and Adonis als the first heir of my invention bezeichnet. 14) prodigy ist das Ungeheure, das zuerst in böser Ahnung in ihrer Seele lag und jetzt geboren ist. 15) York hat seinen Halspanzer angelegt. 16) Diese Zeile fehlt in der Fol. 17) Die

Here am I left to underprop his land,
Who, weak with age, cannot support myself.
Now comes the sick hour that his surfeit made;
Now shall he try his friends that flatter'd him.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, your son was gone before I came.

York. He was? — Why, so. — Go all which way it will! —

The nobles they are fled, the commons they are cold,
And will, I fear, revolt on Hereford's side. —
Sirrah, get thee to Plashy, to my sister Gloster;¹⁷
Bid her send me presently a thousand pound.
Hold; take my ring.

Serv. My lord, I had forgot to tell your lordship:

To-day, as I came by, I called there;¹⁸

But I shall grieve you to report the rest.

York. What is 't, knave?

Serv. An hour before I came, the duchess died.

York. God for his mercy! what a tide of woes
Comes rushing on this woful land at once!

I know not what to do: — I would to God,

(So my untruth had not provok'd him to it)¹⁹

The king had cut off my head with my brother's. —

What! are there no posts despatch'd for Ireland?²⁰ —

How shall we do for money for these wars? —

Come, sister, — cousin, I would say: pray, pardon me. —

[To the Servant.] Go, fellow, get thee home; provide some carts,

And bring away the armour that is there. —

[Exit Servant.]

Gentlemen, will you go²¹ muster men? If I know

How, or which way, to order these affairs,

Thus disorderly thrust into my hands,

Never believe me. Both are my kinsmen:

The one is my sovereign, whom both my oath

And duty bids defend; the other again

Is my kinsman, whom the king hath wrong'd,

Whom conscience and my kindred bids to right.²²

Well, somewhat we must do. — Come, cousin,

I'll dispose of you. — Gentlemen, go muster up your men,

And meet me presently at Berkley castle.²³

I should to Plashy too,

But time will not permit. — All is uneven,

And every thing is left at six and seven.²⁴

[Exeunt YORK and QUEEN.]

Bushy. The wind sits fair for news to go to Ireland,²⁵
But none returns. For us to levy power,
Proportionable to the enemy,
Is all impossible.

Green. Besides, our nearness to the king in love
Is near the hate of those love not the king.

Bagot. And that 's the wavering commons; for their love

Lies in their purses, and whoso empties them,

By so much fills their hearts with deadly hate.

Bushy. Wherein the king stands generally condemn'd.

Bagot. If judgment lie in them, then so do we,²⁶

Because we ever have been near the king.

Green. Well, I'll for refuge straight to Bristol castle;
The earl of Wiltshire is already there.

Bushy. Thither will I with you; for little office

Will the hateful commons perform for us,

Except like curs to tear us all to pieces. —

Will you go along with us?

Bagot. No; I will to Ireland to his majesty.

Farewell: if heart's presages be not vain,

We three here part, that ne'er shall meet again.

Bushy. That 's as York thrives to beat back Boling-broke.

Green. Alas, poor duke! the task he undertakes

Is numbering sands, and drinking oceans dry:

Where one on his side fights, thousands will fly.

Farewell at once; for once, for all, and ever.

Bushy. Well, we may meet again.

Bagot. I fear me, never.²⁷ [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The Wilds in Glostershire.

Enter BOLINGBROKE and NORTHUMBERLAND, with Forces.

Boling. How far is it, my lord, to Berkley now?

North. Believe me, noble lord,

I am a stranger here in Glostershire.

These high wild hills, and rough uneven ways,

Draw out our miles, and make them wearisome;

And yet your fair discourse hath been as sugar,

Making the hard way sweet and delectable.¹

But, I bethink me, what a weary way

From Ravenspurg to Cotswold will be found

In Ross and Willoughby, wanting your company;

Which, I protest, hath very much beguil'd

Wittwe seines Bruders Gloster, deren Wittwensitz Plashy in der Grafschaft Essex war. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2 am Schluss.

18) So Q. A.; die übrigen Qs. und die Fol. To-day I came by and call'd there. 19) Wenn der König es nur nicht als Strafe für eine etwaige Treulosigkeit meinerseits gethan hätte. — Er denkt an seinen Bruder Gloster, der jedoch nicht enthauptet, sondern in Calais zwischen zwei Betten erstickt wurde. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 2.

20) Um dem König diese Nachrichten zu überbringen. — So Q. A.; die übrigen Qs. two posts. Die Fol. lässt no aus. — Ireland ist dreisylbig gebraucht. 21) In der Fol. fehlt go. 22) to right = Jemandem sein Recht verschaffen, steht im Gegensatz zu to wrong = kränken. 23) So die Fol. — In den Qs., welche die Eigennamen häufig in abgekürzter Gestalt geben, steht nur Berkley. 24) In Unordnung und Verwirrung. Diese noch jetzt familiäre Redeweise kennen auch schon Sh.'s Zeitgenossen. So sagt Bacon vom Papst Sixtus V.: a fierce thundering friar that would set all at six and seven, or at six and five, if you allude to his name. 25) So die Fol.; die Qs. haben for Ireland. — Am Schluss dieser Rede haben die Qs. unpossible für impossible der Fol. 26) scil. then we are condemn'd. Wenn das Haus der Gemeinen das Urtheil zu sprechen hat, so sind wir so gut wie verurtheilt. — In Bushy's nächster Rede stellt Pope um: The hateful commons will perform for us. 27) So vertheilen die Qs. die letzten Zeilen unter die Redenden. Die Fol. giebt die anderthalb Farewell at once — — meet again dem Bushy.

1) delectable betont Sh. auf der ersten Sylbe. — In der vorigen Zeile hat die Fol. our fair discourse, und zwei Zeilen vorher haben Qs. und Fol. drawes und makes, was die Cambridge Edd. als Sh.'schen Sprachgebrauch nicht als Druckfehler fassen. 2) Nach Sh.'s Behandlungsweise der Copula and, = the tedious process.

The tediousness and process² of my travel:
But theirs³ is sweeten'd with the hope to have
The present benefit which I possess;
And hope to joy⁴ is little less in joy
Than hope enjoy'd: by this the weary lords
Shall make their way seem short, as mine hath done
By sight of what I have, your noble company.

Boling. Of much less value is my company,
Than your good words. But who comes here?

Enter HARRY PERCY.

North. It is my son, young Harry Percy,
Sent from my brother Worcester,⁵ whencesoever. —
Harry, how fares your uncle?

Percy. I had thought, my lord, to have learn'd his health of you.

North. Why, is he not with the queen?

Percy. No, my good lord: he hath forsook the court,
Broken his staff of office, and dispers'd
The household of the king.

North. What was his reason?
He was not so resolv'd, when last we spake together.

Percy. Because your lordship was proclaimed traitor.
But he, my lord, is gone to Ravenspurgh,
To offer service to the duke of Hereford,
And sent me over by Berkley, to discover
What power the duke of York had levied there;
Then with direction⁶ to repair to Ravenspurgh.

North. Have you forgot the duke of Hereford, boy?

Percy. No, my good lord; for that is not forgot
Which ne'er I did remember: to my knowledge,
I never in my life did look on him.

North. Then learn to know him now: this is the duke.

Percy. My gracious lord, I tender you my service,
Such as it is, being tender,⁷ raw, and young,
Which elder days shall ripen, and confirm
To more approved service and desert.

Boling. I thank thee, gentle Percy; and be sure,
I count myself in nothing else so happy,
As in a soul remembering my good friends;
And as my fortune ripens with thy love,
It shall be still thy true love's recompense:
My heart this covenant makes, my hand thus seals it.

North. How far is it to Berkley? and what stir
Keeps good old York there, with his men of war?

Percy. There stands the castle, by yond tuft of trees,
Mann'd with three hundred men, as I have heard;

And in it are the lords of York, Berkley, and Seymour;
None else of name and noble estimate.

Enter Ross and Willoughby.

North. Here come the lords of Ross and Willoughby,
Bloody with spurring, fiery-red with haste.

Boling. Welcome, my lords. I wot, your love pursues⁸
A banish'd traitor: all my treasury
Is yet but unfelt thanks,⁹ which, more enrich'd,
Shall be your love and labour's recompense.

Ross. Your presence makes us rich, most noble lord.

Willo. And far surmounts our labour to attain it.

Boling. Evermore thanks, the exchequer of the poor;
Which, till my infant fortune comes to years,
Stands for my bounty. But who comes here?

Enter BERKLEY.

North. It is my lord of Berkley, as I guess.

Berk. My lord of Hereford, my message is to you.

Boling. My lord, my answer is to Lancaster,¹⁰
And I am come to seek that name in England;
And I must find that title in your tongue,
Before I make reply to aught you say.

Berk. Mistake me not, my lord: 't is not my meaning
To raze one title of your honour out.
To you, my lord, I come, (what lord you will,) ¹¹
From the most gracious regent¹² of this land,
The duke of York, to know what pricks you on
To take advantage of the absent time,¹³
And fright our native peace with self-borne arms.¹⁴

Enter YORK, attended.

Boling. I shall not need transport my words by you:
Here comes his grace in person. — My noble uncle!

[Kneels.

York. Show me thy humble heart, and not thy knee,
Whose duty is deceivable¹⁵ and false.

Boling. My gracious uncle —

York. Tut, tut!

Grace me no grace, nor uncle me no uncle:¹⁶
I am no traitor's uncle; and that word »grace«,
In an ungracious mouth, is but profane.
Why have those banish'd and forbidden legs
Dar'd once to touch a dust of England's ground?
But then more why,¹⁷ — why have they dar'd to march
So many miles upon her peaceful bosom,
Frighting her pale-fac'd villages with war,
And ostentation of despised arms?¹⁸

oder the tediousness of the process. 3) scil. their travel: der Marsch der Grafen Ross und Willoughby, die auf dem Wege zu Bolingbroke begriffen sind. 4) to joy = sich freuen, Freude empfinden; also hier: Hoffnung auf künftige Freude ist im Genuss wenig geringer, als verwirklichte Hoffnung. 5) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 2, Anm. 12. 6) So die Fol.; die Qs. haben directions. 7) Das Wortspiel zwischen den verschiedenen Bedeutungen von tender kehrt auch sonst bei Sh. wieder; z. B. in Cymbeline (A. 3, Sc. 4) Why tender'st thou that paper to me, with || A look untender? 8) to pursue steht hier zweideutig = verfolgen, in feindlichem Sinne, und = nachfolgen, in freundlichem. 9) Dank, der sich noch nicht fühlbar macht. Darin besteht bis jetzt Bolingbroke's ganzer Schatz, wie er den Dank mit blossen Worten the exchequer of the poor nennt. 10) Malone erklärt: your message is to the duke of Lancaster. Vielleicht ist der Satz aber ohne Beziehung auf my message etc., lediglich in Beziehung auf die Anrede my lord of Hereford so zu fassen: ich antworte nur auf den Namen Lancaster. 11) Wovon ihr nun Lord heissen möget. 12) So Q. A. — Die andern Qs. und die Fol. haben glorious für gracious und lassen regent aus. 13) absent time = Zeit der Abwesenheit, d. h. des Königs. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 3, Anm. 43. 14) Mit Waffen, die ihr von selbst, aus eigenem Antriebe tragt. — Die meisten Hgg. lesen dafür self-born arms = selbst-erzeugte Waffen. 15) deceivable = zur Täuschung geeignet, Alles was täuschen kann, also nicht ganz = deceitful. So in Twelfth-Night (A. 4, Sc. 4) There's something in't that is deceivable. 16) So in Romeo and Juliet (A. 3, Sc. 4) Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds. — Die Fol. lässt no uncle aus. 17) Aber dann noch mehr Warum, noch mehr Fragen. — So Q. A.; die übrigen Qs. und die Fol. but more then why? 18) despised arms sind Waffen, die Abscheu verdienen, weil Landsleute sie tragen im Bürgerkriege. —

Com'st thou because the anointed king is hence?
Why, foolish boy, the king is left behind,
And in my loyal bosom lies his power.
Were I but now the lord¹⁹ of such hot youth,
As when brave Gaunt, thy father, and myself,
Rescued the Black Prince, that young Mars of men,
From forth the ranks of many thousand French,
O! then, how quickly should this arm of mine,
Now prisoner to the palsy, chastise thee,
And minister correction to thy fault!

Boling. My gracious uncle, let me know my fault:
On what condition stands it, and wherein?²⁰

York. Even in condition of the worst degree;
In gross rebellion, and detested treason:
Thou art a banish'd man, and here art come
Before the expiration of thy time,
In braving arms against thy sovereign.

Boling. As I was banish'd, I was banish'd Hereford;
But as I come, I come for Lancaster.

And, noble uncle, I beseech your grace,
Look on my wrongs with an indifferent²¹ eye:
You are my father, for, methinks, in you
I see old Gaunt alive: O! then, my father,
Will you permit that I shall stand condemn'd
A wandering vagabond, my rights and royalties
Pluck'd from my arms perforce, and given away
To upstart unthrifths? Wherefore was I born?²²
If that my cousin king be king of England,
It must be granted I am duke of Lancaster.
You have a son, Aumerle, my noble kinsman;
Had you first²³ died, and he been thus trod down,
He should have found his uncle Gaunt a father,
To rouse his wrongs, and chase them to the bay.²⁴
I am denied to sue my livery here,²⁵
And yet my letters-patents give me leave:
My father's goods are all distrain'd and sold;
And these, and all, are all amiss employ'd.
What would you have me do? I am a subject,
And challenge law. Attorneys are denied me,
And therefore personally I lay my claim
To my inheritance of free descent.²⁶

North. The noble duke hath been too much abused.

Ross. It stands your grace upon,²⁷ to do him right.

Will. Base men by his endowments are made great.

York. My lords of England, let me tell you this:
I have had feeling of my cousin's wrongs,
And labour'd all I could to do him right;
But in this kind to come, in braving arms,
Be his own carver,²⁸ and cut out his way,²⁹
To find out right with wrong, — it may not be;

And you, that do abet him in this kind,
Cherish rebellion, and are rebels all.

North. The noble duke hath sworn, his coming s
But for his own; and for the right of that,
We all have strongly sworn to give him aid;
And let him ne'er see joy that breaks that oath!

York. Well, well, I see the issue of these arms:
I cannot mend it, I must needs confess,
Because my power is weak, and all ill left;
But if I could, by Him that gave me life,
I would attach you all, and make you stoop
Unto the sovereign mercy of the king;
But, since I cannot, be it known to you,
I do remain as neuter. So, fare you well;
Unless you please to enter in the castle,
And there repose you for this night.

Boling. An offer, uncle, that we will accept.
But we must win your grace to go with us
To Bristol castle; which, they say, is held
By Bushy, Bagot, and their complices,
The caterpillars of the commonwealth,
Which I have sworn to weed and pluck away.

York. It may be, I will go with you; — but yet I'll pause,

For I am loath to break our country's laws.
Nor friends, nor foes, to me welcome you are:
Things past redress are now with me past care.³⁰

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

A Camp in Wales.

Enter SALISBURY and a Captain.

Cap. My lord of Salisbury, we have stay'd ten days,
And hardly kept our countrymen together,
And yet we hear no tidings from the king;
Therefore, we will disperse ourselves: farewell.

Sal. Stay yet another day, thou trusty Welshman:
The king reposeth all his confidence in thee.

Cap. 'T is thought the king is dead: we will not stay.
The bay-trees in our country are all wither'd,¹
And meteors fright the fixed stars of heaven;
The pale-fac'd moon looks bloody on the earth,
And lean-look'd² prophets whisper fearful change.
Rich men look sad, and ruffians dance and leap,
The one, in fear to lose what they enjoy,
The other to enjoy by rage and war.
These signs forerun the death or fall³ of kings.
Farewell: our countrymen are gone and fled,
As well assur'd Richard, their king, is dead. [Exit.]

Das Epitheton steht ganz allgemein und ist nicht, wie die Hgg. thun, mit pale-fac'd villages zu verbinden. 19) Die Qs. haben lord ohne the, was zuerst die Fol. supplirte. 20) wherein ist = in what condition: auf welches Verhältniss gründet sich mein Fehler, und in welchem besteht er? 21) indifferent = unparteiisch, der keinen Unterschied macht. 22) Für welchen erblichen Rang wurde ich geboren? 23) d. h. vor Eurem Bruder Gaunt, zuerst von den Beiden. 24) Das Bild ist von der Hetzjagd entlehnt: die ihm zugefügten Kränkungen verfolgen und zu Tode hetzen, so dass sie also aufhören. — M. Mason's Erklärung, dass his wrongs = the persons who wrong him seien, erscheint doch zu gesucht. 25) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 1, Anm. 42. 26) Die Erbschaft, die mir von selbst nach meiner Abkunft zufällt. — Zwei Zeilen vorher lesen die Qs. And I challenge law. 27) Es steht Euch zu, es ist Eure Sache. 28) his own carver = der sich selber bei Tisch vorlegt. So in demselben übertragenen Sinne in Hamlet (A. 1, Sc. 3) He may not, as unvalued persons do, || Carve for himself. 29) So in Macbeth (A. 1, Sc. 2) Like valour's minion carv'd out his passage. 30) Dieselbe Sentenz lautet kürzer in Love's Labour's Lost (A. 5, Sc. 2) past cure is still past care.

1) Dieses Omen von böser Vorbedeutung, sowie manches weiterhin Angeführte fand Sh. bei Holinshed verzeichnet. 2) lean-looked = von magerem, kümmerlichem Aussehen. 3) or fall fehlt in den späteren Qs. und in der Fol. 4) Deinem Wohl zuwider. — Vgl. zu dieser Scene Einleitung pag. 616 u. 617.

Sal. Ah, Richard! with the eyes of heavy mind
I see thy glory, like a shooting star,
Fall to the base earth from the firmament.
Thy sun sets weeping in the lowly west,
Witnessing storms to come, woe, and unrest.
Thy friends are fled, to wait upon thy foes,
And crossly to thy good⁴ all fortune goes.

[Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.

BOLINGBROKE's Camp at Bristol.

Enter BOLINGBROKE, YORK, NORTHUMBERLAND, PERCY, WILLOUGHBY, ROSS; BUSHY and GREEN, prisoners.

Boling. Bring forth these men. —
Bushy, and Green, I will not vex your souls —
Since presently your souls must part your bodies —
With too much urging your pernicious lives,
For 't were no charity; yet, to wash your blood
From off my hands, here in the view of men,
I will unfold some causes of your deaths.
You have misled a prince, a royal king,
A happy¹ gentleman in blood and lineaments,
By you unhappied and disfigur'd clean:²
You have, in manner,³ with your sinful hours,
Made a divorce betwixt his queen and him,
Broke the possession of a royal bed,
And stain'd the beauty of a fair queen's cheeks
With tears, drawn from her eyes by your foul wrongs.
Myself, a prince by fortune of my birth,
Near to the king in blood, and near in love,
Till you did make him misinterpret me,
Have stoop'd my neck under your injuries,
And sigh'd my English breath in foreign clouds,⁴
Eating the bitter bread of banishment;
Whilst you have fed upon my signories,
Dispark'd⁵ my parks, and fell'd my forest woods,
From mine own windows torn my household coat,⁶
Raz'd out my impress, leaving me no sign. —
Save men's opinions, and my living blood, —
To show the world I am a gentleman.
This and much more, much more than twice all this,

Condemns you to the death.⁷ — See them deliver'd over
To execution and the hand of death.

Bushy. More welcome is the stroke of death to me,
Than Bolingbroke to England. — Lords, farewell.⁸

Green. My comfort is, that heaven will take our souls,
And plague injustice with the pains of hell.

Boling. My lord Northumberland, see them despatch'd.

[Exeunt NORTHUMBERLAND and Others, with BUSHY and GREEN.]

Uncle, you say the queen is at your house:
For God's sake, fairly let her be entreated;⁹
Tell her, I send to her my kind commends;
Take special care my greetings be deliver'd.

York. A gentleman of mine I have despatch'd
With letters of your love to her at large.¹⁰

Boling. Thanks, gentle uncle. — Come, lords, away,
To fight with Glendower and his complices:¹¹
Awhile to work, and after holiday. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

The Coast of Wales. A Castle in view.

Flourish: drums and trumpets. Enter King RICHARD, Bishop of CARLISLE, AUMERLE, and Soldiers.

K. Rich. Barkloughly castle call they¹ this at hand?

Aum. Yea, my lord. How brooks your grace the air,
After your late tossing on the breaking seas?

K. Rich. Needs must I like it well: I weep for joy,
To stand upon my kingdom once again. —

Dear earth, I do salute thee with my hand,
Though rebels wound thee with their horses' hoofs:

As a long-parted mother with her child
Plays fondly with her tears and smiles in meeting,²

So, weeping, smiling,³ greet I thee, my earth,
And do thee favour with my royal hands.

Feed not thy sovereign's foe, my gentle earth,
Nor with thy sweets comfort his ravenous sense;

But let thy spiders, that suck up thy venom,
And heavy-gaited toads, lie in their way,⁴

Doing annoyance to the treacherous feet,
Which with usurping steps do trample thee.

Yield stinging nettles to mine enemies;
And when they from thy bosom pluck a flower,

1) happy = begabt, ist mit in blood etc. zu verbinden, und hat als Gegensatz das von Sh. selbst, wie es scheint, gebildete unhappied = solcher Begabung beraubt. 2) clean = ganz und gar. 3) in manner = gleichsam, gewissermassen, bezieht sich auf das folgende made a divorce. 4) Dass aus Seufzern sich Wolken bilden, ist eine Anschauung, die bei Sh. öfter wiederkehrt; z. B. in Romeo and Juliet (A. 1, Sc. 1) Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs. 5) to dispark, ein gerichtlicher Ausdruck, = ein Gehege seines anerkannten Charakters entkleiden, indem man die Umzäunung niederbricht, die Bäume abhaut und das Wild darin vertilgt. 6) Der Wappenrock des Hauses Lancaster, der in den gemalten Fenstern angebracht war. Ebendasselbst war auch die Devise, das Motto (impress) Lancaster's zu lesen. 7) to the death = zu dem bestimmten Tode der Hinrichtung. 8) Die beiden letzten Worte fehlen in der Fol. 9) to entreat ist in der ältern Sprache = behandeln, und = verhandeln. 10) d. h. mit Briefen, die ausführlich von Eurer Freundschaft für sie sprechen. 11) Theobald wollte diese Zeile als eine Interpolation aus dem Texte streichen, weil der vorhergehende und der folgende Vers dann den gewohnten Schlussreim der Scene bilden würden, und weil Glendower erst nach Heinrich's Thronbesteigung sich empörte. — Indess steht die Zeile in Qs. und Fol.; und Sh. dachte bei Glendower and his complices an die Walliser, welche, mit Salisbury verbündet, dem König Richard beistanden (vgl. A. 2, Sc. 4). — In K. Henry IV. First Part (A. 5, Sc. 5) findet sich allerdings ein ähnlich lautender Vers: To fight with Glendower and the earl of March.

1) So Q. A.; die übrigen Qs. und die Fol. lesen call you. 2) in meeting deutet Malone von dem Wiedersehen der Mutter und des Kindes. Eher aber ist es auf tears and smiles zu beziehen = Thränen und Lächeln zugleich. So in K. Lear (A. 4, Sc. 3) you have seen || Sunshine and rain at once: her smiles and tears || Were like a better way. 3) Vielleicht wäre weeping-smiling, als Compositum, zu lesen. 4) their way bezieht sich auf thy sovereign's foe, was als collectiver Begriff sowohl als Singular (his ravenous sense), wie auch als Plural

Guard it, I pray thee, with a lurking adder,
Whose double tongue may with a mortal touch
Throw death upon thy sovereign's enemies. —
Mock not my senseless conjuration,⁵ lords:
This earth shall have a feeling, and these stones
Prove armed soldiers, ere her native king
Shall falter under foul rebellion's arms.⁶

Bishop. Fear not, my lord: that power that made you
king,

Hath power to keep you king, in spite of all.⁷
The means that heaven yields must be embrac'd,
And not neglected; else, if⁸ heaven would,
And we will not, heaven's offer we refuse,
The proffer'd means of succour and redress.

Aum. He means, my lord, that we are too remiss;
Whilst Bolingbroke, through our security,
Grows strong and great in substance, and in friends.⁹

K. Rich. Discomfortable cousin! know'st thou not,
That when the searching eye of heaven is hid
Behind the globe, and lights the lower world,¹⁰
Then thieves and robbers range abroad unseen,
In murders and in outrage bloody¹¹ here;
But when from under this terrestrial ball
He fires the proud tops of the eastern pines,
And darts his light¹² through every guilty hole,
Then murders, treasons, and detested sins,
The cloak of night being pluck'd from off their backs,
Stand bare and naked, trembling at themselves?
So when this thief, this traitor, Bolingbroke,
Who all this while hath revell'd in the night,
Whilst we were wandering with the antipodes,¹³
Shall see us rising in our throne, the east,
His treasons will sit blushing in his face,
Not able to endure the sight of day,
But, self-affrighted, tremble at his sin.
Not all the water in the rough rude sea
Can wash the balm from¹⁴ an anointed king;
The breath of worldly men cannot depose
The deputy elected by the Lord.
For every man that Bolingbroke hath press'd,
To lift shrewd steel against our golden crown,
God for his Richard hath in heavenly pay
A glorious angel: then, if angels fight,
Weak men¹⁵ must fall, for heaven still guards the right.

Enter SALISBURY.

Welcome, my lord. How far off lies your power?

Sal. Nor near, nor further off, my gracious lord,

Than this weak arm. Discomfort guides my tongue,
And bids me speak of nothing but despair.
One day too late, I fear, my noble lord,
Hath clouded all thy happy days on earth.

O! call back yesterday, bid time return.
And thou shalt have twelve thousand fighting men:

To-day, to-day, unhappy day, too late,
O'erthrows thy joys, friends, fortune, and thy state;
For all the Welshmen, hearing thou wert dead,¹⁶
Are gone to Bolingbroke, dispers'd, and fled.

Aum. Comfort, my liege! why looks your grace so pale?

K. Rich. But now, the blood of twenty thousand men
Did triumph in my face, and they are fled;
And till so much blood thither come again,
Have I not reason to look pale and dead?
All souls that will be safe, fly from my side;
For time hath set a blot upon my pride.

Aum. Comfort, my liege! remember who you are.

K. Rich. I had forgot myself. Am I not king?
Awake, thou sluggard majesty!¹⁷ thou sleepest.
Is not the king's name forty thousand¹⁸ names?
Arm, arm, my name! a puny subject strikes
At thy great glory. — Look not to the ground,
Ye favourites of a king: are we not high?
High be our thoughts. I know, my uncle York Hath power enough to serve our turn. But who comes here?

Enter SCROOP.

Scroop. More health and happiness betide my liege,
Than can my care-tun'd tongue deliver him!

K. Rich. Mine ear is open, and my heart prepar'd:
The worst is worldly loss thou canst unfold.
Say, is my kingdom lost? why, 't was my care;
And what loss is it to be rid of care?
Strives Bolingbroke to be as great as we?
Greater he shall not be: if he serve God,
We'll serve him too, and be his fellow so.
Revolt our subjects? that we cannot mend;
They break their faith to God, as well as us.
Cry woe, destruction, ruin, loss, decay;
The worst is death, and death will have his day.¹⁹

Scroop. Glad am I, that your highness is so arm'd
To bear the tidings of calamity.
Like an unseasonable stormy day,
Which makes the silver rivers drown their shores,
As if the world were all dissolv'd to tears;

(their way) gefasst werden kann. 5) senseless conjuration ist zugleich eine sinnlose Beschwörung, und eine Beschwörung, die sich an etwas nicht mit Sinnen Begabtes, wie die Erde, richtet. — Der zweite Sinn ergibt sich aus der folgenden Zeile: This earth shall have a feeling etc. 6) So Q. A. und B.; die spätern Qs. und die Fol. haben rebellious arms. 7) Die folgenden vier Zeilen fehlen in der Fol., obwohl sie, wie Aumerle's nächste Worte zeigen, unentbehrlich sind. 8) if ergänzte Pope, der zuerst unter den Hggn. das in der Fol. Ausgelassene aus den Qs. wieder in den Text setzte. — Pope setzte auch heaven yields für heavens yield der Qs. 9) So die Fol.; die Qs. haben in power. 10) the lower world ist die tiefer liegende Welt der Antipoden. — and lights emendirt Johnson das that lights der Qs. und Fol. 11) So die spätern Qs. und die Fol. Nur Q. A. hat bouldy, was sowohl aus bloudy, wie bloody oft geschrieben wird, als aus boldly, Dyce's Lesart, verdruckt sein kann. Indess verdient bloody in Verbindung mit murders und outrage den Vorzug. 12) So die Qs.; die Fol. hat lightning. 13) Diese Zeile fehlt in der Fol. — Vgl. Anm. 10 dieser Scene. 14) off from in den Qs. 15) d. h. wenn die Engel für mich fechten, so müssen die von Bolingbroke gegen mich Angeworbenen, da sie schwache Menschen sind, fallen. 16) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 4. 17) So die Fol. in besserem Einklange mit awake und sleepest, als das coward majesty der Qs. 18) Die Fol. hat forty thousand, wie Sh. auch sonst diese Zahl als eine unbestimmte grosse gebraucht; so in Hamlet (A. 5, Sc. 1) forty thousand brothers; in Othello (A. 3, Sc. 3) forty thousand lives. — Die Qs. lesen twenty thousand, vielleicht in Beziehung auf die 20,000 geflohenen Walliser. 19) Künde mir immerhin Weh, Zerstörung, Sturz u. s. w. mit lauter Stimme an; sie sind alle nicht so schlimm wie der Tod, der

So high above his limits swells the rage
Of Bolingbroke, covering your fearful land
With hard bright steel, and hearts harder than steel.
White-beards have arm'd their thin and hairless scalps
Against thy majesty; and boys, with women's voices,
Strive to speak big, and clap their female joints²⁰
In stiff unwieldy arms against thy crown;
Thy very beadsmen²¹ learn to bend their bows
Of double-fatal²² yew against thy state;
Yea, distaff-women manage rusty bills
Against thy seat: both young and old rebel,
And all goes worse than I have power to tell.

K. Rich. Too well, too well thou tell'st a tale so ill.
Where is the earl of Wiltshire? where is Bagot?
What is become of Bushy? where is Green?
That they have let the dangerous enemy
Measure our confines with such peaceful steps?
If we prevail, their heads shall pay for it.
I warrant they have made peace with Bolingbroke.

Scroop. Peace²³ have they made with him, indeed,
my lord.

K. Rich. O villains, vipers, damn'd without redemption!
Dogs, easily won to fawn on any man!
Snakes, in my heart-blood warm'd, that sting my heart!
Three Judases, each one thrice worse than Judas!
Would they make peace? terrible hell make war
Upon their spotted souls for this offence!²⁴

Scroop. Sweet love, I see, changing his property,
Turns to the sourest and most deadly hate.
Again uncurse their souls;²⁵ their peace is made
With heads and not with hands: those whom you curse,
Have felt the worst of death's destroying wound,²⁶
And lie full low, grav'd²⁷ in the hollow ground.

Aum. Is Bushy, Green, and the earl of Wiltshire, dead?

Scroop. Yea, all of them at Bristol lost their heads.

Aum. Where is the duke, my father, with his power?

K. Rich. No matter where. Of comfort no man speak:
Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epitaphs;
Make dust our paper,²⁸ and with rainy eyes
Write sorrow on the bosom of the earth.
Let's choose executors, and talk of wills:
And yet not so, — for what can we bequeath,
Save our deposed bodies²⁹ to the ground?
Our lands, our lives, and all are Bolingbroke's,
And nothing can we call our own but death,
And that small model³⁰ of the barren earth,
Which serves as paste and cover to our bones.
For God's sake, let us sit upon the ground,
And tell sad stories of the death of kings: —
How some have been depos'd, some slain in war,
Some haunted by the ghosts they have depos'd,³¹
Some poison'd by their wives, some sleeping kill'd,
All murder'd: — for within the hollow crown,
That rounds the mortal temples of a king,
Keeps death his court, and there the antick³² sits,
Scoffing his state, and grinning at his pomp;
Allowing him a breath, a little scene,
To monarchize, be fear'd, and kill with looks;
Infusing him with self and vain conceit,³³
As if this flesh, which walls about our life,
Were brass impregnable; and, humour'd thus,³⁴
Comes at the last, and with a little pin
Bores through his castle wall, and — farewell king!
Cover your heads, and mock not flesh and blood
With solemn reverence: throw away respect,
Tradition,³⁵ form, and ceremonious duty,
For you have but mistook me all this while:
I live with bread like you, feel want,
Taste grief, need friends. Subjected thus,³⁶
How can you say to me, I am a king?

Bishop. My lord, wise men ne'er wail their present woes,³⁷

doch unvermeidlich ist. 20) female joints sind die weiblich zarten Gelenke. — Staunton's Interpunction, nach dem Vorgange der Fol., verbindet against thy crown mit dem Folgenden, ebenso against thy state und against thy seat. 21) beadsmen ist, der vom Könige ein regelmässiges Almosen erhält und darum für ihn beten muss. So in Two Gentlemen of Verona (A. 1, Sc. 1) For I will be thy beadsmen, Valentine. 22) Doppelt verderblich war der Eibenbaum, einmal insofern seine Blätter für giftig galten, und dann weil das Holz vorzugsweise zur Anfertigung von Bogen zum Schiessen verwandt wurde. 23) In demselben Doppelsinne lautet in Macbeth (A. 4, Sc. 3) auf die Frage Macduff's The tyrant has not batter'd at their peace? die Antwort No; they were well at peace, when I did leave them. 24) offence fehlt in den Qs., und in der vorigen Zeile fehlt make war. 25) Nehmt den Fluch zurück, den Ihr eben auf ihre Seelen geschleudert. — Solche Zusammensetzungen des negativen un- wie mit to curse bildet Sh. viele, z. B. to unshout in Coriolanus (A. 5, Sc. 4). 26) So die Qs.; die Fol. hat hand für wound. 27) to grave = begraben, von dem substantivischen grave = Grab. 28) Das Papier, das wir gebrauchen, um die Grabschrift darauf zu schreiben. 29) Unsere Leiber, die abgesetzt, ihrer königlichen Würde entkleidet sind. — Der König identificirt seine Anhänger mit sich selbst in diesen, wie in den folgenden Worten. 30) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 7. — Hier muss small model, eigentlich = Abbild im Kleinen, allgemeiner gefasst = Stück, Probe von Etwas, sein. Ein Stück von der ganzen Erde, welches dieselbe im Kleinen darstellt, dient für unsere Gebeine wie ein sie einhüllender Thon, eine Mischung verschiedener Erdarten. — In diesem Sinne und nicht in dem von Pastetenteig, wie Johnson wollte, ist paste, das die Copula and mit cover zu einem Begriffe verbindet, zu fassen. 31) Von den Geistern Derer, welche sie entthront, abgesetzt haben. — Mit ähnlicher Vermengung des Abgeschiedenen und des Geistes hat Sh. in K. Henry VI. Second Part (A. 3, Sc. 2) Oft have I seen a timely-parted ghost, || Of ashy semblance etc. 32) antick = Possenreisser, Lustigmacher, ist Derselbe, der eben vorher death hiess: der Tod heisst so, weil er mit dem König seinen Spott treibt. So in K. Henry VI. First Part (A. 4, Sc. 7) Thou antick death, which laugh'st us here to scorn. 33) scil. self-conceit and vain conceit. — So behandelt Sh. self auch sonst wie ein vom Substantiv zu trennendes Epitheton; in Macbeth (A. 3, Sc. 4) my strange and self abuse. 34) Die Construction ist ungenau, da humour'd sich auf den König bezieht: nachdem man ihn so hat gewähren lassen; comes dagegen hängt von death ab. 35) tradition ist das überlieferte Herkommen, das Hochachtung vor Königen gebietet; ceremonious duty die Pflichtergebenheit, die sich in Aeusserlichkeiten bethätigt. 36) Da ich auf solche Art unterthan bin, wie könnt Ihr von mir sagen, dass ich ein König sei? — say to = in Betreff von Einem Etwas sagen. 37) So die Fol. mit der offenbar beabsichtigten Antithese zu dem folgenden Verse, present zu presently, woes zu ways, wail zu wail. — Die meisten Hgg. lesen

But presently prevent the ways to wail.
To fear the foe, since fear oppresseth strength,
Gives, in your weakness, strength unto your foe,
And so your follies fight against yourself.³⁸
Fear, and be slain; no worse can come to fight:
And fight and die is death destroying death;³⁹
Where fearing dying⁴⁰ pays death servile breath.

Aum. My father hath a power, inquire of him,
And learn to make a body of a limb.

K. Rich. Thou chid'st me well.⁴¹ — Proud Bolingbroke, I come

To change blows with thee for our day of doom.

This ague-fit of fear is over-blown:

An easy task it is to win our own. —

Say, Scroop, where lies our uncle with his power?

Speak sweetly, man, although thy looks be sour.

Scroop. Men judge by the complexion of the sky

The state and inclination of the day;

So may you by my dull and heavy eye,

My tongue hath but a heavier tale to say.

I play the torturer, by small and small,

To lengthen out the worst that must be spoken.

Your uncle York is join'd⁴² with Bolingbroke,

And all your northern castles yielded up,

And all your southern gentlemen in arms

Upon his party.

K. Rich. Thou hast said enough. —

Beshrew thee, cousin,⁴³ which didst lead me forth

Of that sweet way I was in to despair!

What say you now? what comfort have we now?

By heaven, I'll hate him everlastingly

That bids me be of comfort any more.

Go to Flint castle: there I'll pine away;

A king, woe's slave, shall kingly woe⁴⁴ obey.

That power⁴⁵ I have, discharge; and let them go

To ear the land that hath some hope to grow,⁴⁶

For I have none. — Let no man speak again

To alter this, for counsel is but vain.

Aum. My liege, one word.

K. Rich. He does me double wrong,

That wounds me with the flatteries of his tongue.

Discharge my followers: let them hence away,⁴⁷

From Richard's night to Bolingbroke's fair day.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Wales. A Plain before Flint Castle.

Enter, with drum and colours, BOLINGBROKE and Forces; YORK, NORTHUMBERLAND, and Others.

Boling. So that by this intelligence we learn,

The Welshmen are dispers'd, and Salisbury

Is gone to meet the king, who lately landed

With some few private friends upon this coast.

North. The news is very fair and good, my lord:

Richard, not far from hence, hath hid his head.

York. It would beseem the lord Northumberland,

To say, king Richard: — alack, the heavy day,

When such a sacred king should hide his head!

North. Your grace mistakes;¹ only to be brief,²

Left I his title out.

York. The time hath been,

Would you have been so brief with him, he would

Have been so brief with you,³ to shorten you,

For taking so the head,⁴ your whole head's length.

Boling. Mistake not, uncle, further than you should.

York. Take not, good cousin, further than you should,

Lest you mistake: the heavens are o'er your head.⁵

Boling. I know it, uncle; and oppose not myself

Against their will. — But who comes here?

Enter PERCY.

Welcome, Harry. What, will not this castle yield?

Percy. The castle royally is mann'd, my lord,

Against thy entrance.

Boling. Royally?

Why, it contains no king?

Percy. Yes, my good lord,

It doth contain a king: king Richard lies

Within the limits of yond lime and stone,⁶

And with him are the lord Aumerle, Lord Salisbury,

Sir Stephen Scroop; besides a clergyman

Of holy reverence, who, I cannot learn.

North. O! belike it is the bishop of Carlisle.

Boling. [To NORTHUMBERLAND.] Noble lord,

Go to the rude ribs⁷ of that ancient castle

Through brazen trumpet send the breath of parle

Into his ruin'd ears,

dafür mit den Qs. My lord, wise men ne'er sit and wail their woes. 38) Dieser Vers fehlt in der Fol. — In der nächsten Zeile bezieht sich no worse auf be slain. 39) death ist zuerst als Subject individuell der Tod des Einzelnen, also hier des Königs, dann als Object der Tod allgemein und abstract. 40) fearing dying ist entweder = ein furchtbares Sterben, oder = eine Furcht vor dem Sterben, je nachdem dying als Subject oder Object gefasst wird. Letztere Auffassung scheint die plausible. 41) Richard antwortet dem Bischof von Carlisle, nicht dem Aumerle. — Die Qs. lesen chid'st, die Fol. chid'st. 42) is join'd, die Lesart aller alten Ausgg., wird von manchen Hgg. willkürlich in hath join'd verändert. — Am Schluss dieser Rede hat die Fol. faction für party. 43) Die Hgg. fügen hier die Bühnenweisung to Aumerle hinzu. — Sh. oder Richard hatte ausser Acht gelassen, dass nicht Aumerle, sondern der Bischof seiner Verzweiflung in den Weg getreten war. 44) Indem das Leid sich den König zum Sklaven macht, nimmt es selbst königlichen Rang ein. 45) power ist hier die Truppenmacht, die dem König noch zu Gebot steht. 46) Das Land zu beackern, das einige Aussicht auf gedeihlichen Ertrag giebt. — Vielleicht sollte aber have für hath stehen und sich auf them beziehen: lässt Diejenigen das Land bebauen, die Aussicht haben, zu gedeihen oder eine Ernte zu erzielen. 47) So Qs. und Fol. — Die meisten Hgg. interpungiren dafür let them hence. — Away etc.

1) So Qs. und Fol. — Zur Vervollständigung des Verses fügte Rowe me hinzu, doch kommt to mistake = sich irren, missverstehen, noch öfter in dieser Scene vor. Vielleicht wäre hier mistaketh zu lesen. 2) brief = kurz, und = kurz angebunden, summarisch im Verfahren. 3) with you fehlt in den Qs. 4) to take the head doppelsinnig = seinem Kopfe folgen, und = den Kopf Jemandes nehmen. — Eben so doppelsinnig ist im Folgenden to mistake = verkehrt deuten, und = mit Unrecht Etwas nehmen. 5) So die Fol. passender, als das our heads der Q. A. und B., da Bolingbroke's Haupt von der Rache des Himmels bedroht wird, wenn er sich an Richard vergreift. 6) lime and stone ist Collectiv und als ein durch die Copula and verbundener Begriff zu fassen = der aus

And thus deliver. Henry Bolingbroke
On both his knees doth kiss king Richard's hand,
And sends allegiance, and true faith of heart,
To his most royal person; hither come⁸
Even at his feet to lay my arms and power,
Provided that my banishment repeal'd,
And lands restor'd again, be freely granted.⁹
If not, I'll use the advantage of my power,
And lay the summer's dust¹⁰ with showers of blood,
Rain'd from the wounds of slaughter'd Englishmen:
The which, how far off from the mind of Bolingbroke
It is, such crimson tempest should bedrench
The fresh green lap of fair king Richard's land;¹¹
My stooping duty tenderly shall show.
Go, signify as much, while here we march
Upon the grassy carpet of this plain.¹²
Let's march without the noise of threat'ning drum,
That from the castle's tatter'd¹³ battlements
Our fair appointments may be well perus'd.
Methinks, king Richard and myself should meet
With no less terror than the elements
Of fire and water, when their thundering shock¹⁴
At meeting tears the cloudy cheeks of heaven.
Be he the fire, I'll be the yielding water:
The rage be his, while on the earth I rain
My waters; on the earth, and not on him. —
March on, and mark king Richard how he looks.

A parley sounded, and answered by a trumpet within. Flourish. Enter on the walls King RICHARD, the Bishop of CARLISLE, AUMERLE, SCROOP, and SALISBURY.

Boling. See, see, king Richard doth himself appear,
As doth the blushing discontented sun
From out the fiery portal of the east,
When he perceives the envious clouds are bent
To dim his glory, and to stain the track
Of his bright passage to the occident.¹⁵

York. Yet looks he like a king: behold, his eye,
As bright as is the eagle's, lightens forth

Controlling majesty. Alack, alack, for woe,
That any harm should stain so fair a show!

K. Rich. [To NORTHUMBERLAND.] We are amaz'd; and thus long have we stood

To watch the fearful bending of thy knee,¹⁶
Because we thought ourself thy lawful king:

And if we be, how dare thy joints forget
To pay their awful¹⁷ duty to our presence?

If we be not, show us the hand of God

That hath dismiss'd us from our stewardship;
For well we know, no hand of blood and bone

Can gripe the sacred handle of our sceptre,
Unless he do profane, steal, or usurp.

And though you think that all, as you have done,
Have torn their souls by turning them from us,

And we are barren and bereft of friends,

Yet know, my master, God omnipotent,

Is mustering in his clouds on our behalf

Armies of pestilence; and they shall strike

Your children yet unborn, and unbegot,

That lift your vassal hands against my head,

And threat the glory of my precious crown.

Tell Bolingbroke, for yond, methinks, he stands,

That every stride he makes upon my land

Is dangerous treason:¹⁸ he is come to ope

The purple testament of bleeding war;¹⁹

But ere the crown he looks for live in peace,

Ten thousand bloody crowns²⁰ of mothers' sons

Shall ill become the flower of England's face,

Change the complexion of her maid-pale peace

To scarlet indignation, and bedew

Her pastures²¹ grass with faithful English blood.

North. The king of heaven forbid, our lord the king

Should so with civil and uncivil arms²²

Be rush'd upon! Thy thrice-noble cousin,

Harry Bolingbroke, doth humbly kiss thy hand;

And by the honourable tomb he swears,

That stands upon your royal grandsire's bones,

And by the royalties of both your bloods,

Mörtel und Stein zusammengefügte Bau. 7) Dasselbe Bild, das die schützenden Mauern einer Festung den festen Rippen des menschlichen Körpers vergleicht, ist in K. John (A. 2, Sc. 2) The flinty ribs of this contemptuous city. — Der Tropus wird fortgeführt in dem folgenden his ruin'd ears. 8) Da hither come ein Particip ist, das als Apposition zu Harry Bolingbroke gehört, so hätte nach genauerer Construction nicht my arms, sondern his arms stehen müssen. Solcher Wechsel der Construction ist Sh. sehr geläufig und dient namentlich hier zu grösserer Deutlichkeit. 9) Vorausgesetzt, dass der Widerruf meiner Verbannung und die Wiedererstattung meiner Güter ohne Rückhalt gewährt werde. 10) So in K. Lear (A. 4, Sc. 6) to use his eyes — — for laying autumn's dust. 11) fair ist mit land zu verbinden. 12) Viele Hgg. fügen hier die Bühnenweisung ein: Northumberland advances to the castle with a trumpet. 13) Q. A. und B. haben totter'd, die spätern Qs. und die Fol. tatter'd. — Da Jenes nur die ältere Schreibart desselben Wortes ist, so ist hier unter tatter'd battlements dasselbe zu verstehen, was vorher ruin'd ears hiess = die verwitterten Mauerzinnen. 14) So Q. A. — Das smoke der übrigen Qs. und der Fol. ist vielleicht aus stroke verdruckt; doch ist die ältere Lesart vorzuziehen. — Mit fire ist der Blitz, mit water die Wolke hier gemeint. 15) Diese Rede, welche alle Qs. und Fol. dem Bolingbroke zuertheilen, legen die meisten Hgg. mit Warburton dem York bei; dass Letzterer aber einen Einwurf gegen Bolingbroke's Darstellung macht, zeigt das erste Wort seiner Rede: Yet looks he etc. 16) Wir haben bis jetzt schweigend da gestanden, indem wir beobachteten, ob Du nicht ehrfurchtsvoll das Knie vor uns beugen würdest. — Der König wendet sich an Northumberland, der an den Fuss der Mauer des Schlosses getreten ist, während Bolingbroke mit den Seinen sich in der Ferne, im Vordergrunde der Bühne hält. 17) awful = voll Ehrfurcht, wie eben vorher fearful. — In der vorigen Zeile ist vielleicht das and if der ältern Ausgg. = an if. 18) dangerous treason ist ein Hochverrath, der ihn selbst gerichtlich gefährdet. 19) Aus dem von Blut purpurrothen Testament, das er öffnet, will Bolingbroke sehen, was der als Erblasser aufgefasste Krieg ihm vermacht hat; er will sehen, was der Bürgerkrieg ihm einbringt. — So in Kyd's Jeronimo, First Part: Then I unclasp the purple leaves of war. 20) crown ist zuerst = Königskrone, dann = Schädel. Zehntausend blutige Schädel von Engländern werden der Blume des Antlitzes von England, d. h. dem blumigen Boden Englands zur Unzier gereichen. 21) pastures, wofür vielleicht pasture's zu lesen, ist Theobald's Emendation für pastors der Qs. und Fol. 22) Die Waffen des Bürgerkriegs (civil arms) sind zugleich grausam, hart (uncivil). 23) So lautet eine Bethuerung in All's well

Currents that spring from one most gracious head,
And by the buried hand²³ of warlike Gaunt,
And by the worth and honour of himself,
Comprising all that may be sworn or said,
His coming hither hath no further scope,
Than for his lineal royalties,²⁴ and to beg
Enfranchisement²⁵ immediate on his knees:
Which on thy royal party granted once,
His glittering arms he will commend²⁶ to rust,
His barbed steeds to stables, and his heart
To faithful service of your majesty.
This swears he, as he is a prince, is just;²⁷
And, as I am a gentleman, I credit him.

K. Rich. Northumberland, say, — thus the king returns: —

His noble cousin is right welcome hither;
And all the number of his fair demands
Shall be accomplish'd without contradiction.
With all the gracious utterance thou hast,
Speak to his gentle hearing kind commends. —

[NORTHUMBERLAND retires to BOLINGBROKE.
/To AUMERLE./] We do debase ourself, cousin, do we not,
To look so poorly, and to speak so fair?
Shall we call back Northumberland, and send Defiance to the traitor, and so die?

Aum. No, good my lord: let's fight with gentle words,

Till time lend friends, and friends their helpful swords.

K. Rich. O God! O God! that e'er this tongue of mine,
That laid the sentence of dread banishment
On yond proud man, should take it off again
With words of sooth!²⁸ O! that I were as great
As is my grief, or lesser than my name,
Or that I could forget what I have been,
Or not remember what I must be now!
Swell'st thou, proud heart? I'll give thee scope to beat,
Since foes have scope to beat both thee and me.

Aum. Northumberland comes back from Bolingbroke.

K. Rich. What must the king do now? Must he submit?
The king shall do it. Must he be depos'd?
The king shall be contented. Must he lose
The name of king? o' God's name, let it go:
I'll give my jewels for a set of beads,²⁹
My gorgeous palace for a hermitage,
My gay apparel for an alms-man's gown,
My figur'd goblets³⁰ for a dish of wood,
My sceptre for a palmer's walking-staff,

My subjects for a pair of carved saints,
And my large kingdom for a little grave,³¹
A little little grave, an obscure grave;
Or I'll be buried in the king's highway,
Some way of common trade,³² where subjects' feet
May hourly trample on their sovereign's head;
For on my heart they tread, now whilst I live,
And, buried once, why not upon my head? —
Aumerle, thou weep'st; my tender-hearted cousin! —
We'll make foul weather with despised tears;
Our sighs and they shall lodge the summer corn,³³
And make a dearth in this revolting land.

Or shall we play the wantons with our woes,
And make some pretty match with shedding tears?

As thus; — to drop them still upon one place,
Till they have fretted us a pair of graves
Within the earth; and, therein laid,³⁴ — »There lies
Two kinsmen, digg'd their graves with weeping eyes.«
Would not this ill do well? — Well, well, I see
I talk but idly, and you mock at me. —

Most mighty prince, my lord Northumberland,
What says king Bolingbroke? will his majesty
Give Richard leave to live till Richard die?³⁵

You make a leg, and Bolingbroke says — ay.

North. My lord, in the base court he doth attend
To speak with you: may't please you to come down?

K. Rich. Down, down, I come; like glistening Phaeton,
Wanting the manage of unruly jades.

[NORTHUMBERLAND retires again to BOLINGBROKE.
In the base court?³⁶ Base court, where kings grow base,
To come at traitors' calls, and do them grace.
In the base court? Come down? Down, court! down, king!
For night-owls shriek, where mounting larks should sing.

[Exeunt from above.]

Boling. What says his majesty?

North. Sorrow and grief of heart
Makes him speak fondly, like a frantic man:
Yet he is come.

Enter King RICHARD, and his Attendants, below.

Boling. Stand all apart,
And show fair duty to his majesty. —
My gracious lord, — [Kneeling.]

K. Rich. Fair cousin, you debase your princely knee,
To make the base earth proud with kissing it:
Me rather had,³⁷ my heart might feel your love,
Than my unpleas'd eye see your courtesy.

that ends well (A. 3, Sc. 6) by the hand of a soldier. — Warburton wollte lesen by the warlike hand of buried Gaunt. 24) lineal royalties sind die Ehren und Würden, die ihm nach seiner Abstammung aus königlichem Geblüte zukommen. 25) enfranchisement ist die Einsetzung in seine ererbten, ihm bisher vorenthaltenen Titel und Privilegien. 26) to commend = übermachen, anheimgeben. So in Macbeth (A. 3, Sc. 1) And so I do commend you to their backs. 27) Dies schwört er, so wahr er ein Prinz ist, verhält sich so. 28) words of sooth = Worte der Beschwichtigung, freundliche Worte. — Das substantivische sooth hat diese ungewöhnliche Bedeutung von dem verbalen to soothe = besänftigen, schmeicheln, entlehnt. 29) Der Rosenkranz, die Einsiedelei u. s. w. charakterisiren solchen alms-man oder beadsman, wie er vorher hiess (vgl. A. 3, Sc. 2, Anm. 21). 30) Becher von edlem Metall mit Figuren in erhabener Arbeit darauf. 31) Ein Grab, wie es der Eremit sich selbst bei Lebzeiten schon in der Nähe seiner Einsiedelei zu graben pflegte. 32) Irgend eine Strasse des alltäglichen Verkehrs. 33) to lodge = hinstrecken. So in Macbeth (A. 4, Sc. 1) though bladed corn be lodg'd. 34) Die folgenden Worte enthalten die Grabschrift, welche Richard sich ausdenkt. 35) d. h. bis Richard eines natürlichen Todes sterbe, ohne von Bolingbroke ermordet zu werden, wie der König argwöhnt. 36) Wortspiel zwischen base court, das französische basse-cour, und base = gemein, erniedrigt. 37) Mir wäre es lieber, für I had rather, wie me likes bei Sh. für I like. 38) Steevens fügte zur Verdeutlichung von thus high die Bühnenweisung touching his own head hinzu. — Vgl. zu dem Schluss dieser Scene Einleitung pag. 617. 39) So die Qs.; die Fol. hat deserv'd = wohl habt ihr sie verdient. 40) Die Thränen bezeugten die Liebe Derer, die sie vergiessen, können aber nichts ändern.

Up, cousin, up: your heart is up, I know,
 Thus high at least,³⁸ although your knee be low.
Boling. My gracious lord, I come but for mine own.
K. Rich. Your own is yours; and I am yours, and all.
Boling. So far be mine, my most redoubted lord,
 As my true service shall deserve your love.
K. Rich. Well you deserve:³⁹ they well deserve to have,
 That know the strong'st and surest way to get. —
 Uncle, give me your hand: nay, dry your eyes;
 Tears show their love, but want their remedies.⁴⁰ —
 Cousin, I am too young to be your father,
 Though you are old enough to be my heir.
 What you will have, I'll give, and willing too;
 For do we must what force will have us do. —
 Set on towards London. — Cousin, is it so?
Boling. Yea, my good lord.
K. Rich. Then I must not say no.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

Langley. The Duke of York's Garden.

Enter the QUEEN and Two Ladies.

Queen. What sport shall we devise here in this garden,
 To drive away the heavy thought of care?

1. Lady. Madam, we'll play at bowls.

Queen. 'T will make me think the world is full of rubs,¹
 And that my fortune runs against the bias.

1. Lady. Madam, we'll dance.

Queen. My legs can keep no measure in delight,²
 When my poor heart no measure keeps in grief:
 Therefore, no dancing, girl; some other sport.

1. Lady. Madam, we'll tell tales.

Queen. Of sorrow, or of joy?³

1. Lady. Of either, Madam.

Queen. Of neither, girl;
 For if of joy, being altogether wanting,
 It doth remember me the more of sorrow;
 Or if of grief, being altogether had,⁴
 It adds more sorrow to my want of joy;
 For what I have, I need not to repeat,
 And what I want, it boots not to complain.

1. Lady. Madam, I'll sing.

Queen. 'T is well that thou hast cause;
 But thou shouldst please me better, wouldst thou weep.

1. Lady. I could weep, Madam, would it do you good.

Queen. And I could sing,⁵ would weeping do me good,
 And never borrow any tear of thee.

But stay, here come the gardeners:
 Let's step into the shadow of these trees.

My wretchedness unto a row of pins,⁶

They'll talk of state; for every one doth so

Against a change: woe is forerun with woe.

[QUEEN and Ladies retire.]

Enter a Gardener and Two Servants.

Gard. Go, bind thou up yond dangling apricocks,
 Which, like unruly children, make their sire

Stoop with oppression of their prodigal⁷ weight:

Give some supportance to the bending twigs. —

Go thou, and like an executioner

Cut off the heads of too-fast-growing sprays,

That look too lofty in our commonwealth:

All must be even in our government. —

You thus employ'd, I will go root away

The noisome weeds, that without profit suck

The soil's fertility from wholesome flowers.

1. Serv. Why should we, in the compass of a pale,

Keep law, and form, and due proportion,

Showing, as in a model, our firm estate,⁸

When our sea-walled⁹ garden, the whole land,

Is full of weeds, her fairest flowers chok'd up,

Her fruit-trees all unprun'd, her hedges ruin'd,

Her knots¹⁰ disorder'd, and her wholesome herbs

Swarming with caterpillars?

Gard. Hold thy peace.

He that hath suffer'd this disorder'd spring,

Hath now himself met with the fall of leaf:

The weeds that his broad-spreading leaves did shelter,

That seem'd in eating him to hold him up,

Are pluck'd up, root and all, by Bolingbroke;

I mean, the earl of Wiltshire, Bushy, Green.

1. Serv. What! are they dead?

Gard.

They are; and Bolingbroke

Hath seiz'd the wasteful king. — O! what pity is it,

That he had not so trimm'd and dress'd his land,

1) rub = Anstoss, Schwierigkeit, Unebenheit des Bodens, ist zugleich ein technischer Ausdruck von der Kegelbahn. So in Fuller's Holy State: a rub to an overthrown bowl proves an help by hindering it. — Eben so doppelsinnig ist bias. 2) Wortspiel zwischen measure = Tanzmelodie, und = Mass. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 3, Anm. 48. 3) So emendirte Rowe das Of sorrow, or of grief? der Qs. und Fol. Da aber die Königin nachher erst joy, dann grief nennt, so wäre vielleicht Capell's Emendation Of joy, or grief? vorzuziehen. 4) being had = in meinem Besitze befindlich, ist der Gegensatz zu being wanting = mir fehlend. 5) So Qs. und Fol. — Die Königin bezieht sich auf das Anerbieten der Hofdame, ihr Etwas vorzusingen, und meint, sie würde selbst singen können, — als Zeichen ihrer harmlosen Stimmung, — wenn sie in den Thränen nur erst eine Erleichterung zu finden vermöchte, ohne dass sie dabei Thränen von der Hofdame zu borgen nöthig haben würde. — Die meisten Hgg., welche diesen Sinn nicht verstanden, lesen mit Pope and I could weep. — Staunton, der im Text die alte Lesart beibehält, vermuthet, dass Sh. geschrieben haben möge: And I could sing, would singing do me good. 6) Sie will ihr Elend verwetten gegen eine Reihe von Nadeln, dass die Gärtner von Staatsangelegenheiten sprechen, wie Jeder das thut, wenn ein Wechsel herannaht. In solcher Zeit eilt die unbehagliche Stimmung des Einzelnen, wie ein Symptom, dem allgemeinen Leid voraus. 7) Bei prodigal wird immer an den prodigal son = den verlorenen Sohn im Evangelium, gedacht. 8) Die Gärtner, indem sie den Garten in Ordnung halten, zeigen ihren beschränkten Staat, gleichsam im Abbilde, fest und wohlgegründet, im Gegensatz zu dem grossen Garten England, der voll Unkraut steht. — Für estate setzt die Folioausg. von 1632 state. 9) sea-walled = von der See umgeben, wie von einer Mauer. — Das Compositum fasst zusammen, was A. 2, Sc. 1 hiess: in the silver sea, || Which serves it in the office of a wall. 10) knots sind die Taxushecken, welche in symmetrischer Anordnung oder künstlicher Verschlingung als Gartenzier angelegt wurden. In Love's Labour's Lost (A. 1, Sc. 1) kommt thy curious-knotted garden vor. 11) Qs. und Fol. lesen, offenbar verstümmelt: As we this garden at time of year || And wound the bark. — Vielleicht ist statt des von den Hgg. eingeschobenen zweiten we ein Verbum

As we this garden! We at time of year
Do wound the bark,¹¹ the skin of our fruit-trees,
Lest, being over-proud in sap and blood,
With too much riches it confound itself:
Had he done so to great and growing men,
They might have liv'd to bear, and he to taste
Their fruits of duty. Superfluous¹² branches
We lop away, that bearing boughs may live:
Had he done so, himself had borne the crown,
Which waste of idle hours¹³ hath quite thrown down.

1. Serv. What! think you then, the king shall be depos'd?

Gard. Depress'd¹⁴ he is already; and depos'd,
'T is doubt,¹⁵ he will be. Letters came last night
To a dear friend of the good¹⁶ duke of York's,
That tell black tidings.

Queen. O! I am press'd to death¹⁷ through want of speaking. [Coming forward.]
Thou, old Adam's likeness,¹⁸ set to dress this garden,
How dares thy harsh-rude tongue sound this displeasing news?

What Eve, what serpent hath suggested¹⁹ thee
To make a second fall of cursed man?
Why dost thou say king Richard is depos'd?
Dar'st thou, thou little better thing than earth,
Divine his downfall? Say, where, when, and how Cam'st thou by these ill tidings? speak, thou wretch.

Gard. Pardon me, Madam: little joy have I,
To breathe these news, yet what I say is true.
King Richard, he is in the mighty hold
Of Bolingbroke; their fortunes both are weigh'd:
In your lord's scale is nothing but himself,
And some few vanities²⁰ that make him light;
But in the balance of great Bolingbroke,
Besides himself, are all the English peers,
And with that odds he weighs king Richard down.
Post you to London, and you'll find it so;
I speak no more than every one doth know.

Queen. Nimble mischance, that art so light of foot,
Doth not thy embassy belong to me,
And am I last that knows it? O! thou think'st
To serve me last, that I may longest keep Thy sorrow in my breast. — Come, ladies, go
To meet at London London's king in woe. —

What! was I born to this, that my sad look
Should grace the triumph of great Bolingbroke? —
Gardener, for telling me these news²¹ of woe,
Pray God²² the plants thou graft'st may never grow.

[Exeunt QUEEN and Ladies.]

Gard. Poor queen! so that thy state might be no worse,

I would my skill were subject to thy curse. —
Here did she fall²³ a tear; here, in this place,
I'll set a bank of rue,²⁴ sour herb of grace;
Rue, even for ruth, here shortly shall be seen,
In the remembrance of a weeping queen. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.

London. Westminster Hall.

*The Lords spiritual on the right side of the throne;
the Lords temporal on the left; the Commons below.*

*Enter BOLINGBROKE, AUMERLE, SURREY, NORTHUMBERLAND,
PERCY, FITZWATER, another Lord, the Bishop of CAR-LISLE, the Abbot of WESTMINSTER, and Attendants.
Officers behind, with BAGOT.*¹

Boling. Call forth Bagot. —
Now, Bagot, freely speak thy mind,
What thou dost know of noble Gloster's death,
Who wrought it with the king, and who perform'd
The bloody office of his timeless² end.

Bagot. Then set before my face the lord Aumerle.
Boling. Cousin, stand forth, and look upon that man.
Bagot. My lord Aumerle, I know your daring tongue
Scorns to unsay what once it hath deliver'd.
In that dead time³ when Gloster's death was plotted,
I heard you say, — 'Is not my arm of length,
That reacheth from the restful English court
As far as Calais, to mine uncle's head?'
Amongst much other talk, that very time,
I heard you say, that you had rather refuse
The offer of an hundred thousand crowns,
Than Bolingbroke's return to England;
Adding withal, how blest this land would be
In this your cousin's death.

wie do zufällig ausgefallen. Es liesse sich dann mit Beibehaltung des and der ältern Ausgg. lesen As we this garden do at time of year || And wound the bark. — In der folgenden Zeile haben die spätern Qs. und die Fol. with sap etc. 12) So Qs. und Fol. — Die meisten Hgg. lesen mit der Folioausg. von 1632 All superfluous. 13) So die Qs.; die Fol. hat waste and idle hours. 14) depress'd und depos'd sind wegen des Gleichklanges zusammengestellt. — In dem vorhergehenden Verse lassen Qs. und Fol. then aus, das Pope zuerst einfügte. 15) Es ist Besorgniss vorhanden. — Dafür hat die Fol. das gewöhnlichere 't is doubted, he will be. 16) good fehlt in der Fol. 17) Malone findet hier eine Anspielung auf die Tortur, die bei den hartnäckig schweisgsamen Angeklagten angewandt wurde und die darin bestand, dass man ein schweres Gewicht ihnen auf den Magen legte. 18) So in K. Henry VI. Second Part (A. 4, Sc. 2) Adam was a gardener. 19) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 26. 20) vanities ist hier nicht als abstracter Begriff zu fassen, sondern = ein paar dem Könige treu gebliebene leichtfertige Gefährten, gleichsam personificirte Eitelkeiten. 21) So die Qs.; die Fol. this news. 22) So die Qs., scil. I pray God. — Die Fol. liest, vielleicht in Folge der Theaterzensur: I would. 23) Das transitive fall = fallen lassen, das Q. A. hat, änderten die spätern Qs. und die Fol. in das gewöhnlichere drop um. 24) Wortspiel zwischen rue = Raute, die Pflanze, welche auch herb of grace hiess, und rue = Leid, Wehe. Das Wort kommt in diesem Sinne substantivisch in Braithwait's Shepherd Tales vor: That bed which did all joys display || Became a bed of rue. — Sh. erklärt das ungewöhnliche Wort mit ruth: rue, even for ruth.

1) Die ausführliche Bühnenweisung ist erst von den Hggn. mit Benutzung der Chroniken so gegeben; die Qs. haben höchst einfach: Enter Bolingbroke, Aumerle and others, und die Fol., etwas ausführlicher: Enter as to the Parliament, Bolingbroke, Aumerle, Northumberland etc. 2) timeless = unzeitig, wird von einem gewaltsamen, also den rechten Verlauf der Zeit nicht achtenden Tode gebraucht. 3) dead time = todtenstille, dunkle, unheimliche Zeit. — Hier werden dead und death zusammengestellt. — In der drittletzten Zeile dieser

Aum. Princes, and noble lords,
What answer shall I make to this base man?
Shall I so much dishonour my fair stars,⁴
On equal terms to give him chastisement?
Either I must, or have mine honour soil'd
With the attainder of his slanderous lips. —
There is my gage, the manual seal of death,
That marks thee out for hell: I say, thou liest.
And will maintain, what thou hast said, is false,
In thy heart-blood, though being all too base
To stain the temper of my knightly sword.
Boling. Bagot, forbear: thou shalt not take it up.⁵
Aum. Excepting one, I would he were the best
In all this presence, that hath mov'd me so.
Fitz. If that thy valour stand on sympathies,⁶
There is my gage, Aumerle, in gage to thine.
By that fair sun which shows me where thou stand'st,
I heard thee say, and vauntingly thou spak'st it,
That thou wert cause of noble Gloster's death.
If thou deny'st it twenty times, thou liest;⁷
And I will turn thy falsehood to thy heart,⁸
Where it was forged, with my rapier's point.
Aum. Thou dar'st not, coward, live to see that day.
Fitz. Now, by my soul, I would it were this hour.
Aum. Fitzwater, thou art damn'd to hell for this.
Percy. Aumerle, thou liest; his honour is as true
In this appeal, as thou art all unjust;
And, that thou art so, there I throw my gage,
To prove it on thee to the extremest point
Of mortal breathing. Seize it, if thou dar'st.
Aum. An if I do not, may my hands rot off,
And never brandish more revengeful steel
Over the glittering helmet of my foe!
Lord. I task the earth⁹ to the like, forsworn Aumerle;
And spur thee on with full as many lies¹⁰
As may be holla'd in thy treacherous ear
From sun to sun.¹¹ There is my honour's pawn:
Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st.
Aum. Who sets me else? by heaven, I'll throw at all.¹²

I have a thousand spirits in one breast,
To answer twenty thousand such as you.
Surrey. My lord Fitzwater, I do remember well
The very time Aumerle and you did talk.
Fitz. 'T is very true:¹³ you were in presence then;
And you can witness with me, this is true.
Surrey. As false, by heaven, as heaven itself is true.
Fitz. Surrey, thou liest.
Surrey. Dishonourable boy!
That lie shall lie¹⁴ so heavy on my sword,
That it shall render vengeance and revenge,
Till thou, the lie-giver, and that lie, do lie
In earth as quiet as thy father's scull.
In proof whereof, there is my honour's pawn:
Engage it to the trial, if thou dar'st.
Fitz. How fondly dost thou spur a forward horse!
If I dare eat, or drink, or breathe, or live,
I dare meet Surrey in a wilderness,¹⁵
And spit upon him, whilst I say, he lies,
And lies, and lies. There is my bond of faith,
To tie thee to my strong correction.
As I intend to thrive in this new world,¹⁶
Aumerle is guilty of my true appeal.
Besides, I heard the banish'd Norfolk say,
That thou, Aumerle, didst send two of thy men
To execute the noble duke at Calais.
Aum. Some honest Christian trust me with a gage.
That Norfolk lies, here do I throw down this,¹⁷
If he may be repeal'd to try his honour.
Boling. These differences shall all rest under gage,
Till Norfolk be repeal'd: repeal'd he shall be,
And, though mine enemy, restor'd again
To all his lands and signories; when he's return'd,
Against Aumerle we will enforce his trial.
Bishop. That honourable day shall ne'er be seen.
Many a time hath banish'd Norfolk fought
For Jesu Christ in glorious christian field,
Streaming¹⁸ the ensign of the christian cross,
Against black pagans, Turks, and Saracens;

Rede will auch Sidney Walker England dreisylbig lesen. 4) my fair stars ist = Alles, was mir durch die Gunst der Gestirne bei der Geburt zu Theil geworden ist, also königliches Geblüt, Rang und Würde. So in Twelfth-Night (A. 2, Sc. 5) in my stars I am above thee; but be not afraid of greatness. — Diese Vorzüge der Geburt würde er entehren, wenn er sich dem Bagot gleichstellte, um ihn zu züchtigen. 5) d. h. den Handschuh, welchen Aumerle ihm zur Ausforderung vor die Füße geworfen (there is my gage). — Vgl. Einleitung pag. 617. 6) sympathies, von Zweien gebraucht, also im Plural, wie die Fol. hat (nur dass sie sympathize für sympathies druckt), ist die aus gleicher Stellung und Lage hervorgehende Gleichheit des Fühlens und Denkens. — Fitzwater bezieht sich darauf, dass Aumerle sich scheute, mit einem Unebenbürtigen, wie Bagot, sich in einen Zweikampf einzulassen, und stellt sich dem Muthe Aumerle's als ebenbürtiger Gegner dar. — Die Qs. haben weniger gut sympathy. 7) Nach der Interpunction der Qs.: und wenn Du es auch zwanzig Mal ableugnest, so bleibt Deine Versicherung immer eine Lüge. — Die Fol. verbindet twenty times mit thou liest. 8) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 30. — Mit der Degenspitze will Fitzwater die Lüge Aumerle's dahin zurückstossen, wo sie gebildet war, d. h. in sein Herz. 9) Q. A. hat taske, die spätern Qs. take. Der Sinn beider Lesarten kann nur der sein, dass der Herausfordernde den Erdboden zu demselben Zwecke oder in demselben Sinne in Anspruch nimmt, wie Percy, Aumerle und Fitzwater, d. h. seinen Fehdehandschuh auf die Erde wirft. Eine andere Erklärung von I task the earth giebt Staunton: I challenge the whole world. — In der Fol. fehlt sowohl die Rede dieses ungenannten Lords, als auch Aumerle's Antwort darauf. 10) lies sind hier = Beschuldigungen der Lüge, Erklärungen, dass der Andere gelogen hat. 11) from sun to sun emendirte Capell die Lesart der Qs. from sin to sin, was Henley erklären wollte: from one denial to another. — Steevens deutete die Emendation: from one day to another, Malone aber, mit richtiger Bezugnahme auf die Gesetze des Zweikampfes: from sunrise to sunset. — In diesem Sinne kommt in Cymbeline (A. 3, Sc. 2) 'twixt sun and sun vor. 12) to set und to throw sind Ausdrücke, die dem Würfelspiel entlehnt sind, und betreffen den Einsatz und den Wurf. 13) So die Qs.; die Fol. hat my lord, 't is very true. 14) Das Wortspiel zwischen lie = Lüge, und to lie = liegen, und = lügen, ist eins der gewöhnlichsten bei Sh. 15) In einer Wüste, wo Niemand mir beistehen könnte. So in Macbeth (A. 3, Sc. 4) And dare me to the desert with thy sword. 16) In dieser Welt, die ich erst jetzt betrete, die für mich eine neue ist. 17) Irgend einen Fehdehandschuh, den er von einem Andern geliehen, da er seinen eignen schon vorher hingeworfen hatte. 18) to stream = wehen lassen.

And, toil'd with works of war, retir'd himself¹⁹
To Italy, and there at Venice gave
His body to that pleasant country's earth,
And his pure soul unto his captain Christ,
Under whose colours he had fought so long.

Boling. Why, bishop, is Norfolk dead?

Bishop. As surely²⁰ as I live, my lord.

Boling. Sweet peace conduct his sweet soul to the bosom

Of good old Abraham!²¹ — Lords appellants,
Your differences shall all rest under gage,
Till we assign you to your days of trial.

Enter YORK, attended.

York. Great duke of Lancaster, I come to thee
From plume-pluck'd Richard, who with willing soul
Adopts thee heir, and his high sceptre yields
To the possession of thy royal hand.
Ascend his throne, descending now from him,²²
And long live Henry, of that name the fourth!²³

Boling. In God's name, I'll ascend the regal throne.

Bishop. Marry, God forbid!²⁴ —

Worst in this royal presence may I speak,
Yet best beseeming me to speak the truth.²⁵
Would God, that any in this noble presence
Were enough noble to be upright judge²⁶
Of noble Richard: then true nobless²⁷ would Learn him forbearance from so foul a wrong.
What subject can give sentence on his king?
And who sits here that is not Richard's subject?
Thieves are not judg'd, but they are by to hear,
Although apparent guilt be seen in them;
And shall the figure of God's majesty,
His captain, steward, deputy elect,
Anointed, crowned, planted many years,
Be judg'd by subject and inferior breath,²⁸
And he himself not present? O! forbend²⁹ it, God,
That, in a christian climate, souls refin'd
Should show so heinous, black, obscene a deed!
I speak to subjects, and a subject speaks,

Stirr'd up by God thus boldly for his king.

My lord of Hereford here, whom you call king,

Is a foul traitor to proud Hereford's king;

And if³⁰ you crown him, let me prophesy,

The blood of English shall manure the ground,

And future ages groan for this foul act;

Peace shall go sleep with Turks and infidels,

And in this seat of peace tumultuous wars

Shall kin with kin, and kind with kind confound;³¹

Disorder, horror, fear, and mutiny,

Shall here inhabit, and this land be call'd

The field of Golgotha and dead men's skulls.

O! if you raise this house against this house,³²

It will the wofullest division prove,

That ever fell upon this cursed earth.

Prevent it, resist it, let it not be so,

Lest child, child's children, cry against you — woe!

North. Well have you argu'd, Sir; and, for your pains,
Of capital treason we arrest you here.

My lord of Westminster, be it your charge

To keep him safely till his day of trial.³³ —

May it please you, lords, to grant the commons' suit?³⁴

Boling. Fetch hither Richard, that in common view

He may surrender: so we shall proceed

Without suspicion.

York. I will be his conduct.³⁵ [Exit.

Boling. Lords, you that here are under our arrest,

Procure your sureties for your days of answer.³⁶ —

[To the Bishop.] Little are we beholding³⁷ to your love,

And little look'd for³⁸ at your helping hands.

Re-enter YORK, with King RICHARD, and Officers bearing the crown, etc.

K. Rich. Alack! why am I sent for to a king,

Before I have shook off the regal thoughts

Wherewith I reign'd? I hardly yet have learn'd

To insinuate, flatter, bow, and bend my limbs:³⁹

Give sorrow leave awhile to tutor me

To this submission. Yet I well remember

19) to retire one's self ist bei Sh. gewöhnlich, = to retire. Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 2, Anm. 9. 20) So Q. A.; die spätern Qs. und die Fol. as sure. 21) So in K. Richard III. (A. 4, Sc. 3) The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom. 22) to descend = als Nachfolger abstammen, steht als Gegensatz zu to ascend: da Du jetzt Nachfolger Richard's bist, so besteige seinen Thron. 23) So die Fol.; die Qs. And long live Henry, fourth of that name. — Zur Rechtfertigung der Lesart der Qs. ist zu bemerken, dass Henry auch sonst bei Sh. dreisylbig zu lesen ist. 24) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 43. — Die Theaterzensur, welche in der Fol. den Namen Gottes einem Statut Jacob's I. gemäss auszu-merzen hatte, ist hier nicht sehr consequent verfahren, indem sie in God's name stehen liess, aber das darauf be-zügliche God forbid in heaven forbid emendirte. 25) Da es mir doch am besten ziemt, die Wahrheit zu reden. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 617. 26) upright judge = gerechter Richter, aus der biblischen Sprache entlehnt. 27) nobless in Q. A., von den spätern Qs. und der Fol. als ein veraltetes Wort in das gewöhnlichere nobleness verändert. — nobless findet sich bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen öfter, namentlich in der Verbindung mit true. So in Chapman's Byron's Conspiracy: True nobless, royalty and happiness, und in Munday's Downfall of Robert Earl of Huntington: the true nobless of your worthy house. — to learn = to teach ist Sh.'sch. 28) Durch das Wort von Unterthanen und niedriger Gestellten. 29) So die Qs.; die Fol. forbid. 30) Auch hier ist and if vielleicht = an if. — Die Fol. schliesst die vorhergehende Zeile mit einem Punctum. 31) kin, die vetterliche Ver-wandtschaft, und kind, die natürliche Blutsverwandtschaft, stellt Sh. auch zusammen in Hamlet (A. 1, Sc. 2) A little more than kin, and less than kind. 32) this house ist das englische Königshaus, gegen sich selbst in Empörung versetzt. — Für raise der Qs. hat die Fol. rear. 33) Das Folgende bis zum Weggange König Richard's fehlt in Q. A. und B. — Vgl. Einleitung pag. 615 u. 618. 34) d. h. das Gesuch des Hauses der Gemeinen, dass Bolingbroke den Thron besteigen möge. 35) conduct = Geleitsmann. So in Romeo and Juliet (A. 5, Sc. 3) Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide! 36) Er wendet sich an Aumerle und die Uebrigen, die vorher gegen einander klagbar geworden waren und die nun Bürgschaft stellen sollen, dass sie am Tage der Entscheidung oder Verantwortung durch Zweikampf erscheinen werden. 37) Die meisten Hgg. setzen stillschweigend beholden dafür. 38) So die Fol. Bolingbroke sagt in Bezug auf die vom Bischof gesprochenen Worte: wir erwarteten im Voraus wenig von Eurer Hülfe. — Die Qs. haben look. 39) So die Qs.; die Fol. bend my knee. 40) favours

The favours⁴⁰ of these men: were they not mine?
Did they not sometime cry, All hail! to me?
So Judas did to Christ: but he, in twelve,
Found truth in all but one; I, in twelve thousand, none.
God save the king! — Will no man say, amen?
Am I both priest and clerk?⁴¹ well then, amen.
God save the king! although I be not he;
And yet, amen, if heaven do think him me. —
To do what service am I sent for hither?

York. To do that office, of thine own good will,
Which tired majesty did make thee offer,
The resignation of thy state and crown
To Harry Bolingbroke.

K. Rich. Give me the crown.⁴² — Here, cousin, seize the crown;

Here, cousin,
On this side my hand, and on that side, thine.⁴³
Now is this golden crown like a deep well,
That owes⁴⁴ two buckets filling one another;
The emptier ever dancing in the air,
The other down, unseen, and full of water:
That bucket down, and full of tears, am I,
Drinking my griefs, whilst you mount up on high.

Boling. I thought you had been willing to resign.

K. Rich. My crown, I am; but still my griefs are mine.

You may my glories and my state depose,
But not my griefs: still am I king of those.

Boling. Part of your cares you give me with your crown.

K. Rich. Your cares set up do not pluck my cares
down.

My care is loss of care, by old care done;⁴⁵
Your care is gain of care, by new care won:
The cares I give, I have, though given away;
They tend the crown, yet still with me they stay.⁴⁶

Boling. Are you contented to resign the crown?

K. Rich. Ay, no; — no, ay; — for I must nothing be;⁴⁷

Therefore no no,⁴⁸ for I resign to thee.

Now mark me how I will undo myself: —

I give this heavy weight from off my head,
And this unwieldy sceptre from my hand,
The pride of kingly sway from out my heart;
With mine own tears I wash away my balm,⁴⁹
With mine own hands I give away my crown,
With mine own tongue deny my sacred state,
With mine own breath release all duty's rites:⁵⁰
All pomp and majesty I do forswear;
My manors, rents, revenues, I forego;
My acts, decrees, and statutes, I deny:
God pardon all oaths that are broke to me!
God keep all vows unbroke, that swear to thee!⁵¹
Make me, that nothing have, with nothing griev'd,
And thou with all pleas'd,⁵² that hast all achiev'd!
Long may'st thou live in Richard's seat to sit,
And soon lie Richard in an earthy pit!
God save king Henry, unking'd Richard says,
And send him many years of sunshine days! —
What more remains?

North. [Offering a paper.] No more, but that you read

These accusations, and these grievous crimes,
Committed by your person, and your followers,
Against the state and profit of this land;
That, by confessing them, the souls of men
May deem that you are worthily depos'd.

K. Rich. Must I do so? and must I ravel out
My weav'd-up follies?⁵³ Gentle Northumberland,
If thy offences were upon record,
Would it not shame thee, in so fair a troop,
To read a lecture of them? If thou wouldst,⁵⁴
There shouldst thou find one heinous article,
Containing the deposing of a king.
And cracking the strong warrant of an oath,
Mark'd with a blot, damn'd in the book of heaven. —
Nay, all of you, that stand and look upon me,⁵⁵
Whilst that my wretchedness doth bait myself,
Though some of you, with Pilate, wash your hands,
Showing an outward pity; yet you Pilates
Have here deliver'd me to my sour cross,
And water cannot wash away your sin.

= Mienen, Züge. Der Plural steht, weil von den Gesichtszügen Mehrerer die Rede ist. 41) Es ist Sache des Priesters, God save the king! zu sagen, und Sache des assistirenden Laien, der der Gemeinde die Responsen vorspricht, dazu das Amen zu rufen. Richard muss, in Ermangelung eines Andern, Beides in seiner Person vereinigen. 42) Diese Worte, sowie die folgenden here, cousin fehlen in den Qs. — Das Here, cousin, welches die folgende Zeile bildet, strich Malone vielleicht mit Recht, indem er annahm, dass dasselbe aus Versehen zweimal im Text der Fol. stehe: Give me the crown. Here, cousin, seize the crown; || Here, cousin, on this side my hand, on that side thine. — Für Harry Bolingbroke der Qs. in York's vorhergehender Rede hat die Fol. Henry Bolingbroke. 43) Die Fol. hat thine, die Qs. yours. — and findet sich nur in den Qs. 44) to owe = besitzen, zu eigen haben. 45) Richard spielt mit der doppelten Bedeutung von my care = das, was mir am Herzen liegt, wonach ich strebe, und = das, was mich quält: mir liegt daran (my care is), meine bisherigen Sorgen los zu werden, indem die alte Noth, die mit der Königswürde verknüpft ist, abgethan wird (done); Dir liegt daran, diese Sorgen Dir anzueignen, indem Du Dir die neue Sorge um die Krone gewinnst. 46) Obgleich sie der Krone folgen, also eigentlich auf Dich mit ihr übergehen sollten, so bleiben sie doch bei mir. 47) Durch meine Thronentsagung muss ich zu einem Nichts werden, mich vernichten. — Ebenso sagt er gleich darauf: how I will undo myself. 48) no no = kein Nein, ist die Interpunction der späteren Qs., derjenigen der Fol. no, no = nein, nein! vorzuziehen, weil der Sinn des Zusammenhangs verlangt, dass Richard, nach kurzem Schwanken zwischen Ja und Nein, die Frage, ob er der Krone entsagen wolle, bejaht, also das Nein zurücknimmt. 49) Das Salböl, mit dem er zum König gesalbt wurde. 50) So die Qs., wofür Collier duties, rites lesen wollte. all duty's rites sind die herkömmlichen Huldigungen der Pflichtergebenheit von Seiten seiner bisherigen Unterthanen. — Die Fol. hat all duteous oaths. 51) So die Qs.; die Fol. are made to thee. 52) Die Construction ist ungenau, da sich zu thou nicht leicht, wie zu dem vorhergehenden make me, ein God ergänzen lässt, wie der Sinn es doch erfordert. 53) follies in der Fol., folly in den Qs. 54) scil. wouldst read a lecture of them = wenn Du eine Aufzeichnung Deiner Vergehungen laut vorlesen wolltest, dann würdest Du darunter einen argen Punkt finden. 55) So die Fol. — In den Qs. fehlt all und me. Letzteres lassen auch manche Hgg. aus. 56) a sort of traitors = ein Haufe,

North. My lord, despatch: read o'er these articles.

K. Rich. Mine eyes are full of tears, I cannot see;
And yet salt water blinds them not so much,
But they can see a sort of traitors⁵⁶ here.
Nay, if I turn mine eyes upon myself,
I find myself a traitor with the rest;
For I have given here my soul's consent,
To undeck the pompous body of a king;
Made glory base, and sovereignty⁵⁷ a slave,
Proud majesty a subject, state a peasant.

North. My lord, —

K. Rich. No lord of thine, thou haught⁵⁸ insulting man,

Nor no man's lord: I have no name, no title, —
No, not that name was given me at the font,⁵⁹ —
But 't is usurp'd. — Alack, the heavy day!
That I have worn so many winters out,
And know not now what name to call myself.
O! that I were a mockery king of snow,
Standing before the sun of Bolingbroke,
To melt myself away in water-drops! —
Good king, — great king, — and yet not greatly good,
An if my word⁶⁰ be sterling yet in England,
Let it command a mirror hither straight,
That it may show me what a face I have,
Since it is bankrupt of his majesty.⁶¹

Boling. Go some of you, and fetch a looking-glass.

[*Exit an Attendant.*⁶²

North. Read o'er this paper, while the glass doth come.

K. Rich. Fiend! thou torment'st me ere I come to hell.

Boling. Urge it no more, my lord Northumberland.

North. The commons will not then be satisfied.

K. Rich. They shall be satisfied: I'll read enough,
When I do see the very book indeed,
Where all my sins are writ, and that's — myself.

Re-enter Attendant, with a glass.

Give me that glass,⁶³ and therein will I read. —
No deeper wrinkles yet? Hath sorrow struck
So many blows upon this face of mine,
And made no deeper wounds? — O flattering glass!
Like to my followers in prosperity,
Thou dost beguile me.⁶⁴ Was this face the face,

That every day under his household roof
Did keep ten thousand men?⁶⁵ Was this the face,
That like the sun did make beholders wink?
Was this the face, that fac'd⁶⁶ so many follies,
And was at last outfac'd by Bolingbroke?
A brittle glory shineth in this face:⁶⁷
As brittle as the glory is the face;

[Dashes the glass against the ground.

For there it is, crack'd in a hundred shivers. —
Mark, silent king, the moral of this sport,
How soon my sorrow hath destroy'd my face.

Boling. The shadow of your sorrow hath destroy'd
The shadow of your face.

K. Rich. Say that again.

The shadow of my sorrow? Ha! let's see: —

'T is very true, my grief lies all within; —

And these external manners of laments⁶⁸

Are merely shadows to the unseen grief,

That swells with silence in the tortur'd soul;⁶⁹

There lies the substance: and I thank thee, king,

For thy great bounty, that not only giv'st

Me cause to wail, but teachest me the way

How to lament the cause. I'll beg one boon,

And then be gone and trouble you no more.

Shall I obtain it?

Boling. Name it, fair cousin.

K. Rich. Fair cousin? I am⁷⁰ greater than a king;

For, when I was a king, my flatterers

Were then but subjects; being now a subject,

I have a king here to my flatterer.

Being so great, I have no need to beg.

Boling. Yet ask.

K. Rich. And shall I have it?

Boling. You shall.

K. Rich. Why then, give me leave to go.

Boling. Whither?

K. Rich. Whither you will, so I were from your sights.

Boling. Go, some of you; convey him to the Tower.

K. Rich. O, good! Convey?⁷¹ — Conveyers are you all,

That rise thus nimbly by a true king's fall.

[*Exeunt King RICHARD and Guard.*⁷²

eine Bande von Verräthern. — In diesem verächtlichen Sinne kommt sort bei Sh. und seinen Zeitgenossen öfter vor. So in Sackville's Gorboduc: the unarmed sort of skillless rebels, und in K. Henry VI. Second Part (A. 2, Sc. 1) A sort of naughty persons, lewdly bent. 57) So die Qs.; die Folioausgg. haben a sovereignty. 58) haught = stolz, übermüthig. — insulting gebraucht Sh. = triumphirend, ohne den Nebengriff des Kränkenden, Beleidigenden. So in K. Henry VI. First Part (A. 1, Sc. 2) Now am I like that proud insulting ship, || Which Caesar and his fortune bare at once. 59) Den Namen Richard, der ihm am Taufbecken gegeben war, darf er nicht mehr führen, da er mit diesem Namen als König bezeichnet wurde. 60) So die Fol.; die Qs. haben name dafür. 61) Wie mein Gesicht aussieht, seit ihm die königliche Majestät, die es früher besass, abgeht. — his für its, wie gewöhnlich bei Sh. 62) In den alten Ausgg. fehlt diese Bühnenweisung; dagegen hat die Fol. nachher: Enter one with a glass. 63) Der Rest dieses Verses findet sich nur in der Fol., welche auch that glass für the glass der Qs. liest. 64) Die Qs. lassen den ersten Theil dieser Zeile aus und setzen Was this the face. 65) Auch die folgenden anderthalb Verse bringt die Fol. zuerst. 66) Wortspiel zwischen face = Angesicht, to face = einer Sache einen Anstrich geben, und to outface = aus der Fassung bringen, verwischen. 67) Vielleicht hatte Sh. hier glass geschrieben, das mit dem folgenden face verwechselt wurde. 68) So Qs. und Fol., von Capell in lament verändert. 69) Im Folgenden lassen die Qs. there lies the substance aus, ebenso for thy great bounty, und Shall I obtain it? 70) So die Fol.; die Qs. haben Fair coz! why I am etc. 71) to convey gebraucht Bolingbroke in gewöhnlichem, allgemeinem Sinne = fortschaffen, geleiten; Richard wendet das Wort an, wie es euphemistisch = stehlen, prellen, gebraucht wurde. So in Merry Wives of Windsor (A. 1, Sc. 3) Convey, the wise it call. Steal? foh! 72) Hier schliesst dasjenige Stück dieser Scene, das sich erst in der Q. C. findet. Vgl. Anm. 33 dieser Scene. — Der Schluss des Actes ist allen alten Ausgg. gemeinsam, nur dass er in Q. A. und B. an die dort unmittelbar vorhergehenden Worte Northumberland's be it your charge || To keep him safely till his day of trial sich in Bolingbroke's Antwort so anschliesst: Let it be so, and lo! on Wednesday next || We

Boling. On Wednesday next we solemnly set down
Our coronation: lords, prepare yourselves.

[Exeunt all but the Abbot, Bishop of Carlisle, and Aumerle.]

Abbot. A woful pageant have we here beheld.

Bishop. The woe's to come: the children yet unborn
Shall feel this day as sharp to them as thorn.⁷³

Aum. You holy clergymen, is there no plot
To rid the realm of this pernicious blot?

Abbot. My lord, before I freely speak my mind herein,
You shall not only take the sacrament
To bury⁷⁴ mine intents, but also to effect
Whatever I shall happen to devise.

I see your brows are full of discontent,
Your hearts of sorrow, and your eyes of tears:
Come home with me to supper; I will lay
A plot, shall show us all a merry day.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.

London. A Street leading to the Tower.

Enter QUEEN and Attendants.

Queen. This way the king will come: this is the way
To Julius Cæsar's ill-erected tower,¹
To whose flint bosom my condemned lord
Is doom'd a prisoner by proud Bolingbroke.
Here let us rest, if this rebellious earth
Have any resting for her true king's queen.

Enter King RICHARD and Guards.

But soft, but see, or rather do not see,
My fair rose wither: yet look up, behold,
That you in pity may dissolve to dew,
And wash him fresh again with true-love tears. —
Ah! thou, the model² where old Troy did stand,
Thou map of honour.³ thou king Richard's tomb,
And not king Richard, thou most beauteous inn,⁴

Why should hard-favour'd⁵ grief be lodg'd in thee,
When triumph is become an ale-house guest?

K. Rich. Join not with grief,⁶ fair woman, do not so,
To make my end too sudden: learn, good soul,
To think our former state a happy dream;
From which awak'd, the truth of what we are Shows us but this. I am sworn brother, sweet,
To grim necessity;⁷ and he and I
Will keep a league till death. Hie thee to France,
And cloister thee in some religious house:
Our holy lives must win a new world's crown,
Which our profane hours⁸ here have stricken down.

Queen. What! is my Richard both in shape and mind
Transform'd and weakened? Hath Bolingbroke
Depos'd thine intellect? hath he been in thy heart?
The lion, dying, thrusteth forth his paw,
And wounds the earth, if nothing else, with rage
To be o'erpower'd; and wilt thou, pupil-like,
Take thy correction mildly? kiss the rod,
And fawn on rage with base humility,
Which art a lion, and a king of beasts?⁹

K. Rich. A king of beasts, indeed; if aught but beasts,
I had been still a happy king of men.
Good sometime queen,¹⁰ prepare thee hence for France:
Think I am dead, and that even here thou tak'st,
As from my death-bed, my last living leave.
In winter's tedious nights sit by the fire
With good old folks, and let them tell thee tales
Of woful ages, long ago betid;
And, ere thou bid good night, to quit their grief,
Tell thou the lamentable fall of me.¹¹
And send the hearers weeping to their beds:
For why the senseless brands will sympathize
The heavy accent of thy moving tongue,
And in compassion weep the fire out;
And some will mourn in ashes, some coal-black,¹²
For the deposing of a rightful king.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND, attended.

North. My lord, the mind of Bolingbroke is chang'd:
You must to Pomfret, not unto the Tower. —

solemnly proclaim our coronation: || Lords, be ready all. 73) Eine prophetische Hinweisung auf die spätern Kriege der Yorks und Lancasters und deren traurige Folgen für England. 74) to bury = es so geheim halten, als ob es begraben wäre, oder = in Eurer Brust begraben.

1) ill-erected = zum Unglück erbaut. — Dass Julius Cæsar zuerst den Londoner Tower erbaut habe, kommt auch in K. Richard III. (A. 3, Sc. 1) vor, wo Buckingham auf die Frage Did Julius Cæsar build that place, my lord? antwortet He did, my gracious lord, begin that place, || Which, since, succeeding ages have re-edified. 2) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 7. — Die Königin vergleicht ihren seiner Würde beraubten Gemahl dem wüsten Platze, auf welchem ehemals das mächtige Troja stand. 3) map = Abbild; so ist Richard nur ein Bild seiner früheren Würde, nicht mehr diese Würde selbst. Sh. nennt in seiner Lucrece den Schlaf the map of death. 4) inn, in der älteren Sprache = Wohnung, Residenz. So in Spenser's Faerie Queene: Phœbus with his fiery wain || Unto his inn began to draw apace. — Hier steht inn = vornehme Wohnung, im Gegensatze zu ale-house = eine gemeine Kneipe. 5) hard-favour'd = von hässlichem, abstossendem Aeussern. 6) Verbinde Dich nicht mit dem Schmerze, der schon in mir haust; verstärke meinen Schmerz nicht noch durch den Deinigen, damit ich nicht plötzlich dem doppelten Gewicht unterliege. 7) Ich bin mit der erbarmungslosen Noth eine Verbrüderung auf Leben und Tod eingegangen. 8) Die Stunden, die wir in ungeistlicher, frivoler Weise verbrachten. — Für das stricken der Fol. haben die Qs. thrown. 9) So die spätern Qs. und die Fol. — Q. A. hat the king of beasts. — Den von der Königin bildlich in Bezug auf das vorhergehende lion gebrauchten Ausdruck fasst Richard in seiner Erwiderung wörtlich: Wären meine Unterthanen keine gefühllosen Thiere gewesen, so regierte ich noch. 10) sometime und sometimes ist oft adjectivisch = ehemalig. — So stand A. 1, Sc. 2: thy sometimes brother's wife. 11) fall ist die Lesart der Fol., tale die der Qs. — Malone, der erstere mit Recht für eine Sh.'sche Aenderung hält, citirt dazu K. Henry VIII. (A. 2, Sc. 1) And when you would say something that is sad, || Speak how I fell. 12) mourn in ashes und coal-black wird hier im wörtlichsten Sinne von der Asche und den Kohlen der auf dem Herde oder im Kamine erloschenen Feuerbrände gesagt. — So heisst es in K. John (A. 4, Sc. 1) von der Kohle: The breath of heaven hath blown his spirit out, || And strew'd repentant ashes on his head. — for

And, Madam, there is order ta'en for you:¹³
With all swift speed you must away to France.

K. Rich. Northumberland, thou ladder, wherewithal
The mounting Bolingbroke ascends my throne,
The time shall not be many hours of age
More than it is, ere foul sin gathering head
Shall break into corruption.¹⁴ Thou shalt think,
Though he divide the realm, and give thee half,
It is too little, helping him to all;¹⁵
He¹⁶ shall think, that thou, which know'st the way
To plant unrightful kings, wilt know again,
Being ne'er so little urg'd, another way
To pluck him headlong from the usurped throne.
The love of wicked friends converts to fear;
That fear to hate; and hate turns one, or both,¹⁷
To worthy danger and deserved death.

North. My guilt be on my head, and there an end.
Take leave, and part, for you must part forthwith.

K. Rich. Doubly divorc'd! — Bad men, ye violate
A two-fold marriage; 'twixt my crown and me,
And then betwixt me and my married wife. —
Let me unkiss¹⁸ the oath 'twixt thee and me;
And yet not so, for with a kiss 't was made.
Part us, Northumberland: I towards the north,
Where shivering cold and sickness pines the clime;
My wife¹⁹ to France: from whence, set forth in pomp,
She came adorned hither like sweet May,
Sent back like Hallowmas,²⁰ or short'st of day.

Queen. And must we be divided? must we part?

K. Rich. Ay, hand from hand, my love, and heart from heart.

Queen. Banish us both, and send the king with me.

North. That were some love, but little policy.²¹

Queen. Then whither he goes, thither let me go.

K. Rich. So two, together weeping, make one woe.
Weep thou for me in France, I for thee here;
Better far off, than near, be ne'er the near'.²²
Go, count thy way with sighs, I mine with groans.

Queen. So longest way shall have the longest moans.

K. Rich. Twice for one step I'll groan, the way being short,
And piece the way out with a heavy heart.
Come, come, in wooing sorrow let's be brief,
Since, wedding it, there is such length in grief.²³

One kiss shall stop our mouths, and dumbly part:²⁴
Thus give I mine, and thus take I thy heart. [They kiss.
Queen. Give me mine own again; 't were no good part,
To take on me to keep, and kill thy heart.

[They kiss again.

So, now I have mine own again, be gone,
That I may strive to kill it with a groan.

K. Rich. We make woe wanton²⁵ with this fond delay:
Once more, adieu; the rest let sorrow say. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.

London. A Room in the Duke of York's Palace.

Enter YORK and the DUCHESS.

Duch. My lord, you told me, you would tell the rest,
When weeping made you break the story off,
Of our two cousins coming into London.

York. Where did I leave?

Duch. At that sad stop, my lord,
Where rude misgovern'd hands, from windows' tops,
Threw dust and rubbish on king Richard's head.

York. Then, as I said, the duke, great Bolingbroke,
Mounted upon a hot and fiery steed,
Which his aspiring rider seem'd to know,
With slow but stately pace kept on his course.
While all tongues cried — »God save thee, Bolingbroke!«
You would have thought the very windows spake,
So many greedy looks of young and old
Through casements darted their desiring eyes
Upon his visage; and that all the walls
With painted imagery¹ had said at once, —
»Jesu preserve thee! welcome, Bolingbroke!«
Whilst he, from one side to the other turning,
Bare-headed, lower than his proud steed's neck,
Bespoke them thus, — »I thank you, countrymen:«
And thus still doing, thus he pass'd along.

Duch. Alas, poor Richard! where rode² he the whilst?

York. As in a theatre, the eyes of men,
After a well-grac'd³ actor leaves the stage,
Are idly⁴ bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious;
Even so, or with much more contempt, men's eyes

why steht für for which oder für because. 13) Für Euch sind Anstalten getroffen. — So in Othello (A. 5, Sc. 2) Honest Iago hath ta'en order for 't. 14) Das Bild ist von einem Geschwür entlehnt, das erst den Eiterstoff sammelt und das dann aufbricht. 15) Da Du ihm zu dem Ganzen verhalfst. 16) Die meisten Hgg. fügen mit Rowe vor he zur Vervollständigung des Verses ein and ein. 17) one, or both bezieht sich auf wicked friends: der zwischen den ehemaligen Freunden ausgebrochene Hass bringt dem einen Freunde oder beiden die verdiente Gefährdung oder den verdienten Tod. — worthy steht nicht absolut, sondern = das, was sie durch ihr früheres Verfahren verdient haben. 18) to unkiss = durch einen Kuss widerrufen oder vertilgen. Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 2, Anm. 25. — Der Kuss gilt als eine Besiegelung des Traugelöbnisses. 19) So die Qs.; die Fol. my queen. 20) Der erste Tag des November, der Allerheiligentag, wird in seiner finstern, nebligten Gestalt dem hellen, duftigen Mai gegenübergestellt. 21) Diesen Vers ertheilen die Qs. dem Könige zu. 22) Das zweite near' ist der Comparativ = nearer. Dieselbe Form findet sich in Macbeth (A. 2, Sc. 3) the near' in blood, the nearer bloody; und in Barnaby Rich's Farewell to Military Profession: much were I the near' my purpose. — Der Sinn ist: Besser, weit weg zu sein, als nahe, ohne sich darum näher zu sein. — Staunton interpungirt Better far off, than — near be, ne'er the near und erklärt: be near, but never the nigher. A proverbial saying, implying to come near the subject, but never achieve it. 23) Wir wollen in der Brautwerbung um unsern Gram uns kurz fassen, da er doch lange genug dauert, wenn wir einmal mit ihm vermählt sind. 24) Zu part ist als Object aus dem vorhergehenden our mouths ein us zu ergänzen. 25) So A. 3, Sc. 3: Or shall we play the wantons with our woes?

1) Die Mauern der Häuser waren zum Empfang Bolingbroke's mit bunten Tapeten geschmückt, auf denen u. A. auch Sprüche verzeichnet standen. 2) So Q. A.; die übrigen Qs. und die Fol. haben rides für rode. 3) well-grac'd ist zugleich = wohlbeliebt, und = wohlbegabt. 4) idly = zerstreut, ohne bestimmte Absicht oder

Did scowl on⁵ Richard: no man cried, God save him;
 No joyful tongue gave him his welcome home;
 But dust was thrown upon his sacred head,
 Which with such gentle sorrow he shook off,
 His face still combating with tears and smiles,
 The badges of his grief and patience,⁶
 That had not God, for some strong purpose,⁷ steel'd
 The hearts of men, they must perforce have melted,
 And barbarism itself have pitied him.
 But heaven hath a hand in these events,
 To whose high will we bound our calm contents.
 To Bolingbroke are we sworn subjects now,
 Whose state and honour I for aye allow.

Duch. Here comes my son Aumerle.

York. Aumerle that was;
 But that is lost for being Richard's friend,
 And, Madam, you must call him Rutland⁸ now.
 I am in parliament pledge for his truth
 And lasting fealty to the new-made king.

Enter Aumerle.

Duch. Welcome, my son. Who are the violets now,
 That strew the green lap of the new-come spring?⁹

Aum. Madam, I know not, nor I greatly care not;
 God knows, I had as lief be none, as one.

York. Well, bear you well in this new spring of time,
 Lest you be cropp'd before you come to prime.

What news from Oxford? hold those justs and triumphs?¹⁰

Aum. For aught I know, my lord, they do.

York. You will be there, I know.

Aum. If God prevent not, I purpose so.

York. What seal¹¹ is that, that hangs without thy bosom?

Yea, look'st thou pale? let me see the writing.

Aum. My lord, 't is nothing.

York. No matter then who sees it:
 I will be satisfied, let me see the writing.

Aum. I do beseech your grace to pardon me.

It is a matter of small consequence,
 Which for some reasons I would not have seen.

York. Which for some reasons, Sir, I mean to see.
 I fear, I fear, —

Duch. What should you fear?
 'T is nothing but some bond that he is enter'd into
 For gay apparel 'gainst the triumph day.¹²

York. Bound to himself? what doth he with a bond
 That he is bound to? Wife, thou art a fool. —
 Boy, let me see the writing.

Aum. I do beseech you, pardon me: I may not show it.

York. I will be satisfied: let me see it, I say.

*[Snatches it, and reads.]*¹³

Treason! foul treason! — Villain! traitor! slave!

Duch. What is the matter, my lord?

York. Ho! who is within there?

Enter a Servant.

Saddle my horse.

God for his mercy! what treachery is here!

Duch. Why, what is it, my lord?

York. Give me my boots, I say: saddle my horse. —

[Exit Servant.]

Now, by mine honour, by my life, my troth,
 I will appeach the villain.

Duch. What 's the matter?

York. Peace, foolish woman.

Duch. I will not peace. — What is the matter, Aumerle?

Aum. Good mother, be content: it is no more
 Than my poor life must answer.

Duch. Thy life answer?

York. Bring me my boots: I will unto the king.

Re-enter Servant, with boots.

Duch. Strike him, Aumerle. — Poor boy, thou art amaz'd. —

Hence, villain! never more come in my sight. —

[Exit Servant.]

York. Give me my boots, I say.

Duch. Why, York, what wilt thou do?

Wilt thou not hide the trespass of thine own?

Have we more sons, or are we like to have?

Is not my teeming date drunk up with time,

And wilt thou pluck my fair son from mine age,

And rob me of a happy mother's name?

Is he not like thee? is he not thine own?

York. Thou fond, mad woman,

Wilt thou conceal this dark conspiracy?

A dozen of them here¹⁴ have ta'en the sacrament,

And interchangeably set down their hands,

To kill the king at Oxford.

Duch. He shall be none;

We 'll keep him here: then, what is that to him?

York. Away, fond woman! were he twenty times
 My son, I would appeach him.

Duch. Hadst thou groan'd for him.

As I have done, thou wouldst be more pitiful.

But now I know thy mind: thou dost suspect,

That I have been disloyal to thy bed,

And that he is a bastard, not thy son.

Sweet York, sweet husband, be not of that mind:

He is as like thee as a man may be,

Not like to me, nor any of my kin,

And yet I love him.

York. Make way, unruly woman! [Exit.]

Aufmerksamkeit. 5) So die Fol.; die Qs. haben on gentle Richard, ein Beiwort, das drei Zeilen weiter besser an seiner Stelle ist: gentle sorrow. 6) grief bezieht sich auf tears, patience auf smiles. 7) strong purpose ist ein Zweck, bei dem es gilt, stark zu sein. 8) Als Anhänger Richard's war der Herzog von Aumerle seines Herzogs-rangs beraubt und blieb nur Graf von Rutland. 9) d. h.: Wer ist unter der neuen Regierung Bolingbroke's empor-gekommen? 10) Finden die Turniere und Festlichkeiten, von denen die Rede war, wirklich in Oxford statt? — Die Qs. haben Do these justs and triumphs hold? 11) Das Siegel hing an dem auf Pergament geschriebenen Verträge, den die Verschworenen zur Ermordung Bolingbroke's während der Oxford'schen Festlichkeiten unter sich ab-geschlossen hatten. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 617. — In der vorigen Zeile lesen die Hgg. ohne Autorität prevent it not. 12) Die Herzogin hält das Pergament, dessen Siegel ihrem Sohn aus dem Rock hängt, für eine Schuldverschreibung, die er eingegangen ist, um sich für den Tag der Lustbarkeiten in Oxford hübsch anzustaffiren. — In der Fol. fehlt day. — Einen solchen Schuldschein, erwiedert der Herzog, würde der Gläubiger, nicht der Schuldner bei sich tragen. 13) He plucks it out of his bosom and reads it, lautet die Bühnenweisung der Qs., Snatches it die der Fol. 14) here, mit Hinweisung auf das seinem Sohne abgenommene Schriftstück. 15) Jage so spornstreichs wie ein Eilbote.

Duch. After, Aumerle! Mount thee upon his horse:
Spur, post,¹⁵ and get before him to the king,
And beg thy pardon ere he do accuse thee.
I'll not be long behind; though I be old,
I doubt not but to ride as fast as York:
And never will I rise up from the ground,
Till Bolingbroke have pardon'd thee. Away! be gone.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Windsor. A Room in the Castle.

Enter BOLINGBROKE as king; PERCY, and other Lords.

Boling. Can no man tell me of my unthrifty son?
'T is full three months, since I did see him last.
If any plague hang over us, 't is he.
I would to God, my lords, he might be found.
Inquire at London, 'mongst the taverns there,
For there, they say, he daily doth frequent,
With unrestrained¹ loose companions,
Even such, they say, as stand in narrow lanes,
And beat our watch, and rob our passengers;
Which² he, young wanton, and effeminate boy,
Takes on the point of honour, to support
So dissolute a crew.

Percy. My lord, some two days since I saw the prince,
And told him of these triumphs held at Oxford.

Boling. And what said the gallant?

Percy. His answer was, — he would unto the stews,
And from the common'st creature pluck a glove,³
And wear it as a favour; and with that
He would unhorse the lustiest challenger.

Boling. As dissolute, as desperate: yet through both⁴
I see some sparks of better hope,⁵ which elder days
May happily bring forth. But who comes here?

*Enter AUMERLE.*⁶

Aum. Where is the king?

Boling. What means our cousin, that he stares
And looks so wildly?

Aum. God save your grace. I do beseech your majesty,
To have some conference with your grace alone.

Boling. Withdraw yourselves, and leave us here alone. — [Exeunt PERCY and Lords.]
What is the matter with our cousin now?

Aum. For ever may my knees grow to the earth, [Kneels.]
My tongue cleave to my roof within my mouth,
Unless a pardon, ere I rise, or speak.⁷

Boling. Intended, or committed, was this fault?
If on the first,⁸ how heinous e'er it be,
To win thy after-love, I pardon thee.

Aum. Then give me leave that I may turn the key,
That no man enter till my tale be done.

Boling. Have thy desire. [AUMERLE locks the door.⁹

York. [Within.] My liege, beware! look to thyself:
Thou hast a traitor in thy presence there.

Boling. Villain, I'll make thee safe. [Drawing.

Aum. Stay thy revengeful hand: thou hast no cause to fear.

York. [Within.] Open the door, secure, fool-hardy
king:

Shall I for love speak treason to thy face?¹⁰
Open the door, or I will break it open.

[BOLINGBROKE opens the door.

Enter YORK.

Boling. What is the matter, uncle? speak;
Recover breath: tell us how near is danger,
That we may arm us to encounter it.

York. Peruse this writing here, and thou shalt know
The treason that my haste forbids me show.

Aum. Remember, as thou read'st, thy promise past:
I do repent me; read not my name there;
My heart is not confederate with my hand.¹¹

York. 'T was, villain, ere thy hand did set it down. —
I tore it from the traitor's bosom, king:

Fear, and not love, begets his penitence.

Forget to pity him, lest thy pity prove

A serpent that will sting thee to the heart.

Boling. O heinous, strong, and bold conspiracy! —
O loyal father of a treacherous son!

Thou sheer,¹² immaculate, and silver fountain,
From whence this stream through muddy passages
Hath held¹³ his current, and defil'd himself!

Thy overflow of good converts to bad;¹⁴
And thy abundant goodness shall excuse
This deadly blot in thy digressing son.

York. So shall my virtue be his vice's bawd,
And he shall spend mine honour with his shame,

As thriftless sons their scraping fathers' gold.
Mine honour lives when his dishonour dies,

Or my sham'd life in his dishonour lies:
Thou kill'st me in his life; giving him breath,

The traitor lives, the true man's put to death.

Duch. [Within.] What, ho! my liege! for God's sake, let me in.

1) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 1, Anm. 52. 2) Statt der Emendation Pope's while stellen Staunton und Dyce mit Recht das which der alten Ausgg. wieder her, wobei Dyce auf den häufigen ungrammatischen Gebrauch dieses Relativpronomen bei Sh. und seinen Zeitgenossen hinweist. — wanton ist substantivisch zu fassen, nicht, wie die meisten Hgg. interpungiren, als Adjectiv zu boy: young, wanton, and effeminate boy. — In der vorigen Zeile stellt die Fol. rob und beat irrthümlich um. 3) Beim Turnier trug der Ritter den Handschuh seiner Dame als ein Zeichen ihrer Huld (as a favour) am Helm. 4) Durch seine Ausgelassenheit, wie durch seine Dreistigkeit durchschimmernd. 5) So Q. A. und Fol. — Manche Hgg. lesen mit den übrigen Qs. sparkles und fügen mit Steevens ein a vor better ein. 6) Enter Aumerle amazed ist die Bühnenweisung der Qs.; in der Fol. bloss Enter Aumerle. 7) Obgleich sich zur Noth unless a pardon auch elliptisch verstehen lässt: wenn nicht eine Verzeihung erfolgt, so scheint es doch, als sei in Qs. und Fol. ein folgender Vers zufällig ausgefallen, der das fehlende Verbum und ein Wort wie my fault enthalten haben mag. Wenigstens liesse sich this fault in Bolingbroke's Antwort auf etwas Derartiges beziehen. 8) d. h. wenn wegen des ersteren, des beabsichtigten Vergehens, Du Verzeihung begehrst. 9) Diese Bühnenweisung ist modern; dafür haben die Qs. The duke of York knocks at the door and crieth. 10) Den König fool-hardy zu nennen, ist als eine Schmähung des königlichen Ansehens ein Hochverrath, den er aus Anhänglichkeit ihm in's Gesicht spricht. 11) hand = Handschrift, die Namensunterschrift unter dem Document. 12) sheer = rein, ungetrübt. — a fountain sheer kommt in Spenser's Faerie Queene wiederholt vor; Sh. hat das veraltete Epitheton nur einmal in Verbindung mit ale in Taming of the Boling. What shrill-voic'd suppliant makes this eager cry?

Duch. A woman, and thine aunt, great king; 't is I.
Speak with me, pity me, open the door:
A beggar begs that never begg'd before.

Boling. Our scene is altered, from a serious thing,
And now chang'd to 'The Beggar and the King'.¹⁵ —
My dangerous cousin, let your mother in:
I know, she 's come to pray for your foul sin.

York. If thou do pardon, whosoever pray,
More sins for this forgiveness prosper may.
This fester'd joint cut off, the rest rests sound;
This, let alone,¹⁶ will all the rest confound.

Enter DUCHESS.

Duch. O king! believe not this hard-hearted man:
Love, loving not itself, none other can.

York. Thou frantic woman, what dost thou make here?
Shall thy old dugs once more a traitor rear?¹⁷

Duch. Sweet York, be patient. Hear me, gentle liege.
[Kneels.

Boling. Rise up, good aunt.

Duch. Not yet, I thee beseech:

For ever will I walk¹⁸ upon my knees,
And never see day that the happy sees,
Till thou give joy; until thou bid me joy,
By pardoning Rutland, my transgressing boy.

Aum. Unto my mother's prayers I bend my knee.

York. Against them both my true joints bended be.
[Kneels.

Ill may'st thou thrive, if thou grant any grace!¹⁹

Duch. Pleads he in earnest? look upon his face;
His eyes do drop no tears, his prayers are in jest;
His words come from his mouth, ours from our breast:
He prays but faintly, and would be denied;
We pray with heart, and soul, and all beside:
His weary joints would gladly rise, I know;
Our knees shall kneel till to the ground they grow:
His prayers are full of false hypocrisy;
Ours of true zeal and deep integrity.
Our prayers do out-pray²⁰ his; then let them have
That mercy which true prayers ought to have.

Boling. Good aunt, stand up.

Duch. Nay, do not say — stand up;
But, pardon²¹ first, and afterwards, stand up.
An if I were thy nurse, thy tongue to teach,
Pardon should be the first word of thy speech.
I never long'd to hear a word till now;
Say — pardon, king; let pity teach thee how:
The word is short, but not so short as sweet;
No word like pardon for kings' mouths so meet.

York. Speak it in French, king: say, pardonnez-moi.²²

Duch. Dost thou teach pardon pardon to destroy?
Ah! my sour husband, my hard-hearted lord,
That sett'st the word itself against the word!²³
Speak, pardon, as 't is current in our land!
The chopping French²⁴ we do not understand.
Thine eye begins to speak, set thy tongue there,
Or in thy piteous heart plant thou thine ear,
That hearing how our plaints and prayers do pierce,
Pity may move thee pardon to rehearse.

Boling. Good aunt, stand up.

Duch. I do not sue to stand:
Pardon is all the suit I have in hand.

Boling. I pardon him, as God shall pardon me.

Duch. O happy vantage of a kneeling knee!
Yet am I sick for fear: speak it again;
Twice saying pardon doth not pardon twain,
But makes one pardon strong.

Boling. With all my heart
I pardon him.

Duch. A god on earth thou art.

Boling. But for our trusty brother-in-law,²⁵ and the abbot,

With all the rest of that consorted crew,
Destruction straight shall dog them at the heels.²⁶ —
Good uncle, help to order several powers
To Oxford, or where'er these traitors are:
They shall not live within this world, I swear;
But I will have them, if I once know where.
Uncle, farewell, — and cousin too,²⁷ adieu:
Your mother well hath pray'd, and prove you true.

Duch. Come, my old son: I pray God make thee new.

[Exeunt.

Shrew (Induction Sc. 2). 13) So die Qs.; die Fol. hath had. 14) Was Du an Güte zu viel hast, das verkehrt sich in Deinem Sohne zu Schlechtem. 15) Anspielungen auf die in Percy's Reliques of Ancient English Poetry abgedruckte Ballade vom König Cophetua und der Bettlerin Penelophon hat Sh. in Romeo and Juliet (A. 2, Sc. 1), in K. Henry IV. Second Part (A. 5, Sc. 3) und in Love's Labour's Lost (A. 4, Sc. 1). — Die Annahme einiger Commentatoren, dass es ein altes Drama desselben Inhalts gegeben habe, ist eine bis jetzt durch keine Notiz gestützte Hypothese. 16) Dies eiternde Gelenk, wenn es in Ruhe gelassen wird, steckt die übrigen Glieder an und verdirbt sie. 17) Wenn sie ihrem Sohne jetzt das Leben erhält, so ist es, als ob sie ihn, den Hochverräter, zum zweiten Mal an ihren Brüsten grosszöge. 18) So die Qs., wo to walk allgemeiner = sich bewegen, steht. — Die Fol. hat kneel upon my knees. 19) Diese Zeile fehlt in der Fol. 20) to out-pray = an Innigkeit oder an Wirkung des Gebets übertreffen. — Für das have am Schluss dieser Zeile, das auf dasselbe Wort gereimt ist, schrieb Sh. vielleicht crave. 21) scil. say, pardon. 22) pardonnez-moi, zu Sh.'s Zeit eine Modephrase in England, eine höfliche Art der Verneinung oder der Ausrede, wird als solche bei Sh. auch in Romeo and Juliet (A. 2, Sc. 4) erwähnt. 23) Insofern das französische Wort einen andern Sinn hat, als das englische. 24) Die Franzosen, welche die Worte zerhacken, verschlucken, undeutlich aussprechen, verstehen wir nicht. — Knight erklärt dagegen: the French, which changes the meaning of the words. — Eine dritte Erklärung giebt Staunton: we are ignorant how to chop or exchange French. Er erinnert dabei, wie auch schon Malone that, an den akademischen Ausdruck to chop logic = disputiren. 25) Bolingbroke's Schwager, den er hier ironisch trusty nennt, war der Herzog von Exeter; der Abt war der Abt von Westminster. — In der Fol. fehlt das and. — In den beiden vorhergehenden Versen stellt Pope den von Sh. kabsichtigten Reim wieder her, indem er Bolingbroke sagen lässt: With all my heart || I pardon him. Die alten Ausgg. haben I pardon him || With all my heart. 26) Fast ebenso in K. Richard III. (A. 4, Sc. 1) Death and destruction dog thee at thy heels. 27) too ist, wie die Cambridge Edd. bemerken, zuerst in einer Quarto von 1634 hinter cousin eingeschoben.

SCENE IV.¹*Enter Sir PIERCE OF EXTON and a Servant.*

Exton. Didst thou not mark the king, what words he spake?

»Have I no friend will rid me of this living fear?«
Was it not so?

Serv. Those were his very words.

Exton. »Have I no friend?« quoth he: he spake it twice,

And urg'd it twice together,² did he not?

Serv. He did.

Exton. And, speaking it, he wistly³ look'd on me,
As who should say, — I would thou wert the man
That would divorce this terror from my heart,
Meaning the king at Pomfret. Come, let's go:
I am the king's friend, and will rid⁴ his foe. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.

Pomfret. The Dungeon of the Castle.

Enter King RICHARD.

K. Rich. I have been studying how I may compare¹
This prison, where I live, unto the world:
And for because² the world is populous,
And here is not a creature but myself,
I cannot do it; yet I'll hammer it out.
My brain I'll prove the female to my soul;
My soul, the father: and these two beget
A generation of still-breeding thoughts,
And these same thoughts people this little world,³
In humours like the people of this world,
For no thought is contented. The better sort,
As thoughts of things divine, are intermix'd
With scruples, and do set the word itself
Against the word:⁴

As thus, — »Come, little ones;« and then again, —
»It is as hard to come, as for a camel
To thread the postern of a needle's⁵ eye.«
Thoughts tending to ambition, they do plot
Unlikely wonders: how these vain weak nails
May tear a passage through the flinty ribs
Of this hard world, my ragged prison walls;
And, for they⁶ cannot, die in their own pride.
Thoughts tending to content flatter themselves,
That they⁷ are not the first of fortune's slaves,
Nor shall not be the last; like silly beggars,
Who, sitting in the stocks, refuge their shame,⁸
That many have, and others must sit there:
And in this thought they find a kind of ease,
Bearing their own misfortune on the back
Of such as have before endur'd the like.
Thus play I, in one person,⁹ many people,
And none contented: sometimes am I king;
Then treason makes me wish myself a beggar,
And so I am: then, crushing penury
Persuades me I was better when a king;
Then am I king'd again; and, by and by,
Think that I am unking'd by Bolingbroke,
And straight am nothing. — But whate'er I am,
Nor I, nor any man, that but man is,
With nothing shall be pleas'd, till he be eas'd
With being nothing. — [Music.] Music do I hear?
Ha, ha! keep time. — How sour sweet music is,
When time is broke,¹⁰ and no proportion kept!
So is it in the music of men's lives.
And here have I the daintiness of ear,
To check¹¹ time broke in a disorder'd string;
But, for the concord of my state and time,
Had not an ear to hear my true time broke.
I wasted time, and now doth time waste me;
For now hath time made me his numbering clock:¹²
My thoughts are minutes, and with sighs they jar

1) Die Fol. beginnt hier keine neue Scene. — Vgl. Einleitung pag. 617 u. 618. 2) twice together = zweimal nach einander. — In der vorhergehenden Rede haben die Qs. these für those der Fol. 3) wistly = aufmerksam, mit Bewusstsein. So die spätern Qs. und die Fol. für wistfully in Q. A. und B. — Viele Hgg. vertauschen das veraltete Wort mit dem synonymen wistfully, das sich in keiner alten Ausgabe findet. 4) to rid ist wohl nicht eigentlich = to destroy, wie Malone erklärt, sondern eher = wegschaffen, aus dem Wege bringen.

1) So Q. A.; die übrigen Qs. und die Fol. how to compare. 2) for because pleonastisch für because oder für for im Sinne von because. 3) this little world = diese kleine Welt, ist er selbst, — ein von Sh. häufig angewandter Tropus, — hier im Gegensatz zu this world = diese grosse Welt, die irdische Welt. — Knight citirt dazu eine Sh. bekannte Stelle aus Raleigh's History of the World: Because in the little frame of man's body there is a representation of the universal and (by allusion) a kind of participation of all the parts there, therefore was man called microcosmos, or the little world. 4) Dass unter word hier das Wort Gottes, das biblische Wort verstanden ist, ergiebt sich sowohl aus dem Folgenden, als auch aus der Variante der Fol.: set the faith itself against the faith. — Im andern Sinne stand A. 5, Sc. 3: That sett'st the word itself against the word. 5) Die Qs. haben a small needle's. 6) for they cannot: weil sie es nicht vermögen, sterben sie in ihrem Uebermuth, bezieht sich nicht auf weak nails, sondern auf thoughts — do plot. 7) they geht, genau genommen, nicht auf thoughts, sondern auf Die, welche denken, dass sie nicht die Ersten sind, die das Glück bezwungen hat, und auch nicht die Letzten sein werden. 8) Einfältige Bettler, wenn sie wegen Vagabundirens in den Fussblock gesteckt werden, verstecken ihre Schmach hinter dem Gedanken, dass schon Viele ebendasselbst sassen und Andre nach ihnen da sitzen werden. — Zu have ist aus sit das Particip sat zu suppliren. — Drei Zeilen weiter haben die Qs. misfortunes für misfortune der Fol. 9) So Q. A.; die übrigen Qs. und die Fol. in one prison. — Sieben Zeilen weiter haben die Qs. but whate'er I be. 10) Wenn das Zeitmass, der Takt, verletzt wird. — time = Zeitmass, fasst Richard gleich nachher = Zeit, Lebenszeit und Mitwelt. 11) to check = controliren, zurechtsetzen, ist die Lesart der Qs.; die Fol. hat to hear. 12) In dem Folgenden malt Richard sich weiter aus, in welcher Art er die Uhr vorstelle, zu der ihn die Zeit gemacht habe. Seine Gedanken sind die Minuten, die in ihrem Verlaufe vermittelt der sie darstellenden Seufzer weiter tickend ihre Zeiteintheilung den Augen angeben. — their watches, doppelsinnig = Wachen, Nachtwachen, und = Stunden, hängt von to jar on = weiter ticken, ab, und steht im Gegensatz zu outward watch, als welche die Augen, gleichsam das äusserlich sichtbare Zifferblatt der Uhr, angesehen werden. Auf dieses Zifferblatt deutet der Finger, wie der Weiser an der Uhr, fortwährend hin, indem

Their watches on unto mine eyes, the outward watch,
 Whereto my finger, like a dial's point,
 Is pointing still, in cleansing them from tears.
 Now, Sir,¹³ the sound,¹⁴ that tells what hour it is,
 Are clamorous groans, that strike upon my heart,
 Which is the bell: so sighs, and tears, and groans,
 Show minutes, times, and hours;¹⁵ but my time
 Runs posting on in Bolingbroke's proud joy,
 While I stand fooling here, his Jack o' the clock.¹⁶
 This music mads me: let it sound no more;
 For though it hath help madmen to their wits,
 In me, it seems, it will make wise men mad.
 Yet blessing on his heart that gives it me!
 For 't is a sign of love, and love to Richard
 Is a strange brooch in this all-hating world.¹⁷

Enter Groom.

Groom. Hail, royal prince!

K. Rich. Thanks, noble peer;¹⁸

The cheapest of us is ten groats too dear.
 What art thou? and how comest thou hither,
 Where no man never comes, but that sad dog
 That brings me food to make misfortune live?

Groom. I was a poor groom of thy stable, king,
 When thou wert king; who, travelling towards York,
 With much ado, at length have gotten leave
 To look upon my sometimes royal master's face.
 O! how it yearn'd my heart, when I beheld
 In London streets that coronation day,
 When Bolingbroke rode on roan Barbary!
 That horse that thou so often hast bestrid,
 That horse that I so carefully have dress'd!

K. Rich. Rode he on Barbary? Tell me, gentle friend,
 How went he under him?

Groom. So proudly, as if he disdain'd the ground.

K. Rich. So proud that Bolingbroke was on his back!

That jade hath eat bread from my royal hand;
 This hand hath made him proud with clapping him.
 Would he not stumble? would he not fall down
 (Since pride must have a fall), and break the neck

Of that proud man that did usurp his back?
 Forgiveness, horse! why do I rail on thee,
 Since thou, created to be aw'd by man,
 Wast born¹⁹ to bear? I was not made a horse;
 And yet I bear a burden like an ass,
 Spur-gall'd, and tir'd, by jauncing²⁰ Bolingbroke.

*Enter Keeper, with a dish.*²¹

Keep. [To the Groom.] Fellow, give place: here is no longer stay.

K. Rich. If thou love me, 't is time thou wert away.

Groom. What my tongue dares not, that my heart shall say. [Exit.]

Keep. My lord, will 't please you to fall to?

K. Rich. Taste of it first, as thou art wont to do.

Keep. My lord, I dare not: Sir Pierce of Exton, who lately came from the king, commands the contrary.

K. Rich. The devil take Henry of Lancaster, and thee!

Patience is stale, and I am weary of it.

[Strikes the Keeper.²²

Keep. Help, help, help!

Enter Sir PIERCE OF EXTON, and Servants, armed.

K. Rich. How now! what means death in this rude assault?

Villain, thine own hand yields thy death's instrument.

[Snatching a weapon, and killing one.
 Go thou, and fill another room in hell.

[He kills another: Exton strikes him down.
 That hand shall burn in never-quenching fire,
 That staggers thus my person. — Exton, thy fierce hand
 Hath with the king's blood stain'd the king's own land.
 Mount, mount, my soul! thy seat is up on high,
 Whilst my gross flesh sinks downward, here to die. [Dies.]

Exton. As full of valour as of royal blood:
 Both have I spilt; O, would the deed were good!
 For now the devil, that told me I did well,
 Says that this deed is chronicled in hell.
 This dead king to the living king I'll bear. —
 Take hence the rest,²³ and give them burial here.

[Exeunt.]

er die Thränen aus den Augen wischt. — to jar = ticken, kommt als intransitives Verbum in Kyd's Spanish Tragedy vor: the minutes jarring, the clocks striking. 13) Diese Anrede gebrauchen die Dramatiker der Zeit bisweilen auch in Monologen, wo der Redende sich selbst oder eine unbestimmte, eingebildete Person so bezeichnet. 14) the sound ist der jedesmalige Glockenschlag der Uhr, der, weil er aus einer andauernden Reihe besteht und sich periodisch wiederholt, hier als Collectiv den Plural: are clamorous groans nach sich hat. 15) Nach der vorhergehenden Darstellung bezieht sich sighs auf minutes, hours auf groans, während tears auf times geht, da die Thränen keinen bestimmten Zeitabschnitt anzeigen, sondern nur, wie sie fortwährend neu aus den Augen gewischt werden, den Fortgang der Zeit im Allgemeinen andeuten. — Die Fol. stellt um: hours and times. 16) Jack o' the clock ist die automatische Figur, die an Uhren äusserlich angebracht, mit einer Armbewegung oder mit einem Schlage den Glockenschlag, die Stunde anzeigt. 17) brooch = Spange, Agrafe, wird dann allgemein = Schmuck, gebraucht: Liebe zu dem abgesetzten König Richard ist ein auffallender, in dieser hasserfüllten Welt selten getragener Schmuck. 18) Anspielung auf die Münzen royal und noble. Die letztere entsprach am Werthe ten groats, die erstere galt ten shillings. — Ein ähnliches Wortspiel findet sich in K. Henry IV. First Part (A. 2, Sc. 4), wo auf das Wort der Wirthin: there is a nobleman of the court at door, would speak with you, die Antwort lautet: give him as much as will make him a royal man. — Hier ist der Sinn: wir Beide gelten nichts mehr. 19) Wortspiel zwischen to bear = gebären, und = tragen. Die erstere Bedeutung steckt in dem Particip, die zweite in dem Infinitiv. — Die vorige Rede des Groom lautet in der Fol.: So proudly as if he had disdain'd the ground. Da in der folgenden Zeile so proud resümiert wird, vermuthen Dyce und Staunton sehr plausibel, dass Sh. geschrieben So proud as if he had disdain'd the ground. 20) to jaunce ist entweder = to jaunt, oder, wie Staunton erklärt, ist jauncing = hard-riding. — Die Cambridge Edd. lesen spur'd, gall'd mit den Qs. Die Fol. hat spur-gall'd. 21) So die Fol.; die Qs. haben Enter one to Richard with meat. 22) Diese Bühnenweisung ist modern. — Auch von den folgenden haben die alten Ausgg. nur Exton strikes him down. 23) d. h. die Leichen der beiden Diener, welche Richard erschlagen hatte.

SCENE VI.

Windsor. An Apartment in the Castle.

Flourish. Enter BOLINGBROKE and YORK, with Lords and Attendants.

Boling. Kind uncle York, the latest news we hear
Is, that the rebels have consum'd with fire
Our town of Cicester¹ in Glostershire;
But whether they be ta'en, or slain, we hear not.

Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.

Welcome, my lord. What is the news?

North. First, to thy sacred state wish I all happiness.
The next news is, — I have to London sent
The heads of Salisbury, Spencer, Blunt, and Kent.²
The manner of their taking may appear
At large discoursed in this paper here.

[Presenting a paper.]

Boling. We thank thee, gentle Percy, for thy pains,
And to thy worth will add right worthy gains.

Enter FITZWATER.

Fitz. My lord, I have from Oxford sent to London
The heads of Brocas and Sir Bennet Seely,
Two of the dangerous consorted traitors,
That sought at Oxford thy dire overthrow.

Boling. Thy pains, Fitzwater, shall not be forgot;
Right noble is thy merit, well I wot.

Enter PERCY, with the Bishop of CARLISLE.

Percy. The grand conspirator,³ abbot of Westminster,
With clog of conscience and sour melancholy,
Hath yielded up his body to the grave;

But here is Carlisle living, to abide
Thy kingly doom, and sentence of his pride.

Boling. Carlisle, this is your doom: —
Choose out some secret place, some reverend room,
More than thou hast, and with it joy thy life;
So, as thou liv'st in peace, die free from strife:
For though mine enemy thou hast ever been,
High sparks of honour in thee have I seen.

Enter EXTON, with Attendants bearing a coffin.

Exton. Great king, within this coffin I present
Thy buried fear:⁴ herein all breathless lies
The mightiest of thy greatest enemies,
Richard of Bordeaux, by me hither brought.

Boling. Exton, I thank thee not; for thou hast wrought
A deed of slander,⁵ with thy fatal hand,
Upon my head and all this famous land.

Exton. From your own mouth, my lord, did I this deed.

Boling. They love not poison that do poison need,
Nor do I thee: though I did wish him dead,
I hate the murderer, love him murdered.

The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labour,
But neither my good word, nor princely favour:
With Cain go wander through the shades of night,⁶
And never show thy head by day nor light. —

Lords, I protest, my soul is full of woe,
That blood should sprinkle me to make me grow:
Come, mourn with me for that I do lament,
And put on sullen black, incontinent.⁷

I'll make a voyage to the Holy Land,
To wash this blood off from my guilty hand.

March sadly after; grace my mournings here,
In weeping after this untimely bier.⁸

[Exeunt]

1) Ciceter in Qs. und Fol. 2) So die Fol. in Uebereinstimmung mit Holinshed's Chronik. — Die Qs. haben Oxford, Salisbury, Blunt and Kent. 3) grand conspirator = Hauptverschwörer. 4) In Bezug auf die von Exton (A. 5, Sc. 4) angeführten Worte Bolingbroke's: Have I no friend will rid me of this living fear? 5) slander ist mit dem folgenden Upon my head etc. zu verbinden: eine That, die meinem Haupte u. s. w. Schmach bringt. — slander ist nur in Q. A.; die übrigen Qs. und die Fol. haben slaughter dafür. 6) Die Fol. hat shade of night. 7) incontinent = sogleich, ohne Frist; eine bei Sh. häufige Adverbialform. 8) Indem wir weinend hinter diesem unzeitigen Sarge hergehen. — Die Fol. hat mourning.

KING HENRY IV. — PART I.

Einleitung.

Die erste Quartausgabe (Q. A.) dieses historischen Schauspiels erschien im Jahre 1598 mit folgendem Titel: The History of Henry the Fourth; With the Battell at Shrewsburie, betweene the King and Lord Henry Percy, surnamed Henrie Hotspur of the North. With the humorous conceits of Sir John Falstaffe. At London, Printed by P. S. for Andrew Wise, dwelling in Paules Churchyard, at the signe of the Angell. — Der genannte Verleger Wise hatte das Buch zu Anfang desselben Jahres 1598 in die Register der Buchhändler eintragen lassen und verlegte im folgenden Jahre 1599 eine zweite Quartausgabe (Q. B.), welche, obwohl nur ein incorrecter Abdruck der ersten, doch auf dem Titelblatt den Zusatz: Newly corrected by William Shake-speare trägt. In demselben Verhältnisse stehen zwei folgende Quartausgaben (Q. C. und Q. D.), die in den Jahren 1604 und 1608 im Verlage von Mathew Law, einem Compagnon des obengenannten Verlegers, erschienen. Aus einer Quarto von 1613 endlich ist das Drama in die Gesamtausgabe der Shakspeare'schen Dramen in Folio (1623) übergegangen, unter der Bezeichnung: The First Part of Henry the Fourth, with the Life and Death of Henry Sirnamed Hot-Spurre. Es steht daselbst, in Acte und Scenen eingetheilt, als das dritte Stück in der Reihe der Histories, und wenn es auch stellenweise den Text der letztvorhergegangenen Quartausgabe verbessert, so nimmt es doch noch öfter die Fehler derselben mit in sich auf, so dass ein Zurückgehen auf die erste und correcteste Quartausgabe bei diesem Drama besonders nöthig ist, obwohl der Schwierigkeiten und Dunkelheiten im Ganzen wenige sind.

Wie lange vor der Veröffentlichung durch den Druck Shakspeare's First Part of King Henry IV. geschrieben und auf die Bühne gebracht worden sei, lässt sich aus keiner überlieferten Notiz bestimmen. Francis Meres in seiner Palladis Tamia (15. 8) erwähnt unter den Dramen unseres Dichters »Henry the 4.«, ohne zwischen dem First Part und dem Second Part zu unterscheiden, als ein damals dem Publicum wohlbekanntes Schauspiel. Schwerlich wird es lange nach King Richard II. verfasst sein, mit welchem Drama es in so organischem Zusammenhange steht, dass Shakspeare den Entwurf zu beiden Dramen, sowie zu den darauf folgenden Second Part of King Henry IV. und King Henry V., in allgemeinen Umrissen wenigstens gleichzeitig gemacht und dann in fortschreitender Reihenfolge ausgeführt haben muss. So war denn auch Holinshed's History of England Shakspeare's vorzüglichste Quelle für den historischen Theil des First Part of King Henry IV., und zwar benutzte der Dichter besonders dasjenige, was der Chronist von der Regierung Heinrich's IV. aus den Jahren 1402 und 1403, von der Schlacht bei Holmedon (14. September 1402) bis zur Schlacht bei Shrewsbury (21. Juli 1403) aufgezeichnet und berichtet hat. Einige Auszüge aus der genannten Chronik werden die Art dieser Benutzung näher nachweisen.

Zu A. 1, Sc. 1. Dem Berichte Westmoreland's von den ungünstigen Nachrichten aus Wales liegt Folgendes bei Holinshed zu Grunde: Owen Glendower, a cording to his accustomed manner, robbing and spoiling within the English borders, caused all the forces of the shire of Hereford to assemble together against them, under the conduct of Edmund Earl of March. But coming to try the matter by battle, whether by treason or otherwise, so it fortun'd that the English power was di-comfited, the earl taken prisoner, and above a thousand of his people slain in the place. The shameful villany used by the Welshwomen towards the dead carcasses, was such as honest ears would be ashamed to hear, and continent tongues to speak thereof. — Von der Schlacht bei Holmedon erzählt Holinshed so: Archembald Earl Douglas, sore displeased in his mind for his overthrow [scil. at Ne bit] procured a commission to invade England, and that to his cost. — For at a place called Homildon, they were so fiercely assailed by the Englishmen under the leading of Lord Percy, surnamed Hotspur, and George Earl of March, that, with violence of the English shot, they were quite vanquished and put to flight, on the Rood day in harvest, with a great slaughter made by the Englishmen. — There were slain of men of estimation Sir John Swinton — — and three and twenty knights, besides ten thousand of the commons: and of prisoners among other were these, Mor-dake Earl of Fife, son to the Governor Archembald Earl Douglas, which in the fight lost one of his eyes, Thomas Earl of Murray, Robert Earl of Angus, and (as some writers have) the Earls of Athol and Menteit's, with five other of meaner degrees.

Zu A. 1, Sc. 3 bot der Chronist unserem Dichter folgendes Material: Henry, Earl of Northumberland, with his brother Thomas, Earl of Worcester, and his son, the Lord Henry Percy, surnamed Hotspur, which were to King Henry, in the beginning of his reign, both faithful friends, and earnest aiders, began now to envy his wealth and felicity; and especially they were grieved, because the king demanded of the earl and his son such Scottish prisoners as were taken at Homeldon and Nesbit: for of all the captives which were taken in the conflicts fought in those two places, there was delivered to the king's possession only Mordake, Earl of Fife, the Duke of Albany's son, though the king did divers and sundry times require deliverance of the residue, and that with great threatenings: wherewith the Percies being sore offended, for that they claimed them as their own proper prisoners, and their peculiar prizes, by the council of the Lord Thomas Percy, Earl of Worcester, whose study was ever (as some write) to procure malice, and set things in a broil, came to the king unto Windsor (upon a purpose to prove him), and there required of him, that either by ransom or otherwise, he would cause to be delivered out of prison Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March, their cousin german, whom (as they reported) Owen Glendower kept in filthy prison, shackled with irons, only for that he took his part, and was to him faithful and true.

The king began not a little to muse at this request, and not without cause; for indeed it touched him somewhat near, sith this Edmund was son to Roger Earl of March, son to the Lady Philip, daughter of Lionel Duke of Clarence, the third son of King Edward the Third, which Edmund at King Richard's going into Ireland, was proclaimed heir apparent to the crown and realm, whose aunt, called Eleanor, the Lord Henry Percy had married; and therefore King Henry could not well hear that any man should be earnest about the advancement of that lineage. The king, when he had studied on the matter, made answer, that the Earl of March was not taken prisoner for his cause, nor in his service, but willingly suffered himself to be taken, because he would not withstand the attempts of Owen Glendower and his complices, therefore he would neither ransom him, nor release him.

The Percies with this answer and fraudulent excuse were not a little fumed, inasmuch that Henry Hotspur said openly: „Behold, the heir of the realm is robbed of his right, and yet the robber with his own will not redeem him.“ So in this fury the Percies departed, minding nothing more than to depose King Henry from the high type of his royalty, and to place in his seat their cousin Edmund, Earl of March, whom they did not only deliver out of captivity, but also (to the high displeasure of King Henry) entered in league with the foresaid Owen Glendower.

Zu A. 3, Sc. 1. Holinshed führt die oben citirte Stelle so fort: Herewith they by their deputies in the house of the archdeacon of Bangor divided the realm amongst them, causing a tripartite indenture to be made and sealed with their seals, by the covenants whereof all England from Severn and Trent, south and eastward, was assigned to the Earl of March: all Wales and the lands beyond Severn westward, were appointed to Owen Glendower: and all the remnant from Trent northward to the Lord Percy. This was done, as some have said, through a foolish credit given to a vain prophesy, as though King Henry was the mold-warp, cursed of God's own mouth, and they three were the dragon, the lion and the wolf, which should divide this realm between them. Such is the deviation (saith Hall), and not divination of those blind and fantastical dreams of the Welsh prophesiers. — Die von Shakspeare zur Charakteristik Owen Glendower's benutzten Züge sind an verschiedenen Stellen bei Holinshed zerstreut. So heisst es u. A.: This Owen Glendower was son to an esquire of Wales, named Griffith Vichan; he dwelled in the parish of Conway, within the county of Merioneth, in North Wales, in a place called Glendourwie, which is as much as to say in English, as the valley by the side of the water of Dee, by occasion of which he was surnamed Glendour Deu. He was first set to study the laws of the realm, and became an utter barrister, or an apprentice of the law, as they termed him, and served King Richard at Flint Castle, when he was taken by Henry Duke of Lancaster; though others write that he served this King Henry the Fourth before he came to attain the crown, in room of an esquire. — Ferner an einer andern Stelle: In the month of March (1402) appeared a blazing star, first between the east part of the firmament and the north, flashing forth fire and flames round about it, and lastly shooting forth fiery beams towards the north, foreshowing (as was thought) the great effusion of blood that followed about the parts of Wales and Northumberland. In much about the same time, Owen Glendower, with his Welshmen, fought with the Lord Grey of Ruthin etc. — Ebenso: About mid August the king to chastise the presumptuous attempt of the Welshmen, went with a great power of men into Wales, to pursue the captain of the Welsh rebels, Owen Glendower; but in effect he lost his labour, for Owen conveyed himself out of the way into his known lurking-places, and, as was thought through art magic, he caused such foul weather of winds, tempests, rain, snow, and hail to be raised, for the annoyance of the king's army, that the king was constrained to return home etc. — Endlich über die Wunderzeichen bei Glendower's Geburt: Strange wonders happened, as men reported, at the nativity of this man, for the same night he was born all his father's horses in the stable were found to stand in blood up to their bellies.

Zu A. 3, Sc. 2. Von der gegenseitigen Entfremdung, welche zwischen dem Könige und dem Prinzen herrschte, veranlasst theils durch die ausgelassene Lebensweise des Letzteren, theils durch übelwollende Zwischen-träger, spricht Holinshed in Verbindung mit einem Versuche des Prinzen, diese Missverständnisse zu beseitigen. Am Schlusse der Unterredung zwischen Vater und Sohn heisst es: Thus were the father and the son reconciled, betwixt whom the said pick-thanks had sown division, in so much that the son upon a vehement concert of unkindness sprung up in the father, was in the way to be worn out of favour which was the more likely to come to pass by their informations that privily charged him with riot and other uncivil demeanour unseemly for a prince; indeed he was youthfully given, grown to audacity, and had chosen him companions agreeable to his age, with whom he spent his time in such recreations, exercises, and delights, as he fancied.

Zu A. 4 und A. 5. King Henry, advertised of the proceedings of the Percies, forthwith gathered about him such power as he might make, and being earnestly called upon by the Scot, the Earl of March, to make haste and give battle to his enemies, before their power, by delaying of time, should still too much increase, he passed forward with such speed, that he was in sight of his enemies, lying in camp near to Shrewsbury, before they were in doubt of any such thing. — Die Beschwerden der Aufständischen sind in dem von Holinshed mitgetheilten Manifest enthalten. Ebenso findet sich in der Chronik der Bericht von neuen Friedensunterhandlungen zwischen beiden Parteien, von Worcester's falscher Darstellung der Absichten des Königs, und von der Schlacht selbst. Holinshed hat u. A.: It was reported for a truth, that now when the king had condescended unto all that was reasonable at his hands to be required, and seemed to humble himself more than was meet for his estate, the Earl of Worcester, upon his return to his nephew, made relation clean contrary to that the king had said, in such sort that he set his nephew's heart more in displeasure towards the king than ever it was before, driving him by that means to fight, whether he would or not. Then suddenly blew the trumpets, the king's part crying St. George! upon them, the adversaries cried Esperance, Percy! and so the two armies furiously joined. — Wenn der Zweikampf zwischen dem Prinzen und Percy auch eine Erfindung des Dichters ist, so hat er doch manches Andere von den Einzelheiten der Schlacht aus Holinshed entlehnt. So u. A. Folgendes: The prince that day holp his father like a lusty young gentleman, for although he was hurt in the face with an arrow, so that divers noble men that were about him would have conveyed him forth of the field, yet he would in no wise suffer them so to do, lest his departure from his men might haply have stricken some fear into their hearts; and so, without regard of his hurt, he continued with his men, and never ceased, either to fight where the battle was most hottest, or to encourage his men where it seemed most need. This battle lasted three long hours, with indifferent fortune on both parts, till at length the king, crying Saint George! victory! brake the array of his enemies, and did adventure so far that, as some write, the Earl Douglas strake him down, and at that instant slew Sir Walter Blunt, and three other apparelled in the king's suit and clothing, saying: „I marvel so many kings thus suddenly arise one in the neck of another.“ The king indeed was raised and did that day many a noble feat of arms, for as it is written, he slew that day with his own hands six and thirty persons of his enemies. The other on his part encouraged by his doings, fought valiantly and slew the Lord Percy, called Sir Henry Hotspur. To conclude, the king's enemies were vanquished and put to flight, in which flight, the Earl of Douglas, for haste, falling from the crag of an high mountain, brake one of his cullions and was taken, and, for his valiantness, of the king frankly and freely delivered.

Die Geschichte Heinrich's IV. und seines Sohnes Heinrich's V. war schon lange, ehe Shakspeare sie in den drei nach ihnen benannten Dramen behandelt hatte, auf die englische Bühne gebracht worden in einem Drama, betitelt: The Famous Victories of Henry the Fifth. Von unbekanntem Verfasser und unbestimmtem Datum, aber jedenfalls vor 1588 geschrieben, da der Schauspieler Tarlton, der darin aufgetreten, in diesem Jahre starb, behauptete sich dieses schwache und rohe Machwerk auch neben den Shakspeare'schen, denselben Stoff behandelnden Dramen, und wurde auch in verschiedenen Abdrücken, nachdem es 1594 in die Register der Buchhändler eingetragen war, wieder aufgelegt, im Jahre 1598 und in einer dritten Auflage zur Zeit Jacob's I., die freilich keine Jahreszahl angiebt, wohl aber auf dem Titelblatt die nur zur Täuschung des Publicums hinzugefügte Notiz: As it was acted by the King's Majesty's Servants enthält. Die fortdauernde Popularität, deren sich dieses Drama erfreut haben muss, mag unsern Dichter veranlasst haben, dasselbe trotz seiner Werthlosigkeit insofern zu berücksichtigen, als er den Gedanken eines durch alle drei Dramen durchgeführten Gegensatzes zwischen dem historisch-ernsten Theile und dem humoristischen daher entlebnte und den Prinzen Heinrich darstellte einerseits in seinem Verhältniss als Sohn, später als König und Eroberer in Frankreich, andererseits in seinem Verkehr mit lockeren Gesellen, auf den die Holinshed'sche Chronik nur hindeutete. So entsprechen etwa einigen Szenen des First Part of King Henry IV., wenn auch in unendlichem Abstände und in schwachen, kaum erkennbaren Zügen, einige Szenen der Famous Victories, welche die Beranbung der königlichen Einnahme durch den Prinzen und seine Gesellen, das wüste Treiben und Kneipenleben des Prinzen und endlich die Verständigung mit seinem Vater vorführen. Wie wenig Shakspeare freilich ausser den blossen Namen und Figuren aus diesem rohen und witzlosen dramatisirten Wuste entlehnen konnte, mag eine Probe, die erste Scene der Famous Victories, bekrunden:

Enter the young Prince, Ned, and Tom.

Henry the Fifth. Come away Ned and Tom.

Both. Here my lord.

Henry 5. Come away my lads.

Tell me sirs, how much gold have you got.

Ned. Faith my lord, I have got five hundred pound.

Henry 5. But tell me Tom, how much hast thou got?

Tom. Faith my lord, some foure hundred pound.

Henry 5. Foure hundred pounds, bravely spoken lads.

But tell me sirs, thinke you not that it was a villainous part of me to rob my fathers receyvers?

Ned. Why, no my lord, it was but a tricke of youth.

Henry 5. Faith Ned, thou sayest true. But tell me sirs, where abouts are we?

Tom. My lord, we are now about a mile off London.

Henry 5. But sirs, I marrell that Sir John Oldcastle

Comes not away: sounds see where he comes.

Enters Jockey.

How now Jockey, what newes with thee?

Jockey. Faith my lord, such newes as passeth, For the towne of De'fort is risen, With hue and crie after your man, Which parted from us the last night, And has set upon, and hath robd a poore carrier.

Henry 5. Sownes, the villaine that was wont to spie

Out our booties.

Jockey. I my lord, even the very same.

Henry 5. Now base-minded rascall to rob a poore carrier,
Well it skils not, ile save the base villaines life:
I, I may: but tell me Jockey, whereabout be the receyvers.

Jockey. Faith my lord, they are hard by,
But the best is, we are a horse backe, and they be a foote,
So we may escape them.

Henry 5. Well, if the villaines come, let mee alone with them.

But tell me Jockey, how much gots thou from the knaves,

For I am sure I got something, for one of the villaines

So belamde me about the shoulders,
As I shall feele it this moneth.

Jockey. Faith my lord, I have got a hundred pound.

Henry 5. A hundred pound, now bravely spoken Jockey:

But come sirs, lay all your money before me,
Now by heaven here is a brave shew:
But as I am true gentleman, I will have the halfe
Of this spent to night, but sirs, take up your bags.
Here comes the Receyvers, let me alone.

Enters two Receyvers.

One. Alas good fellow, what shall we doe?
I dare never go home to the court, for I shall be hangde,

But here is the yong Prince, what shall we do?

Henry 5. How now you villaines, what are you?

One Receyver. Speake you to him.

Other. No I pray, speake you to him.

Henry 5. Why how now you rascals, why speake you not?

One. Forsooth we be, pray speake you to him.

Henry 5. Sowns, villaines speake, or ile cut off your heads.

Other. Forsooth he can tell the tale better then I.

One. Forsooth we be your fathers Receyvers.

Henry 5. Are you my fathers Receyvers.

Then I hope yee have brought me some money.

One. Money: alas sir wee be robd.

Henry 5. Robd, how many were there of them?

One. Marry sir there were foure of them,

And one of them had Sir John Oldcastles bay Hobbeys.

And your blacke nag.

Henry 5. Gogs wounds how like you this Jockey,
Blood you villaines: my father robd of his money abroad,

And we in our stables.

But tell me how many were there of them.

One Receyver. If it please you, there were foure of them,

And there was one about the bignesse of you:

But I am sure I so belamde him about the shoulders,
That he will feele it this mone'h.

Henry 5. Gogs wounds you lambde them fairely,
So that they have carried away your money.

But come sirs what shall we doe with the villaines.

Both Receyvers. I beseech your grace be good to us.

Ned. I pray you my Lord forgive them this once.
Well stand we and get you gone,

And looke that you speake not a word of it,
For if there be, sownes ile hang you and all your kin. [Exit Pursevant.]

Henry 5. Now sirs, how like you this;
Was not this bravely done:

For now the villaines dare not speake a word of it,
I have so feared them with words.

Now whether shall we go.

All. Why my lord, you know our old Hostesse at Feversham.

Henry 5. Our Hostesse at Feversham, bloud what shall we doe there, we have a thousand pound about us.

And we shall go to a petty Alehouse.

No, no: you know the old Taverne in Eastcheape.
There is good wine: besides there is a pretty wench
That can talke well, for I delight as much in their tongues,

As any part about them.

All. We are ready to wayte upon your grace.

Henry 5. Gogs wounds wait, we will go altogether,

We are all fellowes, I tell you sirs, and the King
my father were dead, wee would be all Kings,

Therefore come away.

Ned. Gogs wounds, bravely spoken Harry.

Enter John Cobler, Robin Pewterer,
Lawrence Costermonger.

John Cobler. All is well here, all is well Masters.

Robin. How say you, neighbour John Cobler?

I think it best that my neighbour

Robin Pewterer went to Pudding-lane end,

And we will watch here a Billingsgate ward.

How say you neighbour Robin, how like you this?

Robin. Marry well neighbours:

I care not much if I go to Pudding-lane end.

But neighbours, and you heare any adoe about me,

Make haste: and if I heare any adoe about you,
I will come to you. [Exit Robin.]

Lawrence. Neighbor what news heare you of the yong Prince?

John. Marry neighbour, I heare say, he is a toward young Prince,

For if he meet any by the high way,

He will not let to talke with him,

I dare not call him theefe, but sure he is one of these taking fellowes.

Lawrence. Indeed neighbour, I heare say hee is as lively

A young Prince as ever was.

John. I, and I heare say, if he use it long,

His father will cut him off from the crowne:

But neighbour say nothing of that.

Lawrence. No, no, neighbour I warrant you.

John. Neighbour, me thinkes you begin to sleepe,

If you will, we will sit downe,

For I thinke it is about midnight.

Lawrence. Marry content neighbour, let us sleepe.

Enter Dericke roving.

Dericke. Who, who there, who there?

[Exit Dericke.]

Enter Robin.

Robin. O neighbours, what meane you to sleepe,
And such adoe in the streetes?

Ambo. How now neighbour, whats the matter?

Enter Dericke againe.

Dericke. Who there, who there, who there?

Cobler. Why, what aylest thou? here is no horses.

Dericke. O alas man, I am robd, who there, who there?

Robin. Hold him neighbour Cobler.

Cobler. Why I see thou art a plaine clowne.

Dericke. Am I a clowne, sownes masters,
Do clownes goe in silke apparel.

I am sure all we gentlemen clownes in Kent scant goe so well:

Sownes you know clownes very well.

Heare you, are you Master Constable, and you be speake:

For I will not take it at his hands.

John. Faith I am not Master Constable,
But I am one of his bad officers, for he is not here.

Dericke. Is not master Constable here?

Well it is no matter, Ile have the law at his hands.

John. Nay I pray you do not take the law of us.

Dericke. You are one of his beastly officers.

John. I am one of his bad officers.

Dericke. Why then I charge thee looke to him.

Cobler. Nay but heare yee sir, you seeme to be an honest

Fellow, and we are poore men, and now tis night,
And we would be loath to have any thing adoo,
Therefore I pray thee put it up.

Dericke. First, thou sayest true, I am an honest se'low,

And a proper handsome fellow too,

And you seem to be poore men, therefore I care not greatly,

Nay I am quickly pacified,

But and you chance to spie the theefe,

I pray you lay hold on him.

Robin. Yes that we will, I warrant you.

Dericke. Tis a wonderfull thing to see how glad the knave is, now I have forgiven
him.

John. Neighbours, doe yee looke about you,
How now, who's there?

Enter the theefe.

Theefe. Here is a good fellow. I pray you which is the way to the olde Taverne in Eastcheape.

Dericke. Whoope hollo, now Gadshill, knowest thou mee?

Theefe. I know thee for an asse.

Dericke. And I know thee for a taking fellow,
Upon Gads hill in Kent.

A bots light upon you.

Theefe. The worson villaine would be knockt.

Dericke. Masters, villaine, and ye be men stand to him,
And take his weapon from him, let him not passe
you.

John. My friend what make you abroad now?

It is too late to walke, now.

Theefe. It is not too late for true men to walke.

Lawrence. We know thee not to be a true man.

Theefe. Why what doe you meane to doe with me?

Sownes I am one of the Kings liege people.

Dericke. Heare you sir, are you one of the kings liege people?

Theefe. I marry am I sir, what say you to it?

Dericke. Marry sir, I say you are one of the Kings filching people.

Cobler. Come, come, lets have him away.

Theefe. Why what have I done.

Robin. Thou hast robd a poore fellow,
And taken away his goods from him.

Theefe. I never saw him before.

Dericke. Maisters who comes here?

Enter the Vintners boy.

Boy. How now good man Cobler?

Cobler. How now Robin, what makes thou abroade

At this time of night?

Boy. Marrie I have bene at the Counter,
I can tell such newes as never you have hearde the like.

Cobler. What is that Robin, what is the matter?

Boy. Why this night about two houres agoe, there came the young Prince, and three or foure more of his companions, and called for wine good store, and then they sent for a noyse of musicians, and were very merry for the space of an houre, then whether their musicke liked them not, or whether they had drunke too much wine or no, I cannot tell, but our pots flew against the walls, and then they drewe their swords, and went into the street and fought, and some tooke one part, and some tooke another, but for the space of halfe an houre, there was such a bloody fray as passeth, and none could parte them untill such time as the Mayor and Sheriffe were sent for, and then at last, with much adoo, they tooke them, and so the young Prince was carried to the Counter, and then about one houre after, there came a messenger from the court in all haste, from the King, for my Lorde Mayor and the Sheriffe, but for what cause I know not.

Cobler. Here is newes indeed Robert.

Lawrence. Marry Neighbour, this newes is strange indeede, I thinke it best Neighbour, to rid our hands of this fellow first.

Theefe. What meane you to doo with me?

Cobler. Wee meane to carry you to the prison, and there to remaine till the sessions day.

Theefe. Then I pray you let me go to the prison where my maister is.

Cobler. Nay, thou must goe to the countrey prison, to Newgate, therefore come away.

Theefe. I prethee be good to me honest fellow.

Dericke. I marry will I, ile be very charitable to thee,

For I wil never leave thee, til I see thee on the gallows.

EINLEITUNG.

Von den in den Famous Victories aufgeführten Gesellen des Prinzen entspricht Sir John Oldcastle, auch Jockey genannt, dem Shakspeare'schen Sir John Falstaff, wenn auch nicht in der von unserm Dichter zuerst geschaffenen Charakteristik, so doch wahrscheinlich in der Erscheinung auf der Bühne, was denn eine zu Shakspeare's Zeit häufig wiederkehrende Verwechslung oder Identification beider Figuren beim Publicum zur Folge hatte. Auf diesen Punkt wird weiterhin noch zurückzukommen sein, sowie sich noch ferner Gelegenheit darbieten wird, auf einige andere Scenen der Famous Victories hinzuweisen, an welche Shakspeare gedacht als er den Second Part of King Henry IV. und King Henry V. schrieb.

ACT I.

SCENE I.

London. An Apartment in the Palace.

Enter King HENRY, WESTMORELAND, Sir WALTER BLUNT, and Others.

K. Hen. So shaken as we are, so wan with care,
Find we a time for frighted peace² to pant,
And breathe short-winded accents of new broils
To be commenc'd in stronds³ afar remote.
No more the thirsty entrance of this soil
Shall daub her lips with her own children's blood;⁴
No more shall trenching war channel her fields,
Nor bruise her flowerets with the armed hoofs

Of hostile paces: those opposed eyes,⁵
Which, like the meteors of a troubled heaven,
All of one nature, of one substance bred,
Did lately meet in the intestine shock
And furious close of civil butchery,
Shall now, in mutual,⁶ well-beseeming ranks,
March all one way, and be no more oppos'd
Against acquaintance, kindred, and allies:
The edge of war, like an ill-sheathed knife,
No more shall cut his master.⁷ Therefore, friends,
As far as to the sepulchre of Christ,
(Whose soldier now, under whose blessed cross
We are impressed and engag'd to fight,)
Forthwith a power of English shall we levy,⁸
Whose arms were moulded in their mothers' womb

1) Ein Personenverzeichniss, das in den alten Ausgg. fehlt, fügte zuerst Rowe seiner Ausgabe (1709) bei.
2) Der Friede wird als ein aus seiner Ruhe gehetztes Wild betrachtet: Finden wir eine Zeit, wo der gehetzte Friede sich verschmaufen kann. 3) stronds = Strand, Gestade, bezeichnet hier Palästina, wohin Heinrich den Kreuzzug unternehmen will. — Sh. hat dasselbe veraltete Wort nur noch einmal in seinem eigentlichen Sinne in K. Henry IV. Second Part (A. 1, Sc. 1). 4) entrance ist hier collectiv zu fassen = jeder Eingang, jede Oeffnung oder Pore in dem Erdboden, geeignet das Blut einzusaugen. Zugleich wird this soil, d. h. England, weiblich personificirt und mit Lippen (her lips) ausgestattet, welche sie mit dem Blute ihrer Kinder färbt. Mit Sh.'scher Lizenz ist die zweite Zeile so construirt, als ob in der ersten this soil und nicht the thirsty entrance Subject wäre. Dasselbe Bild hat Sh. deutlicher in K. Henry VI. Third Part (A. 2, Sc. 3) Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk, und in dem alten K. John fand er noch annähernder an seinen eigenen Ausdruck: Is all the blood y-spilt on either part, || Closing the crannies of the thirsty earth, || Grown to a love-game and a bridal feast? — Daher hat man auch hier crannies für entrance in den Text setzen wollen. Aber diese Conjectur, wie die übrigen: entrails, entrants, Erinnys, werden überflüssig durch eine richtige Auffassung des Sh.'schen Sinnes, der nach einer Stelle der Genesis (Cap. 4, V. 11) gebildet scheint: And now art thou cursed from the earth, which hath opened her mouth to receive thy brother's blood from thy hand. 5) opposed eyes sind die voll Hass und Trotz einander anblickenden Augen zweier feindlichen Heere, die doch aus einem Stamme waren und nur im Bürgerkriege sich entzweiten. — Wenn auch diese funkelnden Augen in ihren langen Reihen mit langhingestreckten Meteoren am Himmel verglichen werden, so bezieht sich doch der mit which beginnende Relativsatz und der darauf folgende mit shall now fortgeführte Satz mit einer Sh.'schen Ungenauigkeit der Construction auf ein in opposed steckendes Substantiv = feindliche Schlachtreihen. 6) mutual = mit einander einverstanden, in Beziehung zu einander. 7) master bezieht sich eigentlich nur auf ill-sheathed knife. Zu edge of war ist ein Wort wie Kriegführender hinzuzudenken. 8) Der parenthetische Zwischensatz verdeckt einigermaßen die Kühnheit der Construction, welche levy mit As far

To chase these pagans, in those holy fields,
Over whose acres walk'd those blessed feet,
Which, fourteen hundred years ago,⁹ were nail'd
For our advantage on the bitter cross.
But this our purpose is a twelvemonth old,¹⁰
And bootless 't is to tell you, we will go:
Therefore¹¹ we meet not now. — Then, let me hear
Of you, my gentle cousin Westmoreland,
What yesternight our council did decree,
In forwarding this dear expedience.¹²

West. My liege, this haste was hot in question,
And many limits of the charge set down
But yesternight;¹³ when, all athwart, there came
A post from Wales loaden with heavy news;
Whose worst was, that the noble Mortimer,
Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight
Against the irregular and wild Glendower,
Was by the rude hands of that Welshman taken,
A thousand¹⁴ of his people butchered;
Upon whose dead corse there was such misuse,
Such beastly, shameless transformation,
By those Welshwomen done, as may not be Without much shame re-told or spoken of.

K. Hen. It seems then, that the tidings of this broil
Brake off our business for the Holy Land.

West. This match'd with other like,¹⁵ my gracious lord;

For more uneven and unwelcome news
Came from the north, and thus it did report:
On Holy-rood day, the gallant Hotspur there,¹⁶
Young Harry Percy, and brave Archibald,
That ever-valiant and approved Scot,

At Holmedon met,
Where they did spend a sad and bloody hour,
As by discharge of their artillery,
And shape of likelihood, the news was told;¹⁷
For he that brought them, in the very heat
And pride of their contention did take horse,
Uncertain of the issue any way.

K. Hen. Here is a dear and true-industrious friend,
Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his horse,
Stain'd with the variation of each soil¹⁸
Betwixt that Holmedon and this seat of ours;
And he hath brought us smooth and welcome news.¹⁹
The earl of Douglas is discomfited;
Ten thousand bold Scots, two-and-twenty knights,
Balk'd²⁰ in their own blood, did Sir Walter see
On Holmedon's plains: of prisoners, Hotspur took Mordake the earl of Fife, and eldest son
To beaten Douglas,²¹ and the earl of Athol,
Of Murray, Angus, and Menteith.
And is not this an honourable spoil?
A gallant prize? ha, cousin, is it not?

West. In faith,²²
It is a conquest for a prince to boast of.

K. Hen. Yea, there thou mak'st me sad, and mak'st me sin

In envy that my lord Northumberland
Should be the father of²³ so blest a son:
A son, who is the theme of honour's tongue;
Amongst a grove the very straightest plant;
Who is sweet Fortune's²⁴ minion, and her pride:
Whilst I, by looking²⁵ on the praise of him,
See riot and dishonour stain the brow

as etc. in Verbindung setzt: Wir werden Truppen ausheben, um damit bis zum Grabe Christi zu ziehen. — Doch citirt Gifford aus Stephen Gosson's School of Abuse eine ähnliche Construction: Scipio, before he levied his force to the walls of Carthage, gave his soldiers the print of the city on a cake to be devoured. 9) Diese Scene ist in das Jahr 1402 zu setzen. 10) So die Fol.; die ersten Qs. lesen now is twelve month old; in den spätern Qs. fehlt now. — Den Vorsatz, in's heilige Land zu ziehen, hatte der König schon in K. Richard II. (A. 5, Sc. 6) ausgesprochen. 11) therefore bezieht sich auf to tell you: Um Euch zu sagen, dass wir die Absicht haben, einen Kreuzzug zu unternehmen, habe ich Euch nicht herberufen, da Ihr das schon wisst. 12) Diese wichtige, uns so sehr am Herzen liegende Kriegsunternehmung. — In diesen eigenthümlichen Bedeutungen gebraucht Sh. auch anderswo dear und expedience. 13) Wir waren gestern gerade eifrig mit der eiligen Betreibung dieser Angelegenheit beschäftigt, und hatten viele nähere Bestimmungen der Kriegsverwaltung zu Papier gebracht. — charge lässt sich jedoch auch speciell = Kriegskosten, fassen. 14) So die Qs.; die Fol. hat And a thousand. — In der folgenden Zeile ist corse dem Sinne und vielleicht auch der Form nach als Plural gemeint, weshalb Dyce corpse schreibt und Staunton corse vermuthet. 15) So die Fol.; einige Qs. haben did für like und in den folgenden zwei Versen for more und import für das far more und report anderer Qs. und der Fol. 16) there bezieht sich auf the north = das nördliche England. — Percy's hier zuerst erwähnten Beinamen Hotspur erklärt Holinshed so: This Harry Percy was surnamed, for his often pricking, Henry Hotspur, as one that seldom times rested, if there were any service to be done abroad. 17) Die Nachricht von der Schlacht liess sich nur nach der Abfenerung ihres Geschützes und nach der Gestalt, welche ihr die Vermuthung gab, berichten, ohne dass man schon vom Ausgange nach irgend einer Richtung Kunde ertheilen konnte. — Den Anachronismus, der in discharge of their artillery liegt, beging Sh., indem er Holinshed's English shot missverstand. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 657. 18) Sir Walter Blunt trug die Spuren seines Rittes durch die verschiedenen Erdarten des Bodens, über den er von Holmedon nach London dahingesprenzt war, an sich. 19) smooth and welcome news ist dem vorhergehenden uneven and unwelcome news gegenübergestellt. 20) to balk = aufhäufen, namentlich von der Furchen bildenden Erde gebraucht. So bilden die Todten in ihrem Blute auf dem Felde von Holmedon aufgehäufte Reihen. — Für balk'd schlug Grey balk'd vor. 21) Steevens bemerkt, dass Sh. nur durch ein Missverständniss den Earl von Fife zum Sohne des Grafen von Douglas machte, da an der entsprechenden Stelle bei Holinshed hinter governor ein Comma fehlt: and of prisoners, Mordake Earl of Fife, son to the Governor Archembald Earl Douglas. (Vgl. Einleitung pag. 657.) Mordake war Sohn des Herzogs von Albany, des Regenten von Schottland. — Ebenso zählt nach Holinshed's Vorgange Sh. irrthümlich Fife und Menteith als zwei verschiedene Personen auf, da es in der That nur zwei Titel derselben waren. — Den Artikel vor earl of Fife fügte zuerst Pope ein. 22) In faith, it is ziehen die alten Ausgg. verkehrt zur Rede des Königs und lassen Westmoreland antworten A conquest for a prince etc. 23) So die spätern Qs. und die Fol.; die frühern Qs. haben to so bless'd etc. 24) Fortune hat das Epitheton sweet in Bezug auf minion. 25) by looking = beim Sehen, während ich sehe. 26) Dass Feen, bei Nacht umherstreichend,

Of my young Harry. O! that it could be prov'd,
That some night-tripping²⁶ fairy had exchang'd
In cradle-clothes our children where they lay,
And call'd mine Percy, his Plantagenet!
Then would I have his Harry, and he mine.
But let him from my thoughts. — What think you, coz,
Of this young Percy's pride? the prisoners,
Which he in this adventure hath surpris'd,
To his own use²⁷ he keeps, and sends me word,
I shall have none but Mordake earl of Fife.

West. This is his uncle's teaching, this is Worcester,
Malevolent to you in all aspects;²⁸
Which makes him prune himself,²⁹ and bristle up
The crest of youth against your dignity.

K. Hen. But I have sent for him to answer this;
And, for this cause, awhile we must neglect
Our holy purpose to Jerusalem.

Cousin, on Wednesday next our council we
Will hold at Windsor: so³⁰ inform the lords;
But come yourself with speed to us again;
For more is to be said, and to be done,
Than out of anger can be uttered.³¹

West. I will, my liege.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The Same. Another Apartment in the Palace.

Enter HENRY, Prince of Wales, and FALSTAFF.

Fal. Now, Hal,¹ what time of day is it, lad?

P. Hen. Thou art so fat-witted,² with drinking of old sack, and unbuttoning thee after supper, and sleeping upon benches after noon, that thou hast forgotten to demand that truly, which thou wouldst truly know.³ What a devil hast thou to do with the time of the day? unless hours were cups of sack, and minutes capons, and clocks the tongues of bawds, and dials the signs of leapinghouses,⁴ and the blessed sun himself a fair hot wench in flame-colour'd taffeta, I see no reason why thou shouldst be so superfluous⁵ to demand the time of the day.

Fal. Indeed, you come near me,⁶ now, Hal; for we, that take purses, go by the moon and the⁷ seven stars, and not by Phœbus, — he, that wandering knight so fair.⁸ And, I pr'ythee, sweet wag, when thou art king, — as, God save thy grace, — majesty, I should say, for grace thou wilt have none, —

P. Hen. What! none?

Fal. No, by my troth; not so much as will serve to be prologue to an egg and butter.⁹

P. Hen. Well, how then? come roundly,¹⁰ roundly.

Fal. Marry, then, sweet wag, when thou art king, let not us, that are squires of the night's body, be called thieves of the day's beauty:¹¹ let us be Diana's foresters, gentlemen of the shade, minions of the moon; and let men say, we be men of good government,¹² being govern'd as the sea is, by our noble and chaste mistress the moon, under whose countenance we steal.

P. Hen. Thou say'st well, and it holds well, too; for the fortune of us, that are the moon's men,¹³ doth ebb and flow like the sea, being govern'd as the sea is, by the moon. As for proof now: a purse of gold most resolutely snatched on Monday night, and most dissolutely spent on Tuesday morning; got with swearing — lay by;
and spent with crying — bring in;¹⁴ now, in as low an ebb as the foot of the ladder,¹⁵ and, by and by, in as high a flow as the ridge of the gallows.

Fal. By the Lord, thou say'st true, lad. And is not my hostess of the tavern a most sweet wench?

Wiegenkinder stahlen oder vertauschten, darauf hat Sh. auch in Midsummer-Night's Dream (A. 2, Sc. 1) angespielt: A lovely boy, stol'n from an Indian king: || She never had so sweet a changeling. 27) Zu seiner eigenen Verfügung. 28) malenolent und aspect sind Ausdrücke der Astrologie. Worcester ist gleichsam ein Stern von übelm Einfluss. 29) to prune = das Gefieder sträuben und putzen, findet seine nähere Erläuterung in dem Nachfolgenden. 30) Die Fol. and so. 31) Was ausser dem Berührten zu sagen und zu thun ist, darf nicht in so aufgeregter Stimmung, wie die jetzige ist, laut werden. — Der König misstraut den Beschlüssen, die er in seinem jetzigen Zorn fassen möchte, und will eine ruhigere Stimmung abwarten. — Das ist wohl eher der Sinn der Stelle, als was Johnson deutet: More is to be said than anger will suffer me to say.

1) Hal vertraulich aus Harry abgekürzt. 2) fat-witted = dessen Witz fett geworden ist; so kommt fat-brained in K. Henry V. (A. 3, Sc. 7) vor. 3) Falstaff wollte in der That (truly) nicht wissen, welche Stunde am Tage sei, sondern welche Stunde in der Nacht, und weiss nur nicht recht (truly) darnach zu fragen. — Für after noon hat die Fol. in the afternoon. 4) Die Bordelle hatten wie die Wirthshäuser ihr Schild über der Hausthür. 5) superfluous ist, der etwas Ueberflüssiges hat, thut oder spricht, etwa = extravagant. 6) Du berührst mich empfindlich mit Deiner Erinnerung an die Sonne, deren Licht wir Beutelschneider zu scheuen haben. 7) Die Fol. lässt the aus, das alsdann aus dem vorhergehenden the moon supplirt werden muss, da das Siebengestirn gemeint ist. 8) Wahrscheinlich ein Citat aus einer Ballade von dem Phœbusritter, den Falstaff hier scherzhaft identificirt mit dem Sonnengott Phœbus. 9) grace ist in diesen Wortspielen zuerst der Titel des Königs (thy grace), dann = Frömmigkeit, Gnade vor Gott, und endlich = Dankgebet vor einer Mahlzeit, und bestände sie auch nur aus Ei und Butter. 10) Qs. und Fol. verbinden come roundly = komm gerade zu, ohne Umschweife; die Hgg. interpungiren come, roundly. 11) a squire of the body = Leibknappe, Schildknappe. Als Schildknappen der personificirt gedachten Nacht bezeichnet Falstaff sich und seine Genossen, und nicht als Diebe der Schönheit des Tages, die den Tag entstellen durch ihr Treiben. — Zugleich scheint ein Wortspiel von beauty und booty beabsichtigt, wie ein Gleichklang zwischen body und beauty. 12) government = Lenkung, Leitung, und = Aufführung, Benehmen. Wie der Mond das Meer in der Ebbe und Fluth regiert, so regiert er Die, welche unter seinem Schutze (countenance) stehlen, oder doppelsinnig: Die, welche unter seinen Schutz schlüpfen, sich verbergen. 13) men = Diener. 14) Die Goldbörse wird gewonnen, indem man dem Reisenden mit einem Fluche zuruft: Steh! und wird verthan, indem man dem Wirthe zuruft: Bring herein! d. h. Wein. — lay by ist eigentlich ein Schiffsausdruck = die Segel einziehen. 15) ladder ist hier die Leiter zum Galgen. 16) old lad of the castle, wie es scheint, aus old lad of Castile oder auch aus Oliver of Castile entstellt, bezeichnet, so wie der daraus gebildete Name Oldcastle (vgl. Einleitung pag. 662), einen Raufbold und Renommisten. So spricht Sh.'s Zeitgenosse Gabriel Harvey von old lads of the castle with their rapping babble. — Die Fol. liest as is the honey und lässt of

P. Hen. As the honey of Hybla, my old lad of the castle.¹⁶ And is not a buff jerkin a most sweet robe of durance?¹⁷

Fal. How now, how now, mad wag! what, in thy quips, and thy quiddities? what a plague have I to do with a buff jerkin?

P. Hen. Why, what a pox have I to do with my hostess of the tavern?

Fal. Well, thou hast called her to a reckoning many a time and oft.

P. Hen. Did I ever call for thee to pay thy part?

Fal. No; I'll give thee thy due, thou hast paid all there.

P. Hen. Yea, and elsewhere, so far as my coin would stretch; and, where it would not, I have used my credit.

Fal. Yea, and so used it, that were it not here apparent¹⁸ that thou art heir apparent, — But, I pr'ythee, sweet wag, shall there be gallows standing in England when thou art king, and resolution thus fobbed, as it is, with the rusty curb of old father Antick¹⁹ the law? Do not thou, when thou art a king, hang a thief.

P. Hen. No; thou shalt.²⁰

Fal. Shall I? O rare! By the Lord, I'll be a brave judge.

P. Hen. Thou judgest false already: I mean, thou shalt have the hanging of the thieves, and so become a rare hangman.

Fal. Well, Hal, well; and in some sort it jumps with my humour, as well as waiting in the court, I can tell you.

P. Hen. For obtaining of suits?²¹

Fal. Yea, for obtaining of suits, whereof the hangman hath no lean wardrobe. 'Sblood, I am as melancholy as a gib cat,²² or a lugged bear.

P. Hen. Or an old lion, or a lover's lute.

Fal. Yea, or the drone of a Lincolnshire bagpipe.²³

P. Hen. What say'st thou to a hare,²⁴ or the melancholy of Moor-ditch?

Fal. Thou hast the most unsavoury similes,²⁵ and art, indeed, the most comparative,²⁶ rascalliest, — sweet young prince. — But, Hal, I pr'ythee, trouble me no more with vanity. I would to God, thou and I knew where a commodity of good names were to be bought. An old lord of the council rated me the other day in the street about you, Sir; but I marked him not: and yet he talked very wisely; but I regarded him not: and yet he talked wisely, and in the street too.

P. Hen. Thou didst well; for wisdom cries out in the streets, and no man regards it.²⁷

Fal. O! thou hast damnable iteration, and art, indeed, able to corrupt a saint. Thou hast done much harm upon me,²⁸ Hal: — God forgive thee for it. Before I knew thee, Hal, I knew nothing; and now am I, if a man should speak truly, little better than one of the wicked. I must give over this life, and I will give it over; by the Lord, an I do not, I am a villain: I'll be damned for never a king's son in Christendom.²⁹

P. Hen. Where shall we take a purse to-morrow, Jack?

Fal. 'Zounds! where thou wilt, lad, I'll make one; an I do not, call me villain, and baffle³⁰ me.

P. Hen. I see a good amendment of life in thee;³¹ from praying to purse-taking.

Enter POINS, at a distance.

Fal. Why, Hal, 't is my vocation, Hal: 't is no sin for a man to labour in his vocation. Poins!³² — Now shall we know if Gadshill have set a match.³³ — O! if men Hybla aus. 17) durance ist = ein dauerhafter Zeugstoff, = Dauerbarkeit, und = Haft, Verhaftung. — Auf den letzteren Sinn spielt auch buff jerkin an = Wamms von Büffelleder, das die Gerichtsdienner trugen. Auch wird ein solcher Gerichtsdienner, der den Antipholus verhaftet, charakterisirt mit ähnlichem Wortspiel in Comedy of Errors (A. 4, Sc. 2 u. 3) A devil in an everlasting garment hath him — — A wolf, nay, worse, a fellow all in buff, und he, Sir, that takes pity on decayed men, and gives them suits of durance. 18) Wortspiel zwischen here apparent und heir apparent. — In heir wurde zu Sh.'s Zeit das h noch gesprochen. — Die Fol. lässt not vor here aus. 19) Antick = Possenreisser, und = ein alter Mann, ist hier als ein scherzhafter Eigenname des personificirten Gesetzes oder Rechts mit einem grossen A zu schreiben. 20) Falstaff versteht to hang = hängen lassen, zum Strange verurtheilen; Heinrich = aufhängen, den Henker spielen. Ebenso fasst Falstaff judge = Richter; Heinrich to judge = urtheilen, aus den Worten schliessen. 21) suits = Bittgesuche, deren Gewährung man durch Aufwarten bei Hofe erlangte, und = Anzüge, von denen der Henker eine reiche Auswahl besass, da er die Kleider der Gehenkten erbte. Auf dieses Herkommen spielt auch Coriolanus (A. 1, Sc. 5) an: doublets that hangmen would bury with those that wore them. 22) gib cat, ursprünglich wie es scheint = ein alter Kater, ist späterhin auch unterschiedslos als Bezeichnung für jede Katze angewendet. — Der Ausdruck a melancholy as a cat kommt auch in Lyly's Midas vor. 23) Die Dudelsackbläser aus Lincolnshire werden bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen mehrfach erwähnt; so in Armin's Nest of Ninnies (1608) amongst all the pleasures provided (at a Christmas time) a noise of minstrels and a Lincolnshire bagpipe was prepared: the minstrels for the great chamber, the bagpipe for the hall. 24) Als schwermüthig bezeichnet auch Drayton in seinem Polyolbion den Hasen: The melancholy hare is form'd in brakes and briers. — Moor-ditch war ein Theil des Stadtgrabens, der die Altstadt London nach der Landseite umgab, und gewährte, an Sümpfe stossend und mit deren trübem Wasser gefüllt, einen traurigen Anblick. 25) similes in Q. B. und in den späteren Folioausgg.; die übrigen alten Ausgg. lesen smiles. 26) comparative, das eigentlich = zu Vergleichen geeignet, es mit Jemandem aufnehmend, sein könnte, gebraucht Falstaff hier mit dem Nebensinn = zu Vergleichen geneigt. — rascalliest findet sich in den beiden ersten Qs., die andern Qs. und die Fol. haben rascaldest. 27) So die Qs. — Die Fol. hat ohne Sinn: Thou didst well, for no man regards it, dem Statute Jacob's I. gemäss, das die Profanation biblischer Stellen auf der Bühne untersagte. Das Ausgelassene ist aus den Sprichwörtern Salomonis entlehnt. — In Bezug darauf wirft dann Falstaff dem Prinzen damnable iteration vor = eine Wiederholung oder Citirung, die ihn der Verdammniss aussetzt. 28) So Q. A.; die späteren Qs. und die Fol. unto me; »an mir« sagt hier mehr, als »mir«. 29) Dem Sinn nach gehört die in never steckende Negation zu be damn'd = ich will nicht in Verdammniss gerathen um irgend eines Königssohnes willen in der Christenheit. 30) to baffle gebraucht Falstaff hier im Bewusstsein seiner Ritterwürde, da das Wort eine vorzugsweise dem Ritter zugefügte schimpfliche Kränkung bezeichnet. 31) In Bezug auf Falstaff's frühere Worte I must give over this life. 32) In den alten Ausgg.

were to be saved by merit, what hole in hell were hot enough for him? This is the most omnipotent villain, that ever cried, Stand! to a true man.³⁴

P. Hen. Good morrow, Ned.

Poins. Good morrow, sweet Hal. — What says Monsieur Remorse? What says Sir John Sack-and-Sugar?³⁵ Jack, how agrees the devil and thee about thy soul, that thou soldest him on Good-Friday last, for a cup of Madeira, and a cold capon's leg?

P. Hen. Sir John stands to his word: the devil shall have his bargain, for he was never yet a breaker of proverbs; he will give the devil his due.³⁶

Poins. Then art thou damned for keeping thy word with the devil.

P. Hen. Else he had been damned for cozening the devil.

Poins. But, my lads, my lads, to-morrow morning, by four o'clock, early at Gadshill. There are pilgrims going to Canterbury with rich offerings, and traders riding to London with fat purses: I have visors for you all, you have horses for yourselves. Gadshill lies to-night in Rochester; I have bespoke supper to-morrow night in Eastcheap:³⁷ we may do it as secure as sleep. If you will go, I will stuff your purses full of crowns; if you will not, tarry at home, and be hanged.

Fal. Hear ye, Yedward:³⁸ if I tarry at home, and go not, I'll hang you for going.

Poins. You will, chops?³⁹

Fal. Hal, wilt thou make one?

P. Hen. Who, I rob? I a thief? not I, by my faith.

Fal. There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee, nor thou cam'st not of the blood royal, if thou darest not stand for ten shillings.⁴⁰

P. Hen. Well then, once in my days I'll be a madcap.

Fal. Why, that's well said.

P. Hen. Well, come what will, I'll tarry at home.

Fal. By the Lord, I'll be a traitor⁴¹ then, when thou art king.

P. Hen. I care not.

Poins. Sir John, I prythee, leave the prince and me alone: I will lay him down such reasons for this adventure, that he shall go.

Fal. Well, God give thee the spirit of persuasion, and him the ears of profiting, that what thou speakest may move, and what he hears may be believed, that the true prince may (for recreation sake) prove a false thief; for the poor abuses of the time want countenance. Farewell: you shall find me in Eastcheap.

P. Hen. Farewell, the latter spring!⁴² Farewell, All-hallow summer!

[Exit FALSTAFF.]

Poins. Now, my good sweet honey lord, ride with us to-morrow: I have a jest to execute, that I cannot manage alone. Falstaff, Bardolph, Peto,⁴³ and Gadshill, shall rob those men that we have already waylaid:⁴⁴ yourself and I will not be there; and when they have the booty, if you and I do not rob them, cut this head off from my shoulders.

P. Hen. But how⁴⁵ shall we part with them in setting forth?

Poins. Why, we will set forth before or after them, and appoint them a place of meeting, wherein it is at our pleasure to fail; and then will they adventure upon the exploit themselves, which they shall have no sooner achieved, but we'll set upon them.

P. Hen. Yea, but 't is like that they will know us by our horses, by our habits, and by every other appointment, to be ourselves.

Poins. Tut! our horses they shall not see, I'll tie them in the wood; our visors we will change, after we leave them; and, sirrah, I have cases of buckram for the nonce,⁴⁶ to immask our noted outward garments.

P. Hen. Yea, but I doubt⁴⁷ they will be too hard for us.

Poins. Well, for two of them, I know them to be as true-bred cowards as ever turned back; and for the third, if he fight longer than he sees reason, I'll forswear arms. The virtue of this jest will be, the incomprehensible lies⁴⁸ that this same fat rogue will tell us, when we meet at supper: how thirty at least he fought with; what wards, what blows, what extremities he endured; and in the reproof⁴⁹ of this lies the jest.

P. Hen. Well, I'll go with thee: provide us all things necessary, and meet me to-morrow night in Eastcheap, there I'll sup. Farewell.

Poins. Farewell, my lord.

[Exit.]

ist Poins hier irrig als Name der redenden Person gedruckt, der dann die folgenden Worte zuertheilt werden. 33) to set a match = eine Gelegenheit machen, zu Sh.'s Zeit ein technischer Ausdruck für die Auskundschaftung von günstigen Gelegenheiten zu stehlen. So in Ratsey's Ghost (1606) I have been many times beholding to tapsters and chamberlains for directions and setting of matches. — Die Fol. liest watch für match. 34) true man = ehrlicher Mann, im Gegensatz zum Schelm und Diebe, ist hier der unschuldige Reisende, dem der Strassenräuber Steh still! zuruft. 35) Sekt, mit Zucker versetzt, war Falstaff's Lieblingsgetränk; daher nennt Poins ihn selbst Sack-and-Sugar. — Als sack bezeichnete man damals den Wein von Xerez (daher sherris-sack) und von Malaga. Das Wort stammt aus dem französischen vin sec. 36) Das Sprichwort ist eben to give the devil his due. 37) Eastcheap heisst die Strasse in London, in welcher Falstaff's Kneipe mit dem Schilde des Eberkopfes liegt. — Sh. hatte eine wohlbekannte Localität im Sinne. 38) Yedward für Edward, Poins' Vorname. 39) chops, eigentlich = Fleischstücke, bezeichnet den Falstaff als eine grosse Fleischmasse. So heisst er nachher guts = Eingeweide, Bauch. 40) royal = königlich, und = eine Goldmünze zum Werthe von zehn Schillingen. — to stand = gelten, von der Münze, und = stehen, auf dem Anstand stehen, in Bezug auf den beabsichtigten Strassenraub. 41) traitor = Hochverräther, gegen den Staat oder den König. 42) Die meisten Hgg. lesen mit Pope thou latter spring. Indess hat Sh. auch beim Vocativ in der Apposition häufig den Artikel. latter spring = Spätfrühling, und das gerade entgegengesetzte All-hallow summer = Spätherbstsommer, bezeichnet den Widerspruch zwischen Falstaff's wirklichem Alter und jugendlichen Thorheiten oder Gelüsten. 43) Bardolph und Peto hat erst Theobald nach dem Berichte im zweiten Acte in den Text gesetzt, der für diese Namen, in Qs. und Fol., zwei andere, Harvey, Rossil, enthielt. Wahrscheinlich beabsichtigte Sh. anfangs zwei Spiessgesellen des Prinzen so zu benennen und liess aus Versehen, als er nachher jene beiden andern Namen setzte, diese hier im Manuscripte stehen. — Andere Commentatoren halten Harvey und Rossil für Schauspielernamen. 44) Vgl. Anm. 33 dieser Scene. 45) So die Fol.; die Qs. lassen but aus. 46) for the nonce, eigentlich = für das eine Mal, dann = für den Fall. 47) to doubt = Besorgniss hegen. 48) Lügen, die so in's Ungeheuerere gehen, dass sie sich nicht umspannen, nicht

P. Hen. I know you all, and will awhile uphold
The unyok'd humour of your idleness.
Yet herein will I imitate the sun,
Who doth permit the base contagious clouds
To smother up his beauty from the world,
That when he please again to be himself,
Being wanted, he may be more wonder'd at,
By breaking through the foul and ugly mists
Of vapours, that did seem to strangle him.⁵⁰
If all the year were playing holidays,
To sport would be as tedious as to work:
But when they seldom come, they wish'd-for come,
And nothing pleaseth but rare accidents.
So, when this loose behaviour I throw off,
And pay the debt I never promised,
By how much better than my word I am,
By so much shall I falsify men's hopes;⁵¹
And, like bright metal on a sullen ground,
My reformation, glittering o'er my fault,
Shall show more goodly,⁵² and attract more eyes
Than that which hath no foil to set it off.
I'll so offend, to make offence a skill;
Redeeming time, when men think least I will. [Exit.]

SCENE III.

The Same. Another Apartment in the Palace.

Enter King HENRY, NORTHUMBERLAND, WORCESTER, HOTSPUR, Sir WALTER BLUNT, and Others.

K. Hen. My blood hath been too cold and temperate,
Unapt to stir at these indignities,
And you have found me;¹ for, accordingly,
You tread upon my patience: but, be sure,
I will from henceforth rather be myself,
Mighty, and to be fear'd, than my condition,²
Which hath been smooth as oil, soft as young down,
And therefore lost that title of respect,
Which the proud soul ne'er pays but to the proud.
Wor. Our house, my sovereign liege, little deserves

The scourge of greatness to be used on it;
And that same greatness too which our own hands
Have help to make so portly.

North. My lord, —

K. Hen. Worcester, get thee gone; for I do see
Danger³ and disobedience in thine eye.

O, Sir, your presence is too bold and peremptory,
And majesty might never yet endure
The moody frontier⁴ of a servant brow.

You have good leave to leave us; when we need
Your use⁵ and counsel, we shall send for you. —

[Exit WORCESTER.]

[To NORTHUMBERLAND.] You were about to speak.

North.

Yea, my good lord.

Those prisoners in your highness' name demanded,
Which Harry Percy here at Holmedon took,
Were, as he says, not with such strength denied
As was⁶ deliver'd to your majesty:

Either envy, therefore, or misprision
Is guilty of this fault, and not my son.

Hot. My liege, I did deny no prisoners;

But, I remember, when the fight was done,

When I was dry⁷ with rage and extreme toil,

Breathless and faint, leaning upon my sword,

Came there a certain lord, neat and⁸ trimly dress'd,

Fresh as a bridegroom; and his chin, new reap'd,

Show'd like a stubble-land at harvest-home.⁹

He was perfum'd like a milliner,¹⁰

And 'twixt his finger and his thumb he held

A pouncet-box,¹¹ which ever and anon

He gave his nose, and took 't away again;

Who, therewith angry, when it next came there,

Took it in snuff:¹² — and still he smil'd and talk'd;

And, as the soldiers bore dead bodies by,

He call'd them untaught knaves, unmannerly,

To bring a slovenly unhandsome corpse

Betwixt the wind and his nobility.¹³

With many holiday and lady terms¹⁴

He question'd me; among the rest, demanded

My prisoners, in your majesty's behalf.

zusammenfassen lassen. 40) ward = Parade beim Fechten. — reproof ist hier die mit Blamage verbundene Widerlegung oder Aufdeckung der Falstaff'schen Lügen. — Q. A. hat lives the jest. 50) Dasselbe Bild von der Sonne in Macbeth (A. 2, Sc. 4) And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp. 51) Je mehr ich die Versprechungen, die ich gebe, übertreffe, um so mehr werde ich die Erwartungen der Menschen, die von mir gering sind, als falsch hinstellen. — hope ist bei Sh. = Erwartung, nicht bloss = Hoffnung; wie in Antony and Cleopatra (A. 2, Sc. 1) I cannot hope, || Caesar and Antony shall well greet together. — Denselben Gedanken spricht Heinrich deutlicher aus in K. Henry IV. Second Part (A. 5, Sc. 2) To mock the expectation of the world, To frustrate prophecies. 52) Wie ein helles Metall absticht gegen einen dunkeln Grund, auf dem es liegt, so wird Heinrich's Lebens- oder Sinnesänderung um so schöner erscheinen, wenn sie über seinen jetzigen Fehlern leuchtet.

1) d. h. Ihr habt diese Schwäche in mir ausfindig gemacht. 2) my condition = meine natürliche Gemüthsbeschaffenheit, ist dem myself = mein Selbst, ich als König, gegenübergestellt. 3) danger ist hier = Gefährdung, Beeinträchtigung der Gesetze, welche das königliche Ansehen sichern. 4) frontier = Fronte, die dem Gegner zugekehrte Seite, nicht gerade = forehead, wie Steevens erklärt. 5) Eure Verwendung, den Dienst, zu dem wir Euch gebrauchen. 6) was in der Fol.; die meisten Hgg. lesen is mit einigen Qs. — Die beiden folgenden Zeilen lauten in der Fol., als sei davor ein Vers ausgefallen, auf den sich das Relativpronomen bezieht: Who either through envy, or misprision || Was guilty of this fault, and not my son. 7) dry = durstig, lechzend. So in Tempest (A. 1, Sc. 2) dry for sway. 8) Viele Hgg. lassen des Verses wegen and stillschweigend aus. 9) Sein Kinn, eben rasirt, oder, wie Percy sich bildlich ausdrückt, eben abgeerntet, war so kahl wie ein Ackerfeld zur Zeit des Erntefestes, wenn die Ernte eingebracht ist. 10) milliner = Modehändler. zu Sh.'s Zeit gewöhnlich männlichen Geschlechts. 11) pouncet-box = eine Büchse mit durchbrochener Arbeit, die wohlriechende Stoffe, Moschus u. dergl. enthielt. 12) to take in snuff ist in scherzhaftem Wortspiel gebraucht, = einschnupfen, und = Etwas übel aufnehmen. — who bezieht sich auf die personificirt gedachte Nase. 13) So dass seiner adligen Person der üble Geruch der Leichen durch die Luftströmung zugeführt wurde. 14) Festtagsausdrücke und Ausdrücke, wie man sie in feiner Damengesellschaft gebraucht. In Merry Wives of Windsor (A. 3, Sc. 2) steht

I then, all smarting, with my wounds being cold,¹⁵
 To be so pester'd with a popinjay,¹⁶
 Out of my grief and my impatience
 Answer'd neglectingly, I know not what,
 He should, or he should not;¹⁷ for he made me mad,
 To see him shine so brisk, and smell so sweet,
 And talk so like a waiting-gentlewoman
 Of guns, and drums, and wounds, God save the mark!
 And telling me, the sovereign'st thing on earth
 Was parmacity¹⁸ for an inward bruise;
 And that it was great pity, so it was,
 That¹⁹ villanous saltpetre should be digg'd
 Out of the bowels of the harmless earth,
 Which many a good tall fellow had destroy'd
 So cowardly; and, but for these vile guns,
 He would himself have been a soldier.
 This bald unjointed chat of his, my lord,
 I answer'd indirectly,²⁰ as I said;
 And, I beseech you, let not his report²¹
 Come current for an accusation,
 Betwixt my love and your high majesty.

Blunt. The circumstance consider'd, good my lord,
 Whatever Harry Percy²² then had said
 To such a person, and in such a place,
 At such a time, with all the rest re-told,
 May reasonably die, and never rise
 To do him wrong, or any way impeach
 What then he said, so he unsay it now.

K. Hen. Why, yet he doth deny his prisoners,
 But with proviso, and exception,²³
 That we, at our own charge, shall ransom straight
 His brother-in-law, the foolish Mortimer;²⁴
 Who, on my soul, hath wilfully betray'd
 The lives of those that he did lead to fight Against the²⁵ great magician, damn'd Glendower,

Whose daughter, as we hear, the earl of March
 Hath lately married. Shall our coffers then
 Be emptied to redeem a traitor home?
 Shall we buy treason, and indent with fears,²⁶
 When they have lost and forfeited themselves?
 No, on the barren mountains²⁷ let him starve;
 For I shall never hold that man my friend,
 Whose tongue shall ask me for one penny cost
 To ransom home revolted Mortimer.

Hot. Revolted Mortimer!

He never did fall off, my sovereign liege,
 But by the chance of war:²⁸ to prove that true,
 Needs no more but one tongue for all those wounds,
 Those mouthed wounds,²⁹ which valiantly he took,
 When on the gentle Severn's sedgy bank,
 In single opposition, hand to hand,
 He did confound the best part of an hour
 In changing hardiment³⁰ with great Glendower.
 Three times they breath'd, and three times did they drink,

Upon agreement, of swift Severn's flood,
 Who then, affrighted with their bloody looks,
 Ran fearfully among the trembling reeds,
 And hid his crisp head³¹ in the hollow bank
 Blood-stained with these valiant combatants.
 Never did base³² and rotten policy
 Colour her working with such deadly wounds;
 Nor never could the noble Mortimer
 Receive so many, and all willingly:
 Then let him not be slander'd with revolt.

K. Hen. Thou dost belie him, Percy, thou dost belie him:³³

He never did encounter with Glendower.

I tell thee,

He durst as well have met the devil alone,

he speaks holiday. 15) Der Schmerz vermehrte sich dadurch, dass die Wunden kalt wurden. 16) popinjay = Papagei, Schwätzer. — grief ist alles Bedrückende, Quälende. 17) scil. have my prisoners. — Percy weiss nicht mehr, ob er dem Hölfling die Gefangenen damals zugesagt oder verweigert habe. 18) parmacity in Fol. und Qs., eine gebräuchliche Entstellung aus spermaceti = Wallrath, das als Heilmittel auch in Overbury's Characters (1616) in demselben Zusammenhange vorkommt: for an inward bruise lambstones and sweetbreads are his only spermaceti. 19) that in der Fol.; die Qs. this. 20) Die Fol. hat Made me to answer indirectly etc. 21) his report in Q. A.; this report in den übrigen alten Ausgg. 22) So die Fol.; Q. A. hat what e'er Lord Henry Percy; die späteren Qs. lassen das Lord, das wahrscheinlich aus dem Vorhergehenden in den Text gerieth, aus. 23) proviso = Vorbehalt, und exception = Einrede, juristische Ausdrücke, die der König hier geflissentlich gebraucht, um das Unpassende hervorzuheben, dass der Unterthan mit dem König rechtet. 24) Sh. verwechselt hier den Mortimer, Grafen Edmund von March, den Neffen der Lady Percy, mit deren Bruder, Sir Edmund Mortimer. 25) So die Fol. und die späteren Qs. für that der früheren Qs. — Ebenso the earl of March für that earl etc. in Q. A. 26) Da der König offenbar von Mortimer spricht, der durch eigene Schuld in Glendower's Gewalt gerathen sei, und den er nicht vermittelst Unterhandlungen daraus befreien will, so dass der König noch obendrein Mortimer's Verrath bezahlte, so muss fears, wenn das Wort das richtige ist, die personifizierte Furcht, den Feigling, bedeuten. Johnson wollte dafür peers, hammer foes, und knight feres lesen, letzteres ein veraltetes Wort = Genosse, Geselle. Vielleicht schrieb Sh. fools, wie er vorher schon foolish Mortimer hatte. — to indent = einen Vergleich abschliessen. 27) Auf die unfruchtbaren Gebirge in Wales im Gegensatze zu den reichen Gefilden Englands wird bei Sh. öfter verächtlich hingedeutet. — mountains in Q. A., mountain in den andern Qs. 28) d. h. genauer ausgedrückt: sein Abfall bestand nur in dem wechselnden Kriegsglück, das ihn in Glendower's Gewalt brachte. 29) Die klaffenden Wunden thun gleichsam den Mund auf, sind mit einem Munde versehen, um laut für Mortimer's Unschuld zu reden. — Denselben Tropus hat Sh. in Coriolanus (A. 2. Sc. 3) we are to put our tongues into those wounds, and speak for them. 30) hardiment = Ritterlichkeit, Tüchtigkeit im Kampfe. — Während dieses Zweikampfs schöpften sie dreimal Athem und löschten ihren Durst im Wasser des Severn, indem sie auf gegenseitiges Einverständniss hin den Kampf eine Weile ruhen liessen. 31) Es ist hier der Flussgott gemeint, dem ein krausgelocktes Haupt beigelegt wird, nach der gekräuselten Oberfläche des Wassers, wie Sh. in Tempest (A. 4. Sc. 1) hat You nymphs, call'd Naiads, of the wandering brooks — Leave your crisp channels. 32) base ist die Lesart der Fol., bare die der Qs. — Hotspur meint die gemeine, feige List, mit welcher der König den Mortimer verdächtigt, dass er nur zum Scheine den Glendower bekriegt habe. 33) to belie, gewöhnlich = lügnerrisch von Jemandem zu seinem Nachtheil reden, also verläumdern, ist hier = Unwahres von Jemandem aussagen, ohne

As Owen Glendower for an enemy.
Art thou not asham'd? But, sirrah, henceforth
Let me not hear you speak of Mortimer.
Send me your prisoners with the speediest means,
Or you shall hear in such a kind from me
As will displease you. — My lord Northumberland,
We license your departure with your son. —
Send us your prisoners, or you 'll hear of it.

[Exeunt King HENRY, BLUNT, and Train.]

Hot. And if the devil come and roar for them,
I will not send them. — I will after straight,
And tell him so; for I will ease my heart,
Although it be with hazard³⁴ of my head.

North. What! drunk with choler? stay, and pause awhile:
Here comes your uncle.

Re-enter WORCESTER.

Hot. Speak of Mortimer!
'Zounds!³⁵ I will speak of him; and let my soul
Want mercy, if I do not join with him:
In his behalf,³⁶ I 'll empty all these veins,
And shed my dear blood drop by drop i' the dust,
But I will lift the down-trod³⁷ Mortimer
As high i' the air as this unthankful king,
As this ingrate and canker'd Bolingbroke.

North. [To WORCESTER.] Brother, the king hath made your nephew mad.

Wor. Who struck this heat up after I was gone?

Hot. He will, forsooth, have all my prisoners;
And when I urg'd the ransom once again
Of my wife's brother,³⁸ then his cheek look'd pale,
And on my face he turn'd an eye of death,³⁹
Trembling even at the name of Mortimer.

Wor. I cannot blame him. Was he⁴⁰ not proclaim'd
By Richard, that dead is, the next of blood?

North. He was; I heard the proclamation:
And then it was, when the unhappy king
(Whose wrongs in us⁴¹ God pardon!) did set forth
Upon his Irish expedition;
From whence he, intercepted, did return
To be depos'd, and shortly murdered.

Wor. And for whose death, we in the world's wide mouth
Live scandaliz'd, and foully spoken of.

Hot. But, soft! I pray you, did king Richard then Proclaim my brother Edmund Mortimer
Heir to the crown?

North. He did: myself did hear it.

Hot. Nay, then I cannot blame his cousin king,
That wish'd him on the barren mountains⁴² starve.
But shall it be that you, that set the crown
Upon the head of this forgetful man,
And for his sake wear the detested blot
Of murd'rous subornation, shall it be,
That you a world of curses undergo,
Being the agents, or base second means,
The cords, the ladder,⁴³ or the hangman rather? —
O! pardon me, that I descend so low,
To show the line and the predicament,
Wherein you range under this subtle king. —
Shall it, for shame, be spoken in these days,
Or fill up chronicles in time to come,
That men of your nobility and power
Did gage them both in an unjust behalf
(As both of you, God pardon it! have done),
To put down Richard, that sweet lovely rose,
And plant this thorn, this canker,⁴⁴ Bolingbroke?
And shall it, in more shame, be further spoken,
That you are fool'd, discarded, and shook off
By him, for whom these shames ye underwent?
No! yet time serves, wherein you may redeem
Your banish'd honours, and restore yourselves
Into the good thoughts of the world again:
Revenge the jeering and disdain'd⁴⁵ contempt
Of this proud king, who studies day and night
To answer all the debt he owes to you,
Even with the bloody payment of your deaths.
Therefore, I say, —

Wor. Peace, cousin! say no more.

And now I will unclasp a secret book,
And to your quick-conceiving discontents
I 'll read you matter deep and dangerous,
As full of peril and adventurous spirit,
As to o'er-walk a current, roaring loud,
On the unsteadfast footing of a spear.⁴⁶

Hot. If he fall in, good night! — or sink or swim:⁴⁷
Send danger from the east unto the west,
So honour cross it from the north to south,
And let them grapple:⁴⁸ — O! the blood more stirs
To rouse a lion than to start a hare.

North. Imagination of some great exploit
Drives him beyond the bounds of patience.

Hot. By heaven, methinks, it were an easy leap
To pluck bright honour from the pale-fac'd moon,⁴⁹
Or dive into the bottom of the deep, solchen Nebensinn. 34) So die Fol.; die Qs. lesen Albeit I make a hazard etc. Zu bemerken ist die Sh.'sche Antithese von head und heart. 35) Dieses charakteristische Fluchwort änderte die Theaterzensur in das zahme yes um, das sich daher in der Fol. findet. Vgl. A. 1. Sc. 2, Anm. 27. 36) So die Fol.; die Qs. haben Yea, on his part etc. 37) Die Fol. down-fall. 38) Vgl. oben Anm. 24 dieser Scene. 39) an eye of death erklärt Johnson = ein Tod drohendes Auge, M. Mason = ein Auge, in dem sich Todesfurcht ausspricht. Es ist wohl nur ein Auge, starr wie das eines Todten, gemeint. 40) scil. Mortimer. — Sh. verwechselt hier abermals den Schwager Percy's mit einem andern Mortimer, dem Neffen desselben, der, von Richard II. zum Nachfolger ernannt, noch vor Richard's Tode in Irland fiel. 41) Das Unrecht, das er von uns erlitten hat; unsern Antheil an dem ihm zugefügten Unrecht. 42) Vgl. Anm. 27 dieser Scene. — Hier haben Qs. und Fol. mountains. — Doch ist es nicht nöthig, dass Hotspur des Königs Worte buchstäblich citire. So hat auch die Fol. hier starv'd für starve. 43) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 15. 44) canker = Hundsrose. wird auch sonst als etwas Verächtliches der schönen Gartenrose entgegengestellt. So in Much Ado about Nothing (A. 1, Sc. 3) I had rather be a canker in a hedge, than a rose in his grace. 45) disdain'd = mit Hohn begabt, von dem substantivischen disdain so gebildet, wie in Merchant of Venice (A. 3, Sc. 2) guiled vom Substantiv guile, und in Othello (A. 1, Sc. 3) delighted vom Substantiv delight. 46) Einen stürmischen Strom überschreiten auf einem Speer, der quer darüber liegt. — Keightley vermuthet torrent für current. 47) Eine alte sprichwörtliche Redensart. 48) Die Gefahr mag noch so gewaltig über den Erdkreis daherstürmen; wenn die Ehre ihr in den Weg tritt, so nimmt sie es mit ihr auf.

Where fathom-line could never touch the ground,
And pluck up drowned honour by the locks,⁵⁰
So he that doth redeem her thence might wear
Without corrival all her dignities:
But out upon this half-fac'd fellowship!⁵¹

Wor. He apprehends a world of figures here,⁵²
But not the form of what he should attend. —
Good cousin, give me audience for a while,
And list to me.

Hot. I cry you mercy.

Wor. Those same noble Scots,
That are your prisoners, —

Hot. I'll keep them all.
By God, he shall not have a Scot of them:
No, if a Scot would save his soul,⁵³ he shall not.
I'll keep them, by this hand.

Wor. You start away,
And lend no ear unto my purposes.
Those prisoners you shall keep.

Hot. Nay, I will; that's flat.

He said, he would not ransom Mortimer;
Forbad my tongue to speak of Mortimer;
But I will find him when he lies asleep.
And in his ear I'll holla — Mortimer!

Nay,
I'll have a starling shall be taught to speak
Nothing but Mortimer, and give it him,
To keep his anger still in motion.

Wor. Hear you, cousin, a word.

Hot. All studies here I solemnly defy,⁵⁴
Save how to gall and pinch this Bolingbroke:
And that same sword-and-buckler prince⁵⁵ of Wales,
But that I think his father loves him not,
And would be glad he met with some mischance,
I would have him poison'd with a pot of ale.⁵⁶

Wor. Farewell, kinsman. I will talk to you,
When you are better temper'd to attend.

North. Why, what a wasp-stung⁵⁷ and impatient fool

Art thou, to break into this woman's mood,
Tying thine ear to no tongue but thine own!

Hot. Why, look you, I am whipp'd and scourg'd with rods,

Nettled, and stung with pismires, when I hear
Of this vile politician, Bolingbroke.

In Richard's time, — what do ye call the place? —

A plague upon 't — it is in Glostershire; —

'T was where the madcap duke his uncle kept,⁵⁸

His uncle York, — where I first bow'd my knee

Unto this king of smiles,⁵⁹ this Bolingbroke,

'Sblood!⁶⁰

When you and he came back from Ravenspurg.

North. At Berkley castle.

Hot. You say true. —

Why, what a candy deal of courtesy⁶¹

This fawning greyhound then did proffer me!

Look, — »when his infant fortune came to age,⁶²

And, — »gentle Harry Percy,« — and, — »kinl cousin,« —

O, the devil take such cozeners!⁶³ — God forgive me! —

Good uncle, tell your tale, for I have done.⁶⁴

Wor. Nay, if you have not, to 't again;

We'll stay your leisure.

Hot. I have done, i' faith.

Wor. Then once more to your Scottish prisoners.

Deliver them up without their ransom straight,

And make the Douglas' son your only⁶⁵ mean

For powers in Scotland; which, for divers reasons,

Which I shall send you written, be assur'd,

Will easily be granted. — [To NORTHUMBERLAND.] You,
my lord,

Your son in Scotland being thus employ'd,

Shall secretly into the bosom creep⁶⁶

Of that same noble prelate well below'd,

The archbishop.

Hot. Of York, is it not?

Wor. True; who bears hard

49) Wo es gilt, Ehre zu erwerben, erscheint mir selbst ein Sprung bis zum Monde nicht zu schwer, wenn sie dort zu holen wäre. — Zu dem Folgenden ist, genau genommen, nicht das ganze it were an easy leap zu ergänzen, sondern etwa nur it were easy — to dive — etc. 50) drowned honour ist dem bright honour gegenübergestellt und Beides weiblich personifiziert, daher by the locks. 51) Percy in seiner Tollkühnheit verwünscht eine so kümmerlich aussehende, schwachmüthige Genossenschaft, wie der vorsichtige Worcester sie ihm vorzuschlagen scheint, ohne dass er sich die Mühe nimmt, ihn zu Ende zu hören. — half-faced = was nur ein halbes, kein volles Gesicht hat, daher = schwächig, kümmerlich. — Malone bezieht fellowship auf corrival und versteht darunter die Genossenschaft im Besitz der Ehre. 52) Eine Masse von Bildern, die nur in der Einbildung bestehen, wie Percy's extravagante Reden sie enthielten. In diesem Sinne = phantastische Bilder oder Vorstellungen, steht figures in Julius Cæsar (A. 2, Sc. 1) Thou hast no figures, nor no fantasies, || Which busy care draws in the brains of men. — Die letzten Worte dieser Rede and list to me sind nur in der Fol. 53) Wenn dem König der Besitz eines Schotten zum Heil seiner Seele nothwendig wäre, so sollte er doch keinen haben. 54) to defy = trotzig Einem die Verbindung aufsagen. — Percy sagt sich von allen Studien los, bis auf das Studium, den Bolingbroke zu ärgern. 55) sword-and-buckler ist hier adjectivisches Epitheton = raufstüchtig, händelsüchtig, weil Leute dieses Schlages immer mit Schwert und Schild in den Strassen erschienen. 56) Anspielung auf die Liebhaberei des Prinzen für gemeine, biertrinkende Gesellschaft. — Die Fol. hat I would have poison'd him etc. 57) So Q. A.; die spätern Qs. haben waspe-tongue und die Fol. waspe-tongu'd. 58) Wo der tolle Herzog von York damals hauste. Vgl. K. Richard II., A. 2, Sc. 3. 59) Dieser König, der sich nur auf's Lächeln versteht, der nichts kann als lächeln. 60) 'Sblood seil. God's blood, ein Fluchwort, das die Fol. auslässt. Vgl. Anm. 35 dieser Scene. 61) Welch eine Zuckermasse von höflichen Reden; mit poetischer Lizenz für what a deal of candy courtesy. 62) Die Worte, auf welche Percy hier anspielt, lauten in K. Richard II. (A. 2, Sc. 3) in Bolingbroke's Munde: And as my fortune ripens with thy love, || It shall be still thy true love's recompense. 63) Wortspiel zwischen cousin und cozeners; = Betrüger, gleichsam cousiners = die Jemanden als Vetter ansprechen. So in Monday's Drama Downfall of Robert Earl of Huntington (1597) To see my cousin cozen'd in this sort. 64) So die Fol.; die Qs. haben I have done, ohne for. 65) only = einzig, auserlesen. — Indem Ihr den Sohn des Douglas ohne Lösegeld freigibt, habt Ihr in ihm ein vortreffliches Mittel, in Schottland Truppen aufzubringen. — Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 1, Anm. 21. 66) Ihr werdet Euch heimlich in das Vertrauen des Erzbischofs einschleichen. —

His brother's death at Bristol, the lord Scroop.
I speak not this in estimation,⁶⁷
As what I think might be, but what I know
Is ruminated, plotted, and set down;
And only stays but to behold the face
Of that occasion that shall bring it on.

Hot. I smell it:

Upon my life, it will do wondrous⁶⁸ well.

North. Before the game's afoot, thou still lett'st slip.⁶⁹

Hot. Why, it cannot choose but be a noble plot. —

And then the power of Scotland and of York,
To join with Mortimer, ha?

Wor. And so they shall.

Hot. In faith, it is exceedingly well aim'd.

Wor. And 't is no little reason bids us speed,

To save our heads by raising of a head;⁷⁰

For, bear ourselves as even as we can,⁷¹

The king will always think him in our debt,

And think we think ourselves unsatisfied,

Till he hath found a time to pay us home.

And see already how he doth begin

To make us strangers to his looks of love.

Hot. He does, he does: we'll be reveng'd on him.

Wor. Cousin,⁷² farewell. — No further go in this,

Than I by letters shall direct your course.

When time is ripe (which will be suddenly),

I'll steal to Glendower, and Lord Mortimer;⁷³

Where you and Douglas, and our powers at once,

As I will fashion it, shall happily meet,

To bear our fortunes in our own strong arms,

Which now we hold at much uncertainty.

North. Farewell, good brother: we shall thrive, I trust.

Hot. Uncle, adieu. — O! let the hours be short,
Till fields⁷⁴ and blows and groans applaud our sport.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.

Rochester. An Inn Yard.

Enter a Carrier, with a lantern in his hand.

1. Car. Heigh-ho! An't be not four by the day, I'll be hanged: Charles' wain¹ is over the new chimney, and yet our horse not packed. What, ostler!

Ostler. [Within.] Anon, anon.

1. Car. I pr'ythee, Tom, beat Cut's² saddle, put a few flocks in the point; the poor jade is wrung in the withers out of all cess.³

Enter another Carrier.

2. Car. Peas and beans are as dank here as a dog, and that is the next way to give poor jades the bots:⁴ this house is turned upside down, since Robin ostler died.

1. Car. Poor fellow! never joyed since the price of oats rose: it was the death of him.

2. Car. I think, this be the most villanous house in all London road⁵ for fleas: I am stung like a tench.⁶

1. Car. Like a tench? by the mass, there is ne'er a king in Christendom could be better bit than I have been since the first cock.⁷

2. Car. Why, they will allow us ne'er a jordan, and then we leak in your chimney; and your chamber-lie⁸ breeds fleas like a loach.

1. Car. What, ostler! come away and be hanged, come away.

2. Car. I have a gammon of bacon, and two razes of ginger,⁹ to be delivered as far as Charing-cross.¹⁰

1. Car. 'Odsbody! the turkeys in my pannier are quite starved. — What, ostler! — A plague on thee! hast thou never an eye in thy head? canst not hear? An't were not as good a deed as drink, to break the pate of thee, I am a very villain. — Come, and be hanged: — hast no faith in thee?¹¹

Enter GADSHILL.¹²

Gads. Good morrow, carriers. What's o'clock?

1. Car. I think it be two o'clock.

Gads. I pr'ythee, lend me thy lantern, to see my gelding in the stable.

1. Car. Nay, soft, I pray ye: I know a trick worth two of that, i' faith.

Gads. I pr'ythee, lend me thine.

2. Car. Ay, when? canst tell?¹³ — Lend me thy lantern, quoth'a? — marry, I'll see thee hanged first.

Gads. Sirrah carrier, what time do you mean to come to London?

2. Car. Time enough to go to bed with a candle, I warrant thee. — Come, neighbour Mugs, we'll call up the gentlemen: they will along with company, for they have great charge.¹⁴ [Exeunt Carriers.]

Diese Interpunction rührt von Theobald her. Die Qs. setzen granted you my lord. 67) estimation = Abschätzung, Dafürhalten; in estimation = auf blosser Vermuthung hin. 68) wondrous ist nur in der Fol. 69) Du lässtest immer die Jagdhunde los, ehe das Wild aufgejagt ist. 70) Wortspiel zwischen head = Kopf, und = Truppenmacht. 71) Mögen wir uns auch so gerade, so recht wie möglich benehmen. 72) cousin wird für jeden entfernteren Verwandtschaftsgrad gebraucht und steht hier = Neffe. 73) Lord Mortimer verbesserte Rowe das loe, Mortimer der Fol. und der spätern Qs., das aus der Abkürzung Lo: Mortimer in Q. A. verdruckt war. 74) d. h. Schlachtfelder, fields of battle.

1) Charles' wain = das Gestirn des grossen Bären. 2) Cut, eigentlich = Stuttschwanz, Wallach, ein gebräuchlicher Pferdenamen. — point = Sattelknopf. — So kommt bei Sh. und seinen Zeitgenossen call me cut als sprichwörtliche Bethuerung vor, wie in Twelfth-Night (A. 2, Sc. 3) if thou hast her not i' the end, call me cut = nenne mich ein Pferd. 3) out of all cess = über alle Massen. — Côtgrave stellt out of all cess mit dem französischen sans cesse zusammen. 4) bots, eine Wurmkrankheit der Pferde. 5) Auf der ganzen Landstrasse nach London hin. — for fleas = was die Flöhe betrifft. 6) Der Kärner will, wie Farmer vermuthet, like a trout sagen. Die Flöhe haben ihn so zerstoehen, dass er so bunt aussieht, wie eine Forelle. 7) Seit dem ersten Hahnenschrei, also in der ersten Frühe des Morgens. — Die Qs. haben christen für in Christendom. 8) chamber-lie, eigentlich = Kammerlange, eine scherzhafte Bezeichnung des Urins. — Der Urin erzeugt Flöhe, wie eine Schmerle laicht, so wimmelnd, wie der Laich einer Schmerle. 9) raze of ginger ist = eine Stange (oder Wurzel) Ingwer. So in Winter's Tale (A. 4, Sc. 2) a raze or two of ginger. 10) Eine Localität zwischen den damals noch getrennten Städten London und Westminster. 11) Sprichwörtlich: ist keine Treue und Glauben in Dir, dass Du uns im Stich lässtest? 12) Sh. scheint ihm diesen Namen gegeben zu haben nach dem Orte Gadshill Gads. What, ho! chamberlain!

Cham. [Within.] At hand, quoth pick-purse.¹⁵

Gads. That's even as fair as -- at hand, quoth the chamberlain; for thou variest no more from picking of purses, than giving direction doth from labouring; thou lay'st the plot how.¹⁶

Enter Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morrow, Master Gadshill. It holds current that I told you yesternight: there's a franklin in the wild of Kent,¹⁷ hath brought three hundred marks with him in gold: I heard him tell it to one of his company, last night at supper; a kind of auditor; one that hath abundance of charge too, God knows what. They are up already, and call for eggs and butter: they will away presently.

Gads. Sirrah, if they meet not with Saint Nicholas' clerks,¹⁸ I'll give thee this neck.

Cham. No, I'll none of it: I pr'ythee, keep that for the hangman; for, I know, thou worshipp'st Saint Nicholas as truly as a man of falsehood may.

Gads. What talkest thou to me of the hangman? if I hang, I'll make a fat pair of gallows; for, if I hang, old Sir John hangs with me, and thou knowest he's no starveling. Tut! there are other Trojans that thou dreamest not of, the which, for sport sake, are content to do the profession some grace; that would, if matters should be looked into, for their own credit sake, make all whole. I am joined with no foot land-rakers,¹⁹ no long-staff, sixpenny strikers,²⁰ none of these mad, mustachio-purple-hued maltworms:²¹ but with nobility and tranquillity;²² burgomasters, and great oneyers; such as can hold in,²³ such as will strike sooner than speak, and speak sooner than drink, and drink sooner than pray: and yet I lie; for they pray continually to their saint, the commonwealth; or, rather, not pray to her, but prey²⁴ on her, for they ride up and down on her, and make her their boots.

Cham. What! the commonwealth their boots? will she hold out water in foul way?

Gads. She will, she will; justice hath liquored her.²⁵ We steal as in a castle, cock-sure;²⁶ we have the receipt of fern-seed,²⁷ we walk invisible.

Cham. Nay, by my faith; I think you are more behold-ing to the night, than to fern-seed, for your walking in-visible.

Gads. Give me thy hand: thou shalt have a share in our purchase,²⁸ as I am a true man.

Cham. Nay, rather let me have it, as you are a false thief.

Gads. Go to; homo is a common name to all men.²⁹ Bid the ostler bring my gelding out of the stable. Fare-well, you muddy knave. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The Road by Gadshill.

Enter Prince HENRY and POINS; BARDOLPH and PETO, at some distance.

Poins. Come, shelter, shelter: I have removed Fal-staff's horse, and he frets like a gummed velvet.¹

P. Hen. Stand close.

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Poins! Poins, and be hanged! Poins!

P. Hen. Peace, ye fat-kidneyed rascal! What a brawl-ing dost thou keep?

Fal. Where's Poins, Hal?

P. Hen. He is walked up to the top of the hill: I'll go seek him. [Pretends to seek POINS.]

in der Grafschaft Kent, wo zu jener Zeit viele Räubereien stattfanden. 13) Sprichwörtlich, als höhnische Erwie-derung auf eine Frage oder Bitte. 14) Weil die Herren Gepäck von Werth bei sich haben, wollen sie nicht ohne Gesellschaft reisen, um gegen räuberische Ueberfälle gesicherter zu sein. 15) Eine sprichwörtliche Redensart, die schon in Appian und Virginia (1575) vorkommt: At hand, quoth pick-purse, here redy am I, || See well to the cut-purse, be ruled by me. 16) scil. wie wir stehlen oder rauben sollen. 17) d. h. ein Freisasse aus dem sogenannten wild of Kent, einer ehemals uncultivirten Strecke der Grafschaft Kent. 18) Saint Nicholas' clerks oder knights ist ein häufig bei den Schriftstellern der Zeit wiederkehrender Euphemismus für: Strassenräuber und Diebe. — St. Nicolaus war der Schutzpatron der fahrenden Schüler, dann aller Vagabunden. — Eben so euphemistisch ist bald nachher Trojan gebraucht, eigentlich = ein Trojaner, ein Held oder Recke, und the profession = das Diebeshandwerk. 19) foot land-rakers = Landstreicher zu Fuss. 20) striker = Beutelschneider, in der Diebes-sprache. Hier wird er weiter charakterisirt als mit einem langen Stecken bewaffnet und den Leuten sechs Pfennige abnehmend. 21) maltworms eigentlich = Malzwürmer, dann, weil aus Malz Bier gebraut wird, Biersäuer, denen vom vielen Trinken sogar der Bart purpurfarbig glüht. — Die komische Uebertreibung, die darin liegt, geht verloren, wenn man, wie die meisten Hgg., mustachio von purple-hued trennt. Die Fol. macht mit Recht ein Compositum daraus. 22) tranquillity fügt, abgesehen von der ursprünglichen Bedeutung, hier Gadshill dem gleich auslautenden nobility bei. Vielleicht meint er Leute, die ein behagliches, ruhiges Leben führen. — Eben so komisch gebildet ist gleich darauf great oneyers, erweitert aus great ones, wie etwa privateer aus private u. A. — Für oneyers, in Q. A. oneyres, vermuthet Pope one-eyers und oneraires, Theobald moneyers und seignors, Hammer owners, Johnson one-eers, Capell mynheers, Malone onyers. Von allen diesen Conjecturen hält Staunton Ham-mer's owners mit Recht für die plausibelste. 23) to hold in = sich behaupten, und = Etwas bei sich behalten. 24) Wortspiel zwischen to pray = beten, und to prey = Beute machen. — Ein ähnliches Wortspiel folgt gleich darauf mit boot = Beute, und = Stiefel. 25) to liquor = schmieren, in Bezug auf die Stiefel, und = anfeuchten, berauscht machen, in Bezug auf das Gemeinwesen, das durch die Chicanen der Justiz verhindert wird, die schuldigen Diebe zu bestrafen. 26) cock-sure = ganz sicher, ganz gefahrlos, vielleicht eigentlich = sicher vor dem Schuss, von cock = Hahn am Gewehr. 27) Der Besitz von Farrensamem galt für ein Mittel, sich unsichtbar zu machen, da derselbe mit blossen Augen kaum wahrzunehmen war. So in Ben Jonson's New Inn: I had no medicine Sir, to go invisible, no fern-seed in my pocket. 28) purchase = Erwerb, Gewinn. — true man = ehrlicher Mann, ist der stete Gegensatz zum thief. 29) Wenn ich auch ein Dieb bin, so bleibt mir doch der Name Mensch, latei-nisch homo, mit allen Uebrigen gemeinsam. — Die Stelle ist ein Citat aus der kleinen Grammatik, die unter dem Namen The Accidence zu Sh.'s Zeit gebräuchlich war.

Fal. I am accursed to rob in that thief's company; the rascal hath removed my horse, and tied him I know not where. If I travel but four foot by the squire² further afoot, I shall break my wind. Well, I doubt not but to die a fair death for all this, if I 'scape hanging for killing that rogue. I have forsworn his company hourly any time this two-and-twenty years, and yet I am bewitched with the rogue's company. If the rascal have not given me medicines³ to make me love him, I'll be hanged; it could not be else: I have drunk medicines. — Poins! — Hal! — a plague upon you both! — Bardolph! — Peto! — I'll starve, ere I'll rob a foot further.⁴ An't were not as good a deed as drink, to turn true man, and leave these rogues, I am the veriest varlet that ever chewed with a tooth. Eight yards of uneven ground is threescore and ten miles afoot with me, and the stony-hearted villains know it well enough. A plague upon 't, when thieves cannot be true to one another! [They whistle.] Whew! — A plague upon you all! Give me my horse, you rogues; give me my horse, and be hanged.

P. Hen. Peace, ye fat-guts!⁵ lie down: lay thine ear close to the ground, and list if thou canst hear the tread of travellers.

Fal. Have you any levers to lift me up again, being down? 'Sblood! I'll not bear mine own flesh so far afoot again, for all the coin in thy father's exchequer. What a plague mean ye to colt me thus?

P. Hen. Thou liest: thou art not colted;⁶ thou art uncolted.

Fal. I pr'ythee, good prince Hal, help me to my horse, good king's son.

P. Hen. Out, you rogue! shall I be your ostler?

Fal. Go, hang thyself in thine own heir-apparent garters!⁷ If I be ta'en, I'll peach for this. An I have not ballads made on you all, and sung to filthy tunes,⁸ let a cup of sack be my poison: when a jest is so forward, and afoot too, I hate it.⁹

Enter GADSHILL.

Gads. Stand.

Fal. So I do, against my will.

Poins. O! 't is our setter:¹⁰ I know his voice.

Enter BARDOLPH.

Bard. What news?

Gads. Case ye, case ye; on with your visors: there 's money of the king's coming down the hill; 't is going to the king's exchequer.

Fal. You lie, you rogue: 't is going to the king's tavern.¹¹

Gads. There 's enough to make¹² us all.

Fal. To be hanged.

P. Hen. Sirs, you four shall front them in the narrow lane; Ned Poins and I will walk lower: if they scape from your encounter, then they light on us.

Peto. How many be there of them?

Gads. Some eight, or ten.

Fal. 'Zounds! will they not rob us?¹³

P. Hen. What, a coward, Sir John Paunch?

Fal. Indeed, I am not John of Gaunt,¹⁴ your grandfather; but yet no coward, Hal.

P. Hen. Well, we leave that to the proof.

Poins. Sirrah Jack, thy horse stands behind the hedge: when thou needest him, there thou shalt find him. Farewell, and stand fast.

Fal. Now cannot I strike him,¹⁵ if I should be hanged.

P. Hen. [Aside to POINS.] Ned, where are our disguises?

Poins. Here, hard by: stand close.

[Exeunt Prince HENRY and POINS.]

Fal. Now, my masters, happy man be h's dole,¹⁶ say I: every man to his business.

Enter Travellers.

1. Trav. Come, neighbour; the boy shall lead our horses down the hill; we'll walk afoot awhile, and ease our legs.

Thieves. Stand!¹⁷

Travellers. Jesu bless us!

Fal. Strike; down with them; cut the villains' throats. Ah! whoreson caterpillars!¹⁸ bacon-fed knaves! they hate us youth: down with them; fleece them.

1) Der Sammetstoff knirscht oder rauscht, wenn er mit Gummi gesteiht ist. So in Marston's Male-content: I'll come among you, like gum into taffeta, to fret, fret. 2) by the squire = nach dem Winkelmass, also = vier Fuss genau gemessen. 3) medicine ist hier nicht eigentlich = Heilmittel, sondern jeder Trank, den man Einem eingiebt, also = Liebestrank, wie in Othello (A. 1, Sc. 3) she is corrupted || By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks. 4) Ehe ich einen Schritt weiter auf Räuberei ausgehe. 5) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 39. 6) Wortspiel zwischen colted = geprellt, und uncoltd = seines Pferdes, eigentlich seines Füllens, beraubt. 7) He may hang himself in his own garters = er kann sich ohne Weiteres hängen lassen, ist ein Sprichwort in Ray's Sprichwörterammlung. — go fehlt in den früheren Qs. 8) In Bänkelsängerliedern wurden namentlich Leben und Thaten berühmter Räuber und Mörder zu bekannten Melodien auf der Strasse gesungen. 9) Wenn ein Spass so weit geht und noch dazu zu Fuss, so hasse ich ihn. — Die Hgg. setzen ohne Noth einen Gedankenstrich vor I hate it. 10) setter = Kundschafter. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 33. — Die folgende Vertheilung der Reden rührt von Johnson her. In den alten Ausgg. sagt Poins: Bardolph, what news? und darauf erwiedert Bardolph: Case ye etc., ohne dass sein Auftreten notirt ist. 11) d. h. wir werden das Gold rauben und in der Kneipe verthun. 12) Gadshill fasst to make = zum gemachten Mann machen, Falstaff setzt den Satz fort: make us all to be hanged. 13) Auf us liegt der Nachdruck. 14) Wortspiel zwischen Gaunt, dem Beinamen des verstorbenen Herzogs von Lancaster, und gaunt = hager, dürr; letzteres im Gegensatz zu paunch = Wanst. — Sir John Paunch für Sir John Falstaff ist gebildet wie vorher Sir John Sack-and-Sugar (vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 35). 15) Ich kann es nicht über's Herz bringen, den Poins zu züchtigen, jetzt, da er mir verrathen hat, wo mein Pferd steht. 16) Ein Zuruf, gutes Muths zu sein. — dole = Theil, Antheil. 17) So die frühern Qs.; die spätern Qs. und die Fol. Stay. — Mit Thieves sind Falstaff, Bardolph u. s. w. gemeint. 18) caterpillars versteht Falstaff, wie in K. Richard II. (A. 2, Sc. 3) The caterpillars of the commonwealth von Denen gebraucht wird, die sich auf Kosten des Staats bereichern. 19) gorbellied = dickbäuchig, fettbäuchig. 20) chuff = der sich auf Anderer Kosten mästet, der Geizhals. Das Wort ist vielleicht entstellt aus chough = Krähe, Dohle, also ein diebischer Vogel. 21) Falstaff vermuthet nach der Respectabilität der Reisenden, dass sie Mitglieder des grossen Geschwornengerichts sind, auf die er besonders erbittert ist, da dieses Gericht zu entscheiden hat, ob ein Verbrecher

Travellers. O! we are undone, both we and ours, for ever.

Fal. Hang ye, gorbellied¹⁹ knaves. Are ye undone? No, ye fat chuffs;²⁰ I would, your store were here! On, bacons, on! What! ye knaves, young men must live. You are grand-jurors,²¹ are ye? We'll jure ye, i' faith.

[*Exeunt FALSTAFF etc., driving the Travellers out.*²²

Re-enter Prince HENRY and POINS.

P. Hen. The thieves have bound the true men. Now could thou and I rob the thieves, and go merrily to London, it would be argument²³ for a week, laughter for a month, and a good jest for ever.

Poins. Stand close; I hear them coming.

Re-enter Thieves.

Fal. Come, my masters; let us share, and then to horse before day. An the prince and Poins be not two arrant cowards, there's no equity stirring: there's no more valour in that Poins, than in a wild duck.

P. Hen. Your money. [Rushing out upon them.

Poins. Villains.

[*As they are sharing, the PRINCE and POINS set upon them. They all run away, and FALSTAFF, after a blow or two, runs away too, leaving the booty behind them.*²⁴

P. Hen. Got with much ease. Now merrily to horse: The thieves are scatter'd, and possess'd with fear So strongly, that they dare not meet each other; Each takes his fellow for an officer.

Away, good Ned. Falstaff sweats to death, And lards the lean earth as he walks along: Were 't not for laughing, I should pity him.

Poins. How the rogue roar'd! [Exeunt.

SCENE III.

Warkworth. A Room in the Castle.

*Enter HOTSPUR, reading a letter.*¹

— »But, for mine own part, my lord, I could be well contented to be there, in respect of the love I bear your house. — He could be contented, — why is he not then? In respect of the love he bears our house: — he shows in this, he loves his own barn better than he loves our house.² Let me see some more. »The purpose you undertake, is dangerous; — why, that's certain: 't is dangerous to take a cold, to sleep, to drink; but I tell you, my lord fool, out of this nettle, danger, we pluck this flower, safety. »The purpose you undertake, is dangerous; the friends you have named, uncertain; the time itself unsorted, and your whole plot too light for the counterpoise of so great an opposition. — Say you so, say you so? I say unto you again, you are a shallow, cowardly hind, and you lie. What a lack-brain³ is this! By the Lord,⁴ our plot is as good a plot as ever was laid; our friends true and constant: a good plot, good friends, and full of expectation;⁵ an excellent plot, very good friends. What a frosty-spirited rogue is this! Why, my lord of York⁶ commends the plot and the general course of the action. 'Zounds! an I were now by this rascal, I could brain him with his lady's fan.⁷ Is there not my father, my uncle, and myself? Lord Edmund Mortimer, my lord of York, and Owen Glendower? Is there not, besides, the Douglas? Have I not all their letters, to meet me in arms by the ninth of the next month, and are they not, some of them, set forward already? What a pagan rascal is this! an infidel! Ha! you shall see now, in very sincerity of fear and cold heart, will he to the king, and lay open all our proceedings. O! I could divide myself, and go to buffets, for moving such a dish of skimmed milk with so honourable an action.⁸ Hang him! let him tell the king; we are prepared. I will set forward to-night.

Enter Lady PERCY.

How now, Kate? I must leave you within these two hours.

Lady. O, my good lord! why are you thus alone?

For what offence have I this fortnight been

A banish'd woman from my Harry's bed?

Tell me, sweet lord, what is 't that takes from thee

Thy stomach, pleasure, and thy golden sleep?

Why dost thou bend thine eyes upon the earth,

And start so often when thou sitt'st alone?

Why hast thou lost the fresh blood in thy cheeks,

And given my treasures, and my rights of thee?⁹

To thick-ey'd¹⁰ musing, and curs'd melancholy?

In thy faint¹¹ slumbers I by thee have watch'd, anzuklagen ist. — Nach juror ist das Verbum to jure scherzhaft gebildet. 22) Dafür haben die alten Ausgg. Here they rob them and bind them, ohne dass ein Exeunt verzeichnet ist. — Vielleicht ging auf der Sh.'schen Bühne das Ausplündern und Binden der Reisenden im Hintergrunde vor sich, worauf Falstaff und seine Spiessgesellen wieder in den Vordergrund traten, da wo die moderne Bühnenweisung Re-enter Thieves hat. 23) argument = ein Thema zur Besprechung, ein Gesprächsstoff. 24) Mit dieser Bühnenweisung der Qs. stimmt die der Fol. überein, nur dass sie das auf Falstaff Bezügliche weglässt. — Die folgende Rede ist in den alten Ausgg. als Prosa gedruckt und zuerst von Pope in Verse abgetheilt.

1) Der Brief war von einem schottischen Grossen, den Percy zu einer thätigen Betheiligung an dem beabsichtigten Aufstande gegen den König von England aufgefordert hatte. 2) house, das der Briefsteller = das Haus oder Geschlecht der Percies aufgefasst hatte, nimmt Percy hier in concretem Sinn = Wohnhaus, und stellt es so dem barn = Scheune, gegenüber. 3) lack-brain = Dummkopf, ohne Gehirn. — Composita mit lack hat Sh. mehrere, so lack-beard in Much Ado about Nothing (A. 5, Sc. 1), lack-linen in K. Henry IV. Second Part (A. 2, Sc. 4), lack-love in Midsummer-Night's Dream (A. 2, Sc. 3). 4) So die Qs.; die Fol. I protest, der Theatercensur gemäss. 5) Freunde, an die sich viele Erwartungen knüpfen lassen. 6) d. h. der Erzbischof von York. 7) In Beaumont und Fletcher's Drama What several Weapons steht were 't not better || Your head were broke with the handle of a fan? — So mag es auch hier gemeint sein. 8) Percy möchte sich selbst Faustschläge geben, weil er einem solchen abgerahmten Milchnapfe, wie dem Briefsteller, ein so ehrenvolles Unternehmen vorgeschlagen. 9) Nach Sh.'s Art verbindet die Copula and häufig zwei Bezeichnungen eines Begriffes; so sind hier die Anrechte, welche Percy's Gattin an ihn hat, zugleich ihr Schatz. 10) thick-ey'd musing = ein Sinnen, das nicht klar aus den Augen sieht, dem Alles vor dem Auge trübe erscheint. So dull-ey'd melancholy in Pericles (A. 1, Sc. 2). 11) So die frühern Qs.; die spätern und die Fol. In my faint etc. 12) Ausfälle und Rückzüge.

And heard thee murmur tales of iron wars,
 Speak terms of manage to thy bounding steed,
 Cry, »Courage! — to the field!« And thou hast talk'd
 Of sallies, and retires;¹² of trenches, tents,
 Of palisadoes, frontiers,¹³ parapets,
 Of basilisks, of cannon, culverin,
 Of prisoners' ransom, and of soldiers slain,
 And all the currents¹⁴ of a heady fight.
 Thy spirit within thee hath been so at war,
 And thus hath so bestirr'd thee in thy sleep,
 That beads of sweat have stood upon thy brow,
 Like bubbles in a late-disturbed stream;
 And in thy face strange motions have appear'd,
 Such as we see when men restrain their breath
 On some great sudden hest.¹⁵ O! what portents are these?
 Some heavy business hath my lord in hand,
 And I must know it, else he loves me not.

Hot. What, ho!

Enter Servant.

Is Gilliams with the packet gone?

Serv. He is, my lord, an hour ago.

Hot. Hath Butler brought those horses from the sheriff?

Serv. One horse, my lord, he brought even now.

Hot. What horse? a roan, a crop-ear, is it not?

Serv. It is, my lord.

Hot. That roan shall be my throne.

Well, I will back him straight: O, *Esperance!*¹⁶
 Bid Butler lead him forth into the park. [Exit Servant.]

Lady. But hear you, my lord.

Hot. What say'st thou, my lady?

Lady. What is it carries you away?¹⁷

Hot. Why, my horse, my love, my horse.

Lady. Out, you mad-headed ape!

A weasel hath not such a deal of spleen,¹⁸

As you are toss'd with. In faith,

I'll know your business, Harry, that I will.

I fear, my brother Mortimer doth stir

About his title,¹⁹ and hath sent for you,

To line his enterprise.²⁰ But if you go —

Hot. So far afoot, I shall be weary, love.

Lady. Come, come, you paraquito,²¹ answer me
 Directly unto this question that I ask.

In faith, I'll break thy little finger, Harry,

An if thou wilt not tell me all things true.

Hot. Away.

Away, you trifler! — Love!²² — I love thee not.

I care not for thee, Kate. This is no world,

To play with mamnets²³ and to tilt with lips:

We must have bloody noses and crack'd crowns,²⁴

And pass them current too. — God's me, my horse! —

What say'st thou, Kate? what wouldst thou have with me?

Lady. Do you not love me? do you not, indeed?

Well, do not then; for since you love me not,

I will not love myself. Do you not love me?

Nay, tell me, if you speak in jest, or no?

Hot. Come, wilt thou see me ride?

And when I am o'-horseback, I will swear

I love thee infinitely. But hark you, Kate;

I must not have you henceforth question me

Whither I go, nor reason whereabout.

Whither I must, I must; and, to conclude,

This evening must I leave you, gentle Kate.

I know you wise; but yet no further wise

Than Harry Percy's wife: constant you are,

But yet a woman: and for secrecy,

No lady closer; for I well believe

Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not know;²⁵

And so far will I trust thee, gentle Kate.

Lady. How! so far?

Hot. Not an inch further. But hark you, Kate:

Whither I go, thither shall you go too;

To-day will I set forth, to-morrow you.

Will this content you, Kate?

Lady. It must, of force.²⁶ [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

Eastcheap. A Room in the Boar's Head Tavern.¹

Enter Prince HENRY and POINS.

P. Hen. Ned, pr'ythee, come out of that fat room,² and lend me thy hand to laugh a little.

Poins. Where hast been, Hal?

P. Hen. With three or four loggerheads, amongst three or four score hogsheads. I have sounded the very base string of humility.³ Sirrah, I am sworn brother to a leash of drawers, and can call them all by their christian names, as — Tom, Dick, and Francis. They take — Die ersten Qs. haben of trenches, die andern nur trenches. 13) frontiers = Grenzbefestigungen. — Die folgende Zeile nennt Geschütz von verschiedener Grösse und Art. 14) Für currents = Strömungen, lesen viele Hgg. 'currents, abgekürzt aus occurrences = Vorkommnisse; offenbar matter als die alte Lesart currents in den frühern Qs., current in den spätern. 15) hest = Geheiss, Auftrag, der auszuführen ist. — So liest Q. A.; die spätern Qs. und die Fol. machen hast daraus, was manche Hgg. haste lesen. 16) Hotspur denkt in seinem Feuer schon an den Augenblick, wo er, auf dem Rosse sitzend, dieses Esperance, das Wappenmotto der Percies, als Losung ruft. — Die Fol. lässt O vor Esperance, das französisch zu betonen ist, aus. — roan und throne bilden einen Gleichklang. 17) Lady Percy fasst to carry away figürlich = in Gedanken entrücken, Percy in seiner Antwort buchstäblich = wegtragen vom Platze. 18) So in Cymbeline (A. 3, Sc. 4) as quarrellous as the weasel. 19) Mortimer steht auf wegen seiner Ansprüche auf den Thron. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 3, Anm. 40. 20) to line, eigentlich = mit einem Unterfütter versehen, gebraucht Sh. von der Verstärkung und Unterstützung eines kriegerischen Unternehmens auch in Macbeth (A. 1, Sc. 3) did line the rebel with hidden help and vantage. 21) paraquito, das spanische periquito = kleiner Papagei. Der Name scheint mit dem Vogel aus Spanien und den spanischen Colonieen gekommen. — In der folgenden Zeile hat die Fol. shall ask. 22) Percy nimmt das Wort love zurück, mit dem er eben vorher sie angeredet hatte: I shall be weary, love. 23) mammet = Puppe, Marionette. 24) Wortspiel zwischen cracked crowns = geborstene Schädel, und = eingerissene Münzen, die dadurch eigentlich ungültig werden, aber hier doch ihren Cours behalten sollen. 25) In Ray's mehrerwähnter Sprichwörterammlung findet sich auch: A woman conceals what she knows not. 26) of force = aus Zwang, nothgedrungen.

1) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 37. 2) fat room, eigentlich = fettes Zimmer, scheint ein schmieriges Zimmer zu bedeuten. — Keightley vermuthet hot room für fat room. 3) d. h. ich habe mich so gemein wie möglich it already upon their salvation,⁴ that though I be but prince of Wales, yet I am the king of courtesy, and tell me flatly I am no proud Jack, like Falstaff, but a Corinthian,⁵ a lad of mettle, a good boy, (by the Lord, so they call me,)⁶ — and when I am king of England, I shall command all the good lads in Eastcheap. They call drinking deep, dying scarlet; and when you breathe in your watering, they cry, hem!⁷ and bid you play it off. To conclude, I am so good a proficient in one quarter of an hour, that I can drink with any tinker in his own language during my life. I tell thee, Ned, thou hast lost much honour, that thou wert not with me in this action.⁸ But, sweet Ned, — to sweeten which name of Ned, I give thee this pennyworth of sugar, clapped even now into my hand by an under-skinker,⁹ one that never spake other English in his life, than — »Eight shillings and sixpence,« and — »You are welcome;« with this shrill addition, — »Anon, anon, Sir! Score a pint of bastard in the Half-moon,«¹⁰ or so. But, Ned, to drive away the time till Falstaff come, I pr'ythee, do thou stand in some by-room, while I question my puny drawer to what end he gave me the sugar; and do thou never leave calling — Francis! that his tale to me may be nothing but — anon. Step aside, and I'll show thee a precedent.

Poins. Francis!

P. Hen. Thou art perfect.¹¹

Poins. Francis!

[Exit.

Enter FRANCIS.

Fran. Anon, anon, Sir. — Look down into the Pomegranate,¹² Ralph.

P. Hen. Come hither, Francis.

Fran. My lord.

P. Hen. How long hast thou to serve, Francis?

Fran. Forsooth, five years, and as much as to —

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, Sir.

P. Hen. Five years! by 'r lady, a long lease for the clinking of pewter. But, Francis, darest thou be so valiant as to play the coward with thy indenture, and to show it a fair pair of heels, and run from it?

Fran. O Lord, Sir! I'll be sworn upon all the books in England, I could find in my heart —

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon, Sir.

P. Hen. How old art thou, Francis?

Fran. Let me see, — about Michaelmas next I shall be —

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, Sir. — Pray you, stay a little, my lord.

P. Hen. Nay, but hark you, Francis. For the sugar thou gavest me, — 't was a pennyworth, was 't not?

Fran. O Lord, Sir! I would it had been two.

P. Hen. I will give thee for it a thousand pound: ask me when thou wilt, and thou shalt have it.

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

Fran. Anon, anon.¹³

P. Hen. Anon, Francis? No, Francis; but to-morrow, Francis; or, Francis, on Thursday; or, indeed, Francis, when thou wilt. But, Francis, —

Fran. My lord?

P. Hen. Wilt thou rob this leathern-jerkin,¹⁴ crystal-button, nodd-pated, agate ring, puke-stocking, caddis-garter, smooth-tongue, Spanish-pouch, —

Fran. O Lord, Sir, who do you mean?

P. Hen. Why then, your brown bastard is your only drink: for, look you, Francis, your white canvas doublet will sully. In Barbary, Sir, it cannot come to so much.¹⁵

Fran. What, Sir?

Poins. [Within.] Francis!

P. Hen. Away, you rogue! Dost thou not hear them call?¹⁶

[Here they both call him; the Drawer stands amazed, not knowing which way to go.

Enter Vintner.

Vint. What! stand'st thou still, and hear'st such a calling? Look to the guests within. [Exit FRANCIS.] My lord, old Sir John, with half a dozen more, are at the door: shall I let them in?

P. Hen. Let them alone awhile, and then open the door. [Exit Vintner.] Poins!

Re-enter POINS.

Poins. Anon, anon, Sir.

P. Hen. Sirrah, Falstaff and the rest of the thieves are at the door. Shall we be merry?

Poins. As merry as crickets, my lad. But hark ye; what cunning match have you made with this jest of the drawer? come, what 's the issue?

P. Hen. I am now of all humours, that have show'd themselves humours, since the old days of Goodman

What 's o'clock, Francis?

Fran. Anon, anon, Sir.

[Exit.]

P. Hen. That ever this fellow should have fewer words than a parrot, and yet the son of a woman! His industry is — up-stairs, and down-stairs; his eloquence, the parcel of a reckoning. I am not yet of Percy's mind,¹⁸ the Hotspur of the North; he that kills me some six or seven dozen of Scots¹⁹ at a breakfast, washes his hands, and says to his wife, — »Fie upon this quiet life! I want work.« »O my sweet Harry,« says she, »how many hast thou killed to-day?« »Give my roan horse²⁰ a drench,« says he, and answers, »Some fourteen,« an hour after; »a trifle, a trifle.« — I prythee, call in Falstaff: I'll play Percy, and that damned brawn²¹ shall play Dame Mortimer his wife. »Rivo!«²² says the drunkard. Call in ribs, call in tallow.

Enter FALSTAFF, GADSHILL, BARDOLPH, and PETO.

Poins. Welcome, Jack. Where hast thou been?

Fal. A plague of all cowards, I say, and a vengeance too! marry, and amen! — Give me a cup of sack, boy. — Ere I lead this life long, I'll sew nether-stocks,²³ and mend them, and foot them too. A plague of all cowards! — Give me a cup of sack, rogue. — Is there no virtue extant?

[He drinks.]

P. Hen. Didst thou never see Titan kiss a dish of butter (pitiful-hearted Titan),²⁴ that melted at the sweet tale of the sun? if thou didst, then behold that compound.

Fal. You rogue, here 's lime in this sack too:²⁵ there is nothing but roguery to be found in villanous man: yet a coward is worse than a cup of sack with lime in it: a villanous coward. — Go thy ways, old Jack; die when thou wilt. If manhood, good manhood, be not forgot upon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten herring.²⁶ There live not three good men unchanged in England, and one of them is fat, and grows old: God help the while! a bad world, I say. I would I were a weaver; I could sing psalms or anything.²⁷ A plague of all cowards, I say still.

P. Hen. How now, wool-sack? what mutter you?

Fal. A king's son! If I do not beat thee out of thy kingdom with a dagger of lath,²⁸ and drive all thy subjects afore thee like a flock of wild geese, I'll never wear hair on my face more. You prince of Wales!

P. Hen. Why, you whoreson round man, what 's the matter?

Fal. Are you not a coward? answer me to that; and Poins there?

Poins. 'Zounds!²⁹ ye fat-paunch, an ye call me coward, I'll stab thee.

Fal. I call thee coward! I'll see thee damned ere I call thee coward; but I would give a thousand pound, I could run as fast as thou canst. You are straight enough in the shoulders; you care not who sees your back: call you that backing³⁰ of your friends? A plague upon such backing! give me them that will face me. — Give me a cup of sack: I am a rogue, if I drunk to-day.

P. Hen. O villain! thy lips are scarce wiped since thou drunk'st last.

Fal. All 's one for that. [He drinks.] A plague of all cowards, still say I.

P. Hen. What 's the matter?

Fal. What 's the matter? there be four of us here have ta'en a thousand pound this day morning.³¹

P. Hen. Where is it, Jack? where is it?

Fal. Where is it? taken from us it is: a hundred upon poor four of us.³²

P. Hen. What, a hundred, man?

Fal. I am a rogue, if I were not at half-sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I have 'scap'd by miracle. I am eight times thrust through the doublet; four through the hose; my buckler cut through and through; my sword hacked like a hand-saw: *ecce signum.*³³ I never dealt better since I was a man: all would not do.³⁴ alte Adam wird hier als ehrbarer Hausvater und Landmann aufgefasst. 18) Der Prinz nimmt hier den frühern Gedankengang wieder auf: I am now of all humours = ich gehe auf jeden Witz, auf jede Laune ein. 19) In den beständigen Grenzstreitigkeiten zwischen den Schotten und den Nordengländern. 20) Percy selbst spricht (A. 2, Sc. 3) von diesem Rothschild: That roan shall be my throne. 21) brawn = bulk. Falstaff ist gleichsam nichts als eine Masse von Fleisch und Muskeln. Ebenso heisst er gleich nachher ribs = fettbewachsene Rippen, und tallow = Talg. 22) rivo, ein Ausruf beim Zechen, dessen eigentlicher Ursprung dunkel ist, so häufig er auch bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen vorkommt. In Marlowe's Jew of Malta steht Rivo Castiliano, was auf eine spanische Herleitung schliessen liesse, obwohl sich kein solches Wort in der Sprache findet. 23) nether-stocks = Strümpfe. 24) Nach Warburton's plausiblem Vorschlage ist pitiful-hearted Titan als Parenthese aufzufassen, und das folgende relative that auf dish of butter zu beziehen. Der weichherzige, gefühlvolle Sonnengott küsst die Butter, und diese zerschmilzt gleichsam aus Rührung über die süssen Worte, welche der Sonnengott ihr in dem Kusse sagt. Mit der zerschmelzenden Butter vergleicht der Prinz den schwitzenden Falstaff. — Theobald las pitiful-hearted butter ohne Parenthese. — sun lesen die spätern Qs. und die Fol.; die frühern Qs. haben sonnes d. h. son's. 25) Der Kalk wurde in den Wein gethan, um ihm Stärke und Dauer zu verschaffen. Bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen kommen wiederholt Klagen über diese Mischung vor. So in Hawkins' Voyages: Since the Spanish sacks have been common in our taverns which for conservation are mingled with the lime in the making, our nation complains of calentures, of the stone, the dropsy and infinite other distempers, not heard of before this wine came into frequent use. 26) Ein Häring, der gelaicht hat. 27) Die aus den Niederlanden geflüchteten Calvinisten, die sich grösstentheils als Weber in England niederliessen, zeichneten sich durch ihre Vorliebe für erbaulichen Gesang bei ihrer Arbeit aus. — Die Theaterzensur setzte dafür in der Fol.: I could sing all manner of songs. 28) Mit einer solchen hölzernen Waffe war die lustige Person, der sogenannte Vice, des altenglischen Theaters bewehrt. 29) Die Fol. und die ihr zu Grunde liegende spätere Q. theilt, mit Weglassung des Fluchworts 'zounds, diese Worte dem Prinzen zu. — fat-paunch = Dickwanst, ist Compositum. 30) Wortspiel zwischen to back = Einem den Rücken decken, und = Einem den Rücken zeigen. 31) So die frühern Qs., nach der Phraseologie der Zeit; die spätern Qs. und die Fol. einfach this morning. 32) So Qs. und Fol., von Malone modernisirt in poor four us. 33) Bei diesem lateinischen Citat zeigt er das zerhackte Schwert vor. 34) Es konnte Alles nicht helfen; ich musste der

A plague of all cowards! — Let them speak: if they speak more or less than truth, they are villains, and the sons of darkness.

P. Hen. Speak, Sirs: how was it?

*Gads.*³⁵ We four set upon some dozen, —

Fal. Sixteen, at least, my lord.

Gads. And bound them.

Peto. No, no, they were not bound.

Fal. You rogue, they were bound, every man of them; or I am a Jew else, an Ebrew Jew.

Gads. As we were sharing, some six or seven fresh men set upon us, —

Fal. And unbound the rest, and then come in the other.

P. Hen. What, fought ye with them all?

Fal. All? I know not what ye call all; but if I fought not with fifty of them, I am a bunch of radish: if there were not two or three and fifty upon poor old Jack, then am I no two-legged creature.

P. Hen. Pray God, you have not murdered some of them.

Fal. Nay, that's past praying for: I have peppered two of them: two, I am sure, I have paid,³⁶ two rogues in buckram suits. I tell thee what, Hal, — if I tell thee a lie, spit in my face, call me horse. Thou knowest my old ward:³⁷ — here I lay, and thus I bore my point. Four rogues in buckram let drive at me, —

P. Hen. What, four? thou saidst but two, even now.

Fal. Four, Hal; I told thee four.

Poins. Ay, ay, he said four.

Fal. These four came all a-front, and mainly thrust at me. I made me no more ado, but took all their seven points in my target, thus.

P. Hen. Seven? why, there were but four, even now.

Fal. In buckram?³⁸

Poins. Ay, four, in buckram suits.

Fal. Seven, by these hilts,³⁹ or I am a villain else.

P. Hen. Pr'ythee, let him alone: we shall have more anon.

Fal. Dost thou hear me, Hal?

P. Hen. Ay, and mark thee too, Jack.

Fal. Do so, for it is worth the listening to. These nine in buckram, that I told thee of, —

P. Hen. So, two more already.

Fal. Their points⁴⁰ being broken, —

Poins. Down fell their hose.

Fal. Began to give me ground; but I followed me⁴¹ close, came in, foot and hand, and with a thought seven of the eleven I paid.

P. Hen. O monstrous! eleven buckram men grown out of two.

Fal. But, as the devil would have it, three misbegotten knaves in Kendal green⁴² came at my back and let drive at me; — for it was so dark, Hal, that thou couldst not see thy hand.

P. Hen. These lies are like the father that begets them; gross as a mountain, open, palpable. Why, thou clay-brained guts, thou knotty-pated fool, thou whore-son, obscene, greasy tallow-ketch,⁴³ —

Fal. What! art thou mad? art thou mad? is not the truth the truth?

P. Hen. Why, how couldst thou know these men in Kendal green, when it was so dark thou couldst not see thy hand? come, tell us your reason: what sayest thou to this?

Poins. Come, your reason, Jack, your reason.

Fal. What, upon compulsion? No; were I at the strappado,⁴⁴ or all the racks in the world, I would not tell you on compulsion. Give you a reason on compulsion! if reasons were as plenty as blackberries, I would give no man a reason upon compulsion, I.

P. Hen. I'll be no longer guilty of this sin: this sanguine coward, this bed-presser, this horse-back-breaker, this huge hill of flesh; —

Fal. Away, you starveling, you elf-skin,⁴⁵ you dried neat's-tongue, bull's-pizzle, you stock-fish, — O, for breath to utter what is like thee! — you tailor's-yard, you sheath, you bow-case, you vile standing tuck;⁴⁶ —

P. Hen. Well, breathe awhile, and then to it again; and when thou hast tired thyself in base comparisons, hear me speak but this.

Poins. Mark, Jack.

P. Hen. We two saw you four set on four, and you bound⁴⁷ them, and were masters of their wealth. — Mark now, how a plain tale shall put you down. — Then Uebermacht weichen. 35) Die Fol. theilt diese und die folgenden Reden dem Gadshill zu, die Qs. haben Ross. dafür, abgekürzt aus Rossil. Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 43. — Einige Zeilen weiter dient Ebrew zur Verstärkung von Jew = ein ächter, eingeborner Jude. 36) Zweien habe ich ihren Lohn gegeben, euphemistisch für: ich habe sie umgebracht. — Die vorhergehende Rede theilen die frühern Qs. dem Prinzen, die spätern und die Fol. dem Poins zu. 37) Du erinnerst Dich, wie ich immer beim Fechten zu pariren pflegte. — I lay = ich lag aus, und I bore my point = ich stieß zu, sind Fechterausdrücke. 38) Malone wollte diese Worte mit zu der Rede des Prinzen ziehen. Gewiss sind sie aber als erstaunte Frage Falstaff's, dem Qs. und Fol. sie zuschreiben, zu fassen: Meinst Du, es seien nur Vier in Steifleinen gewesen? 39) hilts ist bei Sh. Plural, auch wenn nur von einem Degengriff die Rede ist. 40) points fasst Falstaff = Degenspitze, Poins dagegen scherzhaft = Nestel, zur Befestigung des Beinkleides. — Dasselbe Wortspiel in Twelfth-Night (A. 1, Sc. 5), wo der Clown sagt I am resolved on two points und zur Antwort erhält That, if one break, the other will hold; or, if both break, your gaskins fall. 41) me ist ein pleonastischer Dativ. Vielleicht schrieb Sh. followed 'em für them. 42) Kendal green, d. h. grünes Zeug, das in Kendal in Westmoreland gewebt wurde, war die Tracht des in englischen Balladen vielgefeierten Wilddiebes Robin Hood und seiner vagabundirenden Gesellen. 43) tallow-ketch = Talgfass, kommt der alten Lesart tallow-catch näher, als das von den meisten Hggn. adoptirte tallow-keech = eine zusammengerollte Masse von Talgfett. — tallow-ketch ist Hanmer's Conjectur. — Für knotty-pated liest Dyce, nach Douce's Vorgange, nott-pated. 44) Von dieser Art von Tortur giebt Randle Holme folgenden Bericht: The strappado is when the person is drawn up to his height, and then suddenly to let him fall half way with a jerk which not only breaketh his arms to pieces, but also shaketh all his joints out of joint. 45) elf-skin würde, wenn die alte Lesart richtig ist, die Haut eines Kobolds, eines Elfengeistes, bedeuten. — Beachtenswerth ist dafür Hanmer's Conjectur eel-skin, da der magere Prinz passend mit einer etwa ausgestopften Aalhaut verglichen wird. So in K. John (A. 1, Sc. 1) my arms such eel-skins stuff'd. 46) standing tuck = ein Stossdegen, der aufrecht steht. Auch das geht auf die Magerkeit des Prinzen. — Am Ende der folgenden Rede haben die spätern Qs. und die Fol. thus did we two set on you four, and, with a word, outfaced you from your prize, and have⁴⁸ it; yea, and can show it you here in the house. — And, Falstaff, you carried your guts away as nimbly, with as quick dexterity, and roared for mercy, and still ran and roared, as ever I heard bull-calf. What a slave art thou, to hack thy sword as thou hast done, and then say, it was in fight! What trick, what device, what starting-hole canst thou now find out, to hide thee from this open and apparent shame?

Poins. Come, let's hear, Jack: what trick hast thou now?

Fal. By the Lord, I knew ye, as well as he that made ye. Why, hear ye, my masters. Was it for me to kill the heir apparent? Should I turn upon the true prince? Why, thou knowest, I am as valiant as Hercules; but beware instinct:⁴⁹ the lion will not touch the true prince. Instinct is a great matter, I was a coward on instinct. I shall think the better of myself and thee, during my life; I for a valiant lion, and thou for a true prince. But, by the Lord, lads, I am glad you have the money. — Hostess, clap to the doors: watch to-night, pray to-morrow. — Gallants, lads, boys, hearts of gold, all the titles of good fellowship come to you! What! shall we be merry? shall we have a play extempore?

P. Hen. Content; — and the argument shall be, thy running away.

Fal. Ah! no more of that, Hal, an thou lovest me.

Enter Hostess.

Host. O Jesu! My lord the prince, —

P. Hen. How now, my lady the hostess? what say'st thou to me?

Host. Marry, my lord, there is a nobleman of the court at door, would speak with you: he says, he comes from your father.

P. Hen. Give him as much as will make him a royal man,⁵⁰ and send him back again to my mother.

Fal. What manner of man is he?

Host. An old man.

Fal. What doth gravity out of his bed at midnight? — Shall I give him his answer?

P. Hen. Pr'ythee, do, Jack.

Fal. Faith, and I'll send him packing. [Exit.]

P. Hen. Now, Sirs; by 'r lady, you fought fair; — so did you, Peto; — so did you, Bardolph: you are lions too, you ran away upon instinct, you will not touch the true prince, no; — fie!

Bard. Faith, I ran when I saw others run.

P. Hen. Faith, tell me now in earnest: how came Falstaff's sword so hacked?

Peto. Why, he hacked it with his dagger, and said, he would swear truth out of England,⁵¹ but he would make you believe it was done in fight; and persuaded us to do the like.

Bard. Yea, and to tickle our noses with spear-grass,⁵² to make them bleed; and then to beslobber our garments with it, and to swear it was the blood of true men.⁵³ I did that I did not this seven years before; I blushed to hear his monstrous devices.

P. Hen. O villain! thou stolest a cup of sack eighteen years ago, and wert taken with the manner,⁵⁴ and ever since thou hast blushed extempore. Thou hadst fire and sword⁵⁵ on thy side, and yet thou rann'st away. What instinct hadst thou for it?

Bard. My lord, do you see these meteors? do you behold these exhalations?⁵⁶

P. Hen. I do.

Bard. What think you they portend?

P. Hen. Hot livers and cold purses.⁵⁷

Bard. Choler, my lord, if rightly taken.

P. Hen. No, if rightly taken, halter.⁵⁸

Re-enter FALSTAFF.

Here comes lean Jack, here comes bare-bone. How now, my sweet creature of bombast?⁵⁹ How long is 't ago, Jack, since thou sawest thine own knee?

Fal. My own knee? when I was about thy years, Hal, I was not an eagle's talon in the waist; I could have crept into any alderman's thumb-ring.⁶⁰ A plague of sighing and grief! it blows a man up like a bladder. There's villanous news abroad: here was Sir John Bracy from your father: you must to the court in the morning. That same mad fellow of the north, Percy, and he of Wales, that gave Amaimon the bastinado, and made Lucifer cuckold,⁶¹ and swore the devil his true liegeman upon für this. 47) Die Qs. und Fol. lassen you aus, was zuerst Pope ergänzte, der dafür and strich, obwohl Beides sehr wohl neben einander besteht. — Indess lässt sich auch die alte Lesart vertheidigen, wenn man you set als Präteritum fasst. 48) Und die Beute ist noch jetzt in unserem Besitz. 49) Achte auf den Instinct, respectire den Instinct. 50) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 2, Anm. 40. — Hier wird das Wortspiel noch erweitert durch noble, eine Münze zum Werthe von 6 Schilling 8 Pence. — In Zahlen ausgedrückt, würde also Prinz Heinrich sagen: give him 3 s. 4 d., da die Münze royal = 10 s. ist. 51) Er wollte so kräftig sein Wort betheuern, dass die Wahrheit nicht dagegen Stand hielte, sondern sich aus dem Lande flüchten müsste. 52) Diesen Zug entlehnte Sh. vielleicht aus den Famous Victories: every day when I went into the field, I would take a straw, and thrust it into my nose, and made my nose bleed. 53) true men = ehrliche Leute, ist auch hier der Gegensatz zu thieves. 54) to be taken with the manner = mit dem gestohlenen Gut in der Hand ergriffen werden. — Da der eigentliche Sinn des gerichtlichen Ausdrucks mainour sich verwischt hatte, sagte man auch to be taken in the manner = auf frischer That ertappt werden. 55) Feuer und Schwert stand Dir zu Gebote, und doch liefst Du davon. — fire ist Bardolph's feuerrothes Gesicht. 56) Bardolph meint die vom Trinken herrührenden Karfunkeln und Beulen in seinem Gesicht, oder die Röthe des Gesichts überhaupt. 57) Die heisse Leber rührt vom Trinken, die kalte Börse von der Verschwendung her. 58) Bardolph nimmt choler = Zorn, cholerisches Temperament, und rightly taken = richtig aufgefasst, richtig gedeutet; Prinz Heinrich dagegen versteht collar = Halsband, und rightly taken = recht ergriffen, recht attrapirt: Wenn man Dich, Dieb, fasst, so steht Dir kein Halsband, sondern der Strick zum Hängen bevor. 59) bombast = unverarbeitete Baumwolle, wie sie zum Wattiren der Kleider gebraucht wurde. — Der dicke Falstaff wird hier scherzhaft als ganz aus solcher Ausstopfung bestehend betrachtet. 60) Der alderman bezeichnet hier einen Londoner Spiessbürger, der im Bewusstsein seiner Würde einen grossen Siegelring auf dem Daumen trägt. So in Romeo and Juliet (A. 1, Sc. 4) an agate-stone || On the forefinger of an alderman. — Vgl. Anm. 14 dieser Scene. — Für talon ist die Sh.'sche Orthographie talent. 61) Scherzhafte Anspielung auf den the cross of a Welsh hook,⁶² — what, a plague, call you him? —

Poins. O! Glendower.

Fal. Owen, Owen; the same; — and his son-in-law, Mortimer, and old Northumberland; and that sprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that runs o' horseback up a hill perpendicular.

P. Hen. He that rides at high speed, and with his pistol kills a sparrow flying.

Fal. You have hit it.

P. Hen. So did he never the sparrow.

Fal. Well, that rascal hath good mettle in him; he will not run.

P. Hen. Why, what a rascal art thou then, to praise him so for running?

Fal. O' horseback, ye cuckoo! but, afoot, he will not budge a foot.

P. Hen. Yes, Jack, upon instinct.

Fal. I grant ye, upon instinct. Well, he is there too, and one Mordake, and a thousand blue-caps⁶³ more. Worcester is stolen away to-night; thy father's beard is turned white with the news; you may buy land now as cheap as stinking mackerel.⁶⁴

P. Hen. Why then, it is like, if there come a hot June, and this civil buffeting hold,⁶⁵ we shall buy maidenheads as they buy hob-nails, by the hundreds.

Fal. By the mass, lad, thou sayest true; it is like, we shall have good trading that way. — But, tell me, Hal, art thou not horribly afraid? thou being heir apparent, could the world pick thee out three such enemies again, as that fiend Douglas, that spirit Percy, and that devil Glendower? Art thou not horribly afraid? doth not thy blood thrill at it?

P. Hen. Not a whit, i' faith: I lack some of thy instinct.

Fal. Well, thou wilt be horribly chid to-morrow, when thou comest to thy father. If thou love me, practise an answer.⁶⁶

P. Hen. Do thou stand for my father, and examine me upon the particulars of my life.

Fal. Shall I? content. — This chair shall be my state,⁶⁷ this dagger my sceptre, and this cushion my crown.

P. Hen. Thy state is taken for a joint-stool, thy golden sceptre for a leaden dagger, and thy precious rich crown for a pitiful bald crown!⁶⁸

Fal. Well, an the fire of grace be not quite out of thee, now shalt thou be moved. — Give me a cup of sack, to make mine eyes look red, that it may be thought I have wept; for I must speak in passion, and I will do it in king Cambyzes' vein.⁶⁹

P. Hen. Well, here is my leg.⁷⁰

Fal. And here is my speech. — Stand aside, nobility.

Host. O Jesu! This is excellent sport, i' faith.

Fal. Weep not, sweet queen, for trickling tears are vain.⁷¹

Host. O, the father! how he holds his countenance!

Fal. For God's sake, lords, convey my tristful⁷² queen, For tears do stop the flood-gates of her eyes.

Host. O Jesu! he doth it as like one of these harlotry players⁷³ as ever I see.

Fal. Peace, good pint-pot! peace, good tickle-brain!⁷⁴ — Harry, I do not only marvel where thou spendest thy time, but also how thou art accompanied: for though the camomile, the more it is trodden on, the faster it grows,⁷⁵ yet youth, the more it is wasted, the sooner it wears. That thou art my son, I have partly thy mother's word, partly my own opinion; but chiefly, a villanous trick of thine eye, and a foolish hanging of thy nether lip, that doth warrant me. If then thou be son to me, here lies the point; — why, being son to me, art thou so pointed at?⁷⁶ Shall the blessed sun of heaven prove a micher,⁷⁷ and eat blackberries? a question not to be asked. Shall the son of England prove a thief, and take purses? a question to be asked. There is a thing, Harry, which thou hast often heard of, and it is known to many in our land by the name of pitch: this pitch, as ancient writers do report, doth defile;⁷⁸ so doth the company thou keepest; for, Harry, now I do not speak to thee in drink, but in tears; not in pleasure, but in passion; not in words only, but in woes also. — And yet there is a intimen Verkehr mit bösen Geistern, dessen Glendower sich rühmte. — Die beiden hier citirten Namen von Dämonen kommen auch in Merry Wives of Windsor (A. 2, Sc. 2) vor: Amajmon sounds well; Lucifer, well; Barbason, well; yet they are devils' additions, the names of fiends. — Deshalb heisst Glendower nachher selbst that devil Glendower. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 658. 62) Er liess den Teufel den Vasalleneid schwören auf dem Kreuze einer wallisischen Hellebarde, die vorn sensenartig gekrümmt war und daher ihren Namen hatte. 63) blue-cap, ein Spitzname der Schotten, von ihren blauen Mützen. — Für das folgende to-night der Qs. hat die Fol. by night. 64) Die Besorgniss vor einem inländischen Krieg drückte den Werth des alsdann bedrohten Grundbesitzes so herab, dass jeder Eigenthümer sich desselben zu entäussern suchte. 65) Scherzhaft für: wenn dieser Bürgerkrieg anhält. — Für June haben die spätern Qs. und die Fol. sun. 66) Uebe Dir eine Antwort ein. — Das Folgende ist in rohem Entwurf schon in den Famous Victories. 67) state = Thronessel mit dem Baldachin darüber. 68) Wortspiel mit crown = Krone, und = Schädel. 69) Anspielung auf ein altes Drama mit dem Titel A lamentable tragedy mixed full of pleasant mirth containing the life of Cambyzes, king of Persia (1570). 70) leg = Kratzfuss. Damit tritt Prinz Heinrich vor den vermeintlichen Thron seines von Falstaff dargestellten Vaters. 71) In dem erwähnten alten Drama kommt die Bühnenweisung vor: At this tale told let the queen weep. 72) tristful = schmerz erfüllt, ist Rowe's Emendation der alten Lesart trustful. — Sh. hat dasselbe Wort in Hamlet (A. 3, Sc. 4). — In dem alten Cambyzes sagt die Königin u. A.: These words to hear makes stilling tears issue from chrystal eyes. 73) harlotry players nennt die Wirthin Schauspieler, welche Liebesgeschichten darzustellen haben. 74) tickle-brain ist der Name eines Liqueurs, etwa = Gehirnkitzler. 75) Hier wird Lyly's Styl persiflirt, der in seinem Euphues sagt: Though the camomile, the more it is trodden and pressed down, the more it spreadeth; yet the violet, the oftener it is touched and handled, the sooner it withereth and decayeth. — Nach diesem Citat ist auch besser mit den spätern Qs. und der Fol. yet youth zu lesen, als mit den frühern Qs. so youth. 76) Wortspiel mit point = Punkt, und to point at = auf Jemanden mit den Fingern weisen; wie gleich nachher das Wortspiel zwischen son und sun. 77) micher = Strauchdieb. 78) Auch das geht auf Lyly's Euphues: He that toucheth pitch shall be defiled therewith.

virtuous man, whom I have often noted in thy company, but I know not his name.

P. Hen. What manner of man, an it like your majesty?

Fal. A goodly portly man, i' faith, and a corpulent;⁷⁹ of a cheerful look, a pleasing eye, and a most noble carriage; and, as I think, his age some fifty, or, by 'r lady, inclining to threescore, and now I remember me, his name is Falstaff: if that man should be lewdly given,⁸⁰ he deceiveth me; for, Harry, I see virtue in his looks. If then the tree may be known by the fruit, as the fruit by the tree, then, peremptorily I speak it, there is virtue in that Falstaff: him keep with,⁸¹ the rest banish. And tell me now, thou naughty varlet, tell me, where hast thou been this month?

P. Hen. Dost thou speak like a king? Do thou stand for me, and I'll play my father.

Fal. Depose me? if thou dost it half so gravely, so majestically, both in word and matter, hang me up by the heels for a rabbit-sucker, or a poulter's hare.⁸²

P. Hen. Well, here I am set.

Fal. And here I stand. — Judge, my masters.

P. Hen. Now, Harry! whence come you?

Fal. My noble lord, from Eastcheap.

P. Hen. The complaints I hear of thee are grievous.

Fal. 'Sblood, my lord, they are false: — nay, I'll tickle ye for a young prince, i' faith.

P. Hen. Swearest thou, ungracious⁸³ boy? henceforth ne'er look on me. Thou art violently carried away from grace: there is a devil haunts thee, in the likeness of a fat old man: a tun of man is thy companion. Why dost thou converse with that trunk of humours, that bolting-hutch⁸⁴ of beastliness, that swoln parcel of dropsies, that huge bombard⁸⁵ of sack, that stuffed cloak-bag of guts, that roasted Manningtree-ox with the pudding in his belly, that reverend vice, that grey iniquity, that father ruffian, that vanity in years? Wherein is he good, but to taste sack and drink it? wherein neat and cleanly, but to carve a capon and eat it? wherein cunning,⁸⁶ but in craft? wherein crafty, but in villany? wherein villanous, but in all things? wherein worthy, but in nothing?

Fal. I would your grace would take me with you.⁸⁷ Whom means your grace?

P. Hen. That villanous abominable misleader of youth, Falstaff, that old white-bearded Satan.

Fal. My lord, the man I know.

P. Hen. I know thou dost.

Fal. But to say, I know more harm in him than in myself, were to say more than I know. That he is old, the more the pity, his white hairs do witness it: but that he is, saving your reverence, a whoremaster, that I utterly deny. If sack and sugar be a fault, God help the wicked! If to be old and merry be a sin, then many an old host that I know is damned: if to be fat be to be hated, then Pharaoh's lean kine are to be loved. No, my good lord: banish Peto, banish Bardolph, banish Poins; but for sweet Jack Falstaff, kind Jack Falstaff, true Jack Falstaff, valiant Jack Falstaff, and therefore more valiant, being, as he is, old Jack Falstaff, banish not him thy Harry's company, banish not him thy Harry's company: banish plump Jack, and banish all the world.

P. Hen. I do, I will.

[A knocking heard.]

[Exeunt Hostess, FRANCIS, and BARDOLPH.]

Re-enter BARDOLPH, running.

Bard. O, my lord, my lord! the sheriff, with a most monstrous watch, is at the door.

Fal. Out, you rogue! Play out the play: I have much to say in the behalf of that Falstaff.

Re-enter Hostess.

Host. O Jesu! my lord, my lord! —

P. Hen. Heigh, heigh! the devil rides upon a fiddlestick.⁸⁸ What's the matter?

Host. The sheriff and all the watch are at the door: they are come to search the house. Shall I let them in?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? never call a true piece of gold a counterfeit: thou art essentially mad,⁸⁹ without seeming so.

P. Hen. And thou a natural coward, without instinct.

Fal. I deny your major.⁹⁰ If you will deny the sheriff, so; ⁹¹ if not, let him enter: if I become not a cart⁹² as

79) Diese Anwendung des Adjectivs für sich allein hinter dem Substantiv ist Sh.'sch. — goodly ist die Lesart der Qs. und Fol. 80) Wenn der Mann einen Hang zur Liederlichkeit haben sollte, so täuscht er mich mit seinem Aussehen, aus welchem sich so auf den Menschen schliessen lässt, wie aus der Frucht auf den Baum. 81) him ist des Nachdrucks wegen vorangesetzt. — keep with him = halte Dich zu ihm. 82) rabbit-sucker = ein junges, saugendes Kaninchen. — poulter = Geflügelhändler, die ältere Form für das jetzige poulterer. 83) ungracious = gottlos, ruchlos. — So nennt er ihn wegen seines Fluchens 'sblood, was die Theaterzensur in der Fol., wie an vielen Stellen des Dramas, abgeschwächt hat zu i' faith. 84) bolting-hutch = Beutelkasten, in den das Mehl geschüttet wird, um gebeutelt zu werden. 85) bombard = Fass. — Ferner nennt er Falstaff einen Mantelsack, vollgestopft mit Eingeweiden, einen gebratenen Ochsen aus Manningtree in der wegen ihrer ausgezeichneten Viehweiden bekannten Grafschaft Essex, der ganz und gar, mit den Gedärmen im Leibe gebraten wurde. — Da in Manningtree auf dem Jahrmarkt, wo der Ochse gebraten wurde, zugleich eine Aufführung des altenglischen Moralitätenspiels stattfand, so identificirt der Prinz den Falstaff gleich mit verschiedenen stehenden Figuren dieser volksmässigen Bühnenstücke: vice und iniquity = die lustige Person, der Vorläufer des spätern clown; vanity, eine allegorische Figur, und ruffian = der Raufbold, der ebenfalls häufig darin auftrat. 86) cunning = geschickt. — Falstaff versteht sich nur auf Schelmerei. 87) Ich wollte, Eure Hoheit machte sich mir deutlich, sähe zu, dass ich mitkommen könnte. 88) Ein Sprichwort, das sich ähnlich in Beaumont und Fletcher's Humorous Lieutenant findet: the fiend rides on a fiddle stick. — Staunton giebt mit der Fol. diese Rede dem Falstaff, welche die meisten Qs. dem Prinzen zuertheilen. 89) mad in den späteren Folioausgg. für made in Qs. und Fol. — Als mad wag hatte Falstaff den Prinzen schon vorher bezeichnet: Du bist wesentlich verrückt, wenn Du auch nicht darnach aussiehst; so bin ich auch ein ächtes Goldstück, wenn ich auch bei Dir ein nachgemachtes, falsches (counterfeit) heisse. — Nach Staunton's Deutung erklärt Falstaff den Prinzen für verrückt, weil dieser, zu Falstaff's Entsetzen, der Wirthin ein Zeichen giebt, den Sheriff und die Wache hereinzulassen. 90) Wortspiel zwischen major = Theil eines Syllogismus, in Bezug auf des Prinzen Behauptung, und major = Major, als lingirter Gegensatz zu sheriff. Ebenso ist to deny zuerst = leugnen, und dann = den Eintritt verweigern. 91) so well as another man, a plague on my bringing up! I hope I shall as soon be strangled with a halter as another.

P. Hen. Go, hide thee behind the arras:⁹³ — the rest walk up above. Now, my masters, for a true face,⁹⁴ and good conscience.

Fal. Both which I have had; but their date is out, and therefore I'll hide me.

[*Exeunt all but the PRINCE and PETO.*⁹⁵

P. Hen. Call in the sheriff.

Enter Sheriff and Carrier.

Now, master sheriff, what's your will with me?

Sher. First, pardon me, my lord. A hue and cry hath follow'd certain men unto this house.

P. Hen. What men?

Sher. One of them is well known, my gracious lord; A gross fat man.

Car. As fat as butter.

P. Hen. The man, I do assure you, is not here, For I myself at this time have employ'd him.

And, sheriff, I will engage my word to thee,

That I will, by to-morrow dinner-time,

Send him to answer thee, or any man,

For any thing he shall be charg'd withal:

And so, let me entreat you, leave the house.

Sher. I will, my lord. There are two gentlemen Have in this robbery lost three hundred marks.

P. Hen. It may be so: if he have robb'd these men, He shall be answerable; and so, farewell.

Sher. Good night, my noble lord.

P. Hen. I think it is good morrow, is it not?

Sher. Indeed, my lord, I think it be two o'clock.

[Exeunt Sheriff and Carrier.

P. Hen. This oily rascal is known as well as Paul's.⁹⁶ Go, call him forth.

Peto. Falstaff! — Fast asleep behind the arras, and snorting like a horse.

P. Hen. Hark, how hard he fetches breath. Search his pockets. [Peto searches.]⁹⁷ What hast thou found?

Peto. Nothing but papers, my lord.

P. Hen. Let's see what they be: read them.

Peto. [Reads.] Item, A capon, . . . 2s. 2d.

Item, Sauce, . . . 4d.

Item, Sack, two gallons, . . . 5s. 8d.

Item, Anchovies, and sack after supper, . . . 2s. 6d.

Item, Bread, . . . ob.⁹⁸

P. Hen. O monstrous! but one half-pennyworth of bread to this intolerable⁹⁹ deal of sack! — What there is else, keep close: we'll read it at more advantage. There let him sleep till day. I'll to the court in the morning: we must all to the wars, and thy place shall be honourable.¹⁰⁰ I'll procure this fat rogue a charge of foot; and, I know, his death will be a march of twelve-score.¹⁰¹ The money shall be paid back again with advantage. Be with me betimes in the morning; and so, good morrow, Peto.

Peto. Good morrow, good my lord.

[Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.

Bangor. A Room in the Archdeacon's House.

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, MORTIMER, and GLENDOWER.

Mort. These promises are fair, the parties sure, And our induction full of prosperous hope.¹

Hot. Lord Mortimer, and cousin Glendower, Will you sit down? —

And, uncle Worcester: — a plague upon it!

I have forgot the map.

Glend. No, here it is.

Sit, cousin Percy; sit, good cousin Hotspur;

For by that name as oft as Lancaster

Doth speak of you.

His cheek looks pale, and with a rising sigh

He wisheth you in heaven.

Hot. And you in hell, as oft as he hears

Owen Glendower spoke of.

Glend. I cannot blame him. At my nativity²

The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes,

Of burning cressets; and at my birth,

The frame and huge³ foundation of the earth

Shak'd like a coward.

Hot. Why, so it would have done at the same season, if your mother's cat had but kitten'd, though yourself had never been born.

Glend. I say, the earth did shake when I was born.

Hot. And I say, the earth was not of my mind,

If you suppose as fearing you it shook.

Glend. The heavens were all on fire, the earth did tremble.

dient elliptisch statt eines ganzen Nachsatzes = so ist es gut. 92) Falstaff wird sich auf dem Karren, der ihn als einen vom Sheriff attrapirten Dieb zum Galgen führt, eben so gut ausnehmen, wie ein Anderer, oder seine Erziehung hat nichts getaugt. 93) Die gewirkte Tapete, die, an Haken befestigt, von der Decke herniederhing, liess zwischen sich und der Wand Platz genug für Falstaff, sich zu verstecken. 94) Jetzt müssen wir das Angesicht eines ehrlichen Mannes annehmen. 95) Die alten Ausgg. haben bloss Exit, was die spätern Hgg. vervollständigten mit Exeunt all but the Prince and Peto. — Aus dem Zwiegespräch nach dem Weggange des Sheriff ergibt sich jedoch, dass nicht Peto, sondern Peto beim Prinzen zurückbleibt, und dass die Hgg. nur willkürlich, abweichend von Qs. und Fol., überall Peto für Peto setzen. — Erst Collier stellte das Richtige wieder her. 96) d. h. die Paulskirche, die Londoner Kathedrale, deren Seitengänge der gewöhnliche Sammelplatz aller Müssiggänger, Vagabunden u. s. w. waren. 97) Die alte Bühnenweisung ist He searcheth his pockets and findeth certain papers. 98) So Qs. und Fol. — ob., abgekürzt für obolum, schrieb man damals für a half-penny, was die meisten Hgg. an die Stelle setzen. 99) intolerable = was sich nicht aushalten lässt, unerträglich, ungeheuer. 100) Du sollst eine ehrenvolle Stellung im Heere haben. 101) Wenn Falstaff einen Dienst beim Fussvolk erhält (a charge of foot), so wird ein Marsch von zweihundert und vierzig Ellen sein Tod sein.

1) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 3, Anm. 5. — induction = Einleitung, Vorspiel. 2) Holinshed hat nur Folgendes über die Wundererscheinungen bei Glendower's Geburt: Strange wonders happened at the nativity of this man, for the same night he was born all his father's horses in the stable were found to stand in blood up to their bellies. — Indess werden andere Phänomene im Leben Glendower's von dem Chronisten erzählt, welche Sh. hier auf seine Geburtsstunde überträgt. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 658. — na'ivity sind alle die Geburt begleitenden Umstände.

Hot. O! then the earth shook to see the heavens on fire,

And not in fear of your nativity.

Diseased nature oftentimes breaks forth

In strange eruptions: oft the teeming earth

Is with a kind of colic pinch'd and vex'd

By the imprisoning of unruly wind

Within her womb; which, for enlargement striving,

Shakes the old beldam earth,⁴ and topples down

Steeple, and moss-grown towers. At your birth,

Our grandam earth, having this distemperature,
In passion shook.

Glend. Cousin, of many men

I do not bear these crossings. Give me leave

To tell you once again, — that at my birth

The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes;

The goats ran from the mountains,⁵ and the herds

Were strangely clamorous to⁶ the frightened fields.

These signs have mark'd me extraordinary,

And all the courses of my life do show,

I am not in the roll of common men.

Where is he living, — clipp'd in with the sea

That chides⁷ the banks of England, Scotland, Wales, —

Which calls me pupil, or hath read to me?

And bring him out, that is but woman's son,

Can trace me in the tedious ways of art,

And hold me pace in deep experiments.⁸

Hot. I think, there is no man speaks better Welsh.

I'll to dinner.

Mort. Peace, cousin Percy! you will make him mad.

Glend. I can call spirits from the vasty deep.

Hot. Why, so can I, or so can any man;

But will they come, when you do call for them?

Glend. Why, I can teach you, cousin, to command the devil.

Hot. And I can teach thee, coz, to shame the devil,

By telling truth: tell truth, and shame the devil.⁹ —

If thou have power to raise him, bring him hither,

And I'll be sworn, I have power to shame him hence.

O! while you live, tell truth, and shame the devil.

Mort. Come, come;

No more of this unprofitable chat.

Glend. Three times hath Henry Bolingbroke made head

Against my power: thrice from the banks of Wye,

And sandy-bottom'd Severn, have I sent him

Bootless¹⁰ home, and weather-beaten¹¹ back.

Hot. Home without boots, and in foul weather too!

How 'scapes he agues, in the devil's name?

Glend. Come, here 's the map. Shall we divide our right,¹²

According to our three-fold order ta'en?

Mort. The archdeacon hath divided it

Into three limits very equally.

England, from Trent and Severn hitherto,¹³

By south and east, is to my part assign'd:

All westward, Wales, beyond the Severn shore,

And all the fertile land within that bound,

To Owen Glendower: — and, dear coz, to you

The remnant northward, lying off from Trent.

And our indentures tripartite are drawn,¹⁴

Which being sealed interchangeably

(A business that this night may execute),

To-morrow, cousin Percy, you, and I,

And my good lord of Worcester, will set forth,

To meet your father, and the Scottish power,

As is appointed us, at Shrewsbury.

My father Glendower is not ready yet,

Nor shall we need his help these fourteen days. —

Within that space you may have drawn together

Your tenants, friends, and neighbouring gentlemen.

Glend. A shorter time shall send me to you, lords;

And in my conduct shall your ladies come,

From whom you now must steal, and take no leave;

For there will be a world of water shed,

Upon the parting of your wives and you.

Hot. Methinks, my moiety,¹⁵ north from Burton here,

In quantity equals not one of yours.

See, how this river comes me cranking¹⁶ in,

And cuts me from the best of all my land

A huge half-moon, a monstrous cantle¹⁷ out.

I'll have the current in this place damm'd up,

And here the smug and silver Trent shall run

In a new channel, fair and evenly:

It shall not wind with such a deep indent,

To rob me of so rich a bottom here.

Glend. Not wind? it shall, it must: you see, it doth.

Mort. Yea, but

Mark, how he bears his course, and runs me up

With like advantage on the other side;¹⁸

3) huge ist nur in Q. A. — cresset = ein tragbares Licht auf dem beweglichen Kreuze einer Stange. 4) beldam = Grossmutter, ohne verächtlichen Nebensinn. — Aehnlich wie hier erklärt Sh. die Erderschütterungen in Venus and Adonis: As when the wind, imprison'd in the ground, || Struggling for passage, earth's foundation shakes. 5) Die Ziegen werden als charakteristische Staffage für die Berge in Wales auch sonst erwähnt. So wird in Merry Wives of Windsor (A. 5, Sc. 5) der Walliser Pfarrer spottweise Welsh goat genannt. 6) to bezeichnet hier die Richtung und zugleich die Wirkung des Geschreis der Heerden, das die Felder in Schrecken setzte. 7) to chide = anstürmen gegen Etwas, eigentlich schelten mit Etwas, wird auch sonst von dem Andrang der Fluthen gegen das Ufer gebraucht; so in K. Henry VIII. (A. 3, Sc. 2) a rock against the chiding flood. 8) art ist die geheime, schwarze Kunst der Magie. — hold me pace = mit mir gleichen Schritt halten. 9) Speak the truth and shame the devil ist ein Sprichwort in Ray's Proverbs. 10) Wortspiel mit bootless = fruchtlos, und = ohne Stiefeln. 11) Nach dem Chronisten bewirkte Glendower durch Zauberei ein solches Unwetter, dass der König aus Wales sich zurückziehen musste. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 658. 12) right ist der Besitz, auf den sie ein Recht haben, und den sie nach der getroffenen Veranstaltung dreifach theilen wollen. 13) Er zeigt bei hitherto auf einen bestimmten Punkt der Landkarte, die sie vor sich haben. — Dies und das Folgende ist zum Theil wörtlich aus Holinshed entlehnt. Vgl. Einleitung pag. 658. 14) In Holinshed: causing a tripartite indenture to be made and sealed with their seals. 15) moiety = Theil eines Ganzen, nicht gerade die Hälfte, bei Sh. 16) to crank = im Zickzack laufen. Der Fluss Trent windet sich so, dass er, als Grenzfluss betrachtet, den Percy benachtheiligend, einen Theil von dessen Gebiet abschneidet. — me = mir zum Schaden. 17) cantle = ein Stück, das als Probe abgeschnitten wird von einem grössern Ganzen; so in Drayton's Polyolbion: Rude Neptune, cutting in, a cantle for'h doth take. — Die Qs. haben scantle, die Fol. cantle. 18) Wie der Fluss Trent auf der

Gelding the opposed continent¹⁹ as much
As on the other side it takes from you.

Wor. Yea, but a little charge will trench him here,
And on this north side win this cape of land;
And then he runs straight and even.

Hot. I'll have it so; a little charge will do it.

Glend. I will not have it alter'd.

Hot. Will not you?

Glend. No, nor you shall not.

Hot. Who shall say me nay?

Glend. Why, that will I.

Hot. Let me not understand you then:
Speak it in Welsh.

Glend. I can speak English, lord, as well as you,
For I was train'd up in the English court;²⁰
Where, being but young, I framed to the harp
Many an English ditty, lovely well,
And gave the tongue²¹ a helpful ornament;
A virtue that was never seen in you.

Hot. Marry, and I'm glad of it with all my heart.
I had rather be a kitten, and cry mew,
Than one of these same metre ballad-mongers:²²
I had rather hear a brazen canstick²³ turn'd,
Or a dry wheel grate on the axle-tree;
And that would set my teeth nothing on edge,
Nothing so much as mincing poetry:²⁴
'T is like the forc'd gait of a shuffling nag.

Glend. Come, you shall have Trent turn'd.

Hot. I do not care: I'll give thrice so much land
To any well-deserving friend;
But in the way of bargain, mark ye me,
I'll cavil on the ninth part of a hair.
Are the indentures drawn? shall we be gone?

Glend. The moon shines fair, you may away by night:
I'll haste the writer,²⁵ and, withal,
Break with your wives of your departure hence.²⁶
I am afraid my daughter will run mad,
So much she doteth on her Mortimer. [Exit.]

Mort. Fie, cousin Percy! how you cross my father!

Hot. I cannot choose: sometime he angers me
With telling me of the moldwarp and the ant,
Of the dreamer Merlin and his prophecies,²⁷
And of a dragon, and a finless fish,
A clip-wing'd griffin, and a moulten raven,
A couching lion, and a ramping cat,
And such a deal of skimble-skamble stuff²⁸
As puts me from my faith. I tell you what, —
He held me, last night, at least nine hours,
In reckoning up the several devils' names,
That were his lackeys:²⁹ I cried, »humph,« and »well, go to,«

But mark'd him not a word. O! he's as tedious
As a tired horse, a railing wife;
Worse than a smoky house. I had rather live
With cheese and garlic in a windmill, far,
Than feed on cates, and have him talk to me
In any summer-house³⁰ in Christendom.

Mort. In faith, he is³¹ a worthy gentleman,
Exceedingly well read, and profited
In strange concealments,³² valiant as a lion,
And wondrous affable, and as bountiful
As mines of India. Shall I tell you, cousin?
He holds your temper in a high respect,
And curbs himself even of his natural scope,
When you do cross his humour; 'faith, he does.
I warrant you, that man is not alive,
Might so have tempted him as you have done,
Without the taste of danger and reproof:³³
But do not use it oft, let me entreat you.

Wor. In faith, my lord, you are too wilful-blame;³⁴
And since your coming hither, have done enough
To put him quite beside his patience.
You must needs learn, lord, to amend this fault:
Though sometimes it show greatness, courage, blood,
(And that's the dearest grace it renders you,)
Yet oftentimes it doth present harsh rage, einen Seite dem Percy ein Stück des ihm bestimmten Landes durch seine Krümmung wegnimmt, so läuft er mit gleichem Ueberschuss zum Nachtheil Mortimer's auf der andern Seite. 19) opposed continent ist das jenseit des Trent gelegene, dem Besitzthum Percy's gegenüberliegende Land. 20) Dass Glendower eine Zeitlang am Hofe Richard's II. lebte, fand Sh. in Holinshed; dass er aber dort musikalische und dichterische Talente entwickelte, scheint von Sh. erfunden zu sein. 21) Unter tongue versteht Johnson die englische Sprache, welche Glendower mit seinen Leistungen geschmückt habe; Ritson fasst das Wort im eigentlichen Sinne auf: die Zunge Glendower's, geziert durch die Kunst des Gesanges. — Vielleicht ist the tongue das gesprochene oder gesungene Wort, das seinen Schmuck in dem begleitenden Harfenspiel erhielt. 22) metre = Reimgeklengel, verstärkt noch den Ausdruck des Verächtlichen, den Percy in ballad-mongers legt. 23) So die Qs. mit einer Abkürzung, die auch Sh.'s Zeitgenossen kennen; die Fol. hat candlestick. — Anspielungen auf das widerliche Geräusch des Drechselns metallener Leuchter kommen auch sonst vor; so in A new Trick to cheat the Devil (1636) An if you were to lodge in Lothbury, || Where they turn brazen candlesticks. 24) to mince = zart thun, affectiren. So in K. Lear (A. 4, Sc. 6) that minces virtue. 25) the writer ist der die Verträge, mit denen sie sich gegenseitig verpflichten, in's Reine schreibt und Copieen davon anfertigt. — Stevens vervollständigt den Vers auf eigne Hand so: I'll in and haste the writer. 26) to break mit with der Person und of der Sache = Jemandem Etwas mittheilen, eröffnen; ebenso wird to break mit to der Person und dem Accusativ der Sache construiert. 27) Nach den Chroniken berief sich Glendower auf die überlieferten Prophezeiungen des alten wallisischen Zauberers Merlin, die er so deutete, dass der König Heinrich der Maulwurf sei, die drei Verschworenen aber der Drache, der Löwe und der Wolf, die das Reich unter sich theilen sollten. — Ueber Merlin und dessen Prophezeiungen macht sich Sh. auch durch den Mund des Narren im K. Lear (A. 3, Sc. 2) lustig, wie hier Percy willkürlich eine Reihe von Thieren nennt, deren die Chroniken an der betreffenden Stelle keine Erwähnung thun. 28) skimble-skamble, ein onomatopoetisches Wort, aus dem einfachen scamble gebildet, = durcheinander gewirrt, wüst: solch ein wüstes Zeug, das mich von meinem christlichen Glauben abspenstig macht. 29) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 4, Anm. 61 u. 62. 30) Der Windmühle, deren Geclapper jeden Aufenthalt in ihr unerträglich macht, wird ein Gartenhaus als ein anmuthiger Platz zum Verweilen gegenübergestellt. 31) So die frühern Qs.; die spätern und die Fol. was. 32) Er hat es weit gebracht, ist sehr gefördert in auffallenden Geheimnissen, in geheimen magischen Künsten. — Die Fol. hat exceeding. 33) Ohne dass er eine gefährliche Zurechtweisung zu schmecken bekäme. 34) wilful-blame, ein seltsames Compositum, =

Defect of manners, want of government,
Pride, haughtiness, opinion,³⁵ and disdain:
The least of which, haunting a nobleman,
Loseth men's hearts, and leaves behind a stain
Upon the beauty of all parts besides,
Beguiling them of commendation.

Hot. Well, I am school'd; good manners be your speed!
Here come our³⁶ wives, and let us take our leave.

*Re-enter GLENDOWER, with the Ladies.*³⁷

Mort. This is the deadly spite that angers me,
My wife can speak no English, I no Welsh.

Glend. My daughter weeps; she will not part with you:
She'll be a soldier too; she'll to the wars.

Mort. Good father, tell her, that she, and my aunt Percy,

Shall follow in your conduct speedily.

[GLENDOWER speaks to her in Welsh, and she answers him in the same.]

Glend. She's desperate here; a peevish self-will'd harlotry,³⁸

One that no persuasion can do good upon.

[She speaks to MORTIMER in Welsh.]

Mort. I understand thy looks: that pretty Welsh
Which thou pourest down from these swelling heavens,³⁹
I am too perfect in: and, but for shame,
In such a parley should I answer thee.

[She speaks again.]

I understand thy kisses, and thou mine,

And that's a feeling disputation:

But I will never be a truant, love,

Till I have learn'd thy language; for thy tongue

Makes Welsh as sweet as ditties highly penn'd,⁴⁰

Sung by a fair queen in a summer's bower,

With ravishing division,⁴¹ to her lute.

Glend. Nay, if you melt, then will she run mad.

[She speaks again.]

Mort. O! I am ignorance itself in this.⁴²

Glend. She bids you on the wanton rushes⁴³ lay you
down,

And rest your gentle head upon her lap,

And she will sing the song that pleaseth you,

And on your eyelids crown the god of sleep,⁴⁴

Charming your blood with pleasing heaviness:

Making such difference 'twixt wake and sleep,

As is the difference betwixt day and night,

The hour before the heavenly-harness'd team

Begins his golden progress in the east.

Mort. With all my heart I'll sit, and hear her sing:

By that time will our book,⁴⁵ I think, be drawn.

Glend. Do so;

And those musicians that shall play to you,

Hang in the air a thousand leagues from hence;

And straight they shall be here. Sit, and attend.

Hot. Come, Kate, thou art perfect in lying down:

come, quick, quick; that I may lay my head in thy lap.

Lady P. Go, ye giddy goose. [The music plays.]⁴⁶

Hot. Now I perceive, the devil understands Welsh;⁴⁷

And 't is no marvel, he is so humorous.

By 'r lady, he's a good musician.

Lady P. Then should⁴⁸ you be nothing but musical, for you are altogether governed by humours. Lie still, ye thief, and hear the lady sing in Welsh.

Hot. I had rather hear Lady, my brach, howl in Irish.⁴⁹

Lady P. Wouldst have thy head broken?

Hot. No.

Lady P. Then be still.

Hot. Neither; 't is a woman's fault.⁵⁰

Lady P. Now, God help thee!⁵¹

Hot. To the Welsh lady's bed.

Lady P. What's that?

Hot. Peace! she sings.

[A Welsh song sung by Lady MORTIMER.]

Hot. Come, Kate, I'll have your song too.

Lady P. Not mine, in good sooth.

tadelnswerth eigensinnig, vielleicht mit Sh.'scher Lizenz combinirt aus you are to blame, too wilful, wie Johnson dafür zu lesen vorschlug. 35) opinion erklärt M. Mason mit self-opinion; es ist aber wohl eher = Festhalten an vorgefasster Meinung, wie in Winter's Tale (A. 2, Sc. 3) remove the root of his opinion. 36) So die Qs.; die Fol. your wives. 37) d. h. Lady Percy und Lady Mortimer. — Die Bühnenweisung ist die alte, ebenso die folgenden. 38) Denselben derben Ausdruck wendet in Romeo and Juliet (A. 4, Sc. 2) Capulet auf seine Tochter an: A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is. — peevish = der nicht weiss, was er will; harlotry = harlot kommt auch in Othello (A. 4, Sc. 2) vor. 39) these swelling heavens fasst Steevens als die Lippen der Lady Mortimer, so dass that pretty Welsh etc. ihre Küsse sein würden. Eher ist indess wohl mit Douce der erstere Ausdruck auf die Augen zu beziehen, und der zweite auf die Thränen, welche sie vergiessen. Dazu passt sowohl das vorhergehende my daughter weeps, als auch das folgende and, but for shame etc. — Von ihren Küssen ist erst nachher die Rede. — Für pourest down vermuthen die Cambridge Edd. umgestellt down pourest. Jedenfalls scheint pourest zweisylbig zu sein. 40) Liebeslieder in hohem Styl geschrieben. 41) division = Triller, Läufer in der Musik. 42) In ihrer Sprache bin ich so unwissend, wie es die personificirt gedachte Unwissenheit selbst nur sein könnte. 43) rushes sind die Binsen, mit denen der Fussboden des Zimmers bedeckt wurde. — Das Epitheton wanton bezieht sich auf das üppige Lager, das diese Binsen dem Mortimer darbieten. 44) Der Gott des Schlafes soll als gekrönter Herrscher auf Mortimer's Augenlide, wie auf einem Throne, sitzen. — Mortimer's Schlaf soll jedoch kein eigentlicher Schlaf sein, sondern so zwischen Schlaf und Wachen die Mitte halten, wie die Stunde der Dämmerung zwischen Nacht und Tag, ehe die Sonne aufgeht. 45) book ist jede Schrift in Sh.'s Zeit, hier die schriftliche Uebereinkunft des Bündnisses, was vorher hiess our indentures tripartite are drawn. 46) Die Hgg. erweitern diese Bühnenweisung: Glendower speaks some Welsh words, and then the music plays. 47) Percy macht sich über Glendower's Prahlerei lustig, dass die Musik durch seine magischen Kräfte aus weiter Ferne herbeibeschworen sei. 48) So die frühern Qs.; die spätern und die Fol. haben would. 49) Lady ist der Name von Percy's Jagdhund, dessen Geheul er hier scherzhaft als irische Sprache bezeichnet und so dem wallisischen Gesange der Lady Mortimer gegenüberstellt. — So in As you like it (A. 5, Sc. 2) 't is like the howling of Irish wolves against the moon. 50) scil. to be still. Dieser, natürlich ironisch gemeinte, Weiberfehler, will Percy sagen, passe sich nicht für ihn, den Mann; deshalb wolle er nicht stillschweigen. 51) d. h. Gott stelle Deinen Verstand wieder her; Percy aber ergänzt die Rede: God help me to Lady Mortimer's bed; worauf Lady Percy empört fragt:

Hot. Not yours, in good sooth!⁵² Heart! you swear like a comfit-maker's wife. Not you, in good sooth; and, As true as I live; and, As God shall mend me; and, As sure as day:

And giv'st such sarcenet⁵³ surety for thy oaths, As if thou never walk'dst further than Finsbury.⁵⁴ Swear me, Kate, like a lady as thou art, A good mouth-filling oath; and leave in sooth, And such protest of pepper-gingerbread, To velvet-guards, and Sunday-citizens.⁵⁵ Come, sing.

Lady P. I will not sing.

Hot. 'T is the next way to turn tailor, or be redbreast teacher.⁵⁶ An the indentures be drawn, I'll away within these two hours; and so come in when ye will. [Exit.]

Glend. Come, come, Lord Mortimer; you are as slow As hot Lord Percy is on fire to go. By this our book is drawn: we will but seal, And then to horse immediately.

Mort. With all my heart. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

London. A Room in the Palace.

Enter King HENRY, Prince of WALES, and Lords.

K. Hen. Lords, give us leave. The prince of Wales and I

Must have some private conference: but be near at hand, For we shall presently have need of you. —

[Exeunt Lords.]

I know not whether God will have it so, For some displeasing service¹ I have done,

That, in his secret doom, out of my blood He'll breed revengement and a scourge for me; But thou dost, in thy passages of life,² Make me believe, that thou art only mark'd For³ the hot vengeance and the rod of heaven, To punish my mistreadings. Tell me else, Could such inordinate and low desires, Such poor, such bare, such lewd, such mean attempts,⁴ Such barren pleasures, rude society, As thou art match'd withal, and grafted to, Accompany the greatness of thy blood, And hold their level with thy princely heart?

P. Hen. So please your majesty, I would I could Quit all offences with as clear excuse, As well as, I am doubtless, I can purge Myself of many I am charg'd withal: Yet such extenuation let me beg,⁵ As, in reproof of many tales devis'd (Which oft the ear of greatness needs must hear) By smiling pick-thanks⁶ and base newsmongers, I may, for some things true, wherein my youth Hath faulty wander'd and irregular, Find pardon on my true submission.⁷

K. Hen. God pardon thee! — yet let me wonder, Harry,

At thy affections, which do hold a wing Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors.⁸ Thy place in council thou hast rudely lost,⁹ Which by thy younger brother is supplied; And art almost an alien to the hearts Of all the court, and princes of my blood. The hope and expectation of thy time¹⁰ Is ruin'd, and the soul of every man

Was sagst Du da? 52) Solche affectirte Bethuerungen, wie in good sooth und die folgenden, passen sich für Londoner Bürgerweiber, die nun weiter charakterisirt werden, nicht aber für eine Lady, der ein tüchtiger Fluch besser ansteht. 53) sarcenet = Taffet, daher sarcenet surety = eine schwächliche, philisterhafte Sicherheit oder Bürgschaft. Es liegt zugleich darin eine Anspielung auf die Seidenkrämer in London als Repräsentanten der Bürger, wie bald nachher in pepper-gingerbread auf die dortigen Pfefferkuchenhändler: Bethuerungen, wie solche Leute sie gebrauchen. 54) Finsbury, ausser den Mauern des damaligen Londons gelegen, ein gewöhnlicher Spaziergang der Londoner Bürger. 55) velvet-guards, eigentlich = Besatz von Sammet, sind hier die Londoner Bürgerfrauen, die solchen Besatz an ihren Staatskleidern trugen. — Sunday-citizens = Bürger in ihrem Sonntagsputz, mit dem übereinstimmend sie zierliche Reden und Bethuerungen anwenden. 56) Wer singt, fährt Percy fort, ohne auf die Weigerung seiner Frau zu hören, der ist auf dem besten Wege, entweder ein Schneider zu werden oder Einer, der den Rothkehlchen das Singen beibringt. — Auf die Singlust der Schneider spielt auch Beaumont und Fletcher's Knight of the burning Pestle an: Never trust a tailor that does not sing at his work. — next way für nearest way ist Sh.'sch und findet sich u. A. in Winter's Tale (A. 3. Sc. 3).

1) service, insofern jedes menschliche Thun, Gott gegenüber, als ein Dienst aufgefasst wird. 2) scil. in the passages of thy life = in den Vorgängen Deines Lebens. 3) mark'd for wird in doppelter Beziehung aufgefasst = ausersehen für Etwas, in Verbindung mit hot vengeance, und = ausersehen als oder zu Etwas in Verbindung mit rod. — of heaven gehört zu Beiden. 4) lewd and mean attempts = rohe und gemeine Bestrebungen oder Interessen. 5) Die durch Zwischensätze verdunkelte Construction des Hauptsatzes ist: let me beg such extenuation as I may find pardon for some things true etc. Indem Prinz Heinrich die vielen über ihn erfundenen nachtheiligen Berichte widerlegt, erbittet er sich von seinem Vater so viel Nachsicht, dass er für einige ihm mit Grund schuldgegebene Dinge Verzeihung finden möge. — devised ist mit by smiling pick-thanks zu verbinden, wovon es durch die auf tales bezügliche Parenthese Which oft etc. getrennt ist. — Dem many tales devised ist some things true genau gegenübergestellt. — reproof = Widerlegung. 6) pick-thank = der sich auf gemeine Art, durch Schmeichelei oder Zuträgerei, Dank verdienen will. Das auch bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen vorkommende Wort, = Parasit, ist nach Analogie von pick-pocket gebildet. 7) Auf Grund meiner ehrlichen Einräumung oder Unterwerfung. 8) Das Bild ist hergenommen von einem Vogel, der einen Flug innehält, ganz abweichend oder fern von dem Fluge der Uebrigen. 9) rudely = durch ein rohes Benehmen. Sh. fand in der Chronik, dass der Prinz den Lord Oberrichter Gascoigne geschlagen und deshalb seinen Platz im Staatsrathe an seinen jüngern Bruder, Thomas von Clarence, abtreten musste. 10) Die Hoffnung und Erwartung, die sich an Deine Zeit, an Dein Leben knüpfte. — Doch lässt sich of thy time auch auffassen: die Hoffnung, welche die Mitwelt an Dich knüpfte. — Die alten Ausgg. lesen zwei Zeilen weiter do fore-think, vielleicht richtig, wie Dyce bemerkt, wenn Sh. every man als Plural auffasst. Zugleich weist auch Dyce darauf hin, wie oft ein Verbum im Plural auf ein Subject im Singular

Prophetically does forethink thy fall.
 Had I so lavish of my presence been,
 So common-hackney'd¹¹ in the eyes of men,
 So stale and cheap to vulgar company,
 Opinion, that did help me to the crown,
 Had still kept loyal to possession,¹²
 And left me in reputeless banishment,
 A fellow of no mark, nor likelihood.¹³
 By being seldom seen, I could not stir,
 But like a comet I was wonder'd at;
 That men would tell their children, »This is he;«
 Others would say, — »Where? which is Bolingbroke?«
 And then I stole all courtesy from heaven,¹⁴
 And dress'd myself in such humility,
 That I did pluck allegiance from men's hearts,¹⁵
 Loud shouts and salutations from their mouths,
 Even in the presence of the crowned king.
 Thus did I keep my person fresh, and new;
 My presence, like a robe pontifical,
 Ne'er seen but wonder'd at: and so my state,¹⁶
 Seldom, but sumptuous, showed like a feast,
 And wan by rareness such solemnity.
 The skipping king, he ambled up and down
 With shallow jesters, and rash bavin¹⁷ wits,
 Soon kindled, and soon burn'd; carded¹⁸ his state,
 Mingled his royalty with carping¹⁹ fools,
 Had his great name profaned with their scorns,
 And gave his countenance, against his name,
 To laugh at gibing boys,²⁰ and stand the push
 Of every beardless vain comparative;²¹
 Grew a companion to the common streets,
 Enfeoff'd himself to popularity,²²
 That, being daily swallow'd by men's eyes,
 They surfeited with honey, and began
 To loathe the taste of sweetness, whereof a little

More than a little is by much too much.
 So, when he had occasion to be seen,
 He was but as the cuckoo is in June,
 Heard, not regarded; seen, but with such eyes,
 As, sick and blunted with community,
 Afford no extraordinary gaze,²³
 Such as is bent on sun-like majesty,
 When it shines seldom in admiring eyes;
 But rather drows'd, and hung their eyelids down,
 Slept in his face, and render'd such aspect
 As cloudy²⁴ men use to their adversaries,
 Being with his presence glutted, gorg'd, and full.
 And in that very line, Harry, stand'st thou;
 For thou hast lost thy princely privilege
 With vile participation.²⁵ Not an eye
 But is aweary of thy common sight,
 Save mine, which hath desir'd to see thee more;
 Which now doth that I would not have it do,
 Make blind itself with foolish tenderness.²⁶

P. Hen. I shall hereafter, my thrice-gracious lord,
 Be more myself.

K. Hen. For all the world,
 As thou art to this hour, was Richard then,
 When I from France set foot at Ravenspurge;
 And even as I was then, is Percy now.
 Now, by my sceptre, and my soul to boot,
 He hath more worthy interest to the state,
 Than thou the shadow of succession:²⁷
 For, of no right, nor colour like to right,²⁸
 He doth fill fields with harness in the realm,
 Turns head against the lion's armed jaws,
 And, being no more in debt to years than thou,
 Leads ancient lords and reverend bishops on
 To bloody battles, and to bruising arms.
 What never-dying honour hath he got folgt, wenn ein Genitiv Pluralis dazwischen tritt. 11) common-hackneyed = durch Verbrauch und Verkehr gemein geworden. 12) possession ist in Verbindung mit dem vorhergehenden crown aufzufassen: die öffentliche Meinung, die mir zur Krone verhalf, wäre Dem, der die Krone in Besitz hatte, d. h. Richard II., treu geblieben, und hätte mich in unbeachteter Verbannung gelassen. 13) likelihood = Anschein, und = Aussicht. 14) Der König weist hier auf Das zurück, was Sh. wiederholt in K. Richard II. (A. 1, Sc. 4 und A. 5, Sc. 2) geschildert hat. — Seine Huld und Freundlichkeit war so hinreissend, als ob sie einer himmlischen, keiner irdischen Erscheinung angehörte; als ob er sie aus dem Himmel geholt hätte. — to steal = unvermerkt sich Etwas aneignen. 15) allegiance bezieht Malone auf die dem König Richard gebührende Unterthanentreue, welche Heinrich aus den Herzen entfernt habe. Es ist aber in dem Zusammenhange mit dem Folgenden wohl eher der Sinn der, dass Heinrich Bolingbroke die Herzen der Menschen gleichsam zur Huldigung und Anhänglichkeit an ihn selber zwang, dass er die Treue, die in ihren Herzen steckte, sich so zu eigen gemacht, wie den Beifallruf und Gruss ihres Mundes. 16) my state = mein ganzes feierliches Auftreten, der Staat, den ich machte, erschien, weil er selten, aber dann pomphaft auftrat, wie ein Festtag, der auch selten wiederkehrt. — Auf feast bezieht sich such vor solemnity = solch ein feierliches Gewicht oder Ansehen, wie ein Festtag es hat. 17) bavin = Reisholz, daher bavin wits = Geister, die leicht aufflackern und eben so leicht ausbrennen wie Reisholz. 18) to card erhält seine nähere Bestimmung in der folgenden Zeile, wo mingled dem carded eben so entspricht, wie royalty dem state. — to card wird von dem Vermischen gröberer Stoffe mit feinem gebraucht, z. B. von Wolle und von Bier. 19) So Qs. und Fol., mit Ausnahme von Q. A., welche capring liest, was als capering = Luftsprünge machend, die meisten Hgg. vorziehen. — to carp ist in der ältern Sprache nicht bloss = spotten, sondern = Witze machen, spassen. 20) Er liess seine Autorität, zur Beeinträchtigung seines Namens oder im Widerspruch mit seinem königlichen Namen, fahren, indem er über Knaben lachte, die ihren Spott mit ihm trieben. — gibing boys entspricht dem vorhergehenden carping fools. 21) comparative ist Jeder, der es mit dem König im Witzmachen aufnahm, von dem sich der König also einen Puff gefallen liess. — Malone erklärt, weniger plausibel, comparative mit a dealer in comparisons. 22) Er machte sich der Volksgunst dienstbar, machte sich zu ihrem Lehnsmanne. 23) gaze ist der bewundernde, respectvolle Blick. 24) cloudy = von finsternem, gleichsam bewölktem Ansehen. 25) Durch Betheiligung gemeiner Art, indem Du an Gemeinem Theil nimmst. 26) foolish tenderness bezeichnet die Thränen, die der König aus thörichter Zärtlichkeit um seines Sohnes willen vergiesst. 27) interest to = Anspruch auf oder Beziehung zu Etwas, ist in derselben Construction in K. John (A. 5, Sc. 2) Acquainted me with interest to this land: er hat einen Anspruch an die Herrschaft, der mehr werth ist, als der blosse Schatten von Erbrecht, den Du hast. 28) Vermöge keines Rechtes oder auch nur Vorwandes, der dem Rechte gliche. 29) Douglas behauptet

Against renowned Douglas, whose high deeds,
Whose hot incursions, and great name in arms,
Holds from all soldiers chief majority,
And military title capital,²⁹
Through all the kingdoms that acknowledge Christ.
Thrice hath this Hotspur, Mars in swathing-clothes,
This infant warrior, in his enterprises
Discomfited great Douglas: ta'en him once,
Enlarged him, and made a friend of him,
To fill the mouth of deep defiance up,
And shake the peace and safety of our throne.
And what say you to this? Percy, Northumberland,
The archbishop's grace of York, Douglas, Mortimer,
Capitulate³⁰ against us, and are up.
But wherefore do I tell these news to thee?
Why, Harry, do I tell thee of my foes,
Which art my near'st and dearest enemy?³¹
Thou that art like enough, through vassal fear,³²
Base inclination, and the start of spleen,
To fight against me under Percy's pay,
To dog his heels, and curtsy at his frowns,
To show how much thou art degenerate.

P. Hen. Do not think so; you shall not find it so:
And God forgive them that so much have sway'd
Your majesty's good thoughts away from me!
I will redeem all this on Percy's head,
And, in the closing of some glorious day,
Be bold to tell you that I am your son;
When I will wear a garment all of blood,
And stain my favours³³ in a bloody mask,
Which, wash'd away, shall scour my shame with it:
And that shall be the day, whene'er it lights,
That this same child of honour and renown,
This gallant Hotspur, this all-praised knight,
And your unthought-of Harry, chance to meet.
For every honour sitting on his helm,
'Would they were multitudes; and on my head
My shames redoubled! for the time will come,
That I shall make this northern youth exchange
His glorious deeds for my indignities.
Percy is but my factor, good my lord,
To engross up glorious deeds on my behalf;
And I will call him to so strict account,
That he shall render every glory up,
Yea, even the slightest worship of his time,³⁴

Or I will tear the reckoning from his heart.
This, in the name of God, I promise here:
The which, if he be pleas'd I shall perform,³⁵
I do beseech your majesty, may salve
The long-grown wounds of my intemperance:
If not, the end of life cancels all bands,³⁶
And I will die a hundred thousand deaths,
Ere break the smallest parcel of this vow.

K. Hen. A hundred thousand rebels die in this:
Thou shalt have charge and sovereign trust herein.

Enter BLUNT.

How now, good Blunt? thy looks are full of speed.

Blunt. So hath³⁷ the business that I come to speak of.
Lord Mortimer of Scotland³⁸ hath sent word,
That Douglas and the English rebels met,
The eleventh of this month, at Shrewsbury.
A mighty and a fearful head they are,
If promises be kept on every hand,
As ever³⁹ offer'd foul play in a state.

K. Hen. The earl of Westmoreland set forth to-day,
With him my son, Lord John of Lancaster;
For this advertisement is five days old. —
On Wednesday next, Harry, you shall set forward;
On Thursday we ourselves will march:
Our meeting is Bridgnorth; and, Harry, you
Shall march through Glostershire; by which account,
Our business valued, some twelve days hence
Our general forces at Bridgnorth shall meet.
Our hands are full of business: let's away;
Advantage feeds him fat, while men delay.⁴⁰ [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

Eastcheap. A Room in the Boar's Head Tavern.

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, am I not fallen away vilely since this last action? ¹ do I not bate? do I not dwindle? Why, my skin hangs about me like an old lady's loose gown: I am wither'd like an old apple-John.² Well, I'll repent, and that suddenly, while I am in some liking; ³ I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. An I have not forgotten what the inside of a church is made of, I am a pepper-corn, a brewer's horse.⁴

vermöge seiner Tapferkeit vor allen Soldaten den hauptsächlichsten Vorrang und den vorzüglichsten kriegerischen Ruhm. — Zwei Zeilen weiter lesen die Cambridge Edd. mit den ersten Qs. swathing clothes. 30) to capitulate = über einzelne Punkte sich einigen. 31) dearest enemy ist der Feind, der es am eifrigsten meint, der angelegentlichste Feind. 32) vassal fear = Furcht, wie sie einem Vasallen ansteht, aber keinem Prinzen. 33) favours = Gesichtszüge. Vielleicht wäre richtiger mit Hammer favour zu lesen. — Für den folgenden Relativsatz ist nicht which allein, sondern in Verbindung mit wash'd away Subject: die Abwaschung der blutigen Maske wird zugleich meine Schmach abwaschen. 34) Die geringfügigste Huldigung, welche die Mitwelt ihm dargebracht hat. 35) So die Qs.; die Fol. hat dafür: The which if I perform and do survive. 36) bands ist dasselbe wie bonds = contractliche Verpflichtungen. — In der vorigen Zeile liest die Fol. intemperance. 37) so bezieht sich in ungenauer Construction auf looks full of speed. So in Antony and Cleopatra (A. 5, Sc. 1) The business of this man looks out of him. 38) Nach Steevens' Berichtigung hatte Sh. den George Dunbar, Lord March of Scotland im Sinn. 39) Sie bilden eine so furchtbare Heeresmacht, wie nur jemals eine in einem Staate Unheil anstiften wollte. 40) Die günstige Gelegenheit wird fett und träge, verliert ihre Elasticität, wenn die Menschen saumselig sind. — him steht für himself als Object zu dem männlich personificirten advantage.

1) Er meint das Abenteuer bei Gadshill. Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 2. 2) apple-John = Johannesapfel, der sich lange hält und in Folge des Liegens eine verschrumpfte Haut hat. — Das Wortspiel zwischen apple-John und Sir John, Falstaff's Namen, tritt deutlicher hervor in K. Henry IV. Second Part (A. 2, Sc. 4). 3) liking = ein wohlgefälliges Aeussere, wohlgenährtes Aussehen. — So wird das adjectivische well-liking = wohlgenährt, gebraucht in Love's Labour's Lost (A. 5, Sc. 2). 4) a brewer's horse war ein Gegenstand für Falstaff's Mitleid oder

The inside of a church! Company, villanous company, hath been the spoil of me.

Bard. Sir John, you are so fretful, you cannot live long.

Fal. Why, there is it. — Come, sing me a bawdy song; make me merry. I was as virtuously given⁵ as a gentleman need to be; virtuous enough: swore little; dined not above seven times a week; went to a bawdy-house not above once in a quarter — of an hour; paid money that I borrowed three or four times; lived well, and in good compass; and now I live out of all order, out of all compass.⁶

Bard. Why, you are so fat, Sir John, that you must needs be out of all compass, out of all reasonable compass, Sir John.

Fal. Do thou amend thy face, and I'll amend my life. Thou art our admiral,⁷ thou bearest the lantern in the poop, — but 't is in the nose of thee: thou art the Knight of the Burning Lamp.

Bard. Why, Sir John, my face does you no harm.

Fal. No; I'll be sworn, I make as good use of it as many a man doth of a death's-head, or a memento mori. I never see thy face but I think upon hell-fire, and Dives⁸ that lived in purple; for there he is in his robes, burning, burning. If thou wert any way given to virtue, I would swear by thy face; my oath should be, »By this fire, that's God's angel.«⁹ But thou art altogether given over, and wert indeed, but for the light in thy face, the son of utter darkness. When thou rann'st up Gadshill in the night to catch my horse, if I did not think thou hadst been an ignis fatuus, or a ball of wildfire, there's no purchase in money.¹⁰ O! thou art a perpetual triumph,¹¹ an everlasting bonfire-light. Thou hast saved me a thousand marks in links and torches, walking with thee in the night betwixt tavern and tavern: but the sack that thou hast drunk me, would have bought me lights as good cheap,¹² at the dearest chandler's in Europe. I have maintained that salamander of yours with fire any time this two-and-thirty years: God reward me for it!

Bard. 'Sblood! I would my face were in your belly.

Fal. God-a-mercy! so should I be sure to be heart-burned.¹³

Enter Hostess.

How now, dame Partlet¹⁴ the hen? have you inquired yet who picked my pocket?

Host. Why, Sir John, what do you think, Sir John? Do you think I keep thieves in my house? I have searched, I have inquired, so has my husband, man by man, boy by boy, servant by servant: the tithe of a hair was never lost in my house before.

Fal. You lie, hostess; Bardolph was shaved, and lost many a hair;¹⁵ and I'll be sworn, my pocket was picked. Go to, you are a woman; go.

Host. Who, I? No. I defy thee: God's light! I was never called so in mine own house before.

Fal. Go to, I know you well enough.

Host. No, Sir John; you do not know me, Sir John: I know you, Sir John: you owe me money, Sir John, and now you pick a quarrel to beguile me of it. I bought you a dozen of shirts to your back.

Fal. Dowlas, filthy dowlas: I have given them away to bakers' wives, and they have made bolters of them.¹⁶

Host. Now, as I am a true woman, holland of eight shillings an ell. You owe money here besides, Sir John, for your diet, and by-drinkings,¹⁷ and money lent you four-and-twenty pound.

Fal. He had his part of it: let him pay.

Host. He? alas! he is poor: he hath nothing.

Fal. How! poor? look upon his face; what call you rich? let them coin his nose, let them coin his cheeks. I'll not pay a denier. What, will you make a younker¹⁸ of me? shall I not take mine ease in mine inn,¹⁹ but I shall have my pocket picked? I have lost a seal-ring of my grandfather's, worth forty mark.

Host. O Jesu! I have heard the prince tell him, I know not how oft, that that ring was copper.

Fal. How! the prince is a Jack, a sneak-cup;²⁰ 'sblood! an he were here, I would cudgel him like a dog, if he would say so.

Enter Prince HENRY and POINS,²¹ marching. FALSTAFF meets the PRINCE, playing on his truncheon, like a fife.

Fal. How now, lad? is the wind in that door, i' faith? must we all march?

Verachtung, weil ein solches Pferd das Bier nur zu schleppen, nicht zu trinken hatte. — Vielleicht ist das Wort auch wie das synonyme malt-horse = Dummkopf. — pepper-corn bildet in seiner winzigen Kleinheit einen Gegensatz zu dem dicken Falstaff. 5) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 4, Anm. 80. 6) Falstaff fasst compass = Mass, Schranke, in abstractem Sinne, Bardolph aber in concretem Sinne, in Bezug auf Falstaff's Körperrumfang. 7) Das Admiralschiff trägt am Hintertheil die Laterne, nach der sich die hinterdrein segelnden Schiffe richten. Damit wird Bardolph's rothe Nase verglichen, wegen der er gleich darauf scherzhaft »der Ritter von der brennenden Lampe« heisst, wie ein Drama von Beaumont und Fletcher den Titel The Knight of the Burning Pestle führt, als Parodie der Ritterromane. 8) Dives ist der reiche Mann in der evangelischen Parabel, der auf Erden in Purpur lebte und nachher in der Hölle brannte. 9) Die Theaterzensur strich in der Fol. that's God's angel als profan, und manche Hgg. lassen diese Worte ebenfalls weg, obwohl der Gegensatz zu the son of utter darkness sie verlangt. 10) So ist für Geld nichts mehr zu haben. 11) triumph = Festzug, Prachtaufzug, hier wohl mit Fackelbegleitung zu verstehen. 12) good cheap = guten Kaufs, das französische bon marché = wohlfeil. 13) Wortspiel mit heart-burned = mit Sodbrennen behaftet, und = im Herzen verbrannt. 14) So heisst die Henne in dem englischen Reineke Fuchs. — In Winter's Tale (A. 2, Sc. 3) heisst es von der Paulina: unroosted by thy dame Partlet here. 15) In Folge der Lustseuche, meint Falstaff, während die Wirthin nur in sprichwörtlichem Sinne von dem Verluste des Zehnthells eines Haars spricht. 16) Die Leinwand war so grob, dass sie sich nur zu Beutelsieben gebrauchen liess. 17) by-drinkings, was Falstaff zwischendurch, nebenher trank. 18) younker = ein unerfahrener junger Mann von Rang und Vermögen, der sich also leicht prellen lässt. So in Merchant of Venice (A. 2, Sc. 6) How like a younker, or a prodigal, || The skarfed bark puts from her native bay. 19) take mine ease in mine inn, eine sprichwörtliche Redensart, die ursprünglich bedeutet: seine häusliche Bequemlichkeit haben, die Falstaff aber scherzhaft auf das Wirthshaus bezieht, und auf den Schlaf, der ihn daselbst überfallen hatte. Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 4 gegen das Ende. — inn bedeutete anfangs jedes Wohnhaus, erst später Wirthshaus. 20) sneak-cup = Duckmäuser, der vom Becher sich wegschleicht. 21) In Qs. und Fol. wird hier Poins

Bard. Yea, two and two, Newgate-fashion.²²

Host. My lord, I pray you, hear me.

P. Hen. What sayest thou, Mistress Quickly? How does thy husband? I love him well, he is an honest man.

Host. Good my lord, hear me.

Fal. Pr'ythee, let her alone, and list to me.

P. Hen. What sayest thou, Jack?

Fal. The other night I fell asleep, here, behind the arras, and had my pocket picked: this house is turned bawdy-house; they pick pockets.

P. Hen. What didst thou lose, Jack?

Fal. Wilt thou believe me, Hal? three or four bonds²³ of forty pound a-piece, and a seal-ring of my grandfather's.

P. Hen. A trifle; some eight-penny matter.

Host. So I told him, my lord; and I said I heard your grace say so: and, my lord, he speaks most vilely of you, like a foul-mouthed man as he is, and said he would cudgel you.

P. Hen. What! he did not?

Host. There's neither faith, truth, nor womanhood in me else.

Fal. There's no more faith in thee than in a stewed prune;²⁴ nor no more truth in thee than in a drawn fox;²⁵ and for womanhood, maid Marian may be the deputy's wife of the ward to thee.²⁶ Go, you thing, go.

Host. Say, what thing? what thing?

Fal. What thing? why, a thing to thank God on.

Host. I am no thing to thank God on, I would thou shouldst know it; I am an honest man's wife; and, setting thy knighthood aside, thou art a knave²⁷ to call me so.

Fal. Setting thy womanhood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Host. Say, what beast, thou knave thou?

Fal. What beast? why, an otter.

P. Hen. An otter, Sir John! why an otter?

Fal. Why? she's neither fish nor flesh; a man knows not where to have her.²⁸

Host. Thou art an unjust man in saying so: thou or any man knows where to have me, thou knave thou!

P. Hen. Thou sayest true, hostess; and he slanders thee most grossly.

Host. So he doth you, my lord; and said this other day, you ought him a thousand pound.

P. Hen. Sirrah! do I owe you a thousand pound?

Fal. A thousand pound, Hal! a million: thy love is worth a million; thou owest me thy love.

Host. Nay, my lord, he called you Jack, and said he would cudgel you.

Fal. Did I, Bardolph?

Bard. Indeed, Sir John, you said so.

Fal. Yea; if he said my ring was copper.

P. Hen. I say, 't is copper: darest thou be as good as thy word now?

Fal. Why, Hal, thou knowest, as thou art but a man, I dare; but as thou art a prince, I fear thee, as I fear the roaring of the lion's whelp.

P. Hen. And why not as the lion?

Fal. The king himself is to be feared as the lion. Dost thou think, I'll fear thee as I fear thy father? nay, an I do, I pray God, my girdle break!²⁹

P. Hen. O! if it should, how would thy guts fall about thy knees! But, sirrah, there's no room for faith, truth, nor honesty, in this bosom of thine; it is filled up with guts and midriff. Charge an honest woman with picking thy pocket! Why, thou whoreson, impudent, embossed³⁰ rascal, if there were anything in thy pocket but tavern-reckonings, memorandums of bawdy-houses, and one poor penny-worth of sugar-candy to make thee long-winded; if thy pocket were enriched with any other injuries³¹ but these, I am a villain. And yet you will stand to it, you will not pocket up wrong. Art thou not ashamed?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? thou knowest, in the state of innocency, Adam fell; and what should poor Jack Falstaff do, in the days of villany? Thou seest I have more flesh than another man, and therefore more frailty. You confess then, you picked my pocket?

P. Hen. It appears so by the story.

Fal. Hostess, I forgive thee. Go, make ready breakfast; love thy husband, look to thy servants, cherish thy guests: thou shalt find me tractable to any honest reason: thou seest I am pacified. — Still?³² — Nay, pr'ythee, be gone. [Exit Hostess.] Now, Hal, to the news at court: for the robbery, lad, — how is that answered?

P. Hen. O! my sweet beef, I must still be good angel to thee. — The money is paid back again.

Fal. O! I do not like that paying back; 't is a double labour.

unerwähnt gelassen. 22) Wie die Verbrecher in das Gefängnis zu Newgate in London abgeführt werden, zuvor bei zwei an einander gefesselt, damit sie nicht weglaufen. — So in Dekker's Satiromastix (1601) we'll walk arm in arm, as though we were leading one another to Newgate. 23) Schuldverschreibungen, jede auf vierzig Pfund Sterling lautend. 24) Geschmorte Pflaumen, ein gewöhnliches Gericht in Bordellen, das man aus diätetischen Gründen genoss, ohne dass es immer die erwartete Wirkung hatte. Deshalb vergleicht Falstaff die Unzuverlässigkeit der Wirthin damit. 25) drawn fox ist wahrscheinlich ein von den Hunden gewitterter Fuchs, der alle Verschlagenheit anwenden muss, um zu entweichen. 26) maid Marian war eine stehende Figur in dem Mohrentanze (morris-dance), der zu Pfingsten und am ersten Mai auf den Strassen aufgeführt wurde. Sie stellte die Geliebte des altenglischen Vagabunden Robin Hood vor, dessen übrige Gesellen ebenfalls unter den Personen dieses Tanzes erschienen, und konnte, da sie von einem Manne dargestellt wurde, eben nicht als ein Muster zarter Weiblichkeit gelten. — Dennoch wäre sie, nach Falstaff's Meinung, gegen die Wirthin gehalten, noch eine ehrbare Frau, die Frau des Viertelscommissarius, also einer obrigkeitlichen Person. — Der morris-dance war zu Sh.'s Zeit zu einer blossen Belustigung des Pöbels herabgesunken. 27) Der Gegensatz zwischen knave und knight ist Sh. geläufig. — knave ist hier zweideutig = Knappe, und = Schelm. 28) Wegen ihrer amphibischen Natur weiss man nicht, in welche Thierclassen man die Wirthin setzen soll. — Sie selbst aber versteht where to have her wörtlich = wo sie zu finden, anzutreffen ist. 29) Anspielung auf das Sprichwort ungirt, unblest, also: Wenn ich Deinen Vater nicht mehr fürchte als Dich, so möge es mir schlecht ergehen. — In Falstaff's voriger Rede liest Q. A. man und prince ohne unbestimmten Artikel. 30) embossed = aufgedunsen, geschwollen. 31) Der Prinz gebraucht hier den Ausdruck injuries = Schlechtigkeiten, von to pocket injuries = Beleidigungen einstecken, und setzt den Witz nachher mit dem synonymen to pocket up wrong fort. 32) Still? = Bist Du noch nicht zufrieden? — Mit diesen Worten fertigt Falstaff die Wirthin ab, da sie noch einmal Miene macht zu reden. — Diese Erklärung gründet sich

P. Hen. I am good friends with my father, and may do anything.

Fal. Rob me the exchequer the first thing thou dost, and do it with unwashed hands too.³³

Bard. Do, my lord.

P. Hen. I have procured thee, Jack, a charge of foot.³⁴

Fal. I would it had been of horse. Where shall I find one that can steal well? ³⁵ O, for a fine thief, of the age of two-and-twenty, or thereabouts! I am heinously unprovided. Well, God be thanked for these rebels; they offend none but the virtuous: I land them, I praise them.

P. Hen. Bardolph!

Bard. My lord.

P. Hen. Go bear this letter to Lord John of Lancaster, To my brother John; this to my lord of Westmoreland. —

Go, Poins,³⁶ to horse, to horse! for thou and I Have thirty miles to ride yet ere dinner-time. — Jack, meet me to-morrow in the Temple-hall At two o'clock in the afternoon:

There shalt thou know thy charge, and there receive Money, and order for their furniture.

The land is burning, Percy stands on high, And either they, or we, must lower lie.

[Exeunt PRINCE, POINS, and BARDOLPH.]

Fal. Rare words! brave world! — Hostess, my breakfast; come. —

O! I could wish, this tavern were my drum.³⁷ [Exit.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.

The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, and DOUGLAS.

Hot. Well said,¹ my noble Scot. If speaking truth In this fine age were not thought flattery, Such attribution should the Douglas² have,

As not a soldier of this season's stamp Should go so general current³ through the world.

By God, I cannot flatter: I defy⁴

The tongues of soothers; but a braver place In my heart's love hath no man than yourself.

Nay, task me to my word; approve⁵ me, lord.

Doug. Thou art the king of honour:

No man so potent breathes upon the ground, But I will beard him.⁶

Hot.

Do so, and 't is well. —

Enter a Messenger, with letters.

What letters hast thou there? — I can but thank you.⁷

Mess. These letters come from your father, —

Hot. Letters from him! why comes he not himself?

Mess. He cannot come, my lord: he's grievous sick.

Hot. 'Zounds! how has he the leisure to be sick⁸

In such a justling time? Who leads his power?

Under whose government come they along?

Mess. His letters bear his mind, not I, my lord.⁹

Wor. I pr'ythee, tell me, doth he keep his bed?

Mess. He did, my lord, four days ere I set forth; And at the time of my departure thence, He was much fear'd¹⁰ by his physicians.

Wor. I would the state of time had first been whole, Ere he by sickness had been visited:

His health was never better worth than now.

Hot. Sick now! droop now! this sickness doth infect The very life-blood of our enterprise:

'T is catching hither, even to our camp.¹¹

He writes me here, — that inward sickness —¹²

And that his friends by deputation could not

So soon be drawn; nor did he think it meet,

To lay so dangerous and dear a trust

On any soul remov'd,¹³ but on his own.

Yet doth he give us bold advertisement,

That with our small conjunction we should on,

To see how fortune is dispos'd to us;

For, as he writes, there is no quailing now,¹⁴ auf Hanmer's Interpunction der Stelle. Andere Hgg. verbinden, wie die Qs. und Fol., I am pacified still, was Staunton erklärt: I am always pacified. 33) Ohne viele Umstände zu machen, ohne weitere Vorbereitung. 34) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 4, Anm. 101. 35) d. h. unter den Soldaten, die Falstaff, als unter seinem Commando stehend, anwerben soll. 36) Die alten Ausgg. setzen hier Peto für Poins, im Widerspruch mit dem Folgenden, demgemäss Peto den Falstaff begleitet. Auch sonst überall erscheint Poins als der Gesellschafter des Prinzen. — Sh. beging entweder selbst das Versehen, oder in der Handschrift stand abgekürzt ein P., das der Drucker für Peto missverstand. — Die Fol. setzt to horse nur einmal. 37) Falstaff möchte, statt mit der Werbetrommel durch's Land zu ziehen, lieber in seinem Wirthshause bleiben.

1) well said = brav! bezieht sich bei Sh. nicht immer auf etwas Gesagtes, sondern auf jede rühmliche Leistung. Hier ist Douglas' Vereinigung mit den englischen Aufrührern darunter verstanden. 2) the Douglas, mit dem bestimmten Artikel, hat auch der Chronist, wenn er den Douglas par excellence, das Haupt der Familie, bezeichnen will. — attribution = Anerkennung, Lob. 3) Das Bild ist von einer Münze entlehnt, die durch ihr Gepräge allgemein gültigen Cours bekommt. 4) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 3, Anm. 54. — soother = Schmeichler, eigentlich Schönredner. 5) to approve = erproben, auf die Probe stellen. — to my word, das in Qs. und Fol. steht, ändert Malone willkürlich und stillschweigend in to the word um. 6) to beard = Einem in den Bart Trotz bieten, es mit Jemandem aufnehmen. 7) Diese Worte beziehen sich auf Douglas' Compliment thou art the king of honour. — Percy's vorhergehende Worte sind vielleicht zu interpungiren: Do so, and — 'T is well, so dass er den Satz unvollendet lässt und mit dem kurzen 'T is well abschliesst, da er den Boten kommen sieht. 8) Die Fol. liest, da die Theaterzensur ihr das Fluchwort 'zounds strich, den Vers: How! hath he leisure to be sick now. 9) my lord verbessert Capell das my mind der früheren Qs., woraus die späteren und die Fol. his mind machten. — Warburton wollte His mind! beibehalten, das Wort aber dem Percy zuertheilen, der damit den Boten unwillig unterbräche. 10) to fear mit dem Accusativ = um Jemanden besorgt sein. 11) Die Ansteckung dieser Krankheit verbreitet sich geradeswegs bis in unser Lager; unser Heer wird dadurch entmuthigt. 12) Der Satz bleibt unvollendet und wäre etwa zu ergänzen: dass innerliche Krankheit ihn verhindere, selbstthätig einzugreifen. Darauf bezieht sich dann das Folgende, dass seine Freunde durch einen Stellvertreter nicht so schnell zusammengezogen werden könnten. 13) Auf irgend einen andern Fernerstehenden, ausser auf ihn selbst. —

Because the king is certainly possess'd
Of all our purposes. What say you to it?

Wor. Your father's sickness is a maim to us.

Hot. A perilous gash, a very limb lopp'd off: —
And yet, in faith, 't is not; his present want¹⁵
Seems more than we shall find it. — Were it good,
To set the exact wealth of all our states¹⁶
All at one cast? to set so rich a main
On the nice hazard of one doubtful hour?
It were not good; for therein should we read
The very bottom and the soul of hope,¹⁷
The very list, the very utmost bound
Of all our fortunes.

Doug. Faith, and so we should;
Where¹⁸ now remains a sweet reversion:
We may boldly spend upon the hope of what
Is to come in:

A comfort of retirement¹⁹ lives in this.

Hot. A rendezvous, a home to fly unto,
If that the devil and mischance look big
Upon the maidenhead of our affairs.

Wor. But yet, I would your father had been here.

The quality and hair²⁰ of our attempt
Brooks no division. It will be thought
By some, that know not why he is away,
That wisdom, loyalty, and mere dislike
Of our proceedings, kept the earl from hence.

And think, how such an apprehension

May turn the tide of fearful faction,

And breed a kind of question in our cause:²¹

For, well you know, we of the offering side²²

Must keep aloof from strict arbitrement,

And stop all sight-holes, every loop, from whence

The eye of reason may pry in upon us.

This absence of your father's draws a curtain,²³

That shows the ignorant a kind of fear

Before not dreamt of.

Hot. You strain too far.²⁴

I, rather, of his absence make this use: —

It lends a lustre, and more great opinion,

A larger dare to our²⁵ great enterprise,

Than if the earl were here: for men must think,

If we, without his help, can make a head

To push against the kingdom, with his help,

We shall o'erturn it topsy-turvy down. —

Yet all goes well, yet all our joints are whole.

Doug. As heart can think: there is not such a word
Spoke of in Scotland as this term of fear.²⁶

Enter Sir RICHARD VERNON.

Hot. My cousin Vernon! welcome, by my soul.

Ver. Pray God, my news be worth a welcome, lord.

The earl of Westmoreland, seven thousand strong,

Is marching hitherwards; with him, prince John.

Hot. No harm: what more?

Ver. And further, I have learn'd,

The king himself in person is²⁷ set forth,

Or hitherwards intended speedily,

With strong and mighty preparation.

Hot. He shall be welcome too. Where is his son,

The nimble-footed²⁸ madcap prince of Wales,

And his comrades,²⁹ that daff'd the world aside,

And bid it pass?

Ver. All furnish'd, all in arms,

All plum'd like estridges, that with the wind

Bated, — like eagles having lately bath'd;³⁰ removed gebraucht Sh. häufig = distant. 14) Es gilt jetzt nicht mehr zage zu werden, den muthigen Vorsatz aufzugeben. 15) Dass er uns jetzt fehlt, erscheint von grösserer Bedeutung, als wir es bei der Probe finden werden. 16) exact = genau veranschlagt, also: den ganzen Reichthum dessen, was wir besitzen und vorstellen, auf einen Wurf setzen. 17) Indem wir Alles zugleich auf's Spiel setzen, würden wir in dieser Schicksalsentscheidung auf den Grund und Boden und zu dem innersten Wesen, dem eigentlichen Gehalt unserer Hoffnung gelangen; es würde uns dann keine weitere Hoffnung übrig bleiben. — Zu dem Folgenden ist should we read, wenn auch nur in ungenauer Verbindung, zu suppliren: wir würden darin die Schranke, die äusserste Grenze unseres ganzen Glückes erreicht haben, über die hinaus es nichts mehr für uns zu riskiren oder zu gewinnen gäbe. — to read = erkennen, betrachten. 18) where = whereas, wie oft bei Sh.: da uns nun eine willkommene Anwartschaft, ein Rückhalt bleibt an Northumberland und an dessen auch fernerhin uns zur Verfügung stehender Macht. 19) Ein Trost, der für den Rückzug bleibt; ein Trost, auf den man sich zurückziehen kann. 20) hair, von den spätern Qs. und der Fol. heire gedruckt, erklärt Johnson richtig mit complexion, character, indem die Farbe des Haars in weiterem Sinne genommen wurde = Ansehen, Naturell. So in Fletcher's Nice Valour: A lady of my hair cannot want pitying. — Beachtenswerth ist Staunton's Conjectur dare für hair, unter Hinweisung auf A larger dare to our great enterprise in Percy's folgender Rede. 21) Solche Auffassung von dem Wegbleiben des Grafen von Northumberland kann der Strömung des dadurch bange gemachten Parteiwesens eine andere Richtung geben und kann bewirken, dass man unsere Sache einer kritischen Prüfung unterzieht. 22) Wir, die wir zur angreifenden Partei gehören. — to offer = Miene machen zu Etwas, sich regen. 23) to draw a curtain = einen Vorhang wegziehen. Hinter diesem weggezogenen Vorhang stellt sich dem bis dahin Uneingeweihten eine Art von Besorgniss auf unserer Seite dar, an die vorher nicht gedacht wurde. — fear ist hier schwerlich = a terrific object, obwohl Stoevens so erklärt. 24) Ihr geht in Euren Deutungen zu weit; Ihr übertreibt. 25) So die Qs.; die Fol. your. 26) Die Fol. hat dream of fear. — term of fear bezieht sich auf die letzten Worte in Worcester's vorhergehender Rede. 27) Die Fol. hat hath. 28) Die Schnellfüssigkeit des Prinzen Heinrich fand Sh. in seinen Chroniken erwähnt: he was passing swift in running, sagt u. A. Stowe. 29) comrades betont Sh. bald auf der ersten, bald auf der zweiten Sylbe. 30) Auf Percy's Frage nach dem Prinzen Heinrich und seinen Gesellen antwortet Vernon mit einer Beschreibung ihres Aussehens, in welcher nach einer längeren Reihe von Epithetis, wie es bei Sh. öfter vorkommt, das Verbum, das hinter wild as young bulls noch folgen müsste, ausgefallen ist. Der Sinn der ersten Zeilen ist: Alle gerüstet, Alle in Waffen, Alle mit Federn geschmückt wie Habichte, die mit dem Winde auf ihre Beute niederflogen, wie Adler, die sich kürzlich gebadet hatten, deren Gefieder daher frisch und glänzend erscheint. — estridge, das sonst wohl mit ostrich = Strauss, identisch ist, scheint hier, in Verbindung mit dem Falkonierausdruck to bate = niederfliegen auf Etwas, eher = goshawk zu sein, wie in Antony and Cleopatra (A. 3, Sc. 11) and in that mood, the dove will peck the estridge. — Die Schwierigkeiten, welche die Hgg. in dieser Stelle

Glittering in golden coats, like images;³¹
 As fall of spirit as the month of May,
 And gorgeous as the sun at midsummer;
 Wanton as youthful goats, wild as young bulls.
 I saw young Harry, with his beaver on,³²
 His cuisses³³ on his thighs, gallantly arm'd,
 Rise from the ground like feather'd Mercury,
 And vaulted³⁴ with such ease into his seat,
 As if an angel dropp'd down from the clouds,
 To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus,
 And witch³⁵ the world with noble horsemanship.

Hot. No more, no more: worse than the sun in March,

This praise doth nourish agues. Let them come;
 They come like sacrifices in their trim,
 And to the fire-ey'd maid of smoky war,³⁶
 All hot, and bleeding, will we offer them:
 The mailed Mars shall on his altar sit,
 Up to the ears in blood. I am on fire,
 To hear this rich reprisal is so nigh,
 And yet not ours. — Come, let me taste³⁷ my horse,
 Who is to bear me, like a thunderbolt,
 Against the bosom of the prince of Wales:
 Harry to Harry shall, hot horse to horse,
 Meet, and ne'er part, till one drop down a corse. —
 O, that Glendower were come!

Ver. There is more news:
 I learn'd in Worcester, as I rode along,
 He cannot³⁸ draw his power this fourteen days.

Doug. That's the worst tidings that I hear of yet.

Wor. Ay, by my faith, that bears a frosty sound.³⁹

Hot. What may the king's whole battle reach unto?

Ver. To thirty thousand.

Hot. Forty let it be:

My father and Glendower being both away,
 The powers of us may serve so great a day.

Come, let us take a muster speedily:

Doomsday is near; die all, die merrily.

Doug. Talk not of dying: I am out of fear
 Of death, or death's hand, for this one half year.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

A public Road near Coventry.

Enter FALSTAFF and BARDOLPH.

Fal. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry: fill me a bottle of sack. Our soldiers shall march through; we'll to Sutton Co'fil' to-night.

Bard. Will you give me money, captain?

Fal. Lay out, lay out.

Bard. This bottle makes an angel.¹

Fal. An if it do, take it for thy labour; and if it make twenty, take them all, I'll answer the coinage. Bid my lieutenant Peto² meet me at the town's end.

Bard. I will, captain: farewell. [Exit.]

Fal. If I be not ashamed of my soldiers, I am a souced gurnet.³ I have misused the king's press⁴ damnably. I have got, in exchange of a hundred and fifty soldiers, three hundred and odd pounds. I press me none but good householders, yeomen's sons; inquire me out contracted bachelors, such as had been asked twice on the bans;⁵ such a commodity of warm slaves, as had as lief hear the devil as a drum; such as fear the report of a caliver worse than a struck fowl,⁶ or a hurt wild-duck. I pressed me none but such toasts-and-butter,⁷ with hearts in their bellies no bigger than pins' heads, and they have bought out their services; and now my whole charge⁸ consists of ancients, corporals, lieutenants, gentlemen of companies,⁹ slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted cloth,¹⁰ where the glutton's dogs licked his sores; and such as, indeed, were never soldiers, but discarded unjust¹¹ fanden, rührten davon her, dass sie estridge = Strauss. to bate = mit den Flügeln schlagen, fassten und das Verbum schon hinter wind oder bath'd suchten. — Das Präteritum bated erklärt sich durch Attraction. — Dyce und Staunton, welche, wie die meisten Hgg., estridge = Strauss, fassen, lesen mit Rowe: All plum'd like estridges that wing the wind; || Bated like eagles having lately bath'd. — Malone vermuthet, dass ein Vers ausgefallen sei, etwa so: that with the wind || Run on, in gallant trim they now advance: || Bated etc. 31) images sind die Heiligenbilder, die man zu Festtagen reich ausstaffirt. 32) beaver wird sowohl von dem Visir des Helmes gebraucht, als auch von dem Helm selbst, das Visir mit einbegriffen. In letzterem Sinne scheint es an dieser Stelle zu stehen. 33) cuisses = Beinschienen. 34) Die Construction ist anakoluthisch, da vault als abhängig von I saw young Harry etc. stehen sollte, und nicht vaulted, als ob he rose voranginge. 35) to witch = bezaubern. So in Timon of Athens (A. 5, Sc. 2) you witch me in it. 36) d. h. Bellona. — fire-eyed kommt in Romeo and Juliet (A. 3, Sc. 1) als Epitheton zu fury vor. 37) So die früheren Qs.; die späteren und die Fol. haben take. — to taste = probiren, versuchen, nicht bloss vom Geschmack, zu Sh.'s Zeit. — Drei Zeilen weiter lesen die spätern Qs. not für hot. 38) So die Fol.; die Qs. he can draw. 39) frosty sound = ein Klang, der frieren macht. — So cold news in K. Henry VI. Second Part (A. 3, Sc. 1).

1) Eine Münze zum Werthe von zehn Schillingen. — Sh. beschreibt sie genauer in Merchant of Venice (A. 2, Sc. 7) they have in England || A coin, that bears the figure of an angel || Stamped in gold. — to make fasst Bardolph = betragen, Falstaff = bewirken, produciren. — In Falstaff's erster Rede in dieser Scene haben die alten Ausgg. Sutton cophill oder cop-hill, von Hammer in Sutton-Colfield verändert. Unsere Lesart ist die der Cambridge Edd. 2) Vgl. A. 3, Sc. 3, Anm. 36. 3) a souced gurnet, eigentlich = ein eingemachter Seehahn, ist = Einfaltspinsel oder Düpe, auch bei Sh.'s Zeitgenossen im Gebrauch. — So in Taylor's (the Waterpoet's) Bawd: a rich citizen's son is her souced gurnet, or her gudgeon. 4) Den königlichen Befehl, Soldaten anzuwerben. — Falstaff hatte, wie aus dem Folgenden hervorgeht, solche Recruten sich ausgesucht, die im Stande waren, sich loszukaufen (they have bought out their services, sagt Falstaff nachher). 5) Verlobte Junggesellen, die schon zweimal aufgeboten waren, und also im Begriff standen, sich zu verheirathen. 6) fowl, im Gegensatz zu wild-duck, muss hier = zahmes Geflügel, sein. 7) toast-and-butter, ein Spitzname = Mutter-söhnchen. 8) charge = Commando, in militärischem Sinne. 9) gentlemen of companies = Gefreite. 10) Eine Anspielung auf biblische Geschichten, welche auf den Tapeten dargestellt wurden, kommt auch in K. Henry IV. Second Part (A. 2, Sc. 1) vor: and for thy walls, a pretty slight drollery, or the story of the Prodigal, is worth a thousand of these bedhangings. 11) unjust, der biblische Ausdruck für betrügerisch, falsch.

serving-men, younger sons to younger brothers,¹² revolted tapsters, and ostlers trade-fallen; the cankers of a calm world, and a long peace;¹³ ten times more dishonourable ragged than an old faced ancient:¹⁴ and such have I, to fill up the rooms of them that have bought out their services, that you would think that I had a hundred and fifty tattered prodigals, lately come from swine-keeping, from eating draff and husks.¹⁵ A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me I had unloaded all the gibbets, and pressed the dead bodies. No eye hath seen such scarecrows. I'll not march through Coventry with them, that's flat: — nay, and the villains march wide betwixt the legs, as if they had gyves on;¹⁶ for, indeed, I had the most of them out of prison. There's not¹⁷ a shirt and a half in all my company: and the half-shirt is two napkins, tacked together, and thrown over the shoulders like a herald's coat without sleeves; and the shirt, to say the truth, stolen from my host at Saint Alban's, or the red-nose innkeeper of Daventry.¹⁸ But that's all one; they'll find linen enough on every hedge.¹⁹

Enter Prince HENRY and WESTMORELAND.

P. Hen. How now, blown Jack? how now, quilt?

Fal. What, Hal! How now, mad wag? what a devil dost thou in Warwickshire? — My good lord of Westmoreland, I cry you mercy: I thought your honour had already been at Shrewsbury.

West. 'Faith, Sir John, 't is more than time that I were there, and you too; but my powers are there already. The king, I can tell you, looks for us all: we must away all night.²⁰

Fal. Tut, never fear me: I am as vigilant as a cat to steal cream.²¹

P. Hen. I think, to steal cream indeed; for thy theft hath already made thee butter. But tell me, Jack; whose fellows are these that come after?

Fal. Mine, Hal, mine.

P. Hen. I did never see such pitiful rascals.

Fal. Tut, tut! good enough to toss;²² food for powder, food for powder; they'll fill a pit, as well as better: tush, man, mortal men, mortal men.

West. Ay, but, Sir John, methinks they are exceeding poor and bare; too beggarly.

Fal. 'Faith, for their poverty, I know not where they had that; and for their bareness, I am sure, they never learned that of me.

P. Hen. No, I'll be sworn; unless you call three fingers on the ribs, bare. But, sirrah, make haste: Percy is already in the field.

Fal. What, is the king encamped?

West. He is, Sir John: I fear we shall stay too long.

Fal. Well,

To the latter end of a fray, and the beginning of a feast, Fits a dull fighter, and a keen guest. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.

The Rebel Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter HOTSPUR, WORCESTER, DOUGLAS, and VERNON.

Hot. We'll fight with him to-night.

Wor. It may not be.

Doug. You give him then advantage.

Ver. Not a whit.

Hot. Why say you so? looks he not for supply?

Ver. So do we.

Hot. His is certain, ours is doubtful.

Wor. Good cousin, be advis'd: stir not to-night.

Ver. Do not, my lord.

Doug. You do not counsel well.

You speak it out of fear and cold heart.

Ver. Do me no slander, Douglas: by my life, And I dare well maintain it with my life, If well-respected honour bid me on,¹

I hold as little counsel with weak fear,

As you, my lord, or any Scot that this day lives:

Let it be seen to-morrow in the battle, Which of us fears.

Doug. Yea, or to-night.

Ver. Content.

Hot. To-night, say I.

Ver. Come, come, it may not be. I wonder much, Being men of such great leading² as you are,

That you foresee not what impediments

Drag back our expedition: certain horse³

Of my cousin Vernon's are not yet come up;

Your uncle Worcester's horse came but to-day;

And now their pride and mettle is asleep,

12) Also doppelt von Mitteln entblösst, da der ältere Bruder und ältere Sohn der eigentliche Erbe ist. 13) So in Nashe's Pierce Penniless (1592) all the canker-worms that breed on the rust of peace. 14) ten times gehört zu dem adverbial gebrauchten more dishonourable, nicht zu ragged, und old ist nicht mit faced zu verbinden: zerlumpt, aber in zehnfach unehrenhafterer Art, als eine alte, geflickte oder gefütterte Standarte. — Die Adjective auf —able stehen bei Sh. häufig adverbial. 15) Anspielungen auf den verlorenen Sohn im Evangelium sind bei Sh. häufig. 16) Da sie als Sträflinge mit Fussfesseln gehen mussten, haben sie sich gewöhnt, die Beine im Gehen weit auseinander zu halten. 17) So Qs. und Fol., von Rowe in but verwandelt. — not scheint in familiärer Sprache hyperbolisch = kaum, zu stehen, hier sowohl, wie an einer andern Stelle A. 5, Sc. 3: there's not three of my hundred and fifty left alive. 18) Die meisten Hgg. setzen mit einer Q. Daintry dafür. 19) Das Leinen wurde von der Hecke gestohlen, an der es zum Bleichen und Trocknen nach der Wäsche aufgehängt war. So singt der Gauner Autolycus in Winter's Tale (A. 4, Sc. 2) The white sheet bleaching on the hedge || Doth set my pugging tooth on edge. 20) Wir müssen die ganze Nacht durch marschiren. — Die Fol. hat all to-night. 21) Falstaff verbindet as a cat mit I am as vigilant, der Prinz in seiner Antwort bezieht to steal cream auf Falstaff. 22) scil. to toss upon a pike = sie auf eine Lanze zu spiessen. — So in K. Henry VI. Third Part (A. 1, Sc. 1) The soldiers should have toss'd me on their pikes, || Before I would have granted to that act.

1) Wenn ein wohlberücksichtigtes, wohlervogenes Ehrgefühl mich vorwärtsgehen heischt. — Zwei Zeilen weiter hält M. Mason this day vor lives für eine den Sinn schwächende Interpolation. 2) leading = Führung im Kriege, Feldherrnbegehung. 3) certain horse = Reiterei. — certain wird häufig im Sinne des französischen Theilungsartikels gebraucht, wo die Uebersetzung: gewisse, einige, zu viel sagen würde. — Das folgende horse ist zuerst ebenfalls = Reiterei, zu verstehen (your uncle Worcester's horse), in den nächsten Zeilen jedoch =

Their courage with hard labour tame and dull,
That not a horse is half the half of himself.

Hot. So are the horses of the enemy
In general, journey-bated,⁴ and brought low;
The better part of ours are full of rest.

Wor. The number of the king exceedeth ours:
For God's sake, cousin, stay till all come in.

[The trumpet sounds a parley.]

Enter Sir WALTER BLUNT.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the king,
If you vouchsafe me hearing and respect.

Hot. Welcome, Sir Walter Blunt; and 'would to God
You were of our determination!

Some of us love you well; and even those some Envy your great deservings and good name,
Because you are not of our quality,⁵
But stand against us like an enemy.

Blunt. And God defend but still I should stand so,
So long as, out of limit and true rule,
You stand against anointed majesty.

But, to my charge. — The king hath sent to know
The nature of your griefs,⁶ and whereupon

You conjure from the breast of civil peace
Such bold hostility, teaching his duteous land
Audacious cruelty? If that the king

Have any way your good deserts forgot,

Which he confesseth to be manifold,

He bids you name your griefs, and, with all speed,

You shall have your desires with interest,

And pardon absolute for yourself, and these,

Herein misled by your suggestion.

Hot. The king is kind; and, well we know, the king
Knows at what time to promise, when⁷ to pay.

My father, and my uncle, and myself,

Did give him that same royalty he wears;

And, when he was not six-and-twenty strong,⁸

Sick⁹ in the world's regard, wretched and low,

A poor unminded outlaw sneaking home,

My father gave him welcome to the shore;

And, when he heard him swear, and vow to God,

He came but to be duke of Lancaster,

To sue his livery,¹⁰ and beg his peace,

With tears of innocency, and terms of zeal,

My father, in kind heart and pity mov'd,

Swore him assistance, and perform'd it too.

Now, when the lords and barons of the realm

Perceiv'd Northumberland did lean to him,

The more and less¹¹ came in with cap and knee;

Met him in boroughs, cities, villages,

Attended him on bridges, stood in lanes,

Laid gifts before him, proffer'd him their oaths,

Gave him their heirs as pages;¹² follow'd him,

Even at the heels, in golden multitudes.

He presently, as greatness knows itself,¹³

Steps me¹⁴ a little higher than his vow

Made to my father, while his blood was poor,

Upon the naked shore at Ravenspur;

And now, forsooth, takes on him to reform

Some certain edicts, and some strait decrees,

That lie too heavy on the commonwealth;

Cries out upon abuses, seems to weep

Over his country's wrongs; and, by this face,

This seeming brow of justice, did he win

The hearts of all that he did angle for;

Proceeded further; cut me off the heads

Of all the favourites, that the absent king

In deputation¹⁵ left behind him here,

When he was personal in the Irish war.

Blunt. Tut! I came not to hear this.

Hot. Then, to the point.

In short time after he depos'd the king;

Soon after that, depriv'd him of his life;

And, in the neck of that,¹⁶ task'd the whole state;¹⁷

To make that worse, suffer'd his kinsman March

(Who is, if every owner were well plac'd,

Indeed his king) to be engag'd¹⁸ in Wales,

There without ransom to lie forfeited;

Disgrac'd me in my happy victories;

Sought to entrap me by intelligence;¹⁹

Rated my uncle from the council-board;²⁰

In rage dismiss'd my father from the court;

Pferde. 4) journey-bated = von der Reise erschöpft. So kommt in K. Henry IV. Second Part (A. 4, Sc. 3) travel-tainted vor. 5) quality = Charakter, nicht bloss einer Person, sondern einer Genossenschaft, also = Leute desselben Schlags, derselben Art. 6) grief = Beschwerde, Klagepunkt. 7) at what time und when stehen coordinirt = der König weiss, wann er zu versprechen hat, und wann er seine Versprechungen zu erfüllen hat. 8) Als er kaum sechs und zwanzig Anhänger hatte. 9) sick in uneigentlichem Sinn kommt so in K. Lear (A. 1. Sc. 2) vor: sick in fortune. 10) Vgl. K. Richard II. (A. 2, Sc. 3). — to sue his livery ist = um die gerichtliche Auslieferung des väterlichen Erbtheils nachsuchen, das nach dem Tode des Erblassers dem König anheimgefallen war. 11) the more and less = die Grösseren und die Kleineren, die Vornehmeren und Geringeren kamen und nahmen die Mütze vor ihm ab und beugten das Knie vor ihm. — cap = Abnehmen der Mütze, leg = Kniebeugung, ist Sh.'sch. 12) Diese von Malone vorgeschlagene, wenn auch noch nicht von ihm in den Text gesetzte Interpunction ist der gewöhnlichen: Gave him their heirs, as pages follow'd him, vorzuziehen, da eben die Erben, die Söhne der Lords, am Hofe des Königs Pagendienste verrichten sollten. — follow'd him ist dann mit dem Folgenden zu verbinden. 13) Wie die Grösse sich ihrer selbst bewusst wird; wie Bolingbroke zum Bewusstsein seiner steigenden Würde gelangt. 14) me ist ethischer Dativ, der auch entbehrt werden kann: er strebt ein wenig höher, als sein meinem Vater geleistetes Gelübde lautete, so lange sein Geblüt noch unansehnlich, noch nicht königlich war. 15) in deputation = in Stellvertretung, als Statthalter, ist dem personal = in Person, entgegengesetzt. 16) neck = Nacken, Rückseite, hier in the neck of that = unmittelbar hinterher. So in Painter's Palace of Pleasure: great mischiefs succeeding one in another's neck. — Sonst gebraucht Sh. in ähnlichem Tropus heel; so in Antony and Cleopatra (A. 2, Sc. 2) at heel of that. 17) to task = besteuern, in Contribution setzen. So wurde namentlich das substantivische task = tax zu Sh.'s Zeit gebraucht. 18) to engage = verpfänden, als Geisel ausliefern. — In demselben Sinne kommt das Wort A. 5, Sc. 2 vor. — Theobald wollte incaged dafür lesen. 19) Durch ausgesandte Späher oder Verräther. — intelligence ist hier collectiv gebraucht. 20) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 3. 21) Dieser bewaffnete Aufstand, der uns zur Sicherheit dient. 22) Sein Anrecht auf den Thron, das zu unrechtmässig ist, als dass es lange dauern darf.

Broke oath on oath, committed wrong on wrong,
And, in conclusion, drove us to seek out
This head of safety,²¹ and, withal, to pry
Into his title,²² the which we find
Too indirect for long continuance.

Blunt. Shall I return this answer to the king?

Hot. Not so, Sir Walter: we 'll withdraw awhile.

Go to the king, and let there be impawn'd

Some surety for a safe return again,

And in the morning early shall mine uncle

Bring him our purposes; and so farewell.

Blunt. I would you would accept of grace and love

Hot. And, may be, so we shall.

Blunt. 'Pray God, you do! [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.

York. A Room in the Archbishop's House.

*Enter the Archbishop of York and Sir Michael.*¹

Arch. Hie, good Sir Michael; bear this sealed brief²
With winged haste to the lord marshal;³
This to my cousin Scroop; and all the rest
To whom they are directed.⁴ If you knew
How much they do import, you would make haste.

Sir M. My good lord,

I guess their tenour.

Arch. Like enough, you do.

To-morrow, good Sir Michael, is a day,

Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men

Must bide the touch.⁵ For, Sir, at Shrewsbury,

As I am truly given to understand,

The king, with mighty and quick-raised power,

Meets with Lord Harry: and, I fear, Sir Michael,

What with the sickness of Northumberland,

Whose power was in the first proportion,⁶

And what with Owen Glendower's absence thence,

Who with them was a rated sinew too,⁷

And comes not in, o'er-rul'd by prophecies,⁸

I fear, the power of Percy is too weak

To wage an instant trial with the king.

Sir M. Why, my good lord, you need not fear:

There is Douglas, and Lord Mortimer.

Arch. No, Mortimer is not there.

Sir M. But there is Mordake, Vernon, Lord Harry Percy,

And there 's my lord of Worcester, and a head
Of gallant warriors, noble gentlemen.

Arch. And so there is; but yet the king hath drawn
The special head of all the land together:

The prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster,

The noble Westmoreland, and warlike Blunt,

And many more corrivals,⁹ and dear men

Of estimation and command in arms.

Sir M. Doubt not, my lord, they shall be well oppos'd.¹⁰

Arch. I hope no less, yet needful 't is to fear;

And, to prevent the worst, Sir Michael, speed:

For, if Lord Percy thrive not, ere the king

Dismiss his power, he means to visit us,

For he hath heard of our confederacy,¹¹

And 't is but wisdom to make strong against him:

Therefore, make haste. I must go write again

To other friends; and so farewell, Sir Michael. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.

The King's Camp near Shrewsbury.

Enter King Henry, Prince Henry, Prince John of Lancaster, Sir Walter Blunt, and Sir John Falstaff.

K. Hen. How bloodily the sun begins to peer

Above yon busky¹ hill: the day looks pale

At his distemperature.²

P. Hen. The southern wind

Doth play the trumpet to his purposes;³

And by his hollow whistling in the leaves

Foretells a tempest, and a blustering day.

K. Hen. Then with the losers let it sympathize,⁴

For nothing can seem foul to those that win. —

[Trumpet sounds.]

Enter Worcester and Vernon.

How now, my lord of Worcester? 't is not well,

That you and I should meet upon such terms

1) Die meisten Hgg. setzen a Gentleman, obwohl Qs. und Fol. Sir Michael haben. 2) brief ist schwerlich bloss = letter, wie Johnson erklärt, sondern = schriftliches Document, also Etwas von grösserem Gewicht. 3) Er meint Thomas Lord Mowbray. — marshal ist vielleicht hier dreisylbig = marishal zu lesen, wie in K. Richard II. (A. 1, Sc. 1) Lord marshal, command our officers-at-arms. 4) Eigentlich to whom they are directed to, da sich das erste to auf bear bezieht: bringt alle übrigen Schriften an Diejenigen, an die sie gerichtet sind. Indess ist die Auslassung einer Präposition, wenn sie eben vorhergegangen ist, Sh.'sch. 5) bide the touch = die Probe aushalten. 6) Dessen Truppenmacht zuvörderst in Anschlag gebracht war. — proportion ist der Feldzugsplan und die Vorbereitung auf den Krieg. 7) sinew = die Sehne, wird als ein Organ der Kraft auch sonst in übertragenem Sinne = Hülfe, Werkzeug, gebraucht. So in K. Henry V. (A. 1, Sc. 2) by God's help, || And yours, the noble sinews of our power. — Die Fol. liest was rated firmly too. 8) Der abergläubische Glendower hat sich durch Prophezeiungen bestimmen lassen, dem Aufstande fern zu bleiben. 9) corrivals und dear gehören beide zu of estimation, wie estima'ion wiederum mit in arms zu verbinden ist. 10) Zweifelt nicht daran, dass sie guten Widerstand finden werden. 11) Der König hat von dem Bündniss gehört, das der Erzbischof von York mit den Aufständischen abgeschlossen hatte. — Mit us und our meint der Erzbischof sich selbst, und fasst to visit in feindlichem Sinne = heimsuchen.

1) busky = waldig. 2) his distemperature ist die Störung, von der die Sonne betroffen ist. — Dasselbe Wort wurde (A. 3, Sc. 1) von einer krankhaften Affection der Erde gebraucht: Our grandam earth, having this distemperature, || In passion shook. 3) Der Südwind gilt bei Sh. immer als ein ungünstiger, verderblicher; hier ist er der Herold, welcher andeutet, was die Sonne mit ihrem veränderten Ansehen will. — his purposes bezieht sich noch auf the sun. 4) Wenn der Wind Unheil verkündet, so nehmt an, dass er seine Mitleidenschaft ausdrückt mit Denen, die verlieren, die besiegt werden; wir wollen das Omen nicht auf uns beziehen. 5) to doff aus do off =

As now we meet. You have deceiv'd our trust,
And made us doff⁵ our easy robes of peace,
To crush our old limbs in ungentle steel:
This is not well, my lord; this is not well.
What say you to it?⁶ will you again unknot
This churlish knot of all-aborred war,
And move in that obedient orb again,⁷
Where you did give a fair and natural light;
And be no more an exhal'd meteor,
A prodigy of fear, and a portent
Of broached mischief to the unborn times?

Wor. Hear me, my liege.

For mine own part, I could be well content
To entertain the lag-end⁸ of my life
With quiet hours; for, I do⁹ protest,
I have not sought the day of this dislike.

K. Hen. You have not sought it! how comes it then?

Fal. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it.

P. Hen. Peace, chewet,¹⁰ peace!

Wor. It pleas'd your majesty, to turn your looks
Of favour from myself, and all our house;
And yet I must remember you, my lord,
We were the first and dearest of your friends.
For you my staff of office did I break
In Richard's time;¹¹ and posted day and night
To meet you on the way, and kiss your hand,
When yet you were in place and in account
Nothing so strong and fortunate as I.¹²
It was myself, my brother, and his son,
That brought you home, and boldly did outdare
The dangers of the time. You swore to us,
And you did swear that oath at Doncaster,
That you did nothing purpose 'gainst the state,
Nor claim no further than your new-fall'n right,¹³
The seat of Gaunt, dukedom of Lancaster.
To this we swore our aid: but, in short space,

It rain'd down fortune showering¹⁴ on your head,
And such a flood of greatness fell on you,
What with our help, what with the absent king,¹⁵
What with the injuries of a wanton time,¹⁶
The seeming sufferances that you had borne,
And the contrarious winds, that held the king
So long in his unlucky Irish wars,
That all in England did repute him dead:
And, from this swarm of fair advantages,
You took occasion to be quickly woo'd
To gripe the general sway into your hand;
Forgot your oath to us at Doncaster,¹⁷
And, being fed by us, you us'd us so
As that ungentle gull, the cuckoo's bird,¹⁸
Useth the sparrow: did oppress our nest,
Grew by our feeding to so great a bulk,
That even our love durst not come near your sight,
For fear of swallowing; but with nimble wing
We were enforc'd, for safety sake, to fly
Out of your sight, and raise this present head;
Whereby we stand opposed by such means
As you yourself have forg'd against yourself,¹⁹
By unkind usage, dangerous countenance,
And violation of all faith and troth
Sworn to us in your younger enterprise.

K. Hen. These things, indeed, you have articulate,²⁰
Proclaim'd at market-crosses, read in churches,
To face the garment of rebellion
With some fine colour,²¹ that may please the eye
Of fickle changelings and poor discontents,²²
Which gape, and rub the elbow,²³ at the news
Of hurlyburly²⁴ innovation:
And never yet did insurrection want
Such water-colours,²⁵ to impaint his cause;
Nor moody beggars, starving for a time²⁶
Of pell-mell havoc and confusion.

abthun, ablegen. 6) Was meint Ihr? was habt Ihr vor? — Das to it bezieht sich auf das Folgende. 7) Der regelmässige Wandel der Sterne in ihren vorgeschriebenen Bahnen wird hier dem wirren Umherschweifen feuriger Meteore gegenübergestellt, welche letztere als ein Zeichen des Grauens und eine Vorbedeutung von Unheil, das den künftigen Zeiten sich erschliesst, aufgefasst werden. — broached ist mit to the unborn times zu verbinden. 8) lag-end ist das nachschleppende Ende, hier der Rest des Lebens, den Worcester mit ruhigen Stunden hinbringen möchte. — hours ist zweisylbig zu lesen. 9) do findet sich zuerst in der Fol. 10) Mit chewet = eine fette Fleischpastete, wird Falstaff hier so bezeichnet, wie vorher mit guts, tallow-ketch etc. — Florio's italienisches Wörterbuch erklärt das italienische frilingotti mit a kind of dainty chewet or little minced pies. Theobald fasst chewet als a noisy, chattering bird, a pie, führt aber keine Belegstelle für diese Bedeutung an. 11) d. h. seinen Amststab als Haushofmeister des Königs Richard II., wie in K. Richard II. (A. 2, Sc. 3) Percy von seinem Oheim Worcester erzählt: he hath forsook the court, || Broken his staff of office, and dispers'd || The household of the king. 12) Da Ihr doch am Range und in der Schätzung des Volkes durchaus nicht so stark und vom Glücke so begünstigt waret, wie ich. 13) new-fall'n right = Euer Besitzrecht, das Euch jüngst zugefallen war, durch den Tod Eures Vaters John Gaunt. 14) Es regnete Glück in Schauern oder Strömen auf Euer Haupt. — fortune ist das Object zu it rain'd. 15) the absent king steht für the absence of the king. 16) Die Kränkungen, welche eine ausgelassene Zeit, d. h. Richard's zügelloser Uebermuth, Euch zugefügt hatte. — Die folgende Zeile ist Apposition zu dieser. 17) Den Eid, den Ihr uns in Doncaster geschworen. 18) gull geht auf the cuckoo's bird = der junge Kuckuck. — Ausführlicher hat Sh. diesen naturhistorischen Zug in K. Lear (A. 1, Sc. 4) The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long, || That it had its head bit off by its young. 19) Die Veranlassung, vermöge der wir einander feindlich gegenüberstehen, ist von Euch selbst, Euch zum Schaden, gegeben. 20) So die Qs., wie Sh. die Participia der auf -ate auslautenden Verba häufig bildet; die Fol. hat articulated. — to articulate = in einzelnen Artikeln hervorheben. 21) Das Bild ist von einem Kleide entlehnt, das mit einem Stoffe von anderer Farbe besetzt wird. 22) poor discontents = Leute, die aus Armuth zu den Missvergnügten gehören. — discontent = ein Missvergnügter, kommt auch sonst bei Sh. und seinen Zeitgenossen vor. 23) to rub the elbow, als eine Aeusserung von innerlichem Behagen, hat Sh. auch in Love's Labour's Lost (A. 5, Sc. 2) One rubb'd his elbow, thus, and fleer'd, and swore, || I better speech was never spoke before. 24) hurlyburly innovation = tumultuarische Neuerung. Das Wort hurlyburly hat Sh. in Macbeth (A. 1, Sc. 1) = Tumult. Auch anderswo scheint es sonst nur substantivisch vorzukommen. 25) water-colour bezeichnet die Vergänglichkeit der Farbe, mit welcher der Aufstand seine Sache übertüncht. 26) to starve for = schmachten nach Etwas.

P. Hen. In both our armies there is many a soul
Shall pay full dearly for this encounter,
If once they join in trial. Tell your nephew,
The prince of Wales doth join with all the world
In praise of Henry Percy: by my hopes,
This present enterprise set off his head,²⁷
I do not think, a braver gentleman,
More active-valiant, or more valiant-young,²⁸
More daring, or more bold, is now alive
To grace this latter age with noble deeds.
For my part, I may speak it to my shame,
I have a truant been to chivalry,
And so, I hear, he doth account me too;
Yet this before my father's majesty:²⁹
I am content, that he shall take the odds
Of his great name and estimation,
And will, to save the blood on either side,
Try fortune with him in a single fight.

K. Hen. And, prince of Wales, so dare we venture thee,³⁰

Albeit considerations infinite
Do make against it. — No, good Worcester, no,³¹
We love our people well; even those we love,
That are misled upon your cousin's³² part;
And, will they take the offer of our grace,
Both³³ he, and they, and you, yea, every man,
Shall be my friend again, and I'll be his.
So tell your cousin, and bring me word
What he will do; but if he will not yield,
Rebuke and dread correction wait on us,³⁴
And they shall do their office. So, be gone.
We will not now be troubled with reply:
We offer fair, take it advisedly.

[Exeunt WORCESTER and VERNON.]

P. Hen. It will not be accepted, on my life.
The Douglas and the Hotspur both together³⁵
Are confident against the world in arms.

K. Hen. Hence, therefore, every leader to his charge;
For, on their answer, will we set on them;
And God befriend us, as our cause is just!

[Exeunt KING, BLUNT, and Prince JOHN.]

Fal. Hal, if thou see me down in the battle, and be-stride me, so;³⁶ 't is a point of friendship.

P. Hen. Nothing but a colossus can do thee that friendship.³⁷ Say thy prayers, and farewell.

Fal. I would it were bed-time,³⁸ Hal, and all well.

P. Hen. Why, thou owest God a death. [*Exit.*³⁹]

Fal. 'T is not due yet: I would be loath to pay him before his day. What need I be so forward with him that calls not on me?⁴⁰ Well, 't is no matter; honour pricks me on. Yea, but how if honour prick me off when I come on? how then? Can honour set to a leg? No. Or an arm? No. Or take away the grief of a wound? No.
Honour hath no skill in surgery then? No. What is honour? A word. What is that word honour? Air.⁴¹ A trim reckoning! — Who hath it? He that died o' Wednesday. Doth he feel it? No. Doth he hear it? No. Is it insensible⁴² then? Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? No. Why? Detraction will not suffer it.⁴³ — Therefore, I'll none of it: honour is a mere scutcheon;⁴⁴ and so ends my catechism. [Exit.]

SCENE II.

The Rebel Camp.

[Enter WORCESTER and VERNON.]

Wor. O, no! my nephew must not know, Sir Richard,
The liberal kind offer of the king.

Ver. 'T were best, he did.

Wor. Then are we all undone.¹
It is not possible, it cannot be,
The king should keep his word in loving us;²
He will suspect us still, and find a time

hungrig aussehen nach einer Zeit wirrer Metzelei und Verwüstung. — Drei Zeilen weiter vermuthet Seymour this day's encounter. Indess zählt Sidney Walker dear zu den Wörtern, die bei Sh. zweisylbig sein können, also dearly dreisylbig. 27) Ein participialer Zwischensatz: wenn dieser gegenwärtige Kriegszug nicht auf sein Haupt, nicht auf seine Rechnung gesetzt wird. 28) active-valiant = der Behendigkeit mit Tapferkeit verbindet; valiant-young = der diese selbige Tapferkeit mit Jugendkraft verbindet. — So in Sidney's Astrophel and Stella: young-wise, wise-valiant. 29) Das Folgende erkläre ich laut in Gegenwart meines Vaters. 30) In der angegebenen Weise, d. h. im Zweikampf mit Percy, wagen wir Dein Leben auf's Spiel zu setzen, obwohl viele Rücksichten dagegen sprechen. 31) M. Mason wollte know, good Worcester, know lesen. Indess knüpft die Verneinungspartikel an den Schluss der vorigen Rede des Königs havoc and confusion an: von solchen will der König nichts wissen. 32) cousin bezeichnet jeden entfernteren Verwandtschaftsgrad, hier = Neffe, d. h. Percy. 33) both = sowohl — als auch, gebraucht Sh. selbst wenn mehr als zwei Glieder an einander gereiht werden. 34) Zurechtweisung und schreckliche Züchtigung sind in meinem Gefolge, stehen mir zur Disposition gegen ihn. 35) Wenn die Beiden vereinigt sind. 36) Wenn Du in der Schlacht mich am Boden siehst und Dich über mich hinstellst, so ist es gut, so thu' es. — Diese Art, einen gefährdeten Waffengenossen in der Schlacht zu vertheidigen, hat Sh. öfter; so in Coriolanus (A. 2, Sc. 2) he bestrid || An o'er-press'd Roman, and i' the consul's view || Slew three opposers. 37) Um über den dicken Falstaff hintreten zu können, müsste man so gross sein, wie der Koloss von Rhodus. So in Julius Caesar (A. 1, Sc. 2) he doth bestride the narrow world, like a colossus. 38) Falstaff's Wunsch wird durch die Worte des Prinzen: say thy prayers motivirt, als ob er das Nachtgebet damit meinte; wie in Macbeth (A. 2, Sc. 2) But they did say their prayers, and address'd them || Again to sleep. 39) Dieses Exit ist erst von Hammer hinzugefügt, und stünde vielleicht eben so gut erst hinter calls not on me. 40) So zuvorkommend gegen Den, welcher mich nicht mahnt. 41) So eine spätere Q. und die Fol. Die früheren Qs. haben dafür eine zwiefache Frage: What is in that word, honour? What is that honour? eine Lesart, welche Dyce mit Recht aus einem Versehen des Abschreibers erklärt. 42) insensible to = unmerklich für Einen. 43) Die Verläumdung duldet nicht, dass die Ehre mit den im Kampfe am Leben Gebliebenen fortlebt. 44) scutcheon = der Wappenschild, der bei dem Leichenbegängniss eines Edlen mit herumgetragen wird, ihm selbst aber nicht mehr helfen kann.

1) So die Qs.; die Fol. Then we are all undone. 2) Worcester bezieht sich auf des Königs Worte in der vorhergehenden Scene: We love our people well; even those we love etc. 3) suspicion ist Rowe's Emendation

To punish this offence in other faults:
 Suspicion³ all our lives shall be stuck full of eyes;
 For treason is but trusted like the fox,
 Who, ne'er so tame, so cherish'd, and lock'd up,
 Will have a wild trick of his ancestors.⁴
 Look how we can, or sad, or merrily,
 Interpretation will misquote our looks;
 And we shall feed like oxen at a stall,
 The better cherish'd, still the nearer death.
 My nephew's trespass may be well forgot,
 It hath the excuse of youth, and heat of blood;
 And an adopted name of privilege,⁵
 A hare-brain'd⁶ Hotspur, govern'd by a spleen.
 All his offences live upon my head,
 And on his father's: we did train him on;
 And, his corruption being ta'en from us,
 We, as the spring of all, shall pay for all.
 Therefore, good cousin, let not Harry know
 In any case the offer of the king.

Ver. Deliver what you will, I'll say 't is so.
 Here comes your cousin.

Enter HOTSPUR and DOUGLAS; Officers and Soldiers, behind.

Hot. My uncle is return'd: — deliver up
 My lord of Westmoreland.⁷ — Uncle, what news?

Wor. The king will bid you battle presently.

Doug. Defy him by the lord of Westmoreland.⁸

Hot. Lord Douglas, go you and tell him so.

Doug. Marry, and shall, and very willingly. [Exit.]

Wor. There is no seeming mercy in the king.

Hot. Did you beg any? God forbid!

Wor. I told him gently of our grievances,
 Of his oath-breaking; which he mended thus,
 By now forswearing that he is forsworn:
 He calls us rebels, traitors; and will scourge
 With haughty arms this hateful name in us.

Re-enter DOUGLAS.

Doug. Arm, gentlemen! to arms! for I have thrown
 A brave defiance in king Henry's teeth,

And Westmoreland, that was engag'd,⁹ did bear it;
 Which cannot choose but bring him quickly on.

Wor. The prince of Wales stepp'd forth before the king,

And, nephew, challeng'd you to single fight.

Hot. O! 'would the quarrel lay upon our heads,
 And that no man might draw short breath¹⁰ to-day,
 But I and Harry Monmouth! Tell me, tell me,
 How show'd his tasking?¹¹ seem'd it in contempt?

Ver. No, by my soul: I never in my life
 Did hear a challenge urg'd more modestly,
 Unless a brother should a brother dare
 To gentle exercise and proof of arms.
 He gave you all the duties of a man,
 Trimm'd up your praises with a princely tongue,
 Spoke your deservings like a chronicle,
 Making you ever better than his praise,
 By still dispraising praise, valu'd with you;¹²
 And, which became him like a prince indeed,
 He made a blushing cital¹³ of himself,
 And chid his truant¹⁴ youth with such a grace,
 As if he master'd there a double spirit,
 Of teaching, and of learning, instantly.

There did he pause. But let me tell the world, —
 If he outlive the envy of this day,
 England did never owe so sweet a hope,
 So much misconstru'd in his wantonness.¹⁵

Hot. Cousin, I think thou art enamoured
 On¹⁶ his follies: never did I hear
 Of any prince so wild a libertine.¹⁷
 But, be he as he will, yet once ere night
 I will embrace him with a soldier's arm,
 That he shall shrink under my courtesy.
 Arm, arm, with speed! — And, fellows, soldiers, friends
 Better consider what you have to do,
 Than I, that have not well the gift of tongue,
 Can lift your blood up with persuasion.¹⁸

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, here are letters for you.

Hot. I cannot read them now. —

für supposition in Qs. und Fol.: der Verdacht wird unser ganzes Leben lang vollgesteckt von Augen sein, wird tausend Augen haben, um uns zu beobachten. 4) Ein Zug von Wildheit, der von seinen Vorfahren her stammt. 5) Percy's angenommener Name Hotspur giebt ihm ein Privilegium zu handeln wie er thut. 6) Die alten Ausgg. schreiben hier, wie an einer andern Stelle, K. Henry VI. First Part (A. 1, Sc. 2), haire-brained = wirrköpfig. 7) Westmoreland war als Geisel für eine ungefährdete Rückkehr Worcester's aus dem königlichen Lager bis dahin von Percy zurückgehalten. Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 3 gegen den Schluss: let there be impawn'd || Some surety for a safe return again. 8) Der zurückkehrende Westmoreland soll den König zur Schlacht herausfordern. — Capell wollte diese Zeile in Verbindung mit der folgenden dem Percy zuertheilen. 9) Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 3, Anm. 18. 10) Kurze, hastige Athemzüge, wie die Anstrengung des Gefechtes sie mit sich bringt. 11) to task = zur Rede stellen, vorfordern. — tasking in Q. A.; die folgenden Qs. und die Fol. talking. 12) Indem er stets das eben- vorher Euch gezollte Lob, als zu gering, widerrief, gemessen mit Eurem wirklichen Werthe, stellte er Euch dar als dieses Lob übertreffend. — Der Gegensatz von praise und dispraise kehrt bei Sh. öfter wieder; so in Romeo and Juliet (A. 3, Sc. 5) Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue || Which she hath prais'd him with above compare. 13) cital = Erwähnung, Anführung, von dem Verbum to cite = citiren, anführen. — Die Hgg. identificiren es ungenau mit recital = Bericht, Erzählung. Der Sinn: Er erwähnte sich selbst mit Schamröthe. 14) Während im Uebrigen Vernon's Bericht von der Rede des Prinzen Heinrich, nach Sh.'scher Lizenz, mit den in der vorigen Scene gesprochenen Worten nicht durchweg übereinstimmt, ist doch hier ein Wort daraus beibehalten: I have a truant been to chivalry. — Er schalt seine wilde Jugend mit solcher Ueberlegenheit, als ob er, indem er das that, zugleich (instantly) Lehrer und Lernender war. — to master = zu eigen haben als Herr. 15) his wantonness bezieht sich auf die in hope steckende Person: ein Mann voll so schöner Hoffnungen, der so miss- deutet wurde in seiner jugendlichen Ausgelassenheit. 16) Manche Hgg. setzen, um den Vers zu verbessern, im Widerspruch mit den alten Ausgg. upon für on. 17) Die früheren Qs. lesen, wie die Cambridge Edd. angeben, so wild a libertie, was Grant White beibehält und erklärt: never did I hear so wild a liberty reported of any prince. — Plausibler ist Capell's, auch von Staunton adoptirte, Lesart so wild a libertine. — Viele Hgg.

O gentlemen! the time of life is short;
To spend that shortness basely, were too long.¹⁹
If life did ride upon a dial's point,
Still ending at the arrival of an hour.
An if we live, we live to tread on kings;
If die, brave death, when princes die with us.
Now, for our consciences,²⁰ the arms are fair,
When the intent of bearing them is just.

Enter another Messenger.

Mess. My lord, prepare; the king comes on apace.

Hot. I thank him, that he cuts me from my tale,
For I profess not talking.²¹ Only this, —
Let each man do his best: and here draw I
A sword, whose temper I intend to stain
With the best blood that I can meet withal
In the adventure of this perilous day.
Now, — *Esperance!*²² — Percy! — and set on! — Sound all the lofty instruments of war,
And by that music let us all embrace;
For, heaven to earth,²³ some of us never shall
A second time do such a courtesy.

[The trumpets sound. They embrace, and exeunt.²⁴

SCENE III.

Plain near Shrewsbury.

Excursions, and Parties fighting. Alarum to the battle. Then enter DOUGLAS and BLUNT, meeting.

Blunt. What is thy name, that in the battle¹ thus Thou crossest me? what honour dost thou seek Upon my head?

Doug. Know then, my name is Douglas;
And I do haunt thee in the battle thus,
Because some tell me that thou art a king.

Blunt. They tell thee true.

Doug. The lord of Stafford dear to-day hath bought Thy likeness; for, instead of thee, king Harry,
This sword hath ended him: so shall it thee,
Unless thou yield thee as my prisoner.²

Blunt. I was not born a yielder, thou proud Scot;³
And thou shalt find a king that will revenge
Lord Stafford's death. [They fight, and BLUNT is slain.

Enter HOTSPUR.

Hot. O Douglas! hadst thou fought at Holmedon thus,⁴
I never had triumph'd upon a Scot.⁵

Doug. All 's done, all 's won: here breathless lies the king.

Hot. Where?

Doug. Here.

Hot. This, Douglas? no; I know this face full well:
A gallant knight he was, his name was Blunt,
Semblably⁶ furnish'd like the king himself.

Doug. A fool go with thy soul, whither it goes!⁷
A borrow'd title hast thou bought too dear:

Why didst thou tell me that thou wert a king?

Hot. The king hath many marching in his coats.⁸

Doug. Now, by my sword, I will kill all his coats;
I'll murder all his wardrobe, piece by piece,
Until I meet the king.

Hot.

Up, and away!

Our soldiers stand full fairly for the day. [Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Though I could 'scape shot-free at London, I fear the shot here;⁹ here 's no scoring, but upon the pate.
— Soft! who art thou? Sir Walter Blunt: — there 's honour for you;¹⁰ here 's no vanity. — I am as hot as molten lead, and as heavy too: God keep lead¹¹ out of me! I need no more weight than mine own bowels. —
I have led my ragamuffins where they are peppered:
there 's not¹² three of my hundred and fifty left alive, lesen mit der Fol. so wild at liberty. 18) persuasion = Ueberredungskunst, Beredsamkeit. 19) were too long ist mit dem Folgenden zu verbinden: Das kurze Leben gemein zu verbringen, wäre selbst dann zu lang, wenn das Leben auf dem Stundenzeiger an der Uhr mit abliefe, und also mit der Stunde selbst endete. 20) Die Ellipse ist etwa zu ergänzen: Was unser Gewissen betrifft, so beruhigt es uns, dass die Waffen tadellos sind u. s. w. 21) Ich gebe mich für keinen Redner aus, mache kein Geschäft aus dem Reden. 22) Vgl. A. 2, Sc. 3, Anm. 16. — Das Wort ist als ein französisches viersylbig zu lesen. — Esperance und Percy ist der Schlachtruf, den Percy seinen Anhängern giebt. 23) Es ist Himmel gegen Erde zu wetten. 24) Qs. und Fol. verschmelzen, ohne eine neue Scene zu bezeichnen, diese Bühnenweisung mit der folgenden, und zwar die Fol. so: They embrace, the trumpets sound, the King entereth with his power, alarum unto the battle. Then enter Douglas and Sir Walter Blunt.

1) So vervollständigt Hammer den Vers. Die alten Ausgg. haben hier in battle und erst in Douglas' Antwort in the battle. 2) So die früheren Qs.; eine spätere und die Fol. a prisoner. 3) So die früheren Qs.; eine spätere setzte to yield für a yielder, und die Fol. ausserdem haughty für proud. 4) Vgl. A. 1, Sc. 3 die Erzählung von der Schlacht bei Holmedon, in der Percy die Schotten schlug und viele Anführer gefangen nahm. 5) So die früheren Qs.; die späteren haben over für upon, und die Fol. regulirt dann den Vers: I never had triumphed o'er a Scot. — to triumph betont Sh. bald auf der ersten, bald auf der zweiten Sylbe. 6) semblably = ähnlich. 7) Ein Narr gehe mit Deiner Seele, wohin sie gehen mag; d. h. mag Deine Seele in den Himmel oder in die Hölle kommen, so soll sie überall als die Seele eines Narren erscheinen. — So in dem von Sh. für sein Measure for Measure benutzten Drama Promos and Cassandra: Go, and a knave with thee. — a fool emendirte Capell das ah fool der alten Ausgg. 8) Auf dem Schlachtfelde gehen Viele, um den Feind zu täuschen, in den Rücken des Königs umher. — to march = gehen, in militärischem Sinne. — Dyce liest masking für marching. 9) Wortspiel zwischen shot = Schuss, und = Wirthshausrechnung, Zeche. — Ebenso gleich nachher zwischen scoring = Einkerbungen, Anschreiben auf die Rechnungstafel des Wirthshauses, und = Einschnitten, Einhauen in den Schädel. 10) Falstaff denkt an seine früheren Betrachtungen über die Beschaffenheit der Ehre (vgl. A. 5, Sc. 1 gegen das Ende), und findet in Sir Walter Blunt, der sich für seinen König hat todtschlagen lassen, einen Beweis, dass die Ehre eine rechte Eitelkeit ist. — Die Negation vor vanity bezeichnet ironisch das Gegenheil. So in Taming of the Shrew (A. 1, Sc. 2) Here 's no knavery! = Hier ist eine rechte Schelmerei! 11) d. h. bleierne Kugeln. 12) Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 2, Anm. 17. — Auch hier ändern die meisten Hgg. das not der alten and they are for the town's end, to beg during life.¹³

But who comes here?

Enter Prince HENRY.

P. Hen. What! stand'st thou idle here? lend me thy sword:
Many a nobleman lies stark and stiff
Under the hoofs of vaunting enemies,
Whose deaths¹⁴ are unreveng'd: pr'ythee, lend me thy sword.

Fal. O Hal! I pr'ythee, give me leave to breathe a-while. — Turk Gregory¹⁵ never did such deeds in arms, as I have done this day. I have paid Percy, I have made him sure.

P. Hen. He is,¹⁶ indeed; and living to kill thee. I pr'ythee, lend me thy sword.

Fal. Nay, before God, Hal, if Percy be alive, thou gett'st not my sword; but take my pistol, if thou wilt.

P. Hen. Give it me. What, is it in the case?

Fal. Ay, Hal; 't is hot, 't is hot: there 's that will sack¹⁷ a city.

[The PRINCE draws out a bottle of sack.]

P. Hen. What! is 't a time to jest and dally now?

[Throws it at him, and exit.]

Fal. Well, if Percy be alive, I 'll pierce him.¹⁸ If he do come in my way, so: if he do not, if I come in his willingly, let him make a carbonado of me.¹⁹ I like not such grinning honour²⁰ as Sir Walter hath: give me life; which if I can save, so; if not, honour comes unlooked for, and there 's an end. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.

Another Part of the Field.

Alarums. Excursions. Enter the KING, Prince HENRY, Prince JOHN, and WESTMORELAND.

K. Hen. I pr'ythee,
Harry, withdraw thyself; thou bleed'st too much. —
Lord John of Lancaster, go you with him.¹

P. John. Not I, my lord, unless I did bleed too.

P. Hen. I beseech your majesty, make up,²
Lest your retirement do amaze your friends.

K. Hen. I will do so. —

My lord of Westmoreland, lead him to his tent.

West. Come, my lord, I 'll lead you to your tent.

P. Hen. Lead me, my lord? I do not need your help:
And heaven forbid, a shallow scratch³ should drive
The prince of Wales from such a field as this,
Where stain'd nobility lies trodden on,
And rebels' arms triumph in massacres!

P. John. We breathe⁴ too long. — Come, cousin Westmoreland,

Our duty this way lies: for God's sake, come.

[Exeunt Prince JOHN and WESTMORELAND.]

P. Hen. By God, thou hast deceiv'd me, Lancaster,
I did not think thee lord of such a spirit:
Before, I lov'd thee as a brother, John;
But now, I do respect thee as my soul.⁵

K. Hen. I saw him hold Lord Percy at the point,⁷
With lustier maintenance than I did look for
Of such an ungrown warrior.

P. Hen. O! this boy
Lends mettle to us all. [Exit.]

Alarums. Enter DOUGLAS.

Doug. Another king! they grow like Hydra's heads.
I am the Douglas, fatal to all those
That wear those colours on them. — What art thou,
That counterfeit'st the person of a king?

K. Hen. The king himself; who, Douglas, grieves at heart,

So many of his shadows thou hast met,
And not the very king. I have two boys
Seek Percy, and thyself, about the field:
But, seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily,
I will assay thee; and defend thyself.

Doug. I fear thou art another counterfeit,
And yet, in faith, thou bear'st thee like a king:
But mine I am sure thou art, whoe'er thou be,
And thus I win thee.

[They fight: the KING being in danger, re-enter Prince HENRY.]

P. Hen. Hold up thy head, vile Scot, or thou art like
Never to hold it up again! the spirits

Ausgg. in but um. 13) Als Invaliden müssen sie vor den Thoren der Stadt betteln, so lange sie leben. 14) whose deaths bezieht sich auf many a nobleman, als ob dafür many noblemen stände. — Die Qs. lesen yet unreveng'd und I pr'ythee. 15) Turk ist hier, wie anderswo bei Sh., = der türkische Sultan, eine Helden- und Wütherichsrolle des altenglischen Dramas; er erhält hier scherzhaft den Eigennamen Gregor, von dem gewaltigen Papste Gregor VII., der in den englischen Volksbegriffen einen ähnlichen Popanz vorstellte, wie der türkische Sultan. 16) scil. sure. — Falstaff fasst das Wort = beseitigt, abgemacht, der Prinz aber = unbeschädigt. 17) Wortspiel zwischen to sack = plündern, und sack = Sekt. — Ein ähnliches Wortspiel ist in K. Henry VI. First Part (A. 3, Sc. 2) Our sacks shall be a mean to sack the city. — Die beiden folgenden Bühnenweisungen sind in den alten Ausgg. 18) Falstaff spielt mit dem Gleichklange von Percy und pierce, und ruft diese Worte prahlerisch dem abgehenden Prinzen nach. 19) So möge er mich zerhacken wie eine Carbonade. — So in Coriolanus (A. 4, Sc. 5) before Corioli he scotched him and notched him like a carbonado. 20) grinning honour = grinsende Ehre, bezieht sich auf die im Tode verzerrten Züge des Sir Walter Blunt. — Ueber honour vgl. Anm. 10 dieser Scene.

1) Bezeichnend ist das vertrauliche thou, mit welchem der König seinen ältesten Sohn anredet, im Gegensatz zu dem förmlicheren you, das er an seinen jüngeren Sohn John von Lancaster richtet. 2) make up = eilt hinauf, d. h. in die Schlacht zurück. — to amaze = in Verwirrung oder Bestürzung versetzen. 3) Nach der Chronik wurde der Prinz von einem Pfeil im Antlitz verwundet. — stain'd nobility = der Adel in seinem Blut, blutbefleckt. Capell vermuthete slain nobility. 4) Wir schöpfen zu lange frischen Athem, wir ruhen uns zu lange aus. 5) Die alten Ausgg. notiren den Weggang der Beiden nicht, und die Hgg. hätten vielleicht ihn besser zum Schlusse der folgenden Worte des Prinzen Heinrich gesetzt. 6) Ich betrachte Dich mit denselben Gefühlen, wie mich selbst, wie mein zweites Ich. 7) Holinshed hat an der betreffenden Stelle: the Earl of Richmond withstood his violence, and kept him at the sword's point without advantage, longer than his companions either

Of valiant Shirley, Stafford, Blunt,⁸ are in my arms:
It is the prince of Wales, that threatens thee,
Who never promiseth, but he means to pay. —

[They fight: DOUGLAS flies.]

Cheerly, my lord: how fares your grace? —
Sir Nicholas Gawsey hath for succour sent.
And so hath Clifton; I'll to Clifton straight.

K. Hen. Stay, and breathe awhile.

Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion;⁹
And show'd thou mak'st some tender¹⁰ of my life,
In this fair rescue thou hast brought to me.

P. Hen. O God! they did me too much injury,
That ever said I hearken'd for your death.¹¹

If it were so, I might have let alone
The insulting hand of Douglas over you;¹²

Which would have been as speedy in your end,
As all the poisonous potions in the world,

And sav'd the treacherous labour of your son.

K. Hen. Make up to Clifton: I'll to Sir Nicholas
Gawsey. [Exit.]

Enter HOTSPUR.

Hot. If I mistake not, thou art Harry Monmouth.

P. Hen. Thou speak'st as if I would deny my name.

Hot. My name is Harry Percy.

P. Hen. Why, then I see

A very valiant rebel of that name.

I am the prince of Wales; and think not, Percy,

To share with me in glory any more:

Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere;

Nor can one England brook a double reign,

Of Harry Percy, and the prince of Wales.

Hot. Nor¹³ shall it, Harry, for the hour is come

To end the one of us; and 'would to God,

Thy name in arms were now as great as mine!

P. Hen. I'll make it greater, ere I part from thee;

And all the budding honours on thy crest

I'll crop, to make a garland for my head.

Hot. I can no longer brook thy vanities. [They fight.]

Enter FALSTAFF.

Fal. Well said,¹⁴ Hal! to it, Hal! — Nay, you shall find no boy's play here, I can tell you.

Re-enter DOUGLAS; he fights with FALSTAFF, who falls down as if he were dead, and exit DOUGLAS. HOT-SPUR is wounded, and falls.¹⁵

Hot. O Harry! thou hast robb'd me of my youth.¹⁶

I better brook the loss of brittle life,

Than those proud titles thou hast won of me;

They wound my thoughts worse than thy sword my flesh: —

But thought's the slave of life, and life time's fool;¹⁷

And time, that takes survey of all the world,

Must have a stop. O! I could prophesy,¹⁸

But that the earthy and cold hand of death¹⁹

Lies on my tongue. — No,²⁰ Percy, thou art dust.

And food for — [Dies.]

P. Hen. For worms, brave Percy. Fare thee well, great heart! —

Ill-weav'd ambition, how much art thou shrunk!²¹

When that this body did contain a spirit,

A kingdom for it was too small a bound;

But now, two paces of the vilest earth

Is room enough: — this earth, that bears thee dead,²²

Bears not alive so stout a gentleman.

If thou wert sensible of courtesy,

I should not make so dear²³ a show of zeal: —

But let my favours²⁴ hide thy mangled face,

And, even in thy behalf, I'll thank myself

For doing these fair rites of tenderness.

Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to heaven!

Thy ignomy²⁵ sleep with thee in the grave,

But not remember'd in thy epitaph! —

[He spieth FALSTAFF on the ground.]

What! old acquaintance! could not all this flesh

Keep in a little life? Poor Jack, farewell!

I could have better spar'd a better man.

thought or judged. 8) Die Geister Derer, welche Douglas erschlagen hatte, indem er meinte, es sei der König selbst, dessen Kleid sie nur trugen. — Den letzten Vers der vorigen Rede des Königs liest die Fol.: I will essay thee; so defend thyself. 9) Die gute Meinung, die Du eingebüsst hattest: Deinen verlorenen guten Leumund.

10) tender = Schätzung, Werthhaltung, eigentlich Pflege. 11) to hearken = sehnsüchtig nach Etwas horchen. sehnsüchtig auf Etwas warten. 12) over you ist mit insulting zu verbinden. — to insult = triumphiren, bei Sh., ohne den Nebengriff des Kränkenden, Beleidigenden. 13) So die Fol.; die Qs. haben now shall it. 14) Vgl. A. 4, Sc. 1, Anm. 1. 15) Diese Bühnenweisung, nach welcher also beide Zweikämpfe gleichzeitig auf dem Theater vor sich gehen, ist fast ganz aus den alten Ausgg. entlehnt, nur dass dort der Schluss lautet: The Prince kille h Percy. 16) Percy's Jugendkraft geht auf seinen Sieger, den Prinzen Heinrich, über. 17) Percy tröstet sich wegen seiner Seelenqual mit der Betrachtung, dass der Gedanke vom Leben abhängig ist, also bald mit diesem zugleich ein Ende haben wird, da mit dem Leben selbst die Zeit ihr Spiel treibt, und zuletzt diese, wie sie jenem gleichsam aus Laune ein Ende macht, ihrerseits aufhören muss. — Staunton interpungirt und liest: But thought's the slave of life, and life, Time's fool, || And Time, that takes survey of all the world, || Must have a stop.

18) So lässt Sh. den sterbenden Gaunt prophetisch reden in K. Richard II. (A. 2, Sc. 1) Methinks, I am a prophet new-inspir'd, || And thus, expiring, do foretell of him. 19) So die früheren Qs.; die späteren setzen earth für earthy und die Fol. ausserdem noch the cold. 20) So alle Ausgg. — Vielleicht wäre now für no zu lesen. 21) Das Bild ist von einem schlechten Gewebe entlehnt, das nachher sich zusammenzieht und ungleich wird. 22) So eine spätere Q. vom Jahre 1639; die früheren Qs. und die Fol. haben the dead. 23) So Q. A.; die späteren Qs. und die Fol. haben great a show. — dear = herzlich, innig. 24) favour ist, was der Ritter zunächst als Gunstgeschenk seiner Dame, dann überhaupt als Abzeichen oder Schmuck trug. — So mag denn hier, wie Johnson erklärt, der Prinz mit einer Schärpe, die er sich abnimmt, Percy's zerfetztes Angesicht bedecken. 25) ignomy, eine auch sonst Sh. und seinen Zeitgenossen geläufige Abkürzung von ignominy, ist die Lesart der späteren Qs. und der Fol.; die früheren Qs. haben ignominy. — Der Prinz versteht unter thy ignomy wohl die Betheiligung Percy's an dem Aufstande gegen den König. — Die folgende Bühnenweisung steht so in den Qs. 26) Ich würde Dich schwer entbehren, wenn ich in ein eitles Treiben, wie ich es früher wohl mitgemacht, sehr verliebt wäre. 27) Das Wortspiel zwischen dear und deer findet sich häufig bei Sh. und seinen Zeitgenossen; so in K. Henry VI. First

O! I should have a heavy miss of thee,
If I were much in love with vanity.²⁶
Death hath not struck so fat a deer to-day,
Though many dearer,²⁷ in this bloody fray. —
Embowell'd²⁸ will I see thee by and by;
Till then, in blood by noble Percy lie. [Exit.]

Fal. [Rising.] Embowelled! if thou embowel me to-day, I'll give you leave to powder me, and eat me too, to-morrow. 'Sblood! 't was time to counterfeit, or that hot termagant²⁹ Scot had paid me scot and lot too. Counterfeit? I lie;³⁰ I am no counterfeit: to die, is to be a counterfeit; for he is but the counterfeit of a man, who hath not the life of a man; but to counterfeit dying, when a man thereby liveth, is to be no counterfeit, but the true and perfect image of life indeed. The better part³¹ of valour is discretion; in the which better part I have saved my life. 'Zounds! I am afraid of this gunpowder Percy,³² though he be dead. How, if he should counterfeit too, and rise? By my faith, I am afraid he would prove the better counterfeit. Therefore I'll make him sure; yea, and I'll swear I killed him. Why may not he rise, as well as I? Nothing confutes me but eyes, and nobody sees me: therefore, sirrah, [stabbing him] with a new wound in your thigh come you along with me. [He takes HOTSPUR on his back.]

Re-enter Prince HENRY and Prince JOHN.

P. Hen. Come, brother John; full bravely hast thou flesh'd
Thy maiden sword.

P. John. But, soft! whom have we here?
Did you not tell me this fat man was dead?

P. Hen. I did; I saw him dead,
Breathless and bleeding on the ground. —
Art thou alive? or is it phantasy
That plays upon our eyesight? I pr'ythee, speak;
We will not trust our eyes without our ears.
Thou art not what thou seem'st.

Fal. No, that's certain: I am not a double man;³³ but if I be not Jack Falstaff, then am I Jack.³⁴ There is Percy: if your father will do me any honour, so; if not, let him kill the next Percy himself. I look to be either earl or duke, I can assure you.

P. Hen. Why, Percy I killed myself, and saw thee dead.

Fal. Didst thou? — Lord, Lord, how this world³⁵ is given to lying! — I grant you I was down, and out of breath, and so was he; but we rose both at an instant, and fought a long hour by Shrewsbury clock.³⁶ If I may be believed, so; if not, let them that should reward valour bear the sin upon their own heads. I'll take it upon my death, I gave him this wound in the thigh: if the man were alive, and would deny it, 'zounds! I would make him eat a piece of my sword.

P. John. This is the strangest tale that e'er I heard.

P. Hen. This is the strangest fellow, brother John. —
Come, bring your luggage nobly on your back:
For my part, if a lie may do thee grace,
I'll gild it with the happiest terms I have.

[A retreat is sounded.]

The trumpet sounds retreat; the day is ours.
Come, brother, let us to the highest of the field,
To see what friends are living, who are dead.

[Exeunt Prince HENRY and Prince JOHN.]

Fal. I'll follow,³⁷ as they say, for reward. He that rewards me, God reward him! If I do grow great,³⁸ I'll grow less; for I'll purge, and leave sack, and live cleanly, as a nobleman should do. [Exit, bearing off the body.]

SCENE V.

Another Part of the Field.

The trumpets sound. Enter King HENRY, Prince
HENRY, Prince JOHN, WESTMORELAND, and Others, with WORCESTER, and VERNON, prisoners.

K. Hen. Thus ever did rebellion find rebuke. —
Ill-spirited Worcester, did we not send grace,
Pardon, and terms of love to all of you?
And wouldst thou turn our offers contrary?
Misuse the tenour of thy kinsman's trust?
Three knights upon our party slain to-day,
A noble earl, and many a creature else,
Had been alive this hour,
If, like a Christian, thou hadst truly borne
Betwixt our armies true intelligence.

Wor. What I have done, my safety urg'd me to,
And I embrace this fortune patiently,
Since not to be avoided it falls on me.

K. Hen. Bear Worcester to the death,¹ and Vernon too:
Other offenders we will pause upon.² —

[Exeunt WORCESTER and VERNON, guarded.]
How goes the field?³

P. Hen. The noble Scot, Lord Douglas, when he saw
The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him,

Part (A. 4, Sc. 2) Sell every man his life as dear as mine, || And they shall find dear deer of us. 28) to embowel = ausweiden, d. h. die Eingeweide herausnehmen, um das Uebrige desto besser einbalsamiren zu können. — Falstaff versteht diese zweite Beziehung, die in den Worten des Prinzen liegt, nicht, und knüpft daher an das wörtlich gefasste to embowel das to powder = einpökeln, an. 29) termagant = Bramarbas, eigentlich eine vermeintliche saracenische Gottheit, die in den altenglischen Schauspielen die Rolle eines Wütherichs und Ungeheuers spielte, und auf die auch in Hamlet (A. 3, Sc. 2) angespielt wird: I would have such a fellow whipped for o'erdoing Termagant. — Wortspiel zwischen Scot = Schotte, d. h. Douglas, und scot and lot = Steuern. 30) Die Fol. lässt I lie aus. 31) better part = Vorzug, Tugend: der Vorzug der Tapferkeit besteht in der Besonnenheit, Vorsicht. 32) Percy, der so hitzig auflodert, der so gefährlich ist, wie Schiesspulver. 33) Falstaff bezieht sich auf das letzte Wort des Prinzen, also: wenn ich auch, mit Percy beladen, als ein doppelter Mann erscheine, so bin ich doch kein doppelter, sondern nur ein einfacher. 34) Wenn ich nicht Hans Falstaff bin, so will ich Hans heißen — eine komische Betheuerung, die hier zugleich ein Wortspiel zwischen Jack = John, Falstaff's Vornamen, und Jack = Hans, als Ausdruck der Verachtung, enthält. 35) So die früheren Qs., die späteren und die Fol. the world. 36) Eine scherzhafte Erinnerung daran, dass die Schlacht in der Nähe von Shrewsbury vor sich ging. 37) to follow = hinterdreingehen, und = dienen, in Diensten bei Jemandem sein. In letzterem Sinne fügt Falstaff hinzu: as they say, for reward, zugleich mit Anspielung auf die Belohnung, die er für die Erlegung Percy's erwartet. 38) to grow great = zu einem hohen Range befördert werden; to grow less = an Umfang abnehmen.

The noble Percy slain, and all his men
Upon the foot of fear, ⁴ fled with the rest;
And falling from a hill he was so bruised,
That the pursuers took him. At my tent
The Douglas is, and I beseech your grace,
I may dispose of him.

K. Hen. With all my heart.

P. Hen. Then, brother John of Lancaster, to you
This honourable bounty shall belong.
Go to the Douglas, and deliver him
Up to his pleasure, ransomless, and free:
His valour, shown upon our crests to-day,
Hath taught ⁵ us how to cherish such high deeds,
Even in the bosom of our adversaries.

P. John. I thank your grace for this high courtesy,
Which I shall give away immediately. ⁶

K. Hen. Then this remains, — that we divide our power. —

You, son John, and my cousin Westmoreland,
Towards York shall bend you, with your dearest speed,
To meet Northumberland, and the prelate Scroop,
Who, as we hear, are busily in arms:
Myself, and you, son Harry, will towards Wales,
To fight with Glendower and the earl of March.
Rebellion in this land shall lose his sway,
Meeting the check of such another day:
And since this business so fair is done,
Let us not leave till all our own be won. [Exeunt.]

1) the death ist der bestimmte Tod durch Hinrichtung. Die Fol. hat to death. 2) In Bezug auf andere Uebelthäter wollen wir anstehen, überlegen, was zu beschließen ist. 3) Wie steht es auf dem Schlachtfelde? 4) d. h. auf flüchtigem Fuss. — Vgl. Einleitung pag. 659. 5) So Qs. und Fol. Malone setzte ohne Autorität shown. 6) Prinz John's Antwort fehlt in der Fol. und in der ihr zu Grunde liegenden Q.

KING HENRY IV. — PART II.

Einleitung.

Von King Henry IV. Second Part ist bei Lebzeiten des Dichters nur eine Einzelausgabe in Quarto erschienen, im Jahre 1600, mit folgendem Titel: The Second part of Henrieth the fourth, continuing to his death, and coronation of Henrieth the fift. With the humours of Sir John Falstaffe, and swaggering Pistoll. As it hath been sundrie times publikely acted by the right honourable, the Lord Chamberlaine his servants. Written by William Shakespeare. London, Printed by V. S. for Andrew Wise and William Aspley. — Die Ausgabe war so eilig und nachlässig, wahrscheinlich nach einem Theatermanuscripte, gedruckt, dass eine ganze Scene (A. 3, Sc. 1) anfangs übergangen worden, und erst, nachdem der grösste Theil der Auflage bereits abgedruckt war, in den übrigen Exemplaren durch Umdrucken eines Bogens ergänzt worden ist. Andere Auslassungen von einzelnen Versen und ganzen Stellen, welche der Text der Folioausgabe zuerst darbietet, mögen ihren Grund darin haben, dass sie auch in dem Theatermanuscripte, das der Quartausgabe zum Grunde lag, fehlten, vielleicht weil sie, obwohl vom Dichter geschrieben, bei der Aufführung nicht gesprochen wurden. Indess ist es auch denkbar, dass die Herausgeber der Quartausgabe, welche im August 1600 King Henry IV. Second Part zugleich mit Shakspeare's Drama Much Ado about Nothing in die Register der Buchhändler eintragen liessen, auf eigene Hand sich diese Verstümmelungen erlaubten, um mit dem Drucke rascher fertig zu werden. Bei den weit geringfügigern Auslassungen in der Folio von einzelnen Versen und Phrasen, welche uns nur in der Quartausgabe überliefert sind, mag die unter Jacob I. bestehende Theaterzensur theilweise mit eingewirkt haben. In jener Gesamtausgabe der Shakspeare'schen Dramen steht The Second Part of Henry the Fourth, Containing his Death: and the Coronation of King Henry the Fift als das vierte Stück in der Reihe der Histories und ist daselbst zuerst in Acte und Scenen eingetheilt.

Wann Shakspeare den Second Part of King Henry IV. geschrieben und auf die Bühne gebracht hat, hat sich bisher mit keiner bestimmten Jahreszahl feststellen lassen. Wenn die in der Einleitung zum First Part of King Henry IV. angeführte Erwähnung von »Henry the 4.« in Francis Meres' Palladis Tamia (1598) sich nur vermuthungsweise auf beide Theile beziehen lässt, so geht doch eine Anspielung in Ben Jonson's 1599 zuerst aufgeführtem Lustspiel *Every Man out of his Humour) deutlich auf den Second Part of King Henry IV., als auf ein damals bekanntes und populäres Bühnenstück. Dass der Dichter dasselbe in unmittelbarem Anschluss an sein vorhergehendes historisches Drama, mit welchem es ein Ganzes bildet, gedichtet und zur Aufführung gebracht hat, ist bereits in der Einleitung zum First Part gesagt worden. Die ebendasselbst citirte Chronik von Holinshed ist von dem Dichter auch für das vorliegende Drama benutzt worden, wobei es Shakspeare's Aufgabe war, den Bericht des Chronisten über die neun letzten Regierungsjahre Heinrich's IV. zusammenzuziehen und mit dem Bericht über den Regierungsantritt Heinrich's V. zu verschmelzen. In welcher Weise er diese Aufgabe löste, mögen einige Auszüge aus Holinshed mit Verweisung auf die betreffenden Acte und Scenen bei Shakspeare darthun.

Zu A. 1, Sc. 1 und 3. Shakspeare schliesst den Aufstand Northumberland's unmittelbar an die Niederlage Percy's an, während der Chronist zwischen beide Ereignisse eine, wenn auch nur scheinbare, Aussöhnung des Königs und Northumberland's einschiebt, und die neue Empörung des Letztern und seine Verbindung mit den übrigen Verschwörern erst zwei Jahre später setzt. Holinshed fährt, nachdem er von den französischen Händeln erzählt hat, folgendermassen fort: Whilst such doings were in hand betwixt the English and French, the king was minded to have gone into Wales against the Welsh rebels, that under their chieftain, Owen Glendower, ceased not to do much mischief still against the English subjects. But, at the same time, to his further disquieting, there was a conspiracy put in practice against him at home by the Earl of Northumberland, who had conspired with Richard Scrope Archbishop of York, Thomas Mowbray Earl Marshall, son to Thomas Duke of Norfolk, who for the quarrel betwixt him and King Henry had been banished (as before ye have heard), the Lords Hastings, Fauconbridge, Berdolf, and divers others. It was appointed that they should meet all together with their whole power, upon Yorkeswold, at a day assigned, and that the Earl of Northumberland should be chieftain, promising to bring with him a great number of Scots. The archbishop, accompanied with the Earl Marshall, devised certain articles of such matters as it was supposed, that not only the commonalty of the realm, but also the nobility, found themselves agrieved with: which articles they shewed first unto such of their adherents as were near & out them, and after sent them abroad to their friends further off, assuring them that for redress of such oppressions they would shed the last drop of blood in their bodies, if need were. The archbishop not meaning to stay after he saw himself accompanied with a great number of men, that came flocking to York to take his part in this quarrel, forthwith discovered his enterprise, causing the articles aforesaid to be set up in the public streets of the city of York, and upon the gates of the monasteries, that each man might understand the cause that moved him to rise in arms against the king, the reforming whereof did not yet appertain unto him. Hereupon knights, esquires, gentlemen, yeomen, and other of the commons, assembled together in great numbers, and the archbishop coming forth amongst them, clad in armour, encouraged, exhorted, and by all means he could, pricked them forth to take the enterprise in hand, and thus not only all the citizens of York, but all other in the countries about, that were able to bear weapon, came to the archbishop, and to the Earl Marshall. Indeed the respect that men had to the archbishop, caused them to like the better of the cause, since the gravity of his age, his integrity of life, and incomparable learning, with the reverend aspect of his amiable personage, moved all men to have him in no small estimation.

Zu A. 4, Sc. 1 und 2. Holinshed führt den so eben citirten Bericht alsdann weiter: The king advertised of these matters, meaning to prevent them, left his journey into Wales, and marched with all speed towards the north parts. Also Raufe Neville, Earl of Westmoreland, that was not far off, together with the Lord John of Lancaster, the king's son, being informed of this rebellious attempt, assembled together such power as they might make, and coming into a plain within the forest of Galtree, caused their standards to be pitched down in like sort as the archbishop had pitched his, over against them, being far stronger in number of people than the other, for (as some write) there were of the rebels at the least twenty thousand men. When the Earl of Westmoreland perceived the force of adversaries, and that they lay still and attempted not to come forward upon him, he subtilly devised how to quail their purpose, and forthwith despatched messengers unto the archbishop to understand the cause, as it were, of that great assemble, and for what cause, contrary to the king's peace, they came so in armour. The archbishop answered, that he took nothing in hand against the king's peace, but that whatever he did, tended rather to advance the peace and quiet of the commonwealth, than otherwise, and where he and his company were in arms, it was for fear of the king, to whom he could have no free access by reason of such a multitude of flatterers as were about him, and therefore he maintained that his purpose was good and profitable, as well for the king himself, as for the realm, if men were willing to understand a truth: and herewith he showed forth a scroll in which the articles were written, whereof before ye have heard. The messengers returning unto the Earl of Westmoreland showed him what they had heard and brought from the archbishop. When he had read the articles, he showed in word and countenance outwardly that he liked of the archbishop's holy and virtuous intent and purpose, promising that he and his would prosecute the same in assisting the archbishop, who, rejoicing hereat, gave credit to the earl, and persuaded the Earl Marshall against his will as it were to go with him to a place appointed for them to commune together. Here, when they were met with like number on either part, the articles were read over, and without any more ado, the Earl of Westmoreland and those that were with him, agreed to do their best to see that a reformation might be had, according to the same. The Earl of Westmoreland using more policy than the rest: Well (said he) then our travail is come to the wished end: and where our people have been long in armour, let them depart home to their wonted trades and occupations: in the mean time let us drink together, in sign of agreement, that the people on both sides may see it, and know that it is true, that we be light at a point. They had no sooner shaken hands together, but that a knight was sent straightways from the archbishop to bring word to the people that there was a peace concluded, commanding each man to lay aside arms, and to resort home to their houses. The people beholding such tokens of peace, as shaking of hands, and drinking together of the lords in loving manner, they being already wearied with the unaccustomed travail of war, brake up their field and returned homewards: but in the mean time, whilst the people of the archbishop's side withdrew away, the number of the contrary part increased, according to order given by the Earl of Westmoreland, and yet the archbishop perceived not that he was deceived, till the Earl of Westmoreland arrested both him and the Earl Marshall, with divers others. Their troops being pursued, many were taken, many slain, and many spoiled of that they had about them, and so permitted to go their ways.

Zu A. 4, Sc. 4. Das von Harcourt berichtete Ende Northumberland's erfolgte, Holinshed zufolge, erst drei Jahre nach der Niederlage des Erzbischofs, nämlich im Jahre 1408: The Earl of Northumberland, and the Lord Bardolf, after they had been in Wales, in France, and Flanders, to purchase aid against King Henry, were returned back into Scotland, and had remained there now for the space of a whole year, and as their evil fortune would, whilst the king held a council of the nobility at London, the said Earl of Northumberland and Lord Bardolf, in a dismal hour, with a great power of Scots, returned into England, recovering divers of the earl's castles, and seigniories, for the people in great numbers resorted unto them. Hereupon encouraged with hope of good success, they enter into Yorkshire, and there began to destroy the country. The king advertised hereof, caused a great army to be assembled, and came forward with the same towards his enemies: but ere the king came to Nottingham, Sir Thomas (or, as other copies have, Raufe) Rokesby, sheriff of Yorkshire, assembled the forces of the country to resist the earl and his power, coming to Grimbaut Brigges beside Knaresborough, there to stop them the passage; but they returning aside, got to Weatherby, and so to Tadcaster, and finally came forward unto Branham Moor, near to Hayselwood, where they chose their ground meet to fight upon. The sheriff was as ready to give battle as the earl to receive it, and so with a standard of Saint George spread, set fiercely upon the earl, who, under a standard of his own arms, encountered his adversaries with great manhood. There was a sore encounter and cruel conflict betwixt the parties, but in the end the victory fell to the sheriff. The Earl of Northumberland was slain in the field, and the Lord Bardolf was taken, but sore wounded, so that he shortly after died of the hurts.

Der von Shakspere mit beiden Ereignissen in zeitliche Nähe gerückte Tod des Königs hatte erst im Jahre 1413 Statt. Zu den letzten Verhandlungen zwischen dem König und seinem Sohn fand Shakspere die Grundzüge in Holinshed's Bericht von den Ereignissen, die dem Tode Heinrich's IV. vorangingen: In this fourteenth and last year of King Henry's reign, a council was holden in the White Friars in London, at the which, among other things, order was taken for ships and galleys to be builded and made ready, and all other things necessary to be provided, for a voyage which he meant to make into the Holy Land, there to recover the city of Jerusalem from the infidels. He held his Christmas this year at Eltham, being sore vexed with sickness, so that it was thought sometime that he had been dead, notwithstanding it pleased God that he somewhat recovered his strength again, and so passed that Christmas with as much joy as he might. The morrow after Candlemas-day, began a Parliament which he had called at London; but he departed this life before the same Parliament was ended: for now that his provisions were ready, and that he was furnished with all things necessary for such a royal journey as he pretended to take into the Holy Land, he was eftsoones taken with a sore sickness, which was not a leprosy stricken by the hand of God, (saith Master Hall,) as foolish friars imagined, but a very apoplexy. During this, his last sickness, he caused his crown (as some write) to be set on a pillow at his bed's-head, and suddenly his pangs so sore troubled him, that he lay as though all his vital spirits had been from him departed. Such as were about him, thinking verily that he had been departed, covered his face with a linen cloth. The prince his son being hereof advertised, entered into the chamber, took away the crown, and departed. The father being suddenly revived out of that trance, quickly perceived the lack of his crown, and having knowledge that the prince his son had taken it away, caused him to come before his presence, requiring of him what he meant so to misuse himself: the prince with a good audacity answered, Sir, to mine, and all men's judgments, you seemed dead in this world; wherefore I, as your next heir apparent, took that as mine own, and not as yours. Well, fair son, said the king (with a great sigh), what right I had to it, God knoweth. Well, quoth the prince, if you die king, I will have the garland, and trust to keep it with the sword against all mine enemies, as you have done. Then, said the king, I commit all to God, and remember you to do well; and with that turned himself in his bed, and shortly after departed to God, in a chamber of the Abbots of Westminster called Jerusalem. We find, that he was taken with his last sickness, while he was making his prayers at Saint Edward's shrine, there as it were to take his leave, and so to proceed forth on his journey: he was so suddenly and grievously taken, that such as were about him feared lest he would have died presently; wherefore, to relieve him, if it were possible, they bare him into a chamber that was next at hand belonging to the Abbot of Westminster, where they laid him on a pallet before the fire, and used all remedies to revive him: at length he recovered his speech and understanding, and perceiving himself in a strange place which he knew not, he willed to know if the chamber had any particular name, whereunto answer was made, that it was called Jerusalem. Then said the king, laudes be given to the Father of Heaven, for now I know that I shall die here in this chamber, according to the prophesy of me declared, that I should depart this life in Jerusalem.

Zu A. 5, Sc. 2. Von der Sinnesänderung, welche Heinrich V. bei seiner Thronbesteigung beurkundete, sagt Holinshed: Such great hope and good expectation was had of this man's fortunate success to follow, that within three days after his father's decease, divers noble men and honourable personages did to him homage and swore to him due obedience, which had not been seen done to any of his predecessors kings of this realm, till they had been possessed of the crown. He was crowned the ninth of April, being Passion Sunday. — But this king even at first appointing with himself to shew that in his person princely honours should change public manners, he determined to put on him the shape of a new man. For whereas aforetime he had made himself a companion unto misruly mates of dissolute order and life, he now banished them all from his presence (but not unrewarded, or else unpreferred), inhibiting them, upon a great pain, not once to approach, lodge or sojourn within ten miles of his court or presence; and in their place; he chose men of gravity, wit, and high policy, by whose wise counsel he might at all times rule to his honour and dignity; calling to mind how once to high offence of the king his father, he had with his fist stricken the chief justice for sending one of his minions (upon desert) to prison, when the justice stoutly commanded himself also straight to ward, and he (then prince) obeyed.

In dem alten Drama The Famous Victories of Henry the Fifth, von dem bereits in der Einleitung zum First Part of King Henry IV. die Rede war, sind die letzten Augenblicke des Königs, sein Tod, die Thronbesteigung Heinrich's V. und die Abfertigung seiner bisherigen Gesellen folgendermassen dargestellt:

Enter the King with his Lords.

Henry 4. Come my Lords, I see it boots mee not to take any physike, for all the Physitians in the world cannot cure mee, no not one. But good my Lords, remember my last Will and Testament concerning my sonne, for truly my Lords, I do not thinke but he will prove as valiant and victorious a King, as ever raigned in England.

Both. Let heaven and earth be witness betweene us, if wee accomplish not thy will to the uttermoste.

Henry 4. I give you most unfained thanks, good my Lords,

Draw the curtaines and depart my chamber a while, And cause some musicke to rocke me a sleepe.

[He sleepeth. — Exeunt Lords.

Enter the Prince.

Henry 5. Ah Harry, thrice unhappy, that hath neglect so long from visiting of thy sicke father, I will goe, nay but why doe I not goe to the chamber of my sicke father, to comfort the melancholy soule of his body, his soule said I, heere is his body, but his soule is, wheras it needs no bodie. Now thrice accursed Harry, that hath offended thy father so much, and could not I crave pardon for all. Oh my dying father curst be the day wherein I was borne, and accursed be the houre wherein I was begotten, but what shall I doe? if weeping teares which come too late, may suffice the negligence neglected to some, I will weepe day and night untill the fountaine be drie with weeping. [Exit.]

Enter Lord of Exeter and Oxford.

Exeter. Come easily my Lord, for waking of the King.

Henry 4. Now my Lords.

Oxford. How doth your Grace feelee your selfe?

Henry 4. Somewhat better after my sleepe, But good my Lord take off my crowne, Remove my chayre a little backe, and set me right.

Ambo. And please your grace the crowne is taken away.

Henry 4. The crowne taken away, Good my Lord of Oxford, go see who hath done this deed:

No doubt 't is some wilde traytor that hath done it, To deprive my sonne, they that would doe it now, Would seeke to scrape and scrawle for it after my death.

Enter Lord of Oxford with the Prince.

Oxford. Here and please your Grace, Is my Lord the yong Prince with the Crowne.

Henry 4. Why how now my sonne, I had thought the last time I had you in schooling, I had given you a lesson for all, And do you now begin againe?

Why tell me my sonne, Dost thou thinke the time so long, That thou wouldest have it before the Breath be out of my mouth.

Henry 5. Most soveraigne Lord, and well-beloved father, I came into your chamber to comfort the melancholy Soule of your body, and finding you at that time Past all recovery, and dead to my thinking, God is my witnesse, and what should I do, But with weeping teares lament the death of you my father,

And after that, seeing the crowne I tooke it: And tell me my father, who might better take it then I, After your death, but seeing you live, I most humbly render it into your majesties hands, And the happiest man alive, that my father live: And live my Lord and father for ever.

Henry 4. Stand up my sonne, Thine answer hath sounded well in mine eares, For I must needs confesse that I was in a very sound sleepe,

And altogether unmindfull of thy comming: But come neare my sonne, And let mee put thee in possession whilst I live, That none deprive thee of it after my death.

Henry 5. Well may I take it at your majesties hands,

But it shal never touch my head, so long as my father lives. [He taketh the crowne.]

Henry 4. God give thee joy my sonne,

God blesse thee, and make thee his servant, And send thee a prosperous raigne.

For God knowes my sonne, how hardly I came by it, And how hardly I have maintained it.

Henry 5. Howsoever you came by it, I know not, And now I have it from you, and from you I wil keepe it:

And he that seekes to take the crown from my head, Let him looke that his armour be thicker then mine, Or I will pearce him to the heart, Were it harder then brasse or bollion.

Henry 4. Nobly spoken, and like a King. Now trust me my Lords, I feare not but my sonne Will be as warlike and victorious a Prince, As ever raigned in England.

L. Ambo. His former life shewes no lesse.

Henry 4. Well my lords I know not whether it be for sleep,

Or drawing neare of drowsie summer of death, But I am very much given to sleepe;

Therefore good my lords and my sonne, Draw the curtaines, depart my chamber, And cause some musicke to rocke me asleepe.

[Exeunt omnes. — The King dyeth.]

Enter the Theefe.

Theefe. Ah God, I am now much like to a byrd Which hath escaped out of the cage, For so soone as my Lord Chiefe Justice heard That the old King was dead, he was glad to let me go,

For feare of my Lord the young Prince: But here comes some of his companions, I will see and I can get any thing of them, For olde acquaintance.

Enter Knights raunging.

Tom. Gogs wounds the King is dead.

Jockey. Dead, then gogs blood, wee shall be all kings.

Ned. Gogs wounds, I shall be Lord Chiefe Justice of England.

Tom. Why, how are you broken out of prison?

Ned. Gogs wounds, how the villaine stinkes?

Jockey. Why what will become of thee now? Fye upon him, how the rascall stinkes.

Theefe. Marry I will goe and serce my maister againe.

Tom. Gogs blood, dost think that he will have any such Scabd knave as thou art? What man he is a king now.

Ned. Hold thee, heres a couple of Angels for thee, And get thee gone, for the King will not be long Before he come this way:

And hereafter I will tell the King of thee.

[Exit Theefe.]

Jockey. Oh how it did me good to see the King When he was crowned.

Me thought his seate was like the figure of heaven, And his person like unto a God.

Ned. But who would have thought That the King would have chang'd his countenance so?

Jockey. Did you not see with what grace He sent his embassage into France, to tell the French king

EINLEITUNG.

That Harry of England hath sent for the crowne,
And Harry of England will have it.

Tom. But 'twas but a little to make the people believe,

That hee was sorrie for his fathers death.

[The trumpets sownds.

Ned. Gogs wounds, the King comes,
Lets all stand aside.

Enter the King with the Archbishop and the Lord of Oxford.

Jockey. How doo you my Lord?

Ned. How now Harry?

Tut my Lord, put away these dumpes,
You are a King, and all the Realme is yours:
What man? do you not remember the old sayings,
You know I must be lord Chiefe Justice of England.
Trust mee my Lord, me thinks you are very much changed:

And 'tis but with a little sorrowing, to make folkes
believe

The death of your father grieves you,
And 'tis nothing so.

Henry 5. I prethee Ned mend thy manners,
And be more modester in thy tearmes,
For my unfeined grieve is not to be ruled by thy flattering

And dissembling talke, thou sayest I am changed,
So I am indeed, and so must thou be and that quickly,

Or else I must cause thee to be chaunged.

Jockey. Gogs wounds how like you this?

Sownds, 'tis not so sweet as musicke.

Tom. I trust we have not offended your Grace no way.

Henry 5. Ah Tom, your former life grieves me,
And makes me to abandon and abolish your company for ever,

And therefore not upon pain of death to approach my pre-ence

By ten miles space, then if I heare well of you,

It may bee I will doe somewhat for you,

Otherwise looke for no more favour at my hands,

Then at any other mans: and therefore be gone,

We have other matters to talke on.

[Exeunt Knights.

INDUCTION.²

Warkworth. Before NORTHUMBERLAND's Castle.

*Enter RUMOUR, painted full of tongues.*³

Rum. Open your ears; for which of you will stop
The vent of hearing, when loud Rumour speaks?
I, from the orient to the drooping west,⁴
Making the wind my post-horse, still unfold
The acts commenced on this ball of earth:
Upon my tongues continual slanders ride,
The which in every language I pronounce,
Stuffing the ears of men with false reports.
I speak of peace, while covert enmity,
Under the smile of safety, wounds the world:
And who but Rumour, who but only I,
Make fearful musters, and prepar'd defence,⁵

Whilst the big year, swoln with some other grief,
Is thought with child by the stern tyrant war,
And no such matter? Rumour is a pipe
Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures,
And of so easy and so plain a stop,⁶
That the blunt monster with uncounted heads,⁷
The still-discordant wavering multitude,
Can play upon it. But what need I thus
My well-known body to anatomize
Among my household?⁸ Why is Rumour here?
I run before king Harry's victory;
Who in a bloody field by Shrewsbury
Hath beaten down young Hotspur, and his troops,
Quenching the flame of bold rebellion
Even with the rebels' blood. But what mean I
To speak so true at first? my office is
To noise abroad, that Harry Monmouth fell

1) Ein Personenverzeichniss hat schon die Fol., am Schlusse des Stückes, unter dem Titel The Actors' Names, das so ziemlich mit dem gangbaren der Hgg. übereinstimmt. Falstaff und seine Gesellen werden als Irregular Humorists und Mouldy, Shadow u. s. w. als Country Soldiers bezeichnet. 2) Induction ist der technische Bühnenausdruck für die erklärende und orientirende Einleitung zu einem Drama, sei es, dass sie, wie hier, einen Prolog bildete, oder, wie z. B. in Sh.'s Taming of the Shrew, ein vollständiges kleines Schauspiel. — In dem Personenverzeichniss der Fol. steht voran Rumour the Presenter. 3) Nur die Q. giebt das Costüm an, in welchem die allegorische Theaterfigur der Fama auftrat: ein Kleid, das ringsum mit Zungen bemalt war. Eine ähnliche Bühnenweisung haben andere Dichter der Zeit, wenn sie dieselbe Person vorführen. 4) Das Epitheton drooping bezieht sich auf das Niedergehen der Sonne und das gleichzeitige Schlafengehen der Menschen, als charakteristisch für den Westen, den Abend. 5) Die falschen Kriegsgerüchte, welche die Fama verbreitet, bewirken dann gewaltige Truppenaushebungen und Rüstungen zur Gegenwehr, ohne dass solche erforderlich wären. — Für das grief der Q. in der folgenden Zeile hat die Fol. griefs. 6) stop ist eigentlich die Klappe an der Pfeife, welche beim Blasen bald geöffnet, bald geschlossen wird; daher hier = die Handhabung der Klappe, oder der Pfeife selbst. 7) uncounted = unzählbar. Als die fabelhafte vielköpfige Hydra bezeichnet Sh. auch sonst das Volk; so in Coriolanus (A. 3, Sc. 1) have you thus || Given Hydra here to choose an officer, und (A. 2, Sc. 3) the many-headed multitude. 8) Das Publicum im Theater, als Vertreter der oben geschilderten grossen Menge, ist gewisser-

Under the wrath of noble Hotspur's sword,
 And that the king before the Douglas' rage
 Stoop'd his anointed head as low as death.
 This have I rumour'd through the peasant towns⁹
 Between that royal field of Shrewsbury
 And this worm-eaten hold¹⁰ of ragged stone,
 Where Hotspur's father, old Northumberland,
 Lies crafty-sick.¹¹ The posts come tiring on,
 And not a man of them brings other news
 Than they have learn'd of me: from Rumour's tongues
 They bring smooth comforts false, worse than true wrongs. [Exit.]

ACT I.

SCENE I.

The Same.

Enter Lord BARDOLPH.L. Bard. Who keeps the gate here? ho!The Porter opens the gate.

Where is the earl?

Port. What shall I say you are?L. Bard. Tell thou the earl,
 That the lord Bardolph doth attend him here.Port. His lordship is walk'd forth into the orchard:
 Please it your honour, knock but at the gate,
 And he himself will answer.Enter NORTHUMBERLAND.L. Bard. Here comes the earl.North. What news, Lord Bardolph? every minute now
 Should be the father of some stratagem.¹
 The times are wild: contention,² like a horse
 Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose,
 And bears down all before him.L. Bard. Noble earl,
 I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury.North. Good, an God will!L. Bard. As good as heart can wish.
 The king is almost wounded to the death,
 And, in the fortune of my lord your son,
 Prince Harry slain outright;³ and both the Blunts
 Kill'd by the hand of Douglas; young prince John,

And Westmoreland, and Stafford, fled the field:
 And Harry Monmouth's brawn, the hulk Sir John,⁴
 Is prisoner to your son. O! such a day,
 So fought, so follow'd,⁵ and so fairly won,
 Came not till now to dignify the times,
 Since Caesar's fortunes.

North. How is this deriv'd?

Saw you the field? came you from Shrewsbury?

L. Bard. I spake with one, my lord, that came from thence;A gentleman well bred, and of good name,
 That freely render'd me these news for true.North. Here comes my servant, Travers, whom I sent
 On Tuesday last to listen after news.L. Bard. My lord, I over-rode him on the way;
 And he is furnish'd with no certainties,
 More than he haply may retail from me.Enter TRAVERS.North. Now, Travers, what good tidings come with you?Tra. My lord, Sir John Umfrevile turn'd me back

With joyful tidings; and, being better hors'd,

Out-rode me. After him came spurring hard

A gentleman, almost forspent⁶ with speed,

That stopp'd by me to breathe his bloodied horse.

He ask'd the way to Chester; and of him

I did demand, what news from Shrewsbury.

He told me that rebellion had ill luck,

And that young Harry Percy's spur was cold.⁷

With that he gave his able horse the head,

And, bending forward, struck his armed heels⁸

Against the panting sides of his poor jade

Up to the rowel-head; and starting so,

He seem'd in running to devour the way,⁹

Staying no longer question.

North. Ha! — Again.

Said he, young Harry Percy's spur was cold?

Of Hotspur, Coldspur? that rebellion

Had met ill luck?¹⁰*L. Bard.* My lord, I'll tell you what:

If my young lord your son have not the day,

Upon mine honour, for a silken point

I'll give my barony:¹¹ never talk of it.North. Why should that gentleman, that rode by Travers, Give then such instances of loss?¹²

massen das Hausgesinde der Fama, das deren Worte getreulich verbreitet. 9) peasant towns = Landstädte, Ackerbaustädte. — In der folgenden Zeile hat die Fol. the royal field. 10) hold = Veste, fester Platz, ist Theobald's Emendation für hole in Q. und Fol. 11) crafty-sick = krank aus List oder Verstellung, angeblich krank, nicht wirklich. So in Hamlet (A. 3, Sc. 1) with a crafty madness. — In der vorhergehenden Zeile hat die Q. when für das where der Fol.

1) stratagem ist bei Sh. jedes Manœuvre im Feldzuge, jeder bedeutende Schlag im Kriege. — Solche Schläge sollte in dieser ereignissreichen Zeit jede Minute bringen: so dicht gedrängt sollten sie auf einander folgen. 2) contention = Parteihader, Parteikampf. 3) Es gehörte zu dem guten Glücke Percy's, dass der Prinz Heinrich in dem Zweikampf mit ihm auf der Stelle fiel. 4) hulk, eigentlich = ein grosses Lastschiff, bezeichnet dann eine gewaltige Masse überhaupt, hier den Falstaff, der denn auch humoristisch als die zu dem Prinzen gehörigen Fleischtheile (brawn) aufgefasst wird. 5) to follow ist hier die muthige Verfolgung des Siegs in der Schlacht. 6) to forspend verstärkt das einfache to spend = ganz und gar erschöpfen. 7) Anspielung auf den jetzt nicht mehr passenden Beinamen Hotspur. — In der vorigen Zeile hat die Q. bad luck. 8) So die Q., die darunter die mit Sporen versehenen Fersen des Reiters versteht. — Die Fol. hat able heels aus dem able horse der vorigen Zeile. — Der Reiter in seiner Hast stiess dem Pferde die Sporen bis an das Ende des von verschiedenen Spitzen gebildeten Spornrädchens (rowel) in die Seiten. 9) Er legte den Weg so eilig zurück, als ob er ihn verschlänge. — In ähnlichem Sinne sagt der rasch fliegende Ariel in Tempest (A. 5, Sc. 1) I drink the air before me. 10) So Q. und Fol. — Vgl. oben Anm. 7. 11) Wenn Percy nicht die Schlacht gewonnen hat, so will ich, bei meiner Ehre, meine Würde und meine Besitzthümer als Lord für eine seidene Nestel, wie sie statt der Knöpfe zur Befestigung der Beinkleider diente, dahingeben. 12) Nachrichten, die zum Beweise dienen, dass die Schlacht verloren ging.

L. Bard. Who, he?
He was some hilding fellow,¹³ that had stolen
The horse he rode on, and, upon my life,
Spoke at a venture. Look, here comes more news.

Enter MORTON.

North. Yea, this man's brow, like to a title-leaf,
Foretells the nature of a tragic volume:¹⁴
So looks the strand, whereon the imperious flood
Hath left a witness'd usurpation.¹⁵
Say, Morton, didst thou come from Shrewsbury?

Mor. I ran¹⁶ from Shrewsbury, my noble lord,
Where hateful death put on his ugliest mask,
To fright our party.

North. How doth my son, and brother?
Thou tremblest, and the whiteness in thy cheek
Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand.
Even such a man, so faint, so spiritless,
So dull, so dead in look, so woe-begone,¹⁷
Drew Priam's curtain in the dead of night,
And would have told him, half his Troy was burn'd:
But Priam found the fire, ere he his tongue,
And I my Percy's death, ere thou report'st it.
This thou wouldst say, — Your son did thus, and thus;
Your brother, thus; so fought the noble Douglas;
Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds:
But in the end, to stop mine ear indeed,
Thou hast a sigh to blow away this praise,
Ending with — brother, son, and all are dead.

Mor. Douglas is living, and your brother, yet;
But for my lord your son, —

North. Why, he is dead. —
See, what a ready tongue suspicion hath!¹⁸
He that but fears the thing he would not know,
Hath, by instinct, knowledge from others' eyes,
That what he fear'd is chanced. Yet speak, Morton:
Tell thou thy earl¹⁹ his divination lies,
And I will take it as a sweet disgrace,
And make thee rich for doing me such wrong.

Mor. You are too great to be by me gainsaid:
Your spirit is too true,²⁰ your fears too certain.

North. Yet, for all this, say not that Percy's dead. —
I see a strange confession in thine eye:
Thou shak'st thy head, and hold'st it fear,²¹ or sin,
To speak a truth. If he be slain, say so:²²
The tongue offends not that reports his death;
And he doth sin that doth belie the dead,²³
Not he which says the dead is not alive.
Yet the first bringer of unwelcome news
Hath but a losing office,²⁴ and his tongue
Sounds ever after as a sullen bell,²⁵
Remember'd knolling a departing friend.

L. Bard. I cannot think, my lord, your son is dead.

Mor. I am sorry I should force you to believe
That which I would to heaven I had not seen;
But these mine eyes saw him in bloody state,
Rendering faint quittance,²⁶ wearied and outbreath'd,
To Harry Monmouth; whose swift wrath beat down
The never-daunted Percy to the earth,
From whence with life he never more sprung up.
In few, his death, whose spirit²⁷ lent a fire
Even to the dullest peasant in his camp,
Being bruited once, took fire and heat away
From the best-temper'd²⁸ courage in his troops:
For from his metal was his party steel'd;
Which once in him abated, all the rest
Turn'd on themselves, like dull and heavy lead.
And as the thing that's heavy in itself,
Upon enforcement flies with greatest speed,
So did our men, heavy²⁹ in Hotspur's loss,
Lend to this weight such lightness with their fear,
That arrows fled not swifter toward their aim,
Than did our soldiers, aiming at their safety,
Fly from the field. Then was that noble Worcester
Too soon ta'en prisoner; and that furious Scot,
The bloody Douglas, whose well-labouring sword
Had three times slain the appearance of the king,³⁰
'Gan vail his stomach, and did grace the shame
Of those that turn'd their backs;³¹ and in his flight,
Stumbling in fear, was took. The sum of all
Is, that the king hath won, and hath sent out
A speedy power, to encounter you, my lord,
